Under the heading, "Progress in the Movies," the Marion Chronicle pays tribute to the Marion, Ind., exhibitors. It says: "A careful perusal of the advertisements appearing any day in the Chronicle will easily convince any reader that the picture shows of Marion are conducting their shows on a plane that is clean and wholesome. It used to be that movie shows were questionable, but that time has past and clean and wholesome offerings now rule."

The Temple theater, Hartford City, opened the week of January 11 with a stock company. Cloud & Son, the management, expect to run vaudeville, legitimate and movies, separately and mixed, as the occasion demands.

Charles Lyons, the new proprietor of the Lyric theater, Kokomo, Ind., has decided to change the name of the house and will award a prize of $20 to the one choosing the best name. The contest closed Jan. 18. Any one was allowed to make as many suggestions as they desired within reason.

Now the Hartford City exhibitors are circulating a petition to sound popular opinion on the question of keeping the shows open Sunday. The Peru, Ind., exhibitors did it with good results. In several Indiana cities the courts have given favorable decisions. Nothing so far, however, has appeared in the legislature now in session.

Harry Crider, formerly in the picture show business at Crothersville, Ind., has left there and closed his theater. No explanation is offered.

A. L. Shirley of Peru, Ind., has placed an order with the Rochester Bridge Company for the remodeling of the Victoria theater. Two rooms are to be thrown into one. The remodeled building is to be steel construction.

The Arc Amusement Company, newly incorporated company at Crawfordsville, Ind., plan the enlargement of the Arc, which they are now running. The drug store room adjoining has been leased, and will be added to the theater, giving it about double the seating capacity of the present house. The incorporators of the new company are Sherman Grimes, Ralph B. Grimes and Emma R. Grimes. A stage large enough for vaudeville acts is to be built.

The Hoosier Motor Club, Indianapolis, is conducting a series of See America First "rocking chair tours" as a part of their winter entertainment course. Moving pictures and slides to illustrate American points of interest are being obtained. No admission fee is charged, and club members are permitted to bring friends.

Orville Butts, aged nine, son of Manager David Butts of the Carbon theater, Carbon, Ind., accidentally shot Elsie Baker, aged twelve. The bullet entered her head through the bridge of the nose. The boy pointed the revolver at her as she was buying a ticket, and fired. He did not know the weapon was loaded. It was the gun used in protecting the ticket window. The girl was rushed to Indianapolis by special train and it is probable, if she recovers, the sight of one eye will be lost. The boy is heartbroken over the accident.

Sig. Uffenheimer, one of the owners of the new American Theater, was host for the employees of the theater and several friends at the Hotel Deming, January 6.

IN PITTSBURGH.

The Belmar theater, Clarke & Rowland's fine new Homewood house, recently added a Seeburg Style R Motion Picture Player to its already fine equipment. This instrument cost $4,500 and is the first to be placed in this part of Pittsburgh. It is equipped with an exceptionally fine vox humana, which imitates the human voice and a fine set of chimes. Prof. R. R. Nagle is the organist.

An application will be made for a Pennsylvania State charter of incorporation on the 25th day of January, 1915, for the United Film Service of Pittsburgh. Application is being made by James Milholland, Paul A. Stuart and Joseph A. Beck. The new concern will manufacture and deal in motion and talking picture machines, supplies and accessories, motion and talking picture films and records.

The Casino and the Strand theaters in Washington, Pa., sustained a loss of $2,500 and $1,000, respectively, in a $10,000 blaze Wednesday, January 6. The origin is not known.

C. L. Kohler & Company, proprietors of the Ideal theater at Altoona, Pa., recently installed a new Seeburg Style Q Motion Picture Player.

The Pitt theater at Indiana, Pa., formerly owned by Frank Mackert, has recently been purchased by Mr. Blitz, of Pittsburgh. This house will be remodeled and improved, a new front will be one of the big features of improvement.

After many months of discussion and thought Thomas Barnes, manager of the Majestic theater at Ellwood City, Pa., has installed the talking moving pictures. This is considered a great thing in this city as many have never witnessed this invention until last Saturday night when the first pictures were shown and all on hand stated that they were well pleased. Mr. Barnes is delighted with the outfit and although it was purchased at a high price, he is as well pleased as his patrons.

The Lyric theater, of Windber, Pa., is being remodeled and improved. B. F. Miller has taken over the management of the house and contemplates extensive changes. The Lyric is one of Windber's oldest theaters.

Harry Sommeral, of Los Angeles, California, originator of the Universal Film Company and one of the best known men in the picture game in the country, is a guest of Messrs. Claffey, of the Alpha theater at Sharon, Pa. Sommeral retired from the Universal some time ago and is now interested in an automatic ticket selling device, one of which will soon be installed at the Alpha.

A new film exploded while being "tried out" in the Palace motion picture theater, Main street, Johnstown, Pa., causing no other damage than the destroying of the film.

The Gluck Family theater at Sharon, Pa., which has been in operation here for several years, under that name, changed hands on January 11, Messrs. M. L. Cukerbraum and Henry Gluck having disposed of their interests to Walter Hanitch, Ben Robins and Mark L. Ravinovitz. This house was formerly a skating rink and later was transferred into a theater, being under several different managerships, before the Gluck company took charge several years ago. Henry Gluck has been manager of the company for the past few seasons, and during that time, some fine vaudeville has been witnessed at the theater. Messrs Hanitch, Robins and Rabinovitz have not yet announced their plans, but they will likely cut out the vaudeville.

CONVENTION AT HAND.

Officers and members of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of Pennsylvania are working hard to work up enthusiasm in the coming state convention at Harrisburg, January 26, 27 and 28. They are urging the greatest attendance which is possible and they desire every exhibitor who can in any way arrange his affairs, to be present.

Dome Theater Opens

New Castle, Pennsylvania, Has Fine New Theater—Meets All State Building Requirements and Full Plans Are Being Kept at Capital as Model for Future Houses of Its Kind—Beautifully Decorated—Special Features of the House.

By Pittsburgh Special Moving Picture World News Service.

THE Dome Theater, New Castle, Pa., one of the finest picture playhouses in Pennsylvania, recently opened its doors to the public. This is the first picture playhouse in Pennsylvania to meet all of the requirements recently enacted relative to theaters of this nature. Full plans were sent to Harrisburg to be used as a model for buildings of this kind in the future. This theater is located on East Washington street, Speer Marousis being the manager.

The furnishings and decorations, which were in charge of the DeRose Decorating company, of Youngstown, Pa., are especially worthy of mention. The entrance booth contains three very expensive cut glass chandeliers. A representation of the First Music and Poetry is depicted on a canvass forty-one by four and one-half feet and stretched across the walls of the booth. The interior decorations are highly artistic and beautiful, containing subdued shades such as ivory, green, gold and old rose. Each panel contains a painting of some local scene, for instance, the public square, scenes from Cascade Park, McConnell's Mills, and others. The woodwork is of solid mahogany and the seats, which are spaced as to give ample room for a person to pass through without causing the occupants to rise, are the last word for comfort.

The special features of the building, in addition to being absolutely fireproof throughout, is the ventilating system and the new requirements made by a recent enactment. This makes the aisles measure at least four feet three inches. This new building did even better and added an extra three inches to this measurement. At the rear are two six-foot exits, which, together with three exits at the front of the building, make it possible to empty the building in a very short time.

The management states that only high class features will be shown, three comedies a week to run regularly in the program.

TARENTUM ON FILMS.

Busy Pennsylvania City Can See Its Own Prosperity in Pictures—Local Merchants Can Show Grandsons.

Moving pictures of Tarentum, Pa., were recently shown at the Nixon theater in this town and they attracted large crowds. Views of school and business houses were shown. Many local merchants appeared for the first time in their lives as actors and the Vitagraph, Biograph and Kalem companies might well come to Tarentum for real film performers. Some of the store keepers made John Bunny, Costello, Anderson and other stars look like mere amateurs.

A scene in a local bank showed a prominent officer of the Business Men's Association making a real deposit. Another photo depicted the work of a local picture man. A Fifth avenue grocery was shown doing a land office business. All in all, the show was pleasing and a credit in this unique manner.

SCREEN CLUB LUNCHEON.

The Pittsburgh Screen Club, the local moving picture organization, gave its first goodfellowship dinner Sunday, January 10, 1915, at 502 Liberty avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa. This organization, devoted to the interests of those who are connected with the moving picture business, was organized a short time ago. It is the object of the club to have permanent quarters, and until the board of managers select a place the club will have rooms in the Camera-phone Building, Fifth avenue. H. B. Kester presided at the meeting and many of those present gave their views as to the best methods of making the organization one that will compare with those in other cities.

Attorney A. C. Stein, who addressed the meeting, made a strong plea for absolute harmony, advising members not to let factions get started and minimize the good of the organization. Joseph N. Mackrell told the gathering that the outlook for favorable legislation regarding moving picture business was very promising. It was announced by the president that the by-laws and constitution of the club will be fashioned after those of like organizations in New York and Chicago.

MUTUAL FILM SUED.

Valentine Rayburg and Ellis J. Finke, who are operating the Lyceum motion picture theater on South Main street, Dayton, Ohio, for the G. E. Finke estate, recently set up a claim for $5,000 damages against the Mutual Film Company in an answer and cross petition filed in common pleas court in response to court proceedings instituted against them by the latter company.

It is charged in the answer that the Mutual Film Company, in violation of an alleged agreement for the furnishing of film service, entered into October 29, 1913, failed to furnish the Lyceum theater with such service from April 5 to March 1 of 1914. Rayburg and Finke aver that the Mutual concern's purported failure to carry out the contract has served to irreparably harm them in their business.

OTHER PITTSBURGH ITEMS.

Ground has been broken by Henry Polk for a motion picture theater building in Shiloh street, near Virginia avenue, Mount Washington, Pittsburgh, Pa., which is expected to cost close to $25,000. The lot is 50x100 feet and cost Mr. Polk about $11,000 it is said. The theater is to have a high, ornamental front and will seat 1,200, as it is to have a large baleony. It will be up-to-date in every respect, of fireproof construction and will prove a credit to the section of the city in which it will be located.

In addition to the Burton Holmes' travelettes, which was given twice a day in the Schenley theater, Pittsburgh, Pa., last week, an exceptionally fine program of motion pictures was also offered. The feature of this was "The Band of Love," written and acted by Yale College students, many of the young men appearing in it being doubtless well known in this city.

Sydney E. Abel, manager of the Continental Film Company, Pittsburgh, Pa., is giving away a useful pencil and holder advertising "Runaway June."

It has been reported that the Schenley theater management contemplates an exclusive picture policy in the near future. It is said that one of the requirements in booking the films will be first run in Pittsburgh.

A charter has been filed at Dover, Del., at the State Department for the National Film Advertising Company of Pittsburgh, Pa., with a capital stock of $50,000, to solicit and contract for any kind of advertising to develop films of all kinds. Incorporators, William M. Risher, Homestead, Pa.; Norvia R. Dougherty, Robert F. Sampee, both of Pittsburgh, Pa

PRESIDENT FOWSER AT HELM OF LEAGUE.

Newly-Installed Head of Exhibitors' League in Detroit Hard at Work for Organization.

By Jacob Smith, Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

H. F. Fowser, the new president of the Detroit Exhibitors' League, is devoting four hours daily to the business of the association and is at the office every day except Sunday. He has had a telephone installed and will be glad to co-operate with all members on anything which may concern them or the association. His office hours are from 12 noon until 4 p. m. We wants to do everything in his power to help exhibitors, whether they are members or not.

BRIGHT NEW HOUSE ORGAN.

"Weekly Film News," Official House Organ of John H. Kunsky Theaters—H. O. Pierce Its Editor.

The "Weekly Film News," the official house organ of the John H. Kunsky theatrical enterprises in Detroit, made its first appearance on January 10. It contains 16 pages, and is 8 by 9 inches in size. The front cover, of light gray, contains an autographed photographic reproduction of Miss Elsie Janis. The first inside page gives a list of Mr. Kunsky's theaters, their location and hours of shows. Page four is for the editor, and contains the following interesting editorial: "The Weekly Film News, with this first number, takes its place in the activities of the motion picture world and hopes to prove a useful factor in its own particular sphere. The purpose of the Weekly Film News is primarily to keep the theater-going public of Detroit informed as to the activities of the John H. Kunsky, Inc., interests in the conduct of the several different theaters operated by it." The Weekly Film News will be given gratis to the patrons of the different Kunsky theaters and mailed to those who request it. Howard O. Pierce is the director of publicity and editor. A full page is devoted to each theater, with the name of the manager, the policy, a photograph of an interior view, and a description of the current attraction, with the cast, etc., together with other interesting matter relative to coming attractions.

CHILDREN'S SERIES CLOSES.

The last of the series of free photoplay entertainments was given for the benefit of the school children of Detroit at the Washington theater on Saturday morning, January 9. The expenses of the theater each week amount to $30, and although Mr. Kunsky, operator of the Washington, has offered to donate the house free for another five Saturdays, the welfare committee of the Political and Civic League, under whose auspices the entertainments have been given, would not accept the offer, but instead has made a public appeal for a fund with which to continue the work. Should the money be forthcoming, the entertainments will be resumed. The League appreciates Mr. Kunsky's generosity, but does not feel that it is right to further accept gratis the use of his theater. The police patrols and the automobiles of private citizens have furnished the transportation for the helpless, crippled children each week. In connection with this work, Dr. Chadsey, superintendent of Detroit schools, said: "It is only a question of time and adjustment until the motion picture is made part of the curriculum of the schools. Motion pictures, with their strong appeal to the intelligence through the eye, frequently enable children to grasp things more quickly than through the medium of the ear."

F. C. KIRKPATRICK IN DETROIT.

Among the interesting visitors to Detroit recently was Fred C. Kirkpatrick, president of the Kirmer Theater Co., of Titusville, Pa. Mr. Kirkpatrick's main business is "steel," the theater business being a side line. However, when he arrives in town he phoned the Moving Picture World correspondent and told the writer that his manager "down home" couldn't get along without the World. "My manager tells me that he needs the World as much as he needs three meals a day. I have also become interested in it and read it carefully every week. Whenever I get into a town I usually make it a point to talk to some of the managers for the purpose of exchanging ideas, and it is a fact that wherever I go I see managers reading the World." Although Mr. Kirkpatrick now has but two theaters, they being the only ones in Titusville, it is his plan to secure several more in the neighboring cities, so that he will have a chain of them.

RECREATION COMMISSION GETS APPLICATIONS.

Secretary Walters of the Police Department has sent a number of applications for licenses for moving picture theaters to the new recreation commission for approval before the licenses are issued.

BUILDING NEW THEATER.

Contracts have been awarded and a building permit granted for the erection of the new Norwood theater, to be situated on Woodward avenue, just south of the boulevard. The decorations and electrical effects will be complete and the house will seat 1,000. The aisles will have small floor lights below the end seats. The construction will be fireproof and every modern appliance relative to theater construction will be employed. The lobby and foyer will be finished in caen stone with richly ornamented cornices and friezes, with hidden lights in the cornices. At either side of the central entrance to the lobby will be a store with mezzanine story. Construction on this new theater will be rushed and it is expected that it will be completed by spring. William S. Joy & Co. are the architects.

WILL HOLD A BALL.

Picture Men's Association of Detroit Plans Big Entertainment Soon—Screen Stars to Be Invited.

Acting upon the suggestion made by the Moving Picture World representative, the Detroit Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors has taken up in earnest the plan of giving a ball within the next few months, at which time it will endeavor to have present a number of moving picture stars. Other associations, particularly in the east, have conducted such affairs most successfully, and there is no reason why Detroit "should take a back seat" on the proposition. Such a ball, successfully given, with the aid of several well-known screen performers, would certainly do a great deal toward awakening new interest in the moving picture industry. A special committee has been appointed to handle the matter, which consists of J. C. Green, Otto Seestedt and Walter Bloss.

AUTOMOBILES OUTSIDE.

On Saturday night, January 9, the writer attended the performance at the Alhambra theater in the North Woodward district, which is unquestionably the finest photoplay house in Detroit. It was raining as the many hundreds of people filed from the auditorium. As I reached the street I noticed four taxicabs along the curb and the drivers were calling "Taxi, Taxi, Taxi"; in a few minutes they all had passengers. Think of it. Taxicabs in front of a motion picture theater at least four miles from the center of town. It is not surprising to find taxis in front of legitimate playhouses, cafes or hotels, but being in front of an outskirt moving picture house is only another indication of the development of the industry.

OTHER DETROIT ITEMS.

Manager Smith of the New Empire theater has recently made a number of improvements, such as the redecorating of the interior entrance and the gilding of the frames of all seats in the auditorium. The improvements have added much to the attractiveness of the theater. On January 14 the Kleine offering "Officer 666" played to big business at the Empire. It was the first showing of this feature in Detroit. On January 18 "The Naked Truth," also a Kleine picture, played a return engagement owing to the many requests of patrons.

John P. Harris, of the Harris Amusement Co., of Pittsburgh, Pa., was in Detroit on January 11 to attend the annual directors' meeting of the Family theater. Reports showed that the Family enjoyed a very successful year in 1914, despite the competition on Monroe avenue. The Family has probably paid out larger dividends to stockholders than any similar enterprise in Detroit. Dividend checks are mailed to stockholders every month.

George W. Trendle, secretary of the John H. Kunsky, Inc., was in Buffalo on January 11 to look over a number of theaters for the purpose of getting new ideas to incorporate in the proposed theater at Grand River avenue and Fourteenth street. The following Tuesday he was in Springfield, Ohio, conferring with the Sun Book Agency, who handle all acts for the Columbia theater. M. W. Schoenherr, manager of the Columbia, met Mr. Trendle in Springfield. The Columbia is now playing six vaudeville acts to each show instead of four, with a photoplay preceding and following each show.

Sam Levey and Frank Drew, who started the Detroit Universal Film Co., have disposed of their stock to the Universal Film Mfg. Co., and have retired from the company. Considerable of the stock is still held locally by Charles Wesch, George Weeks and others. Mr. Weeks will continue as manager of the Detroit office, as he has in the past. During his regime the company has met with great success.

F. Swazee has been promoted to assistant manager of the Liberty theater. This advancement is the result of courteous treatment and conscientious work while being doorman. When Manager Starr of the Liberty needed an assistant, it didn't take him long to find out who was worthy of the position, which resulted in Mr. Swazee being rewarded for his faithful services up to that time.

The Pastime theater, formerly managed by Peter Jeup, and now owned by George C. Hoffman, who also operates the Home theater at 1450 Chene street, has been renamed the "Our" theater.

Two instances demonstrate how thoroughly the columns of the Moving Picture World are scrutinized by its readers. Howard Pierce, publicity manager for the John H. Kunsky Theaters, Inc., has received at least a dozen letters from all parts of the country, asking for samples of the new weekly publication, mention of which was made recently in the World. Manager McGee of the Majestic Theater Co., has also received many letters congratulating him on his new connection and from others making application for positions, following its exclusive announcement in the World.

Work is now in progress on the new theater at Jefferson and Oneida avenues being constructed by the Lakewood Theater Co., to cost $21,000. It will be finished by spring, and will have a large seating capacity.

It is reported that George Weeks, of the Detroit Universal Film Co., contemplates the early erection of two theaters on Grand River avenue. One will be near Cass and the other near the boulevard.

SAN FRANCISCO NEWS LETTER.

The Cory theater on Union street, near Fillmore, has been disposed of by Cory Bros. to John L. Meyer and Alfred Carey, recent arrivals in this city from Nome, Alaska. The sale of this house, following the recent transfer of The Fairyland on Devisadero street, marks the retirement of M. E. Cory and W. A. Cory from the local field as exhibitors, but it is their intention to engage in the business again at an early date, plans being under way for taking over a large house. Both of these exhibitors are well known in California, W. A. Cory being secretary of the State League, while M. E. Cory is president of the local organization.

The Charles Warren Welch Estate Company recently announced its intention of erecting a one-story frame moving picture theater at a cost of about $9,000 on Valencia street, near Twenty-sixth.

Charles Stillwell, until recently manager of the Silver Palace theater on Market street, is now associated with the Nat A. Magner Company, filling a position in the booking department.

Frank L. Hudson, manager of the Coast interests of the Pathe Exchange, Inc., as the Eclectic Feature Exchange is now known, returned recently from a trip to Salt Lake City and has since left for Los Angeles in company with W. W. Johnston, of the International News Service, who is touring the West arranging for the publicity work on the "Exploits of Elaine." While in San Francisco Mr. Johnston attended the regular trade luncheon held at the Portola-Louvre and met many of the leading exchange men and exhibitors.

The California Motion Picture Company has taken advantage of the splendid weather being experienced to start work on the "Lily of Poverty Flat." Some out door scenes will be taken at Boulder Creek and others in the placer districts of the Sierra Nevada mountains to secure the proper effects. Frederick Lewis, for nine years with the Sothern and Marlowe aggregation, is here from New York to play leading roles with the local concern.

E. A. Brehaney has been placed in charge of the stock and shipping rooms of George Kleine Attractions and Joseph Dietch, who has been with this concern for some time, has been made traveling man.

The Nat A. Magner Company suffered a disappointment recently through the non-arrival of "The Hoosier Schoolmaster," which was booked for presentation at the Tivoli theater and which had been widely advertised. The Tivoli showed "The Three of Us" in its stead.

The Silver Palace theater has set aside a section of the house where smoking is permitted, a feature that is appreciated by the male patrons, who form a large portion of the audience.

Eugene Roth, manager of the Portola theater, is planning another visit to New York about the time the Panama-Pacific International Exposition is opened. He reports having made some very important advance bookings including "Your Girl and Mine," Leslie Carter in "Du Barry" and "Three Weeks," the State rights for which the Nat A. Magner Company recently paid a record price.

G. A. Metcalf gave a demonstration of the new Baird projector in the hall at 149 Eddy street on January 5 before about one hundred exhibitors and operators.

J. Silva, who recently purchased the Princess theater at Oak Park, Cal., visited San Francisco a short time ago to look over late feature releases.

The Beating Back Film Corporation, recently incorporated at San Fransisco with a capital stock of $20,000, has opened attractive offices in the Mechanics Saving Bank Building, 948 Market street. The Sierra Motion Picture Manufacturing Company has offices in conjunction with this firm. Al Jennings, from whose story the film was made, is here and has arranged for the sale of his book with the Owl Drug Company.

E. H. Emmick, manager of the Los Angeles branch of the All Star Feature Distributors, Inc., was in San Francisco recently conferring with Sol L. Lesser, head of this concern.

The Movoa Film Service, Inc., recently organized here for the purpose of manufacturing animated cartoon films, has opened offices at 948 Market street and has placed its first subjects on the market.

G. G. Garrett, a prominent theater publicity man from Canada, is here, making his headquarters at the Cort theater.

Mrs. May Pettengill, who conducts the Pastime theater at Eureka, Cal., and the Monor theater at Arcata, was a recent visitor here to arrange for feature attractions.

The financial offices of the Turner & Dahnken Controlling Co., which have been maintained in the First National Bank Building since the formation of this concern, are to be moved shortly to 942 Market street, where the main offices of Turner & Dahnken are located.

The Halcyon theater has been opened at 275 Devisadero street, between Haight and Page, by S. C. Martinstein. This is a new house of attractive appearance seating in the neighborhood of 500 persons.

The Gaiety theater has been secured for an engagement of "Tillie's Punctured Romance" and this attraction will hold forth for at least two weeks, with the probability that it will remain there for a month.

Roy Taylor is now filling the position of chief booker at the San Francisco office of the United Film Service of California. Sam Klein is now the city representative of this concern, while Max Newman, for the past two years with the California Film Exchange, is now a special representative of the United, calling upon the country trade.

Stuart G. Masters, a well-known newspaper man, has joined the publicity staff of the California Motion Picture Corporation.

W. E. Ellisfi of Soledad, Cal., has purchased a Power's No. 6A Cameragraph and has opened a moving picture house at Selinas.

John's theater, Elmhurst, Cal., has been reopened by Bert Leonard. A Mutual and Golgate service is being featured.

Mr. H. C. Schmidt, who conducts the Markee theater at Palo Alto, Cal., advises that the recent showing of "Cabiria" was at 35 cents and 50 cents, with the house well filled at each performance.

D. H. Greeley has opened the theater Carmel-by-the Sea, which has been dark for some time.

W. E. Page, of Kansas, has taken over the Bimini Hot Springs, near Los Angeles, Cal., and plans to convert it into an amusement park with a moving picture theater.

The Literary Society of Kelseyville, Cal., of which W. E. Hunt is president, has purchased a moving picture machine and will give entertainments regularly.

W. E. Legg, who recently disposed of the Valeria theater at Ferndale, Cal., has gone to Fortuna and is considering the proposition of again engaging in the moving picture business in either Tehama or Glenn counties.

Harry Bernard plans to open the Grand theater at Santa Maria, Cal., as a moving picture and vaudeville house.

Plans are being made for the erection of a moving picture theater at Fort Bidwell, Cal.

LOS ANGELES EXCHANGE MEN ORGANIZE.

The organization recently formed by the film exchange men of San Francisco has been so successful that a similar one has been formed at Los Angeles and this will be conducted along practically identical lines. The Film Exchange Board of Trade of Los Angeles has been incorporated, the directors being E. H. Emmick, J. W. Allen, T. W. Johns, A. B. Lamb and W. J. Morgan.

LEAGUE POSTPONES ANNUAL MEETING.

President Cory's Absence from San Francisco Puts Off Exhibitors' Regular Meeting—League and Board of Trade.

By T. A. Church, Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

THE annual meeting of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of San Francisco, which was to have been held in the regular meeting place in the Phelan Building on January 6, has been postponed until the return of President M. E. Cory from New York. It is hoped that there will be a large attendance at the meeting when it is called, for in addition to the election of officers for 1915, a number of important questions will come up for consideration. A committee will be appointed at this time to act in conjunction with a committee from the Film Exchange Board of Trade of San Francisco, with powers to act upon matters of pressing importance.

HARRY DAVID A BENEDICT.

Harry David, the able and popular assistant manager of the Portola theater, of San Francisco, recently telegraphed from Seattle, Wash., the information that the Mutual success, "The Great Leap," had been revived there, with himself playing a leading part. He was married in that city on January 5 and will return to San Francisco with his bride after a short stay in the Northwest. Mr. David is well known throughout the Coast, having covered this territory with several of the largest feature productions ever released, and a host of friends are ready with congratulations.

PREMIERE OF MIGNON.

The premier showing of the beautiful photoplay, "Mignon," based on the opera of the same name and featuring Betriz Michelena, California's celebrated prima donna, was given by the California Motion Picture Corporation at the St. Francis Hotel on the evening of January 9th before a brilliant assemblage of society folks and music lovers. Some of the finest homes in California were used for settings in this subject, including those of A. W. Foster, E. J. de Sebla, H. E. Bothin and Mrs. Theodore Payne. The gathering was one of the largest ever held here to witness the private showing of a moving picture and the enthusiastic manner in which it was received augurs well for its success when released. Following the showing of the film the guests attended the Grand Opening Ball at the new municipal Auditorium in the Civic Center, just completed at a cost of more than $2,000,000.

HIGHER PRICES—GOOD BUSINESS.

The new schedule of prices recently placed into effect at the Tivoli theater by the Turner & Dahnken Circuit has not served to interfere with the attendance in the least, and the house is crowded at almost every performance. The prices for week days are 10 cents for matinees and 15 cents and 25 cents for the evening performances, depending upon the location in the house. On Sundays and holidays the prices are 15 cents and 25 cents for matinees and 25 cents for all seats at the evening performances.

OTHER SAN FRANCISCO ITEMS.

Herbert Horton, an exhibitor of Sterling City, was here a short time ago inspecting current releases and arranging his winter schedule.

The Edison theater on Powell street has made a number of changes in its lobby arrangement of late and has placed the ticket booth in the center, instead of at the side as formerly. A specialty is now being made by this house of Charley Chaplin subjects.

Must Furnish Water

District of Columbia Exhibitors Required by New Regulation of Congress to Provide Pure, Cold Drinking Water Free and Sanitary Drinking Cups—Will Affect Only Airdomes, as Theaters Comply Already—Baseball Park Carried Soft Drink "Side" Too Far.

By Clarence L. Linz, Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

THE House of Representatives has passed a bill requiring all places of amusement in the District of Columbia to furnish an adequate supply of pure, cool drinking water for the benefit of patrons. The bill reads: "That hereafter it shall be unlawful for each and every person, firm, or corporation directly or indirectly operating or conducting or participating in the operation, management, or control of any theater, picture show, ball park, or other place of amusement or entertainment in the District of Columbia, to which place of amusement or entertainment an admission fee is charged, to fail or refuse to furnish free of any charge whatsoever by placing within convenient and accessible reach an adequate supply of pure, cool, drinking water, together with cups from which it may be drunk, to all persons who are patrons of any such place while said patrons are actually in attendance at such theater, picture show, ball park or other place of amusement or entertainment above described.

"Sec. 2. That any person, firm, or corporation which fails to comply with the provisions of the above section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor; and upon conviction of such failure or refusal, shall be fined $100 for each offense. A failure to so supply each and every patron hereinbefore mentioned shall be a distinct offense. It is hereby made the duty of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to see that the provisions of this act are enforced."

This is a matter in which every exhibitor operating a motion picture theater or park is vitally interested. This agitation was brought about by the failure of the promoters of the Washington American League baseball park to provide the necessary facilities for securing drinking water, forcing its patrons to rely upon "soft" drinks to quench their thirst. It is said that a number of the airdomes which are operated in this city during the summer months have also failed in this same respect. It is not believed that any of the theaters are without running water at all times. It will also devolve upon the exhibitors to furnish sanitary drinking cups to patrons without charge, there being a ban upon the common drinking cup or glass, and apparently, from the wording of the proposed law, no charge can be made for them. In a large number of the public places in the city a slot machine containing sanitary cups is placed close to the drinking place and a single cup can be obtained by dropping a cent in the slot. However, exhibitors would not be forced to go to such a great expense as this, as there are many cheaper grades on the market which will well answer the purpose. First, it was the war tax, now it is the drinking cup tax, next thing that will happen will be the awakening of all of the exhibitors and a universal admission charge of ten cents will be exacted.

PRIVATE PICTURE SHOWS.

Private motion picture shows are becoming very popular in Washington among the various commercial and social organizations, and motion picture films are fast becoming a medium of entertainment which heretofore has received little attention. It is conceded by several of the exchange managers that this proposition is a good one as it serves to give pictures additional publicity, for it is surprising to note how many business men have never been inside of a motion picture theater and who have always looked down upon this sort of entertainment. At a recent meeting here of a commercial organization the World correspondent ascertained that fully fifteen per cent of those present had never seen an exhibition of other than industrial films or had never before attended a "movie" show. This is astonishing, but nevertheless it is true.

VALUE OF INITIATIVE.

Exhibitor on Visit to Capital Gives Advice—Says Some Showmen Watch Other Fellow Too Closely.

The World correspondent last week stumbled over an out-of-town exhibitor who came to Washington "incog" to see the sights and find out how business was. This exhibitor is a graduate of the legitimate and is making a success in this newer field. He hesitated at being interviewed, but here's his yarn and there is more truth than poetry in it. "The trouble with the average moving picture exhibitor," he declared, "is that he lacks experience as a manager (score one); he normally would make a poor poker player, for he shows his hand too readily. Coming down to faults, the average exhibitor too often pays attention to what his competitor is doing—he watches every move the other fellow makes and in the end he loses confidence in his own abliity and follows him, perhaps to destruction. Half of the cause for the howl about hard times is due to the lack of initiative on the part of the exhibitor. He worries himself half sick because the fellow up the street has a service which he cannot obtain, or because there are so many films on the market he cannot pick out those that the public will be sure to like, or being able to pick out a lot of them, cannot run them all before anybody else does. With all these rocks looming up in the business sea it is little wonder that there is so much worry and fear of financial shipwreck.

"I believe when an exhibitor begins to believe that times are bad he is a 'dead one.' He should not try to follow out the other fellow's ideas, but get some of his own, get the pictures he thinks will take with the public and push them through to success. Don't worry because your profits are small; there's a reason and a remedy. If you only charge a nickel it is because you fear a competitor—that's your 'reason,' and ten cents for admission is your 'remedy.'

"At my own theater I recently found things going bad; there was bad weather and the holidays, a lack of work for tradespeople and mechanics, and lots of other troubles, but I weathered the storm in my own peculiar way, and the year's receipts of 1914 netted me quite a little balance over 1913. I did not throw out my service on the ground that it was failing to bring results; I neither added nor decreased the number of reels I was accustomed to using; neither did I cut down the size of my force of employees or discontinue my orchestra. I shot a little personality into my business and by devious ways got the newspapers to talk motion pictures in their reading columns, and used up a little red fire myself in the advertising columns. I got the people in my neighborhood worked up to that pitch where they honestly believed that if they failed to see a show at my theater that they were truly missing something, and I educated many of the mothers into coming to my matinees and bringing the children with them. There are lots of ways of making your houses popular in dull times, and you do not have to give away all of your profits to obtain such a result."

ARMAT STOCKHOLDERS MEET

It is announced that the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Armat Moving Picture Company will be held at the office of the company, 42 Hutchins Building, on Thursday, January 28. The annual election of officers will be held at this meeting and such other business as may come before it will be transacted.

CROSS CONTINENT RACE.

Professional People Interested in Automobile Race Between Washington and Los Angeles to Decide a Bet.

Considerable interest is being manifested in a very unique automobile race between Washington and San Francisco, in which Stanley James, formerly a member of a stock company of this city, and Raoul LeMat, a Washington athlete, automobilist and aviator. The contest is the result of a bet made in New York when these two were attending the automobile show. A New York enthusiast offered to wager $5,000 that his car could travel across the continent in faster time than any other and the bet was taken up by Mr. James, Mr. LeMat being selected to drive the other car. Miss Margaret Gale, a member of one of the Los Angeles studios, who was also an attendant at the show, offered to accompany LeMat as his mascot and her services as such were accepted. A fourth member of the party is Bi Boernstein, of the staff of the Colonial Film Company, who carries a motion picture camera and will film the principal events of the tour.

In addition to the $5,000 involved, there is a bronze trophy valued at $2,000 offered by Mrs. Helen Woodruff Smith, of Stamford, Conn. This is to be competed for annually by the automobilists who will first cross the continent each year, and becomes the property of the first person who shall make three such trips.

The start from the National Capital was made on Monday and the first mishap in the cross-the-continent trip was experienced when, while just over the line between the District of Columbia and Maryland, James was arrested, fined $10 by a justice of the peace for speeding, he was going at the rate of about thirty-three miles an hour, and was forced to return to Washington to secure the necessary funds. LeMat, who was traveling close behind him, saw his predicament and slowed down, thereby escaping a similar fate.

The real start was then made on Tuesday. A number of very important personages turned out despite the rain to wish them luck on their trip. In this party were members of Congress, city officials and William F. Gude, president of the Washington Chamber of Commerce, who presented the contestants with an enormous floral horseshoe. They expect to reach their destination within forty days, in spite of rough weather and heavy going to be expected at this season. That many have made this trip doesn't make the feat any easier.

OTHER WASHINGTON NOTES.

A contract has just been let by Donn & Deming, architects, for the remodeling of a store building in Warrenton, Va., converting into a town hall. The first floor will comprise an attractive entrance lobby, ticket office, auditorium 50 feet square, a stage 20 feet by 30 feet, with necessary dressing rooms, and the building will also be provided with a fireproof motion picture projection room. The auditorium will extend up through two floors, forming a gallery, and there will also be provided retiring rooms and a suite for the use of the militia, club rooms and armory. The floor above the auditorium, reached by an elevator, will be used for storage purposes. When completed the building will present a most attractive appearance with a front finished in Colonial fashion.

The statement often heard that motion picture films won't stand a continuous repetition has been disproved at the Columbia theater, for the five-reel production," Uncle Sam's Work Shop," has just finished a two weeks' continuous run, and brought in larger receipts than perhaps a legitimate show would at this time. It is seldom noted that when a legitimate house attempts to stage a photoplay that there are not at least a dozen performances given.

The Capital Amusement Company has been granted a permit by the Office of the Inspector of Buildings to remodel the Senate theater at 320 Pennsylvania Avenue, Southeast, at an estimated cost of $530. Improvements to the Georgia theater, at 3114 Georgia Avenue, Northwest, will cost, according to estimates, $175.

Mrs. J. P. Anderson is planning the installation of a Wurlitzer Orchestrion at the Eastern theater.

John Payette, assistant manager of the local branch office of the General Film Company, spent the past week traveling through the South.

The office of Warner's Features, Inc., in Charlotte, N. C., which is a branch of the Washington office, is to be taken from that place and re-established in Greensboro, N. C. At the latter city it will be more accessible to other places in that section and deliveries will be very much facilitated. C. O. Moss is manager of this branch.

It is reported that the Trenton theater, at Lynchburg, Va., has discontinued vaudeville and will hereafter run motion pictures exclusively.

Corbin Sheild, formerly manager of the Trenton theater, in Lynchburg, Va., has accepted a similar position at the Strand theater in Richmond, Va. This house was formerly named the Empire before it was acquired by its present operators, J. C. and H. C. Hofheimer.

E. T. Crall and son, who operate the Virginia in Petersburg, and the Olympic in Newport News, Va., were visitors here last week.

Harry Church, of the Bonita theater, in Norfolk, Va., was also seen in Washington.

BOOSTED PICTURE BUSINESS.

Tucson, Arizona, Picture Houses Filled Every Night—Prohibition Did It by Closing Saloons.

By F. H. Madison, Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

AFFECTS of prohibition in Tucson, Ariz., upon the photoplay business are detailed by a paper in that city in its summary of the first impressions of a dry city. "Every night this week the picture shows have been crowded and last night one show could hardly find room for the many people who desired admission. During the early part of the evening people could not get inside and were forced to wait out in front until the beginning of the next show. This is partly accounted for by the fact that many who had been in the habit of spending their evenings in the saloons are looking for other amusement and drift into the picture shows."

TEXAS HEALTH EXHIBIT.

Under the supervision of Dr. J. D. Davis, director, the Texas Public Health Exhibit car is touring the Lone Star State. The car remains on the tracks in each city a day or two days, its significant exhibits are shown and lectures are given by the experts accompanying the car. In addition reels of timely moving pictures are carried and these are shown at the local theaters. The Tivoli theater at Beaumont was used.

The Texas Company, a big oil concern, is planning to use educational moving pictures in an accident prevention campaign among its employes. The films of the Illinois Steel Company, the Rock Island Railroad and the National Association of Manufacturers have been secured. Arrangements were made for an exhibition in the city auditorium at Houston for some time in February.

The Chamber of Commerce at Miami, Ariz., has voted to subscribe $100 for having motion pictures made of the highway scenery on the route from San Antonio to Miami.

PICTURES CAN DO IT.

At Fort Worth, City Physician Hays Will Use Films to Teach Sanitation.

If a campaign for health and sanitation in Fort Worth, Tex., produces any results among the children, it will be through the co-operation of the moving picture proprietors of that city. "It would be useless to talk health and sanitation to children," said City Physician Hays. "An interesting film on the subject would impress the children and produce wonderful results. Grown people also would be benefited by the educational campaign." The plans made by the city health board are based on the suggestion that the picture houses of Fort Worth would run these educational films every Saturday. An attempt will be made to secure an appropriation for this purpose in the 1915 municipal financial budget.

Another use of educational pictures in Fort Worth is in the safety first campaign. The Santa Fe Railroad presented its anti-accident films at the Chamber of Commerce.

MORE SOUTHWESTERN ITEMS.

Harold Gaden of Seiling, Okla., has purchased moving picture equipment and will operate a show.

A fire at the Bayland home in Houston, Tex., rendered homeless a large number of orphans. Manager Edwards of the Zoe theater in that city gave his receipts between 10 o'clock and 4 o'clock one day for a relief fund. The Smalleys' Feature "False Colors" insured liberal patronage for the worthy cause.

The film "Our Fairy Play," shown at the Grand theater in Carson City, Nev., was brought back by request for the New Year's Eve program.

Manager E. L. McLeod of the Isis theater at North Fort Worth, Tex., has installed a new $1,600 Violin Virtuoso. The Isis will give the place of honor on its Sunday bills to "The Exploits of Elaine" (Eclectic), which it is running in connection with the North Fort Worth News.

C. F. Colby is now in charge of the Mirror theater at Denison, Tex.

The New Year's program at the Columbia theater in Douglas, Ariz., was the first time that an all-comedy bill had been shown at a picture house in that city.

Daily matinees have been announced by Manager Fred Green of the Unique theater at Miami, Ariz.

"From Molten Steel to Automobile," the industrialog of the Maxwell Motor Company, was shown at the Martin theater in Miami, Ariz.

The opera house at Minco, Okla., has been leased by J. S. Gall, proprietor of the Majestic theater at Chickasha, Okla., who will give picture shows three nights a week.

Two colored pictures a week, from the Pathe service, have been placed on the regular program of the Majestic theater at Cleburne, Tex., by Manager Green.

The experiment of tabloid musical comedy in connection with moving pictures has been given a trial by the Grand theater at Amarillo, Tex.

The Lyric theater at Amarillo, Tex., has been conducting a contest to give away a juvenile auto to some young patron.

Vaudeville bookings at the Garden theater in Dallas, Tex., have been curtailed to give feature pictures more prominence in the policy of that house.

Alteration work on the New Queen theater at Fort Worth, Tex., reached the stage where it was necessary to close the house for ten days or two weeks, but when the remodelling is done Manager Andrew Zuccarro will have a house pleasing to the eye.

NORTH WESTERN NEW YORK NOTES.

By Billy Bison (23 Victoria Avenue, Buffalo), Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

It is said that a moving picture theater will be built at the rear of the office of the Press, a newspaper of Lyons, N. Y.

A report from Mt. Morris, N. Y., says that a moving picture show will be opened at Portageville.

G. S. Schlesinger, manager of the Regent theater, Buffalo, used a novel plan to advertise the film, "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch." In his lobby he placed several bushel baskets containing real cabbage heads. A card, on which a painting of a cabbage and an announcement of the show appeared, was placed on each basket. The plan attracted much attention and good houses resulted. New poster frames are another feature in the Regent lobby. Five thousand booklets containing details of the Regent programmes for the week are distributed each Monday morning at homes from which that house draws substantial patronage.

E. C. Winegar has become manager of the Central Park moving picture theater, Buffalo. This house is owned by the Central Park Amusement Co. Mr. Winegar has had a wide experience in the show business. He began as superintendent of the Bijou Dream theater, Buffalo, several years ago, and later managed the Grand in the same city. In addition to his present management of the Central Park, Mr. Winegar has been representing Schuchert & Schmidt, Buffalo, in managing the Annette Kellermann pictures throughout New York State, Pennsylvania and part of Delaware. This firm has the exclusive rights on this film in these territories. Mr. Winegar has also spent much time in placing amusement devices at summer parks.

Manager Michaels of the Academy theater, Buffalo, recently used as a special feature what he advertised as a "Song Singers' Contest." As a Southern attraction he had negro musicians give a free programme in his lobby. They were surrounded with baskets of cotton.

The recent reopening of the Family theater, Buffalo, as a vaudeville and moving picture theater under the management of A. R. Sherry has already proved a profitable venture. Mr. Sherry regrets the recent death of Marshal P. Wilder, the famous humorist. The latter had been booked to appear at the Family late this month.

The Majestic theater, Buffalo, which plays dramas, musical comedies, etc., throughout the year, recently showed "The Christian" in moving pictures for a week. Manager Laughlin had Earl Williams, the movie star, as a special attraction. Mr. Williams appeared in person at each performance, delivered lectures and held receptions.

Manager Marcus recently had the Hippodrome theater, Buffalo, draped with the suffrage colors during the offering of the moving picture feature, "Your Girl and Mine." This film was produced under the auspices of the National American Women's Suffrage Association. He also had special Irish music in connection with the film, "Ireland as a Nation." Stage Manager Evers arranged special scenery for this and other productions.

Burglars recently robbed Sattler's moving picture theater, Buffalo.

E. J. Mather of Buffalo recently reported to the police that he had been robbed in a moving picture theater in that city.

The Lyric Amusement Co. of Jamestown, N. Y., has leased the summer theater at Celeron, N. Y. Vaudeville and moving pictures will be featured, beginning May 30th. J. M. Cowan is president and J. W. Klumpf, treasurer. George B. Hinman, manager of the Lyric theater, Jamestown, will have charge of the Celeron theater.

EDUCATIONAL FILMS FREE.

By Midwest Special Moving Picture World News Service in Illinois.

SUPERINTENDENT Carrie Stephenson O'Connor of the State School for Girls at Geneva has been notified by the General Film Company of Chicago that the company will furnish free all films required for the school's moving picture theater. The inmates of the institution have tendered the company a vote of thanks.

TREY O' HEARTS PARTY.

A number of young men of Somonauk got together and made arrangements for the Elite theater to run the whole of the serial "The Trey o' Hearts" in two nights. Twenty-five cents admission was secured.

Sadduth & Cryder have opened the K moving picture show in the building on the south side of East Main street, in Clinton, formerly occupied by the old Star theater.

OTHER ITEMS FROM ILLINOIS.

In the announcement of Manager W. M. Sauvage of the Hippodrome at Alton, that he will have no more serial pictures, the editor of the Enterprise at Clayton, sees an omen. "It is only a question of time," he says "when all the houses will quit 'em. When the filmic curtain goes down on the villain holding the heroine by a single hair over a chasm 1,000 feet deep, the audience don't want to wait a whole week to see whether he dropped her into the seething waters."

Leo Kancy of Champaign is reported to have made application for a patent on a new moving picture screen, which, it is claimed, will give a softer reflection.

W. N. Powell & Son, who have operated the Colonial theater at 1809 Second avenue in Rock Island for the last four years, have sold the house to a local company in which G. Giuffre and Leo Victor are interested. An early announcement by Guiffre, who is manager and who has had eight years' experience in the photoplay business, pays a compliment to the Rock Island photoplay lovers in that they are declared to be better educated as to "what is what" in feature pictures than the patrons in the larger cities.

After being operated continuously for ten years, the Lyric theater at East St. Louis has been closed. Manager Harry Redmon, who also operates the New Majestic, at first announced that the Lyric would be remodeled, but later he decided to operate both shows at the New Majestic, which he has leased for five years. Redmon has decided to admit two children for five cents at the New Majestic. The service at the consolidated shows will be made up of Paramount feature and General Film Company service, a combination of both former bills. The weekly Thursday souvenir matinees for women will be continued.

The Parker Building, at Hamilton, has been remodeled by R. W. Hesler, who will operate a moving picture theater.

Manager Daley of the opera house at Carlinville recently gave a free matinee for children below the eighth grade in the public schools. The Woman's Club cooperated in making it a gala event by furnishing gifts of candy, fruit, popcorn and nuts to the 500 young guests.

George Rice of Lacon has been giving moving picture shows at Princeville, Toluca and Sparland.

John A. Groves of Springfield has purchased the Casino theater on East Washington street, in Springfield, from Sheperd & Burnstein, of that city.

The New Majestic theater at East Moline has been preparing for a benefit show for the Belgian Relief fund.

Two big nights' business at the Lyric theater at Gibson City was attributed by Manager Poff to interest in snapshots of local celebrities taken on the streets and prepared for screen exhibition.

S. T. Herman of Tuscola has sold the Globe theater at Sullivan to a stock company. J. H. Ireland, who has been operating the theater for some time under a lease, is one of the members of the company, and with him will be associated Jack H. Pearson, George A. Sentel and F. E. Pifer.

The Princess theater at Alton showed the Ford Motor Company's industrialog. No matter what the policy of a house is in regard to advertising films, it would be pretty hard to find a community where this picture would not have drawing power.

Diamond's Castle at Havana means better things for the photoplay lovers of that city. "The Spoilers," Selig feature —and at 25 cents, too—was one of the early attractions.

The lease of C. T. Admire on the city opera house at Roodhouse has expired and the house will be conducted this year by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Jones.

John Camper is now in possession of the Gem theater at Lewistown. Hans Kohncke, Louis Greenup and Mrs. Alva Rasmussen remain on the house staff.

Four prizes of $5 gold pieces were given by the Apollo theater at Peoria for essays on "Julius Caesar," when the George Kleine feature was shown at that house. Two prizes were offered for papers by pupils at the high school, Spalding Institute or Bradley Polytechnic Institute and two for pupils of the grade and parochial schools.

The Colonial theater at Galesburg has installed a new gold radium screen.

Friday will be feature day hereafter at the Auditorium in Galesburg. Manager West will have a subject of five or more reels on that day.

Oloff Atkinson, the new manager of the Family theater at Rock Island, has made a number of innovations. A section of the house is reserved for women and girls without escorts, two features will be booked for two days each and an independent program will be run the last three days of the week.

A Southern Illinois house is advertising it as "The Zudora!"

Reinhold Foerester is manager of the Empire theater, which has just been opened in Moline. He formerly was in the photoplay business in Rock Island and later in Silvis. Music by a six-piece band was a feature of the opening. Universal service will be used.

The moving picture theater at Morrison operated by Al Keager, who also manages the Princess at Mt. Carroll, was destroyed by fire caused by the heating plant. The loss was about $4,000. Yeager did not own the building.

W. H. Cadoret, proprietor of the La Petitie theater at Kankakee, has had plans drawn for a new house, construction of which will be started about March 1. The specifications call for a story and half, 35x100, white terra cotta, stone and concrete structure, seating 550 persons.

The remodeled Star theater at Oregon has been thrown open.

Higher priced attractions are to be tried on Watseka residents. Manager J. N. Petrea of the Princess theater booked "The Christian" for January 27, and if it is well received at 25 cents will book other features such as "Neptune's Daughter."

"The Christian" has been booked for the opera house at Chester for February 2 for the benefit of the Tecumseh Library.

Claude Pittman is now operator at the Majestic theater at Rushville, succeeding Fred Riggs, who has gone to Macomb to accept a position.

The United Film Service Company of Chicago has been incorporated with capital stock of $200,000 to manufacture and assemble, construct and deal in moving picture machines. The incorporators are D. H. Chatkin, A. A. Chatkin and W. H. Franck.

PAYS TO ADVERTISE.

By Kansas City Special Moving Picture World News Service.

Messrs. McCarty and Rothstein, managers of the Majestic theater, Tulsa, Okla., visited Kansas City recently. Several exhibitors met the gentlemen and were surprised to learn the manner in which the men from Tulsa do their advertising. They use features supplied by the World Feature Film Corp. and run them for several days. With each film they get fifty-one sheets, five threes, five sixes and four twenty-fours, which are all used for billboard purposes. Besides using the billboards they distribute several thousand heralds and put out many window cards. They estimate their average expense per picture at $25 and they say that it pays.

MORE MISSOURI NEWS.

Several times during her career as an actress on the legitimate stage, Leslie Carter appeared at Willis Wood theater in Du Barry. For this reason it seemed only right and reasonable that she should make her first appearance in the "Silent Drama" in Kansas City, at the same theater where she has made so many friends in years past. Probably the management of the theater was thinking of this when it booked her in Kleine's picture production, Du Barry. Many film critics pronounced the picture from point of view of stage effects to be the greatest picture that has ever come to Kansas City. The large deep scenes made a decided hit with the "movie" fans of the city.

As an added attraction the theater had the famous unfinished oil painting called "The Sign of the Cross." This picture has been exhibited at every world's fair for the past seventeen years and was on its way to San Francisco where it was to be shown at the Panama Pacific Exposition when its owner was persuaded to show it at the theater for one week.

G. E. Akers, who has in hand the destinies of "Runaway June" in this territory, says that the film is going immense. Mr. Akers has already succeeded in "landing" it at one of the fine down-town theaters, the Idle Hour. He says that it will probably take better than any serial that has ever been shown in this territory.

C. S. Edwards, Jr., manager of Pathe Freres, Inc., says that the "Exploits of Elaine" is going to surpass the "Perils of Pauline" in the number of bookings. If so, it will be going some. There are six copies of the latter working in and around Kansas City.

AUSTRALIAN JOTTINGS.

By Frank H. Madison, Special Correspondent of the Moving Picture World.

PICTURE show proprietors of Australia who called upon the attorney-general at Sydney to tell their tariff troubles were encouraged by the likelihood of moving picture films being declared necessary commodities and relieved of the duty. They were told that if the case were made as strong before the Necessary Commodities Commission as before the attorney-general and a resolution prepared there was little doubt of its passage by the house. The exhibitors told the official there were millions of feet of film in Australia upon which no duty would be paid yet an increase of about 50 per cent. had been demanded of them by supply houses and that to import films under the new impost would make a program, then costing £20 a week about £30 a week. The exhibitors did not want the patrons to stand this increase but said the "film proprietors" seemed so ensconced in their position that they could afford to tell showmen that if they didn't like to pay up they could shut up. An estimate was made that the increase would amount to something like £150,000 a year.

The proprietors of the Crystal Palace moving picture show at Toowoomba, Australia were fined for violating a gambling suppression act by conducting Free Gift Guinea Nights when the holder of a winning ticket was given a guinea.

FEATURES IN OREGON.

By Midwest Special Moving Picture World News Service.

THE biggest thing in the amusement year at Portland, Ore., according to a writer in the Oregon Journal in reviewing 1914, was the advent of the real feature picture and the increase in the number of available releases of this kind. Proof of the popularity of the program which features the better kind of photoplays is offered by a list of the houses which are running features exclusively, four days a week or two times a week.

OTHER NORTHWEST ITEMS.

Roseburg, Ore., citizens, snapped in their daily walks in life, thronged to the Palace theater when they heard that house had sent a cameraman among them without warning. The screen surprises proved a profitable attraction.

E. L. Cooper has sold the Cozy theater, which he opened at Pendleton, Ore., four years ago to A. C. Stewart, formerly of Spokane, Wash. The new owner, who is experienced in the photoplay business, already has assumed charge. Early assertions of policy came in the form of eliminating vaudeville from the shows and announcement that Mutual service with Keystone comedies will have a regular place.

Good reports pay the school children in Douglas county, Ore. All who can show an average of 85 per cent. or over for a month will be given a pass for all Saturday matinees at the Majestic theater in Roseburg. The only requirement is proof from the teacher or parents.

Souvenirs were given the lady patrons of the Gem theater at Sheridan, Wyo., on New Years. This house with other business concerns is conducting a voting contest whereby some lodge, church or individual will receive $250 in gold. One vote is given for each ten cent purchase.

W. J. Bruan has installed moving picture apparatus in the opera house at Alberta, Minn., and will operate a show.

Children under twelve, if accompanied by an elder, were admitted free to the production of "Little Lord Fauntleroy" at the Alta theater in Pendleton, Ore.

College Belle Wayne, a $10,000 Holstein cow at the South Dakota State College of Agriculture, and fat-rumped Siberian sheep, the only ones in America, are shown in films put out by the college.

The midnight matinee given at the American theater New Year's Eve by Manager Ruffner, was a novelty for Butte, Mont., photoplay lovers.

The Washington State College quartet was a recent attraction at the Bijou theater in Missoula, Mont.

On New Year's Day the It theater at Medford, Ore., gave each family represented in its patrons, a handsome calendar. A recent novelty at this house was an illustrated lecture by Captain George Ash, billed as an "American rebel," on the Mexican war.

John Cox has opened his new moving picture show at Salem, S. D.

A. Fred Roberts, "The Man Behind th Voice," was a recent attraction in connection with the picture show at the Orpheum theater in Butte, Mont.

Manager Earl Wheat, of the Pastime theater at Dillon, Mont., has restored the every-night schedule. For a while the house was closed three days a week.

The Echo theater in Duluth, Minn., had an unostentatious film fire, causing a loss of about $50.

Modern Woodmen of America at Hibbing, Minn., will use the films of the lodge's anti-tuberculosis camp in Colorado, in connection with a membership campaign begun the first of the year.

The Star theater at Idaho Falls, Idaho, has installed a new three-quarters grand piano.

The opening of the new Grand theater at Mandan, N. D., drew a crowd of 1,100 persons.

Theater Tax Eldorado

Montreal's Proposed Tax on Theaters of Eighty-five Cents on Each Seat Yearly Loads Heavy Burden on the Big Houses—May Amount to $1,700 for One Theater Alone—Crying Need of Adjustment—Organization of Exhibitors the Only Way Out.

By Gerald F. Gallagher, Special Correspon dent of Moving Picture World.

IN the last Montreal column an announcement was made to the effect that the legislation committee of the City Council had recommended a change in the system of taxing local places of amusement for municipal purposes, and that the matter would be taken up at the Council's next meeting. The meeting was held as stated, the question discussed, and it was decided that the proposed changes should be at once incorporated in the Montreal bill, which will shortly be taken up by the Private Bills Committee of Quebec Legislature. We here give a brief review of the proposed new system of taxation:

The amendments to the bill provide that a tax, not exceeding eighty-five cents for each seat capable of holding one person in the moving picture halls of the city, be levied. To guard against fires the charter amendments also ask that the city shall have the right to put a fireman in all concert halls, etc., where entertainments are held.

We are given to understand that the proposed rate of taxation was arrived at by dividing the present revenue by the total number of seats in the local picture halls. This means that a house of 200 seating capacity will pay $170 instead of $500; and that a house of 2,000 seats will be taxed $1,700 instead of the present $500. In other words, it is a gain for the smaller exhibitor and gross injustice to the big houses. The rate should be changed to meet all demands. We suggest a limit be fixed, so that taxes come within a certain scale, neither extremes being too small nor too great.

If the Montreal bill goes through, as it has every indication of doing, the large exhibitors should register a protest. What local exhibitors need is co-operation. An Exhibitors' Protective Association should be organized for the advantage of all concerned. Evidently the authorities must think that the local moving picture industry is an Eldorado.

TAX TEMPORARY SHOWS.

Quebec Proposes Tax of Ten Cents a Seat Plus Other Duty on Shows Given Only Thirty Times a Year.

A feature of a bill presented at Quebec by the Hon. Walter Mitchell is that temporary moving picture houses are made liable to tax. When the existing statute relating to moving picture houses was passed it was thought that its provisions would apply to all picture houses. But the courts have held differently. A temporary house, it was decided, was not a picture hall within the meaning of the Act.

For the purposes of the bill, a temporary moving picture house is defined as "a public hall in which not oftener than thirty times in one year" exhibitions of moving pictures are given for a price of admission. Such picture halls are to be charged a license fee of five dollars. In addition, a duty has to be paid of ten cents per seat, the total not to exceed $100 and not to be less than $20. The bill also increased the charge for examination of films submitted by film exchanges from one dollar to two dollars.

The resolutions were adopted and the bill read a third time.

MADE-IN-CANADA FILMS.

A "Made-in-Canada" series of films are to be released shortly through the Canadian branch offices of the United Film Service (Warner's Features). It is proposed to photograph industrial scenes from Halifax to Vancouver. For example, the camera man will take scenes relating to the manufacture of footwear, and then the finished product will be shown worn by a regiment of Canadian soldiers. One of the series will be released every week for ten weeks. The gentlemen behind the movement are Messrs. H. Ives, Ben Geotz, and Valentine.

REGULATION ON SCENES.

Supreme Court Counts Houses with Sets and Vaudeville as Theaters—Must Be Fireproof.

Armed with a recent judgment of the Superior Court that vaudeville cannot be played nor scenery used in any but theaters, the city has commenced a campaign with the object of making all places of public amusement comply with the law. It is laid down in the judgment that to be a theater the building must be fireproof. Actions have been taken against two houses, one in the west end and the other in the east end. At the present writing no further developments have taken place. Meanwhile the inspectors attached to the building department are scouring the city that all offenders may be brought to book. Suits will be taken in the Recorder's Court, and, with this judgment delivered, the Recorder's ruling on the case is final.

NEW EXCHANGE.

Another exchange has entered the local field. A branch office of the Humber Film Exchange, of Winnipeg, has been opened in the Merchants' Bank Bldg., in St. Catherine St., West. W. Cranston is the local representative. Mostly English productions are handled.

HECHT AT WINNIPEG.

We have had word from Louis B. Hecht, who formerly managed the Scala here, that the Winnipeg office of Allfeatures is now under his charge. He claims good business. The Western office is in the Columbia Theater Bldg., 306 Main street, Winnipeg.

OTHER MONTREAL NOTES.

What is said to be the largest contract ever given for moving picture films to any concern has just been received by Harry Kaufman, manager of the Montreal office of the Famous Players Film Service. Mr. Kaufman has received from the New Grand theater a one-year contract to supply that house with two features a week during 1915. The total amount of the contract is $35,000. Mr. Kaufman is naturally very much pleased with the condition of the film business in Montreal.

"Runaway June" was ushered into Montreal with great eclat and had first-run at the New Grand a few days before it was released in New York City. It was screened during a whole week, and an extensive advertising campaign was inaugurated. Large crowds paid admission at the progressive West End theater. The local Mutual office was pleased with results. The manager, Mr. MacBeath, claimed that bookings surpassed all expectations. The story version by George Randolph Chester is running in serial form in the Daily Star.

Another serial which has been released and is meeting with great success is Pathe's "Perils of Pauline." L. E. Ouimet, manager of the local office, is pleased with results. A feature of Pathe's advertising is that it is bi-lingual.

WAR STAMPS A HARDSHIP.

Kentucky Roads May Lighten Carriage Charges on Musical Instruments to Ease Burden of Federal Tax.

By George D. Crain, Jr., Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

FEDERAL war tax stamps, which now have to be placed on all express shipments of films, amount to a good deal in the course of a month with some of the leading exchanges. Musicians traveling backward and forward between the Three Falls Cities have been put to some inconvenience by the act as stamps have to be placed on drums and larger instruments, which are carried on special bills of lading when handled by the passenger. The local interurban lines are talking of lifting the charges on musical instruments and other such packages for the time being.

ALL SWOP SERVICE.

Louisville Theaters Go Through Big Shake-Up—Change Brands of Pictures—Prices Go Up.

A big shake up has just occurred and a number of local houses have swopped film services. The Broadway Amusement Company took General service out of three of its houses because, it is said, the Parkland Theater was using the service, although the theater was far out of the Broadway district. The Federal Film Corporation then raised the price on the service to the remaining three houses of the Broadway Amusement Company, as it was impossible to serve films to three houses at the same contract price on six houses. The Broadway Amusement Company discarded the service and took on Mutual and Universal programs at all of its houses, while the General service was taken on by the Parkland, Empire, Sun, Norman and Knickerbocker. The Novelty theater, which has been specializing on Universal service, has discontinued its policy of daily features as well as the Universal service and is now showing Box Office Attractions and Celebrated Players. The program is now changed three times a week.

CHILDREN AT SHOWS.

The Parent-Teacher Association of the John Marshall School met January 19 at the school, when Mrs. John Little addressed the mothers on the subject of attendance at the motion picture shows provided for children. A business meeting of the Board of Censorship for Childrens' Motion Pictures was held at the Louisville Free Public Library on January 11 at 3 o'clock.

NOT ALL AT ONCE.

So many complaints have been heard recently in moving picture theaters about persons reading aloud in the theaters the titles and descriptive matter accompanying the pictures that it is probable special slides will be used shortly requesting patrons to be quieter in their comments. The trouble is often caused by parents reading the signs to children who are not old enough to read, but at the same time it is very annoying to persons who are making a study of the features. Children who are not old enough to read the titles for themselves would not be able to ascertain the meaning either of the titles or the pictures in the majority of cases. In some cases persons read the titles to companions who are near-sighted, but in the latter case the person can't see much of the picture anyway. Quite often a bunch of fresh youngsters read the titles aloud in an attempt to attract attention and cause disturbances, and it is this latter type of offender which is hardest to contend with. The fellow who barks when he laughs, the big-hatted ladies who refuse to take them off after being seated, the masher, and the professional "drunk" as well as sneezers and coughers are sources of considerable annoyance both to patrons and the managements. Crying babies and children who persist in running up and down the aisles are other hard propositions for the theater manager to solve. However, with careful handling and well trained ushers, the proposition is coming along better all the time.

OTHER KENTUCKY ITEMS.

It is rumored throughout moving picture circles that the Crescent Airdome, which was erected in Crescent Hill last summer, but which was not very successful, will be moved in the spring to Second and Burnett streets. The new location should prove a very successful one as it is in a part of the city which is thickly settled, but which is far removed from any moving picture house.

Fred T. Heffernan, president of the Shawnee Amusement Company, has announced that the company is closing up its business. All persons or firms having claims or other business with the company are requested to present them to John P. Fleming, attorney, in the Inter-Southern building.

W. L. LeCompte, president of the Owl Feature Film Company, was recently in Seymour, Ind., for a day or two and landed some contracts for service and equipment.

L. J. Ditmar, president and general manager of the Majestic Amusement Company, has returned from a short trip to Indianapolis, Ind.

A. P. Barnard, president of the Kinemacolor Company, of New York, was recently in Louisville for a few days calling on L. J. Dittmar. Mr. Barnard had a completed reel of the new process film. This reel was shown at a private exhibition given at the Majestic Theater. A number of leading moving picture men of the city were present at the exhibition and give the new process their strong endorsement.

The Columbia theater, at Fourth and Market streets, which was recently purchased by the S. & P. Film Supply Company, is picking up rapidly under the watchful eye of Fred Sheldon. Business during the past ten days has made the best showing the theater has enjoyed for several years past, according to Mr. Sheldon. One reason for the success attending the efforts of the new owners is the fact that the house has an unlimited assortment of films to draw upon, and exceptionally good material is being shown at the house. Two new Simplex machines have been installed.

The features "Lola" and "The Pit," produced by the World Feature Film Corporation, made such hits in Louisville that they have been ordered back and the Alamo theater will again show "Lola" while "The Pit" will be shown at the Mary Anderson. These two houses were the ones which were recently "balled up" with conflicting bookings.

"The Master Key" is making a tremendous hit at the Star theater, and also at the Palace theater, at Shelby and Rupp streets. The latter theater is the one which bears the distinction of being the only theater in this secion of the country, and probably in any section, which has free street car service to its door. This condition is brought about by a belt line car which transfers its passengers to the city lines in front of the Palace theater, but does not charge for feeder service.

"Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," a five-reel California Motion Picture Corporation offering, and the "Knockout," a two-reel Keystone comedy, made a combination of comedy which would certainly be very hard to beat. These pictures were shown at the Mary Anderson theater to very good audiences. The real Mrs. Wiggs lives in Louisville and Mrs. Rice, the author of the book, is a Louisville woman.

Every child attending the special Saturday shows for children at the Mary Anderson theater, on Saturday, January 9, was presented with a fancy calendar which was decorated with some well-known domestic animals or pets, such as dogs, cats, rabbits, etc.

CHILDREN'S MATINEES.

Sheboygan, Wisconsin, Is Promoting Plan to Show Helpful Pictures to Children.

By Midwest Special Moving Picture World News Service.

HELPFUL moving picture shows for children at two cents admission proved a success at Sheboygan. At the first show at the Majestic theater there were 936 paid admissions and from fifty to seventy-five little ones who had lost their pennies or who had none were admitted free. The Mothers' Club of the Second Ward school promoted the plan. Films were furnished by the extension department of the University of Wisconsin and the Majestic company gave the use of the theater. Three films, "The Fly Pest and Summer Babies," "The Fairies' Banquet" and "Shoe-Making," were shown and lectured. The plan will be repeated each Saturday morning with new films.

In order to handle the crowds pupils from certain grades will be admitted each week. Secretary Westermeyer of the Majestic has offered the use of some of his films in case the university supply is delayed. The receipts are to be used to purchase a moving picture machine. The Eighth Ward school in Sheboygan has its own show, given at 4 o'clock and 7 o'clock each Friday with patriotic and educational programs.

BACK SAFETY FIRST FILMS.

Industrial Commission of Wisconsin Helped in Good Work by Commercial Organizations in Appleton.

In order to secure the maximum attendance at all shows of the safety-first motion pictures, the Industrial Commission of Wisconsin is using various colored tickets for the different performances. These films were booked for three shows at the Appleton theater in Appleton January 21 and 22, the Commercial Club and the owners of the factories in that city co-operating. Attendance by factory workers in Green Bay was heavy when the films were shown at the Orpheum theater in that city.

FILMS IN REFORMATORY.

The Wisconsin State Reformatory at Green Bay has been booked on one of the circuits to which the Visual Instruction Bureau of the University of Wisconsin will send motion picture films and slides. The gymnasium hall is being used for the projection and an outside operator hired. The auditorium will be used as soon as interior work is completed. Other penal and charitable state institutions in Wisconsin are to be included in the circuits which secure these educational films and slides.

BELOIT BUYS FILM OUTFIT.

The board of education at Beloit has decided to purchase a moving picture outfit at an expense of $300. Service from the visual instruction bureau of the University of Wisconsin at Madison will be used, temporarily at least.

MORE WISCONSIN NOTES.

The Crystal theater at Monroe made quite an attraction of the Youth Photoplay company's five-reel feature, "The Boy and the Law." Miss Mina Etter of Monroe had a prominent part in the production and at 5 and 10 cents it drew good crowds.

W. H. Kamps of Marshfield ordered plans drawn for a two-story, 40 x 150 theater and store building on Central avenue in that city. The first floor will be occupied by a picture show, operated by A. W. Rice, owner of the Unique theater.

Frank Winninger has leased the Appleton theater at Appleton for a year. Joseph Winninger will be house manager. The new managers are well known as Winninger Brothers, operating theatrical stock companies and the new policy will include principally theatrical bookings.

Kellery & Crane have opened a moving picture theater in Sullivan.

PHILADELPHIA.

Situated at Broad and Susquehanna avenues, the exterior of the Bluebird theatre is one of the most imposing for its size to be found anywhere in Philadelphia. This theatre is attracting thousands of people outside of its immediate vicinity with its carefully selected program of photoplays and beautiful organ with the electrical echo. New storm doors have recently been added for the comfort of patrons, not mentioning the excellent heating system which has recently been installed.

Since the announcement recently appeared that Arthur C. Melvin of the World Film Corporation was previously in the theatrical business he has had several inquiries as to whether he was one of the three Melvins, acrobats. Mr. Melvin wishes to state that he has never been an acrobat.

Plans have been drawn and bids received for the erection of a moving picture theatre and store at Broad and Rockland streets, for Clarence S. Shilcocks. The new structure is to be a one story, brick, terra cotta and reinforced concrete building, 55 by 175 feet. Albert F. Schenck was the architect.

Judge Thompson has appointed William S. Lloyd as receiver for the Liberty Motion Pictures Company under a bond of $15,000.

The newly built theatre on the west side of 17th street, north of Atlantic street, lot 42 feet by 192 feet 6 inches, with an extension to Atlantic street, has been conveyed by William I. Greenfield to the Tioga Theatre Holding Company for a price not disclosed, subject to a mortgage of $54,000. The theatre occupies the site of an old stable which was purchased early last year from William R. Brown.

One of three electric poles which recently fell in the streets of Phoenixville, Pa., crashed through the front entrance of the Phoenixville Moving Picture theater, and the large audience, watching a thrilling picture, were nearly thrown into a disastrous panic, it being prevented only by the excellent manner in which the management handled the unexpected emergency. Three persons were injured, but not in the theater, they being on the outside when the accident occurred.

G. Frank Richards, formerly a telegraph operator of the Lehigh Valley Railroad at Allentown, has recently purchased the Palace Moving Picture House of Newark, N. J., and has taken up his residence in Newark in order to be handy to his new establishment.

Anderson and Haupt have recently perfected plans for alterations and a one-story addition, 50x150 feet, to the moving picture theater which is located at No. 4817 North Broad street. This theater is run in the interest of the Logan Amusement Company.

ELSEWHERE IN PENNSYLVANIA.

By Pittsburgh Special Moving Picture World News Service.

Miles E. Luton, aged 69, retired business man, recently died at the Allegheny General Hospital, Pittsburgh, Pa. The body was taken to the home of his daughter, Mrs. Jacob Gillman, 220 McClain avenue, Butler, Pa., where the funeral was held.

The deceased was a native of Franklin, Pa., and before his retirement from active business resided in Apollo, Pa., where he was engaged in the moving picture business. He leaves a widow, two daughters, Mrs. R. A. Kelley and Mrs. Jacob Gillman, and a son, C. R. Luton, of Lowell, Ohio.

The proprietor of the Palm Garden, South Side, Pittsburgh, Pa., H. B. Ketcham, left last week on a five-weeks' trip to Jacksonville, Fla., and other southern points.

Peter Peterson, who has run the Bijou theater at Somerset for a year with great success, has bought the Dreamland theater there. Both houses are running straight pictures and practically have a monopoly on pictures in that place.

Trenton Screeners' Ball

Over a Thousand Guests on Floor—Festivities Officially Started by Mayor Donnelly with Address of Welcome—Mayor and Mary Fuller Lead Grand March—Many Well-Known Screen Stars Present—Banquet Held Before Ball Opened.

By Philadelphia Special Moving Picture World News Service.

MORE than one thousand people will testify to the fact that the Trenton Screen Club has added another laurel to its already long list by the annual ball which took place on Monday evening, January 18th, at the Arcade, Trenton. All of the great and near-great in the motion picture circles participated and added to make the affair a great-grand success.

The ball was officially started by Mayor Donnelly, who delivered the address of welcome. He told the stars of the film they could have full police protection in anything short of robbery or murder up until 3 a. m., and after that dead line they would do well to walk a straight narrow chalk line. The affair was stripped of every formality, both as to dress and to dancing, and this was a novel feature which attracted hundreds of "movie fans."

The various stars were introduced to the crowd by Daniel D. Scullen, publicity representative of the Trenton Screen Club and manager of the Grand theater. No matinee idol ever secured half of the applause which greeted the names of more than a score of the more popular stars. Mayor Donnelly in full regalia, accompanied by Mary Fuller, the popular young star of the Universal Film Company, led the Grand March at 11 o'clock.

This was followed by several vaudeville acts from local theatres, which was an additional feature arranged by the Entertainment Committee. Unusual arrangements had been made for the entertainment of the crowds and nothing possible was left undone to make the affair a pronounced success from every viewpoint. There were several refreshment booths on the main floor.

Mayor Donnelly was appointed official "introducer" of the evening and several of the players will testify that he did not forget a single resident of Trenton on the floor. There were exhibition dances given by Miss Wallace, Mr. Timson, Miss Carter and Mr. Craig. The music for the occasion was furnished by Howell Orchestra.

Among the moving picture artists who took part in the festivities were: George Spencer, Florence Hackett, Mildred Gregory, Clara Lambert, James Dailey, William Cahill, Frankie Mann, Aida Charles, Patsy De Forest, Allen Quinn, Jack Delson, James Cassidy, Dorothy Adams and Clarence Elmer of the Lubin Company, Philadelphia; Maurice Costello and Mrs. Costello, of the Vitagraph; Mary Fuller and Ben Wilson of the Universal; G. Michaels of the Greater New York Film Company; M. Milder of General Film Company, and Edwin August, Irne Tams and a score or more of others. King Baggot, Sally Crute, Anita Stewart, Mary Pickford and several other prominent stars who had accepted invitations to attend, sent message of regret at not being able to attend. It was mainly through the efforts of Philip Paiper, treasurer, and Charles C. Hildinger, vice president of the club, both of whom made several trips to New York and Philadelphia, that these stars were secured for the evening's entertainment. The grand finale occurred at 3 a. m., after the merrymaking had been in progress for nearly six hours.

The ball and carnival was preceded by a banquet served the visiting players at the Trenton House. At the dinner, speeches were made by many of the players and by former Governor Edward C. Stokes and B. C. Kuser, who were among the honored guests. The youngest diner who ever participated in a banquet given in Trenton was Miss Marjorie Paiper, daughter of Philip Paiper, treasurer of the Trenton Screen Club. She is four years of age.

CARRICK SEES BOOM.

R. V. Carrick, president of the Interstate Films Company, the local exchange for Universal Films, predicts great possibilities for the motion picture industry during the coming year of 1915. He states that although the motion picture industry is steadily advancing with rapid strides there are those that already considered the business to have attained its greatest possible height three years ago. He points out that the time has passed when motion pictures were considered a cheap form of amusement for the poorer people. All classes find ample entertainment and recreation from the up-to-date products of the leading film manufacturers. The popularity and interest in moving pictures will be sustained only when a good variety of pictures are shown at the theatres. He declares that the long six and eight reel pictures are not nearly as popular as the single and three-reel pictures. The Universal studios are reported as being the largest in the World.

FIGHT ON AT BEACH.

Atlantic City Church People Open Battle with Picture Men on Sunday Shows Along Beach.

Shore amusement purveyors recently claimed that evidence had been secured against them by detectives in the employ of pastors and churchmen, who have launched a campaign against Sunday amusements. The programs scheduled at the various motion picture theaters and other enterprises included in the campaign were presented without change. Retaliatory measures are promised by the amusement men. A lively time is looked for as soon as the pending battle gets under way.

Sunday amusements at Atlantic City have now been run without interruption for several months and the movement inaugurated against them was as unexpected as it was displeasing to the picture men. They have discussed the matter among themselves and have arrived at the conclusion to fight the effort to make them close their doors. Considering the value of pictures to the community and especially on Sundays to such as Atlantic City, the prejudice is strange.

NEW BALTIMORE THEATER.

Plans are in progress for the erection of a new moving picture theater in Baltimore, Md. The new theater is to be two stories in height and is to be constructed of brick, stone and reinforced concrete at a cost of $100,000. It is being erected for the Northern Amusement Company, of which company Henry W. Webb, who has offices in the Title Building, is president. Oliver B. Wight, 1008 Munsey Building, was the architect for the new structure.

MORE PHILADELPHIA ITEMS.

The Plaza theater, on the east side of Broad street, south of Ritner, lot 162 feet by 80 feet, with a lot of 18 feet adjoining, and the Erie theater, at the northeast corner of Erie avenue and Marshal street, lot 75 feet by an irregular depth, have been conveyed by the Active Real Estate Company to Edmund J. Bamberger, subject, respectively, to mortgages of $17,000 and $41,000. The Plaza theater is assessed at $50,000 and the Erie theater at $36,400.

LICENSED FILM STORIES

ESSANAY.

THE NEW TEACHER (Feb. 1). The country school board assigns a new teacher, and the lot falls to none other than Sweedie. She takes up her duties the following Monday, and the pupils have great sport with her. She is the target for their bean shooters and rubber bands, but is unable to catch any of them in the act. Finally she is forced to be the peace maker between Tim and his rival, who have started a fight over Sadie, the little girl in the case. As time goes by, Sweedie is paid great attentions by one of the old members of the school board. This fact becomes known and the town gossipers get busy and demand that Sweedie be discharged. She loses her position, but not for long, as the pupils threaten to quit unless she returns. The next day finds Sweedie back on the job.

THE CREED OF THE CLAN (Feb. 2). —Jim Bradley is on trial for murder, and at the eleventh hour, Sandy O'Connell furnishes an alibi, swearing that Bradley was with him at the time the murder was committed. Sandy is a very common sort of fellow, and when Bradley asks him why he did it, he replies that when he was a homeless kid of the gutter, Jim Bradley was pointed out to him as the man who gave money for the burial of his mother and father. This is why he lied for him under oath. Bradley has a daughter whom Sandy meets and falls in love with. Bradley tells him not to tell her of his false oath. Later, Sandy asks her to marry him and Bradley refused him. It is then discovered that Sandy swore to a lie, and he takes his punishment, realizing that if he can't have Kitty he will let her keep her love for her father.

THE FABLE OF ELVIRA AND FARINA AND THE MEAL TICKET (Feb. 3).—Alexander, Elvira's husband, was the biggest man in town and had plenty of coin. Elvira and her daughter, Farina, met a lady who had traveled abroad. She pumped them full, so they attack Ready Money to see Europe. He didn't have a chance. For a year they cut circles in Europe; then the Hen and Chick came back as Birds of Paradise. They came full of new fangled ideas, and Alexander was the Goat. Nothing would do but they must move to the city and Bust into society. They rented a large Chilly Morgue right on the avenue for $14,000 a year; then sent out twenty invitations to a dinner party to prominent people. They received twenty refusals. All things come to those who plug hard enough, and finally Elvira received an invitation to dinner from Mrs. Weatherby-Glue. Her life's work was accomplished, after a very costly expedition.

SOPHIE'S HOME-COMING (Feb. 4).—Slim receives a note from Sophie telling him that she will arrive on the five o'clock stage coach the next morning, and for him to set his alarm clock so he will be sure to meet her. Mustang reads the note, and after Slim has gone to bed, substitutes another clock in Slim's room. He then gets up at five A. M. and meets Sophie, telling her that Slim said he wouldn't get up for the best girl in the world. Slim plans to get even, so that evening when Mustang prepares to call on Sophie, Slim puts some snuff in his handkerchief. All goes well until he pulls out his handkerchief, when they both start to sneeze. They cause such a commotion that Hiram Clutts is awakened and comes downstairs. Mustang is kicked out bodily.

BRONCHO BILLY'S GREASER DEPUTY (Feb. 6).—Broncho Billy, the sheriff, is in love with a girl, but another man wins her affections and marries her. He is a worthless sort of fellow, and when Broncho sees him in the saloon, drinking with an outlaw, he gives the bartender orders to sell him no more liquor. This causes a fight, but peace is soon restored. The outlaw then persuades his new comrade to assist him in a hold-up. Soon the sheriff and his posse are on their trail, and when they separate, Broncho leads a small party in pursuit of his rival. He finds him in his home, but decides to allow him to escape when the young wife pleads with him. Upon reaching the outside he is shot by one of Broncho's deputies. Broncho returns home satisfied that his former sweetheart is rid of the scoundrel.

THIRD HAND HIGH (Special—Two parts—Feb. 5).—George Trevor, prospecting for gold in Australia, sends his motherless baby daughter, Constance, home to America by his brother, Will. She is brought up by her aunt, while the father makes a fortune in mining. Twenty years later he plans to return, when two bushmen, Benton McArdle and Roy Goodman, attack him in his cabin, shooting him down. They find that Trevor has deposited his money in his daughter's name, and leaving Trevor for dead, start for America, where McArdle pretends to be the girl's father, while Goodman sues for her hand in order to get her money.

The girl is already betrothed to Penfield Drayton, but McArdle frowns upon the match and forbids Drayton the house. Goodman makes love to Constance, but she spurns him. McArdle in a rage, forces Constance and her aunt to go to the girl's room, where he locks them in, declaring they will stay there until Constance consents to wed Goodman.

Constance hands a note to a lineman at work on a telephone just outside her window. He takes it to Drayton, who calls the police and hurries to the house. Trevor, however, proves to be only wounded. He recovers and hurries to America, arriving at his daughter's house just before Drayton reaches it with the police. He surprises the two bushmen in the drawing room. There is a fierce battle. Goodman is about to shoot Trevor when Drayton and the police arrive. The bushmen are arrested. Drayton releases Constance and her aunt and the girl finds her real father.

BIOGRAPH.

THE UNDYING FIRE (Jan. 18).—After her marriage to the governor of the state, Marion is visited by the man who, once her fiance, proved himself unworthy. He attacks her and, following a struggle, is imprisoned for housebreaking. With the aid of a light-o'-love he makes a sensational escape from prison and goes straight to the governor's house. It is late. Marion, sitting by the fire awaiting her husband's return, confronts the intruder and, to save herself, snatches a pistol from a drawer. The governor, returning, finds her fainting above the lifeless body of the convict.

THE LADY OF DREAMS (Special—Two parts—Jan. 19).—One delightful hour in the company of a girl with ravishingly beautiful eyes, an exquisite voice and the charm of Circe—this was the memory that returned again and again to Wallace, long after the other guests at Mrs. Van Stuyvesant's masked ball had forgotten the incidents of that night when May West stole in among them. Sometimes Wallace thought he had dreamed the enchanting lady and all the exciting events of that night, but it couldn't be a dream, because he still had the slipper she had dropped in her flight. Then in the dusk he heard the new governess telling his motherless children the story of Cinderella, and knew that he had found her at last—the Lady of Dreams. For May West, the old fairy tale came true incredibly—her Prince Charming really loved her.

THE GANG'S NEW MEMBER (Jan. 21).—The murder of a Chinaman in a slum gives the cub reporter his opportunity. In a saloon frequented by gangsters he rescues a girl from the attentions of a thug. Through her influence he is made a member of the gang. Their secrets begin to appear in the papers. The thug squares his grudge by treacherously shooting the reporter. The girl nurses him back to health. A notebook in his coat pocket excites her curiosity. It contains damning evidence of his treachery. But she loves him, and so she says nothing until he spurns her love. Then she denounces him—only to consider, after it is too late.

HEART'S HUNGER (Jan. 22).—The magazine writer, a gentleman of the old school, attempts to sell an unsuitable article to the young publisher. On parting, each goes to his home—the writer walking so that he may purchase with his carfare a flower for his wife, while the publisher rides in his motor car and, as soon as he reaches the house, plunges into work, oblivious of his wife, who lies sick in her sumptuous boudoir. The doctor's visits do her no good; finally the physician, wise man, tells the publisher that he can do nothing for his wife. But he adds: "Come and I will show you the only possible cure," and takes him to the home of the writer, whom he knows. There the man's eyes are opened to the full meaning of love. He returns home, determined to satisfy his wife's hungering heart, and at the close we see them happy in complete understanding.

HIS NIGHT OUT (Jan. 23).—Hubby never has a chance to slip out for a time with the boys until one night when wifey is talking clothes with a friend. Then the friend's husband leads him scandalously astray, with the result that he gets into mirth-provoking mixups with Claude Coke, a professional elbow bender, a pair of jolly dentists and a string of frankfurters.

IN THE BOARDING HOUSE (Jan. 23).—What with a dramatic sketch team downstairs, and upstairs a fat boarder who yearns to write a masterpiece—not to mention a pretty little slavey, a negro waiter and the policeman on the beat—the boarding-house mistress and her parsimonious husband certainly earn their money. More merriment to the square inch than a fat man tickled by a pistol in his midriff—which is part of the fun.

DIOGENES WEEKLY, NO. 23 (Jan. 25).—Diogenes again crawls out of his tub and, taking his trusty motion picture camera, sets off to collect "near news." At Newport, R. I., Mr. Van Bunningsmear Bugg gives a reception to titled dignitaries and artistic celebrities. Diogenes takes pictures of the event. At this reception Jan Rickey, the hungry Hungarian violinist, makes his first bow and scrape before society. At Lakewood, N. J., all of the upper ten pin their faith on I. M. Fatt to win the bowling championship. Fatt is a remarkable bowler. Skipping to New York, N. Y., Diogenes visits the fashion show and records exclusive designs in suits and gowns at Madame Krazee Kate's establishment on Fifth avenue. Then the old gentleman hies him home and unwinds the film.

THE BOOB AND THE BAKER (Jan. 25).—The boob wanders into the bakery, which has a restaurant attached, and flirts with the baker's pretty wife, who is behind the counter. He is dissuaded by the boss, who jealousy attacks him with a huge loaf of bread. This has little effect upon the boob, who wanders into the restaurant and sets the place in an uproar. He eats the cakes out of the show cases, he takes cigars from the counter, he interrupts a fat man's breakfast. In desperation the boss throws him into a large vat of dough, from which he emerges to frighten the baker who, sure that he has killed the man, thinks he sees an apparition.

FILE NO. 113 (Special—Two parts—Jan. 26).—Valentine de la Verberie rejects the suit of Jean Lazet, for she loves Gaston de Clameran. In a cafe, Lazet makes a slurring reference to Valentine, and Gaston, overhearing the remark, strikes him. In the melee that ensues, Gaston stabs Lazet. He has to flee the country. After his father's death his brother, Louis, comes into the estate. Valentine gives birth to a son, and her mother places the child in the care of foster parents. The countess then takes Valentine to Paris, where she marries the banker Fauvel.

Twenty years later, Louis, now penniless, discovers that Valentine has made a wealthy marriage. Determined to profit by what he knows of her past, he visits the old peasant to whose care the infant was intrusted. He is informed that the child died of croup eighteen months after its birth. Louis then determines to substitute his champion, Raoul, for the dead boy. He presents himself at the Fauvel home and introduces Raoul to Valentine as her lost son. To keep the secret from her husband, she submits to blackmail. Also her heart goes out to the son of her youth, as she fancies. So, when the blackmailers, growing bolder, demand the key to the bank vaults, and Raoul threatens to kill himself unless she acquiesces, Valentine gives up the key. Her daughter, Madeleine, is engaged to Prosper, Fauvel's confidential clerk. Fauvel having forgotten the combination of the safe, Prosper gives it to him and is overheard by Raoul. The plotters determine to make a double haul.

Louis inherits 50,000 francs from Gaston, who dies abroad, and the money is deposited in Fauvel's bank. That night Raoul enters the bank and, after a desperate struggle with Valentine, who seeks to dissuade him, steals the 50,000 francs out of the vault. During the struggle the key slips and makes a deep scratch on the enamel near the lock. This scratch is noted at once by M. Lecoq, the celebrated detective, who is called into the case. Prosper is suspected and arrested. Lecoq secures a private interview with Valentine and forces a confession from her. Under instructions from Lecoq, Fauvel makes good the missing legacy. Lecoq then goes to the lodgings of Louis and Raoul. As he enters there are shots; the gendarmes, rushing in, find Louis dead and Raoul dying. The plotters have quarreled over the booty and shot each other. Prosper is at once released and restored to favor. Fauvel, when he learns all, readily forgives Valentine, who is overjoyed on hearing that Raoul was not her son.

MILADY'S BOUDOIR (Jan. 28).—Nellie's great day came when, out of all the girls in the great department store, she was selected to do demonstration work in one of the big windows. A boudoir had been created in the window, and here she was to live for a few hours each day among these lovely things. Small wonder that the lonely little hall-room girl decided to spend one evening in her luxurious surroundings. When the big store was deserted save for the watchman, whom she contrived to dodge, Nellie stole back to the window, still clad in the wonderful gown, carrying her box of crackers and bottle of milk. Here, behind the curtains which shut out the chill of the street, she played at being a fine lady.

Meanwhile, young Jack Benson, a wealthy bachelor, had chanced by the store and, being struck by Nellie's beauty and grace, had been dreaming of her while he lounged in his club. So it was natural that, on his way home, he should pause before the window, now dark and curtained, to conjure up a vision of the girl. As he was about to move on, out of the night, came a wayfarer who, accosting Jack, asked for a light. Next moment Jack was covered by a revolver in the hands of the footpad. Then suddenly Nellie, dreaming within, was startled awake by a crash of glass, as Jack's heavy stick, missing the footpad, descended on the window. Trembling, Nellie crept to the curtains and drew them aside. At sight of the robber pressing the pistol against Jack's side she screamed. Startled, the man dropped the pistol and ran. But at the next corner he ran into the arms of a policeman to whom he shouted: "Fellow with a gun down there held me up!" And as the officer hurried down the street the footpad skulked away.

Jack was standing with the gun in his hand, looking at the smashed window, when the policeman came up and arrested him. Humorously protesting, Jack submitted to arrest, feeling sure that when his story was heard he would be released. But the newspapers scoffed at his fantastic tale of a young woman who, after screaming through the broken window, leaped out and ran away. And Jack had to stand trial. Actually, Nellie had done as he described. Somehow she reached her hall-room, still wearing the gorgeous gown, and next morning she attempted to smuggle it past the matron, but in vain. Detected, she tried to explain, but was summarily discharged.

It was while searching the newspaper advertisements for a new position that she saw a story about Jack and the hold-up man. Realizing that she alone could substantiate the young clubman's story, she hurried to the court-room and was soon on the witness stand, narrating the events of that wonderful evening. And Jack—he waited only for the court's discharge to seize little Nellie and tell her of his love. It was on their return from the honeymoon that Nellie got a big surprise. Jack led her into a room and turned on the lights. There, before her amazed eyes, was the boudoir as it had been, and in a box were all the wonderful clothes she had worn when she was only a make-believe lady.

HER SLUMBERING CONSCIENCE (Jan. 29).—All her husband's available funds are temporarily tied up, but she is induced by her friend to order an expensive new dress. The gown is sent C. O. D. and her husband refuses them, as he has no money. Shortly afterward he introduces to her a business friend, who admires her and makes her a present of a bracelet. There can be no mistaking the man's intentions, yet she accepts his gift, unable to deny herself the pleasure of possessing the bracelet. Despite her precautions, her husband discovers what is happening and, when the other man comes to see her, forces her to receive him while he waits in an adjoining room to hear what passes between them. On receiving proof of his suspicions he confronts the man and orders both out of the house. The wife dares not face his wrath and goes. The man takes her to his own home and tries to make her forget what has happened with drink and jollity. Just as she is reaching the end of her power to resist his advances, her husband, who has followed them, rushes in, despite the objections of the man's valet, bursts open the door and confronts them. She gives a shriek of fear and awakes to find her husband standing over her, not in rage, but all smiles. "The big deal went through," he is saying, "and the gown is yours." Hardly able to realize that it is all a dream—that she has not really yielded to temptation and forfeited his love—she falls into his arms.

THE DANCER'S RUSE (Jan. 30).—Lydia, a famous dancer, pleases the military governor of the province. He seeks to win her. Dimitroff, her sweetheart, brings word that the governor has ordered the execution of her brother who is a nihilist. She sends Dimitroff to his excellency with a note asking the governor's favor for the bearer. Dimitroff is taken into the governor's service as butler. On the eve of her brother's execution, Lydia sends a note to the governor stating that she will visit him. He prepares for her coming, arranging that their privacy shall be uninterrupted by anyone save Dimitroff, who will serve them. Lydia submits for a time to the governor's embraces, and secures his autograph. Dimitroff puts a sleeping potion in the governor's liquor and when he loses consciousness the dancer plays her trump card. The butler is a man of the same build as his master; a clever counterfeit of his hair and beard has been prepared; now Dimitroff makes up as the governor, and Lydia writes her brother's pardon above the signature of the only man who has power to save those condemned to die. With the disguised Dimitroff she enters the governor's private car and they drive furiously to the prison, arriving just as her brother faces the firing squad. The pardon sets him free; Lydia hurries him into the car and they make haste toward the frontier. A ship bound for America is reached in safety and all three sail for a new life in a free country.

VITAGRAPH.

CABMAN KATE (Feb. 1).—As a laundress, Kate isn't much of a success. A goat makes a meal of her clothesline, and the $13.13 that Tim McGrath owes her for washing is apparently uncollectable. But this is nothing to what happens when she forcibly seizes Tim's horse and cab, in lieu of her $13.13, after sousing him in the watering trough. Samuel Rosenstein, a dry-goods drummer, is very anxious to catch a certain train, and almost goes into hysterics when the taxi-cab in which he is riding breaks down. He spies Kate leading the horse and cab, and wildly implores her to get him to the station in time for his train. With some misgivings, she consents. He gets in, Kate whips up "Wildfire" and the thrilling ride begins. In their mad career, Kate runs over a flock of chickens, demolishes an Italian fruit-peddler's stand and nearly scares the natives to death. After all the terrifying speed and hairbreadth escapes from destruction, the nearest Samuel comes to catching his train is when it almost runs over the cab at a railroad crossing. Meanwhile, the victims of her exciting sprint are coming on apace in cabs, and on foot. A fat policeman finally arrests Kate. Followed by Samuel and the crowd of complainants, Kate is marched to the nearest police station. There she is charged with grand larceny, reckless driving, assault and battery, violating traffic rules, operating a vehicle without a license, exceeding the speed limit, damage to property and resisting an officer. The whole affair is so amusing, however, it tickles the judge, who proves himself a good sport by simply forcing Samuel to pay all the damages and costs, and making Tim pay Kate the money he owes her. The case is then dismissed and later Kate and Tim go into life partnership as man and wife, but Kate can never see a cab without a shudder of remembrance.

HOW CISSY MADE GOOD (Broadway Star Feature Special Three parts—Feb. 2).—Cissy writes a motion picture scenario, and submits it to the editor of the Motion Picture Magazine, who intimates she will probably meet with better luck in submitting it elsewhere—in other words, it is not acceptable. She feels pretty badly and finally the kind-hearted editor offers her a chance to make good. He tells her to go to the Vitagraph studios and interview the Motion Picture stars there, promising to talk business if she is successful. She does so, and after a little trouble in getting in, starts out to interview John Bunny. He frightens her by a lightning change to a fierce buccaneer and Cissy runs. The gate-keeper's assistant, who is escorting her around, brings her to see Kate Price. Mary mistakes her for the scrublady, and complications set in. Kate gets angry and Mary gets a pail of water in the face. She is next introduced to Julia Swayne Gordon, who pretends she can only speak French. The result

FREE! FREE! FREE!

OPERATORS

You can get one copy of

HALLBERG'S NEW BOOK

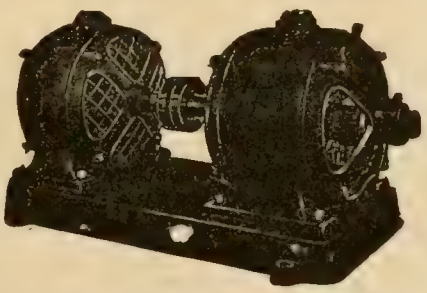
"Motion Picture Electricity"

including

"Hallberg Electrical Talks"

which costs $2.50, by sending this ad with a cash order for $25 worth of merchandise before March 1st, 1915.

LET ME KNOW YOUR WANTS!



HALLBERG

A. C. to D. C.

Economizer

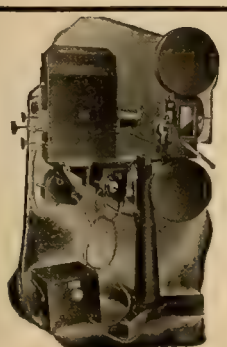
The results on your screen will amaze you, please your audience and put your competitors In The Shade.

Let me post you on the latest. Write today. RESULTS COUNT—NOT LOW PRICES.

Send $2.50 for new book

MOTION PICTURE ELECTRICITY

EVERYBODY NEEDS ONE

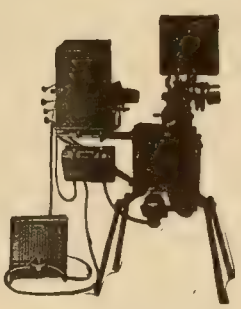


SIMPLEX

Distributor "BAIRD" and Motiograph M. P. Machines

BAIRD

Distributor Power's 6-A and Simplex M. P. Machines



POWER'S 6A

Factory Selling Headquarters for BAIRD, POWER'S, SIMPLEX, MOTIOGRAPH and EDISON MACHINES, "HALLBERG" STANDARD A. C. ECONOMIZERS, "HALLBERG" D. C. ECONOMIZERS, MERCURY ARC RECTIFIERS, MOVING PICTURE MACHINE and FLAME ARC CARBONS

I EQUIP THEATRES COMPLETELY

Free Circulars on all makes of M. P. Machines, but Hallberg's Big Catalogue, 100 pages, costs you 25c. by mail of that "interview" is astonishing and laughable. She is led on a sort of wild-goose chase from one star to another, with ludicrous and surprising results, until finally, almost discouraged, Cissy is about to give up. It is then suggested that she see the Manuscript Editor. Miss Bertsch is very busy when Cissy enters, and after waiting some time, the poor girl despairs. She is then taken to see Lillian Walker and Maurice Costello. She finds them in the swimming pool. Costello is busily engaged in teaching Lillian to swim by means of a belt and a rope. Just as Costello says, "This is the picture!" and the cameraman starts turning, Cissy slips and falls headlong into the water. After much laughter, confusion and splashing, Cissy is "rescued" and, as a recompense for her sufferings, it is suggested they all give Cissy a little autographed interview written by themselves. This is done, and when Cissy shows them to the editor of the Motion Picture Magazine he is delighted. He gives her a position on his staff at $50.00 per week, and Cissy, overcome with joy, proceeds to faint.

J. H. HALLBERG "THE HOUSE OF QUALITY" 36 East 23rd Street, New York

THE COMBINATION (Feb. 3).—After a thorough inspection of an apartment to let, Mr. and Mrs. Carr, newlyweds, decide to take it, particularly when they discover the cute little safe set into the wall of their sleeping room. They send for the superintendent and he gives them the combination, which Mrs. Carr loses. She reads in the morning paper of burglaries, and her husband reassures her by showing her the revolver in its little case which he has placed in the dressing table drawer. He goes off to business and Mrs. Carr, more frightened at the thought of having a gun in the house than of the burglars, decides to hide it in the safe. She is obliged to telephone the superintendent to give her the combination once more. He writes it down for her, she locks the gun in the little safe, then hides the combination in a vase on the dining-room shelf. In the wee small hours the following morning, Biggs and Boggs, two second-story men, creep up the fire escape into the apartment and start to take up a collection of the Carr's silverware. They make a noise which awakens Carr and he starts for his gun, but his wife tells him it is in the safe, adding that the combination is in the dining-room, where the burglars are. That settles it, and Carr sinks into a chair, utterly hopeless. The burglars make a clean sweep, and escape with everything but the chairs, table and sideboard. The newly-weds almost faint at the sight of their dining-room, then Carr wearily telephones the police. At breakfast they have to eat with kitchen utensils. All turns out well, however, as the police capture the burglars and the silverware is recovered. Mrs. Carr asks her husband to give away the "old pistol." He consents, and on taking out the little case from the safe, finds it is his pipe instead, while in the bureau drawer is found the revolver. The double blow is too much for poor Carr and he collapses completely.

THE UNDERSTUDY, OR BEHIND THE SCENES (Feb. 4).—During rehearsals of "The Masked Mystery," a new play, Jack Boyle, an understudy, falls in love with Lolita, the heroine. She is in love with James Stewart, the hero of the play, and he returns her affections. Devereaux, who plays the heavy, or villain, is also in love with her, but strangely enough, just as in the play, she loathes him. The climax of the third act is where Devereaux enters the darkened stage to rob the safe. The heroine discovers him, he draws a revolver and during a desperate struggle, the gun goes off, killing the heroine. After rehearsal, Devereaux meets Lolita and tries to kiss her, but Jack interferes. Stewart comes up, takes the trembling Lolita in his arms and announces they are to be married after the opening performance. Devereaux, very bitter, goes to his club and there inflames his anger and jealousy by drinking. Seeing a newspaper item of an unfortunate accident wherein the actress is accidentally shot on the stage, a fiendish idea occurs to him. On the night of the performance he exchanges the blanks in his stage pistol for ball cartridges, placing the rest of the bullets in his overcoat pocket. At the final rehearsal he lays his coat down and later takes Stewart's coat by mistake, while Stewart gets his. Jack and Devereaux have a fight in the latter's dressing room and Devereaux is rendered unconscious. Jack sees his longed-for chance to play a leading part, makes up as Devereaux and steps out on the stage. In the darkness no one recognizes him and not knowing, of course, that the revolver is loaded with bullets, Jack is about to shoot the heroine, when Stewart, who has grasped the deadly plan in Devereaux's mind, through finding the bullets in the latter's overcoat, grabs Jack's arm. The revolver goes off, mortally wounding Jack. Before he dies, he tells the whole story and Devereaux meets his just punishment, while Jack passes away in Lolita's arms with a smile on his lips.

THE PROFESSOR'S NIGHTMARE (Feb. 15.—Convinced by his friend's glowing account of a play he witnessed the night before, that it must be a real "thriller," Professor Nicholas decides he will take it in. He 'phones his wife from the office that he has two tickets for that evening and wants her to go with him. When the thrilling climax to the play comes where the villain chokes the poor girl for not signing the papers, he becomes so excited he makes things very uncomfortable for those around him. Next day he meets a few friends and has a few glasses of light refreshment, with the result that his friends have to bring him home in a taxi. His wife calls him a brute and goes sobbing to bed, while the professor also sobs and falls asleep in a chair by the fireplace. His mind still obsessed with the play he witnessed, the professor dreams that he is the villain and his wife is the heroine. After unsuccessfully attempting to force her to sign some papers, he chokes and stabs her, then hides the body under the dining-room table. He hears the police coming, but seems paralyzed and offers no resistance when they break in and dramatically arrest him. Without delay, he is sentenced to electrocution. The march to the chair begins at once and he is soon strapped in. While the wardens are awaiting the signals to throw the switch, Satan appears, and after giving the professor the "Ha-Ha," sneaks in and turns on the current. Sparks and flames begin to shoot out from around the professor's feet and he seems to be burning up. Just then he wakes up to find his feet in the fireplace and his slippers all ablaze. With a yell, he kicks them off as his wife comes in greatly frightened. He tells her of his nightmare while she gets ice water and bathes his aching head. The professor then promises never again to look upon the wine when it is red.

FOR ANOTHER'S CRIME (Special Feb. 6).—Steve Harney, a bullying deputy sheriff, orders Walker, a professional gambler, out of town. Both Harney and Jack Brandon, a young miner, are infatuated with Sue, a mountain girl and an irrepressible flirt. After promising to go to a dance with Jack, she goes with Harney. Jack disconsolately goes to Benson's saloon to drown his sorrows and later joins in a card game with Walker. Harney returns from the dance and a quarrel starts between him and Jack. Benson flees to the sheriff's and Walker watches the fight from outside the door. Just as Harney is about to stab the half-intoxicated Jack, Walker rushes in, snatches Jack's knife, kills Harney and flees. When the sheriff arrives Jack is found half stupefied from liquor with the fatal knife, bearing his name, beside him. He is arrested and sentenced to twenty years imprisonment. Conscience-stricken that Jack is paying the penalty for a crime which he himself committed, Walker helps Jack to escape from prison without admitting his guilt. Both flee to the Far West. Upon their arrival at Silver Gulch, Walker opens up a saloon with Jack as his partner. Jack meets Amy Green, daughter of the Justice of Peace, and falls in love with her. Huggins, an old cell-mate of Jack's, wanders into town, recognizes him and starts to blackmail him. Jack thrashes Huggins, and the rascal exposes Jack's past to Judge Green. He doubts Huggins' story until Jack himself confesses that he is an escaped convict. The Justice reluctantly places Jack under arrest. Walker, standing nearby, turns on Huggins to kill him, but the jailbird shoots first. Walker dying, confesses that he killed Harney, and Jack, who suffered for the crime, is pardoned and exonerated.

MINA.

IN THE PALMY DAYS (Feb. 4).—The motion picture show has had a revolutionary effect upon the so-called legitimate stage, changing the policy of thousands of theaters and altering where it has not altogether changed the occupation of countless actors and actresses throughout the land. "In the Palmy Days" is a unique comedy dramatization of these strange conditions, and shows the adjustment which is rapidly taking place, and the final solution of the problem that confronted O'Donoval McBluff, a tragedian of the old school.

The picture play opens with a scene in the producer's office. An "angel" has been "dug up" to finance a troupe for The Dainty Sisters. The troupe engaged includes O'Donoval McBluff and several other repertoire actors, but there is no part open to Bennie Luther, the accepted suitor of the leading lady. In order to be near his sweetheart, Bennie masquerades as a woman and is palmed off on the manager as one of the Dainty sisters.

The troupe finds that the first theater in which it is booked has been turned over to motion pictures and that its paper has been covered by the posters of the picture show. So the legitimate play has to be given in a tent. The audience tolerates the comic parts of the performance, but when the tragic McBluff appears he is made the target of all sorts of vegetables and eggs which had ripened without the aid of cold storage. In the confusion which follows a lamp is overturned and the tent takes fire. The hose carts arrive and a riot of fun ensues. The manager in the meantime has been carrying on a flirtation with Bennie, the bogus Dainty sister, and comic situations have constantly occurred. His wife finally catches him embracing Bennie, whom she attacks in a jealous rage. Bennie's wig and hat are torn off and his identity is disclosed.

The picture ends with the stranded troupe surrendering to the inevitable and joining a slapstick motion picture organization in which the regular walking of the ghost 52 times each year more than compensates them for the shock administered to their artistic temperaments.

THE SPOILERS

Selig's 8 reel MASTERPIECE

By

REX BEACH

is a

RECORD-BREAKING MONEY-GETTER

That's what everybody says that has played it, and we have got the records on the shows to prove it.

NOW LISTEN:

"THE SPOILERS"

has played in more towns, more theatres and to more money in the short time of its release than any other production ever shown.

IT IS A SHOW

for any house, any neighborhood and gets the money.

HAVE YOU HAD YOURS?

If not, now is your chance.

START THE NEW YEAR RIGHT

Write, wire or phone for bookings in Ohio, Michigan, Wisconsin, Indiana and Illinois (except Cook County).

F. O. NIELSEN

720 Schiller Bldg.

CHICAGO, ILL.

THE MASQUERADE HERO (Feb. 11).—McQuarrie's wife discovers an old Indian headdress in his trunk, and asks where he obtained it. McQuarrie modestly refuses to tell; she insists. He does not wish to tell her the truth so he makes up a story, and tells her how when a young chap he was in the West with two other fellows and they were attacked by a band of Indians. His two companions become frightened and hide under their bunks, but he braves the dozen Indians, and kills off one after another—until the last one is reached, then his ammunition is all gone, so they have a hand to hand fight with knives. Here he also wins and this head-dress is that of the last Indian.

In the midst of this story, their little son Jimmy has come into the room and is delighted to learn that his father is such a grand hero. Mother takes him upstairs, where on a table in his room is an Indian manikin with several others doing a war dance—Jimmy is put to bed, and begins to dream of Indians.

When his wife and son leave the room McQuarrie recalls what actually did happen when he secured this head-dress. He is going to a masquerade, and arrives there very hilarious, and is not allowed to enter, so throws a brick through the window and then starts on a run. A very comical chase follows, which ends in McQuarrie throwing an Indian cigar sign in his pursuer's path, which is mistaken for him—thus he makes his escape. While reminiscent he falls asleep and dreams he has been caught by a band of Indians and is about to be burned at the stake.

Meanwhile Jimmy dreams he is killing off Indians just as his father did, and begins to walk in his sleep. When he arrives in the dining room his father appears to be one of the hated Indians and he hits him on the head with the poker. The blow awakens father, who believes this is the Indians work—but is readily knocked out by the blow. At that moment Jimmy also wakes up and mother comes into the room. Father is helped to bed. When the doctor arrives he announces McQuarrie will be all right in a few weeks. Then appears the moral—"Don't Lie to Your Family."

EDISON.

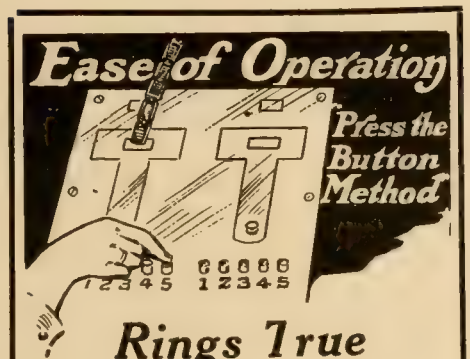
FOUND A FLESH REDUCER (Feb. 1).—Roberts, who has grown corpulent to an unsightly and uncomfortable degree, pays a visit to the doctor and is advised that an abnormal amount of exercise will reduce his weight. Roberts purchases a load of flesh reducers in the form of fencing swords, boxing gloves, a punching dummy, etc. Hardly are the reducers inside the house when Roberts, ably assisted by his sympathetic friend and trainer, Horner, begins to raze things in general, including flesh and various handsome vases and bric-a-brac.

The dummy is the target for all of the well-directed blows of the two, but she (Robert and his trainer dressed it up in one of the former's wife's best dresses) always manages to regain her feet before the count of ten. In fact, it is this self-same dummy which is the thorn in the side of Roberts, as the maid discovers it under the bed where the men have finally placed it after it has given them a severe tussle and tells Mrs. Roberts that there is a strange girl in her husband's room.

By a bit of clever strategy, the dummy, dressed in feminine garb, is "abducted" and sold to a junk dealer. When Mrs. Roberts gets to the room, there is nothing out of the way, the bird having flown. She suddenly finds out that her new waist, containing a valuable diamond sunburst, which her husband had given her, is missing and the maid is discharged on circumstantial evidence. The maid gets sympathy with Roberts and Horner, who are outside convulsed with glee over their fine work in getting rid of the rolley-polley exercise "girl." Roberts realizes that the waist thought to be stolen enshrouds the form of the rolley-polley dummy and after a hurried tour of the junk shops, he locates the waist and the sunburst. The maid is vindicated. After all this exercise, Roberts has "gone down" appreciably and his weight has dropped nearly two hundred pounds.

OLIVE AND THE HEIRLOOM (Eleventh of "Olive's Opportuntties" Series—Feb. 2).—Olive Arden, our little gypsy madcap, is put in a position of trust by Miss Coleman, aunt of Vance and Drew Martin. On her deathbed, Miss Coleman desires that Vance shall get the family jewels instead of Drew Martin, the profligate nephew, despite the fact that the latter is older. Miss Coleman sends for Olive, who arrives with Madame Forresti and Laura.

A valuable necklace is placed about Olive's neck by Miss Coleman and Olive is asked to deliver it in person to Vance. Drew Martin is ejected from the sick room by the doctor when he attempts to browbeat his aunt and the others about the deathbed. The dying woman hands Olive a synthethic replica of the necklace and tells her to put it into her handbag and to wear the original and genuine one about her neck. Olive telephones to Vance that she is to take a certain train, and asks him to meet her. Laura tells Martin of the train.



Rings True Every Time

ACCURACY

The AUTOMATIC counts every ticket without a mistake, giving you an accurate register of tickets sold, which you can consult at any time.

The machine is so truly constructed as to be absolutely free from error and every ticket that is issued is accurately counted.

At the pressure of a button the ticket appears in an upright position all cut ready for the patron to take, a clean, fresh, unsoiled or unhandled ticket.

SPEED

Besides being accurate, the AUTOMATIC operates with marvellous speed—no sooner is the button pressed than the tickets appear, and in the case of five just as quickly as one.

The ease and speed of operation make a lasting impression on your patron and give a magical charm to your theatre.

No tearing off of uneven, craggy tickets or soiled and worn checks, but a new, clean, fresh ticket ready cut for the patron to take, and all accomplished gracefully and accurately in a flash.

We want you to have a copy of our booklet, "Selling Tickets by Electricity." A postal will do.

The Automatic Ticket Selling & Cash Register Co.
1476 BROADWAY, NEW YORK CITY.

After telling Boggs, the butler in league with him, that he will retire, Martin hastily leaves the house and goes to the railroad station. Bogs, who knows that Drew is to follow Olive, hurries to the station and gets aboard the same train. After Olive has retired, Martin stealthily creeps up the aisle in the Pullman sleeper, and, reaching into Olive's berth, gets her handbag containing the replica of the necklace. Boggs sees him and leaps from behind a curtain and struggles with him. The men wrestle out to the observation platform. Olive is awakened and screams for help, arousing the lethargic porter.

In the meantime Vance, who is at a small town on the main line, has inquired as to whether the train stops at his station upon receiving a telegram from Olive, who recognized Drew Martin when he got on the train. He is told that the train does not stop and the only way he can get aboard is to get into a mail sack and be picked up as the train whizzes by. He bribes the agent and gets inside and is caught by the mechanical device on the train and taken inside. In the scuffle at the rear end of the train, Boggs is thrown off by Martin. Vance and the trainmen get Martin and once again Vance and Olive are together.

SEEN FROM THE GALLERY (Feb. 3).—Inside a dressing room of Variety at Honkey Tonk, Bootz, the German comedian, and Plotz, co star, are making up. There is a card game in full swing from which Plotz, who is evidently the only man in the room who gives his money to his wife instead of buying chips with it, is excluded, on the ground that he doesn't pay his gambling debts. He and Plotz adjourned to the stage and proceed to do a few contortions, flavored with some slap-stick comedy. The audience applauds vigorously and the headliners are a success.

Blotz has long since been inoculated with the gambling germ and when the "ghost" appears with the salaries, he gets into the game. Suffice it to say that he loses all his money and is afraid to face his wife. He frames up a deal with the other thespians whereby they will "beat him up" in a mild sort of way, just enough to soil his clothing and to convince his wife that he has been held up and robbed. The game is effective, and after Blotz has been trimmed up, his wife sends for a doctor, confides in him that she has money in the bank. Blotz unwittingly tells his wife that if he had not paid his gambling debts the money would have been stolen by the highwaymen, anyway, and she is immediately suspicious. She pulls him off the bed and hands him the pail so that he can get some Irish champagne. Blotz reluctantly goes out. He meets the boys, and they tell him how he was beaten up by a couple of thugs who had nothing to do with the frameup at all. While Blotz is out getting the thirst-destroyer, the three who were in the "frame-up" enter to note the result of their trick, and Mrs. Blotz immediately throws them upon the bed and goes through their pockets, recovering the money which had been paid to them as gambling debts. Mrs. Blotz drinks the contents of the pail herself.

A THORN AMONG ROSES (Feb. 3).—Dr. Berry is a miserly old "gink," who is made guardian of May Hope by the provisions of the will of her father. She is heir to considerable money which her avaricious guardian covets with an unrestrained and unconcealed greed. He decides that he can get a good share of the money if he can effect a marriage between May and Sam, his son. May's sweetheart, Sam Rodney, manages to retain his place in May's heart, and Sam Berry, a pedantic, bearded fellow, whom May apparently thinks too scientific for her, is obliged to give up his fight for May's affection. He is a good sport, however, and is a party to a little stratagem whereby May goes out with young Rodney without her guardian's knowledge.

Sam Berry, in the meantime, loves Ellen Lucre and another clever move is made by the ingenious quartet as a result of which Rodney is wedded to May and Sam Berry is married to Ellen.

Sam Berry conceives the idea that if Sam Rodney gets a beard and Dr. Berry's glasses are "mislaid" for the time being, that Rodney will be mistaken for Berry and the doctor will consent to the wedding. Rodney is equipped with a beard and Sam Berry purloins his father's glasses. The result is that when May puts the question, the old miser cannot get to the minister with the couple soon enough. Dr. Berry listens gleefully as the minister asks "Sam, do you take May as your legally wedded wife?" Young Berry is off getting married to Ellen in the meantime, and when the glasses are restored and the truth learned, there is a scene. The old man is comforted, however, upon being informed that Ellen has $987 more than May.

OH, WHERE IS MY WANDERING BOY TONIGHT? (Special—Two Parts—Feb. 5).—Warren Dean was a musical composer, and that was exactly what led to his downfall. His father, disliking the idea of his son's vocation, drove him from home. Warren left a melody, which he had just completed when he was thrown out

(Continued on page 720.)

Calendar of Licensed Releases

Releases for Weeks Ending January 30 and February 6

Current Releases

MONDAY, JANUARY 25, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—Diogenes' Weekly, Number 23 (Comedy).
—The Boob and the Baker (Comedy).
EDISON—Joey and His Trombone (Comedy).
ESSANAY—Two Hearts That Beat as Ten (Comedy).
KALEM—The Tragedy of Bear Mountain (Special—Two parts—Drama).
LUBIN—Patsy Bolivar, Series No. 5, "Patsy in Business" (Comedy).
PATHE—Pathe's Daily News, No. 7, 1915 (News).
SELIG—The Spirit of the Violin (Special—Two parts—Drama).
SELIG—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 7, 1915 (News).
VITAGRAPH—The Slightly Worn Gown (Comedy).

TUESDAY, JANUARY 26, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—File 113 (Special—Two parts—Drama).
EDISON—Olive in the Madhouse (Tenth of "Olive's Opportunities" Series—Drama).
ESSANAY—At the End of a Perfect Day (Drama).
KALEM—A Model Wife (Comedy).
—Fattys Echo (Comedy).
LUBIN—Green Backs and Red Skins (Comedy).
SELIG—The Grizzly Gulch Chariot Race (Farce-Comedy).
VITAGRAPH—The Life of Game (Special—Two parts—Drama).

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 27, 1915.

EDISON—The Terrible Trunk (Comedy).
—Lodgings for Two (Comedy).
ESSANAY—The Fable of "The Syndicate Lover" (Comedy).
KALEM—The Affair of the Deserted House (First of "The Girl Detective" Series—Special—Two parts—Drama).
LUBIN—The Attorney for the Defense (Special—Three parts—Drama).
PATHE—Pathe's Daily News, No. 8, 1915 (News).
SELIG—Heart's Desire (Drama).
VITAGRAPH—The Home Coming of Henry (Comedy).

THURSDAY, JANUARY 28, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—Milady's Boudoir (Drama).
ESSANAY—When Slippery Slim Bought the Cheese (Western—Comedy).
LUBIN—In Her Mother's Footsteps (Special—Two parts—Drama).
MINA—Black and White (Comedy).
SELIG—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 8, 1915 (News).
VITAGRAPH—The Barrier of Faith (Drama).

FRIDAY, JANUARY 29, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—Her Slumbering Conscience (Drama).
EDISON—An Invitation and an Attack (Special—Two parts—Drama).
ESSANAY—The Ambition of the Baron (Special—Two parts—Drama).
KALEM—The Cause of It All (Comedy).
LUBIN—The Language of the Dumb (Drama).
SELIG—She Wanted to Be a Widow (Farce-Comedy).
VITAGRAPH—The Chief's Goat (Comedy).

SATURDAY, JANUARY 30, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—The Dancer's Ruse (Drama).
EDISON—In His Father's Footsteps (Educational).
ESSANAY—Broncho Billy and the False Note (Reg. in U. S. Patent Office—Western—Drama).
KALEM—The Little Engineer (Twelfth of the "Hazards of Helen" Railroad Series—Drama).
LUBIN—Another Shade of Green (Comedy).
SELIG—The Hut in Sycamore Gap (Melodrama).
VITAGRAPH—Under the Paint (Broadway Star Feature—Special—Three parts—Drama).

Advance Releases

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 1, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—Fate's Protecting Arm (Drama).
EDISON—Found—A Flesh Reducer (Comedy).
ESSANAY—The New Teacher (Comedy).
KALEM—The Swindler (Special—Two parts—Drama).
LUBIN—Patsy on a Trolley Car (No. 6 of the Patsy Bolivar Series—Comedy).
PATHE—Pathe's Daily News No. 9, 1915 (News).
SELIG—The Vision of the Shepherd (Special—Two parts—Drama).
—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 9, 1915 (News).
VITAGRAPH—Cabman Kate (Comedy).

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 2, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—Three Hats (Special—Two parts—Comedy).
EDISON—Olive and the Heirloom (Eleventh of the "Olive's Opportunities" Series—Drama).
ESSANAY—The Creed of the Clan (Drama).
KALEM—The Insurance Nightmare (Comedy).
LUBIN—The Belated Honeymoon (Comedy).
SELIG—Forked Trails (Western—Drama).
VITAGRAPH—How Cissy Made Good (Broadway Star Feature—Special—Three parts—Comedy).

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 3, 1915.

EDISON—Seen from the Gallery (Comedy).
—A Thorn Among Roses (Comedy).
ESSANAY—The Fable of "Elvira and Farina and the Meal Ticket" (Comedy).
KALEM—The Apartment House Mystery (Second of "The Girl Detective" Series—Special—Two parts—Drama).
LUBIN—A Night's Adventure (Special—Two parts—Drama).
PATHE—Pathe's Daily News No. 10, 1915 (News).
SELIG—Just Like a Woman (Drama).
VITAGRAPH—The Combination (Comedy).

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 4, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—The Borrowed Necklace (Drama).
ESSANAY—Sophie's Home-Coming (Western—Comedy).
LUBIN—The Regeneration Love (Special—Three parts—Drama).
MINA—In the Palmy Days (Comedy).
SELIG—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 10, 1915 (News).
VITAGRAPH—The Understudy; or Behind the Scenes (Drama).

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 5, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—It Doesn't Pay (Drama).
EDISON—Oh! Where Is My Wandering Boy To-Night (Special—Two parts—Drama).
ESSANAY—Third Hand High (Special—Two parts—Drama).
KALEM—The Hicksville Tragedy Troupe (Comedy).
LUBIN—The Nameless Fear (Drama).
SELIG—Cats (Comedy).
VITAGRAPH—The Green Cat (Comedy).

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 6, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—Winning the Old Man Over (Comedy).
EDISON—The Stone Heart (Drama).
ESSANAY—Broncho Billy's Greaser Deputy (Reg. U. S. Patent Office—Western—Drama).
KALEM—The Escape on the Fast Freight (Thirteenth of the "Hazards of Helen" Railroad Series—Drama).
LUBIN—The Furnace Man (Comedy).
SELIG—The Leopard's Lair (Jungle—Zoo—Drama).
VITAGRAPH—For Another's Crime (Special—Two parts—Drama).

Good News Travels Slowly

but it travels surely; and the good news of the superior quality of the TWO REEL BIOGRAPH, which has traveled so quickly among the exhibitors, is spreading in constantly widening circles among patrons of motion picture theatres.

BIOGRAPH COMPANY
807 EAST 175TH STREET
NEW YORK, N. Y.

Calendar of Independent Releases

Releases for Weeks Ending January 30 and February 6

Universal Film Mfg. Co.

SUNDAY, JANUARY 24, 1915.

ECLAIR—The Clue of the Portrait (Drama).
L-KO—The Death of Simon La Gree (Comedy).
REX—The Temptation of Edwin Swayne (Two parts—Drama).

MONDAY, JANUARY 25, 1915.

IMP—How Mary Fixed It (Comedy).
JOKER—The Magic Mirror (Comedy).
—Views of Holland (Educational).
VICTOR—His Guardian Angel (Two parts—Domestic—Drama).

TUESDAY, JANUARY 26, 1915.

BIG "U"—Alias Mr. Smith (Drama).
GOLD SEAL—The Madcap Queen of Gredshoffen (Two parts—Drama).
NESTOR—When Eddie Took a Bath (Comedy).
—A Mile a Minute Ride (Educational).

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 27, 1915.

ANIMATED WEEKLY—Number 151 (News).
ECLAIR—Cancelled (Two parts—Western—Drama).
L-KO—Merry Mary's Marriage (Comedy).

THURSDAY, JANUARY 28, 1915.

BIG "U"—The Unmasking (Drama).
REX—The Measure of a Man (Two parts—Canadian—N. W. M. P.—Drama).
STERLING—Treasure Seekers (Comedy).

FRIDAY, JANUARY 29, 1915.

IMP—The Millionaire Engineer (Two parts—R. R.—Drama).
NESTOR—Jed's Little Elopment (Comedy).
VICTOR—How She Fooled Aunty (Comedy—Drama).

SATURDAY, JANUARY 30, 1915.

BISON—The Mystery Woman (Two parts—Western—Drama).
JOKER—He Fell in Love With His Mother-in-Law (Comedy).
POWERS—The Crime of Thought (Drama).

SUNDAY, JANUARY 31, 1915.

ECLAIR—The Thief and the Chief (Comedy—Drama).
L-KO—After Her Millions (Three parts—Comedy).
REX—No release this week.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 1, 1915.

IMP—The Story the Silk Hats Told (Drama).
JOKER—The Blank Note (Comedy).
VICTOR—Cards Never Lie (Two parts—Gypsy—Drama).

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 2, 1915.

BIG "U"—Seven and Seventy (Drama).
GOLD SEAL—The Girl of the Secret Service (Two parts—Detective—Drama).
NESTOR—All Over the Biscuits (Comedy).

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 3, 1915.

ANIMATED WEEKLY—Number 152 (News).
ECLAIR—The Lure of the West (Two parts—Western—Drama).
L-KO—The Butcher's Bride (Comedy).

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 4, 1915.

BIG "U"—Her Bargain (Two parts—Society—Drama).
REX—The Girl and the Spy (Drama).
STERLING—Love and Dough (Comedy).

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 5, 1915.

IMP—The Awaited Hour (Two parts—Melodrama).
NESTOR—Lizzie's Dizzy Career (Comedy).
VICTOR—The Bribe (Drama).

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 6, 1915.

BISON—Ridgeway of Montana (Three parts—Mining—Drama).
JOKER—He Cured His Gout (Comedy).
—The Sierras from the Base to the Summit (Scenic).
POWERS—No release this week.

Mutual Film Corporation

SUNDAY, JANUARY 24, 1915.

KOMIC—A Flurry in Art (Comedy).
MAJESTIC—The Better Man (Two parts—Western Drama).
THANHOUSER—The Dog Catcher's Bride (Comedy—Drama).

MONDAY, JANUARY 25, 1915.

AMERICAN—Silence (Two parts—Drama).
KEYSTONE—Colored Villainy (Comedy).
RELIANCE—The World Upstairs (Drama).

TUESDAY, JANUARY 26, 1915.

BEAUTY—Evan's Lucky Day (Comedy—Drama).
MAJESTIC—The Broken Lullaby (Drama).
THANHOUSER—Finger Prints of Fate (Two parts—Drama).

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 27, 1915.

AMERICAN—Coals of Fire (Drama).
BRONCHO—The Gun Fighter (Two parts — Western Drama).
RELIANCE—The Express Messenger (Railroad Life—Drama).

THURSDAY, JANUARY 28, 1915.

DOMINO—Through the Murk (Two parts—Drama).
KEYSTONE—(Title not announced).
MUTUAL—Weekly Number 4, 1915 (News).

FRIDAY, JANUARY 29, 1915.

KAY-BEE—The Bottomless Pit (Drama).
—The Famine (Drama).
PRINCESS—The Home of Silence (Romantic Drama of Prison Life).
THANHOUSER—The Volunteer Fireman (Comedy).

SATURDAY, JANUARY 30, 1915.

KEYSTONE—(Title not announced).
RELIANCE—The Love Pirate (Two parts—Drama).
ROYAL—Ring Around Rosey (Comedy).

SUNDAY, JANUARY 31, 1915.

KOMIC—Cupid and the Pest (Comedy).
MAJESTIC—A Farewell Dinner (Two parts—Drama).
THANHOUSER—Helen Intervenes (Thanhouser—Kidlet—Drama).

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 1, 1915.

AMERICAN—The Law of the Wilds (Two part—Drama).
KEYSTONE—Title not announced.
RELIANCE—At the Bottom of Things (Drama).

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 2, 1915.

BEAUTY—Which Would You Rather Be (Comedy—Drama).
MAJESTIC—An Old Fashioned Girl (Drama).
THANHOUSER—In the Jury Room (Two parts—Drama).

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 3, 1915.

AMERICAN—Imitations (Drama).
BRONCHO—Shorty's Adventures in the City (Two parts—Drama).
RELIANCE—The Beast Within (Drama).

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 4, 1915.

DOMINO—A Modern Noble (Two parts—Drama).
KEYSTONE—Title not announced.
MUTUAL—Weekly Number 5, 1915 (News).

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 5, 1915.

KAY-BEE—College Days (Two parts—Drama).
MAJESTIC—The Double Deception (Comedy—Drama).
PRINCESS—Nell's Strategy (Romantic-Drama).

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 6, 1915.

KEYSTONE—Title not announced.
RELIANCE—Heart Beats (Two parts—Drama).
ROYAL—The Star Boarder (Comedy).

Simplex

Prompt Deliveries

The selection of a projection machine involves the consideration of two important factors:

First: The machine---Simplex TRADE MARK PAT'D

Second: Prompt service and delivery.

Having selected the best projector, you are anxious for prompt shipment. Whether your show opens in six hours or six days, The Precision Machine Co. is in a position to take care of your requirements.

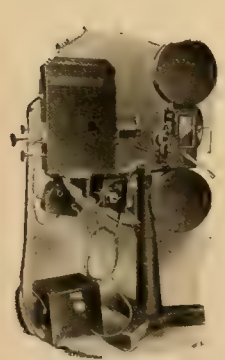
This applies to repair parts as well.

How many anxious moments have you spent in awaiting the arrival of spare parts? Perhaps a small but a vital part of your business.

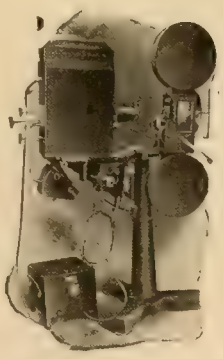
We pride ourselves on our up-to-date facilities and unequalled shipping service. We have a standard of our own—and we live up to it.

Place your order for a Simplex. We will give you the service.

Let us send you Catalogue "A," descriptive of



The Peerless Projector



MADE AND GUARANTEED BY

THE PRECISION MACHINE CO. INC.

317 East 34th St. New York

(Continued from page 715.)

upon his own resources. After his departure the father regretted his act, and the mother, unable to find her son, found some comfort in putting the words, "Oh, Where Is My Wandering Boy To-night?" to Warren's music.

Warren teamed up with Zelda Wade, a singer, and finally married her. His health failed, and, although both were without funds and work, she, in some unknown manner, managed to send him to the country for a year, where he regained his health. Returning to the city, he discovered that his wife has been accepting money from an admirer of hers in order to save her husband's life. In a rage, Warren left her and tried to forget the fact that his wife was untrue to him. He became a habitual drunkard, and finally wound up in jail.

Meanwhile his father died, and his mother was forced to earn her own livelihood playing an accordion on the streets. Zelda, now a headliner, meeting the old lady, took her into her room. Zelda learned of her aged guest's relationship, and took care of her as if she were her own mother. The mother taught Zelda the Wandering Boy song with which Zelda made a great hit. One day, Warren, now an ex-convict, heard Zelda singing and vowed revenge, because he thought that she was the cause of his downfall. Arriving at her house, he learned of her kindness to his mother, and of her terrible sacrifice for him Thoughts of revenge disappeared and Zelda again came back into his heart as of old.

THE STONE HEART (Feb. 6).—"You may paint a leopard, but you can't change his spots," so runs the old saying. Such was the case with Abraham Burnstine, otherwise known to the little waifs who worked for him, as Stone Heart, on account of his grasping, driving disposition.

Nan Cowles was one of those poor little waifs employed in his sweatshop. Her mother was very ill. That was the reason why Nan was late to work on a certain Monday morning, for she had to remain home for a short while to nurse her mother. This lateness led to Burnstine's discharging her, and she stole five dollars that lay on his desk, so as to be able to pay for a physician.

Upon her departure Burnstine, learning of the theft, notified the police and in the company of an officer went to her home. Arriving there, despite the officer's advice to withdraw the charge, he persisted in his course. The doctor, arrived with Nan, who, terrified at the sight of an officer at her mother's bedside, fled to the fire escape from where she could watch the proceedings in the squalid room. Then there came a marvelous change—the Stone Heart softened, and he dismissed the officer. The doctor was surprised to see Burnstine take his place at the bedside, and left, wondering what had caused this miracle.

From dark till dawn, Burnstine nursed the poor woman through the crisis while Nan watched from the fire escape, and on the arrival of the doctor was found there, nearly frozen. However, the crisis was passed and the doctor left the Stone Heart to watch over the two. It was then that the leopard's spots shone forth once more, for Burnstine recovered the few stolen dollars from the clenched hand of the sleeping Nan, with the excuse so common to him, "Bisness is bisness." But we feel sure that mother and daughter are going to be taken care of.

PATHE.

PATHE'S DAILY NEWS, NO. 1, 1915 (Jan. 4).—Animated map of German advance on Paris.

French in Alsace push steadily forward.

Cliffs blown up to make way for French artillery.

Duke of Connaught inspects 24th Victorian Rifles.

Bomb planter captured in New Orleans.

First U. S. steamer leaves for Bermuda.

Terrible fire threatens to destroy Chelsea, Mass.

PATHE'S DAILY NEWS NO. 2, 1915 (Jan. 6).—Animated Map. Showing capture of Lemberg.

Bomb Testing. By French engineers.

Xmas in War Zone. Presents for soldiers.

Wounded Indians. Intrepid bayonet "snatchers."

Governor Whitman. Inaugurated at Albany.

Philadelphia Mummers. Hold New Year parade.

Sea Collision. Off Cape Cod.

PATHE'S DAILY NEWS NO. 3, 1915, (Jan. 11).—Animated map of Austria's Dream.

New Breastworks Being Made by Canadians.

Big French Gun Bombards German Position.

England Shelled by German Warships.

Subway Fire Endangers Thousands.

Hero Medals Presented by Secretary Daniels.

Baseball on Ice Latest Washington Game.

PATHE DAILY NEWS, NO. 4, 1915 (Jan. 13).—Animated map of invasion of Luxemburg and Belgium.

News in trenches—Soldiers get home papers.

Canadians drill, fitting themselves for war.

Billy Sunday works Evangelizing Philadelphia.

Germans shelled in stronghold by French guns.

Volturno heroes get medals from Congress.

Wilson explains his policies at Indianapolis.

PATHE'S DAILY NEWS, NO. 5, 1915 (Jan. 18).—Animated Map—Rushing Algerian Troops to the Front.

Bury Raid Victims—After Hartlepool Bombardment.

Belgians Killed by German Shells.

Cakes for Troops—From Home to the trenches.

Racing Reigns Again at New Orleans.

Japanese War Nurses Leave for Europe.

Hotel De Gink, Opened by Hoboes.

SELIG.

HEARST-SELIG NEWS PICTORIAL NO. 5 (Jan. 18).—Governor Walsh is inaugurated in Massachusetts and meets members of his Council in Council Chamber.

Trotoi Gelatine, new explosive invented by Lieut. H. C. Woodward, is given test by demolition squad, New York National Guard. Extraordinary pictures show effect of most powerful explosive known to U. S. army.

Great crowds greet President Wilson in Indianapolis when he arrives to make Jackson day speech.

Ice harvest in Boston begins a month earlier than usual. Interesting picture shows how it is cut and stored away in warehouses.

Members of graduating class of Austrian Military Academy are sworn in to receive commissions as officers in army. After being blessed by a priest they march away to take the places of the men killed in battle. Other war pictures show German engineers; bridges where the Belgians have dynamited other structures.

Rover, Boston police dog, who has achieved fame by making arrest, is shown with his master.

Winter sports enthusiasts gather at Lake Placid Club, New York, for skating races, curling, hockey, and other outdoor sports.

HEARST-SELIG NEWS PICTORIAL NO. 6.—(Jan. 21).—Japanese nurses, veterans of former wars, arrive in San Francisco and journey to New York on their way to help nurse war wounded in England, France and Russia.

East Side New York lads are organized into protective association uniformed and sent out to help the regular police keep order. Novel scenes show the boys' police at their duties.

Automobiles leave Washington for long transcontinental race to Panama Exposition at San Francisco.

Marines at the San Diego fair, are drilled and reviewed by Rear Admiral Howard.

Special educational commission from Mexico arrives in Boston to begin two year study of the American school system as a basis for reorganization of schools in Mexico.

Grace Darling, Hearst-Selig reporter, visits the foreigners who sought to enter the United States; were denied admittance and have been held since the beginning of the war.

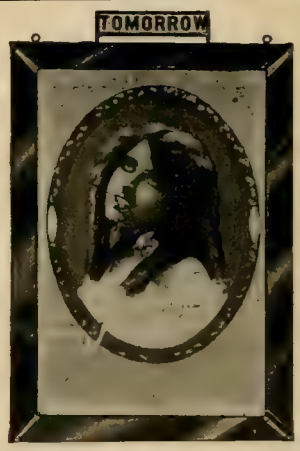
Driving furiously over Point Loma course, Earl Cooper wins big 300 mile motor race.

Rajah of Galoir, India, presents British army with motor ambulances, service cars and wheeled hospitals for a Red Cross unit.

Repair ship Vestal at Charlestown navy yard is called on to repair range finders of the Battleship Georgia. Interesting pictures show how this delicate task is accomplished.

NEWMAN

Brass Frames and Rails



READ what Mr. W. S. McLaren of the Colonial Theatre Co., Jackson, Mich., says in commenting on the "Newman Frames" just shipped to him:

We wish to compliment you upon the GERMAN SILVER FRAMES we purchased of you recently. They are the talk of the town, being the only ones of their kind in the city. They sure do beautify the lobby, and we cannot speak too highly of them.

Respectfully yours,
(Signed) COLONIAL THEATRE CO.
W. S. McLaren, Mgr.

Write us today for our New Catalog chuckful of new ideas for lobby display.

The Newman Mfg. Co.

CINCINNATI 717 Sycamore St. NEW YORK 101 Fourth Ave. CHICAGO 108 W. Lake St.

Established since 1882

WANTED

TWO-REEL DRAMA SCENARIOS
ONE-REEL COMEDY SCENARIOS

ALL COMEDY FILMS, Inc.

1600 Broadway
New York City

FOR the best music obtainable for motion pictures find out about the new

SEEBURG-MOTION-PICTURE-PLAYER

Manufactured by

J. P. SEEBURG PIANO CO.
Republic Bldg., 209 S. State St., CHICAGO

Frank H. Crane

DIRECTOR, PEERLESS CO.

T. S. M. QUALITY

Brass Lobby Display Frames

EXPENSIVE? NO, INDEED!

You would be surprised at the really high grade goods and original designs that we produce at moderate prices. A well dressed lobby will get the best possible returns for any money that you spend on your theatre. May we suggest to you the best styles that can be made to fit your house?

QUALITY is our motto.

A postal card from you will bring our quotation, for the new or remodeled house.

The Theatre Specialty Mfg. Co.

318 LONG AVENUE, CLEVELAND, OHIO

TO OUR EXCHANGEMEN:— (Special Information.)

Our Philadelphia office started releasing the KRITERION PROGRAM with 39 booked houses of the foremost exhibitors in that territory as their enthusiastic customers.

Our St. Louis office opened their doors with 30 prominent exhibitors in their territory as charter members of the Klassy Kriterion Klub.

Our Indianapolis office are at present serving 31 happy exhibitors, with Kriterion Films; and please remember that these offices had just opened for business - had not cut a single price - and had obtained the business as stated after showing the exhibitors in their territories our first three weeks' releases.

In other words:-

The exhibitors throughout the United States want a change of diet - want the kind of film we are distributing - want to do business with the class of exchanges and exchangemen we are tendering our franchises - WANT THE KRITERION PROGRAM AND LIKE THE KRITERION POLICY.

Further information next week.

Yours,

B. E. Clements

Vice President and General Manager

KRITERION

1600 Broadway New York City

A LANDSLIDE for KRITERION

Regular Film Service

RELEASES—Week of January 25, 1915

DRAMAS IN TWO REELS

"Prejudice Conquered"
(PARAGON)
Featuring Dorothy Davenport and Lee Hill

A beautiful drama wherein an actress by her good upright character overcomes the prejudice of a father-in-law.

"Curse of the Black Pearl"
(ALHAMBRA)
With Florine Garland and Jack Prescott

A strong drama of the Spanish Coast, full of love and tragedy. The Black Pearl casts a curse on whomsoever holds it in their possession.

"The Arm of the Law"
(SANTA BARBARA)
Featuring Fritzi Brunette and Edward Alexander

The law is far-reaching, although it sometimes waits a long while. A soul-stirring drama in two reels that will long be remembered. It is a real feature in a two-reel subject.

"Falsely Accused"
(MONTY)
Featuring John Dillon

An accomplice "squeals" on her lover, who is a thief. This confession acquits a poor shop girl, who has been wrongfully imprisoned. The stain of the prison sentence is righted in this drama of human life interest.

"The New Sheriff"
(TRUMP)
Featuring Justina Wayne and Craufurd Kent

By his broad-minded character, the new sheriff wins the love of his wife, who nearly falls into the snares of a worldly man's affections.

"Nevada"
(NAVAJO)
Featuring Lucille Younge and Wallace MacDonald

One of those "westerns" in two reels which will keep your interest intense from the first scene to the last.

COMEDIES IN ONE REEL

"Billy Studies Music"
(SANTA BARBARA)
Featuring Mary Ruby and Harry Fisher, Jr.

Billy's music and an infant's vocal efforts nearly drive Papa crazy in this farce.

"Won by a Mustache"
(THISTLE)
Featuring Rena Rogers and Allen Fralick

A little bunch of hair on a man's upper lip causes all kinds of trouble in this screaming comedy.

"His Double Did It"
(C K)

This comedy illustrates one of the recent successes of the camera. One man playing two characters in the same scenes. You can imagine the complications in this comedy.

"A Domestic Revolution"
(PUNCHINELLO)
Featuring Tom Ward

A wife rebels and turns the tables on a tyrant husband in this very laughable comedy.

"One Night"
(PYRAMID)

Imaginary burglars upset a whole household in this roaring comedy.

"Winter Resorts"
(NOLEGE)

A very picturesque and educational trip through the West Indies.

"The Paris Hat"
(ALHAMBRA)
Featuring Sidney DeGray

A hat direct from Paris is "Decidedly Distinctive" in its make-up. Chaos reigns among those who try to copy it, much to the chagrin of the old man.

Dramas—Ones, Threes and Sixes Comedies—Two Styles of Ones Heralds and Photographs

Make Reservation for Kriterion ★ Brand

KRITERION

1600 Broadway New York City

"Decidedly" KP "Distinctive"

"Decidedly" KP "Distinctive"

Confidential Chat

We were approached the other day by a gentleman who laid a certain kind of magazine before us and asked us what we were going to do for the exhibitor. Our answer was, "We are going to give him good pictures." It's no use of our telling you how to run your business, you probably know it better than we do. We figure that the one thing you are interested in is the receipts that are taken in at your box office. That is the main thing with you. What will put the big receipts there? Good pictures, right service and co-operation and that is just what you want, isn't it? Kriterion pictures will make the people come to your theatre, Kriterion Service will keep them coming and co-operation between yourself and this company will bring th results you have been looking for. There is only one answer—co-operative film service of good pictures.

You have heard a lot lately about that word, co-operation. Let us tell you there is only one true definition for it, and Kriterion means all of it.

Our first week's release has been shown and has met with enthusiastic approval everywhere. Our second week's release is listed on the opposite page. Look it over. Can you ask for anything better? Films that are produced by men who are successful producers, talent who have already proven to you their ability and a service which spells Co-Operation.

IT IS YOUR KRITERION

A Regular Service Made to Supply You

A PART OF OUR WHEEL

Santa Barbara—Dramatic
William Robt. Daly, Director
Fritzi Brunette
Edward Alexander
John Dillon
Jack Prescott
Florine Garland

Thistle—Comedy
Bruce Mitchell, Director
Frank Moore
Rena Rogers
Allen Fralick

Santa Barbara—Comedy
Bert Angeles, Director
Mary Ruby
Harry Fisher, Jr.

C K—Comedy
Robert Burns and Walter Stull, Co-Directors
Peggy Paige

Alhambra—Dramatic
A. M. Kennedy, Director
Rena Valdez
Roy Bennington

Navajo—Dramatic
Chas. K. French, Director
Lucille Younge
Wallace MacDonald
Wm. Parsons
Helen K. French

Paragon—Dramatic
Donald MacDonald, Director
Dorothy Davenport
Jack Livingston
Benj. Horning
Dixie Stuart
Lee Hill
Rupert Julian

Trump—Dramatic
Alex Frank, Director
Justina Wayne
Craufurd Kent
William Cowper

Alhambra—Comedy
Sidney DeGray, Director
Marty Martin
Sidney DeGray
Smythe Addison

Pyramid—Comedy
Arthur Hill, Director
Elizabeth Baker
Philip Nares

Nolge—Educational
H. D. Blauvelt, Director

Punchinello—Comedy
Alex Frank, Director
Tom Ward
Katherine Sheldon
William Thorne

Kriterion Exchanges are now releasing
Get in touch with them at once.

KRITERION

1600 Broadway New York City

"Decidedly" KP "Distinctive"

"Decidedly" KP "Distinctive"

INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES

UNIVERSAL

L-KO.

THE BUTCHER'S BRIDE (Feb. 3).—The butcher thought he was going to be happy with his bride, but he had not counted on the butcher boy and Mr. Peabody. Both of these men flirted with the new wife, and her husband took to the warpath. After disposing of the butcher boy, he believed his troubles over only to return home and find Mr. Peabody—a devil with the women—playing the devil with his bride. He then cut loose with guns again. The bride got offended and left.

Mr. Peabody, meantime, sought quiet in his own home, but his peace was disturbed by his wife. He took her to the beach for recreation. Here he encountered the butcher's bride again. They side-tracked the wife and started out to see the sights. They had forgotten the butcher boy, however. This gentleman saw them and played informer to the husband. The latter discovered Mr. Peabody and chased him with guns. The end comes with the butcher getting hands on Mr. Peabody.

"ZIP" AND HIS GANG (Feb. 7).—Zip and his gang, over-confident under the protection of the ward boss, make game of the police department by waylaying every policeman they come across, and sending him back to his captain sans clothing and dignity.

To this end, the star policeman concentrates his entire attention. He catches Zip in the midst of one of his insulting telephone calls and lands him in jail, adding insult to injury by stealing Zip's sweetheart.

The star policeman's triumph is short lived, however, as the ward boss obtains Zip's release, who now proceeds to make it harder for the police than ever before. Their reputation at stake, the policemen plan the capture of the entire gang. They dress up a dummy and place it on the end of a narrow pier, ambuscading themselves nearby. The scheme works but their capture is marred by the gang dumping them into the ocean.

Seeing their plight the star policeman rushes to the rescue, his weight pushing the gang into the water, where their frantic efforts to save themselves bring joy to the hearts of the police.

VICTOR.

CARDS NEVER LIE (Two Parts—Feb. 1).—Harry, a world rover, comes to a gypsy camp. Rosemary, the gyspy king's daughter, is attracted by his courtly bearing, and extends the hospitality of the camp to him.

While at dinner a riderless horse enters the camp and investigation discloses that Miss Yerkes, an heiress, has been thrown from her horse. She is taken to camp where the gypsies make her comfortable, awaiting the arrival of her groom. While there, Rosemary tells Harry's fortune with the cards and fortells his future. He and Miss Yerkes laugh at her attempt. On leaving the camp Miss Yerkes gives the rover a ring, the duplicate of which she has on her finger, with the remark "should we ever meet."

Harry wanders on through the world. He helps an old recluse who is dying. The hermit leaves his title and wealth to the rover on consideration that he use the hermit's name. Harry, however, soon wastes the entire fortune. While still enjoying it he meets Miss Yerkes, with whom he becomes engaged, but upon informing her that the fortune has slipped through his fingers the engagement is broken. The estate is auctioned and Harry returns to the road. He again looks for the gypsy band and upon finding the camp is welcomed. He and Rosemary, the gypsy king's daughter, are married according to the gypsy tribal laws—and live happily ever after.

THE BRIBE (Feb. 5).—Mary Whiting loves and is loved by Charles. Judge Whiting, her father, approves. John Graham, politician, gets a "hold" on her father through some stock deals. Brady and Jones, unscrupulous friends of Graham's, desire to know in advance a decision that is to be handed down by Judge Whiting. Graham agrees. He sends his servant, an Oriental, to a ball at Whiting House to help him out. Graham takes Mary aside and the Oriental hypnotizes her. Under that influence she steals the decision from her father's safe.

Jones and Brady are not satisfied with the decision and pay Graham a sum to make Whiting change it. Whiting agrees. Graham demands the hand of Mary. Mary asks time for consideration.

Graham gives a stag. He brags that he has Mary on his visiting list. Jones bets him he hasn't. The bet is made. Graham sends his servant to bring Mary. The latter finds her, hypnotizes her and brings her to Graham's room. Charles, Mary's lover, follows them to the house and rescues Mary. Mary sees her father's changed decision on a table and takes it along with her. The servant tells Graham that Mary is in his room. All go up and upon discovering that she is not there Graham nearly kills the Oriental. Mary and Charles go home and save her father from disgrace.

ECLAIR.

THEIR HOBO HERO (Feb. 7).—Two blacksmiths, whose homes are near each other, have each a little girl who are playmates. The kids take their little pets—a dog and a cat—and wander off through the woods. A tramp calls at the blacksmith's door and in one case the blacksmith's wife sends him away with nothing; in the other, she gives him a loaf of bread. The children, meanwhile, have lost their way.

The tramp wanders into the woods and comes upon a deserted shack. He builds himself a fire in the rusty stove and is about to enjoy his meal when he hears the wail of the lost children. He investigates and finds them cold and hungry. He takes them back into the shack and feeds them. The children lie down on the cot and are soon fast asleep, and he goes out to get more wood for the fire.

Meanwhile they are missed at their homes. The sheriff is called and a posse formed. They scour the woods and find the house and the children. The sheriff and posse take the coat and go in search of the tramp. They find him gathering wood and arrest him. In the meantime the children have been taken home. The tramp is locked up in the village calaboose.

The next morning the children are asked about their experience and explain that the tramp found them, fed them and kept them warm. He is thereupon promptly released and is given a job in the blacksmith's shop.

LURE OF THE WEST (Two Parts—Feb. 3).—"Old Man" Morgan is dead. The children are too late—to say a last good-bye. Janie, who works in a store in New York; Jim, a taxi driver in Chicago, and Budd, a telegraph operator in Pittsburgh, arrive at the ranch. At first they find the place "dead slow" and the old woman, their mother, who speaks of simple things as they sit over the fire at night rather tiresome. They gradually begin to enjoy the healthy pleasures of the open free life of the West and compare it with their former lives in the city. Janie has had an apartment on Riverside Drive; Jim is marker in a billiard saloon, while Budd lives by taking any odd job that comes along.

The boys go out shooting and return to a hearty meal cooked by mother, who has been teaching Janie how to cook. Janie finds that making a cake can be mighty interesting. They return at last to their respective cities, but the lure of the west and its freedom is on them.

Janie starts to bake a cake but the man enters her apartment and laughs at her. She packs her bag and returns to the west for good. The gang plan a burglary. Budd is in on it. There is a fight. Budd enters the house alone and is surprised by a master crook whom he thinks is the owner. After a short fight between the two Budd leaves the man for dead and makes for the west.

At the saloon in Chicago, the dive where Jim is employed, gets on his nerves and he tells his boss he intends to quit. Once again mother's children are all back again with her. Budd tells her of the affair in shooting. But a local paper copies a story of the shooting, and they learn that Budd's victim is not dead but under arrest for a series of the most daring robberies in the police records. Around the ranch fire reunited wanderers realize that "Home Sweet Home" is best place of all.

NESTOR.

LIZZIE'S DIZZY CAREER (Feb. 5).—Lizzie's voice is the pride of the village. The banker of the village gives a party and Lizzie performs for the guests. The banker is so enthused with Lizzie's possibilities that he sends her to the city to develop her voice.

Jed, Lizzie's lover, is heartbroken at the thought of her going to the city. Lizzie lands in the city but is discouraged by a vocal teacher. Finally she lands a place in the chorus of a musical comedy company.

Jed, back in the country, becomes anxious about her and goes to the city. He secures a room in the same boarding house where Lizzie is stopping. He finds a ticket to a seat in a box at the theater where Lizzie is engaged.

He attends the show that evening and is surprised to see her on the stage. He goes around to the stage door and breaks his way into the theater. He rushes out upon the stage and he and Lizzie embrace. Jed and Lizzie are kicked out. Jed returns to his room, disheartened, and Lizzie returns to her room.

Basement Jimmy, a crook with a reward of $500 upon his head, breaks into Lizzie's room and conceals himself in a trunk. Jed, across the hall, recognizes Lizzie's voice and rushes across the hall. Lizzie tells him about the crook in the trunk. Officers come up to the house and Jed points out the trunk, which contains the thief and claims the reward. He pleads with Lizzie to go back to the country town with him. Lizzie's two chorus girl friends return home and Jed is attracted to them. Lizzie sees how things are turning out and so she announces that they will go back home.

JOKER.

HE CURED HIS GOUT (Feb. 6).—Jones is suffering with gout. The doctor's heartless treatment of his gouty foot arouses his ire, and he leaves the doctor's office in anger, accompanied by his daughter Jane.

Jane tenderly places her dad in his invalid chair and wheels him to a building just being constructed, for dad is a contractor. His game legs becomes the butt of many hard knocks. As an insulting climax, along comes Tom, Jane's sweetheart. Dad never liked this fellow. His insistent asking for Jane's hand in marriage and at such an inopportune moment ends all. Tom lands in a plaster box. The enraged dad then orders the foreman to oust Tom. Jane at last calms dad and wheels him away. Tom follows quietly behind, spooning with Jane. They arrive at the top of a hill. While the young pair are spooning the neglected invalid chair starts of itself down the hill. Tom and Jane give chase but fail to overtake it.

The chair's fate soon become apparent. A lake is in its path; into the lake plunged dad in the invalid chair. They fish him out. He is terribly upset and wet. But behold! The sudden immersion in cold water has instantly cured his gout!

FOOLS AND PAJAMAS (Jan. 23).—Two drug clerks, employed in the same store, are rivals for the hand of a wealthy girl. The girl is indifferent to their attentions. Her parents have a decided preference, each for a different clerk.

The clerks call at the girl's home with the intention of proposing, but their entire evening is taken up by the parents, much to the amusement of the daughter and her maid. During the evening it develops that the father can use some hairgrower. The clerks promise each to send some preparation, but neither knows of the other's promise until the next day, when the daughter sends for it. She thinks the preparations can be used to advantage by herself.

Believing the bottles are for the parents, each clerk changes the contents of his rival's bottle, with the intention of getting even with the opposing parent.

That evening, at a party given by the daughter, the falsely labeled preparations are tried. The supply runs out and the maid is sent for more. The father and mother are in the drug store when the maid arrives. The clerks, having learned from the parents that the preparations delivered to the maid have not reached them, question the maid.

The maid confesses. When the clerks realize that their adored love is likely to grow a beard and mustache and become bald-headed, they are wild. The parents follow the clerks to the house. The clerks try so persistently to enter the house that the police decide to accompany them. They meet a crowd of young women, who, in their excitement, have used the bottles contrary to their labels, and believe themselves to be disfigured forever.

The girls faint dead away. The maid finally succeeds in reviving them. Explanations are in order, and every one is satisfied except the parents, who throw the clerks out.

STERLING.

LOVE AND DOUGH (Feb. 4).—Heinze, a bakery foreman, is put in charge of the bakery when his employer leaves on business. Heinze assumes the duty of clerk, and as fast as lady customers appear he dates them for a four o'clock meeting on a nearby corner. In his excitement, however, he makes the dates for three of the ladies at the same hour and when he goes to meet them they conclude he is a heartless flirt and start to avenge their outraged dignities.

In the chase that follows Heinze rushes back to the bakery shop, where he attempts to hide. He is pursued by the three irate young women and dodges from box to barrel till he is finally lost when he takes refuge in the huge baking oven.

In the meantime the other bakers have got into the mix-up with the same three ladies and come out the worse for the encounter till, scrambling to the shop above, they drop a barrel of flour down the stairway which swamps the pursuing women, while Heinze, sadly mixed with pies and tarts, remains in the oven.

Featuring in GAUMONT AMERICAN Productions

MADE IN U.S.A.

Gaumont Company
110 WEST 40th STREET
NEW YORK CITY

MADE IN U.S.A.

BIG U.

HER BARGAIN (Two Parts—Feb. 4).—In a poor home Rodney Blake and his aged sick mother live together. Rodney displays great love and kindness towards his mother. He is an industrious young man, and studies by early morning candle light before taking his scanty breakfast and leaving for his day's labor.

Dorothy Whitney, an heiress, lives at Oak Crest, a magnificent home surrounded by vast and beautiful gardens. She is an orphan, and fancies herself in love with Gordon Thorn, a son of the rich. He, in turn, has shown his love for Dorothy, and a wedding is arranged.

Dorothy's maid of honor, an old school girl friend, Evelyn Day, arrives on the scene to help the elaborate preparations made for the wedding. She meets Gordon Thorn, and they suddenly find themselves deeply in love with each other. They elope. Dorothy is broken-hearted. Looking from her boudoir window to the street below, in her bridal dress, Dorothy sees Rodney Blake, one of many laborers, working on a big building. Revenge toward the man who so cruelly deserted her, prompts Dorothy to send her maid to bring the man she sees before her.

Into the home of Dorothy, Rodney Blake is ushered and in the presence of the bride-to-be the bargain is made. Dorothy offers Blake twenty thousand dollars a year if he will marry her, to be her husband in name only. Instinctively a gentleman, Blake is about to refuse, when a vision of his aged mother comes to him. Rodney consents, and the bargain is made.

A contract is drawn between Dorothy's attornies, which reads in part: "A marriage ceremoney shall be duly and regularly performed between Miss Dorothy Whitney and Rodney Blake. In consideration of twenty thousand dollars a year, the said Rodney Blake agrees to waive all rights and privileges of a husband. To live in a separate part of the house; in public to accompany his wife at all social gatherings at her directions."

Married to a beautiful girl of whom he knows nothing, sacrificing himself for the love of his mother, Rodney Blake faces a new world.

Six months after the marriage of Dorothy and Rodney, we find Thorn and his wife living a strange life. Weak and sick, Thorn is an invalid, with but a short life before him. He is attended by a wife who shows her unwillingness to wait on him.

Physicians are consulted and advise a blood transfusion to restore him to strength and health. They advertise for a healthy man to sacrifice himself for the cause, with a one thousand dollar cash payment for the sacrifice.

Living in a separate wing of Dorothy's home Rodney and his mother, surrounded by wealth, live a quiet and uneventful life. Rodney looks at himself in a mirror, and sees himself as he was when he was happiest, as a laborer, earning an honest dollar.

In the main body of the mansion Dorothy lives a languid, wasteful existence, attended by her maids. An invitation to attend a social affair, a lawn party, prompts her to summon her husband to attend her. The afternoon arriving, Dorothy and Rodney are surrounded by the rich upstarts and brainless, ill-bred rich. Rodney stands aloof from all. Dorothy sees this and for a brief second she shows a spark of what might be love, or admiration for the man who calls her wife in name only.

Returning home, Rodney shows his disgust for the life, and, having to date received one thousand dollars of Dorothy's money, stands utterly ashamed of his dependency. He takes his old clothes and sinks in a chair in thought. A newspaper advertisement for a well and healthy man prompts him to answer it.

Seeing his way clear to return the one thousand dollars of Dorothy's money, and so free himself from the mill-stone about his neck, Rodney, in his old working clothes, goes forth in the night.

In the beautiful garden Dorothy sees Rodney leave. She believes he is going back to the life he came from and admires his spirit.

Following him to the house of Thorn, Rodney enters and is accepted for the blood transfusion. Dorothy follows, and comes face to face with Rodney and Thorn, and his wife, Evelyn. But too late, Thorn passes away. Rodney leads Dorothy away, and in the garden surrounding Oak Crest, in the the light of the moon, a new love is born, and the shades of night close upon two lovers.

IMP.

THE STORY OF THE SILK HAT TOLD (Feb. 1).—The old proprietor of a second-hand store is seen sitting in an old rocking chair near a section of shelves containing six silk hats. He is looking at the silk hats wondering what they may have been when in their prime. He nods and drops into a sleep and the silk hats take on faces and relate their most important experiences. In the hat band of each is a large price tag. The first hat, priced $1.50, says, "I have added big business"; the second hat, priced $1.25, says, "I have been cupid's messenger"; the third hat, priced $1.00, says, "I have been a political power"; the fourth hat, priced 75 cents, says, "I have made millions laugh"; the fifth hat, priced 50 cents, says, "I have ended lovers' quarrels"; the sixth hat, priced 25 cents, says, "I have aided the needy."

They relate their experiences in turn, as the old man dreams, and at the conclusion of the last story he awakes as the picture fades out.

THE AWAITED HOUR (Two Parts—Feb. 5.).—Frank Colby is in the "Death House" awaiting electrocution. He makes the following confession to the prison chaplain:

He, Frank Colby, has been employed as cashier in the office of Steven Farwell, a wealthy importer. Farwell was in love with Colby's wife, Florence, and she with him. Farwell planned to get rid of Colby so that he could marry Florence. He manipulates a check for $5,000 and has Colby arrested for forgery and sentenced to fifteen years' imprisonment. Florence then divorces the convicted man and marries Farwell.

In prison Colby hears of the divorce and marriage and swears to be revenged. In due time he is put to work in the engine room of the penitentiary and all the time is watching for an opportunity to escape. A fellow-prisoner, John Adams, who is paroled, agrees to assist him in his escape. At the hour agreed on, Adams comes to the outside of the prison and secrets a suitcase containing a suit of clothes, a pistol, a pair of hand-cuffs and rope. Adams also is mounted on a horse and is himself garbed in prison clothes.

By means of a coil of belting which is revolving in the engine room, and which, in its revolution, is carried past a window, Colby effects his escape. He clings to the belting and allows himself to be carried up and past the window, through which, by a prodigious spring, and amid a fusillade of shots from the prison guards, he gains his freedom.

Adams, on his horse, leads the prison guards on the wrong scent and also escapes. Colby finds the suitcase and changes his clothes. He then steals away up the road until he meets a farmer, seizes his rig and drives to the railroad depot. He safely boards a train and arrives in New York, taking his suitcase containing his prison garb, etc., with him. He goes to Farewell's house and breaks in through the window and surprises Farwell in his library alone. He covers him with his pistol, handcuffs him and binds his legs together.

He then goes to Farwell's private desk and takes bonds, stocks, securities and money, which he tears up and burns. He then forces Farwell to mount a chair and puts a noose around his neck and attaches the rope to the chandelier above his head. He ties a rope to the leg of the chair and throws this rope out of the window.

He then goes through the window himself and outside pulls the rope, dragging the chair from under his victim; Farwell dangles and suffers a felon's fate. Colby then garbs himself once more in prison garb and puts him-

WANTED
Comedy Motion Picture Scenarios
Highest price will be paid for good stuff
ALL RED FEATURE COMPANY
Windsor, Ont.

MENGER & RING
304 W. 42nd Street, NEW YORK
Telephone, Bryant 6621

BE UP TO DATE
Install
CORCORAN TANKS
Get No. 6 Price List
A. J. CORCORAN, Inc. 11½ JOHN STREET NEW YORK CITY

WANTED
Two Old Power's No. 5 or No. 6 Heads
Condition no object if price is right. State all in first letter.
W. C. McGUIRE
220 N. State St. Chicago, Ill.

Developing and Printing for the Trade
Quality and Prices Right
WANTED—SCENARIOS for One Reel Comedies
ATLAS MOTION PICTURE CO., INC.
600 Liggett Building Detroit, Mich.

OPTIC PROJECTION
S. H. Gage, B. S. and H. P. Gage, Ph. D.
Postpaid $3.00
A comprehensive book of 700 pages, with over 400 illustrations on all forms of projection apparatus. Write for circular giving table of contents, sample pages and illustrations.
THE COMSTOCK PUBLISHING COMPANY,
Roberts Place, Ithaca, New York

AT LIBERTY
JOHN BRADEN
Formerly with Motion Picture Patents Co. and Secretary General Film Co.
ADDRESS 145 WEST 12TH ST., NEW YORK CITY

To State Right Buyers and Exchangemen

We believe that the purchase of features on state right basis has come back.

We know that there is more money for the Exchange men in purchasing features on state right basis than buying franchises or splitting profits with Programme combinations.

Before tying up our productions for the United States with any one concern, we want to test out our theory and give state right buyers and Exchangemen a chance.

To this end, the Secretary and General Manager of this Company, Mr. Jesse J. Goldburg, will call at the principal cities from coast to coast to present our proposition to state right buyers and Exchangemen.

He will call with "THE AVALANCHE," "THE ORDEAL" and "A MODERN MAGDALEN."

In order that he might not possibly pass you up, if you desire to see him, wire our home office and we will wire Mr. Goldburg to call on you.

A few territories still left open on

"THE BANKER'S DAUGHTER"
"NORTHERN LIGHTS"
"CAPTAIN SWIFT"
"THE GREYHOUND"

LIFE PHOTO FILM CORPORATION

Executive Offices: 220 West 42nd Street NEW YORK CITY

self in the way of a passing policeman, who, of course, promptly arrests him. Florence, his former wife, drives past in her auto and sees the arrest and recognizes him and is terror-stricken, although she does not discover until she arrives home that she has lost Steven Farwell and practically is a pauper.

This closes Frank Colby's confession to the chaplain, and it is no sooner finished than the prison guards enter the cell and lead him out to where he meets his doom.

ON DANGEROUS GROUND (Jan. 18).—Ned is the son of a banker. He is wayward and speculates secretly and for large amounts. Losing, he uses the funds of his father's bank. He is assisted by Harkins, an employee at the bank. Employed in the bank is Williams, a young cashier. He loves the banker's daughter, and when this is found out the father and son, Ned, try to persuade the girl to have nothing to do with him.

She refuses. In the meantime the brother and the other employee, Harkins, are in a dangerous predicament, for they have used bank funds which have been lost in speculating. The brother sees a chance to get rid of his sister's objectionable suitor and also to put the blame of the bank theft on him.

That night the young cashier leaves the girl's house and is set upon by two masked men. He takes the masked man's revolver and fires. One of them falls. The man whom the young cashier knocks down leaps to his feet and takes off his mask. It is Harkins, the bank employee. He tells the astonished cashier that the man he, the cashier, fired at was the girl's brother.

Believing himself to be a murderer, Williams leaves for his home with the employee. Harkins proposes that Williams shall leave the country, and as he has no funds, that he shall rob the bank. Williams agrees, Harkins goes home to pack his grip. Williams mad with remorse, sees the spirit of the murdered man everywhere before him and, finally, unable to bear the mental torture longer, he goes to his sweetheart's home, and before her father and herself accuses himself of the murder of the brother.

The father sends for the police. The girl is wild with grief. Suddenly the supposedly murdered man comes in the room. Williams sees it all. He admits that he is a trickster, and says that his accomplice is waiting at the bank for the safe to be opened. The father accepts his son's story. The brother suggests telephoning, his idea being to warn the other, but Williams forbids this, and demands that the police go to the bank. They do, and arrest Harkins, who confesses. Williams gets the girl.

REX.

CHILDREN OF CHANCE (Jan. 21).—Twenty-five years before the story begins, Evans worked for Armitage. He absents himself from work a few hours one day to visit his sick wife, who has just borne him a baby boy. For this Evans is summarily discharged. Mrs. Armitage dies in giving birth to a girl. Mrs. Evans also passes away. But before dying, she makes her husband swear to bring up her boy as a doctor to help humanity.

Wild with anguish, Evans conceives a plan to exchange his boy for his employer's baby girl, in order to guarantee to his child the education and comforts he himself might not be able to supply. He does this, leaving a note of warning to his employer, telling him that, should any harm come to his boy, the little girl will suffer in kind. He goes west.

Twenty-five years go by. The foster boy has become a doctor. He accepts an offer from a western town, and goes west to begin practice. There he meets his father without knowing him. He falls in love with the girl, now a beautiful woman. They become engaged. The doctor writes the good news home. The news brings on his enraged foster parent, bent on stopping the marriage. Reconciliations follow when the two elder men recognize each other and claim their respective children.

THE GIRL AND THE SPY (Feb. 4).—Ben is a foreigner in New York. He has a brother who is depending upon him. Ben can get no work. He needs money for doctors for the boy, and also food and rent. Frances is the daughter of a foreign ambassador. With other workers from her church, she goes to the slums. She visits the garret in which Ben lives. He is out and she acts as a good samaritan toward the poor sick brother and pays the rent. When Ben returns he is furious. He receives a visit from the head of the spies in this city, and Ben is offered food and money to act as a spy and refuses.

The briber leaves. The girl returns and Ben is struck by her style and beauty. They talk and her sympathy with the brother wins his love. The next day war is declared between his native land and that of the girl's father. This time Ben volunteers to spy and get certain important papers that will be delivered at the girl's father's house. Ben does not know he is her father. That night the papers arrive. The ambassador puts them in his safe. Ben and the head spy enter the house when all are asleep and get the papers. The ambassador sees them and he and his servants fight with them. The ambassador and his servant are overpowered, the head spy is about to kill them when the daughter runs from her room and throws herself before her father. He recognizes the girl. He refuses to kill the ambassador. The head spy is about to leave with the papers when Ben, moved by the girl's appeal, fights for the papers. The light is overturned and they fight in the dark while the girl screams. Policemen enter. The lights are turned up. Ben is released; the other is arrested.

THE FLASH (Two Parts—Feb. 7).)—Carl Brauer, a blind musician, has a daughter who is a nurse at the city hospital. She and the house physician, Dr. Harvey, are interested in each other.

Frank Hoag, a wealthy but unfeeling husband, brings his wife to the hospital to be operated upon, and soon after leaves to keep an engagement with an adventuress. On the way out he happens to pass Miss Brauer in the corridor and attempts to flirt with her. On his next visit before the operation, he finds Miss Brauer taking his wife's temperature. The latter introduces them. Hoag, in order to make a hit with the nurse, shows great solicitation for his wife.

In the meantime a famous specialist, who happens to be in the city, brings a wealthy blind patient to the hospital to be operated upon. The operation proves successful. Mrs. Hoag, however, dies. Hoag pretends deep sorrow. The nurse is very sympathetic. Later the husband's true character is revealed by showing him drinking at the club and dining with different women.

By chance he happens to see Miss Brauer go into a surgical supply house and decides to wait for her. She has called for a hypodermic needle which she left to be repaired. The druggist demonstrates that the needle is in working condition and she requests him to fill it as she desired to use it on a patient who is suffering intense pain. He does so. She exits, meets Hoag, who asks to accompany her home. She agrees.

Meanwhile the blind father of the girl has gone out for tobacco and falls into a trench. The ambulance is called. Dr. Harvey responds. By this time Hoag and Miss Brauer have reached home. She invites him in and calls for "daddy." Hoag thinks she is bluffing about "daddy," and makes advances. When he roughly forces her back she reaches for the needle on the table and thrusts it into his arm. He backs away and laughs.

Dr. Harvey arrives and finds old Brauer not seriously hurt. The latter insists on going home. Dr. Harvey walks with him. Just before they enter Hoag begins to feel the effects of the needle, grabs the nurse who is trying to get to the door, is overcome and collapses. Dr. Harvey enters with her father. Doctor Harvey sees the body on the floor and picks up the needle. They explain to each other in pantomime orders not to alarm Brauer. Hoag is removed to the hospital. When he comes to at the hospital Dr. Harvey stands over him, gives him a tongue lashing and tells him to get out before he is arrested.

Mr. Thompson, the wealthy gentleman who was successfully operated upon for his eyes, calls at the hospital and makes out a substantial check to Dr. Harvey, his assistant and the nurse who attended him. The nurse sees this from a distance. She asks Dr. Harvey to interest the specialist in her father's case. The specialist advises Dr. Harvey how to handle the case. The operation is successfully performed.

Dr. Harvey calls to take Miss Brauer out one evening. They are seen in a cafe together by Hoag, whose interest in the girl is reawakened. The next afternoon while drunk he decides to visit Miss Brauer.

In the meantime Dr. Harvey and Miss Brauer have an afternoon off. She is home expecting the doctor to take her for a spin in his car. The blind father goes to take a nap and Hoag forces his way in. The old gentleman hears sounds of a struggle. Old Brauer goes to a bureau and gets a revolver but realizes that without his sight it is hopeless for him to try to help his daughter. The old man knows it is too soon to remove the bandages, but prays for momentary sight in order to protect his daughter's honor. He tears the bandages off and sees dimly. He shoots Hoag through the curtains and rushes to his daughter's grateful arms. Dr. Harvey hears the shot outside and runs in. "God blessed me with providential sight to protect my daughter's honor, let the darkness come," the old man explains. He goes hopelessly blind again. Dr. Harvey cares for them both.

UNIVERSAL.

ANIMATED WEEKLY, NO. 150 (Jan. 20).—Where Nature Blooms Her Richest—Millions of flowers make gorgeous floats in greatest flower carnival at Pasadena, Cal.

Hotel De Gink Opens—An army of "knights of the road" make over old building presented by the city into free hostelry.—New York City. Sub-title: Jeff Davis, king of the hoboes.

World's Famous Pianist—Josef Hofmann, supreme living master of the piano, and Walter Damrosch, dean of American orchestra conductors. Sub-title: The fingers insured for a quarter of a million dollars.

One Hundred Years of Peace—The Star and Stripes raised in celebration of the hundredth year of peace between United States and England.—New Orleans, La.

Snappy Fire Fighting—Quick work by firemen averts conflagration when bad fire threatens Fifth avenue establishments.—New York City.

Champion Soul Saver—Billy Sunday, famous ex-ball player, converts thousands of sinners to religion with his fiery preaching—Philadelphia, Pa. Sub-titles: Billy Sunday in fur coat. Tabernacle where vast audiences flock to hear him preach.

Styles for All the Day—Latest designs in morning, noon and evening wear for women, created in America. By courtesy of Madame Yovin.

Mikado's Best War Nurses—The pick of Japan's war nurses, decorated for valor and skill, on their way to the war zone.—New York City.

The Latest White Hope—Jess Willard, giant ex-cowboy, signs up to fight Jack Johnson for the championship of the world. Sub-title: Off to train for the big fight.

The Last of a Great Warrior—While aeroplanes guard the sky from attack an imposing funeral cortege takes Lord Roberts, England's great general, to his last resting place.—London. England. Sub-title: Sounding the "last call."

On the Battle Line—Big guns dropping shells in enemy's trenches at Ramscapelle, Belgium.

The End of a Bloody Siege—The last of a hasty retreat by the French after a fierce bombardment.—Ypres, Belgium.

Filming from a Sky Dreadnought—Animated Weekly camera man cruises in German Zeppelin "Victoria Louise," which has since been destroyed at Antwerp, Belgium. Sub-titles: Along the river Rhine. The Kaiser's brother, Prince Henry of Prussia.

Cartoons by the world-famous caricaturist, Hy. Mayer of Puck.

MUTUAL FILM CORP.

KAY BEE.

SERGEANT JIM'S HORSE (Jan. 22).—The young sergeant gives up his beloved horse, Midnight, to his superior officer when the latter's steed is shot from under him. Later, Jim is fatally wounded in battle. The faithful animal deserts the officer to bring consolation to his old master and to shield him from the onrush of the other horses. At the end of this deeply affecting and intensely realistic picture of life on the battlefield, the beautiful black charger is seen kneeling on the sergeant's grave.

THE MAN WHO DIED (Jan. 22).—Joe Labarge, a highwayman sought by the Canadian mounted police, in the guise of a clergyman, enters the little town of Grand Pierre in the Northwest woods. He is kindly received by the people, who are glad to have a preacher among them. The love and respect of the villagers awakens Labarge's better self, and he resolves to be the man they believe him. He holds religious services to the best of his ability, tends the sick, and does all the good he can in the community. Corporal Ireton of the mounted police happens to get stranded in Grand Pierre and recognizes in the supposed priest, Labarge. He sends him with a written message to Sergeant Grey at headquarters. The letter discloses its bearer's identity. Grey, however, has been hearing for some time of the good work the ex-highwayman has been doing in Grand Pierre. He writes back to Ireton that the real Labarge died three years before.

THE FAMINE (Jan. 29).—Misao, daughter of Ichii, a poor Japanese farmer, is in love with Yoshiro, but consents to marry Toyomo, who pretends that he wishes to marry her, and offers her father one hundred yen as a dowry. Misao writes Yoshiro telling him that she is resolved to sacrifice her own happiness upon the altar of family needs. While Yoshiro is reading and brooding over the letter, Horisho, an old beggar, finds him.

Misao has helped Horisho, the beggar, at one time by dividing her last crust with him during the famine. Hirosho is determined to help the lovers out. Going to the home of Toyomo, he begs Toyomo for a hearing, but Toyomo only kicks him out of his house. That night while Toyomo is making advances to Misao and telling her of his deceit and that he does not intend marrying her, Hirosho slips in the room and kills Toyomo. He then tells Misao that Yoshiro awaits her by the fishing boat and that she must go while he, Hirosho, will remain behind to aid her escape. Toyomo's servants, finding his body, call in the Japanese and a mob sets out for the beggar. He is killed but lives long enough to see Misao and Yoshiro safely in a boat out to sea.

"CABIRIA" STARS IN LATEST ITALA FEATURES

Here Seems a Golden Opportunity to Make Sure and Certain Money

CABIRIA has made ITALA the Most Talked-about brand of films in the World because every one concedes CABIRIA to be the Greatest production, film or otherwise, ever staged in the history of Amusements. CABIRIA STARS are popular with over 7,000,000 of the public who saw CABIRIA at 25 cents to $2.00 admission.

LYDIA QUARANTA (Cabiria Herself) APPEARS IN A NEW FILM

(Read what Harrison says about it in this issue)

The Treasure of the Louzats

IN 4 PARTS AND 200 SCENES

N. Y., N. J., Pa., Ohio, Ind., Ill., Ky., W. Va., Texas, Okla., Ark., have been sold. All other territory now available.

Elegant line of posters (illustrated above), Lobby Photos.

You Take No Chance With an Itala Feature. Address Quick

HARRY R. RAVER

ITALA FILM CO. OF AMERICA, Inc., 110 West 40th Street, New York

DOMINO.

THROUGH THE MURK (Two Parts—Jan. 28).—"Old Mother" Hudson, a woman of 45 or 50, ragged and a confirmed and sodden drunkard, is a Southwestern type of the "no good" settler. Her one aim in life is to keep herself supplied with whiskey. Her daughter, Ivy, a product of environment, is about 18 years old. Under ordinary circumstances she would be very pretty, but under the existing conditions, she is dirty, shiftless and lazy.

Ivy is mortally afraid of her mother, who is very cruel to her, and who offers to swap her to "Big" Anderson, proprietor of the Dogtown saloon, for a half keg of rye. Anderson, however, refuses to make the bargain as he does not think Ivy worth the price. In a nearby town, "Missouri" Joe, a ragged, dirty young man, and an exact replica of Ivy, so far as his soddenness and lack of spirit goes, is given his choice of leaving the town or breaking rocks. He chooses the former and drifts into the town where Ivy lives. There he is given work around the saloon by Anderson for his meals and sleep. He and Ivy meet and are mutually attracted, their companionship afterward becoming the one bright spot in their sordid lives.

As their acquaintance ripens into love they both try hard to improve their appearance. Joe shaves himself with a butcher knife and Ivy washes her face and hands and combs her hair, which improves her appearance so much that Anderson awakens to the fact that he would like to make the swap with Mother Hudson. He therefore puts a keg of rye in a wagon and goes to the Hudson cabin to make the trade. In the meantime, Ivy and Joe are getting married, Joe having left Anderson's employ and gone to work on a farm.

Despite Joe's pleadings, Ivy decides she cannot leave without bidding her mother goodbye, so she returns to the cabin and finds Anderson there bargaining for her with her mother. Ivy runs away and is pursued by Anderson. She runs to Joe for protection, and he, the primitive instinct awakened in him, fights desperately to protect Ivy. He springs to Anderson's throat and chokes him into insensibility, then, shouldering a club and with one arm protectingly thrown about Ivy, he points off, saying, "Over the hills lives the world. Come." Thus they go out into the world.

BRONCHO.

THE GUN FIGHTER (Two Parts—Jan. 27).—Tucson, a gun fighter, is the terror of the town. Rhita, the gun fighter's girl, is extremely fond of their baby, whom Tucson detests and considers an unwelcome intrusion. Tucson commands Rhita to get rid of the baby, and she, afraid to disobey him, leaves it on the bank of a stream, where it is found by Ada Lawson. Ada takes the baby home and she and her husband become very fond of it. The Lawsons are homesteaders and decide to settle on grazing ground just outside the village. They establish themselves and soon afterward are ordered by Santro, a Mexican rancher, to vacate. Lawson refuses to do so and Santro hires Tucson to kill him. Tucson horsewhips Lawson in the village store and orders him never again to enter the village.

A few weeks later, however, exhausted supplies make it imperative that Lawson return to town. Tucson is informed of Lawson's presence in town and prepares to carry out his agreement with Santro. Rhita, determined that her baby shall not be deprived of a good man's care, resolves to sacrifice the gun fighter. She fastens his pistol in its holster by means of a hawhide thong, thus making it impossible for Tucson to draw his gun. Tucson proceeds to the village store, where he confronts Lawson. Lawson pulls his gun and shoots Tucson, who is unable to draw his gun.

MUTUAL.

MUTUAL WEEKLY NO. 3 (Jan. 21).—Indian soldiers land in Europe. English cavalry enters Scarborough to do police duty after German bombardment.

Territorials cooking on the march.

Wulpin Church near Dunkirk destroyed. Note the crucifix came through the bombardment unharmed.

Scarcity of rubber in Europe compels England and France to buy old auto tires in America.

Dr. Frank Crane, eminent advocate of international peace, sends a message to the readers of the Mutual Weekly.

The east and west entrances to the Celilo Canal are opened, making the Columbia River navigable for several hundred miles.

Democratic women urge President Wilson to support nation-wide Woman's Suffrage.

Racing is resumed at New Orleans after a 7 years' lapse of the kingly sport.

The only original grand opera baby poses with her parents for the Mutual Weekly.

A visit to Uncle Sam's big gun factory at Watervliet, N. Y.

San Francisco's Olympic clubmen enjoy midwinter dip in the Pacific Ocean's cheering warmth.

While the Boston "Brownies" shiver and freeze amid cakes of ice in the Atlantic's biting coldness.

Japanese Red Cross sends doctors and nurses to Europe.

Annual tournament of roses at Pasadena, Cal., awes 150,000 beholders.

This new auto sleigh skims over the snow at a 35 mile per hour clip.

ROYAL.

HER HERO (Jan. 23).—A young man, rather lacking in enterprise, falls in love with the daughter of a wealthy business man, who believes that no human being is worth his salt except he "makes good." He gives his daughter's suitor a sum of money with the understanding that to every dollar he makes, he will add one thousand dollars. The chap buys a photograph gallery. His experiences with "subjects" are many and amusing. At last his sweetheart comes to the shop. Prevailing upon his office boy to pose as a burglar, the lover rescues her thrillingly before the camera. Later, they bear the photographic evidence to father, who gives them his blessing.

RELIANCE.

THE SEA BRAT (Jan. 20).—A boy whom an old fisherman has rescued from the ocean is known only as the "sea brat." His bringing up by the hermit of the cliff has been scarcely human, and he is strangely primitive and uncouth. Discovering that his guardian is a miser, the sea brat is curiously affected by the glimpse of abundant gold. When he falls passionately in love with the fairest of the fisher girls, all kinds of wild dreams beseige his imagination. Late one afternoon, out at sea, some fishermen see the hermit's cottage in flames and row to the rescue. They find the old man half dead, the trap door in the floor torn from its hinges—and a dark figure outside glides into the scrub. Later they trace the culprit. They find him on the beach, holding out to the girl he loves two handsful of gold. Seizing him, they shove him into a boat and set him adrift. But all this proves to be but a horrible dream from which the priest of the village awakes the "brat," who has fallen asleep on the shore in the path of the tide. Going back to the cottage together, they find the old miser dead.

AFTER TWENTY YEARS (Jan. 22).—Tom Evans, his wife and child live happily on their little place in Arizona—until the craze to see a big city and the thirst for gold get hold of Tom. He reads of the great "strike" at Cripple Creek. He goes there, strikes it rich, and makes his way to Chicago. There he forgets the wife and boy in Arizona in another existence. Twenty years pass—and at last comes a longing for his old home. He returns. The child he left is now a man, who tells his father that there is no place with him and his deserted mother for him. In the saloon the boy threatens his father before onlookers. Later, when the latter is found lying unconscious at the bottom of the arroyo, the son is accused and taken into custody. But Tom has only been stunned by his fall. He testifies that it was an accident—and a reconciliation is effected between him and his long lost family.

THE CRAVEN (Two parts—Jan. 23).—Bud Walton, the village blacksmith, is big and strong physically, but he has not the courage to put his strength to good purpose. All the boys take a slap at him whenever they choose, and Bud makes no attempt to retaliate. This causes his sweetheart, June, to despise him. Sykes, a handsome stranger, comes to town. He becomes infatuated with Bud's sister, May, who is attracted by his fine manners. One day while walking along a cliff, Sykes roughly embraces her, and she falls over the precipice and is killed. Will, Bud's assistant at the forge, who long has loved May, discovers why Sykes has fled the town. He urges Bud to follow Sykes and avenge his sister. When Bud proves too weak of spirit to do this, Will goes, but is sent back badly wounded by Sykes. June arraigns Bud for his cowardice. Stung beyond endurance, he meets Sykes and though mortally injured himself, breaks his enemy's arm and carries him back to town. Throwing Sykes at the feet of June, the craven falls dead across his antagonist's body.

PRINCESS.

AN INNOCENT BURGLAR (Jan. 22).—Edwin Marshall worries his parents and his sister, Mary, with his wild ways. To pay his gambling debts he enters the home of Hal Davis, who is in love with Mary, and is in the act of helping himself to valuables when Davis discovers him. Marshall confesses his motive and the other young man gives him money. This act and the fact that Davis loves his sister, cause Marshall to reform. Later, Davis's sister, Helen, visits him and she and Edwin are strongly attracted. Mary, on receiving a necklace from her fiance, leaves it on her dresser near an open window. Its mysterious disappearance leads to her brother's being accused of the theft and sentenced to prison. Helen alone believes him innocent. Just in the nick of time she finds out that the real burglar is an organ grinder's monkey, and secures evidence which frees Marshall.

MAJESTIC.

THE BETTER MAN (Two parts—Jan. 24).—At the invitation of an ambitious aunt, Lord Dunster, an impoverished nobleman, comes to the "Lazy L Ranch," whose owner, Agnes Crosby, welcoming him as her aunt's friend, does not suspect the underlying mercenary motive of his visit. Jim Murray, the range boss, who long has loved Agnes, grows decidedly unhappy because Agnes, as hostess, spends so many hours riding with Lord Dunster. Aunt Mary, fearing that the distinguished Englishman has not made sufficient inroads into her neice's affections, summons Jim and tells him that she knows that Agnes loves his lordship, and would accept his offer of marriage, did she not feel tacitly bound to Jim. She begs him, for Agnes's happiness, to leave. Jim bitterly tells himself that he is only fit to be a cowpuncher and that Lord Dunster is the fit mate for Agnes. He leaves. The Englishman, who has come to love Agnes unselfishly, determines to make a clean breast of his earlier motives. He does so, throwing himself on her mercy and begging her to marry him. She is greatly impressed with his manly spirit, but confesses that there is someone else. Dunster guesses who his rival is. He sends for Jim, knowing the foreman to be "the better man."

THE BROKEN LULLABY (Jan. 26).—A young mother vainly tries to lull her baby to sleep, while her drunken husband and his cronies carouse in an adjoining room. At last, in despair, she carries the child to the barn and puts her to sleep in the warm hay. Then the loudly shouted wants of her husband compel her to return to the house. A farm hand, who secretly loves the young wife, finds the baby in the hay. Incensed at its apparent neglect he takes it home to his own shack and cares for it. At the conclusion of the debauch, the husband stumbles out into the barn and falling into a drunken stupor, lets his pipe fall into the dry hay. The barn is burning furiously when the wife awakes. Beside herself for the safety of her child, she barely is rescued from plunging into the flames by the farm hand, who has rushed to the rescue. He assures her that the little one is safe in his shack, and later they find that the husband has been burned to death.

BEAUTY.

EVAN'S LUCKY DAY (Jan. 26).—George Evans, a young man of fair attainments, but not yet overburdened with this world's goods, asks Mr. Collins' permission to marry his daughter, Sue. Collins tells him that he may have the young lady—provided she doesn't object—if he returns at 2 p. m. with two hundred dollars in cash. In the cafe, whither goes George for the kind of inspiration which works best with him, a good, square meal, he sees a man who is the double of himself. This gentleman, who is enjoying the company of a lady friend, has his dinner rudely interrupted by the appearance of his angry wife. The proprietor and waiters are obliged to conduct the lady to the

(Continued on page 734.)

Watch This Space Every Week

We have to Offer:

Two new Simplex Machines, slightly shopworn, NEVER USED, at .....$215.00 each
One No. 6A, New, Shopworn $178.00
One No. 6A, with 220-V. alternating motor drive and loop setter, slightly shopworn..$237.00
3—220-V. Ft. Wayne Compensarcs, good as new .....$40.00 each
One No. 6 machine, perfect running order..$120.00
One No. 5, new, shopworn $115.00
One used No. 5 machine, good condition..$75.00

These are samples on our floor, guaranteed New:

STERN MFG. COMPANY, 109 N. 10th St., Philadelphia, Pa.

We have a large stock of Bio and Electra Carbons on hand, reasonable. You never regret dealing with us.

PICTURE PLAYHOUSE FILM CO. INC

"THE THREE BLACK TRUMPS"

A sensational drama in 4 parts with many unprecedented aerial feats. A punch in every foot of film, featuring the Famous Steeple-Jack, James Street.

To Be Released January 22nd

"EXPLOSION OF FORT B 2"

A wonderfully exciting photo-play in 5 parts; nothing but acting throughout, with the actual blowing up of Fort B, featuring Maria Jacobini.

To Be Released January 30th

"THE BLACK ENVELOPE"

A tragedy in 4 parts, featuring Maria Jacobini, taken from one of the strongest novels yet written and as a photo-play, it has few equals—each reel better than the one preceding, with a wonderful tragic climax; just the kind that keeps your audience on edge from start to finish.

To Be Released February 2nd

COMING!

THE GREAT EUROPEAN WAR

Over 10,000 feet of actual war scenes taken on the field of battle

KEEP YOUR EYE ON THE PICTURE PLAYHOUSE

BRANCH OFFICES

NEW YORK	110 West 40th St., Room 503
SYRACUSE	214 East Fayette St.
PHILADELPHIA	1126 Vine St.
PITTSBURGH	422 Penn Ave.
CLEVELAND	4th St. and Prospect Ave.
DALLAS	202 Andrews Bldg., Main and Akard Sts.
CHICAGO	5 So. Wabash Ave.
MONTREAL	204 St. Catherine St. West
TORONTO	39 Adelaide St. West

PLAY PICTURE PLAYHOUSE PHOTOPLAYS

NOW RELEASED

Greatest of Gloria's Productions

Souls Enchained

A Master Photo Play in Five Parts

FEATURING

LYDA BORELLI and MARIO BONNARD

Surpassing previous great success of

Love Everlasting The Naked Truth Satan

Advanced booking dates can be secured through

EXCLUSIVE FEATURES Masonic Bldg., New York
For New York State, Greater New York and Northern New Jersey

CELEBRATED PLAYERS 64 West Randolph Street, Chicago
For Illinois, Wisconsin and Indiana

A. W. CROSS Lyceum Theatre Building, Pittsburgh
For Ohio, Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia

Exhibitors whose territory is not covered can arrange for booking through our office

STATE RIGHTS BUYERS—GET BUSY—SECURE TERRITORY

GLORIA AMERICAN COMPANY

110 WEST 40th STREET NEW YORK

EXHIBITORS—EXCHANGEMEN

If you are having trouble getting the Moving Picture World each week from your newsdealer, fill in name and address below, send with one dollar, and we will mail paper direct for four months.

Name .....

.....

Theatre .....

STATE RIGHT BUYERS EXHIBITORS

Trapped by Camera

Webb Series No. 3

Better than BLACK TRIANGLE AND THE MAN IN THE CELLAR

Now Booking Through

Exclusive Feature—New York
For N. Y. State, Greater N. Y. and No. New Jersey

Liberty Film Renting Co.
Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia

S. L. W. Film Co.—Cleveland
For Ohio

Herrick Feature Film—Des Moines
For Iowa and Nebraska

Casino Feature Film Co.—Detroit
For Michigan

Tri-State Feature Film Co.—Philadelphia
Eastern Penn., So. N. J., Del., Md., Dist. of Col., Va.

General Feature Film Co.
Illinois and Wisconsin

All Feature—Toronto, Ontario
For Canada

TO STATE RIGHT BUYERS—Secure territory for big Webb Series

TO EXHIBITORS—In territory not covered above, communicate with us and we will arrange booking dates.

THE TRUE FEATURE COMPANY

110 WEST 40th STREET NEW YORK

YOUR AUDIENCE WILL

S T O P !
L O O K ! !
LISTEN!!!

AND THOROUGHLY ENJOY

REFINED VAUDEVILLE ON THE SCREEN

LOW PRICE SERVICE RATES

RENFAX FILM CO., Inc.

Makers of Musical Movies

110 WEST FORTIETH STREET, NEW YORK

PITTSBURGH, PA.: 417 Fourth Avenue CHICAGO, ILL.: 154 West Lake Street
COLUMBUS, OHIO: 312½ North High Street

RENFAX FILM CO., INC.
110 West 40th Street, New York City.
Gentlemen:—Please send, without obligation to me, information regarding your Musical Movies.
(Theatre)
(Address)
(State)

(Continued from page 730.)
parlor to quiet her, and the husband, pressing George with the offer of a goodly sum to take his place, makes his escape. The wife breaks loose and descends upon George, whom she reviles mercilessly, until he reveals to her her mistake. Out of the dismayed wife, he gathers enough redress money to complete the two hundred. Then hurrying to the Collins', he hands him the wager—just as the clock strikes twice.

AMERICAN.

SILENCE (Two parts—Jan. 25).—Frank Morris is reared in abject poverty, although his miserly father has ample funds for his family. When the boy grows old enough to realize what is the matter, he covets his father's wealth, and finally murders him. With the coveted gold he buys his wife. Haunted by the spectre of Morris, Sr., young Morris early takes his life. On his dying bed he confides to Dr. Lane that his little son no doubt will inherit his father's and grandfather's tendencies. But the doctor allows his silence to be bought with a sum of money. Fifteen years later, the doctor's daughter, Marion, falls in love with Frank Morris, the third generation. Her father's remonstrances only precipitate an elopement. The young people live happily together, until the disease-laden mind of Morris breaks forth into crime. The doctor, called to his daughter's side, finds her dead—and his son-in-law is taken away, a raving maniac. Dr. Lane realizes that he has paid the price for consenting to be bribed into silence years before.

THANHOUSER.

GRAFT VERSUS LOVE (Two parts—Jan. 19).—Violet Grey's fiance, Henry Williams, doubts the integrity of Lawyer Newell, executor of his dead father's estate. On a certain evening, Williams failing to fulfill an appointment with Violet, she is seized with dread foreboding, as, to her knowledge, he was to have had an interview with Newell that afternoon. As she hears nothing from him next day, she determines to call at the lawyer's office. Newell is out. But Violet finally frightens his stenographer into confessing that the night before her employer and an accomplice had taken away a young man, who had been closeted with Newell in the private office. Of his whereabouts the girl is entirely ignorant. Violet decides to be her own detective. To this end, she induces the stenographer to go away on a visit, paying her liberally. She then takes her place in the office. Lawyer Newell falls in love with Violet. She finds in his safe a letter, which gives her proof that her lover is a prisoner in a private asylum for the insane up the state. She goes to his rescue, outwits the crafty executor, and Williams comes into his rightful property.

THE DOG CATCHER'S BRIDE (Jan. 24).—Cy Beggs, the village dog catcher, is viewed with disfavor by his fellow citizens, who feel that he is not capturing enough stray dogs to justify his existence in a thrifty society. Cy realizes this and does his best to make a better record. To this end he and his bride arrange a dog show. As fast as a goodly number of animals for exhibition purposes arrive, they place them in the dog wagon and drive through the main street with them to the pound. As it happens, a theatrical company, which has come to town, boasts as leading man, one Hamlet Boggs, who seeks to win the favor of the dog catcher's bride. She repels him and he vows vengeance. In the apparition of the load of dogs he sees his opportunity, and opening the back door of the wagon, releases the canines. Cy hands the reins to his bride, then he goes after the actor. Boggs is captured, hauled into the wagon among the yelping puppies, and driven off to the pound.

FINGER PRINTS OF FATE (Two parts—Jan. 26).—William Gray, an aged scientist, is found dead in his library. His safe, which was known to have contained a large sum of money, has been rifled, and suspicions point to the scientist's favorite nephew. Morris Grey, who is found a few minutes later in the library, and who only a few hours before has been disinherited for making love to his uncle's secretary, Margaret Seymour. The young man, on arrest, has nothing to say for himself. The money is not found, but the police believe that it has been removed at some previous time to the murder, and that the slayer had returned to remove some traces of his crime. Margaret is the only person who contends that he is innocent. At the beginning, too, she had almost believed him guilty, for she had noticed a finger-mark on the side of the safe and had been almost convinced that it was Morris's. Later, hiding in the room, she had seen him enter, find her glove and carefully remove it as though he would divert suspicion from herself. She reasoned then that he was not guilty, for in that event he would not have seemed to suspect her. It takes some clever detective work to clear up the case. But Margaret is a born detective, and at last she proves conclusively that the crime was committed by two men who have no connection with Morris Gray.

FEATURE FILM STORIES

PHOTO DRAMA CO., INC.

TIME LOCK NO. 776 (Six Parts).—Isaac Abrahams and his daughter, Helen, who are in fairly good circumstances, are seen taking care of their jewelry shop, when a very poorly clad lady enters, accompanied by a beautiful little boy and girl, with the intention of asking aid from the jeweler. The woman becomes suddenly ill and falls fainting to the floor. She is beyond medical aid, and dies later in Abraham's home over the jewelry store, after telling her benefactor to write to her brother, Henry Morton, in England, advising him where the children are. The children are well taken care of at the jeweler's home with the able assistance of the daughter's lover, Nathan, who helps amuse and teach them.

Before the arrival of the uncle serious trouble starts for Mr. Abrahams, who has patented a time lock. In looking around for capital to back him in his new enterprise, he falls into the hands of Madge, an adventuress, and her partner, Jack Wayne, an unscrupulous broker, who accidentally learns that an underworld gang consisting of Mrs. Mallachi, Jem and Pietro, are conspiring to compel the jeweler to finish up a counterfeit plate for the manufacture of one hundred dollar bills. The underworld gang and the broker form a co-partnership because he needs their assistance in obtaining possession of the patent on Time Lock No. 776. During several visits to the jewelry store Jack Wayne, the broker, becomes infatuated with Abraham's daughter, Helen, who very strongly resists all his attentions on account of her love for Nathan.

Being ambitious to go on the stage, Helen falls into the clutches of Jack Wayne's partner in crime, Madge, who convinces her that after years of stage experience she is better qualified than anyone else to introduce her to the proper people, who will make her name famous. Helen, unsuspecting that the spider's web is being woven around her, easily falls into its meshes, because she wants to earn money enough to place her father's time lock on the market. Helen, after taking a last look around their cozy home where she has spent so many delightful hours, kisses the little boy and girl whom her father has adopted, and starts to meet Madge to begin her stage career, but instead she is forced into an automobile and secreted in a deserted house until her father agrees to finish engraving the plate for the underworld gang and also gives them possession of the blue prints for his time lock patent.

The father, after being handled roughly by the underworld gang, starts to finish engraving the plate, which is supposed to print a very clever imitation of one hundred dollar bills. He suddenly stops in his work and refuses to continue unless his daughter is brought before him. After supreme efforts on the part of the gang to force him to continue, they finally relent and Helen is brought into the room. The meeting between father and daughter is most affecting. After finishing the plate, Abrahams, unobserved by the gang, who have been drinking, celebrating the completion of their plate, deliberately cuts the face of the plate with an engraving tool, making it absolutely worthless. The broker, who is the brains of the gang, tells Jem, who has charge of the deserted house where the girl is hidden, that he intends to do away with her, but Jem says: "None of that croaking stuff for mine. I am an honest thief."

Then follows the dramatic scene, which consists of the breaking in of the Secret Service men, assisted by the uncle of the children, who has just arrived from London, together with the lover, Nathan, and Mrs. Mallachi and Pietro are given long prison sentences.

Henry Morton, the uncle, who is compelled to admire Isaac Abraham's generosity in adopting his sister's little boy and girl and taking care of them, advances the money to finance the time lock invention, and they both become millionaires.

During the capture and rescue of the girl and the ultimate arrest of the underworld gang, the audience is treated to the most sensational scenes ever pictured, some of which are the breaking into the rendezvous of the gang, the trip to the deserted house, the auto race, the hiding of the girl in the time locked vault, and the final race by Morton, Nathan Abrahams and the Secret Service men, when the daughter is rescued by her father, who is the only one who knows how to work the time lock. And how could there be a more fitting climax to the story than a high-class wedding, with Dora Dean, the daughter, and Nathan, the lover, as the principals?

BOX OFFICE ATTRACTION CO.

CALL OF THE HEART (Balboa—Two Parts).—Carmencita, the flower-girl of the Cantina Del Toro, crouches, terrified, against a rock in a wild remote canyon in the Sierra Del Madre. Tauntingly, Don Raphael Dominguez gloats over the shrinking girl. In the background a wild-looking troop of brigands, vassals of the Don's, look on without a glance of pity for the girl. Don Dominguez is about to seize his helpless prey when all at once half a dozen figures appear behind the rocks. As many rifles are leveled at the heads of the outlaw band. The brigands have carelessly left their weapons where the new comers can seize them. There is nothing but surrender for the rascals and they throw up their hands. The leader of the rescuers, Juan, takes Carmencita in his arms.

Juan, a stalwart, the dashing and the accepted lover of Carmencita, is in reality the "dream-self" of Loco Juan, a deformed, despised, half-witted woodcutter, who secretly adores Carmencita, who has often protected him from brutal jests and cruel blows. After Carmencita has once again interposed between himself and the brutal Don, Loco Juan wanders forth on the mountain side and falls asleep under a bank of wild sun-flowers.

He dreams that a kind fairy suddenly rises from the mist of a water-fall and transforms him into erect, good-looking Juan. As Juan he meets Carmencita and her brother Poncho. Carmencita returns the love he confesses. But Don Dominguez, by spying learns Juan's secret. He determines to abduct Carmencita. With this in view he journeys into the mountain fastness and retains Antonio Sanchez, the desperate leader of the banditti, to carry out his purposes. Carmencita is carried off. In the brigands' hiding place, Don Dominguez is gloating over his prize when Juan, Loco Juan, no longer, springs into view. In a desperate knife fight he beats Sanchez and, embracing Carmencita, carries her in his arms to safety. But Carmencita, in a fatal moment, takes from Juan's arm the silver talisman the good fairy who befriended him placed there. The spell is broken. Juan awakens. Once more, his cloud-palaces dissolved, he is the deformed, half-witted outcast.

A FOOL THERE WAS.—"The Fool" and "His Wife" are happily married and living in a style commensurate with his large fortune at a country house at Larchmont. "The Fool," at the beginning of the play, is a virile, fine natured man, fond of his home, his wife and little child and devoted to wholesome sport. Then comes the meeting with "The Vampire" who is destined to ultimately ruin and drive him to a degraded death. "The Fool" at first resists the wiles of the sinuous, strangely fascinating Vampire. But she bides her time knowing by an experience, mile-stoned by blasted careers, that in due course she will be able to bend her victim to her will.

"The Fool" is an emissary on an important foreign mission. On the steamer crossing over "The Vampire," in some strikingly conceived scenes, manages to tighten her grip on his already vacillating nature. By the time Italy is reached "The Man" is completely at her feet and ready to do her bidding in everything. In her arms he forgets his diplomatic duties, his wife and his own career. "The Vampire" has woven a spell about him that nothing short of death can break. Even his child ceases to exert any good influence over him. With curses and violence he repels all attempts to bring him to his senses. "The Vampire" shrugs and smiles as she sees her work progressing.

Drink and drugs still further sap his will till, at "The Vampire's" behest, he leaves his wife and child altogether. It is the beginning of the tragic end of "The Fool." The "rag and a bone and a hank of hair" to whom he has "made his prayer" toys with him like a tigress with her prey. A smile from her sends him into the seventh heaven. If she frowns he is frenzied with jealousy and weakly violent. His fortune has slipped away and only one friend remains to him, a fine-charactered man who tries in vain, time and time again, to break the chains that bind "The Vampire's" miserable victim. She merely laughs at these attempts. She knows too well the strength and tenacity of the web she has woven.

Ruined, broken in body and mind, "The Fool," at the last tries to break away from the association that has wrecked and blasted his life. But it is of no use. At the end he tries to crawl to the side of his enslaver, while she laughs cruelly at the spectacle he presents. She sees nothing but what is amusing in the pitiful semblance of manhood that begs her to free him.

"Kiss me, my fool," she orders; but as he strives to reach her side he crumbles up. His tragedy is over. "The Vampire" with an inscrutable smile looks down at the huddled shape at her feet. Tearing some crimson roses from her corsage she scatters the petals, like crimson drops of blood, over all that remains of her wretched, broken victim.

Subscribe for The Moving Picture World.

Manager S. L. ROTHAPFEL

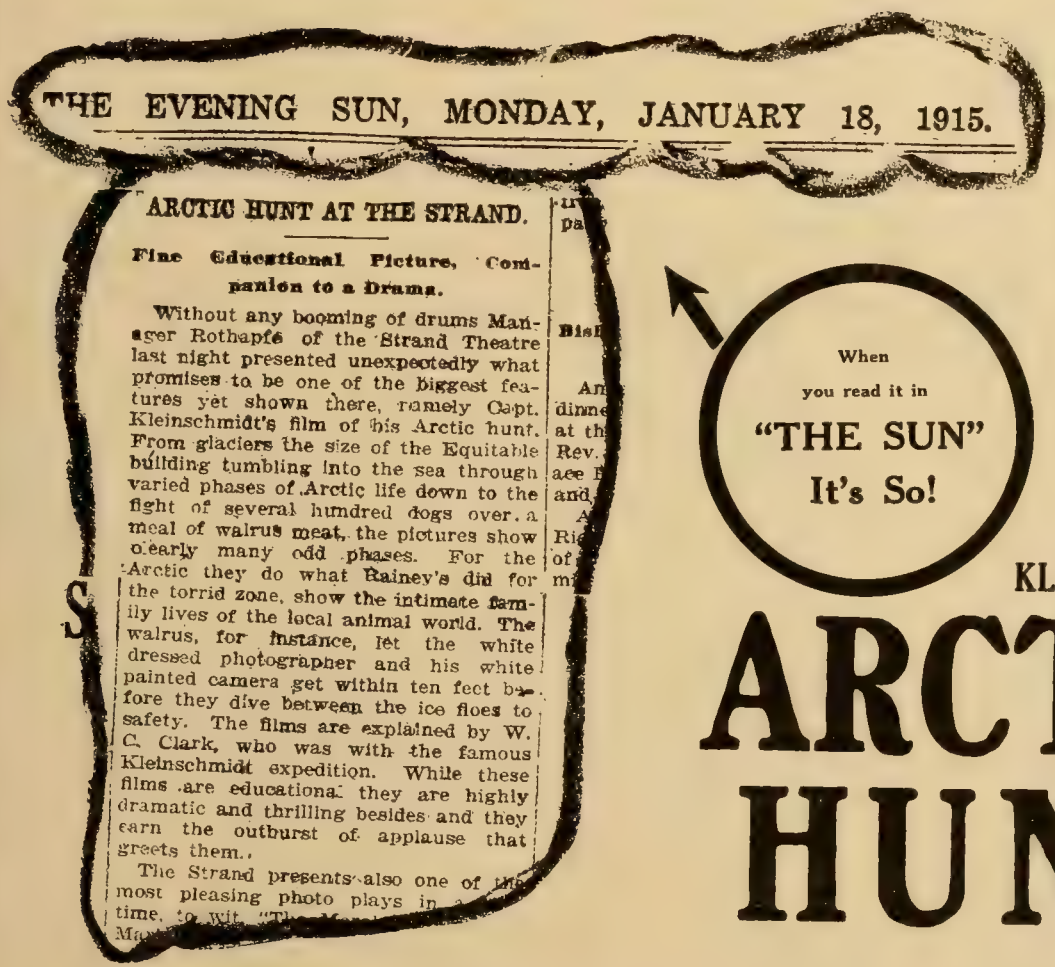
of the STRAND THEATRE

New York City's Phenomenally Successful Picture Theatre

is a wizard in selecting and arranging film Programs that satisfy his large and discriminating audiences.



THE EVENING SUN, MONDAY, JANUARY 18, 1915.

ARCTIC HUNT AT THE STRAND.

Fine Educational Picture, Companion to a Drama.

Without any booming of drums Manager Rothapfel of the Strand Theatre last night presented unexpectedly what promises to be one of the biggest features yet shown there, namely Capt. Kleinschmidt's film of his Arctic hunt. From glaciers the size of the Equitable building tumbling into the sea through varied phases of Arctic life down to the fight of several hundred dogs over a meal of walrus meat, the pictures show clearly many odd phases. For the Arctic they do what Rainey's did for the torrid zone, show the intimate family lives of the local animal world. The walrus, for instance, let the white dressed photographer and his white painted camera get within ten feet before they dive between the ice floes to safety. The films are explained by W. C. Clark, who was with the famous Kleinschmidt expedition. While these films are educational they are highly dramatic and thrilling besides and they earn the outburst of applause that greets them.

The Strand presents also one of the most pleasing photo plays in time, to wit, "Th...

When you read it in "THE SUN" It's So!

CAPT. F. E. KLEINSCHMIDT'S

ARCTIC HUNT

has delighted the large audiences at the Strand during all this week and will do the same wherever shown.

Some exceptionally good territory still open at bottom prices

WRITE OR WIRE AT ONCE TO

Arctic Film Company

Suite 1209—220 W. 42nd St., N. Y. Phone Bryant 3559

Write for bookings in New Jersey and New York States

WORLD FILM CORP.

MIGNON (Produced by the California Motion Picture Corporation—Five Parts).—The picture opens with the Gypsy camp and the assignation made there between Lothario and Musette, the daughter of Giarno, the leader of the Gypsies. Learning of their proposed meeting, Ciarno declares vengeance on Lothario, to whom Musette hastens to give warning. At his palace the Gypsy girl learns for the first time that her lover is already married and is the father of baby Mignon. Her wild despair in consequence causes her to throw herself over the cliffs into the ocean. In the midst of the excitement, following this suicide, baby Mignon slips unobserved from the palace and, wandering too near the brink, also falls over the cliff, but is providentially saved by an out-jetting bush.

Meanwhile Giarno has gone to the water's edge to reclaim the dead body of Musette from the waves and here sees Mignon's fall. Thinking to revenge himself on Lothario, he scrambles up the rocks and steals the child. This rapid succession of tragic events hastens the death of Lothario's wife, and Lothario, observing the disaster that follows his one moment's indiscretion, rushes insanely from the palace to begin his mad wanderings over western Europe. At this point the thread of the story is dropped to be picked up again years later, when Mignon has blossomed into maidenhood of 16 years. She follows Giarno's Gypsy train. He delights in cruelty toward her. He prizes her, however, because her exquisite dancing has become a source of revenue.

One day she refuses to dance before a party of ladies and gentlemen, but Giarno, blacksnake in hand, is driving her to it, when Lothario, who is wandering by in rags, and carrying his old harp, tries to interfere. The Gypsy leader is too much for him, however. Shortly afterward Wilhelm Meister rides into the scene and succeeds in quelling Giarno from whom he later buys Mignon. The Gypsy-stolen maiden falls in love with Wilhelm, but finds a rival in Filina, the celebrated actress. Having spied upon a love-scene between the two, Mignon becomes convinced that Wilhelm is not intended for her, so starts to wander away with Lothario, but she cannot so easily tear her affections from the man who rescued her from Giarno.

Leading Lothario, she follows Wilhelm again to a grand reception given by Frederick, one of Filina's suitors, in honor of the actress. She manages to smuggle herself and Lothario into the palace, again sees Filina making love to Wilhelm and, hoping to win favor and strengthen her own cause, steals to Filina's room and dresses herself in one of Filina's gowns. When she presents herself to Wilhelm in this attire, he commands her to take it off, but he shortly follows her up the stairs to soothe her wounded feelings.

This gives Filina an idea. The old count, Frederick's uncle, objects to the youth's infatuation for Filina. It is agreed, therefore, that Filina is to follow Wilhelm into her room, the count is to discover the two of them there and is to demand an explanation, after which the only course left open for Wilhelm is to marry the actress. The plot seems to work nicely. Wilhelm declares that Filina is to be his wife. It was thought that Mignon had left the room. Instead she had secreted herself behind some curtains and hears Wilhelm's words. Filina discovers the Gypsy after Wilhelm and the count have taken their departure, and locks Mignon in the room.

Wilhelm escorts Filina into the ball-room to announce their engagement, but scarcely have the words left his mouth when he detects the plot between the actress and the count. He, therefore, declares a change of mind and Frederick, in an impetuous desire to defend Filina's honor, challenges him to a duel. Some time before Mignon, in a burst of despair, has made a wish that the place might burn down. These thoughtless words take possession of Lothario's mad brain, and he proceeds to put the wish into execution. Wilhelm, who is in the midst of his duel with Frederick, sees the flames and rushes to learn that Mignon is locked in Filina's room. He makes his way through the fire to the doomed room, but Mignon, who wishes nothing better than death, now that she knows Wilhelm is to marry another, goes to the window and threatens to dash herself to the ground if he comes near her. Only after Wilhelm assures her that he loves but her, does she consent to the rescue. When they reach the courtyard, Wilhelm falls in a half-faint and submits to Filina's caresses, thinking that they are Mignon's. Mignon, observing this, believes Wilhelm's promises to her false and so again wanders away with Lothario. The two of them eventually happen near Lothario's former palace. The inn-keeper remembers him and leads him home. Here the recognition is consummated. The cloud rolls back from Lothario's mind. He is once again the master, and Mignon his daughter. Wilhelm, who has ridden out in search of the supposed Gypsy girl, finds her in new splendor and the romance has its ending in their plighted vows.

LIFE PHOTOFILM CORP.

THE AVALANCHE (Five Parts).—John Malvin Grey, a member of the New York Stock Exchange, pays court to Clara Fenton, and his affection is reciprocated by her. Miss Fenton, aspiring to extreme wealth and social distinction, contrary to the dictates of her heart, accepts the proposal of marriage of Peter Vaughn, a millionaire of somewhat advanced years. Helen Barrington, possessing a secret attachment for Grey, finally becomes his wife, when he realizes that his affection for Miss Fenton can be of no avail.

After her marriage to Vaughn, Clara, unable to subdue her deep love for Grey, at every opportune moment, appears in his company, endeavoring to continue her love affair with him, regardless of the fact that she is now married. At a dinner given by her, Peter Vaughn is shocked to observe the carrying on of his wife, and her persistent advances to Grey. At a climax, his attention being called to the affectionate attitude assumed by his wife toward Grey, his heart gives way, he collapses and expires.

In widowhood, regardless of the fact that Grey now leads a happy married life as a loved husband and father, she pursues her wiles and attention. Being repulsed by Grey, she conceives a plan of inveigling him with the aid of Ashton Cameron, in the purchase of Avalanche mining stock, and then to cause the market to drop, reducing Grey to all but ruin, coming to his assistance with her extreme wealth, raising the price of stock and restoring him to affluence.

She engages in this plan, believing that thereby she will place Grey under everlasting obligations to her, and possibly serve her ends in having him abandon his wife, to assume relations with her. By various tricks and subterfuges, she arouses the suspicions and jealousy of Mrs. Grey, until the moment arrives, when, believing that her husband is carrying on a secret liaison with Mrs. Vaughn, she determines to divorce him.

Grey's young sister, Rose, is in love with Philip Carlton, and throughout the entire play, reigns as the standby of Grey. Ashton Cameron, also in love with Rose, offers to assist Grey out of his difficulties on Avalanche stock, providing he uses his endeavors to procure Rose's consent to marry him. Grey refuses this assistance at the sacrifice of his sister's future happiness, and Cameron proceeds to carry out his agreement with Mrs. Vaughn to ruin Grey.

A street waif, Polly, who is injured in an accident by Grey's automobile, is adopted by him into the family as his charge. In the denouement at a gathering at the office of Shaw, Grey's family lawyer, Polly reveals that she has observed Grey repulse Mrs. Vaughn, and declare to her that he loves his wife and will have nothing to do with her.

Mrs. Vaughn is confronted with the proof of her various intrigues and diabolical schemes to arouse Mrs. Grey's jealousy, and finally admits the true situation and her own despicable actions. Grey is reconciled to his wife, and Clara Vaughn is left to pursue her way in the world, rejected and alone.

THANHOUSER SYNDICATE CORP.

ZUDORA (Episode Ten—Reels 19 and 20—"The Gentlemen Crooks and the Lady).—After Zudora's thrilling escape from the kidnappers as narrated in Episode Nine, having no suspicion of Madame Duval's part in the plot against her, she continues her acquaintance with that beautiful but distinctly dangerous lady. Little does she dream that Madame Duval's home is the center of a web of crime which has its strands in the furthermost parts of the world. It happens that just at this time Madame Duval and a certain Captain Radcliffe, who is an ardent suitor of hers, are interested in a half-burnt scrap of paper on which is written in a tremulous hand, news of the discovery of some valuable diamond mines. The worthy couple are awaiting the arrival of one, Bruce, a member of the band over which Madame Duval has supreme control, who at that very moment is concealing a bag of jewels in the room of the transatlantic liner on which he is coming to New York. Both Bruce and the scrap of scorched paper have some connection with Zudora, who is evidently under the constant surveillance of Madame Duval's band, for coincident with Bruce's arrival, the girl's home is ransacked and it is there that the mysterious burnt paper is found.

Meanwhile John Storm, Zudora's sweetheart, has visited the office of Tom Hunt, a detective, and after this conference Hunt and Jim Baird, a reporter, are seen waiting on the pier for the arrival of the liner with Bruce. Disguised as a customs official, Hunt searches Bruce's luggage in vain. He finds nothing incriminating. The reporter, however, trails him. He sees Bruce enter the mansion of Madame Duval by a rear entrance and following close on his heels, in the basement of the house, Baird finds a desperate struggle he is bound and gagged and then, after a conference of his captors, he is taken to a deserted hut, where worse threatens to befall him.

In the meantime Madame Duval and Captain Radcliffe, seated in the saloon, are apprised of the arrival of Bruce, by means of a wonderful fountain, in which a small spurt of water changes its course from upward to downward on the arrival of any stranger. A moment later, the draperies at the side of the room part and he enters, stepping from a secret elevator, which has brought him up from the basement. He shows traces of the struggle with Baird, and after some explanation Madame Duval receives him enthusiastically. All her plans have been successful and she playfully forestalls the ardent advances of the debonair Captain Radcliffe. She touches a secret spring on the ivory table-top and it slides back and discloses a wealth of precious stones beneath, while Bruce and the captain stand by fascinated.

To celebrate the success of her schemes, Madame Duval gives a dinner party at a well known cafe that night, and it happens that John Storm and Zudora are also dining there. As Madame Duval and her escorts pass she greets Zudora, who does not realize that the friendship of the clever adventuress for her is all a part of her daring scheme, and asks her to join her party. Zudora and Storm accept, but they are soon to be disillusioned about the character of Madame Duval. Returning home later in the evening, Zudora discovers that her rooms have been looted. While John Storm and she are examining the traces left by the robbers, Tom Hunt, the detective suddenly appears. He has been following a clue to the leaders of the international band of criminals headed by Madame Duval, which he has discovered, following the disappearance of Jim Baird. A mysterious message, indicating that they should go to a certain place, left in Zudora's rooms, gives him the missing link in the chain, and he tells Storm and Zudora his suspicions about the adventuress, whose influence is so far-reaching.

So together the three go to the deserted hut, where Baird, bound and strung up, has been imprisoned. Several of the gang have remained to torment their victim, and listening outside, Storm and Hunt decide that desperate measures are necessary. Battering down the door they attack Baird's captors and a savage struggle follows. For a time it seems that the odds are against them, but in the end the thugs are vanquished and Baird rescued. When he has told the story of his adventures, a light dawns on Zudora as to the character of the beautiful Madame Duval.

APEX.

THE STRIKERS (Four Parts).—William Mansell, a poor laborer without work and without sustenance, with a sick wife and little son on his hands, out of desperation, steals a handful of wood, for which he is arrested and sentenced to fourteen months in jail. The shock of the arrest is too much for the sick wife, and she dies. After a few months in jail, Mansell, too old to stand the strain, succumbs, and the child, Thomas, left an orphan, is adopted by Buntingford, a mechanic.

Eighteen years later, Thomas, employed by the Kingbridge Iron Works, has become an expert mechanic, and has invented a blasting machine, which the directors of the iron works desire to purchase. Meanwhile, the employees of the iron works, dissatisfied with their wages, ask for an increase, and, being refused, threaten to strike. The directors, aware of Mansell's influence with his fellow workmen, offer him $50,000 for his invention, with the condition that he use his influence with them to prevent the strike. This he refuses to do, and at the meeting that night Mansell's burning speech arouses the enthusiasm of the workmen, and they vote to strike immediately.

Several weeks have elapsed, and the strikers, becoming desperate, threaten the lives of Kingbridge and his daughter, but Mansell quiets the angry mob, and conducts the president and his daughter to a place of safety. Buntingford, meanwhile, in desperate straits, steals Mansell's invention, with the intention of blowing up the factory. Mansell, on discovering his machine has been stolen, rushes madly to the works, and reaches there only in time to discover the fuse burnt just to exploding point. Hastily catching it, the machine explodes in his hand, and he is badly injured. He is arrested, and is just on the point of being sentenced, when the real culprit, Buntingford, steps forward and assumes the responsibility for the whole affair.

Annie Kingbridge, the managing director's daughter, whose life Mansell had previously saved in a runaway horse incident, instinctively believing Mansell to be innocent, interests herself on his behalf, and on his release she pleads with him to use his influence with the men to end the strike and all its attendant miseries and privations. After several futile attempts by the men's leaders, in which Man-

Cosmofotofilm Co

"Where the REAL FEATURES come from"

PRESENTS

THE GREATEST OF ALL FEATURES

They have yet offered to State Right Buyers

"THE BLACK SPOT"

(Multiple Reels) (Copyright 1914)

Produced by that Great American Producer, GEORGE LOANE TUCKER

A Tremendously Powerful Story by JOHN ALWIN

Marvellously Enacted by a Great ALL-STAR Cast

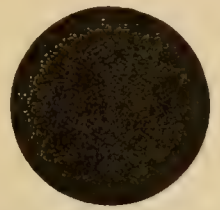
Featuring that Brilliant American Star, JANE GAIL

READ THE

In the

M. P. WORLD

of January 2nd



STRONG REVIEWS!

In the

M. P. NEWS

of January 2nd

STATE RIGHTS NOW SELLING!

Exhibitors are ALREADY DEMANDING this big Money-Maker!

ANOTHER SMASHING TRIUMPH!

"THE VICTORIA CROSS"

A WONDERFUL FEATURE OF SUPERB HEROISM

A POWERFUL APPEAL FOR PEACE

Produced by the Peerless American Producer, HAROLD SHAW

Story by ANNE & BANNISTER MERWIN. Copyright 1914 (Multiple Reels)

READ THE REVIEWS! "M. P. World" and "M. P. News"—both Jan. 16th.

COMING! COMING!

"INCOMPARABLE BELLAIRS"

Copyright 1914

Story by AGNES SWEETMAN CASTLE and EGERTON CASTLE

"1914" BY "RITA"

Copyright 1915

BOTH WONDERFUL FEATURES

For Particulars, address us at

WORLD'S TOWER BUILDING, 501—110 W. 40th St., New York

Cosmofotofilm Co

sell declined to take part, and on Annie's strong representation and entreaties, he decides to lead another deputation. At the conference he offers his invention to the firm for half the amount they had offered him, provided they meet the men's demands half way. This arrangement is agreeable to the directors, and the strike is brought to a close.

In recognition of his ability, Mansell is appointed superintendent of the iron works, and marries Annie Kingbridge, the president's daughter.

THE TEMPLE OF ROGUES (Three Parts).—Paul Grant, Chief of the Temple of Rogues, receives information that a shipment of gold is to be made to the State Bank and he plans to secure the haul. Brown, Chief Detective of the State Bank, is instructed by the authorities to take personal charge of the shipment. Brown, however, decides that it would be safer to ship the gold by motor instead of by train, and sends a telegram to that effect to the bank. The messenger boy is overpowered by Jacques, assistant to Grant, and he is brought before the gang. The telegram is read, and Grant forms a scheme to meet Brown's change of plans.

That day, while the motor trucks are coming down the road with the bullion, guarded by the police, an aeroplane drops a bomb, blowing up the truck carrying the police. The gang secures the bullion and make off with it to their rendezvous, an abandoned wharf. The outrage is discovered, and Brown, only stunned by the shock, is recovered from the debris. That night the gang of rogues hold a meeting in the temple and the master decides that it would be too dangerous to try and dispose of the gold in that port, and to ship it to another port that afternoon. After the meeting Jacques becomes jealous of Grant's attentions to his sweetheart, Nita, and after a violent quarrel with Grant, he leaves, vowing vengeance. He sends a note to Detective Brown advising him of the gang's whereabouts, and this is overheard by Nita, who advises Grant.

Jacques meanwhile returns to the rendezvous to see his revenge completed. Grant, knowing of the plot to have him captured, inveigles Jacques into a quarrel. A desperate struggle ensues, and Grant throws Jacques through the trap-door into the river. Grant immediately has the gold removed to his ship, and Brown, arriving at the wharf, finds that the bird has flown. Jacques has only been temporarily stunned, and is picked up by a passing boat. Arriving at the wharf, he informs Brown of the plans of the gang, and they follow to the ship. Unable to capture Grant single handed, Brown enlists the aid of the armed police and the territorials, and after a desperate battle the gang is captured. Jacques and Grant have a hand-to-hand battle in the water, in which Jacques is drowned, and Grant, after a hard struggle for freedom, is captured by the police.

THE VULTURES OF THE COAST (Three Parts).—Robert Green, son of a poor fisherman living on the banks of the Southampton waters, and Eleanor, the ship owner's daughter, are desperately in love with each other. The ship owner, discovering the real state of affairs, and desiring to part the lovers for reasons of his own, persuades Robert to sign for a six months' cruise aboard his vessel, the "Venus." After the ship has been out for several weeks, it is reported lost with all hands on board.

The ship owner is pressed by Mr. Johnstone, his principal creditor, for a bill for $10,000, which Johnstone offers to cancel if Eleanor will marry his son. Eleanor is coerced into this alliance, and she, believing Robert dead, and anxious to save her father from ruin, accepts the proposal.

Meanwhile, Benjamin, the only survivor on board the "Venus," is discovered in a dying condition by smugglers, who ransacked the vessel for plunder, and he is taken to their cave in a desolate island, resuscitated and made one of them against his will.

One day the yacht of Mr. Clark, multi-millionire, approaches the island, and to please the whims of his little son, a rowing boat is sent to the shore where the smugglers surprise the party and kidnap the child. While the terms of ransom are being made, Robert manages to send word to the yacht that he will save the boy and himself as well, which he successfully does, and, as reward, receives from Mr. Clark, a check for $10,000.

Robert arrives home the day before the marriage of Eleanor to Johnstone's son. At the church door next morning, Eleanor recognizes Robert in the crowd, a scene ensues, and she is taken home ill, before the wedding takes place. Robert then demonstrates that the power of money is at least as great as the power of love, and, pulling out of his pocket the check for $10,000, hands it to the ship owner and asks him to discharge his indebtedness to Johnstone out of it and be released of any obligation in regards to his daughter. All obstacles removed, Robert and Eleanor are happily married.

FOR KING OR KAISER (Three Parts).—Adolph Schultz, a German widower with one son, marries Lily Steele, an English girl. A son is born to them, and when of age he joins the British navy, while his half brother is educated in Germany. On holidays the boys, Gustave and Jack, meet at the home of their parents, and both fall in love with Lucy, Jack's cousin.

War breaks out, and both boys are ordered to return to their stations, Gustave to join a German regiment, and Jack to the British battleship. Before leaving Jack asks Lucy to marry him, but she tells him that Gustave has just asked her the same thing, and that she will not decide until they return from the war. Letters are received from the boys, but Gustave writes only to Lucy telling her of his love, while Jack writes to his parents, describing the battles on sea and land.

On duty, Jack receives orders to go on shore to rescue some wounded from a Red Cross station, which had been destroyed by the enemy's shell, and is captured by Gustave, in charge of a German brigade. Gustave promises to let him go free if he will promise not to press his suit for Lucy's hand. As Jack has some important papers in his possession, he promises.

The war is over. Jack and Gustave return home together, and Gustave sees visions of wedded bliss with Lucy. She, however, finds Jack's diary which gives an account of his promise to Gustave, and she decides quickly. Placing a ring on her finger, she surprises Gustave in the act of relating the story of his adventures on the battlefield, and announces her engagement to Jack. Gustave is stunned for the moment, and, believing that Jack has broken his promise, rushes to his room, where he accuses him. Jack denies the accusation, and a heated struggle ensues, which is interrupted by the entrance of Lucy, who surmises what has happened. She shows Gustave the page from Jack's diary, and Gustave, ashamed of his conduct, withdraws from the room.

WHEN LONDON SLEEPS (Three Parts).—Hilda Corrode, a noted circus rider, packs her belongings and, with her child in her arms, leaves her husband's roof and returns to the giddy world of the circus. She gradually conceives, an affection for a fellow-performer David Engleheart, but he loves Queenie Carruthers, a clever wire-walker. Meanwhile Hilda's husband learns that his uncle's fortune has been left to his granddaughter, Queenie Carruthers. Only in the event of her death does the money revert to Captain Haynes. The Captain's plan is swiftly made up. He will get the money by marrying the girl!

He offers a foul bargain to Hilda. "Help me to marry Queenie," he exclaims, "and I'll help you win the man you love." Gradually her own passion masters her, and she agrees to the arrangement.

Queenie is comfortably installed in the great London hotel, but the captain is hot on the track of his victim. At one time he enters the hotel, and forcibly embraces the girl, who angrily orders him out of the place. He then proposes that Hilda and himself should lure Queenie to a certain night club. Hilda, at first reluctant, eventually consents, and sends a telegram to Queenie, which purports to come from David. No sooner is the telegram received when Queenie is off to the address given.

In the meantime David has duly come with his friend, Sammy, to Queenie's hotel, only to find that Queenie is out. Sammy picks up the false telegram. He smells a rat; then quickly writes on the telegram that he has gone to Halliwell Mansions, and bids David follow at once.

David comes upon the scene, and leads Queenie from the room, passing through the gay dancers, and knocking down any who bar his progress. Thus the captain's plot has miscarried.

Hilda has returned home and found her little one sick. Queenie calls upon her enemy, and the two rivals are reconciled. Hilda confides her little one to Queenie's care and flees. The captain, grown desperate, determines to get hold of her money in the only way open to him now—by bringing about her death. In company with his valet, he empties a tin of petrol over the ground, and sets light to the building. Soon the building is ablaze. The flames break through the girl's apartment, and Queenie, tying the baby to her back, climbs to the roof. Summoning all her courage to her aid, she boldly walks along the telegraph wires that stretch from the roof to a neighboring house. She and the child are rescued from their perilous position by firemen. The two criminals fall into the hands of the police, and the lovers are united.

PATHE EXCHANGE, INC.

BEYOND HIS FONDEST HOPES.—Tony, a little newsboy, witnesses the advent of a dainty Miss, who disturbs his otherwise carefree and happy-go-lucky existence. Falling asleep on his pile of newspapers, he dreams that the little Miss breaks down the barrier of wealth and gives him a hearty welcome. She invites him for a ride in her large touring car and his happiness is supreme. Driving to the seashore, they soon get into mischief. Tony, after plaguing one of the life-guards, becomes greatly aggravated when he sees that the saver of human lives has become his rival. He soon eliminates his massive rival, however, who seeks solace from another bathing nymph.

Miss Ann Teak also hies herself to the "briny," and decides to go in for a swim. The two mischievous little imps cause Miss Ann Teak great embarrassment by taking her clothes and transferring them to another bath house.

In the meantime, they re-enter the touring machine and are driven back to the little girl's home, where Tony is separated from her by the stern governess who drives him away. He is tormented by a gang of young rowdies, and in the excitement of his dream he awakes and realizes that the awakening has been a cruel one.

CLOSE - CROPPED CLIPPINGS.—Punctual Pete prepares the "Shaved in Silence" shop for the day's business. He is as handy as a man with five thumbs. Gertie, almost a soubrette, looking for a job, decides that she is willing to try anything once. Seeing a sign in the barber shop window advertising for a lady barber, she beats it home and brushes up on the tonsorial art. Hastening back to the shop, she passes herself off as an experienced lady barber and lands the job. With fifteen minutes' experience, she is ready to meet all-comers. Pat Rooney, a son of the Emerald Isle, decided to be "duded up." Gertie tackles him and gets the decision. Josh, a farmer, with a beard like a mattress, is the next victim. He also "gets his." The patrons generally make their exit much quicker than their entrance. Gertie, chancing to a get a flash at the bank-roll of a "live one," grabs the roll and beats it for healthier territory.

MOUNT DORE (Picturesque France—On the same reel as foregoing).—Mount Dore is one of the highest peaks in the mountainous section of France. It rears its rugged head like a sentinel over the peaceful valley. Reposing on its summit is a medieval castle, majestic even in its ruins. It is slowly succumbing to the ravages of the elements. The nearby lakes are mirror-like in their clearness, reflecting the activities of the every day life. Of intense interest to the tourist, as a relic of the prehistoric past, is the open sepulcher, a natural rock formation.

SAVED FROM HIMSELF (Three Parts—Balboa).—Mabel Merritt receives a letter from her chum, Lillian, requesting her to procure her jewel-case which she had left at home, and hastens away on her errand. John Macklyn, once a wealthy man but now reduced to the lowest dregs, resorts to burglary to eke out an existence, and, spotting a house to rob, he gains access to it. In the meantime Mabel arrives at Lillian's home to procure the forgotten jewels for her friend. While searching for the jewels, she hears suspicious sounds, and is horrified to be confronted by Macklyn, the burglar. She leads him to believe that she is also a thief and that she is there for the same purpose that he is. He confesses to her that it is his first attempt at burglary and tells her the story of his dissipated career. He inherited the business of the Macklyn Safe Company from his father, and he wasted his competence in riotous living. He became engaged to a young lady, but her love also was soon sacrificed for his love for strong drink, thereby wrecking both his own happiness and the girl's. Soon after that he was forced to close down his business, and his effects were sold under the hammer. Being then forced to seek employment from others, his task proved futile.

Mabel listens to his story with absorbed interest, and her sympathy for him is aroused, and she is overcome. Recovering her mental poise, and while he has gone to get her a drink of water, she 'phones for the police. He returns with the drink and suspects that she has 'phoned for help. Repenting for her duplicity, she determines to let him escape before the arrival of the police.

In the meantime, by a strange coincidence, the house is burglarized by other crooks, who are unfortunate enough to fall into the hands of the police. Seeing in this an opportunity to be generous to Macklyn, she averts suspicion from him by telling the police captain that he is her personal friend. She determines to play the reformer further, and through her efforts and interest she procures a position for Macklyn. He determines to make good, and by honest and conscientious efforts succeeds in firmly entrenching himself in his new position. Accompanying Mabel to a reception at the home of mutual friends, Macklyn comes face to face with his sweetheart of bygone days. The old love is awakened in her, and she pleads with Macklyn to come back to her, but he is obdurate. It is not the same with Mabel, however, for a deeper love is rooted in their hearts, and they determine to blot out the past in the light of their new love.

You Cannot Progress Without
The Moving Picture World.

ALL STAR FEATURE DIST. INC.

Sol. L. Lesser Pres.

ANNOUNCE THE PURCHASE OF

SALISBURY'S PICTURES

HUNTING WILD GAME IN AMERICA

FOR THE STATES OF

CALIFORNIA ARIZONA & NEVADA

SIX THRILLING REELS ATTESTED TO BE A MASTERPIECE ON WILD LIFE IN OUR OWN GREAT COUNTRY FAR DIFFERENT TO ANYTHING EVER PRODUCED.

YOU SEE VIVIDLY DEPICTED ON THE SCREEN

Don't Miss Seeing These Pictures

AMONG THE SUBJECTS SHOWN ARE

The Thrilling Capture of Ferocious Lions and Lynx

Treeing and Roping of Wild Animals

Animals and Birds of Prey

A Spectacular California Goose Hunt

The Game Birds of the West

The Life of the Trout

A Quail Hunt Over Trained Dogs

Ducks, Geese, Cormorant, Pelican, Great Blue Herons and many other birds in the rookeries of the U. S. Biological Survey Reservations.

READ WHAT OTHERS SAY

"When we say that we consider these pictures the most wonderful before the public, we speak sincerely."
TURNER and DAHNKEN.
(Tivoli Theatre)

"Everyone should see them." — CALIFORNIA FISH and GAME COMMISSION.

"Greater and far superior to the Rainey Hunt" — LUTHER BURBANK

State Right Buyers: Wire or write
SALISBURY WILD LIFE PICTURES
2630 Menlo Ave., Los Angeles, Cal.

FOR BOOKINGS IN YOUR TERRITORY COMMUNICATE WITH

All Star Feature Distributors

INC.

San Francisco
234 Eddy Street

Los Angeles
514 West 8th Street

WE BUY ALL THE BIG ONES

THE EXPLOITS OF ELAINE (Episode Five—"The Poisoned Room"—Two Parts—Jan. 25).—The Clutching Hand, outwitted in his last diabolical attempt on Craig Kenned's life, has recourse to a stratagem even more fiendish in conception. Disguised as a telephone inspector he is admitted to the Dodge home by Michael, a servant, and accomplice of the Clutching Hand. Attended by Michael he at once goes to Elaine's room where he dismises his confederate to execute his scheme alone. He sprays the walls and rugs with invisible powder first protecting himself with a face guard. Through a mirror he accidentally sees Michael watching him. The servant gets a brutal blow for his curiosity and is threatened with death. Elaine's bedroom, satisfactorily "fixed," the Clutching Hand descends to the cellar where he continues his work. Next morning Elaine and her collie dog suffer an illness from a cause unknown. While in bed she receives a letter from Clutching Hand, warning her that her present illness will end in death on the morrow unless she dispenses with the services of Craig Kennedy in apprehending the murderer of her father. She wires Kennedy, who with Jameson, rushes to her home. Elaine's doctor cannot diagnose her strange indisposition, but Kennedy, seeing the condition of the dog, asks leave to take it to his laboratory to make a test of its blood. The dog's blood is found to contain arsenic. That point settled, the baffling question remains: how is the arsenic administered?

Meanwhile, Michael, infuriated by the Clutch-Hand's treatment, determines to betray him. To this end he makes an appointment with Kennedy in a cheap hotel. They meet, and just as Michael is about to say the word that will deliver the Clutching Hand into Kennedy's power, he is slain by a poisoned blow-gun dart, wrapped around with another warning to Craig Kennedy. Elaine at home in bed is startled by a stone crashing through her window onto her bed. The stone is wrapped with another threatening message from the Clutching Hand. Elaine is overcome with fear and as the maid admits Kennedy and Jameson she shows them the ugly threat. Kennedy tells her that she is suffering from arsenic poisoning, although he is at sea as to how it is being administered. Jameson, who has been leaning against the wall, has his shoulder smeared with some of the deadly powder. Kennedy's quick eye detects it and traces the villainy to the water tank in the cellar. This trouble overcome, Kennedy, with the aid of his microscope, tries to explain the significance of some clue in the two letters of the Clutching Hand when both he and Elaine are paralyzed with fright, as a poisoned blow-gun dart, the same as killed Michael, impales the two notes to the bedpost. Attached to the dart, another note of the same tenor as the previous ones. Elaine implores Kennedy to give up the chase, but his fighting spirit is roused and he declares his unalterable intention to proceed in the face of all threats, as Elaine gazes up at him in mingled fear and admiration.

IT'S A LONG, LONG WAY TO TIPPERARY (Three Parts—January).—One of Molly Malloy's admirers is Mike Maloney, a Nationalist volunteer and a great favorite of her father. Mollie, the daughter of a Nationalist, is the sweetheart of Paddy Rooney, a staunch Ulsterman. The mutual regard for these two suitors is far from affectionate. They are constantly at "daggers ends." Mike, however, in favor with Molly's father, enjoys more of her home society, though less of her love than Paddy. The two suitors are stopped in the midst of a brawl by the only influence that could possibly end their hostilities—the announcement that war had been declared. They are all excited by the fiery speech of Molly's father. The squire, Sir Charles O'Moy, of the landed gentry, in a ringing speech calls for recruits from his tenants. Paddy enlists and goes to pay a visit to his love.

"It's a long, long way to Tipperary, but my heart's right there." This rollicking air livens the nights 'round the camp fire at the front. Paddy, disconsolate, and longing for his macushla, lets the burden of his heart pour forth in a typical letter of sentiment. Paddy and Mike, in the same regiment are "two minds with a single thought," though not as "two hearts that beat as one." This "single thought" keeps them ever suspicious and antagonistic and their comrades spend most of their waking hours in keeping down this civil war in the midst of the greater struggle. Marching in the dead of night their regiment meets a scouting party of the enemy. During the sortie Mike is wounded and Paddy saves the day by turning a Maxim on the enemy. Mike is invalided home. Back again in dear old Tipperary Molloy's father insists on the wounded man sharing the cabin. In the radius of Molly's charm Mike recovers sufficiently to renew his courtship but is at last conscious of the unfairness of pressing his suit with his rival away on the firing line. At the front Paddy's regiment prepares for a night attack. Both he and Sir Charles O'Moy's son volunteer for a dangerous scouting advance. They discover the enemy and the regiments engage in battle. When the roll is called it is discovered that Paddy and O'Moy are missing. Mike, fully recovered, is again on scout duty. He is discovered by the enemy and retreats to a seemingly deserted shack. Inside he finds Paddy and O'Moy who tell him they have been hiding for six weeks surrounded by the enemy. Mike knows that the enemy has seen but one man enter the shack. Clearly it's up to him to leave in order that the others may be saved. Mike, his love for his country dwarfing all his lesser desires and with "Tipperary" on his lips, marches forth to his doom. Paddy is spared to Molly and Tipperary.

THE EXPLOITS OF ELAINE (Episode Six—"The Vampire"—Two Parts—Feb. 1).—Elaine Dodge and her lawyer and admirer, Perry Bennett, are endeavoring to track down the Clutching Hand. To provide against the future murderous assaults of the Clutching Hand, Kennedy has a pistol license issued to Elaine, in whom he has more than a professional interest, and presents her with an automatic. That night Elaine has an opportunity to try her marksmanship on an emissary of the Clutching Hand. She fires at a dark form framed in the window of her bedroom and sees the man crumple and fall. He is picked up by a waiting accomplice, put in an automobile and driven off. He is driven to the headquarters of the Clutching Hand. That perverted genius, merciless with his enemies, rings up a Dr. Martin, giving a fictitious address for the call. Two of Clutching Hand's henchmen are in wait for him. They overpower and blindfold him and drive away to the Clutching Hand's house in the suburbs. Arrived there, his eyes are unbandaged and he professes the opinion that the wounded accomplice will die from loss of blood unless saved by transfusion, in which event the giver would himself be liable to die. The Clutching Hand vows that she who shot him shall supply the blood. He goes with an accomplice to Elaine's home and after a struggle chloroforms her and carries her to a couch.

At a very early hour the next day a damaged suit of armor is called for by expressmen in league with the Clutching Hand, and it is only after the wagon has driven off that it is noticed that Elaine is missing. Craig Kennedy and his assistant, Jameson, arrive on the scene. Kennedy notices the urgent dumb pleading of Elaine's collie dog. Led by the collie, he and Jameson on the foot-board of a taxi trail the racing dog in an attempt to find Elaine. They track the express wagon to an old shack where they find the broken armor but not Elaine. Meanwhile the "expressmen" have taken Elaine to the Clutching Hand. He orders the doctor to make the transfusion. Seeing that Elaine is unwilling, the doctor at first refuses but is coerced by the threat of instant death. Another party searching for the missing doctor, and assisted by bloodhounds, come upon his auto. They are met by Kennedy and Jameson. The hounds are given the scent of the armor in which Elaine has been carried off and immediately take up the trail. Elaine's life blood is fast flowing into the exhausted arteries of the desperado. Suddenly the baying of the hounds is heard and in a moment more the police are at the door. The Clutching Hand, desperate, wavers between sticking to his pal and escape, but is decided in his course by the dying criminal who urges him to go. The police batter in the door just in time to see their prey disappear through a sliding panel in the wall. The blood transfusion is immediately stopped. The wounded desperado with his last breath scorns to squeal, but Kennedy is thankful to learn that Elaine has not been fatally weakened.

THE COVETED HERITAGE (Balboa—Three Parts—January).—Arnold Truesdell, a rich invaild, requests his secretary, Robert Sheridan, to summon his lawyer. Truesdell is the foster-father of Marion Robertson, the child of his bosom friend who died some time ago. His happiness with the little girl was soon dissipated, for she was kidnapped by a gypsy whose enmity he had aroused. Truesdell dictates his will, leaving the estate to the missing child, and in the event of her not being found within a year the property would revert to the secretary and Margaret Frazer, the housekeeper. After making the will Truesdell passes away.

Through the years following her kidnapping Marion continues to live with the gypsies. Tiring of their tyranny she runs away. Hearing the sound of a church organ she timidly enters the sacred edifice. She is accorded a cordial welcome, and is adopted by one of the women of the congregation.

Meantime, the required year having nearly elapsed, the secretary and housekeeper are confident that they will inherit the estate. The minister of the little church has in the meantime fallen a prey to Marion's charms. Hoe, one of the gypsies, who is also in love with Marion, searches for her. Noticing in a newspaper that Marion has been discovered by the attorney of the estate, the secretary determines to have her put out of the way and hires two gangsters to kidnap her. They accomplish the deed. Bound and placed in a trunk she is thrown overboard. Her continued absence causes great alarm and the minister seeks her. His search leads him to the waterfront. He overhears the kidnapper and the secretary discussing her disposal and 'phones for the police, who soon get on the secretary's trail. The trunk is found by Gypsy Joe, who is horrified to discover its contents. Gypsy Joe takes Marion back to her home, where she arrives in time to see the arch conspirators being led away by officers of the law. Realizing then the great love which has been awakened in the minister's heart, her happiness seems complete, the only shadow being the fact that she must discourage the love of the gypsy boy.

QUEEN MARGARET (In Five Parts—A Dramatization of the famous novel by Dumas, Marguerite De Valois—January).—Everyone is familiar with the story of the Huguenots, the French Protestants at the time of the Inquisition, when the mere fact that any one was a Protestant was deemed sufficient ground for sending him to prison and to torture.

This photo-drama depicts one phase of the strife between the French Protestants and the power of Queen Catherine de Medici, probably one of the most cruel women who ever lived. King Henry of Navarre, the leader of the Huguenots, was married to the sister of King Charles of France. Although Henry was recognized leader of the Protestants his marriage was recognized as it was thought he could be eventually persuaded to turn Catholic and bring back the people with him. He was lured to Paris and there kept a virtual prisoner, although it was announced that he was free to go as he pleased. Wishing to return to Navarre so he could unite his forces, Henry received the assistance of some of his friends in planning to escape. Catherine de Medici, however, kept such a strict watch on his movements that the plot was discovered and the massacre of St. Bartholomew was ordered when Henry refused to change his conviction. De la Mole and Cocomas, leaders of the rival factions, meet and after a quarrel, fight a duel which ends disastrously for Cocomas. La Mole takes him to his apartment and cares for him until he is better. Then the former enemies swear eternal friendship. At the time of the second massacre La Mole seeks refuge in the apartment of King Henry where he is bidden by Queen Margaret. Cocomas finds refuge with the Duchess de Neveres, a close friend of Queen Margaret. Much impressed with the beauty of their protectors, La Mole and Cocomas go to a chemist and buy from him some wax figures supposed to be able to aid the little god Cupid in securing favor with the object of the affections. Queen Catherine de Medici, furious at being foiled in her effort to do away with Henry of Navarre, decided to have him poisoned. Her plans, however, miscarry, and the poison intended for Henry causes the death of her own son, King Charles. Seeking a scapegoat she visits the room of La Mole and Cocomas and finding the wax figures has them accused of the crime of resorting to sorcery to cause the death of the King. The chemist is forced to swear that the figures were bought by the two men and that they represented the dead King. The court declares them guilty and condemns them to torture and death. In spite of the efforts of Queen Margaret and the Duchess de Neveres the sentence is carried out.

KRITERION SERVICE.

(The following are synopses of the pictures to be released on the Kriterion Program during the week of Monday, January 25, to Saturday, January 30, inclusive).

FALSELY ACCUSED (Monty-Two Parts).—Jennie Lee, a shop girl, is romantic and spurns the love of Dave Clark, a carpenter. Brady, store detective, and Myrtle, co-worker in Jennie's department, are thieves. After an inventory of the stock, the manager informs Brady that he must either find the thieves, who are stealing so much valuable lace, or forfeit his position. Myrtle and Brady become worried and decide to put the blame on Jennie. They hide some of the lace in her coat pocket, and when a search in instituted the detectives find the lace. She is arrested. Dave Clark does a little detective work on his own account to help vindicate Jennie, and discovers Myrtle and Brady selling lace to a "fence." When Myrtle realizes the game is up she tells on Brady, hoping thereby to extricate herself. They are, however, arrested and Jennie is freed. She now, realizing Clark's real worth, agrees to marry him.

ONE NIGHT (Pyramid).—Martha and Ruben, living in the same house, are harboring a mild hatred for each other. Martha goes out one night followed a few minutes later by Ruben, who goes to mail a letter. As Ruben has no key he puts a broom against the front door. Martha returns and shuts the door, locking Ruben out. Ruben returns, not knowing Martha has gone out, and believes there are burglars. He calls the police and Martha, hearing them, opens a window, runs from the house to obtain police assistance. The two squads of police meet in Martha's room, where matters are explained, while Martha and Ruben give each other a "good night" kiss.

WINTER RESORTS (Nolege).—Some southern winter resorts showing scenes from West Indies and Cuban cities, where summer weather and sports are relished all winter.

RELEASED: For Illinois, Wisconsin, Indiana, Iowa, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota and Kentucky.

"The Blue Mouse"

With THE FAVORITE AMERICAN STAR COMEDIAN

MADGE LESSING

in her most famous title role

This is positively the greatest comedy ever made. IT'S A SCREAM! Bookings are going like wildfire—get it now.

THE BLUE MOUSE broke all theatrical records of the entire world at advanced prices. It is now brought to your door at nominal prices. Don't miss it. 6,000 feet of perfect photography—EVERY INCH A LAUGH.

We also own

"THE LITTLEST REBEL"

for the following states: Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan, Indiana, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Montana, Washington, Wyoming, Colorado, Utah, Nevada, Oregon, Kentucky, Idaho and Alaska.

Get in touch with any of our following branch offices AT ONCE for bookings!

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—105 Temple Court Building—Harry Rowe, Mgr.
MILWAUKEE, WIS.—Klondyke Feature Film Exchange—Manhattan Building
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—Empress Feature Film Co.—47 Willoughby Building
DETROIT, MICH.—Progressive Film & Equipment Co.—97 Woodward Avenue

Write for Complete List of Features

PHOTOPLAY PRODUCTIONS RELEASING CO.

A. M. GOLLOS, President

G. & G. FILM CO.

GEORGE GOLLOS, President

Mallers Building, 5 South Wabash Avenue, Chicago

PREJUDICE CONQUERED (Paragon—Two Parts).—Lionel Desmond marries against the wishes of his father and is disinherited. He sets up a law office, but makes little success. His father, feeling lonesome, sends for his young son, Donald, to come home from college. However, he is not much comfort to his father as he is inclined to wildness. Marion, Lionel's wife, plans to bring about a reconciliation.

Lionel's father learns of Donald's infatuation for an actress and goes to Lionel to have him break it. Donald refuses to listen to Lionel and also refuses to reveal the woman's name. Lionel watches Donald, follows him and sees him at the theater. There Donald is joined by a woman heavily veiled. He phones to his father to join him and they both follow the couple. To Lionels' amazement the first machine goes to his own apartments. He and his father follow close behind. Lionel becomes suspicious. He is (when he finds that it is his wife with Donald) about to rush in and accuse her of unfaithfulness, when he is restrained by his father.

Marion tells Donald of Lionel's grief caused by the parting with his father, and tries further to get him, Donald, to be good. He promises he will lead a better life. The father, realizing her true worth, forgives Lionel for his marriage.

NEVADA (Navajo—Two Parts.)—George LaMonte, attorney, convicts Jim Street, a crook, thereby incurring his hatred. After his prison term Street watches for an opportunity to get even with LaMonte.

LaMonte gives his daughter, Jessie, four years old, a locket in which is her mother's picture. The nurse takes Jessie to the park and allows her to sit in a boat. When the nurse's back is turned, Street loosens the boat and it floats down the river; it finally arrives at a spot where some gypsies discover it. They take Jessie and decide to take her with them to California. Street, in the meantime, is beginning to repent of his deed. At home they believe Jessie to be drowned, and Mrs. LaMonte is taken sick. To try and save her life they move West.

On the desert the gypsies, Street and the child are almost dead from thirst. Street repents and decides to take the child (whom he now loves) home, but before his plan works out he dies in the desert for want of water. However, before his death he writes a confession. Some Indians, traveling across the resert, find Jes, take her with them and rechristen her Nevada.

Fifteen years later finds LaMonte, a broken down derelict lawyer. Lieutenant Hart, escorting some Indians to their new reservation, is in love with Nevada. Grey Wolf and Hart both ask for Nevada's hand in marriage. Big Bear gives her to Grey Wolf. Nevada shoots Morris, who annoys her with his attentions, and Grey Wolf sees her do it. He decides to fasten the blame on Hart. Hart is accused of the crime and remains silent in order to shield Nevada. Nevada, learning of this, escapes and confesses it was she who committed the murder. She is arrested. Big Bear, after being acquainted with the facts, goes to town and sees a lawyer, LaMonte. He tells LaMonte her story and shows him the locket. LaMonte discovers it is his daughter. At the trial the story is told; Nevada is acquitted and goes to the arms of Hart, her lover.

WON BY A MUSTACHE (Thistle).—Fred, in love with Rena, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Newrich, meets with the disapproval of Mrs. Newrich, though the father favors his suit. Father's influence does not help much and he is barred from the house by Mrs. Newrich. Mrs. Newrich favors Percy and Reginald, who live in the apartment adjoining Freddy.

That evening Freddy, with the aid of Father and Rena, frame up a scheme on Mrs. Newrich, who is interested in clairvoyancy. Father and Rena persuade her to call on a famous clairvoyant, and Freddy, disguised as the mystic. During his supposed trance he tells her that the first stranger to pass her threshold that evening is her daughter's future husband.

Percy and Reginald overhear this remark and each plan to beat Freddy to it. The resulting mix leads to many complications, but Freddy eventually wins.

BILLY STUDIES MUSIC (Santa Barbara).—Billy decides to take up the study of music. He buys a lot of secondhand instruments and, after much difficult practice, makes up his mind to visit his sweetheart, Betty, and show her his proficiency in the musical line. Father seriously objects to this concert and finally breaks the fiddle over Billy's head. After many adventures showing Billy exhibiting his musical talent on various instruments with disastrous results, we see father forgiving him, after he has quieted the "howls" of a visiting baby.

THE PARIS HAT (Alhambra).—This is a comedy showing the troubles caused by a milliner's assistant when she borrows a "Paree" model. The husband of the woman who has purchased the hat sees it on the assistant and takes her for his wife. Then starts the trouble. After a series of comedy scenes the hat is returned to the rightful owner, and all matters are straightened out to the satisfaction of all except the "old man."

THE NEW SHERIFF (Trump—Two Parts).—John Grey, newly-elected sheriff of a small town, is in love with Ellen Stone, a Quakeress. He goes to Ellen's home with the intention of proposing marriage when a telegram arrives telling of his father's death. He hurries away, and at the train introduces Ellen to Albert Mitchell, his friend. It is clearly a case of love at first sight, but Ellen's father objects to the marriage, because he has seen Mitchell in a street brawl. Ellen, realizing that her father would object to her marriage with Mitchell, agrees to marry Grey.

A few months after their marriage, Ellen knows she loves her husband, but does not tell him. Mitchell, now a vagrant, returns to the town and accosts Ellen's father, who hits Mitchell over the shoulder with a riding whip. Mitchell resents the insult and kills Ellen's father.

He goes to Ellen's home for protection and she, not knowing what he has done, gives him refuge. Her husband, returning home, sees Grey in the house and is immediately suspicious. He enters the house and demands that Ellen have Mitchell come from hiding. Ellen, thinking that Mitchell, cornered, will shoot, rushes to the closet in which he is hiding, opens the door and receives the bullet. Mitchell runs out and is shot down by his pursuers. Grey asks Ellen why she done this, and she replies, "Because I love you."

CURSE OF THE BLACK PEARL (Alhambra—Two Parts).—DeLara, father of Marie and Mercedes, murders his friend in order to gain possession of a black pearl. Maria, the youngest daughter, witnesses the crime and the father, realizing this, repents the deed. DeLara is suspicious of everyone, believing they have designs on the pearl.

Alvarado, a castaway and Maria's sweetheart, tries to ascertain the father's uneasiness. One day while gloating over his treasure, Alvarado and Maria think he is ill and knowing that Maria is the favorite daughter, request that she go see what the trouble is. Maria, knowing the cause of his seeming illness, to allay suspicion goes to him. Thinking that it is someone desirous of stealing the pearl, DeLara shoots through the door and kills Maria. Grief-stricken, he goes to the cliffs and plunges into the sea.

THE ARM OF THE LAW (Santa Barbara—Two Parts).—Mrs. Brooks has been led to her marriage with Mr. Brooks against her better judgment. He is a tyrant and treats her brutally. Her former lover, Joe Brown, shoots her husband in revenge. She is not aware of this fact and is accused of the murder. Brown confesses to the murder and she is acquitted.

HIS DOUBLE DID IT (C. K.).—This is a farce, showing the mishaps of two brothers who look alike. The one brother is married and he introduces his brother to a widow, hoping thereby to make a match. The brother, who has been introduced to the widow, is suddenly called out of town and his married brother visits the widow. She, thinking it is the single one, makes love to him. His wife catches them. After the brother's return from the road matters are straightened out.

A DOMESTIC REVOLUTION (Punch).—Mrs. Grouch on a shopping tour is followed home by a flirt. She goes for a policeman and he arrests her husband, who has returned home, by mistake. Her husband thinks the policeman is her lover. After a series of funny scenes we see the right man arrested and Mr. Grouch handing Money to Mrs. Grouch for a much-desired dress.

GENERAL FILM CO.

THE VALLEY OF LOST HOPE (Lubin—Five parts).—Ewing, a get-rich-quick capitalist, salts the quartz of a distant western valley and thus starts a gold rush to the supposedly rich mining field. He remains on the field until he has sold as much land as he dare to the over-eager prospectors and returns to the city, leaving his son, Bob, in charge at the valley to lend an appearance of good-will on the part of the schemers. Bob, a young fellow not long out of college, has not given serious thought to the father's scheme, but with the daily evidence of disappointment on the part of the unsuspecting prospectors, the lad's conscience awakens.

Bob's aversion to the scheme is made stronger by his growing intimacy with Dora, pretty young sister of Royce, an evangelist. Dora has come to the camp in order to seek Royce's protection to shield her from her scapegrace husband, Flint, a drunkard. Bob lives in the hut adjoining Royce and Dora. He pleads for her hand in marriage, but Dora, concealing the unhappy secret of her married life, can only answer in the negative.

Flint traces Dora to the camp and arrives with demands for money, threatening to reveal himself to Bob if she refuses. Royce ejects him bodily from his cabin. Infuriated, Flint slinks from the settlement. His rage now is also directed against the miners, who have divined his real character and have stoned him from the valley.

Royce wants to invest his savings in a mining claim. Bob in refusing to sell him a claim is compelled to confess his father's deception. He squares himself with the evangelist by promising to return to the miners every cent of the money they have invested in claims.

On the same night, Flint strikes up an acquaintanceship with Kelly and Sanders, highwaymen, who are planning to rob the well-filled safe of the camp's saloon and gambling hall. The three men go to the crest of the precipice on the following day to plan the burglary. As they gaze down at the populous camp nestling at the foot of the cliff, they see the entire population making for the private train of Ewing, which has just been parked on a railway siding. The angry men have just discovered Ewing's dishonesty, and, not knowing Bob's good intention to return to them their money, they have gone to inflict bodily revenge on the dishonest promoter.

The highwaymen see that this is an opportune moment to perform the robbery. They leave Flint at the top of the cliff with instructions to fire three times when he sees the crowd of men start back to the village. While the infuriated mob storms Ewing's private car, Kelly and Sanders overcome the sole occupant left in the gambling hall and proceed to blow the safe. Bob, meanwhile, fights his way through the mob surrounding the car, carrying with him the money invested by the prospectors, and determined to force his father to make restitution. Ewing, awed by the anger of the crowd and cornered by his determined son, tells the mob he will pay them back, dollar for dollar. At the same time one of the three colleagues accompanying Ewing, instructs the engineer to depart. The special speeds away, followed by hundreds of the miners on horseback. The engineer, traveling on the hastily arranged schedule, is surprised by a freight train coming in an opposite direction. The horsemen draw rein, horrified at the sight of the impending catastrophe. The trains come together in a head-on collision, leaving only a snarl of wreckage.

While the prospectors hurry to the scene of the wreck and extract the dead and injured bodies of the promoters from the debris, a messenger from camp informs them of the robbery. The entire male populace pursue and finally kill Kelly and Sanders. Flint has sought refuge in Dora's cabin, after carrying out a fiendishly conceived plan to ignite a fuse leading to the powder pit at the top of the cliff, knowing the resultant explosion will tear away the top of the mountain and topple it down upon the settlement. Dora runs frantically from cabin to cabin warning the inhabitants of the explosion, while the evangelist, Royce, struggles with Flint in the cellar of his cabin. Just as Dora pulls the last of the women left in the camp to a place of safety the explosion occurs. The entire top of the cliff hurtles through space, causing a gigantic landslide and crushing the cabins below as if they were so many egg shells. Royce has just killed Flint in the cellar, but, unable to escape the landslide, remains imprisoned beneath the debris.

Villagers finally rescue him. Bob's father is dead, but he finds solace in the thought that he can return all of the prospectors the money invested in the useless land. Dora has agreed to wed Bob, now that her husband is dead, and they leave the camp for the city, content in the thought that justice has been administered. Bob takes with him "Granny" Dean, an aged widow of the camp, determined to "adopt" her as his mother.

THE DISTRICT ATTORNEY (Lubin).—Matthews Brainerd, a wealthy contractor and head of a grafting political gang, has formulated a plan for a great scoop from the City Treasury in the form of the forging of city warrants. This is hanging fire, however, because his chief minions, McGrath and Williams, have been unable to find some one who would be willing to stand trial for the crime for a sum of money. The stool pigeon is eventually found in the person of Frank Pierson, a clerk in the Warrant Office, who is betrothed to Helen Knight, but their marriage has been many times postponed on account of his inability to improve her condition in life. Tempted by McGrath and Williams, Pierson agrees to stand trial for the crime for the sum of $50,000, with the understanding that after serving a few months in the penitentiary the ring will exert its influence to have him pardoned.

A meeting occurs between Pierson and the gang, and instead of a cash payment he demands five notes for $10,000 each, and these he entrusts for safe keeping with Mrs. Varrick, his lodging housekeeper, until such time as he shall be discharged from prison. But the gang decide that in order to secure their own future safely their victim must be kept out of the way, and three years elapse without anything having been done toward the release of Pierson. He writes to Helen to interest herself in his case, and at the same time makes his story known to General Ruggles, editor of a great reform newspaper, who has been for some time conducting a bitter fight against the ring, and both seek to have the case reopened through the district attorney. This is no less a person than Brainerd's son-in-law, John Stratton, elected to the office through the influence of Brainerd and his gang. After many attempts to secure an interview with Stratton, Helen interests him in her case, with the assistance of his wife, and Stratton decides to bring Pierson before the Grand Jury to prove his allegation that he was the victim of a plot. To keep Helen from being tampered with by

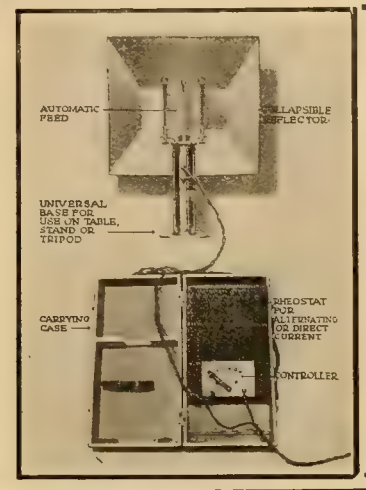
STILL LEADING IN THE FIELD OF FEATURES
GREAT NORTHERN
110 W. 40th Street FAMOUS FILM PRODUCTIONS NEW YORK

LEWIS M. SWAAB
PIONEER SUPPLY HOUSE IN PHILADELPHIA

Principal Jobber in Power's, Simplex and Baird Machines

Mirror Screens, Motor Generator Sets, Mercury Arc Rectifiers, the Daylight Screen, Fire Extinguishers, Radium Gold Fibre Screens, Ft. Wayne Compensarcs, Power's Inductors, Ticket Choppers, Brass and Wood Poster Frames, Film Shipping Buckets, Carrying Cases, Asbestos Booths, Announcement Slides, Carbons, Oil and Cement, Exit Signs, Tickets, Pianos and Columbia Phonographs and SCREENCOAT, $3.00 per gallon will make an old screen new, and the Mortimer Film Cleaner.

THE HOUSE WHOSE GUARANTEE IS WORTH 100%
1327 Vine St., Philadelphia, Pa.



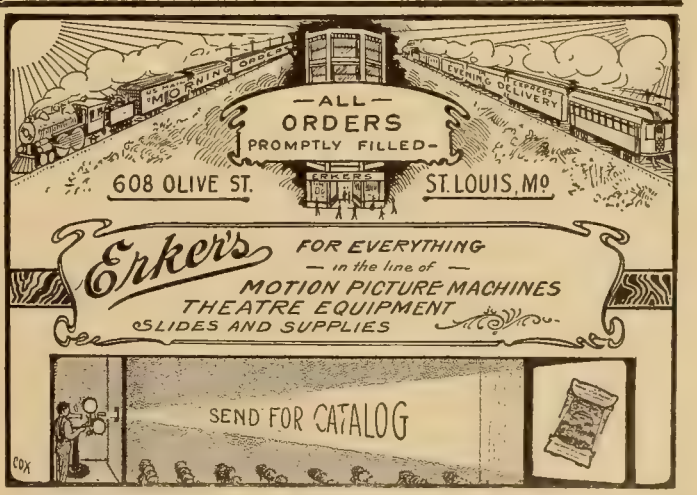
"A great light—it gives the Director 25% more latitude in his work and makes possible scenes never before filmed"—
That is what one of the real big men wrote us about the
A&H.
Panchroma
Twin Arc Lamps
8000 c. p. per unit. Weight in case, 19 lbs. Either Direct or Alternating Current. Can be transported anywhere by a boy. The biggest advance in motion picture lighting yet made. Write for descriptive matter or call for a demonstration.
ALLISON & HADAWAY
Photographic Importers and Manufacturers
235 Fifth Ave. New York

MAKE 'EM YOURSELF SLIDES
Make them yourself. Written with pen and ink or typewriter. Three minutes to make a slide. Used for advertising slides, to announce future or feature programmes, for chorus slides when chorus slide is missing. We send four colors of gelatin. The slides look well and anyone can make them. They are handy also for announcing vaudeville acts. In fact, they may be readily used for anything you may wish to say to your audience.
For the sum of $3.50 we will send, by parcel post, prepaid and insured, the following:
24 cover glass, 1 package binder strips, 1 dozen mats, 1 instruction sheet, 1 form sheet and 50 strips assorted colors gelatin—enough for from 300 to 400 slides. Order now. Address:
UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO.
1733 West 9th Street Brooklyn, N. Y.

RELEASED JANUARY 11TH BOOK FROM YOUR EXCHANGE
BEULAH POYNTER
In Her Greatest Success
"The Little Girl That He Forgot"
A Five-Part Drama of Intense Heart Interest and Human Appeal
COSMOS FEATURE FILM CORPORATION
126 W. 46th Street, New York City

Moving Picture Theatre Mailing Lists for Sale
20,192, covering United States and Canada, price $40.00, or $3.50 per thousand for such states as you want.
1025 Film Exchanges, U. S..... $4.00
109 Manufacturers and Studios, U. S..... 1.00
210 Moving Picture Machine and Supply Dealers stating line of goods handled..... 1.50
231 Film Exchanges, Foreign Countries..... 3.00
520 Moving Picture Theatres, Foreign Countries.... 3.00
Ask us for full particulars.
TRADE CIRCULAR ADDRESSING CO.
166 West Adams St., Chicago. Established 1880.

THIS IS YOUR OPPORTUNITY
To acquire your Raw Film Stock at the Reduced Prices
ONE WEEK, COMMENCING FEBRUARY FIRST
To get acquainted, we will for one week sell Raw Film Stock at following Reduced Prices:
PERFORATED NEGATIVE AT.....$3.00 per 100 feet
PERFORATED POSITIVE AT..... 2.85 per 100 feet
We also do High Grade Printing and Developing, also Artistic Titles. Expert Cameramen furnished for all occasions. Get our prices.
BUCKEYE MOTION PICTURE COMPANY, WAPAKONETA, OHIO



Eastman Stock
PRINTING and DEVELOPING 4c
Per Foot
KEEN-O-SCOPE CO.
MANUFACTURERS
PHILADELPHIA, PA.
TITLES
5c
Per Foot
247 North 11th Street

HELP MAKE 13 LUCKY
USE 13 PRODUCTS
Trade Mark
FREE! FREE!
Twenty-five thousand roll tickets and sprayer given away free, to advertise
Lucky "13" Products
If you buy a five-gallon can of White Roses of the Fields perfume to disinfect your theatre at $1.25 per gallon. (Without tickets, 5 gal. $1.00 per gal.
MADE BY LUCKY 13 PRODUCTS COMPANY
70 Fifth Avenue New York City
Roll Tickets, 6 cents per 1,000; any amount

FILM TITLES
PERFECT IN EVERY RESPECT
10c PER FOOT AND WORTH IT.
INDUSTRIAL MOVING PICTURE CO.
223-233 W. Erie Street, Chicago

the agents of the gang, she is made a visitor in the Brainerd home, and while there receives a letter from Frank Pierson, telling her to proceed at once to Mrs. Varrick's, secure the papers which will prove his innocence, and deliver them to the district attorney. The ring is plunged into a fever of dread lest its members be exposed through the efforts of Ruggles and the district attorney, and the most desperate plan of action is determined upon. McGrath is entrusted with the duty of expunging the pages of the trial from the court records, while Williams is sent to Sing Sing to "get to" Pierson. But the district attorney has given orders that no one is to be allowed to see the prisoner without an order from him, and in lieu of an interview with Pierson, Williams secures from the letter clerk of the prison a copy of Pierson's letter to Helen giving the address of the house where the incriminating papers are concealed.

Helen arrives at the house before him, however, secures the papers and takes them to the Brainerd home. Here Brainerd succeeds in convincing her that the district attorney's purpose is to see that Pierson is not to be released. She entrusts the papers with him and he burns them in the fireplace. Full of the conviction that Stratton is Pierson's enemy and not his friend, Helen refuses to give her evidence to the Grand Jury, and on Pierson alone devolves the onus of giving the only testimony that can clear him. He tells the story of his agreement with the gang, and when Brainerd's name is mentioned as being the head of it, he collapses in the court and is taken home in a dangerous condition. McGrath is arrested for having tampered with the court records; Williams departs for Canada, and Brainerd finally confesses that Pierson has been the innocent victim of a cruel plot. Now the crushed and broken "boss" pleads for mercy, but even his own daughter cannot bring herself to see him cleared at the expense of her husband's honor, and since Brainerd's death seems only a matter of a very short time, his arrest and trial are left for future consideration.

GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO.

A WOMAN OF IMPULSE—(Four Parts).—Magda, the high-strung wife of Baron Otto Gyldenkrantz, does not live happily with her dissipated husband, so spends much of her time with a friend, Gustave Johnson. Being informed by the valet that his wife went out for a ride with Johnson, the Baron decides to follow them. He overtakes them at the race course, where he makes a scene, and Magda strikes him down with her riding crop. Otto and his family appeal to his uncle, Sir John Holck, for advice. The latter suggests sending Magda abroad for a visit, but when they tell her she says she intends getting a divorce from her husband.

After the divorce, Magda and Johnson are constant companions, but ere long he tires of her. Then they quarrel and separate. Magda is attracted by Silkowitz, leader of an orchestra, whose attention she accepts until his inveterate gambling disgusts her. Now weary, she telegraphs Sir John Holck asking permission to return home, but he answers that she is an exile forever. Some time later Magda accepts a position as secret agent of Ambassador Leo Donaldson. The latter instructs her to find out what she can do about certain bombs, the information being in the possession of the Military Attache, Count Von Schonau. She met the Count once and he spoke of the bombs. She invites him to call upon her and persuades him to loan her the documents pertaining to the bombs, which she gives to Donaldson to copy.

Then Magda conceives a scheme to rid herself of Silkowitz, who has now become a nuisance, borrowing money from her continually. She tells Count Schonau that the documents have been stolen. When Silkowitz calls, she manages to rip a slight opening in the back of his coat. Calling attention to it, she offers to have it mended, whereupon she instructs her maid to sew the documents in the lining of the coat. She sends Silkowitz to the Count with a note, stating that she suspects the bearer of having the papers and to leave the office for a moment, and when Silkowitz leaves to have him followed and searched. The papers are found on Silkowitz and he is arrested.

At a restaurant Magda sees Sir John Holck with his son, Percy. Feeling an impulsive desire to rejoin the family, she decides to make young Holck fall in love with her. He leaves the restaurant alone, so she follows him and feigns stumbling just in front of him on the sidewalk. He is at once impressed by her beauty and takes her home in a taxicab. He offends her by making love too soon and she tells him to come back the next day at 3 P. M. He remembers that he has a most important appointment at that hour with the Minister of War, his employer, and pleads with her to name another time. She insists that he must come at 3 P. M., which he finally agrees to do. He writes a note to the Minister of War breaking the engagement. That official is highly indignant and notifies Percy's father. Meantime Percy has kept his appointment with Magda, and together they have gone to Percy's home. Here the angry father finds them, and when he recognizes Magda and tells Percy who she is, his short romance is abruptly ended, and Magda is left to her fate.

PICTURE PLAYHOUSE FILM CO.

THE THREE BLACK TRUMPS. — (Four Parts).—Robert Clark falls in love with the daughter of a rich merchant. He rescues her from her burning home by climbing up between two buildings. When her parents object to his attentions, claiming that his social position is beneath that of the rich merchant, they elope, and a year later, when their baby comes, they are reduced to poverty.

Robert continues at his trade, that of a chimney sweep and steeple jack, and undertakes to clean the tallest chimney in the city, when no one else will dare attempt it. He loses one of his scaling ladders just at the top, and hangs, between heaven and earth, while flames and smoke belch from the chimney. His wife manages to repay her debt to him by rescuing Robert from the very brink of death, when all other efforts of the fire department and the city authorities failed.

While Robert is ill, following this terrible ordeal, she takes up the burden of his work and by her winning personality wins success as great as his. They come acress an advertisement of a circus manager who wishes a ladder trick, and offering a good salary. This they eagerly accept, and work up, between themselves and little Robert, who is now five years old, an unusual and thrilling scaling act. Their success is instantaneous and "The Three Black Trumps" soon become known throughout the country. Fame and increasing salary come to the daring performers.

In their journeys they come back to Martha's home town and when the stern but loving father sees his little grandson his heart softens, and Martha and her husband are received back into the home circle.

PARAMOUNT.

BUCKSHOT JOHN—(Bosworth—Four Parts).—The career of Bad Jake Kennedy's gang comes to an end in the town of Clayton, after months of robbing banks and express companies of thousands of dollars. The pursuit by the sheriff and posse ends in a corral, where the gang, cornered, fights till only four are left. Of these, "Buckshot John" Moran is wounded, and carried by Doc Pattee to his own office. The others are locked in the jail, from which they are dragged by the indignant populace and duly hanged.

Too late the citizens realize that they have destroyed all means of locating the cache where the gang's rich loot is hidden. Only Buckshot John is left, and he emphatically declares he does not know where it is.

At intervals during the first fifteen years of his thirty-year sentence in the State's Prison at Canon City, every means is taken to make him tell, but he stoutly reiterates his denial. One of the methods is "religion," which, though it fails, proves the means of opening a new life to the sullen and embittered convict. In the truest sense, this former desperado "gets religion." He prays for a message, and, putting his finger haphazard on a page of the Bible, reads the words: "A clean heart." From that time on his one thought is "to go clean when my time comes," and he prays for a way to restore the securely hidden money to its rightful owners.

Meantime, in Denver, "Dr. J. Buchanan Gilmore" has risen by devious, shady paths from being a vendor of snake oil and a fake clairvoyant to an unassailed position as leader of the cult of the hour, "Purified Thought." The interest of a high official puts the stamp of approval on his career, and he is quick to take advantage of it, bringing the fact to the attention of a reporter sent to cover a story.

This reporter is "Jimmy Dacey," much in love with the statesman's daughter, Ruth, a state of affairs viewed with disfavor by her father, who much prefers the rich and polished Dr. Gilmore as a suitor for his daughter. Affairs look very badly for Jimmy as Gilmore's half-hypnotic influence over Ruth becomes stronger.

Sent to try once more to get a confession from Buckshot John, with the usual fruitless result, Jimmy gives him a newspaper, and is greatly surprised at the convict's statement that his only reading matter is his Bible. Buckshot reads of Gilmore's marvelous psychic powers and of a private exhibition in which messages were received from the dead. It seems like an answer to prayer, and he sends a note to Gilmore begging help.

A convict must have had newspaper notices, and in the office of Jimmy's paper Gilmore drains the files clean of everything that had ever been printed about Moran and the Bad Jake Kennedy gang; and goes to Canon City with a well-filled notebook.

Gilmore, pretending to go into a trance, preys on Buckshot John's mind and emotions, with voices, messages and mysterious sounds, till the broken and half-hysterical convict tells the location of the cache, and begs Gilmore himself to get the money and restore it to its rightful owners. Hiding his wild exultation at thus getting possession of the fortune, Gilmore suavely reassures Buckshot, and returns home to make preparations to steal the money.

A casual glimpse of Gilmore in the file room was added fuel to the flame of Jimmy's jealous suspicions of him, and when the latter says goodby to Ruth on the plea of a sudden trip to San Francisco, and is seen taking a local train toward Canon City, Jimmy camps on his trail, goes to the prison and learns from Buckshot that Gilmore had been there several days before and had told him wonderful things. Jimmy quickly disabuses poor Buckshot of that illusion, suspecting that he and Gilmore were planning to divide the hidden treasure between them. Buckshot stolidly denies that he told Gilmore his secret, but after Jimmy's departure nearly breaks down as he realizes that his prayers have been in vain and that now he can never make reparation.

One chance remains—to catch Gilmore at the cache—so, sacrificing all his good-conduct credits, Buckshot makes his get-away. He catches up with Gilmore, who is laden with the stolen money, forces its return, and makes his way to Denver, where he gives the money to a committee of clergymen, then happily awaits the coming of the police to take him back to prison. "I couldn't get an honest man, so I had to do it myself," he naively tells Jimmy.

How Jimmy traces Gilmore's part in the transaction and uses his knowledge to force Ruth's father to consent to her marriage to himself, and to do a great service to Buckshot John, completes this story.

SERIAL PUBLICATION CORP.

RUNAWAY JUNE (Episode No. 2—Two parts).—Through the busy streets of New York, Gilbert Blye, the mysterious man with the black Vandyke, pursues June, and in pursuit of both races the taxi of Ned Warner, June's distracted husband. In the maze of traffic, Blye loses track of June's taxi, and Ned, getting caught in a congestion of traffic, also loses the trail. To the home of Iris Blethering, her bosom friend, goes June for safety. Iris and her husband, Bobbie, cannot understand June's reason for leaving Ned, just because he offered her money, and poor June looks at Iris with a helpless gesture and half sobs. "I can't explain, it made me feel like a beggar taking alms!" Still Iris does not appreciate June's viewpoint.

At the club lives Cunningham, a comrade of Blye's, and, like him, a man of mystery. To Cunningham Blye goes and relates the account of his meeting with June, and shows the watch which June sold on the train.

Ned Warner goes to the apartment that was to have been the home of his bride and himself. Meanwhile, Iris Blethering offers June some money, but June refuses it, and tells Iris that her purse is at home. Iris and Bobbie go to the Moore home to get June's purse, telling Mrs. Moore that June wired them to get her purse and forward it. Soon after the Bletherings leave, Ned calls at the Moore home, and June's parents are surprised to learn that June is not with him. They tell him of the Blethering's visit, and all hurry there, seeking a solution of the mystery. They arrive at the Blethering home, but Bobbie and Iris deny the presence of June. Ned, however, finds one of Blye's cards, and June's gloves, and furiously accuses the Bletherings of hiding both June and Blye!

At Rectors, Blye, Cunningham, Tommy Thomas, a girl companion of Blye, and several others form a merry party, drinking and danc-

$3
BUT ONLY ONE
THEATRE

in any one city (must be 15,000 population or greater) can obtain my $5 FRONTLITES at this Special Introductory Price of $3 each,—with weatherproof hanger, $3.25 each. I want ONE Theatre in EVERY city in the United States to use my Frontlites. Then others will want some, and will pay the regular price. Frontlites have 12-inch Dresden Glass Spheres which look like bulbs of beautiful bright light. Hood of SOLID brass, polished and lacquered. Use with NITROGEN LAMP, any size or voltage. Lamp not included at above prices. Frontlites are great for lobby display and poster lighting. Frontlites draw the crowds and put your competitor in the shade.

LUDWIG HOMMEL & CO.
Complete Theatre Equipments
422 First Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.

THERE'S A REASON

for doubt on technical points when authoritative information for the Exhibitor, Manager or Operator can't be obtained. The contents of the books herewith advertised place all necessary information and practical assistance within reach of every reader. For instance, every weekly issue of the contains an unequalled fund of information in regard to every angle of the moving picture art. Its staff is an aggregation of the best posted men in the industry who have devoted years to a study of the requirements of all our readers. Its correspondents are located in all the principal centers and its columns contain the most complete data possible. In a class by itself as a trade paper for every intelligent student of moving picture production and exhibition.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

F. H. RICHARDSON the recognized expert on projection has a second edition of his "THE MOTION PICTURE HANDBOOK FOR MANAGERS AND OPERATORS," consisting of 420 pages of fully illustrated articles on the subject of projection, that is enjoying an exceptional sale. This will be the standard textbook for managers and operators for many years. The price is $2.50.

J. H. HALLBERG well known as an authority on electricity has compiled a 278-page fully illustrated book, entitled "MOTION PICTURE ELECTRICITY," containing up-to-the-minute information on picture theatre electrical equipment. Also necessary tables and practical advice to the operator. A revision of all his Electrical Talks published some years ago in one of the trade papers. The price, $2.50.

EPES W. SARGENT is author of "TECHNIQUE OF THE PHOTOPLAY," an exhaustive treatise on the writing of the Photoplay, containing sample scripts and complete detailed instruction for experienced as well as inexperienced writers. Price, $2.00. All published by ing. The diners seek to arouse Tommy Thomas' jealousy by describing June's watch, which Blye has in his possession.

Moving Picture World

17 Madison Avenue New York

Meantime, at the Blethering home, events have followed rapidly. While Ned and Bobbie are arguing in the hall downstairs, June escapes through a window. A few moments later Ned and the rest break into the room. There is no trace of June, so the next move is a visit to the Blye home, where Mrs. Blye is questioned. Mr. Moore indignantly demands, "I want my daughter!" This arouses Mrs. Blye's suspicion. She calls up Cunningham's club and learns that she is with Blye at Rectors. Thereupon the party rushes to Rectors. Mrs. Blye bursts in, followed by the others, and catches her husband dancing with Tommy Thomas. She furiously demands, "Who is that woman?" but Blye flares up and refuses to answer her. Blye makes his way to the street and escapes in Cunningham's car, giving the chauffeur a mysterious address. June, meanwhile, has made her way to the Moore home and after petting her pet collie for a few moments, awakens Marie, her maid, collects her wardrobe together, and steals away with Marie.

June and Marie get into a taxi at the Moore gate, and just drive away as Blye, in Cunningham's car, drives up, then follows in hot pursuit. A moment later Ned, and the rest, in two autos, drive up and are directed after Blye's car by Aunt Debby, the Moore's old colored servant. Through the darkness the pursued and pursuing autos race.

RUNAWAY JUNE (Episode No. 3—Two Parts—"Discharged").—In the preceding installment, June, the runaway bride, escaped from her parents' home with Marie, her maid, and some of her wardrobe. Close in pursuit of June's taxi came Gilbert Blye, the man with the black Vandyke, and away in the rear followed Ned Warner, June's deserted husband, and several others.

Speeding at a breakneck pace, Blye, in the Cunningham limousine, passes June's taxi, and then breaks up a bottle which he has in the car and drops the bits of broken glass to the roadway. The ruse works; the taxi has a blowout. Blye's car backs to the scene, and Blye gallantly offers June the use of his machine. After some hesitation, June accepts the offer, and has Marie take the clothes from the taxi and put them into the other car. The taxi is wheeled to the side of the road, to be out of the way; then the limousine drives off. Blye, in the car, pretends to just recognize June as the little girl he met on the train, and he feigns pleasant surprise. June, doubtful, wishes to buy her watch back immediately, but Blye tells her that he left it home.

At his club, Blye alights and puts the car at June's service, but mysteriously whispers instructions to Scatti, the driver. Scatti nods, and in answer to June's orders to drive her to a boarding house, takes her to Mother Russell's, a mysterious house of gaiety and bright lights. But June decides that the place is too conspicuous, and gives Scatti the address of an obscure boarding house which she is familiar with. There they go, and June engages a room for herself and Marie. Scatti, grinning slyly, takes note of the place and drives away. Meanwhile, the cars containing Ned and his party, pursuing June and Blye, encounter the glass-strewn section of the roadway and are delayed by blowouts, and hopelessly lose the trail. They finally come to the city and disperse to their various homes, Ned summoning private detectives to put on the case. Mrs. Blye reaches her home in time to see her husband going away with his effects, and, realizing that she is deserted, summons private detectives to watch her husband. Blye and Cunningham go to Mother Russell's, and there hold a conference with Tommy Thomas, showing her June's watch with her picture and name, Tommy sulks, but finally agrees to do their bidding.

Tommy Thomas calls at June's boarding house on the following morning, tells that a friend of June's sent her to June about a position, and takes June to a department store and introduces her to the managress of the gown department, whispering to her, "This is the girl Mr. Blye spoke about for the model!" The woman smiles in approval as she looks at June, and immediately employs her. June grows interested in her work, parading before the wealthy customers, but through a prearranged plan of Cunningham, Blye and Tommy Thomas, she is discharged, charged with neglecting her duty, for, interested in an argument over money matters between a man and his wife, the eternal "money question" which was the cause of her running away from Ned, she neglects to heed Cunningham's request to be shown a gown.

Dejected, she returns to her boarding house. Meanwhile, the private detectives of Ned and Mrs. Blye have been sadly mixing things up, and Ned, disgusted, goes for a walk. He sees Marie and tracks her to the boarding house. Blye has preceded him there and is in the hall. Marie, conscious that Ned is following her, rushes into the house. Ned is admitted in time to see Blye rushing up the stairway, but the man of mystery eludes Ned and leaves the house, close on June's trail, leaving Ned frantic and heartbroken.

A Correction.

On page 417 of the issue dated January 16 a synopsis of Bison's "Ridgeway of Montana" was published, which gave the release date of that picture as being January 23. Since the publication of that story the Universal Company has changed the release of that subject to February 6. "Old Peg-Legs," a Bison picture, will be released on January 23.

If your newsdealer cannot or will not supply you every week with a copy of this paper, send your subscription direct for one year or six months to address below. You cannot afford to miss a single issue.

See Title Page for Rates.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD
17 Madison Ave., N. Y. City

POWER'S

Your Dollar Buys 100 Cents' Worth

When You Purchase Anything in Supplies or Machines from Us

SIMPLEX

Distributors for the Best of Everything for the Modern Photo-Play Theatre.

Years Devoted to the Exhibitors' Requirements Has Placed Us Far in Advance of Any Supply House in America.

We Equip Motion Picture Theatres Completely

That's the Reason

Let's Get Acquainted

Call or Write for Your Wants Today

MOTIOGRAPH

Picture Theatre Equipment Co.

19 West 23d Street, New York

The Largest Motion Picture Supply House in America

EDISON

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS

Classified Advertisements, three cents per word, cash with order; 50 cents minimum postage stamps accepted :: :: :: ::

SITUATIONS WANTED.

AT LIBERTY—Manager, operator, and wife, A1 pianist; references exchanged; only reliable managers reply. THE PALMERS, 137 Front St., Deposit, N. Y.

CAMERAMAN—At present holding temporary position, desires to get in touch with director or company requiring high-grade, artistic work. Have own equipment, Pathe Professional, with improvements. Best lenses, tripods and still camera. Develop own negatives and make sample print if necessary. CONFIDENTIAL, care M. P. World, N. Y. City.

AT LIBERTY.—Manager and operator, ten years' experience. Mass. License. Strictly sober, best references. J. D., care of M. P. World, N. Y. City.

CONCERT PIANIST.—Lady wishes position in picture house. Will give pictures artistic atmosphere by effective music. Address S. S., care of M. P. World, N. Y. City.

AT LIBERTY.—After Feb. 1st, picture or vaudeville theater manager. Seven years' experience. Reliable reference, can deliver the goods. G. E. W., care M. P. World, N. Y. City.

PIANIST.—Two years' experience as picture and vaudeville player. Good reference. Address L. C., care of M. P. World, N. Y. City.

OPERATOR.—Young, reliable, desires position; medium town. At present employed, desires change. Experienced Powers' machines, prefer Ill.; will go elsewhere. Address Walter H. Johnson, Box 147, Rantoul, Ill.

CAMERAMAN.—Nine years' experience, best references. Will travel anywhere. William Miller, 1024 Halsey St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

CAMERAMAN.—Experienced, reliable, wants position. Will travel anywhere. Photos, care of M. P. World, N. Y. City.

PIANIST.—Eight years' experience. Wishes position in first-class picture house, alone, where good music is wanted. West preferred. No car fares. Steady engagement. Experienced on Wurlitzer style "K" organ. State all first letter. Address Lyle C. True, P. O. Box 305, San Francisco, Cal.

A CAPABLE CAMERAMAN. — Twenty-six, sober, having a remarkable experience in laboratories. Desires a permanent position, go anywhere. Salary reasonable and transportation. Write all details in your first communication. Ugama, care of Y. M. C. A., Pontiac, Mich.

LIVE MANAGER.—At liberty, first time in eight years. Pictures or vaudeville. Will make good. Sprague Green, Ft. Wayne, Ind.

CAMERAMAN.—Must have employment immediately. Thoroughly familiar with laboratory work. Make me an offer. Will consider anything. Five years with last employer. Best of reference. Urgent, care of M. P. World, N. Y. City.

MOV. PICT. OPERATOR.—Ten years' experience, married, sober, reliable. Best references. Chas. H. Amos, 126 Advent St., Spartanburg, S. C.

OPERATOR.—Experience, wishes steady position outside of New York City. Address Edward Burke, Pleasantville, N. Y.

HELP WANTED.

WANTED.—DIRECTOR FOR COMEDY FILM CORPORATION. SALARY AND STOCK BONUS FOR RIGHT MAN. STATE EXPERIENCE, GIVE PARTICULARS. CORRESPONDENCE CONFIDENTIAL. COMEDY DIRECTOR, CARE OF M. P. WORLD, N. Y. CITY.

TWO CAMERAMEN WANTED—State lowest salary. Write, Wilton, care of Newman, 155 7th Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

WANTED.—Managers for moving picture theaters of the better kind. Splendid opportunity for right party. Write giving the fullest details as to past or present employment and salary expectations. F. O., care of M. P. World, N. Y. City.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES.

CINEMATOGRAPH EXPERT—One of the pioneers of the industry in Britain is prepared to undertake the sole agency for the handling of exclusive films and others for the United Kingdom or for the United Kingdom and the Colonies. Apply J. T. RUFFELL, 5 Gt. Newport St., London, Eng.

FOR SALE—Combined winter and summer moving picture theater located in heart of Brooklyn. Beautiful auditorium of 600 seats, same number in comfortable airdome. Long lease at low rental. Recently built for investment purpose. Splendid opportunity for those desiring to enter the business. Address INVESTMENT, care M. P. World, N. Y. City.

A NEW YORK FILM COMPANY owning excellent money-making five-reel feature, with subject that is world wide, fine posters and photographs, desires representatives in every state to handle on percentage agreement. Must furnish bond, references as to film business ability and financial standing. Excellent opportunity for hustlers of the right sort. M. L. FORD, Rm. 504, 43 Cedar St., N. Y. City.

FOR SALE.—Plant and equipment for Film Exchange, central location near 42d St. and Broadway. Building and vault of fire brick, complying absolutely with fire laws. S. G., care of M. P. World, N. Y. City.

EXPERIENCED CAMERAMAN.—Seeks parties with $5,000 to manufacture comedies. Have sale for same. Address quickly. Negative, care of M. P. World, N. Y. City.

WOULD YOU like to make four dollars in four hours? If so, write me. F. A. HOLMES, Brewster, N. Y.

THEATERS WANTED.

WE ARE desirous of obtaining grade A theaters everywhere, especially in Greater New York and its environs suitable for photoplay purposes. Houses now in operation or to be built to suit our requirements will be of interest. Correspondence solicited. PARAMOUNT THEATERS CORP., 331 Madison Ave., N. Y. City.

WANT TO RENT.—Picture theater in Washington, small town preferred. Don't misrepresent. N. Allen, Jr., 939 So. Ainsworth Ave., Tacoma, Wash.

THEATERS FOR SALE OR RENT.

THEATER FOR LEASE in middle west city of 15,000; fine location; seats 375; fully equipped ready to show. Furnishings the best. PASTIME AMUSEMENT AND SUPPLY CO., Austin, Minn.

HANDSOMEST MODERN photoplay theater in middle west, everything new. Big railroad center and manufacturing city of 50,000. Lifetime opportunity; would consider part time or a live partner. Bargain; act quickly. P. O. Box 1312, Joliet, Ill.

FOR SALE.—Moving picture theater, new equipment. Ala. town, 3,500 population. Bargain. Address L. B. 15, Jackson, Ala.

FOR SALE.—Picture show in first-class condition and centrally located. Address Luna Theater, Upper Sandusky, Ohio.

FOR SALE OR LEASE.—New 400-seat house, northern N. J. Homelike, refined, neighborhood 6,000, no competition. Completely equipped, includes store. Now leased. Bargain; other business compels immediate sale. D. C., care of M. P. World, N. Y. City.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

BRASS POSTER FRAMES—For one, three and six sheets. Also brass easels, brass railings. Write for complete catalog. THE NEWMAN MFG. CO., Cincinnati, O., 101 4th Ave., N. Y.

OPERA AND FOLDING CHAIRS for all purposes at cut anti-trust prices; used chairs a specialty. New from ninty-five cents up. I can save you money. Tell me what you want. J. P. REDINGTON, Scranton, Pa.

WE BUY, SELL AND EXCHANGE second-hand moving picture machines and films. Write for bargains. MONARCH FILM SERVICE, Memphis, Tenn.

MUST HAVE MONEY QUICK—Will sell any part of my theater, operated only 3 months and forced to close through poor business. Power's 6A with loop setter, $125; Simplex, $140; five-ply opera chairs, 75c; Ft. Wayne compensarc, $30; iron booth, underwriters' inspection, $25; Excello flaming arc lamps, $50 pair. All goods guaranteed good as new; will ship subject to inspection. GLEN ALFRED, 2110A Olive St., St. Louis, Mo.

WRITE OR WIRE—The Lears Theatre Supply Co., 509 Chestnut St., St. Louis, Mo., the largest exclusive theater equipment concern in the West, for seats, all leading makes of moving picture machines, operating booths, curtains and all other theater accessories. They always have some slightly used goods in stock for immediate shipment and sell them at bargain prices. Folding chairs, 40c each up. Opera chairs, 60c each up. Moving picture machines, $50 each up. Send them an exact list of your wants and see why they sell them all.

POWERS NO. 5—Complete, with lenses, rewinder, perfect condition, $65. Expressed subject to examination. MARTIN FREDERICKS, 3533 No. 13th St., Phila., Pa.

FOR SALE—Everywhere, moving picture theater chairs, bargains. B. B. Q., 32 W. Market St., Corning, N. Y.

SALE NO. 7.—Powers' 6-A new and complete, except rheostat; we will sell for $200; party could not open theater. Edison take-up slightly used $7.50. Bunch of imported 6½ and 7½ condensers 75c mailed free. New machines and equipments. Muncie Film & Supply Co., 202 E. Main, Muncie, Ind.

SIMPLEX.—Powers 6 and Standard machine with motor, Hallberg Economizer, gas outfit, also large stock of carbons. Will sell very reasonable. Holdenried, 804 Sixth Ave., N. Y. City.

FOR SALE.—Rebuilt machines. Powers No. 6, $125. 1909 Motiograph, $90. Edison type D, $125. Edison Exhibition, $65. Powers No. 5, $75. A-1 condition guaranteed; many others. Write for catalog and list. Amusement Supply Co., 160-H No. Fifth Ave., Chicago, Ill.

OPERA AND FOLDING CHAIRS.—Large assortment, unequalled values, also slightly used perfect chairs 75c each. Atlas Seating Co., 501 Fifth Ave., N. Y. City.

114 OPERA CHAIRS.—Two Excello lamps. For sale cheap. Thos. Gill, 47 Beach 84th St., Rockaway Beach, N. Y.

OPERA CHAIRS.—Bought and sold. 600 pedestal chairs, 300 mahogany, New Jersey, fifty cents up. Cash for your chairs. Empire Business Exchange, Corning, N. Y.

CAMERAS FOR SALE.

LATEST 1914 MODEL—Number 2 American with three extra magazines, changing bag, tripod with tilt and carrying case. Entire lot lists at $357.50. Price for quick sale, $275. Will ship C. O. D., with privilege examination. W. E. HANE, 537 E. Center St., Marion, Ohio.

MOTION PICTURE CAMERAS.—Apparatus and supplies for sale. Motion Film Co., Box 532, Kansas City, Missouri.

WILLIAMSON TOPICAL.—4 magazines 100 ft., cost $101, only $55. Marvel tripod and tilt only $25. I make changing letter titles. Ray, 326 5th Ave., N. Y. City.

FILMS WANTED.

WANTED TO BUY.—Western features, 2, 3 and 4 reels, must have full set of posters. In good condition and cheap for cash. Address Meyer Jewelry Co., 2116 Market St., Galveston, Texas.

WILL BUY.—100 features, 4, 5 and 6 reel, American production. State amount of paper, lowest price and condition in first letter. Corporation, care of M. P. World, N. Y. City.

FILMS FOR SALE OR RENT.

FILM FOR SALE, in good shape, posters included. Send for list. Lock Box 691 Kalamazoo, Mich.

FOR SALE—200 single reels, with or without posters, no junk; also scenic reels and educational subjects. FEDERAL FEATURE FILM CO., 220 West 42d St., N. Y. City.

FEATURES.—Two, three and four reelers, with plenty original posters at astonishing prices. Send for list. Imperial Films Corp., Manhattan Bldg., Milwaukee, Wis.

FOR SALE.—Cheap, 25 feature films, good condition, plenty of paper, photos and banners. Also Peerless electric piano $150. Page Amusement Co., 412 Locust St., Des Moines, Ia.

FILMS FOR SALE.—Rare opportunity to open exchange or for personal use, hundreds of films to be closed out immediately, independent and licensed makes. Also features. Prices exceptionally low. List upon request. Address L. B. S., care of M. P. World, N. Y. City.

30 FEATURES FOR SALE 30—In 2, 3, 4 and 5 reels, in good condition, original paper, sell one or all. J. E. Burns, Rm. 1107, 145 West 45th St., N. Y. City. Phone Bryant 7078.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SUCCESSFUL SLIDE WRITING.—A chemical that enables you to write as easy on glass as on paper. No blurs. $1.00 box, enough for 500 slides. CHEMICAL GLASS DRYER CO., Grand Rapids, Minn.

HAVE YOUR SCENARIOS neatly typewritten. 10c per page, with carbon copy. Prompt work. L. SULZER, 4306 Calumet Ave., Chicago, Ill.

SLIDES.—Expert designing, beautiful coloring, unexcelled service. Write for catalogue. Texarkana Slide Co., Texarkana, Ark.-Tex. "The largest and best in the south."

SCENERY FREE.—A beautiful front drop curtain free to one picture theater in each town. 300 to distribute. State size wanted. Boon Scenic Studios, Hicksville, Ohio.

INDEX

TO CONTENTS.

ADVERTISING FOR EXHIBITORS..... 663
"APARTMENT HOUSE MYSTERY, THE" (Kalem) 662
APPEAL OF THE SCREEN, THE..... 649
"AVALANCHE, THE" (Life Photo)..... 676

BLAND TALKS TO CHURCHGOERS..... 658
BOOMING PENNSYLVANIA LEAGUE CONVENTION 675

CALENDAR OF LICENSED RELEASES... 716
CALENDAR OF INDEPENDENT RELEASES 718
CAPE TOWN NOTES..... 659
CHICAGO LETTER 655
COATES TO STAR IN JUNGLE PICTURE. 683
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Licensed).. 671
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Independent) 672

DALY, JAMES L..... 684
DOINGS AT LOS ANGELES..... 657
DOME THEATER OPENS..... 703
"DU BARRY" (Kleine)..... 653

FACTS AND COMMENTS..... 647
FEATURE FILM STORIES..... 734
FEATURE RELEASE DATES..... 752
FIGHT ON CENSORSHIP..... 701
FIREPROOF STORAGE 689
"FOOL THERE WAS, A" (Box Office).... 677

GETTING HEARST-SELIG PICTURES.... 689
"GIRL OF THE SECRET SERVICE, THE" 685

"HEART OF LINCOLN, THE" (Gold Seal) 686
"HEARTS OF THE HIGHWAY" (Vitagraph) 682
HIRLIMAN, CHARLES..... 686
HUTTON, LEONA 680

ILLUSTRATED WAGNER CONCERTS.... 652
INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES..... 724
INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES..... 754
"IT'S NO LAUGHING MATTER" (Bosworth) 679

JACOBS, BILLY 678
JEAN DU MAR, A NEW EDISON STAR...687

LICENSE CODE IN BOSTON..... 698
LICENSED FILM STORIES..... 712
LICENSED RELEASE DATES..... 750
"LOVE, SPEED AND THRILLS" (Keystone) 683

MADE IN AMERICA..... 648
MANUFACTURERS' ADVANCE NOTES.... 693
MASTER STROKE BY WM. N. SELIG, A. 650
MAY ALLISON NOW A SCREEN ARTIST. 688
MESTAYER, HARRY 676
"MORALS OF MARCUS, THE" (Famous Players) 681
MOVING PICTURE EDUCATOR..... 661
MUST FURNISH WATER..... 706

NEW SOUTHERN FILM COMPANY..... 651
NEW WORLD FILM DEPARTMENT..... 662
NO STOCK FOR EXHIBITORS..... 659
NOTES OF THE TRADE..... 695

OBSERVATIONS MAN ABOUT TOWN..... 660

PEARCE AND NEFF GET TOGETHER.... 675
PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT 665
PROJECTION DEPARTMENT..... 667

"QUEEN MARGARET" (Pathe)..... 678

REAL EXHIBITOR, A..... 702
"REVOLUTIONIST, THE" (Apex)..... 684
ROSS SUES PATHE FRERES..... 674
"RUNAWAY JUNE," EPISODE 3 (Mutual) 688

SCREENERS' BEEFSTEAK A JOLLY AFFAIR 652
SHEPLEY, RUTH..... 674
"SOULS ENHANCED" (True Feature).... 654
STANDARDIZING PERFORATIONS ESSENTIAL 690
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Licensed)..... 712
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Independent).. 724
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Features)..... 734
SUBWAY DISASTER IN PICTURES..... 651
SUNDAY SHOWS IN MAINE..... 699

THEATER LIGHTING 691
THEATER TAX ELDORADO..... 709
"THREE BLACK TRUMPS, THE" (Picture Playhouse) 686
TO CONTINUE THE SIMPSON BUSINESS. 650
TRAIN CALLS ON SCREEN..... 689
"TREASURE OF THE LOUZATS, THE" (Itala) 679

UNIVERSAL, NEW AND OLD SERIES.... 650

VICTOR MOORE WITH LASKY..... 650

"WHAT MIGHT HAVE BEEN" (Majestic). 685
"WILDFIRE" (World Film)..... 681
WILLIS, PAUL..... 677
"WOLVES OF SOCIETY" (Rex)..... 680

TO ADVERTISERS.

CARBONS AND CARBON ACCESSORIES.
HOMMEL, LUDWIG CO..... 744
KIEWERT, CHAS. L., CO..... 756
REISINGER, HUGO 757

ELECTRICAL & MECHANICAL EQUIPMENT.
ERKER BROS. 743
FORT WAYNE ELECTRIC WORKS..... 761
FULTON, E. E..... 759
GENERAL ELECTRIC CO..... 761
HALLBERG, J. H..... 713
MOORE-HUBBELL CO. 759
PICTURE THEATER EQUIPMENT CO.... 746
SMITH, L. C., CO..... 697
STERN MFG. CO..... 730
STRELINGER, CHAS. A..... 759
SWAAB, LOUIS M..... 743

FILM EXCHANGES.
BRADENBURG, G. W..... 760
GREATER NEW YORK FILM RENTAL Co. 750
PHOTOPLAY PRODUCTIONS RELEASING CO. 741
RELIABLE FEATURE FILM CO..... 756
S. AND A. FEATURE CO..... 761
STAR FEATURES. 749

INDEPENDENT FILM MANUFACTURERS.
MAJESTIC MOTION PICTURE CO..... 624
NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CORP.... 625
RELIANCE MOTION PICTURE CO.....626-27
THANHOUSER FILM CORP..... 623
THANHOUSER SYNDICATE CORP.....610-11
UNIVERSAL FILM MFG. CO.....612-13

LENS MANUFACTURERS.
BAUSCH & LOMB OPTICAL CO..... 751

LICENSED FILM MANUFACTURERS.
BIOGRAPH 717
EDISON, THOS. A., INC.....642-43
ESSANAY FILM MFG. CO.....614-15
KALEM 646
KLEINE, GEO. 639-41
LUBIN MFG. CO.....644-45
MINA FILMS. 755
SELIG POLYSCOPE CO..... 763
VITAGRAPH CO. OF AMERICA..... 638

MISCELLANEOUS FEATURE FILMS.
ALLIANCE FILM CORP..... 762
ALL FEATURES DISTRIBUTORS, INC.... 739
ARCTIC FILM CO.....735, 752
BORIS THOMASHEFSKY FILM CO., THE. 757
BOSWORTH, INC. 632
CALIFORNIA PICTURE CO..... 637
CELEBRATED PLAYERS FILM CO..... 756
COSMOFOTOFILM CO..... 737
COSMOS FEATURE FILM CO..... 743
FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM CO.....618-19
GAUMONT CO. 725
GLORIA AMERICAN CO..... 732
GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO..... 743
HISTORICAL FEATURE FILM CO..... 758
ITALA FILM CO. OF AMERICA..... 729
KRITERION SERVICE. 721-23
LASKY, JESSE L., FEATURE PLAY CO..620-21
LIFE PHOTO FILM CO..... 727
NIELSEN, F. O..... 714
PATHE EXCHANGE, INC.....628-31
PARAMOUNT PICTURES CORP..... 622
PICTURE PLAYHOUSE FILM CO..... 731
RENFAX FILM CO..... 733
SENNETT, MACK. 760
TRUE FEATURE CO..... 733
UNITED MOTION PICTURE PRODUCERS 616-17
WORLD FILM CORP.....633-36

MISCELLANEOUS.
ALLISON & HADAWAY..... 743
ALL COMEDY FILMS, INC..... 720
ALL RED FEATURE CO., LTD..... 726
AMUSEMENT SUPPLY CO..... 760
ATLAS MOTION PICTURE CO., INC..... 726
AUTOMATIC TICKET SELLING & CASH REGISTER CO. 715
BRADEN, JOHN. 726
BUCKEYE MOTION PICTURE CO..... 743
CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS. 747
COMSTOCK PUBLISHING CO..... 726
CORCORAN, A. J..... 726
CRANE, FRANK H..... 720
EASTMAN KODAK CO..... 760
ENAMEL PRODUCTS CO..... 751
FLAMHAFT, DR. H..... 758
EXHIBITORS—EXCHANGEMEN 752
GUNBY BROS. 759
HUNT, J. ROY..... 759
INDUSTRIAL MOVING PICTURE CO.... 743
KEEN-O-SCOPE CO. 743
KESSELL ADVERTISING SYSTEM..... 758
KINGERY MANUFACTURING CO..... 751
KRAUS MFG. CO..... 751
LUCKY 13 SANITARY CO..... 743
McGUIRE, W. C..... 726
M. P. WORLD PUBLICATIONS..... 745
NATIONAL MOVING PICTURE CO..... 749
NATIONAL TICKET CO..... 754
RAWSON & EVANS CO..... 758
ROSS-GOULD. 759
STANDARD MOTION PICTURE CO..... 761
STOCKTON'S SCRIPTWRITING SERVICE. 761
STURTEVANT, B. F., CO..... 749
TRADE CIRCULAR ADDRESSING CO.... 743

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.
DEAGAN, J. C..... 749
SINN, CLARENCE E..... 761
SEEBURG, J. P., PIANO CO..... 720

OPERA CHAIR MANUFACTURERS.
AMERICAN SEATING CO..... 761
ANDREWS, A. H..... 761
HARDESTY MFG. CO..... 761
PEABODY SCHOOL FURNITURE CO..... 761
STEEL FURNITURE CO..... 761
WISCONSIN SEATING CO..... 753

POSTERS AND FRAMES.
MENGER & RING..... 726
NEWMAN MFG. CO..... 720
THEATER SPECIALTY MFG. CO..... 720

PROJECTION MACHINE MANUFACTURERS.
ENTERPRISE OPTICAL CO..... 759
POWER, NICHOLAS. 764
PRECISION MACHINE CO..... 719
SIMPLEX PROJECTOR D. CO..... 748

PROJECTION SCREEN MANUFACTURERS.
DAY & NIGHT SCREENS, INC..... 758
GENTER, J. H., CO., INC..... 749
SIMPSON, A. I. A..... 758

SONG AND ADVERTISING SLIDES.
UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO..... 743

THEATRICAL ARCHITECTS.
DECORATORS' SUPPLY CO..... 759

107,000 PEOPLE AT THE STRAND THEATRE in One Week

There's a Reason

PERFECT, BRILLIANT, FLICKERLESS PROJECTION

Let us specify and furnish the proper equipment for your theatre and give you the Strand Projection. Our expert engineering department will give you the results.

SIMPLEX PROJECTOR D. CO., 1465 Broadway, Corner 42nd Street, New York

Mr. EXHIBITOR:

Attract the Crowd
To Your Lobby
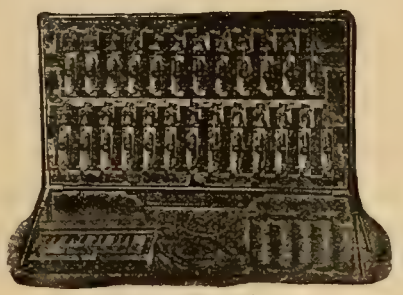
With a
Deagan Unaphone



More exciting than a
Circus Calliope
Write for Particulars
J. C. DEAGAN,
Deagan Building,
1776 Berteau Avenue, CHICAGO, ILL.

Feature Buyers Read This GREAT SACRIFICE SALE

The Wreck, 3 reels	$175
Gangsters, 3 reels	125
Moth in the Flame, 3 reels	100
When Earth Trembled, 3 reels	150
Necessity Knows No Law, 3 reels	150
Siege of Calais, 2 reels	77
The Villain, 3 reels	90
Passion Play, 3 reels	200
War of Six Nations, 2 reels	100
War of the World, 4 reels	200

and many other Features and single reels, including Keystone Comedies and Mary Pickfords. All Features have 1, 3 and 6-sheets. Upon receipt of deposit to cover express charges films will be shipped C. O. D. subject to examination and partial delivery. STAR FEATURES
Room 500A, Powers Bldg. Chicago

GO INTO THE MOVING PICTURE BUSINESS

MAKE MONEY FAST!
BE YOUR OWN BOSS!
$30 TO $50 PER NIGHT CLEAR
No Experience Needed
We furnish you with machine, film, curtain and complete outfit ready to go to work with OUR EASY PAYMENT PLAN.
Write Now for Our Large FREE Catalogue.
NATIONAL MOVING PICTURE CO.
Dept. M. P., Ellsworth Bldg., Chicago

Fresh Air means Profits

What are your patrons saying about your theatre? Has it the reputation of being a hot, stuffy, ill-ventilated house? Or do they remark to their friends upon the good, fresh air?

Sturtevant
(REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.)
PROPELLER FANS

remove all the foul air—they keep the theatre perfectly ventilated—they increase your patronage and your profits.

These fans do not merely create a draft, stir up the dust—they actually remove foul air—they can be installed in walls, windows or roof with very little expense.

Why not get bulletin 208-W?

B. F. STURTEVANT COMPANY
Hyde Park, Boston, Mass.
AND ALL PRINCIPAL CITIES OF THE WORLD

? WHOM WOULD YOU PREFER TO DO BUSINESS WITH ?
THE "FLY BY NIGHT" MANUFACTURER
WHOSE GUARANTEE IS NOT WORTH THE PAPER IT IS WRITTEN ON OR
The J. H. Genter Co., Inc., of Newburgh, N. Y., Makers of Mirroroide

the flexible, metalized glass surface Screen, the Screen with a 5-Year Guarantee, backed by an incorporated company doing business under the laws of the State of New York, and since organization 6 years ago under the same management.

Read the following from a firm we have sold 8 screens:

Winnipeg, Manitoba, Canada. Jan. 5th, 1915.

J. H. GENTER CO., INC., Newburgh, N. Y.
Gentlemen: Please ship immediately to Empress Theatre, Calgary, Alta., Canada, by express, one Mirrorolde Screen, size 16 x 21 feet. We want one with a coarse finish.
We are pleased to say that the Mirroroide Screen sent here about two weeks ago is giving very good satisfaction, and in our opinion shows one of the best pictures we ever had in this house. Yours truly, STARLAND, LIMITED, Starland Building.

Send for Large Free Samples—Prove These Claims

INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES

UNIVERSAL RELEASE DAYS.

Sunday—Eclair, L-KO, Rex.
Monday—Imp, Joker, Victor.
Tuesday—Big "U," Gold Seal, Nestor.
Wednesday—Animated Weekly, Eclair, L-KO.
Thursday—Big "U," Rex, Sterling.
Friday—Imp, Nestor, Victor.
Saturday—Bison, Joker, Powers.

BIG U.

Jan. 26—Alias "Mr. Smith" (Drama).
Jan. 28—The Unmasking (Drama).
Feb. 2—Seven & Seventy (Drama).
Feb. 4—Her Bargain (Two Parts—Society Drama).

BISON.

Jan. 23—Old Peg-Leg's Will (Two parts—Mining Drama).
Jan. 30—The Mystery Woman (Two parts—Western Drama).
Feb. 6—Ridgeway of Montana (Three Parts—Mining Drama).

ECLAIR.

Jan. 17—Romance in Bear Creek (Western—Drama).
Jan. 20—The Lone Game (Two parts—Western—Drama).
Jan. 24—The Clue of the Portrait (Drama).
Jan. 27—Cancelled (Two parts—Western Dr.).
Jan. 31—The Thief and the Chief (Com.-Dr.).
Feb. 3—The Lure of the West (Two Parts—Western Drama).
Feb. 7—Their Hobo Hero (Drama).

GOLD SEAL.

Jan. 19—Smugglers' Island (Two parts—Sea Coast—Drama).
Jan. 26—The Madcap Queen of Gredshoffen (Two parts—Drama).
Feb. 2—The Girl of the Secret Service (Two Parts—Detective Drama).

IMP.

Jan. 18—On Dangerous Ground (Drama).
Jan. 22—The House of Fear (Three parts—Melodrama).
Jan. 25—How Mary Fixed It (Comedy).
Jan. 29—The Millionaire Engineer (Two parts—R. R. Drama).
Feb. 1—The Story the Silk Hats Told (Drama).
Feb. 5—The Awaited Hour (Two Parts—Melodrama).

JOKER.

Jan. 18—The Hicktown Rivale (Comedy).
Jan. 23—Fools and Pajamas (Comedy).
Jan. 25—The Magic Mirror (Comedy).
—Views of Holland (Educational).
Jan. 30—He Fell In Love With His Mother-in-Law (Comedy).
Feb. 1—The Blank Note (Comedy).
Feb. 6—He Cured His Gout (Comedy).
—The Sierras from the Base to the Summit (Scenic).

L-KO.

Jan. 24—The Death of Simon La Gree (Comedy).
Jan. 27—Merry Mary's Marriage (Comedy).
Jan. 31—After Her Millions (Three parts—Comedy).
Feb. 3—The Butcher's Bride (Comedy).
Feb. 7—Zip and His Gang (Comedy).

NESTOR.

Jan. 26—When Eddie Took a Bath (Comedy).
—A Mile a Minute Ride (Educational).
Jan. 29—Jed's Little Elopement (Comedy).
Feb. 2—All Over the Biscuits (Comedy).
Feb. 5—Lizzie's Dizzy Career (Comedy).

POWERS.

Jan. 23—Uncle Sam's Phenomenal Achievement (Educational).
Jan. 30—The Crime of Thought (Drama).
Feb. 6—No Release This Week.

REX.

Jan. 21—Children of Chance (Drama).
Jan. 24—The Temptation of Edwin Swayne (Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 28—The Measure of a Man (Two parts—Canadian—N. W. M. P.—Drama).
Jan. 31—No Release this Week.
Feb. 4—The Girl and the Spy (Drama).
Feb. 7—The Flash (Two Parts—Human Interest Drama).

STERLING.

Jan. 7—Olive's Love Affair (Comedy).
Jan. 14—Those German Bowlers (Comedy).
Jan. 21—Dude Raffles (Comedy).
Jan. 28—Treasure Seekers (Comedy).
Feb. 4—Love and Dough (Comedy).

VICTOR.

Jan. 18—Father's Three (Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 22—No Release this week.
Jan. 25—His Guardian Angel (Two parts—Domestic Drama).
Jan. 29—How She Fooled Aunty (Comedy-Dr.).
Feb. 1—Cards Never Lie (Two Parts—Gypsy Drama).
Feb. 5—The Bribe (Drama).

UNIVERSAL SPECIAL FEATURES.

Dec. 14—The Master Key, No. 4 (Two Parts—Drama).
Dec. 21—The Master Key, No. 5 (Two Parts—Drama).
Dec. 28—The Master Key, No. 6 (Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 4—The Master Key, No. 7 (Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 11—The Master Key, No. 8 (Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 18—The Master Key, No. 9 (Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 25—The Master Key, No. 10 (Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 31—The Master Key, No. 11 (Two Parts—Drama).
Feb. 7—The Master Key, No. 12 (Two Parts—Drama).

MUTUAL RELEASE DAYS.

Sunday—Komic, Majestic, Thanhouser.
Monday—American, Keystone, Reliance.
Tuesday—Beauty, Majestic, Thanhouser.
Wednesday—American, Broncho, Reliance.
Thursday—Domino, Keystone, Mutual Weekly.
Friday—American, Kay-Bee, Majestic or Thanhouser, Princess, Reliance.
Saturday—Keystone, Reliance, Royal

AMERICAN.

Jan. 18—Refining Fires (Two parts—Sociological Drama).
Jan. 20—The Crucifixion of Al Brady (Western—Drama).
Jan. 25—Silence (Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 27—Coals of Fire (Drama).
Feb. 1—The Law of the Wilds (Two Parts—Drama).
Feb. 3—Imitations (Drama).

BEAUTY.

Jan. 19—A Girl and Two Boys (Comedy Dr.).
Jan. 26—Evan's Lucky Day (Comedy-Drama).
Feb. 2—Which Would You Rather Be? (Comedy-Drama).

BRONCHO.

Feb. 10—Shorty's Adventures In the City (Two parts—Drama).
Feb. 17—A Chinatown Mystery (Two parts—Drama).
Feb. 17—Shorty's Secret (Two Parts—Drama).
Feb. 24—The Grudge (Two Parts—Drama).

DOMINO.

Feb. 4—A Modern Noble (Two parts—Drama).
Feb. 11—The Bride of Guadeloupe (Two parts—Drama).
Feb. 18—The Secret of the Dead (Two Parts—Drama).

KAY BEE.

Jan. 29—The Famine (Drama).
Feb. 5—College Days (Two parts—Drama).
Feb. 12—In the Tennessee Hills (Two parts—Drama).
Feb. 19—Mr. Silent Haskins (Two parts—Dr.).
Feb. 26—On the High Seas (Two Parts—Drama).

KEYSTONE.

Jan. 11—Rum and Wall Paper (Comedy).
Jan. 14—Mabel's and Fatty's Wash Day (Com.).
Jan. 16—Hash, House, Mashers (Comedy).
Jan. 18—Love, Speed and Thrills (Comedy).
Jan. 18—Mabel's and Fatty's Simple Life (Two parts—Comedy).
Jan. 21—Hogan's Mussy Job (Comedy).
Jan. 23—Fatty and Mabel at the San Diego Exposition (Comedy).
Jan. 25—Colored Villainy (Comedy).

KOMIC.

Jan. 17—A Flyer in Spring Water, No. 15 of the "Bill" Series (Comedy).
Jan. 24—A Flurry in Art (Comedy).
Jan. 31—Cupid and the Pest (Comedy).
Feb. 7—Bill Turns Valet (No. 16 of the "Bill" Series—Comedy).

MAJESTIC.

Jan. 24—The Better Man (Two parts—Western Drama).
Jan. 26—The Broken Lullaby (Drama).
Jan. 31—A Farewell Dinner (Two parts—Dr.).
Feb. 2—An Old Fashioned Girl (Drama).
Feb. 7—Imar, the Servitor (Two Parts—Oriental Drama).

PRINCESS.

Jan. 22—An Innocent Burglar (Drama).
Jan. 29—The Home of Silence (Drama).
Feb. 5—Nell's Strategy (Romantic Drama).

RELIANCE.

Jan. 22—After Twenty Years (Drama).
Jan. 23—The Craven (Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 25—The World Upstairs (Drama).
Jan. 27—The Express Messenger (Drama).
Jan. 30—The Love Pirate (Two parts—Drama).
Feb. 1—At the Bottom of Things (Drama).
Feb. 3—The Beast Within (Drama).
Feb. 6—Heart Beats (Two Parts—Drama).

ROYAL.

Jan. 16—The Unwilling Bride (Comedy).
Jan. 23—Her Hero (Comedy).
Jan. 30—Ring Around Rosey (Comedy).
Feb. 6—The Star Boarder (Comedy).

THANHOUSER.

Jan. 17—A Yellowstone Honeymoon (Scenic—Drama).
Jan. 19—Graft vs. Love (Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 24—The Dog Catcher's Bride (Comedy—Drama).
Jan. 26—Finger Prints of Fate (Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 29—The Volunteer Fireman (Drama).
Jan. 31—Helen Intervenes (Drama).
Feb. 2—In the Jury Room (Two Parts—Drama).
Feb. 7—Big Brother Bill (Comedy-Drama).

SERIAL PUBLICATION CORP.

Jan. 13—Runaway June (Episode No. 1, "The Runaway Bride" (Reliance—Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 26—Runaway June (Episode No. 2—Two Parts—"The Man in the Black Van Dyke"—Drama).

THANHOUSER SYNDICATE CORP.

Dec. 21—Zudora, Episode No. 5, "The Case of the Perpetual Glare" (Two Parts—Drama).
Dec. 28—Zudora, Episode No. 6, "The Case of the McWinter Family" (Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 4—Zudora, Episode No. 7, "The Mystery of the Lost Ships" (Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 11—Zudora, Episode No. 8, "The Foiled Elopement" (Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 18—Zudora, Episode No. 9, "Kidnapped" (Two Parts—Drama).

ROLL TICKETS

PRICES

Five Thousand	$1.25
Ten Thousand	$2.50
Twenty Thousand	$4.50
Twenty-five Thousand	$5.50
Fifty Thousand	$6.50
One Hundred Thousand	$8.00

Your own special Ticket, any printing, any colors, accurately numbered; every roll guaranteed. Coupon Tickets for Prize Drawings, 5,000 $2.50. Stock Tickets, 6c per 1,000. Prompt shipments. Cash with the order. Get the samples. Send diagram for Reserved Seat Coupon Tickets, serial or dated.

NATIONAL TICKET CO.
SHAMOKIN, PA.

Bring the Crowds— and Keep Them Coming

The kind of pictures they want—the sharp, blurless, vivid pictures that say "come again"—are certain with any good film used with

Bausch and Lomb Projection Lenses

The utmost of brilliancy and sharpness, the most even illumination, the best results as a whole are certainly worth while.

And up-to-date operators know that Bausch & Lomb objectives and condensers give such results—and therefore soon pay for themselves in the increased profits of a growing business.

The Edison and Nicholas Power Machines are regularly equipped with Bausch & Lomb Lenses

Bausch & Lomb Optical Co.

566 ST. PAUL STREET, ROCHESTER, N. Y.

Largest Manufacturers of Photographic Lenses, Microscopes, Projection Apparatus, Ophthalmic Lenses and other Optical Products in America.

THESE LOBBY PICTURES are hand colored. They are a work of art. They add tone to the Theatre and denote CLASS. MAKE YOUR LOBBY NEW

Blanche Sweet
Mae Marsh
Mable Normand
Marguerite Fisher
Fred Mace
Winifred Greenwood
Maude Fealy
Irene Hunt
Henry Walthall
Robert Harron
Norma Phillips
Florence LaBadie
Anita Stewart
Lillian Walker
John Bunny
Pearl White
Kathlyn Williams
Vivian Rich
Ed. Coxen
Roscoe Arbuckle
Grace Cunard
Francis X. Bushman
Lottie Briscoe
Mary Fuller
(2 styles)

Mary Pickford
(2 styles)
Crane Wilbur
Chas. Chaplin
Ford Sterling
King Baggott
Arthur Johnson
Paul Panzer
Pearl Sindelar
Warren Kerrigan
Alice Joyce
Cleo Madison
Margaret Snow
James Cruze
Dorothy Gish
Lillian Gish
Francis Ford
Harry Benham
Earle Williams
Ella Hall
Robert Leonard
Lolita Robertson
Max Figman
Ruth Roland
Violet McMillan

Size 22 x 28 Inches. 75 Cents Each. Framed, $2.50 Each.

THE SEMI-PHOTO POST CARDS, $3 PER THOUSAND

of over 400 players is the best souvenir extant. It will increase your business. Note our other publications. Post-Cards for hand coloring. Hand Colored Post Cards.

PHOTOGRAPHS, SIZE 8 x 10, of all the prominent players, Association and Independent, 400 different names, 20 cents each.

LARGE PICTURE, semi-photo, glazed finish, size 11 x 14, $1 per doz.; 43 prominent players.

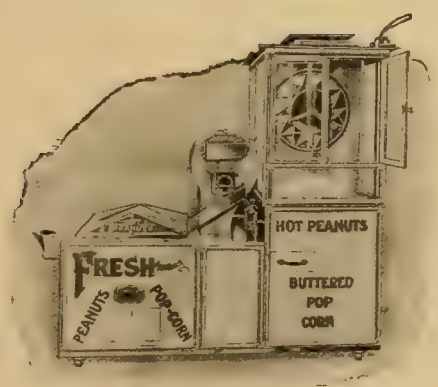
55 LARGE PICTURES HAND COLORED, size 11 x 14. Prominent players, $2.00 per dozen; in aluminum frames, 50 cents each.

Photographs for lobby display of the two and three reel features of all of the Mutual multiple reels—set of 6, $1.00. Always ready 10 days ahead of release.

KRAUS MFG. CO., 220 W. 42nd St., N. Y.

12th Floor CANDLER BUILDING

Send for Catalogue of over 400 players and samples free. Write us giving details of your dull nights, and we will send you a remedy.



Why Don't You

Place an attraction at the entrance to your show? Others have and get the nickels both as they come and as they go. Every man, woman and child a possible customer.

An attractive Popcorn Popper always attracts attention, and the pleasing aroma arising from the popping creates an appetite, that nickels are given up with pleasure.

Send for 80 page catalog P.W., showing many styles. You'll be glad.

Kingery Mfg. Company
421 Pearl Avenue, Cincinnati, Ohio

SIGN UP! with

Tepco

The Enamel Products Co.
CLEVELAND OHIO, U.S.A.

Theatre Signs

Any Style—Size—Color

They catch the public eye. They're neat, attractive, snappy. Never get bent, cracked or broken. They're weather-proof—can be quickly cleaned with a damp cloth. They last a life time and you can put them up just as quickly and easily as those expensive old cardboard kind. They're the durable, attractive, convenient signs for the theatre.

Tepco means indestructibility. It's a name given to our special enamel fused on heavy gauge steel at a temperature of nearly 2000 degrees. Tepco is sign protection.

No matter the kind of sign—any style, color or size, you can get it in Tepco. Everything from the small changeable signs reading "Program changed daily," "Reserved seats 20 cents," "Admission 10 cents," "Matinee Today," to the large enameled signs on your building.

A Tepco Set for $5.00

Here is a practical set of 12 theatre signs all ready for you. It includes three signs reading "TODAY," one for each day in the week, and two "COMING." All 4 x 17, with big white readable letters and a rich red background. Can be thumb-tacked or put up permanently. Get all or part of them. Expose them as much as you like. They're cleaned in a jiffy.

Remember the name—Tepco. Any style—size—color. Get the set now. Shipped C. O. D., with privilege of returning within one week if unsatisfactory.

The Enamel Products Company
Eddy Road and Taft Ave., Cleveland, Ohio

MISCELLANEOUS INDEPENDENT and FEATURE RELEASES

ALCO FILM CORP.

Dec. 14—The Three of Us (Rolfe—Five Parts—Drama).
Dec. 21—Tillie's Punctured Romance (Keystone Six Parts—Comedy).
Dec. 28—Springtime (Drama).
Jan. 4—The Garden of Lies (Five Parts—Dr.).

ALLIANCE FILM CORP.

Dec.—The Last Chapter (Favorite Players—Five Parts—Drama).
Jan. 4—In the Shadow (Drama).
Jan. —The Chocolate Soldier (Five Parts—Drama).

APEX.

Jan.—For King or Kaiser (Drama).
Jan—The Vultures of the Coast (Three parts—Drama).
Jan. —Revolutionist (Drama).

BLINKHORN PHOTOPLAYS CORP.

Nov.—Jane Eyre (Whitman—Four Parts—Dr.).
Nov.—The Witness Invisible (Three Parts—Dr.).
Nov.—The Aviator Traitor (Three Parts—Dr.).

BOX OFFICE ATTRACTIONS CO.

Dec.—Samson (Drama).
Dec.—A Fool There Was (Drama).
Jan—The Children of the Ghetto (Drama).
Jan—The Gilded Fool (Drama).
Jan—The Butterfly on the Wheel (Drama).
Jan—The World and His Wife (Drama).
Jan. —Gertie (Comedy).

COSMOFOTOFILM CO.

Dec.—The Black Spot (Four Parts—Drama).
Dec.—The Two Columbines (Drama).
Dec.—A Christmas Carol (Drama).
Jan.—The Victoria Cross (Three parts—War Drama).

COSMOS FEATURE FILM CORP.

Jan. 11—The Little Girl That He Forgot (Five Parts—Drama).

GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO.

Dec.—The Adventures of Gar El Hama (Four Parts—Drama).
Jan.—A Woman of Impulse (Four parts—Dr.).

HEPWORTH.

Dec.—The Basilisk (Three Parts—Drama).
Dec.—Through the Valley of Shadows (Four Parts—Drama).

ITALA FILM CO. OF AMERICA.

Dec.—Jules Porel-Serpent (Three Parts—Dr.).
Dec.—The Treasure of the Louzats (Four Parts—Drama).

IVAN FILM PRODUCTIONS, INC.

Dec.—Should a Woman Divorce? (Five Parts—Drama).

KINETOPHOTE & K. & C. BOOKING CO., INC.

Dec. 7—The Span of Life (Five Parts—Dr.).
Dec. 21—The Little Jewess (Four Parts—Dr.).

KRITERION SERVICE.

Releases for week of January 25th to 30th, inclusive:

Prejudice Conquered (Paragon—Drama).
And Billy Studies Music (Santa Barbara—Comedy).
The Curse of the Black Pearl (Alhambra—Drama).
Won by a Mustache (Thistle—Comedy).
The Arm of the Law (Santa Barbara—Drama).
His Double Did It (CK—Comedy).
Falsely Accused (Monty—Drama).
Domestic Revolutions (Punch—Comedy).
The New Sheriff (Trump—Drama).
One Night (Pyramid—Comedy).
Winter Resorts (Nolege—Sporting).
Nevada (Navajo—Drama).
Paris Hat (Alhambra—Comedy).

[Releases for week of February 1st to 7th, inclusive:]

$500 Reward (Paragon—Drama).
Percy Made Good (Santa Barbara—Comedy).
The Intercepted Gift (Alhambra—Drama).
The Boob's Elopement (Thistle—Comedy).
The Taint (Santa Barbara—Drama).
Capturing Stella (C K—Comedy).
The Wilful Son (Monty—Drama).
A Man for A' That (Punchinello—Comedy).
A Waif of the Woods (Trump—Drama).
A Wonderful Lamp (Pyramid—Comedy).
Cotton Industry (Nolege—Educational).
Thoughts of Tonight (Navajo—Drama).
Frank's Nightmare (Alhambra—Comedy).

PARAMOUNT PROGRAM.

Jan. 4—The Girl of the Golden West (Lasky-Belasco—Five Parts—Drama).
Jan. 7—The Italian (N. Y. M. P. Corp.—Five Parts—Drama).
Jan. 11—The Dancing Girl (Famous Players—Five Parts—Drama).
Jan. 14—It's No Laughing Matter (Bosworth—Four Parts—Drama).
Jan. 18—The Morals of Marcus (Famous Players—Five Parts—Drama).
Jan. 21—Young Romance (Lasky—Five Parts—Drama).
Jan. 25—The Goose Girl (Lasky—Five Parts—Drama).
Jan. 28—After-Five (Lasky-Liebler—Five Parts—Drama).

PATHE EXCHANGE, INC.

Jan—Shot in the Fracas (Pathe-Comedy).
Jan—Nick Winter and the Mysterious Bank (Pathe—Three Parts—Drama).
Jan—The Birth of Plants (Pathe—Educational).
Jan.—The Price of Tyranny (Pathe—Four Parts—Drama).
Jan.—Romiet and Julio (Pathe—Cartoon—Comedy).
—Malga, Southern Spain (Pathe—Educational).
Jan.—A Scratch of the Pen (Pathe—Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 11—The Exploits of Elaine, Episode 3—"The Vanishing Jewels" (Pathe—Two parts—Drama).
Jan.—The Tip Off (Pathe-Balboa—Three parts—Drama).
Jan.—Happy's Mishaps (Pathe—Comedy).
Jan.—Fires of Affliction (Pathe—Three parts—Drama).
Jan. 18—The Exploits of Elaine, Episode 4, "The Frozen Safe" (Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. —An Eye for an Eye (Balboa—Four Parts—Drama).
Jan. —Pete the Pedal Polisher (Comedy).
—The Valley of Chamonix (Scenic).
Jan. —Queen and Adventurer (Four Parts—Historical—Drama).

PHOTO DRAMA CO., INC.

Jan.—Time Lock Number 776 (Six Parts—Dr.).

PICTURE PLAYHOUSE FILM CO.

Jan. 22—The Three Black Trumps (Four Parts—Drama).
Jan. 27—The Explosion of Fort B 2 (Five Parts—Drama).
Feb. 2—The Black Envelope (Four Parts—Drama).

SAWYER.

As a Man Sows (Aquilla—Five Parts—Drama).
A Factory Magdalen (Five Parts—Drama).
The Lady of Lyons (Five Parts—Drama).
Jan. 31—The Sibyl of the Film (Comedy Dr.).

STRAND FILM CO.

December—A Strange Adventure (Drama).

SUNSET MOTION PICTURE CO.

Jan.—Rescue of the Steffansson Arctic Expedition (Topical).

UNITED WARNERS.

Jan. 3—Oh! You City Girl (Superba—Comedy).
Jan. 5—Tit for Tat (Comedy).
Jan. 5—The Honor of Bill Jackson (Features Ideal—Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 6—Sapho-Up-to-Date (Superba—Comedy).
Jan. 6—Never Again (Comedy).
Jan. 7—By-Buy Baby (Luna—Comedy).
Jan. 9—Uncle Abner's Will (Comedy).
Jan. 12—The Eyes of Justice (Features Ideal—Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 17—Oliver Twist Sadly Twisted (Superba—Comedy).
Jan. 19—The Other Woman (Features Ideal—Three Parts—Drama).
Jan. 20—Henpecked Smith (Starlight—Comedy).
Jan. 21—Such a Business (Luna—Comedy).
Jan. 23—Married in Disguise (St. Louis—Comedy).
Jan. 23—When Shadows Fall (Premier—Comedy).
Jan. 24—Novelty in Servants (Superba—Comedy).
Jan. 26—A Mix-Up (Grandin—Comedy).
Jan. 27—Her Lesson (Starlight—Comedy).
Jan. 28—Hickville's Diamond Mystery (Luna—Comedy).
Jan. 29—Courting Trouble (Gaumont—Comedy).
Jan. 30—Her Phoney Lovers (Jupiter—Comedy).

WORLD FILM CORP.

Jan. 11—Bertlevyette—New York and Its People (L. & O.—Topical).
Jan. 11—Deep Purple (Lieber—Five Parts—Drama).
Jan. 18—Mignon (Calif. M. P. Corp.—Five Parts—Drama).
Jan. 25—Wildfire (Shubert—Drama).
Jan. 18—Bertlevyette—Famous Rulers of the World (L. & O.—Topical).
Jan. 25—Bertlevyette—Famous Men of To-day (L. & O.—Topical).

THE STRAND THEATRE

NEW YORK

held a record audience at the first showing of Capt. Kleinschmidt's filmed version of an

ARCTIC HUNT

The dramatic critic of the New York Evening Sun had the following to say of the show: "While these films are educational they are also highly dramatic and thrilling besides, and they earn the outburst of applause that greets them."

If these pictures appeal to a critical "Strand" audience, You, Mr. State Rights Buyer, are losing a good card by allowing a competitor to buy in your territory.

Wire Immediately for Unsold Territory.

ARCTIC FILM COMPANY

220 WEST 42d STREET NEW YORK

Write for Bookings for New Jersey and New York State

"The Chairs You've Wished For"

FOOLPROOF, made of a combination of metals, so constructed as to eliminate the breakage of seat hinges—preserving in their rigidity (which is the essential for public usage)—poised and formed to gain the utmost in comfort, beauty and sanitary qualities—the theatreman who knows will appreciate these chairs.

WHATEVER STYLE YOU SELECT---
WHATEVER ITS PRICE---YOU WILL FIND

CASTEEL
THEATRE CHAIRS

"Eminently satisfactory in every particular"

WISCONSIN SEATING FACTORIES

"Capital Stock Paid in, One Million Dollars"

Port Washington New London Grafton Sheboygan

ADDRESS THEATRE CHAIR SALES DEPARTMENT

New London, Wisconsin

Opera Chair Agents: Very little territory left. Write us now.

NOTE—These are not the so-called "Non-breakable Steel" Chairs

LICENSED RELEASE DATES

RELEASE DAYS.

Monday—Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Pathe, Selig, Vitagraph.

Tuesday—Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.

Wednesday—Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Pathe, Selig, Vitagraph.

Thursday—Biograph, Essanay, Lubin, Mina, Selig, Vitagraph.

Friday—Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.

Saturday—Biograph. Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.

BIOGRAPH.

Jan. 21—The Gang's New Member (Drama).
Jan. 22—Heart's Hunger (Drama).
Jan. 23—His Night Out (Comedy).
—In the Boarding House (Comedy).
Jan. 25—Diogenes' Weekly, No. 23 (Comedy).
—The Boob and the Baker (Comedy).
Jan. 26—File 113 (Special—Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 28—Milady's Boudoir (Drama).
Jan. 29—Her Slumbering Conscience (Drama)
Jan. 30—The Dancer's Ruse (Drama).

EDISON.

Jan. 19—Olive's Manufactured Mother (Ninth of Olive's Opportunities—Drama).
Jan. 20—The Wonders of Magnetism (Educational).
—A Weighty Matter for a Detective (Comedy).
Jan. 22—Tracked by the Hounds (Special—Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 23—Mr. Daly's Wedding Day (Drama).
Jan. 25—Joey and His Trombone (Comedy).
Jan. 26—Olive In the Mannouse (Tenth of "Olive's Opportunities" Series—Dr.).
Jan. 27—The Terrible Trunk (Comedy).
—Lodgings for Two (Comedy).
Jan. 29—An Invitation and An Attack (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 30—In His Father's Footsteps (Edu.).
Feb. 1—Found—A Flesh Reducer (Comedy).
Feb. 2—Olive and the Heirloom (11th of the "Olive's Opportunities" Series—Drama).
Feb. 3—Seen from the Gallery (Comedy).
—A Thorn Among Roses (Comedy).
Feb. 5—Oh! Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight (Special—Two Parts—Drama).
Feb. 6—The Stone Heart (Drama).

ESSANAY.

Jan. 19—The Misjudged Mr. Hartley (Comedy—Drama).
Jan. 20—The Fable of Hifaluting Tillie and Her Plain Parents (Comedy).
Jan. 21—Sentimental Sophie (Western Comedy).
Jan. 22—The Lieutenant Governor (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 23—Broncho Billy and the Baby (Reg. in U. S. Patent Office) (Western Drama).
Jan. 25—Two Hearts That Beat as Ten (Com.).
Jan. 26—At the End of a Perfect Day (Drama).
Jan. 27—The Fable of "The Syndicate Lover" (Comedy).
Jan. 28—When Slippery Slim Bought the Cheese (Western Comedy).
Jan. 29—The Ambition of the Baron (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 30—Broncho Billy and the False Note (Reg. in U. S. Patent Office—Western—Dr.).
Feb. 1—The New Teacher (Comedy).
Feb. 2—The Creed of the Clan (Drama).
Feb. 3—The Fable of Elvira and Farina and the Meal Ticket (Comedy).
Feb. 4—Sophie's Home-Coming (Western Comedy).
Feb. 5—Third Hand High (Special—Two Parts—Drama).
Feb. 6—Broncho Billy's Greaser Deputy (Reg. in U. S. Patent Office—Western Drama).

KALEM.

Jan. 18—The Leech (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 19—Cornelius and the Wild Man (Comedy).
—A Night in New Jersey (Cartoon Comedy).
Jan. 20—The Cabaret Singer (Special—Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 22—Cooky's Adventure (Comedy).
Jan. 23—The Fast Mail's Danger (Eleventh of the "Hazards of Helen" Series—Dr.).
Jan. 25—The Tragedy of Bear Mountain (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 26—A Model Wife (Comedy).
—Fatty's Echo (Comedy).
Jan. 27—The Affair of the Deserted House (First Episode of "The Girl Detective" Series (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 29—The Cause of It All (Comedy).
Jan. 30—The Little Engineer (Twelfth of the "Hazards of Helen" Railroad Series—Drama).
Feb. 1—The Swindler (Special—Two Parts—Drama).
Feb. 2—The Insurance Nightmare (Comedy).
Feb. 3—The Apartment House Mystery (Second of "The Girl Detective" Series—Special—Two Parts—Drama).
Feb. 5—The Hicksville Tragedy Troupe (Comedy).
Feb. 6—The Escape on the Fast Freight (Thirteenth of the "Hazards of Helen" Railroad Series—Drama).

LUBIN.

Jan. 11—Patsy Bolivar, No. 3—Patsy at College (Comedy).
Jan. 12—Baseball and Trouble (Comedy).
Jan. 13—When Honor Wakes (Special—Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 14—The Friendship of Lamond (Special—Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 15—Out of the Storm (Drama).
Jan. 16—Mr. Stubb's Pen (Comedy).
—Spaghetti and Lottery (Comedy).
Jan. 18—Patsy Bolivar Series No. 4—Patsy's Vacation (Comedy).
Jan. 19—Gus and the Anarchists (Comedy).
—Cupid's Target (Comedy).
Jan. 20—Her Weakling Brother (Special—Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 21—The Shanghaied Baby (Special—Three Parts—Drama).
Jan. 22—A Question of Conscience (Drama).
Jan. 23—Shoddy, the Tailor (Comedy).
Jan. 25—Patsy Bolivar—No. 5—"Patsy in Business" (Comedy).
Jan. 26—Green Backs and Red Skins (Comedy).
Jan. 27—The Attorney for the Defense (Special—Three parts—Drama).
Jan. 28—In Her Mother's Footsteps (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 29—The Language of the Dumb (Drama).
Jan. 30—Another Shade of Green (Comedy).

MINA.

Jan. 14—Distilled Spirits (Comedy).
Jan. 21—Dare-Devil Harry (Comedy).
Jan. 28—Black and White (Comedy).
Feb. 4—In the Palmy Days (Comedy).

SELIG.

Jan. 18—His Fighting Blood (Special—Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 18—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 5 (News).
Jan. 19—Cactus Jim's Shop Girl (Western—Comedy).
Jan. 20—Between Matinee and Night (Drama).
Jan. 21—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 6 (News).
Jan. 22—Who Wants to be a Hero (Farce-Comedy).
Jan. 23—The Primitive Way (Drama).
Jan. 25—The Spirit of the Violin (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 25—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 7, 1915 (News).
Jan. 26—The Grizzly Gulch Chariot Race (Farce Comedy).
Jan. 27—Heart's Desire (Drama).
Jan. 28—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 8, 1915 (News).
Jan. 29—She Wanted to be a Widow (Farce Comedy).
Jan. 30—The Hunt In Sycamore Gap (Melodrama).
Feb. 1—The Vision of the Shepherd (Special—Two Parts—Drama).
Feb. 1—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 9, 1915 (News).
Feb. 2—Forked Trails (Western—Drama).
Feb. 3—Just Like a Woman (Drama).
Feb. 4—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 10, 1915 (News).
Feb. 5—Cats (Comedy).
Feb. 6—The Leopard's Lair (Jungle-Zoo—Drama).

VITAGRAPH.

Jan. 18—The Fates and Flora Fourflush—A Race for Life (Part Three of the Ten-Billion-Dollar Vitagraph Mystery Serial—Comedy).
Jan. 19—The Evil Men Do (Broadway Star Feature—Three Parts—Drama).
Jan. 20—The Right Girl (Comedy).
Jan. 21—The Navajo Ring (Drama).
Jan. 22—Wanted, a Nurse (Comedy).
Jan. 23—War (Special—Two Parts—Comedy).
Jan. 25—The Slightly Worn Gown (Comedy).
Jan. 26—The Life of Game (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 27—The Home Coming of Henry (Comedy).
Jan. 28—The Barrier of Faith (Drama).
Jan. 29—The Chief's Goat (Comedy).
Jan. 30—Under the Paint (Broadway Star Feature—Special—Three parts—Drama).
Feb. 1—Cabman Kate (Comedy).
Feb 2—How Cissy Made Good (Broadway Star Feature—Special—Three Parts—Comedy).
Feb. 3—The Combination (Comedy).
Feb. 4—The Understudy; or Behind the Scenes (Drama).
Feb. 5—The Green Cat (Comedy).
Feb. 6—For Another's Crime (Special—Two Parts—Drama).

MISCELLANEOUS LICENSED FEATURES.

BIOGRAPH.

Nov.—The Woman in Black (Four Parts—Dr.).
Nov.—Under the Gaslight (Four Parts—Dr.).

BROADWAY STAR FEATURES.

Dec.—The Tangle (Four parts—Drama).
Dec.—The Locked Door (Three parts—Drama).
Dec.—Sylvia Gray (Four parts—Drama).
Jan. 5—Two Women (Three parts—Drama).
Jan. 16—The Sage Brush Gal (Three parts—Drama).
Jan. 19—The Evil Men Do (Three parts—Dr.).
Jan. 30—Underneath the Paint (Three parts—Drama).
Feb. 2—How Cissy Made Good (Three parts—Comedy).
Feb. 13—Mother's Roses (Three parts—Dr.).

EDISON.

Dec. 19—Fantasma (Five parts—Drama).

ESSANAY.

Nov. 19—The Tell-Tale Hand (Three Parts—Drama).
Dec. 19—The Battle of Love (Drama).
Jan. 18—When Love and Honor Called (Dr.).

GEORGE KLEINE.

Nov. 15—Julius Caesar (Six Parts—Drama).
Nov.—Officer No. 666 (Five Parts—Comedy).
Jan. 18—Du Barry (Six parts—Drama).

KALEM.

December—The School for Scandal (Four Parts—Drama).

LUBIN.

Nov.—The College Widow (Five Parts—Com.).
Dec.—The White Mask (Drama).
Dec.—The Valley of the Lost Hope (Drama).
Jan.—The District Attorney (Drama).

SELIG.

January—The Carpet from Bagdad (Five Parts—Drama).
January—The Rosary (Drama).
January—The Servant in the House (Drama).
January—The Ne'er Do Well (Drama).
January—A Texas Steer (Five Parts—Comedy).
January—The Crisis (Drama).
January—History of the World's Greatest War (Five Parts—Topical).

Greater New York Film Rental Company
All Specials Supplied. Main Office: 126-132 West 46th Street. Depot: 116-118 East 14th Street, New York.
Licensed Film Supplied to Licensed Exhibitors Write or Call for Particulars

FUN AND LAUGHTER
BREAK THROUGH EVERY REEL OF
MINA FILMS
The brightest, freshest, newest comedies! They have made a sensational hit. You needn't take our word for it—read the reviews in the World and News—then have your nearest licensed exchange serve you with MinA Films regularly. Splendid one and THREE SHEET posters to pull the crowds and a jolly, slashing good picture to delight them. Released every Thursday on the General Film Program.

NOW BOOKING WISCONSIN

VITAGRAPH-LIEBLER'S PRODUCTION OF HALL CAINE'S POWERFUL STORY

"THE CHRISTIAN"

IN EIGHT MASSIVE PARTS

Playing to big RECORD receipts everywhere
Write or wire for early bookings.

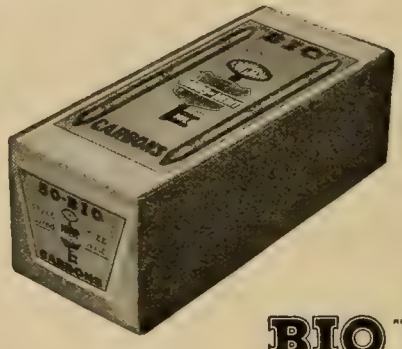
RELIABLE FEATURE FILM CO.

M. Schwartz
Manager

605 Schiller Building, Chicago

A Whole Lot of Bright, White Light

IN A SMALL PACKAGE



At all Live Film Exchanges

...OR...

Charles L. Kiewert Co.
NEW YORK

SAN FRANCISCO
143 22nd St.

MILWAUKEE
114 Huron St.

BIO CARBONS

OF COURSE!

ALLIANCE PROGRAM

One "Worth While" Feature Each Week

For
Illinois and Indiana
Controlled by

Celebrated Players Film Co.

Leaders in Filmdom's Progress

64 W. Randolph Street, Chicago

See Alliance Films Corp. ad. this issue for releases

Why Use Inferior Carbons?

ELECTRA

PINK LABEL

CARBONS

Can now be had again from all first class dealers.

Don't spoil your pictures by using carbons which never were intended for Motion Picture Projection.

Why spend extra money for Special Screen, First Run Film, Expensive Projection Machines and then spoil the whole result by using Inferior Carbons for the sake of saving a few cents per day?

"ELECTRA" PINK LABEL CARBONS

are specially made for Motion Picture Projection. They are a guarantee of well-defined pictures.

SOLE IMPORTER

HUGO REISINGER, 11 Broadway, New York

EXHIBITORS: HERE'S WHAT YOU'VE BEEN WAITING FOR:

THE BORIS THOMASHEFSKY FILM CO.

of Famous Yiddish Players, Featuring MR. THOMASHEFSKY — HIMSELF — in All Productions Will Produce

All the Modern Yiddish Successes in the Latest Approved Motion Pictures

Direct from Stage to Screen

FILMS

DRAMATIC REALISTIC
ROMANTIC HUMOROUS

די גרעסטע אידישע סוקסעס פיעסען
אויפגענומען אין אויסגעפירט אין פיקטשורס פון
ה' בארים טהאמאשעפסקי

These Big Features Are Ready for Immediate Distribution

שמע ישראל	דאם פינטעלע יוד	די אידישע קרוין
Hear Ye Israel	The Period of Jew	The Jewish Crown

All Exhibitors who Play to Yiddish Patrons Will Appreciate the Tremendous Draft of These Splendid Pictures which will again present the Distinguished Yiddish Star to Thousands of Theatregoers who have seen him in New York and on tour and will introduce him to Countless More Thousands who know and admire him because of the Reputation he has made for himself. For Bookings, Apply Directly to

BORIS THOMASHEFSKY

National Theatre, Second Avenue and Houston Street, New York City

L. LAWRENCE BARENKOPF, Business Manager. SIDNEY M. GOLDEN, Director.

WHEN YOU SELL
A MOVING PICTURE SCREEN OF QUALITY
THIS IS THE ANSWER

"I cannot praise your screen too highly, and I prize it as high as that praise goes."

FOR CATALOGUES, SAMPLES AND TESTS, WRITE

DAY AND NIGHT SCREENS, Inc., 110 West 40th St., New York

TELEPHONE 7930 BRYANT

SIMPSON SOLAR SCREEN

The Original Daylight Screen
(Patented 1908)

THE BEST THE CHEAPEST

It has been proven that Aluminum is the only metal usable for a projection surface that will neither tarnish nor deteriorate.

That is why we use it.

Why is Aluminum the perfect projection surface?

Because it is White.

Thousands in use
—Ask the man who has one—

For further particulars address

ALFRED L. SIMPSON
113 West 132nd Street, New York City

N. B.—Our patents cover metalized screens—infringers will be prosecuted.

Give Your Theater the Fragrance of a Garden of Flowers

Problem of Destroying Foul Odors and Purifying Air of Picture Houses Solved by New Scientific Chemical Discovery

Dr. H. Flamhaft, a well-known Chemist of Syracuse, N. Y., has solved a problem that has long puzzled many a Moving Picture House Manager. He has succeeded, after many experiments, in producing a highly concentrated and very powerful disinfectant, that not only purifies the air, almost instantly destroying Foul Odors and making wholesome the close, tainted atmosphere of the theatre, but that leaves a delicious, delicate and lasting fragrance equal to that of the highest grade floral perfumes. Moving picture managers who have tested this new floral disinfectant unite in declaring it the very best and most economical antiseptic they have ever used. A gallon of this product, which is called is equal in strength to 10 gallons of the ordinary weak disinfectant solution and in a large house will give splendid results for weeks. To show what it will do, upon receipt of $3 we will send you a gallon and an absolute guarantee of satisfaction. It is suggested that managers who have experienced difficulty in purifying the air of their houses take advantage of this trial offer. Address

Airozone—The Oxygen Air Purifier,

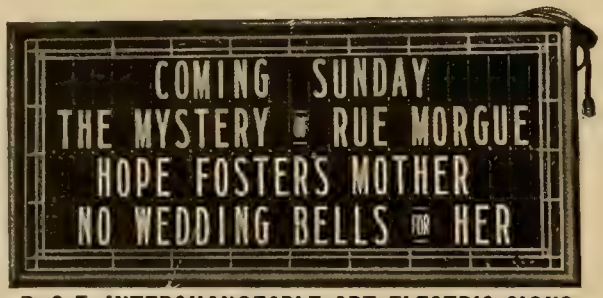
DR. H. FLAMHAFT, 416 S. Salina St., Syracuse, N. Y.

10,000 SIGNS IN ONE



R. & E. INTERCHANGEABLE ART ELECTRIC SIGNS

The most attractive and practicable sign ever manufactured. Furnished with as many lines of lettering as desired. All or any part of the lettering can be white, red, blue or green. A strikingly handsome sign night or day. Write for descriptive circular and prices.

Rawson & Evans Co., 711-12 W. Washington Boulevard, Chicago

Business-Bringing Banners

Hand Painted, Beautifully Colored, Attractive, Artistic

EVERY TUESDAY
THE GREATEST SERIAL STORY OF THEM ALL
THE EXPLOITS OF ELAINE
featuring ARNOLD DALY, PEARL WHITE AND ALL STAR CAST
READ THE STORY IN THE SUNDAY AMERICAN... SEE IT IN MOTION PICTURES HERE...

This is a sample of our 12-foot Muslin Banner for $1.10, sent by return mail after receipt of your copy and M. O. Substitute any wording you desire and we supply an exclusive, elaborate design. One Sheet Cards at 75c.; three for $2.00. Send for catalogue.

Kessel Advertising System

71 West 23rd Street New York City

COMEDIES

Six releases per month—Animated cartoons and comedy.

Terms on application, pictures subject to examination.

Historical Feature Film Company

105 WEST MONROE ST., CHICAGO

The "Fulco" Book No. 5

NOW READY—ASK FOR IT

FITS YOUR POCKET

Most complete catalogue in existence of machines and supplies, involved in the presentation of

MOVING PICTURES

Buy the Best From the Best Place to Buy

E. E. FULTON CO.
152 W. LAKE ST., CHICAGO
Sole Agents for the Wonderful "Guil Pastil"

QUALITY FIRST!!

YOUR NEGATIVE DEVELOPED, PRINTED, TITLED and SHIPPED within 12 hours.

5c. per foot complete

Local work given preference over all other.

6c. TITLES per foot

We lead, let those that can, follow.

GUNBY BROS., Inc.,
145 West 45th Street, New York City

A man's mail will reach him where no mortal can

Mailing Lists

99% Guaranteed

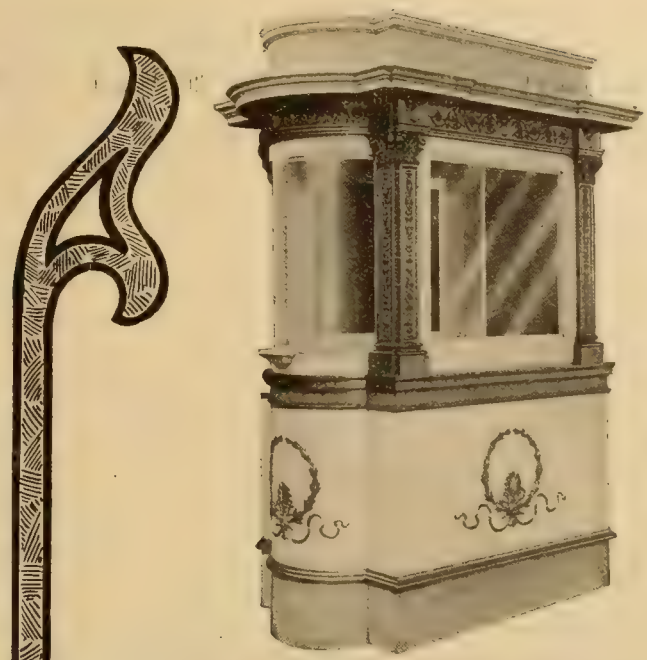
covering all classes of business, professions, trades or individuals. Send for our complete catalogue showing national count on 7,000 classifications.

Ross-Gould 570 N. 9th St. St. Louis

OZO-CARBI

MOVING PICTURE LIGHT

SUBSTITUTE FOR ELECTRIC
CHEAPER AND BRIGHTER THAN CALCIUM
OVER 500 IN USE
Moore-Hubbell & C. 714 Masonic Temple CHICAGO



TICKET BOOTHS
FOR
MOTION PICTURE THEATRES

DESIGNED AND MANUFACTURED BY

The Decorators Supply Co., Chicago

SHOW ROOMS AND FACTORY LOCATED CORNER ARCHER AVE., LEO & LIME STS

SEND US YOUR BLUE PRINTS, AND WE WILL WORK OUT THE MOST ARTISTIC AND EFFICIENT LIGHTING SCHEME

Send for our catalog of moving picture fronts

AT LIBERTY

CAMERAMAN

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED

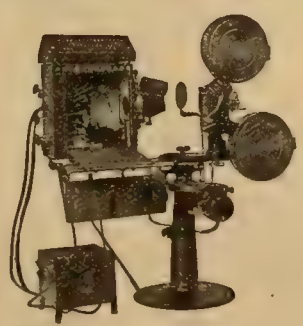
J. ROY HUNT, Woodside, L. I., N. Y.

OUR CATALOGUE OF

BRUSH ELECTRIC LIGHTING SETS

contains more useful information about electric lighting in general than any other book ever issued. Write for it today.

THE CHAS. A. STRELINGER CO.,
Box MP-2, Detroit, Mich., U. S. A.



THE MOTIOGRAPH

The Standard of Efficiency

COSTS LESS — LIFE LONGER
WORTH MORE — UP-KEEP SMALLER

Write for Motiograph Catalog and Literature.

The Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co. 564-572 W. Randolph St., Chicago, Ill.

Eastern Office, 19 West 23d St., New York

Western Office, 833 Market St., San Francisco

Did You See

MACK SENNETT

Mack Sennett's Comedy Production

"Tillie's Punctured Romance"?

Watch for the Next SENNETT FEATURE

Bigger Better Funnier

A clear picture

is as essential as a good scenario. Because the basic product is right the clearest pictures are on Eastman Film. Identifiable by the stencil mark in the margin.

EASTMAN KODAK CO.,
ROCHESTER, N. Y.

BARGAIN LIST OF FEATURES

Title.	Length.	Maker.	Posters.	Price.
JACK SHEPPARD	4,000	IDEAL	1-3-6	$240
Daughter of a Jew	2,500	Drankoff	1-3	125
Reunited at the Coffin (Asta Nielsen).	2,500	Union	1-3-6 (as new)	150
Wheels of Fate	3,000	Monopol	1-3-6	150
Victims of White Terror	4,000	Messter	1-2/3-6	175
The Emigrants	6,000	Monopol	1-2/3-6	250
Possessed of the Demon	5,000	Deu Bios	1-2/3-6	250
Honeymoon under Difficulties	4,000	Deu Bios	2/1-1/3-6	200
Into the Depths (Asta Nielsen)	3,000	Union	1-3-6	150
Aeronautical Intrigue (Asta Nielsen)	4,000	Union	1-3-6	175
The Cry of the Child (Asta Nielsen)	3,000	Union	1-3-9	125
Exposure of the White Slave Traffic	3,800	Gt. North.	2/1-2/3-6	150
The Devil's Gap	4,000	Werner	1-3-4	175
The Black Ship	3,000	Dragon	1-3-6	85
Engine of Death	4,000	Apex	1-3-6	85
Mexico	4,000	Mexico	1-3-6	90
And There Was Light (Helen Gardner).	4,000	Gardner	1-3-6	125
For the Queen's Honor	4,000	Ambrosio	1-3-6	125
Diamonds of Destiny	4,000	Imperator	1-3-6	100
Detective Finn	4,000	Imperator	1-3-6	100
Golden Beetle	4,000	Cines	1-3-6	200
The Little Angel (Asta Nielsen)	5,200	Union	2/1-2/3-6	200
Spanish Blood (Asta Nielsen)	4,500	Union	1-3-6	150

First Class Single Reel Dramas, Comedies (including Keystone Comedies) always For Sale or Rent. Write for Lists.

G. W. BRADENBURGH 802 Vine Street, Philadelphia, Pa

We Can Equip Your Theatre Complete

We are Distributors for the Power's, Edison, Motiograph and Simplex Machines, and Genuine parts, also Poster Frames, Indirect and Semi-Indirect Lighting Fixtures, Tickets, Screens, etc.

We sell for cash or on the easy payment plan.

Write today for our new catalog just off the press.

AMUSEMENT SUPPLY COMPANY,
160 No. Fifth Avenue, Chicago, Illinois.

Non-Breakable and Sanitary STEEL and CAST IRON
HIGH Quality
LOW Price

Opera Chairs
immediate shipment on many styles; Second Hand Chairs; out-of-door seating. Send measurements for FREE SEATING PLAN. Mention this paper.

STEEL FURNITURE CO.
Grand Rapids, Mich.; New York, 150 Fifth Ave.

THE PEABODY SCHOOL FURNITURE CO
North Manchester, Ind.

Opera Chairs
Folding Chairs
Complete Line
Prompt Shipments
Write for Catalogue
With Direct Factory Prices

COMPENSARC

That's the device that saves Moving Picture men two-thirds on their electric light bills, and yet gives better light. Did you see our ad last week? Well, don't look it up. Just write for our

BOOKLET 15018

FORT WAYNE ELECTRIC WORKS
of General Electric Company
1402 Broadway
FORT WAYNE, INDIANA
733

Stockton's Scriptwriting Service

To aid those who wish to guard against the formation of bad writing habits, or who wish to estimate their progress, I offer the following service:

Script Criticism For a fee of two dollars for each reel, I will read your manuscript and write a personal letter, pointing out the faults of plotting, technical development, manuscript preparation, etc. Sometimes I can help you to make the script salable, but I do not guarantee a sale. I do not revise manuscript; I do not typewrite it, nor do I offer it for sale. I simply write you a letter that tells you what the trouble is.

Plot Estimates If your stories do not sell and you want to know why, send me five synopses and one full script. I will criticise the script and tell you whether it is your plot or your development that is wrong. The fee for this service is $5 for the five synopses and additional plot. Synopses must not run more than 300 words each. Send a synopsis of your undeveloped plot and fee of one dollar and you will be advised as to whether it will pay you to develop the same.

Please Note My fees do not include envelopes or return postage. Send prepaid and self addressed return envelope and remit in New York exchange; not local checks. I reserve the right to return unread (with fee) any story or plot that does not warrant treatment. All scripts must be typewritten.

REV. E. BOUDINOT STOCKTON, S.T.B.
161 So. Arlington Ave., East Orange, N. J.

OPERA CHAIRS

FOR EVERY PURPOSE
1,000 STYLES
ESTABLISHED 1865
WRITE FOR CAT. NO. 31

The A. H. Andrews Co.
115-117 So. Wabash Ave.
Chicago, Ill.
Branches in all Leading Cities
New York Office
1472 Broadway, Long Acre Bldg.
Seattle Office
508-10-12 First Ave., So.
San Francisco Office
782 Mission St.

The "Standardized" Theatre Chairs

Do you want a life-saving chair?
Do you want a space-saving chair?
Do you want a sanitary chair?
Do you want a scientifically built, double standard chair?

We operate the largest exclusive theatre chair factory in the world, AND SELL DIRECT TO YOU. WRITE US

The HARDESTY MFG. CO., Canal Dover, Ohio

REAL QUALITY CHAIRS FOR QUALITY REEL SHOWS

Ask for FREE booklet V-2 upholstered Veneer Seating V-3
If you are interested in Motion Picture Theatre Seating

send ground sketch and we will draft for you FREE seating plan showing the most economical arrangement of seating for your theatre.

American Seating Company

Display Rooms and Installation Service
14 E. Jackson Blvd., CHICAGO 15 E. 32nd St., NEW YORK
Boston, Pittsburgh, St. Louis, Cincinnati and Forty Other Large Cities

PRINTING and DEVELOPING FILM TITLES

Give us a trial. All work guaranteed
Prompt service. Prices right
If there is any event that you want photographed, we can furnish expert camera men.
STANDARD MOTION PICTURE CO.
Phone, Central 2853, 5 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago

TYPE W FLAME ARC
Powerful LAMPS Economical
For brilliantly illuminating the outside of your theatre
General Electric Company
4987 General Office, Schenectady, N. Y.

Are You Tired

of playing waltzes and popular songs for all your pictures? Try "bringing out" the dramatic scenes with dramatic music. The

Orpheum Collection

contains the best music of this kind published. Issued in Three Series:

No. 1, No. 2 and No. 3

Piano, (24 pages each), 58 cts. for each series; $1.15 for any two; $1.70 for all three. Violin, 40 cts. each; 75 cts. for any two; $1.05 for all three. Cornet, 35 cts., each; 65 cts. any two; 95 cts. all three. First and second series have parts for Cello, Flute, Clarinet, Trombone and Drums. Practical for piano alone or in combination with any above instruments. Discounts on orders for four or more parts. Send for free sample pages. Note new address.

CLARENCE E. SINN
1942 West 21st St. Chicago, Ill.

SPECTRO

IS A

MONEY MAKER

DON'T MISS IT

5 Big Acts
200 Thrilling Scenes

FOR OPEN DATES
Write or call
THE S AND A FEATURE FILM CO.
145 W. 45th St., New York

Other good 3 and 4 reel features

ALLIANCE

"YOU CAN'T DO IT!!!"

You can't expect people to come into your theatre unless you give them a thundering good reason why they ought to come in.

The only reason is a good show, and a good show can only be given by a good film. We don't know anything about the other fellows' film but we do know that you can give a money-getting show—the show with the reason—with the features on the Alliance Programme.

Don't expect to pack your theatre unless you offer the public a reason to come in because—

"YOU CAN'T DO IT!!!"

OUR LIST OF REASONS

"THE CHOCOLATE SOLDIER" with ORIGINAL ALL STAR BROADWAY CAST
"IN THE SHADOW" with GORDON DE MAINE and WM. A. WILLIAMS
"THE LAST CHAPTER" with CARLYLE BLACKWELL
"THE TRUTH WAGON" with MAX FIGMAN and LOLITA ROBERTSON
"THE LAST EGYPTIAN" with J. FARRELL McDONALD and VIVIAN REED
"HEARTS AND FLOWERS" with MRS. THOMAS WHIFFEN
"THE MAN WHO COULD NOT LOSE" with CARLYLE BLACKWELL
"THE HOOSIER SCHOOLMASTER" with MAX FIGMAN and LOLITA ROBERTSON
"WHEN FATE LEADS TRUMP" with OCTAVIA HANDWORTH
"THE KEY TO YESTERDAY" with CARLYLE BLACKWELL
"THE PATH FORBIDDEN" with OCTAVIA HANDWORTH
"AT THE OLD CROSS ROADS" with ESTHA WILLIAMS

EXCHANGES

ALLIANCE FILM SERVICE (A. A. Weiland, Gen. Mgr.) Pittsburgh office, 115 Fourth Ave., serves Ohio, Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia. Cincinnati office, 224½ Fourth St., serves Western and Southern Ohio, Kentucky and Southwestern parts of Virginia.

ALL THEATRES FILM AND ACCESSORY CO., INC., Owners of Alliance Exchanges. New York State. Buffalo office, 18 Chapin Block; New York City office, 126 West 46th St.; M. F. Tobias, Gen. Mgr.

ALLIANCE FILM SERVICE, controlled by Eastern Feature Film Co., Inc., 57 Church St., Boston, Mass. New England.

ALLIANCE FEATURE FILM SERVICE, controlled by Mecca Feature Film Co., 130 West 46th St. Northern New Jersey.

ELECTRIC THEATRE SUPPLY CO., Vine and 13th Sts., Philadelphia, Pa. Southern New Jersey, Eastern Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware, District of Columbia and Virginia.

CASINO FEATURE FILM CO., Dime Savings Bank Bldg., Detroit, Mich. Michigan.

ALLIANCE FILM CO. OF TEXAS, 1905½ Commerce St., Dallas, Texas. Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana, Arkansas.

HYBAR FILM CORP., Forsythe Building, Atlanta, Ga. Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Tennessee, Florida, North and South Carolina.

CELEBRATED PLAYERS FILM CO., 64 West Randolph St., Chicago, Ill. Illinois and Indiana.

NAT A. MAGNER CO., Pacific Bldg., San Francisco, Cal.; 218 Superba Theatre Bldg., Los Angeles, Cal. California, Nevada and Arizona.

DES MOINES FILM SUPPLY CO., 218 Utica Bldg., Des Moines, Ia. Iowa.

MONARCH FEATURE FILM CO., 12th and Wyandotte Sts., Kansas City, Mo. Missouri, Kansas and Nebraska.

ZENITH FEATURE FILM CO., Lyceum Bldg., Duluth, Minn. Minnesota, North and South Dakota and Wisconsin. Milwaukee Office, 407 Manhattan Building.

ALLIANCE FILM SERVICE, controlled by Noted Players Feature Film Co., 613 New Birks Bldg., Montreal. Jas. D. Goldie, Gen. Mgr. Canada.

ALLIANCE PROGRAMME FEATURE SERVICE. Exchanges located at 710 Northwestern Bank Bldg., Portland, Ore.; 1214 Third Ave., Seattle, Wash.; 809 Trent St., Spokane, Wash.; 27 N. Park St., Butte, Mont.; 607 Ideal Bldg., Denver, Col. Supplying States of Washington, Oregon, Montana, Idaho, Wyoming, Colorado, Utah and New Mexico.

ALLIANCE FILMS CORP., 126 West 46th St., N.Y.C.

Selig

Be a Busy Bee. Make Your Theatre Buzz With Business. Don't Be a Wasp and "Sting" Your Patrons With "Wild Cat" Pictures.—SELIG SNAPSHOTS.

Selig Regular Program for Week of February 1-6

Brilliant 4-Color Selig Posters Ready for Shipment on all Releases. Order from Your Exchange or from This Office

A SELIG TWO-REEL DRAMA RELEASED MONDAY, FEBRUARY 1

THE VISION OF THE SHEPHERD

Production directed by COLIN CAMPBELL

This is a particularly beautiful story, the characters in which are admirably portrayed by KATHLYN WILLIAMS, WHEELER OAKMAN, FRANK CLARK, EUGENIE BESSERER, etc. It's a pastoral story in which the heroine becomes infatuated with a rich young man from the city and runs away from her old parents to join him. He attempts to perpetrate a mock marriage, but his plans are defeated. Old Jacob, her father, has a wonderful vision of the Saviour and is directed where to search for and bring back to his fold his missing lamb. The acting is artistic, and all of the pathos and dramatic points are strikingly delineated. The scenario was written by Malcolm Duglas.

STRIKING NEWS PICTURES

Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 9

RELEASED MONDAY, FEBRUARY 1 ONE REEL

Still more consignments of war-news pictures from European battlefields. Also important world news pictures taken by our camera men.

A SELIG WESTERN DRAMA

Forked Trails

RELEASED TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 2 ONE REEL

A Western story, in which TOM MIX performs some of his customary dare-devil riding "stunts." A pretty girl has two cowboy lovers, and the hero defeats his rival and wins her hand.

A SELIG DRAMA

Just Like a Woman

RELEASED WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 3 ONE REEL

A young man buys the newspaper in a village and immediately discharges a bright girl who has been acting as assistant editor, because he does not believe in employing women. She heaps coals of fire on his head by coming to his rescue when his plant is destroyed by fire. They combine their efforts to attain happiness.

BEST EUROPEAN WAR PICTURES

Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 10

RELEASED THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 4 ONE REEL

Mr. Wallace, one of our intrepid camera men, sends still another consignment of pictures taken among the battling nations. Also other important world events shown in pictures.

A SELIG COMEDY.

Cats

RELEASED FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 5 ONE REEL

Jinks has become morose because his wife has filled the household with pet cats. He fills a trunk with the squalling felines and is about to drown them when a compromise is effected. It's a rollicking comedy.

A SELIG JUNGLE-ZOO DRAMA.

The Leopard's Lair

RELEASED SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 6 ONE REEL

A den of leopards from the Selig Jungle-Zoo furnish the leading features in this picture. The plot of a charming story is carried through the picture, which is instructive, as well as entertaining.

ALL SELIG RELEASES THROUGH GENERAL FILM CO.

THE SELIG POLYSCOPE COMPANY

Executive Offices: Chicago, Ill., 20 E. Randolph St.

TRADE S MARK

Power's Intermittent Movement

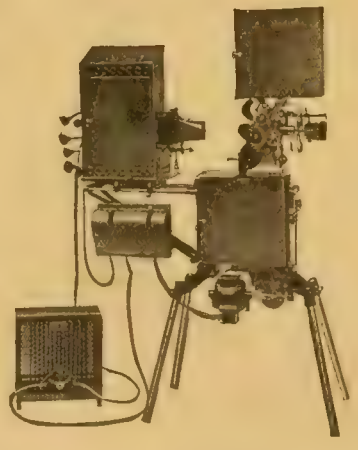
TOO much prominence cannot be given to our intermittent movement, as upon this vital part of the motion picture mechanism depends the steadiness and definition of the picture.

This movement is exclusive because it has no pinwheel, no star or "Geneva," it is not a "Beater" or dog movement and neither is it a frictional gripper.

By means of our cam and pin cross movement, more rapid travel of the film is produced, with less strain on the perforations than with other types.

It is practically noiseless in operation and in moving the film with the least possible strain, the picture is characterized by its perfect steadiness.

It is distinctive and original in design and is used exclusively on machines of this company's manufacture.



Write for Catalog G With Full Details

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY

Ninety Gold Street New York City

Vol. 23, No. 6 February 6, 1915 Price 10 Cents

H. E. HOFFMAN

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE FILM INDEX

EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

Scene from "Old Dutch" (World Film).

Post Office Box 226
Madison Square Station

NEW YORK

17 Madison Avenue
Telephone Madison Square 3510

playing ter theatres biggest success

s Cruze
e Hero in user's Greatest Photoplay
ZUDORA in

THE TWENTY MILLION DOLLAR MYSTERY

his stupendous photoplay serial story by Harold MacGrath is enacted by an all-star Thanhouser cast, including James Cruze, Marguerite Snow, Sidney Bracy, Mary Elizabeth Forbes, and Frank Farrington. A new two-reel episode is released each week. For booking arrangements, see the Thanhouser Syndicate representative at any Mutual Exchange in America.

THANHOUSER SYNDICATE CORPORATION
71 West 23rd St., New York City, N. Y.

Thanhouser

Thanhouser Film Corporation Presents

"The Smuggled Diamonds"

A Two-Reel Drama, Released Tuesday, Feb. 9th, featuring

MORRIS FOSTER

Florence La Badie and Morris Foster

A thrilling drama of Secret Service Bureau operations with Florence La Badie as the heroine. A strong supporting cast, including Justus D. Barnes, Dave Thompson and N. S. Woods.

FLORENCE LA BADIE

"Big Brother Bill"

A One-Reel Child Drama, Released Sunday, Feb. 7th, featuring

Helen Badgley and Leland Benham

Here is a drama that will interest the children. It is played by a cast of Thanhouser Stars, including those two great child actors—Helen Badgley and Leland Benham. Every exhibitor who wants the children's patronage will want this feature

Princess Films

Friday, Feb. 5th—"NELLIE'S STRATEGY."—A Romantic Story, with Reenie Farrington and Boyd Marshall

All regular Thanhouser releases are distributed exclusively in the United States and Canada by the Mutual Film Corporation. See the Mutual Exchange nearest to you to book Thanhouser releases.

Thanhouser Film Corporation, New Rochelle, N. Y.

Thanhouser's "Million Dollar Mystery," the great Serial Photoplay, can be booked at any Mutual Exchange in America.

Ready Soon

The Universal Film Mfg. Co.'s Mightiest Achievement

The BLACK BOX

The Absolute Supreme of Mystery Serials

Written by the Acknowledged Master of Mystery Story Writers

E. Phillips Oppenheim

Supreme by the right of the mightiest superiority of brains, capital and facilities in the Moving Picture World.

The World's Greatest Story—By the acknowledged master of Mystery Story Writers—E. Phillips Oppenheim.

The World's Greatest Director—Otis Turner.

The World's Greatest Producer—The Universal Film Manufacturing Company, Largest Makers of Moving Pictures in the Universe.

The World's Greatest Studios—The Million Dollar Plant at Universal City, Cal., where every one of the 1500 inhabitants is engaged in making Moving Pictures.

Here is the most thrilling and enthralling serial ever produced.

It is marvelously unique from start to finish. It is completely new, novel and strange, with a gripping power that gets and holds packed houses.

At advanced showings it amazed, astounded and enthralled the supreme authorities of the moving picture world.

There is a punch in every scene. Every episode will leave your audiences gasping in breathless interest—eager for more—waiting for every episode with their money ready for you.

Oppenheim's books sell by millions. In this story his genius outdoes itself. In every startling development he does the unexpected thing. The result is stupendously mystifying. Baffling to the extremest limit.

Then he puts into the brain and hands of Sanford Quest, expert criminologist, scientific weapons of crime detection. Thus he creates the greatest single character in modern fiction. No movie fan will ever get his fill of the marvels of Sanford Quest.

You need to know these facts. You need to be alive to the fact that you can't put out the old stuff any longer and do business or make money.

Get in touch with this livest of all money-makers. Book this smashing feature now.

You will positively and absolutely assure yourself fifteen weeks of constantly increasing popularity that will make your house the one big profit-maker in your section.

If you could see or if you could even imagine the force and power, the brains and the capital, the labor, art and genius that have been put into this greatest of serials, you would realize that it could have been produced by no other film maker than the Universal.

The same unlimited facilities and inexhaustible resources have produced an advertising campaign on THE BLACK BOX masterpiece for exhibitors that simply blots out and throws into utter oblivion all past efforts at helping the exhibitors to boost a serial.

It was the grandest of a lifetime's opportunities, and the Universal Advertising Service rose supremely to the occasion. Thousands and thousands of dollars have been spent for advertising cuts, posters, heralds, novelties, stamps, contests—intense interest-arousing publicity that will pour a golden stream into the pockets of the lucky or the wise exhibitors who book THE BLACK BOX now.

To Exhibitors: Book now. Don't be kidded into believing that any photoplay that strings out over fifteen weeks is a great serial. Here's a chance to prove that your foresight is better than your hindsight. Here's a chance to prove that you are entitled to a good thing by grabbing this one offered you on a silver salver. Write your exchange now. If you do not get full particulars promptly, write or wire instantly to the

UNIVERSAL FILM MANUFACTURING CO.

CARL LAEMMLE, President

1600 BROADWAY NEW YORK

BUSHMAN ▮ CHAPLIN ▮ ANDERSON ▮ BUSHMAN ▮ CHAPLIN ▮ ANDERSON ▮ BUSHMAN ▮ CHAPLIN ▮ ANDERSON

WE MAKE MONEY FOR YOU

Trademark Reg. U. S. Pat. 1907

Released Monday, February 8

"Sweedie Goes to College"

Sweedie finds co-ed life to be most fascinating.

Released Tuesday, February 9

"A Romance of the Night"

How a skeptic finds that romance still exists. Adapted from the Short Stories Magazine.

Released Wednesday, February 10

"The Fable of the Good People Who Rallied to the Support of the Church"

By GEORGE ADE

Anything to avoid dropping money into the contribution box

Released Thursday, February 11

"Slim the Brave and Sophie the Fair."

Slim poses as the hero and wins Sophie when victory seems certain for Mustang

Released Friday, February 12

"Thirteen Down"

(In Two Acts)

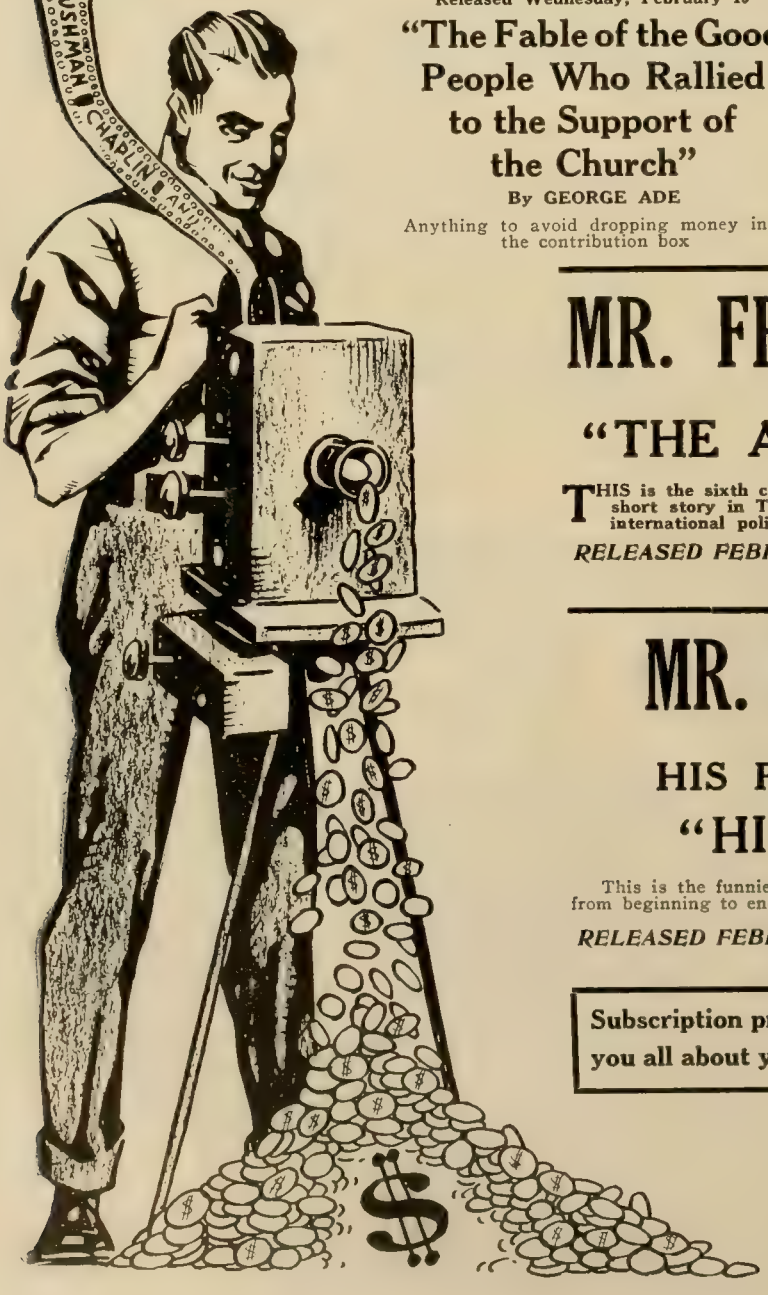
A thrilling story of the U. S. Secret Service with MR. FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN and Miss Beverly Bayne

Released Saturday, February 13

"Broncho Billy's Sentence"

(Reg. U. S. Pat. Office)

A Western drama featuring MR. G. M. ANDERSON



MR. FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN

IS PRESENTED IN

"THE ACCOUNTING" (IN THREE ACTS)

THIS is the sixth complete prize mystery play to be released in conjunction with the short story in The Ladies' World for March. It is a thrilling drama of love and international politics.

RELEASED FEBRUARY 18th THROUGH THE FEATURE DEPARTMENT OF THE GENERAL FILM COMPANY

MR. CHARLES CHAPLIN

IS PRESENTED IN

HIS FIRST ESSANAY RELEASE

"HIS NEW JOB" (IN TWO ACTS)

This is the funniest comedy produced by the funniest comedian. It is a riot of fun from beginning to end.

RELEASED FEBRUARY 1st THROUGH ALL THE BRANCH OFFICES OF THE GENERAL FILM COMPANY

Subscription price of the Essanay News, a newspaper which tells you all about your screen favorites, 75 cents a year.

ESSA

"FIRST TO STANDARD

1333 ARGYLE STREET

ANDERSON BUSHMAN CHAPLIN AND BUSHMAN CHAPLIN ANDERSON BUSHMAN CHAPLIN ANDERSON

THE "A-B-C" OF FILM FINANCE

Trademark Reg. U. S. Pat. 1907

The face known all around the world

MR. G. M. ANDERSON

The man voted the world's most popular photoplayer

MR. FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN

The world's funniest comedian

MR. CHAS. CHAPLIN

FRIEND EXHIBITOR: You Must Make Money!

LARGE box office receipts are a primal requisite in your business!

THE ONLY WAY to fill your theatre to overflowing and swell your bank account is always to book standard, guaranteed dramas and comedies with the very best players.

ANDERSON, BUSHMAN, CHAPLIN—they are the "A-B-C" of photoplay drama and comedy, who never fail to attract immense throngs. Their popularity is a known quantity. You are trying no doubtful experiment in booking photoplays in which they appear. The result is SURE.

ESSANAY, the "first to standardize photoplays," guarantees every play it produces to be first class. Essanay releases no play that does not reach the highest standard.

Book the Photoplays with the "A-B-C" trio and insure your own success

MR. G. M. ANDERSON

Known All Around the World as "BRONCHO BILLY"

IS PRESENTED IN

"WHEN LOVE AND HONOR CALLED"
and "THE TELL-TALE HAND"

MR. FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN

IS PRESENTED IN

"THE BATTLE of LOVE," "IN the GLARE of the LIGHTS"
and "THE PLUM TREE"

These 3-reel complete prize mystery plays, produced in conjunction with The Ladies' World, are the greatest success of the present time. They are thrilling millions daily.

RELEASED THROUGH THE FEATURE DEPARTMENT OF THE GENERAL FILM COMPANY

"One Wonderful Night"

(In Four Acts)

MR. FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN is featured in this thrilling drama that touches the heart.

"The Good-for-Nothing"

(In Four Acts)

MR. G. M. ANDERSON is presented in this emotional drama of a wayward son.

N AY

ZE PHOTO PLAYS"

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

MUTUAL PROGRAM

Majestic Motion Picture Co.

Two-part feature for release SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 7

Imar The Servitor

A Big Drama of the Arabian Desert

DOROTHY GISH

COMING

Sunday, February 7

Dorothy Gish

In a Two Part Feature

How Hazel Got Even

MAJESTIC AND KOMIC GUIDE FOR EXHIBITORS

(In which we try to tell only the truth about all Majestic and Komic releases)

THE BROKEN LULLABY (1 Reel Majestic). Release date Tuesday, Jan. 26. A melodrama showing how the child was saved from the flames. Not as well produced as it might have been, but carrying interest and a thrill.

A FAREWELL DINNER (2 Reel Majestic). Release date Sunday, Jan. 31. A strong society story from Munsey's Magazine, in which the wealthy suitor discovers the deception of the designing mother and reunites the separated sweethearts.

CUPID AND THE PEST (1 Reel Komic). Release date Sunday, Jan. 31. An exceptionally good comedy subject, showing how the pestiferous young man mixed up the marrying couples to everybody's satisfaction.

AN OLD FASHIONED GIRL (1 Reel Majestic). Release date Tuesday, Feb. 2. A pleasing comedy drama featuring Dorothy Gish. The recreant lover at last finds the "old-fashioned girl" the true idol of his heart.

THE DOUBLE DECEPTION (1 Reel Majestic). Release date Friday, Feb. 5. An amusing comedy drama featuring Miriam Cooper. Two wealthy young lovers are married, each believing the other to be of the working class.

IMAR THE SERVITOR (2 Reel Majestic). Release date Sunday, Feb. 7. A strong drama of the Arabian desert. Imar the slave saves the sweetheart of his American friend.

BILL TURNS VALET (1 Reel Komic). Release date Sunday, Feb. 7. No. 16 of the Bill the Office Boy stories, featuring Fay Tincher as the stenographer and introducing a new office boy in the character of "Bill."

MAJESTIC MOTION PICTURE COMPANY

Studios, 4500 Sunset Blvd., Los Angeles, Cal.

Business Office, 29 Union Square West, New York City

Mutual Movies MakeTime Fly

ABOVE ALL QUALITY

MUTUAL PROGRAM

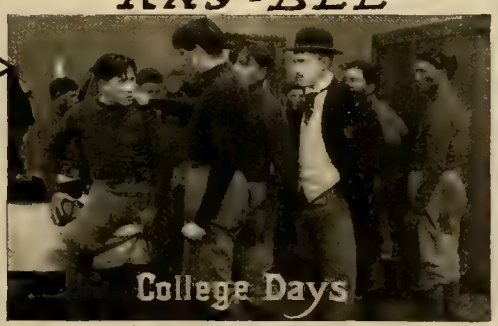
Aiming for the Highest!

DOMINO

THURSDAY, FEB. 4

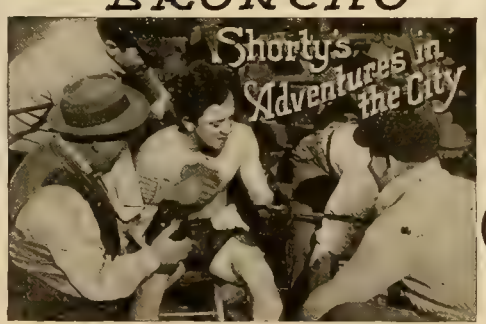
8"-10" Photos of our Players can be had by sending to Publicity Dept. 15 Cents for one - 50 Cents for set of 4.
A WONDERFUL LOBBY DISPLAY
22"-28" Photo layouts in Character makeup of Mabel Normand & Roscoe Arbuckle
20 Cents each.

KAY-BEE



FRIDAY, FEB. 5

BRONCHO



WEDNESDAY, FEB. 3

KEYSTONE

Three One Part Comedies
Released Every Week
Monday
Thursday
Saturday
A Two Part Comedy
Released every Two Weeks
Every Other Monday.

Released
Exclusively through the
Mutual Film Corporation

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CORPORATION

KESSEL & BAUMANN, MANAGERS.

LONGACRE BUILDING, 42d STR. AND BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

DANIEL FROHMAN
Presents
JOHN EMERSON
In the famous sentimental comedy
"THE BACHELOR'S ROMANCE"
By Martha Morton

A QUAINT PORTRAYAL OF A TENDER LOVE

IN FOUR PARTS

Distributed through Paramount Pictures Corp.
Released February 11th Produced by the

FAMOUS PLAYERS

ADOLPH ZUKOR, President
DANIEL FROHMAN, Managing Director
EDWIN · S · PORTER, Technical Director

36 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR

Forthcoming Attractions

February

MARY PICKFORD in "MISTRESS NELL,"

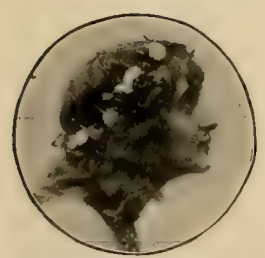
The Noted Romantic Drama by George C. Hazelton, Jr.

Released February 1st.

JOHN EMERSON in "THE BACHELOR'S ROMANCE,"

Martha Morton's Popular Comedy-Drama

Released February 11th.



GABY DESLYS in "HER TRIUMPH,"

The Celebrated International Star's First and Exclusive Appearance in Motion Pictures

Released February 8th.

WILLIAM H. CRANE in "DAVID HARUM,"

A Faithful Film Version of the Distinguished Star's Greatest Characterization

Released February 22d.

"THE LOVE ROUTE,"

Edward Peple's Sensational Comedy-Romance Triumph

Released February 25th.

A quintette of remarkable consistency and variety—a group of subjects that in every respect adhere to the traditions of

FILM COMPANY

Executive Offices

213~229 WEST 26TH ST.

NEW YORK

36 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR

JESSE L. LASKY
PRESENTS

AMERICAS FOREMOST COMEDIAN

EDWARD ABELES

IN A PICTURIZATION OF THE MOST CONVULSING COMEDY OF AMERICAN LIFE EVER CONCEIVED

TED & NORA SHADOWED BY THE S.S.S.

NOTHING LIKE THIS SINCE "BREWSTER'S MILLIONS"

RELEASED JAN. 28TH. THROUGH THE PARAMOUNT PICTURES CORP'N.

AFTER FIVE

BY WM. C & CECIL B. DEMILLE

JESSE L. LASKY

220 WEST 48TH STREET

JESSE L. LASKY, Pres. SAMUEL GOLDFISH

LASKY PRODUCTIONS THAT HAVE POSITIVELY ESTABLISHED NEW STANDARDS OF PHOTODRAMATIC ART

SEP. 7-VIRGINIAN . . . . DUSTIN FARNUM
SEP. 17-BOBBY BURNIT . . . . EDWARD ABELES
OCT. 12-TRAIL DIVIDES . . . . ROBERT EDESON
OCT. 22-WHAT'S HIS NAME . . . . . MAX FIGMAN
NOV. 5-READY MONEY . . . . . EDWARD ABELES
NOV. 9-MAN FROM HOME . . . . . CHARLES RICHMAN
NOV. 19-CIRCUS MAN . . . . . THEODORE ROBERTS
NOV. 30-ROSE OF RANCHO LASKY-BELASCO PRODUCTION BESSIE BARRISCALE
DEC. 7-GHOST BREAKER . . . . . H. B. WARNER
DEC. 24-CAMEO KIRBY . . . . . DUSTIN FARNUM
JAN. 4-GIRL OF GOLDEN WEST ALL STAR LASKY-BELASCO CAST
JAN. 21-YOUNG ROMANCE . . . . . EDITH TALIAFERRO
JAN. 25-GOOSE GIRL . . . . . MARGUERITE CLARK
Courtesy of FAMOUS PLAYERS

JAN. 28-AFTER FIVE . . . . . EDWARD ABELES
BY Wm C. & CECIL B. DE MILLE

FEB. 15-THE WARRENS OF VIRGINIA . . BLANCHE SWEET
BY Wm C. DE MILLE SPECIAL LASKY-BELASCO PRODUCTION

FEB. 18-THE COUNTRY BOY . . . MARSHALL NEILAN

MAR. 1-A GENTLEMAN OF LEISURE . . WALLACE EDDINGER

FEATURE PLAY CO.
NEW YORK CITY
Treas. and Gen. Mgr. CECIL B. DE MILLE Dir. Gen.

To the Trade

We desire to notify you herewith that the advertisement appearing in the center of this page using the name Paramount Theatres Corporation, and which has been published in some of the Motion Picture Trade Papers, is not an advertisement of the Paramount Pictures Corporation, nor is it connected in any way with our business.

It is our intention to take legal steps to prevent the unauthorized use of the name "Paramount" in connection

THEATERS WANTED

WE ARE desirous of obtaining grade A theaters everywhere, especially in Greater New York and its environs suitable for photoplay purposes. Houses now in operation or to be built to suit our requirements will be of interest. Correspondence solicited.

PARAMOUNT THEATERS CORPORATION
331 Madison Avenue New York City

with motion pictures, and we ask the co-operation of the trade in preventing the misleading and deception of the public.

We especially request all those who have answered this ad., believing it to have been put out by Paramount Pictures Corporation, to write us direct, which will imply no obligation whatever on their part.

Paramount Pictures Corporation
ONE HUNDRED and TEN WEST FORTIETH STREET
NEW YORK, N.Y.

THE PRODUCTIONS OF

FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM CO. In Association with Daniel Frohman Chas. Frohman-Henry W. Savage

JESSE L. LASKY FEATURE PLAY CO. Associated with David Belasco The Liebler Company

CONSTITUTE

BOSWORTH INC. In Association with THE OLIVER MOROSCO PHOTOPLAY CO. Oliver Morosco John Cort

PARAMOUNT PROGRAM

Releases for the Third Quarter

Date	Manufacturer	Play	Star	Reels
Mon., Mar. 1	Lasky-Belasco	"A Gentleman of Leisure"	Wallace Edinger	5
Thurs., " 4	Blazon Film Producing Co.	"Rule G"
Mon., " 8	Bosworth	"Caprices of Kitty"	Elsie Janis
Thurs., " 11	Famous Players	"The Commanding Officer"	* * *	4
Mon., " 15	Lasky-Belasco	"Governor's Lady"	Edith Wynne Matthison
Thurs., " 18	Bosworth	"Sunshine Molly"	Lois Weber
Mon., " 22	Famous Players	"Are You a Mason?"	John Barrymore	4
Thurs., " 25	Famous Players	"My Lady Peggy"	* * *	4
Mon., " 29	Morosco	"Pretty Mrs. Smith"	Fritzi Scheff
Thurs., Apr. 1	Lasky	"The Unafraid"	Rita Jolivet
Mon., " 5	Famous Players	"Pretty Sister of Jose"	Marguerite Clark	5
Thurs., " 8	Open
Mon., " 12	Lasky	"Her Great Sacrifice"	Blanche Sweet
Thurs., " 15	Famous Players	"The Tides of Barnegat"	Charles Sherry	4
Mon., " 19	Bosworth	"Captain Courtesy"	Dustin Farnum
Thurs., " 22	Lasky	"Snobs"	Victor Moore
Mon., " 26	Famous Players	"Jim the Penman"	John Mason	5
Thurs., " 29	Morosco	"Help Wanted"	* * *
Mon., May 3	Lasky-Belasco	"The Woman"	Rita Jolivet
Thurs., " 6	Bosworth	"Little Sunset"	* * *
Mon., " 10	Famous Players	"When We Were 21"	William Elliott	5
Thurs., " 13	Famous Players	"Gambier's Advocate"	Hazel Dawn	4
Mon., " 17	Bosworth	"Betty in Search of Thrill"	Elsie Janis
Thurs., " 20	Open
Mon., " 24	Lasky	"The Impostor"	Valeska Suratt
Thurs., " 27	Open
Mon., " 31	Famous Players	"Seven Sisters"	Marguerite Clark	4

Write Our Nearest Exchange for Information

Paramount Pictures Corporation
ONE HUNDRED and TEN WEST FORTIETH STREET
NEW YORK, N.Y.

DANIEL FROHMAN

ANNOUNCES

Famous Players Film Co.'s

Stupendous Photo-spectacle

"The ETERNAL CITY"

An Elaborate Screen Version of the Immortal Novel and Play

By HALL CAINE

With PAULINE FREDERICK

Produced in Italy and England by the Famous Players Film Co.—pronounced by trade critics to be the world's foremost film-dramatic triumph!

Enormous timely interest added to its many other points of value because of the recent disastrous earthquake in Italy that injured many of the historic buildings included in the production.

This subject will afford unusual opportunities to those theatres charging 25 cents or more admission

Distributed Exclusively Through

SELECT FILM BOOKING AGENCY

Room 1410, 110 WEST 40th STREET NEW YORK CITY

FABLES FROM FILMDOM

THE FOX AND THE GRAPES

Once upon a time a Sly Old Fox lived by himself and had Everything his Own way. He was very fond of Grapes and only Ate the Sweetest and Best. He liked big Grapes very much.

One day the sly old Fox was walking in an Arbor. He Saw some Luscious looking Grapes hanging from the Vine. He looked longingly at the Grapes and wished for Them. He then decided that he would try to get Them and he Jumped. He did not succeed so he Jumped again. Failing this time he Jumped some more. Finally he sat Down and in Disgust said: "I do not want the Grapes anyhow they are Sour."

Moral.

Do not think, Mr. Exhibitor, that because you have not been able to get Runaway June yet that you do not want it. Go again to your nearest Mutual exchange and see the Serial Publication Corporation Representative. Arrange FOR ANY TIME YOU CAN GET THEN BILL THIS PICTURE RIGHT AND GET SOME OF THE BIG PROFITS THAT ARE WAITING FOR YOU.

Send for The Special Advertising Campaign Booklet

SERIAL PUBLICATION CORPORATION

PRODUCED BY

RELIANCE MOTION PICTURE CORP'N.

29 UNION SQUARE NEW YORK N.Y.

If You See It In the Circle

It's So!

PATHE EXCHANGE, Inc.
25 West 45th St., New York

Three Reasons Why The Exploits of Elaine

Is the Biggest and Best Serial Ever Produced

PATHE EXCHANGE, Inc.
25 West 45th St., New York

Good News For All Film Lovers

A NEW ANIMATED CARTOON COMEDY BY J. R. BRAY

Col. Heeza Liar---Ghost Breaker

When an exhibitor runs a Bray cartoon you can hear the roars of laughter for blocks. First in the field they are easily the best. They are not only excruciatingly funny but exceedingly life like.

In this latest exploit of the inimitable little colonel he goes upon a ghost hunt—but the hunter becomes the hunted. See it and you'll have sore sides for a week. Joined with THE GREAT EARED BAT (Madagascar) to form 1000 feet of solid enjoyment.

THE PATHE EXCHANGE, Inc.

25 WEST 45th STREET, NEW YORK

QUEEN MARGARET

A five reel historical drama in the most superb coloring. Adapted from the famous Novel "Marguerite of Valois" by Alexandre Dumas and played by a cast of stars.

Very fine 1-3-6 sheet posters.

SAVED FROM HIMSELF

A Balboa-Pathé three part American drama featuring Jackie Saunders and Henry King. The surprising adventure of a house-breaker who finds a bride and a better life where he had intended to steal.

1-3-6 sheet posters.

BEYOND HIS FONDEST HOPES

A one reel American comedy. A newsboy has a wonderful day. -1- sheet posters.

THE PATHÉ NEWS

the one indispensable film. Pathé News days are always big days for the exhibitor.

PATHÉ EXCHANGE INC.

25 WEST 45TH ST., NEW YORK.

ANNOUNCEMENT

BY THE

Flamingo Film Company

The FLAMINGO FILM COMPANY takes pleasure in announcing the execution of a contract by which its productions in the future will be released through the WORLD FILM CORPORATION. These include the two finished comedies, "Puritan Conscience" and "The Sibyl of the Film," the releases of which have been held back pending negotiations with the WORLD FILM CORPORATION, now concluded.

By the terms of the contract FLAMINGO FILM COMPANY becomes an important unit of the producing forces of the WORLD FILM CORPORATION. Guarantees are exchanged which insure great expansion on the part of the FLAMINGO FILM COMPANY in the matter of production and an immediate market for a number of prints equal to the maximum of the largest producers in the country.

The FLAMINGO FILM COMPANY will not only continue its policy of producing high class comedies in two or more reels, but will carry into effect exceptionally ambitious plans, now matured, which are certain to gain the highest popularity for films bearing the FLAMINGO brand.

Progressiveness and efficiency of unusual quality, fortified by unlimited capital, explain the remarkable achievements of the WORLD FILM CORPORATION. Its officers have applied business principles of the highest order to the organization. To the last economic detail effectiveness in production and distribution have been worked out and applied. The distribution facilities of the WORLD FILM CORPORATION are declared to be the most complete of any organization in the world. All of its exchanges are absolutely under the control of the corporation—are, in fact, branch offices of the parent concern, subject to all the working policies of the corporation. Its activities in foreign countries are close to supremacy.

The FLAMINGO FILM COMPANY has in preparation three multiple reel comedies which it is confidently anticipated will, when the details concerning the productions are announced, create a profound sensation in film circles and with the public. The reception of the first release under the FLAMINGO brand, viz., the four act Comedy-drama "Without Hope," has been flattering in the extreme and completely justifies the idea controlling FLAMINGO production, that marked success is assured the clean, high class and interesting comedies of FLAMINGO brand. "Without Hope" is now playing the best houses in America, and in many instances the demands of the audiences for repeats have been met. "Without Hope" will continue its triumphal course for a long time.

Release dates for at least three FLAMINGO productions will be announced in the near future.

By mutual agreement all relations existing between the Flamingo Film Company and A. H. Sawyer, Inc., or Sawyer Film Corporation have been discontinued and the retirement of Mr. A. H. Sawyer and Mr. Frederick H. Tinker as officers and directors of the Flamingo Film Company is announced.

For Bookings on Flamingo Comedies Call at or Write the Nearest

WORLD FILM CORPORATION EXCHANGE

In the Following Cities:

Boston	Cleveland	Denver	St. Louis	Seattle	San Francisco
Buffalo	Cincinnati	Pittsburgh	Los Angeles	Omaha	Salt Lake City
Chicago	Detroit	Indianapolis	Philadelphia	New York	Washington
Atlanta	Dallas	New Orleans	Kansas City	Minneapolis

Canada—Vancouver Toronto Winnipeg Calgary Montreal St. John, N. B.

HOME OFFICE: 130 WEST 46TH STREET, NEW YORK CITY

How to Make Money

by Lewis J. Selznick

No. 2

This series of articles is planned to make money for you—to show you why my ideas have succeeded—and why they will succeed for you if you will weigh each one carefully. Some of them will sound egotistical. I want them to—it's the only way I can drive home my arguments.

LEWIS J. SELZNICK.

Try to get a ticket to a big Broadway success almost any night. You will find that a $2.00 bill won't go very far—if you get a ticket at all.

The Play pulls big money because it has not only merit, but the backing of famous producers, stars and advertising. The author, producer, stars, all help to crowd the house.

Think of the opportunity you have when you can offer WILTON LACKAYE in "The Pit" by the late Frank Norris, staged by the Wm. A. Brady Picture Plays, Inc., with players like Gail Kane and Milton Sills.

And with these magic names—and a powerful play to back them—your public can see the play for 10c. to 25c.

Any exhibitor can crowd his house with a production of Wm. A. Brady, the Shuberts, Blaney, Owen Davis, Dyreda Art Film, California Motion Picture Corporation and the other World Film producers.

But "a light under a bushel basket never coaxed a dollar into a box office."

That is why I preach advertising—why World Film has the finest poster artists in America on its staff—why we pay for the personal service of experts who have planned many great commercial successes—why our advertising and publicity departments give exhibitors more and better help than any organization in the film business today.

World Film has a department whose business it is to listen to and adjust grievances—so that no wrong may go unrighted. It has a department to watch film, so that no tiny flaw may escape detection. It has a department for cleaning and waterproofing film and it has a contract department in which I take more pride than in any other, for in it is a secret of the big success that exhibitors have had, are having and will have with World Film features.

By contract, you must become partners in your community with some manufacturer, so as to have a settled policy for your house and you can make the most money by advertising one line of plays continuously.

I do not say that World Film features are 100% great all the time. Nothing on earth is absolutely perfect. But I DO say that World Film features will give you more big stars, big producers and big profit making plays in one year than any organization in the country.

WORLD FILM CORPORATION

Special Features Department

LEWIS J. SELZNICK
Vice-President and General Manager

PRESENTS

The great feature film for which two million boys are selling tickets for exhibitors.

The Adventures of a Boy Scout

Presented for the Benefit of the Boy Scouts of America

Commended by Theodore Roosevelt

I regard it as one of the most important forces telling for the betterment of American citizenship in the future. I am extremely pleased that this picture drama is to appear.

Judge Ben. B. Lindsey

It is positively one of the greatest feature films yet produced in this country. It is not only a fine piece of work as a motion picture, but it is a great production as a real contribution to the cause of childhood in this country. It grips the audience from beginning to end. As a beautiful story, wonderfully well acted, and as a powerful lesson, not only as to what the Boy Scout Movement has done, but is capable of doing, it cannot be too highly commended.

EDELMAN

President Woodrow Wilson

(Who appears Personally in the Film)

The Adventures of a Boy Scout

WILL BE RELEASED ON FEBRUARY 3

Exhibitors who show this film will not only draw those who want to see a big, interesting play, but the parents and boys all over the country who want to see it for its educational value as well as for its amusement value.

Thousands of Boy Scouts Are Selling Tickets of Admission to the theatres showing this film. Every boy scout organization will push it. 75% of the face value of these tickets will go to exhibitors—25% will go to the Boy Scouts of America. Ask any World Film Branch for further details.

WORLD FILM CORPORATION

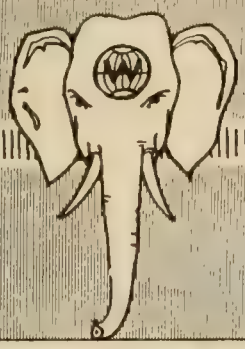
LEWIS J. SELZNICK, Vice-President and General Manager

Special Attractions Department

"AL" LICHTMAN, Director

130 West 46th Street, New York City

Further Information at any World Film Branch



SHUBERT AND DYREDA FEATURES

WORLD FILM Exclusive

Lewis J. Selznick

A Gripping Vivid Melodrama with a thrill in every minute.

"MONEY"

Produced by United Keanograph Film Mfg. Company, Fairfax, Calif. Scenario written and pictured by James Keane.

Featuring Carlotta de Felice

Lives were risked and thousands spent to give this picture its startling realism. See the burning of the palace, the wreck of the yacht on Devil's Gap, the feast of Maximillian that outrivals the feast of Bacchus.

In Five Acts

Released February 1st

EXCHANGES AT

Boston	Cleveland	Denver	St. Louis	Seattle	San Francisco
Buffalo	Cincinnati	Pittsburgh	Los Angeles	Omaha	Salt Lake City
Chicago	Detroit	Indianapolis	Philadelphia	New York	Washington
Atlanta	Dallas	New Orleans	Kansas City	Minneapolis
Canada—Vancouver	Toronto	Winnipeg	Calgary	Montreal	St. John, N. B.

HOME OFFICE: 130 WEST 46TH STREET, NEW YORK CITY

EDELMAN

CORPORATION
Rights to all
Vice Pres & Genl. Mgr.

Wm. A. BRADY
Picture Plays, Inc.
CALIFORNIA
MOTION PICTURE CORPORATION FEATURES

A Powerful Drama of Love, Labor and Redemption
A Dyreda Art Film Feature

"A DAUGHTER of the PEOPLE"

Produced by
J. SEARLE DAWLEY
The Master of the Screen
With LAURA SAWYER
FREDERICK deBELLEVILLE and ROBERT BRODERICK
In 5 acts
Released February 8th

The greatest laugh maker of the year.
LEW FIELDS
IN
"Old Dutch"
With
VIVIAN MARTIN
And an All-Star Cast, including Charles Judels and George Hassell.
A Shubert Feature
In 5 Acts
Released February 15th

MIGNON

DEFINITELY ESTABLISHES

BEATRIZ MICHELENA

AS THE GREATEST AND MOST BEAUTIFUL ARTIST NOW APPEARING IN MOTION PICTURES

THIS PRODUCTION UNANIMOUSLY ACCLAIMED · · A FILM MASTERPIECE · · HAS A NOTABLE DESCENT — FIRST WOVEN INTO STORY BY GOETHE IN HIS MASTERPIECE "WILHELM MEISTER" · · ADAPTED TO GRAND OPERA BY AMBROISE THOMAS AND · · IMMORTALIZED IN MOTION PICTURES BY · · · BEATRIZ MICHELENA AT HER BEST

SCENARIO BY CHARLES KENYON
Author of "KINDLING"

EXCLUSIVELY
DISTRIBUTED THROUGH WORLD FILM CORPORATION
LEWIS J. SELZNICK
VICE PRESIDENT
& GENERAL MANAGER

PRODUCED BY THE
CALIFORNIA MOTION PICTURE CORPORATION
UNDER THE PERSONAL SUPERVISION OF ALEX. E. BEYFUSS

A Three-Act Kalem Drama Every Week

Commencing Monday, March 8th, and every alternate Monday thereafter; and commencing Friday, March 19th, and every alternate Friday thereafter, Kalem will release a THREE-ACT DRAMA through General Film Company's REGULAR SERVICE.

Exhibitors will therefore receive every week, AND WITHOUT EXTRA COST, a headline attraction of the highest order in which the most popular Kalem stars will appear. Among these stars are Alice Joyce, Marguerite Courtot, Alice Hollister, Anna Nilsson, Guy Coombs, Tom Moore and Harry Millarde.

Watch for Further Announcements

The 1, 3, and 6 Sheet Four-Color Lithographs for each of the Three-Act Productions are being given Special Attention. We have never issued stronger, or more attractive posters.

EDISON COMEDY

TO BE RELEASED FIRST HALF OF FEBRUARY

"SUSPICIOUS CHARACTERS"

WADSWORTH and HOUSMAN

in "SUSPICIOUS CHARACTERS"

Wadsworth and Housman are a comedy team without a parallel in filmdom. As hungry burglars in "Suspicious Characters" they descend upon the larder of the richest man in town. A cop views their actions with suspicion but offers no interference. They blow a safe (releasing the little daughter of the house), then storm the cop with pies and finally arrest him and lock him up in the station house. A hilarious reel.

To be released Monday, February 8th. 1000 ft.

WADSWORTH AND HOUSMAN COMEDIES:

COURTSHIP OF THE COOKS (Dec. 30—1000 ft.)
CHAMPION PROCESS SERVER (Jan. 3—1000 ft.)
EXPENSIVE ECONOMY (Jan. 6—1000 ft.)
A SUPERFLUOUS BABY (Jan. 11—1000 ft.)
LODGINGS FOR TWO (Jan. 27—500 ft.)
FOUND: A FLESH REDUCER (Feb. 1—1000 ft.)
SCENE FROM THE GALLERY (Feb. 3—500 ft.)
SUSPICIOUS CHARACTERS (Feb. 8—1000 ft.)
THE TAILOR'S BILL (Feb. 10—600 ft.)
A SPIRITUAL ELOPEMENT (Feb. 17—500 ft.)

OTHER EDISON COMEDIES

In the First Half of February

Dan Mason in "A Thorn Among Roses"

Dan Mason makes a capable old miser—the guardian of considerable money held in trust for a marriageable girl, "May Hope" (Gladys Hulette). He conceives the idea of securing personal comfort for declining years by urging the girl to marry his bearded son. How the girl outwits him, marries her true lover, gets her inheritance and the son also marries a girl with money, is a capital story.

To be Released Wednesday, February 3rd. 500 ft.

James Harris and William Fables in "In the Plumber's Grip"

How a daughter in love with a plumber brought her father to terms to recognize her love affair is the basis of this extremely funny Edison comedy, featurning among others James Harris, William Fables, Bessie Learn, Jessie Stevens and Saul Harrison.

To be Released Monday, February 15th. 1000 ft.

EDISON DRAMA

TO BE RELEASED FIRST HALF OF FEBRUARY

Mabel Trunnelle as "Olive," the Bride

MABEL TRUNNELLE in "OLIVE'S GREATEST OPPORTUNITY"— the Final Instalment

A brilliant series is concluded in this twelfth instalment by a brilliant church wedding in which "Olive, the Mad-Cap Gypsy," is betrothed to "Vance Coleman," the society swain.

To be released Tuesday, February 9th. 1000 ft.

"Olive and the Heirloom," the eleventh instalment, reveals Olive as the custodian of an heirloom necklace, the replica of which is stolen in a daring Pullman train robbery.

To be released Tuesday, February 2nd. 1000 ft.

"Olive's Opportunities" (of which the above films are parts) has proved a splendid success, in which Mabel Trunnelle has scored many triumphs.

MARC Mac DERMOTT GIVES A NEW MEANING TO "OH WHERE IS MY WANDERING BOY TO-NIGHT" —PATHETIC BUT NOT RELIGIOUS.

A drama which stirs the emotions and pulls at the heart strings. Revived in the form of two reel subject upon special requests by numerous exhibitors who will remember its tremendous success as a single reel. It depicts the power of song to reunite mother, son and wife after years of separation.

To be released Friday, February 5th. Two parts. 2000 ft.

Marc MacDermott as the Prodigal Son

Augustus Phillips as "Abraham Burnstine"

AUGUSTUS PHILLIPS AN IDEAL SHYLOCK IN "THE STONE HEART"

A pathetic drama in which human sympathy is submerged at last to sordid greed for money in the character of a hard-fisted Jew. To take the shylock part Phillips had to live a while with the East Side element in New York City.

To be released Saturday, February 6th. 1000 feet.

MIRIAM NESBITT AND MARC MacDERMOTT IN "THE GLORY OF CLEMENTINA" SCORE GREAT SUCCESSES.

A superb piece of acting and photography adapted from Wm. J. Locke's novel. In this play figure Miriam Nesbitt, Marc MacDermott, Bigelow Cooper, Pat O'Malley, Duncan McRae, Robert Brower, Bliss Milford, William Bechtel, Viola Dana and several others.

To be released Friday, February 12th. 2000 feet.

Miriam Nesbitt as "Clementina"

GERTRUDE McCOY IN "THE GIRL WHO KEPT BOOKS."

Here is a drama of intense interest to every mother who has a daughter earning her own living. Under suspicion for accompanying a bank official to a hotel to examine a dishonest clerk's books, the girl is placed in an awkward situation.

To be released Friday, February 13th. 2,000 feet.

Scoring great successes: "Fantasma," a five part spectacular reel and "My Friend From India," a three reel feature film. Both released through the General Film Co.'s Special Feature Service.

TRADE MARK
Thomas A Edison

Thomas A. Edison, Inc.

239 Lakeside Avenue, Orange, N. J.

All Edison Films are passed upon by the National Board of Censorship and released through the General Film Co.'s Program

LUBIN

PRESENTS

Multiple Reel Masterpieces Ready and About to Be Released

"THE EAGLE'S NEST" - - - - With EDWIN ARDEN and ROMAINE FIELDING
Mr. Arden's Successful Drama — Direction Romaine Fielding

"THE SPORTING DUCHESS" - - - With ROSE COGHLAN and ETHEL CLAYTON
Supported by George Soule Spencer
Comedy Drama by Cecil Raleigh — Direction Barry O'Neil

"THE VALLEY OF LOST HOPE" - - - - - Featuring ROMAINE FIELDING
A Powerful Drama by Shannon Fife — Direction Romaine Fielding

"THE DISTRICT ATTORNEY" With GEORGE SOULE SPENCER and DOROTHY BERNARD
Drama by Charles Klein and Harrison Grey Fiske — Direction Barry O'Neil

"THE WHITE MASK" - - - - - - - - - - Featuring LILIE LESLIE
Drama by Clay M. Greene — Direction Joseph W. Smiley

"THE COLLEGE WIDOW" Featuring ETHEL CLAYTON and GEORGE SOULE SPENCER
Comedy by George Ade — Direction Barry O'Neil

NOW SHOWING TO CROWDED HOUSES EVERYWHERE

By arrangement with Fred Mace

EVELYN NESBIT THAW and her son Russell William Thaw in "THREADS OF DESTINY" Drama by William H. Clifford — Direction by Joseph W. Smiley

and

The laughing hit of the year, "PATSY BOLIVAR," a series of 14 reels, one every Monday. By CLAY M. GREENE
Direction Percy Winter

Posters by A. B. C. Print Cleveland — Dodgers by Hennegen Print Cincinnati

---

SIX REGULAR RELEASES EACH WEEK

"PATSY ON A TROLLEY CAR"—Comedy, Monday, "Patsy Bolivar" Series No. 6 February 1st

"THE BELATED HONEYMOON"—Comedy, Tuesday, February 2nd

"A NIGHT'S ADVENTURE"—Two Reel Drama, Wednesday, February 3rd

"THE REGENERATING LOVE"—Three Reel Drama, Thursday, February 4th

"THE NAMELESS FEAR"—Drama, Friday, February 5th

"THE FURNACE MAN"—Comedy, Saturday, February 6th

SPECIALLY DESIGNED ONE, THREE, SIX AND EIGHT SHEET POSTERS

LUBIN MANUFACTURING COMPANY

Philadelphia, Pa.

Chicago Office - - - - 154 West Lake Street

VITAGRAPHS

VITA LAUGHS — LIFE PORTRAYALS

"Cabman Kate"

Comedy .....MONDAY, FEB. 1

When she takes the reins, nothing stands in her way. She has everybody in an uproar. She gets the money and a husband, too. KATE PRICE is a great driver.

"How Cissy Made Good"

3-Part Comedy. Broadway Star Feature .....TUESDAY, FEB. 2

Brought face to face with all the Players of the Vitagraph Company, she runs the gauntlet of their pranks and makes good. CISSY FITZGERALD in the title role.

"The Combination"

Comedy .....WEDNESDAY, FEB. 3

The combination is lost. The burglar gets the silver. When the combination is found, it's a pipe. The silver is recovered. Presenting SIDNEY DREW.

"The Understudy," or "Behind the Scenes"

Drama .....THURSDAY, FEB. 4

The mimic tragedy is made a real one. An actor sacrifices his life for one he holds dearer than his own. MAURICE COSTELLO as the actor.

"The Green Cat"

Comedy .....FRIDAY, FEB. 5

Billy and Boggs try to fool the old maid. She isn't as green as her cat, nor as green as they look when Constance fools them. BILLY QUIRK as the boy detective.

"For Another's Crime"

Two-Part Drama .....SATURDAY, FEB. 6

Convicted of another's deed, he suffers the penalty. The guilty man's dying confession brings pardon and happiness. LEO DELANEY, LEAH BAIRD, L. ROGERS LYTTON and WILLIAM DUNN are presented.

Six a Week, including a Three-Part Broadway Star Feature

"HEARTS TO LET"
Comedy .....Monday, Feb. 8

"THE WRONG GIRL"
Two-Part Comedy .....Tuesday, Feb. 9

"BREAKING IN"
Comedy-Drama .....Wednesday, Feb. 10

"ON THE ALTAR OF LOVE"
Drama .....Thursday, Feb. 11

"The Hypochondriac," or "When Greek Meets Greek"
Comedy .....Friday, Feb. 12

"MOTHER'S ROSES"
3-Part Drama. Broadway Star Feature....Saturday, Feb. 13

VITAGRAPH ONE, THREE AND SIX SHEET POSTERS

The Vitagraph Company, E. 15th St. & Locust Avenue, Brooklyn, N.Y.

BROADWAY STAR FEATURES

PRODUCED BY THE VITAGRAPH
COMPANY OF AMERICA

PRESENTED AT THE VITAGRAPH
THEATRE, N. Y. CITY

RELEASED

A MILLION BID	5 PARTS
GOODNESS GRACIOUS	3 PARTS
MR. BARNES OF N. Y.	6 PARTS
LOVE, LUCK & GASOLENE	3 PARTS
CAPTAIN ALVAREZ	6 PARTS
SHADOWS OF THE PAST	3 PARTS
BINGLES' MELODRAMA	3 PARTS
MY OFFICIAL WIFE	5 PARTS
UNCLE BILL	3 PARTS
THE PAINTED WORLD	5 PARTS
FLORIDA ENCHANTMENT	3 PARTS
THE WIN(K)SOME WIDOW	4 PARTS
413	4 PARTS
THE TANGLE	3 PARTS
THE LOCKED DOOR	4 PARTS
SYLVIA GRAY	5 PARTS
THE LITTLE ANGEL OF CANYON CREEK (From Book)	4 PARTS
THE MAN BEHIND THE DOOR

COMING

THE 4-PART LAUGHING COMEDY
C. O. D.
From the Play by FREDERICK CHAPIN

THE 5-PART HISTORICAL DRAMA
HEARTS AND THE HIGHWAY
From Rev. Cyrus Townsend Brady's Novel
LILLIAN WALKER as LADY KATE
DARWIN KARR as SIR HARRY

A Six-Part Picturization of Rev. Cyrus Townsend Brady's Powerful Novel
THE ISLAND OF REGENERATION
EDITH STOREY as KATHERINE
ANTONIO MORENO as JOHN CHARNOCK, JR.

FOR TERMS AND PARTICULARS APPLY
GENERAL FILM CO.'S
SPECIAL SERVICE
BY Arrangement with
BROADWAY STAR FEATURE CO. (Inc.)

ALICE JOYCE SERIES

Two-Act Episode for Monday, February 15th

HER SUPREME SACRIFICE

Should Ora have sacrificed her happiness when she saw that she stood in the way of her husband's future? A great big story that is sure to be of interest to your patrons.

We have put the strongest scenes on the 1, 3 and 6-Sheet four-color Lithographs for this production.

Other Kalem Releases for Week of Feb. 15

Love versus Chickens

Nothing like chickens to bust up a love-affair—at least one pair of lovers think so. Get this comedy and see why.

(On the Same Reel)

You'll Find Out

This is the answer Jones gets when he tries to learn why nobody can work longer than a day for Mrs. Welkins. He DOES find out when he foolishly accepts the position.

Released Tuesday, February 16th

A Melodious Mix-up

Friendship ceases when Ham, the orchestra leader, and Bud, the bass drummer, fall in love with the same soubrette.

Released Friday, February 19th

The Mystery of the Tea Dansant

A Two-Act Episode of the Girl Detective Series

Not a clue can be found by the police to help them locate Ruth Wheeler, the missing heiress. Kalem's Girl Detective tackles the case, and finds herself matching wits with a tiger in human form.

Released Wednesday, February 17th
Striking 1, 3 and 6-Sheet 4-color Lithographs

The Engineer's Peril

An Episode of the

Hazards of Helen Railroad Series

With the engineer lying unconscious in the cab and the train headed for a smashup, the girl telegrapher makes a flying leap, lands atop of one of the cars and brings the runaway to a stop!

Released Saturday, February 20th
Strong 1 and 3-Sheet 4-color Lithographs

Kalem Company

235-239 West 23rd Street New York City, N. Y.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD
THE FILM INDEX EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

J. P. Chalmers, Founder.

Published Weekly by the

CHALMERS PUBLISHING COMPANY

17 MADISON AVENUE, NEW YORK CITY.

(Telephone, 3510 Madison Square.)

J. P. Chalmers, Sr.....President
J. F. Chalmers.....Vice-President
E. J. Chalmers.....Secretary and Treasurer
John Wylie.....General Manager

The office of the company is the address of the officers.

WESTERN OFFICE—Suite 917-919 Schiller Building, 64 West Randolph St., Chicago, Ill. Telephone, Central 5099.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and Philippine Islands.....$3.00 per year
Canada ..... 3.50 per year
Foreign Countries (Postpaid)..... 4.00 per year

ADVERTISING RATES.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING—no display—three cents per word; minimum charge, 50c.

DISPLAY ADVERTISING RATES made known on application.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

All changes of address should give both old and new addresses in full and clearly written.

NOTE.—Address all correspondence, remittances and subscriptions to MOVING PICTURE WORLD, P. O. Box 226, Madison Square Station, New York, and not to individuals.

(The Index for this issue will be found on page 904.)

Entered at the General Post Office, New York City, as Second Class Matter

Saturday, February 6, 1915.

Facts and Comments

A REMARKABLE feature of the present film market is the growing unpopularity of the foreign-made production. A prejudice against foreign-made films is nothing new. Traces of it appeared even four or five years ago. Lately the prejudice has in many sections of the country grown into an aversion. Film men assign various causes for this pronounced dislike. Some say that the American-made film dealing with American subjects has crowded the transatlantic rivals from their old pedestal; others maintain that the dislike is really whimsical and may at any time give way to a revival of foreign films. It is difficult for us to believe that our public discriminates against foreign features merely because they are foreign. Merit in filmdom must needs be international. In the treatment of great classic themes the foreign still holds its own to say the least. On the other hand it cannot be denied that a good deal of our European film importations have been low in morale and poor in aesthetics. Whatever the cause there is no denying the fact that the foreign feature has a hard road to travel in these days.

* * *

THE "education" of the exhibitor on the question of prices has brought forth no little discussion. In spite of it all there are exhibitors (a few at any rate), who still think that showing twelve reels for a nickel is a brilliant stroke of showmanship. A story is told of a group of visitors passing through an asylum of the feeble minded. In one little room sat an inmate conspicuous for his fiercely innocuous expression. "Who is this animated mental vacuum?" asked one of the visitors.

"Why," replied the guide, consulting his catalogue, "this man started showing fifty dollar features in a small nickelodeon and his relatives rushed him here before he became violent."

* * *

EVERYWHERE public opinion sides with the motion picture men when the latter are subjected to official annoyances and persecution. We wish to remind our Canadian readers that the Provincial Parliament for Toronto will meet on the Sixteenth of February. The Canadian Vigilance Association which is fighting for a "Clean Canada" has espoused the cause of the motion picture men in Canada and it is planned to obtain some relief against the arbitrary and unreasoning enforcement of the law forbidding the admission of minors under the age of fifteen years "unless accompanied by parents, guardian, or by an adult member of the household to which he belongs." It is easy to see that a literal enforcement of this provision is bound to result in injustice and oppression of the exhibitor. It seems that in Toronto the police and the magistrates are stubbornly literal. Suppose an adult takes a minor into a motion picture theater not being his "parent, guardian or member of household?" Is the exhibitor presumed to be familiar with the complete genealogy and with all the domestic connections of the minor? The authorities hold in the affirmative and fined an exhibitor fifty dollars because he had admitted a boy under fifteen accompanied by a man who was neither "parent, guardian or member of the household." One exhibitor frightened by the draconic attitude of the magistrates asked a woman patron whether the two children with her were her children. A magistrate having ruled that the address of the child's adult companion must be ascertained the exhibitor asked the woman where she lived. She indignantly snatched up her money and left for another theater whose manager would be willing to forego such an inquisition and run the chances of being fined and imprisoned. We hope our Canadian readers will make a strong effort to obtain redress from their Parliament.

* * *

ONE of our friends and readers refers us to a recent utterance of President Wilson touching the joys of mixed vaudeville. The President is credited with saying that when he looks for perfect relaxation he would rather go to a vaudeville house than to see a legitimate play. "From a bad play," the quotation runs, "there is no escape but if there is a bad act in a vaudeville show you can rest reasonably secure that the next one may not be so bad." Our correspondent thinks that from a bad feature there is no escape but if the program consists of single reels and one is bad we may rest reasonably secure that the next one may not be so bad. There is a charming optimism about all this which we would be the last to disturb.

Join the League

By W. Stephen Bush.

The Moving Picture World recognizes in Marion S. Pearce, the President of the National League of Motion Picture Exhibitors, a man who is peculiarly fitted to advance the work of organization. We have emphasized this fact before and have urged the organized exhibitors to give him their loyal and undivided support. Mr. Pearce enjoys the esteem and confidence of the entire exhibiting body, and indeed of the entire industry. He is diplomatic, but he will not compromise with the truth or palter with obvious facts. He is constructive, patient and tolerant. He is eminently practical and experienced. From a pioneer exhibitor he graduated into an exchange man. He is the owner of the biggest motion picture enterprises in Baltimore. He understands the exhibitor and the exhibitor understands him. He is eminently the man of the hour and of the future.

We set down these facts, not because we want to deliver a eulogy, but because we want all our readers to know the man who is now the leader of the great exhibitors' organization. Competent leadership begets confidence and inspires courage. It must mean something to exhibitors all over the country to know that the president of the exhibitors' organization is honest, capable and progressive. We look confidently for a revival of the spirit of organization. We propose to persist with appeals to exhibitors to join their state organizations and to maintain proper relations with the National body.

Mr. Pearce is a strong believer in powerful and representative state organizations. The Moving Picture World thoroughly agrees with him on this point. The National organization is strong or weak according to the strength or weakness of the state organization. A state with, say, one thousand exhibitors is not properly organized if only a couple of hundred of such exhibitors are members of the state organization. The National League cannot thrive, it cannot serve the exhibitors of the country, if there are any states carelessly or insufficiently organized. Mr. Pearce, we know, has been at great pains to strengthen the various state organizations as far as lay in his power. He needs the active co-operation of every man in the various state organizations. The men who now belong to the League must be willing to give of their time and of their money to complete the work of rebuilding. Mr. Pearce has done no preaching, but he has set an example which is well worthy of imitation.

We have had occasion recently to point out indications of a reviving interest in matters of organization. We have also had occasion to refer to the practical plans Mr. Pearce has conceived for the future. His program and motto are summed up in these words: "We must serve the exhibitor." He plans the establishment of a Bureau of Usefulness. In due time a corps of experts in their line are to place their services at the disposal of this bureau, which is to be devoted to the practical treatment and solution of the exhibitors problems. Before such a bureau can be started the exhibitors must come forward and pledge their support to the League. Of what great value, for instance, would be a legal expert who has specialized in the study of motion picture laws and exhibitors problems? This would be but one of the spheres of usefulness planned by President Pearce.

We hope that our readers all over the country will get to work on organization. The legislatures of most of the states in the Union are now in session. Attempts will be made to legislate for motion picture theatres. We want intelligent legislation based on sound knowledge If exhibitors want the legislators to respect their legitimate interests they must show union and harmony and power in their own ranks.

We hope that the exhibitor who is always on the firing line will receive the proper support of producers and exchangemen. We are confident that this support will be forthcoming generously enough as soon as the exhibitors show that they know how to help themselves. The pernicious notion that the exhibitors' interests are necessarily antagonistic to the interests of the other branches of the industry is being rapidly discarded by all intelligent exhibitors. In the last analysis there is a great community of interest between all branches of the industry. A strong exhibitors organization of national scope with powerful state units is a distinct benefit to the producing and the distributing branches.

The Moving Picture World has always been the stanch and consistent advocate of organization among exhibitors. We have dwelt upon the advantages of organization in season and out of season. When the industry was in a state of half boom and half chaos and very soon after the birth of this paper we recognized the necessity of organization. We encouraged every honest effort directed toward that end. Indeed, I may truthfully say that the encouragement of exhibitors' organizations was, to the personal knowledge of many hundreds of exhibitors, one of the traditions of The Moving Picture World. It is a well-known fact that the exhibitors' organizations never had a better friend than the founder of The Moving Picture World. Long before the idea of a national organization was thought of this paper gave every possible support to state and local organizations. Old exhibitors in the East and Middle West will bear me out when I say that every important meeting and often times even unimportant meetings were attended and faithfully reported by representatives of The Moving Picture World. Pennsylvania was one of the first states in which the idea of organization took root, and if you look over the early files of this paper you will find every meeting was attended and often addressed by members of the staff of The Moving Picture World. Time and again resolutions were passed at these meetings thanking this paper for its support of the organized exhibitors.

It is scarcely necessary to say that this early policy of The Moving Picture World will be consistently followed in the future. The principle of the founder was that "this paper is printed for the exhibitor." Believing as we do that organization is a great benefit, yea, even a necessity for exhibitors, it follows clearly enough that we favor organization for the exhibitor. No undertaking of the organized exhibitors has ever failed of the support of this paper. We were the first to introduce an exhibitors' department, devoted to news of the national and the state organizations. It is our desire to make this department a complete and accurate record of all the activities within the League. Nor do we think that our duty toward the League is fulfilled by merely giving a faithful account of all its proceedings. The whole influence and prestige of The Moving Picture World will be exerted on behalf of a powerful and useful National League resting upon the solid foundation of strong representative state units. The organized exhibitors may at all times rely upon the sincere friendship of The Moving Picture World.

The Golden Ass

By Louis Reeves Harrison.

ONCE upon a time there was a brilliant and wealthy young Roman by the name of Apuleius who took himself seriously. In an enlightened moment, when he had acquired experience, he saw himself as others saw him and wrote a legend called "The Golden Ass," told in the first person. He describes himself as an adventurous traveler. In the infatuation of youth, he attempts to perform some exploits beyond his ability, only to become the laughing stock of wiser men, and he was changed into a golden ass by witchcraft, an ass destined to carry the burdens of incompetence on his back. As to the moral, let us not subtitle the obvious.

Some wise men started to produce moving pictures nearly a score of years ago, and a number of them made vast fortunes in the business. Others started up later and made good in a smaller way, but nearly all of them were independently rich when the art was suddenly discovered by theatrical gentlemen and Wall Street financiers. The latter found that gold mines in Alaska were not so remunerative as those in Camera Land and there has been a mad rush to stake claims in the moving picture plot ever since.

Part of the evolution of a wondrous new art, this is probably just as it should be. It is, in fact, highly commendable on the part of men who are out for all there is in the game to plunge their capital and energies into something they but half understand—they are contributing to our education experience in making costly mistakes, knowledge of what to avoid being of high value to future generations. These newcomers are rarely in the business to learn anything. They take themselves seriously in showing the world how it should all be done, while very cleverly demonstrating how it can be undone. They are self-sufficient exponents of commercialism.

There is a place for commercialism in the production of moving pictures, though not so large a place as in distributing and exhibiting them. System and sound principles count in both factory and studio. This is a business as well as an art. Established organizations have reached a very high point of efficiency through inaugurating order and method. All that may be claimed for what is beneficial in commercialism is, therefore, granted in advance, but all that is merely subsidiary to an object. Business method, order, sound principle, efficiency and system are but means to an end. They are factors contributing mainly to the successful visualization of thought and feeling in stories for popular entertainment.

Does it occur to the Golden Ass that scenic visualization of vital subjects, of manners, thoughts, sentiments, morals of today are not to be found in works done in other days about other times? Does it occur to him that people demand what is new in their papers, magazines and books? Does it occur to him that some noble conception, some dignified theme, some problem of the hour, must be underlying what is to go before millions of intelligent people and millions of small intelligence but of large capacity for its absorption? The desire to widen his field of thought burns in any man who thinks at all. Is it sound business to exploit the obsolete and the obvious?

If the master key to success is to be found in the vital interest of what is to be visualized, what is the use of plunging capital, energy, organization, system and all that pertains to commercialism into showing what is flat, stale and unprofitable on the screen, stories devoid of modern interest, worn-out plays, impotent themes, dead issues? Does not the road to tremendous success pass through the gates of judgment, taste, imagination, intellection, originality and skill?

Apulieus was a well-meaning gentleman before he set out on his adventures. He was entering a territory that was strange to him, but he was so full of egotism that he aspired to show people that he was a wonder. He thought, one night, that his tavern was attacked by robbers. He went to the door with his drawn sword, opened it suddenly and ran the robbers through and through, spilling an enormous quantity of blood. He was in the dark, but he was sure that he had performed a great feat until torches were brought, and it was found that he had pierced three giant wine skins and spilled the contents. He was naturally sore when his critics told him the truth.

Some time after this and other similar exploits, he was suddenly converted by the witchery of enlightenment to realization that he was nothing but an ass. He had utterly failed to grasp the intelligence of other people. While he thought he was fooling them, they were only jeering at him, and they put him where he belonged in the end. Men who are going into this business today with any Barnum-like ideas of fooling the people with rehabilitations of stage relics are up against audiences bored to nausea with the stale pretences already set before them. If producers do not know this, they are as much in the dark as was Apulieus when he attacked the wine skins.

It is in the nature of the Golden Ass to kick against any such assumption of superiority as is bound to crop out in creative genius. The talent of the soil is here. There is plenty of it, but it is not to be patronized. It must be encouraged to grow, to bud, to blossom, to bear golden fruit. Otherwise the present popularity of moving pictures will be diverted to some other form of entertainment. Vital interest is the gateway to success, the story a master key.

Playhouses are growing in capacity and splendor. Lovely flowers frame the screen. Sweet music trembles on the air. Exhibitors are doing their best to give their patrons a run for their money. They do not regard audiences as unsophisticated. They realize that old skeletons in tawdry vesture must go. The rubbish heap is waiting for stale stories, profanity and bar rooms. People await the oncoming of what is strong, sweet, invigorating, sympathetic, brave, beautiful, and, above all things, up to date. Exhibitors know this, and they depend upon press critics to help them select what their patrons demand.

Exhibitors look to the press critic for unbiased good judgment, and it is gladly given wherever and whenever possible, but exhibitors do not support the critics. The best they can do is to support the paper publishing the most intelligent and discriminating reviews. At the present stage of development, critics can do little more than point the way to finer releases, and occasionally prod the Golden Ass into a semblance of activity in the right direction. When he balks and kicks, it is because he is overburdened with commercialism.

It is the story that counts. It may reflect life that is or is to be. It may better reflect the spirit that is behind our acts and our aspirations. Through the highways and byways of actual existence, or into the palace and gardens of Imagination, the author may go—his the plan of the structure to be visualized. His the theme that sets minds and hearts aglow. He will come when called—if the call is not drowned by the bray of abnormal egotism.

Keystone Men in Convention

Meet at Harrisburg and Unite all Locals in a New State-Wide Organization—National President Pearce Invites the New State Body to Join the National League—Legislators Speak Against the Censorship Law

By W. Stephen Bush

STRICT attention to business and a conquering spirit of harmony were the outstanding characteristics of the convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors of Pennsylvania which was called to order very close to scheduled time at Harrisburg on Tuesday, January 25th. The convention assembled in the meeting hall of the Bolton Hotel. The central and the western portion of the State and some delegates from the eastern part were on hand long before ten o'clock, the hour set for opening the convention, but the Philadelphia delegation was a little slow in arriving. Mayor John K. Royal was on hand to extend an official welcome on behalf of the city of Harrisburg, but as the convention decided to await the coming of the brethren from the Quaker City and, as the Mayor promised to return later to deliver his speech of welcome, there was a lull in the proceedings. It was a short lull, however, for the men from Philadelphia heaved in sight, but a few minutes later and the formal opening of the convention followed with Benjamin Zerr, of Reading, acting as temporary presiding officer. James Delves, of Pittsburgh, was chosen temporary secretary, while Frank A. Gould, of Reading, was appointed a committee of one to look after the press. When the temporary organization had been effected National President Marion S. Pearce, who arrived on the scene with his usual promptitude, was invited to address the gathering. At this time about fifty delegates representing the exhibitors of every part of the Keystone State were present. On a rough calculation the delegates present acted on behalf of a constituency numbering not less than three hundred bona fide exhibitors.

Mr. Pearce spoke briefly, but very much to the point. He thanked the exhibitors present for the cordial welcome he had received and told them that the spirit of harmony, which so plainly ruled the proceedings, was a source of inspiration to him. Mr. Pearce dwelt at some length upon the valuable service which the National League had been able to render to the exhibitors of the entire country through its action at Washington at the time Congress proposed to levy a very heavy tax on the owners of motion picture theaters He said it was the league which secured a substantial reduction of the tax originally proposed and he took occasion to deny in most emphatic terms the published statement that the credit belonged to some theatrical managers' association.

He expressed his gratification at the general revival of the spirit of organization and complimented the motion picture exhibitors of Pennsylvania upon their purpose to sink all differences geographical and otherwise and get together in one strong and firmly united State organization and become a powerful link in the great national chain.

Mr. Pearce was listened to with the greatest attention and when he had completed his remarks his audience applauded heartily. On motion of the temporary chairman a rising vote of thanks was tendered to the National President. Next in order was the appointment by the chair of a committee on credentials. The following exhibitors were appointed as such committee: Charles Segall, of Philadelphia, chairman; Francis E. Devlin, of Wilkesbarre, and G. W. Sahner, of Pittsburgh. The committee went to work without delay and the meeting took a recess until 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon.

The afternoon proceedings opened with a full report of the committee on credentials and the following names were approved of by the committee and their holders accepted as delegates:

Pittsburgh, Fred. J. Herrington, Gebhard Sahner, George W. Smith, J. S. Thomas, James Delver; Plymouth, J. R. Goble, William Fritz, Fred. W. Ehrmann, Gilbert C. Miller; Mahanoy City, Eugene F. Macatee; Wilkesbarre, Francis Devlin; Reading, Ben. Zerr, George W. Bennethum, J. G. Hansen, Frank A. Gould; McKeesport, H. A. Victor; Tamaqua, Chris Petersen; Indiana, Woods, Conway; Philadelphia, Charles Segall, J. Emanuel, Nat. Fisher, Harry Geler; Beaver Falls, W. E. White; Harrisburg, Peter Magaro, J. Silverman, J. Marcus, James George, Clyde Klinger, J. M. Laney, Lewis Gold; White Haven, E. F. Moyer; Roaring Springs, F. B. Whiteman, E. Bender. The following prominent exhibitors arrived later: Samuel F. Wheeler, Philadelphia; P. J. Cooper, Philadelphia; William Fairgreaves, Erie; A. Baltimore, New Castle; Sol. Oppenheimer, Tarentum.

Plea for New League and National Affiliation.

As the accredited delegates took their seats in the hall it was decided to hold all meetings open to the press. This resolution evoked some applause. F. J. Herrington of Pittsburgh, now made a motion that all the local organizations in the State of Pennsylvania, whether represented at this convention or not, be invited to come into one State-wide organization. When this motion had been seconded by Mr. Hansen, of Reading, Mr. Herrington made a strong argument in support of his motion. He said the time had come for united action and for a proper affiliation with the National organization. He asked that the constitution of the National organization be read and discussed. "Let us," he said, "understand what we are about, let us examine all the provisions of the National constitution and then after due deliberation decide whether national affiliation is good or bad." He himself had no doubt whatever of the great benefits which would accrue to the exhibitors of Pennsylvania through a proper affiliation with the National body. He wanted the men present to understand the letter and the spirit of the constitution and to signify whether they were willing to abide by it. Here the question of the old charter came up for discussion. It was found that the instrument had last been in the possession of the Philadelphia local. The latter organization having, for reasons of economy, stored their paraphernalia in care of the owner of an old theater, the charter became lost when the theater went out of existence.

The chairman then asked the advice of the National President as to how to join the National body. He wanted to know whether the old charter should be searched for or whether a new charter had best be asked for. Mr. Pearce had no hesitation in saying that an application for a new charter seemed the proper thing under the circumstances. In case the old charter was ever found it could be surrendered to him.

At this point Mr. Zerr pointed out that the provision in the National bylaws against the admission of exhibitors who were "directly or indirectly interested in the exchange business" might bear hard on the members of many locals, that had among their most active members certain men who were interested in exchanges. Several speakers declared that this provision would stand in the way of an early National affiliation. They thought that the benefits of the local were the most direct benefits to the exhibitors and if the co-operation of exchangemen was hereafter to be barred the strength and the financial standing of some locals might suffer through a loss of valuable and generous members. The cases of J. B. Clark and I. Silverman, of Pittsburgh, and of George Bennethum, of Reading, were specially alluded to. President Pearce was appealed to, but he said that he was powerless to alter the constitution. He said permission might be given to exhibitors to engage in the exchange business, but no man who was an exchange man now could be received into the membership of the National League. He promised to take the matter up with the National Executive Committee, but he could do no more. For a moment or two it seemed as if the exhibitors of the State might want to postpone affiliation with the national body.

Having obtained unanimous consent to speak on the question Mr. Herrington made an extended and spirited appeal on behalf of the rule which forbids the exchangeman to become a member of the National League. He recalled the series of events which led to the disbanding of the old Film Service Association. "History," he exclaimed, "repeats itself." He pointed out the fact that this old organization was disrupted because the manufacturers were permitted to enter the ranks of the exchangemen. He said that there was, indeed, a community of interest between all branches of the industry, but each branch should work within its own proper limits. Producers should not run theaters; exchanges should not run theaters—that is the business of the exhibitor. The exhibitor on the other hand should not try to become an exchangeman or a producer. In the course of his remarks Mr. Herrington referred to the late founder of The Moving Picture World, as a man who had at all times the interest of the exhibitor at heart and who believed in organization.

When the motion to have all the present local organizations combined into one State body came up for final vote, the meeting was unanimously for a new State organization. The temporary chairman thereupon invited suggestions for a name for the new body. The title: "The Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Pennsylvania" was suggested and unanimously adopted.

With this action the afternoon session came to a close and an adjournment was taken until 10 o'clock Wednesday morning.

Legislators Fraternize with Exhibitors.

An extraordinary feature of this convention was a meeting of the legislators and exhibitors, which took place at nine o'clock Tuesday night. The legislature of Pennsylvania is at present in session at the State capital, and invitations had been sent out to senators and assemblymen who had taken a stand favorable to the repeal of the censorship law. The chief speaker of the evening was Senator Joseph H. Thompson, from Beaver County. Mr. Thompson, a very agreeable and forceful speaker, pointed out that the repeal bill now pending in the house and the senate of the legislature, needed a good deal of urging and he frankly told his audience that they must be the ones to do the urging. He suggested that a legislative committee be appointed consisting of one good active man in every county of the State.

"There is a good deal of ignorance and indifference about the repeal bill," he said. "I have heard some members in both houses say that a compromise might be effected. I tell you there can be no compromise in such a question as this. It must be wiped off the statute books. Let no mistaken notion get abroad that this State censorship does away with local censorship. It does not. Every little community retains the right of local censorship. If you want this obnoxious law repealed, you must be active from now on until the end of this session. If you succeed in getting the repeal measure up to the Governor your work is not finished. Send the strongest delegation you can to Harrisburg; you have a right to ask some consideration at the Governor's hands, you have done good work for him. Your power is great, use it for the repeal of this wicked and un-American law."

The Senator was followed by about a dozen law-givers, who, each and all, pledged themselves to support the measure for the repeal of the Censorship Law. Among them were Assemblymen Stein, Howard, Maurer, Wilson, Hackett, Whitten, Benn and Dodds.

Second Day—Wednesday.

When the convention of the new born organization of the Pennsylvania League of Motion Picture Exhibitors began its second day of work several new applications for membership were received and acted upon favorably. Among them were Chas. F. Koar of Minersville, A. H. Dart of Wellsborough, M. Matule of Carbondale, and J. M. Thomas of Easton. A motion was made by Mr. Sabner to appoint a committee of five members whose duty it shall be to submit plans for a thorough campaign of organization comprising every portion of the state. The idea Mr. Sabner said was to lay out a plan which would give the Eastern, the Western and central portion of the State an equal representation. An amendment to increase the number of the members of this committee from five to seven was offered and carried, whereupon the chair appointed the following members as the committee: Segall, Hansen, Wood, J. S. Thomas, Whitman, Magaro and A. G. Thomas.

Mr. Segall declined to accept the appointment and suggested that his colleague, Nat Fisher from Philadelphia, be selected in his place, saying that Mr. Fisher was much better acquainted with all of the territory to be organized. This suggestion was adopted.

Breitinger's "Blue Cards."

Speaking for the welfare of the organization, Mr. Harrington called attention to the increasing distribution of "blue cards" by Chief Censor Louis Breitinger in all parts of the State. The speaker said that Mr. Breitinger was giving these "blue cards" away practically upon request. In Braddock two of the "blue cards" censors were bartenders, when they were not understudies for Mr. Breitinger. As the knowledge of free "blue cards" is spreading among the public a serious falling off of attendances will be the natural consequence. One exhibitor declared that when he refused to admit a "blue card" he was threatened with legal prosecution. H. A. Victor of McKeesport said that there was no need of honoring the "blue cards." He himself positively refused to pay any attention whatever to Breitinger's "blue cards." Mr. Derling declared, amid considerable merriment, that "blue cards" in his theater were only honored when reinforced by real nickels. Resolution was adopted to condemn the "blue card" practice.

Exhibitors Must Come Into Their Own.

Upon motion of Mr. MacAtee, seconded by several delegates, W. Stephen Bush of The Moving Picture World, was asked to address the convention. Mr. Bush said that the exhibitor, the man constantly on the firing line and absorbing the shocks administered by the public, ought to have more of a voice in the councils of the industry and ought to have the support of the producer and the exchange man. "The first and last sources of profit are the exhibitors," said Mr. Bush. "In England and in other European countries the exhibitor enjoys the position of power which he takes at this time in this country. At no time in the history of the motion picture has the opportunity for the exhibitor to assume his rightful seat in the motion picture parliament been more obvious than it is to-day.

"I am glad to see this revival of interest in organization all over the country. You are animated by the right spirit; your gathering here might have been much larger, but you have made the right kind of a start and I feel sure that when you assemble again in your next convention there will be such a representation as the greatness of your State calls for. You may rest assured that The Moving Picture World will be with you and with all exhibitors everywhere in their effort to organize and obtain their proper rights.

Upon motion of Mr. Magaro a committee was appointed to draft resolutions against censorship. W. S. Bush was intrusted with the task of preparing the resolutions.

Legislative Committee Appointed.

Wednesday afternoon session was largely devoted to the establishment of a legislative committee to watch events at Harrisburg. On motion of Mr. Herrington, a committee of five exhibitors was agreed upon. At this point the exchangemen, who had been invited to attend the meeting, expressed a desire to take part in the legislative work. V. R. Carrick, of Philadelphia; J. R. Newman, of the Ludwig Hammil Company, Pittsburgh; S. Rudolph, of the Electric Theater Supply Co., Philadelphia, and Max Herron, of Pittsburgh, responded. Mr. Carrick spoke at some length on the subject. He was followed by Mr. Levey, of the Greater New York; J. C. Campbell, of Blinkhorn's, and Arthur Hyman, who represented Calehuff, of Philadelphia.

After this discussion was concluded the motion to appoint a committee was amended to increase the membership to ten, and that five members should be exchangemen. It was adopted as amended and the following persons appointed: Exhibitors, Segall, Slevin, Herrington, Zerr and Megaro; exchangemen, A. C. Stine, Hunt Miller, George W. Bennethum, J. H. Buttner and L. F. Levinson.

Shortly after five o'clock the convention adjourned to meet Thursday morning at ten o'clock for the purpose of electing officers.

Bosworth Studio at Los Angeles—Constructing Set for Big Scene in "Captain Courtesy."

The Motion Picture Exhibitor

Wolff Calls New York Convention

Long Delayed Meeting Will Be Held in Utica on May 19 and 20—Reports Steady Growth of State League.

PRESIDENT A. N. WOLFF of the New York branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, has at last issued a call for the annual convention of that organization. According to his announcement the much deferred meeting will be held at Utica, New York, on Wednesday and Thursday, May 19 and 20, headquarters being at the Utica Hotel. In his communication President Wolff observes that there seems to be a great deal of unnecessary worry regarding the condition of the New York State branch and he adds "that it is acquiring a good, healthy and steady growth, that committees are working quietly in their respective channels and that all is harmony in most of the up-state sections." President Wolff also looks forward to a large attendance at Utica, when he expects the question of loyalty to the National League to be settled for all time.

In this connection the Moving Picture World desires to emphasize the hope of President Wolff, but believes that it expresses a feeling held quite generally in League circles that the New York State convention has been unnecessarily and mistakenly delayed. By all rules, and the necessity of the occasion, it should have been held last fall. A great deal depended upon what New York proposed to do in the matter of amalgamation, and the failure of the State League and the Association to get together at that time has had a deterrent effect upon the work of the National organization. Whether a further delay at this time can make any material difference is a question, but confidence would have been materially restored if President Wolff had named an earlier date for the meeting of the New York branch.

In making this observation it is not the intention to criticise President Wolff adversely; undoubtedly he has acted with the best intentions, but from the standpoint of the League at large and of those who have been working for the interest of the whole organization, the inaction of the New York State branch has been a serious obstacle to progress and no good purpose is served by calling the long overdue meeting at so distant a date.

However, a date has at last been named and the Moving Picture World hopes that exhibitors of New York State will attend in large numbers.

Massachusetts League Dinner

Annual Feed to Occur on February 9—Election of Officers, Too.

ALL members of the Massachusetts Motion Picture Exhibitors' League are actively engaged these days making necessary arrangements for the annual dinner, which is to be held at the Quincy House on the evening of Tuesday, February 9. Everybody agrees that this event is to be the "best ever."

Invitations have been extended to several prominent State and city officials to attend. Attorney-General Henry C. Atwill has accepted an invitation to be one of the speakers.

The dinner, which will be held at 8 o'clock, will be preceded by the election of officers. The nominating committee, which comprises Fred B. Murphy, proprietor of the New England office of the United Film Service, chairman; Harry F. Campbell, manager of the Box Office Attraction Company; Frank J. Howard of the Scollay Square Olympia; Herman Sivovolos of the Dreamland and Hub Theaters, Boston, and Jacob Lourie of the Beacon and Modern Theaters, Boston, has held several meetings, but as yet it is not known what members they have selected as executives.

President Ernest H. Horstmann is still considered to be the best man to head this organization, despite the fact that he has repeatedly said that he will not accept. The members realize and appreciate the work which he has done for the moving picture industry in Massachusetts. If President Horstmann would only agree to be the leader for another year, every exhibitor is certain that the league would become the leading trade organization in New England.

It is not believed that the association will be compelled to fight as much legislation as it did during 1914, nevertheless, certain bills which are of vital importance to exhibitors are certain to be placed before the Bay State Legislature. The most important of these bills, and incidentally the most detrimental, is that old "Five-Minute Bill," which was removed from the Massachusetts Statute Books during 1914, only through the unflinching efforts of President Horstmann and his associates. There is now an order before the legislature which provides that this bill shall be replaced on the books. This bill provides that no film can run over twenty minutes, without an intermission of five minutes.

Every effort will be made by the members of the league to enlist all exhibitors in the State as members of the organization. It is believed that several membership teams will be organized and that a prize will be given to the team bringing in the largest number of new members.

It is time that every exhibitor should realize the benefit of this organization. No exhibitor should hesitate to join voluntarily. The dues are only $12 a year and when any moving picture man in Massachusetts thinks of the wonderful work that has been accomplished by the league during the past two years, he should regard it his duty to assist. No trade organization can be a success unless it receives the co-operation of all engaged in that trade. It is not at all fair that the work and expense of this organization should be borne by a few, when all men engaged in the business throughout the State benefit by the many accomplishments.

Secretary R. W. Drown, who is located at No. 34 School street, Boston, is always willing to send an application blank to any exhibitor upon request.

A petition of C. C. Carstens has been filed for the consideration of the Legislature by Senator Bates of Boston. This bill provides that it shall be the duty of the Board of Labor and Industries to examine and license every motion picture film that is to be publicly exhibited in the Commonwealth, unless it finds that the film is indecent, immoral, inhuman or calculated to impair the health of those who witness it. The State Board is to charge a fee of $1 for each reel of less than 1,000 feet and $2 for each reel that exceeds 1,000 feet. Fines of $25 to $300 are provided. This bill would repeal all other acts and would take the film business out of the hands of the District Police.

To Combat Adverse Legislation

California League Preparing to Make a Fight Against Proposed Discriminating Laws.

THE California State Legislature has been in session for two weeks and no legislation directly affecting the moving picture industry has been introduced, but something along this line is expected at an early date by officials of the State Exhibitors' League, as it is known that several drastic measures have been drafted. In speaking of this matter President H. L. Beach says: "Judging from some of the measures that have already been introduced at this session of the Legislature, it is plain that radical legislation will be the rule, and it will be a surprise if there is not an attempt made to regulate the moving picture industry. We are preparing for this and will take active steps to protect our interests as soon as any proposed legislation is announced. A certain sign that something is brewing can be found in the great increase of late in newspaper stories in which moving pictures are unfavorably commented upon."

A careful perusal of the daily papers of recent date show that the suggestion of Mr. Beach is not without a foundation. Under the heading, "Film Tragedy Blamed for Woman's Suicide," many of the leading papers of the State featured a story this week of a suicide at Marysville, the tragedy being the result, it is alleged, of a visit to a moving picture theater where a woman fancied that the situation of the woman on the screen fitted her own case. An Oakland paper devoted an entire column during the week to a so-called "expose" of one of the finest and best conducted moving picture houses in that city. In language bordering upon the vile it declared that the pictures shown were immoral, the house a filthy place where drunks gathered to sleep off the effects of their sprees, and the music an abomination, intimating that there were other houses of this description. The publication of such tales is bound to have some effect and those desiring to hamper the moving picture industry will not lose sight of the opportunity to bring them to the attention of law makers.

CLEVELAND EXHIBITORS ACTIVE.

Members of Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, Local No. 1, the Cleveland chapter of the organization, at their last meeting, decided to call a special session to assemble delegates who will attend the State convention of exhibitors at Columbus, February 9 and 10. An open meeting will be held with invitations to every exhibitor in the city and every exchange representative.

Important legislation affecting the motion picture industry and the exhibitors of the State is on the calendar for attention at the State convention, and it was the opinion of officers and members of the Cleveland League that a strong delegation should participate in any action that is brought up.

Simultaneous with the meeting of the State exhibitors will be the meeting of the national executive board at Columbus, according to a letter received from President Marion S. Pearce.

Pickford Pictures For Big Theaters.

Paramount Advises the Trade That "Little Mary" Will First Appear in City Houses at Not Less Than Twenty-five Cents.

UNDER the signature of Wm. W. Hodkinson, president of the Paramount Pictures Corporation, a circular letter has been addressed to the trade which recites the facts that "owing to the enormous salary which it has been necessary to pay Mary Pickford," all future releases in which she appears will be first released to big city theaters at a minimum admission price of 25c. As the subject is of interest to the trade generally and is, in a way, the opening gun of the campaign for higher prices of admission, the circular is published herewith in its entirety:

Owing to the enormous salary which it has been necessary to pay Mary Pickford in order to secure her services, the Famous Players Film Company has found it necessary to first release pictures in which she appears (as well as "The Eternal City") through big city theaters at a minimum admission price of 25 cents, ranging up to 50 cents.

Paramount Pictures Corporation, however, has arranged to secure these pictures for Paramount Program (as well as "The Eternal City") after they have played in the largest cities, so that our exhibitors will not be deprived of the Mary Pickford pictures, and besides, the pictures will come to them with a much greater drawing power than if released originally through Paramount Program.

The reason for this is obvious: A Mary Pickford, or other picture, which has been run only in the large cities at a minimum admission of 25 cents, possesses a value and prestige not possible to accrue to any picture released through the regular Program.

The reason for this is equally plain, as few pictures possess the drawing power to permit of their being exhibited only in the big theaters. This you will readily realize.

By this arrangement you will also understand that this change in releasing the Mary Pickford pictures will in no wise detract from the value of Paramount Program, on the other hand, it will enhance the value of the Program because, as your patrons will know they are to have these pictures later on, they will look forward eagerly to their coming, and the fact that the pictures have been exhibited in an exclusive and high priced manner will doubly enhance their value.

Assuring you that Paramount Program will continue in its present high standard of quality, and that the Paramount efficiency plan will continue in its effective co-operation, we remain.

Selig Company in Canal Zone.

Kathlyn Williams at Head of Players Who Will Produce Rex Beach's "The Ne'er-Do-Well."

WORD has been received at the Selig Polyscope Company offices in Chicago of the safe arrival in the Panama Canal Zone of the Selig company of players headed by Miss Kathlyn Williams. They embarked some time ago at New Orleans for the Isthmus where Rex Beach's famous novel, "The Ne'er-Do-Well," will be filmed. All in the party are reported in good health and as having enjoyed a pleasant voyage. En route some special scenes were filmed aboard the vessel.

Work has already been started on the "Ne'er-Do-Well," and all in the company are enthusiastic over the wealth of tropical native scenery and other local color. A member of the party writes: "There are jungles in Panama, as dense and as mysterious as those in Africa. The only Canal men who know the jungles intimately are the surveyors who have charted the topography of the watershed or who have made special investigations at various points. There are strong impressions of beauty, mystery and fear, a lure with a menace, a smile that only half covers a snarl in the jungles of Panama. An orchid beckons from the branch of a tree, a pair of wild pigs dash away into the brush, a tiger cat shows its bright eyes for a moment, an alligator slides from a mud bank into the water, monkeys lark overhead, and a lion growls.

The Selig players were cordially received upon arrival in the Canal Zone and several weeks' time will be utilized in journeying through the jungles and filming beautiful scenic backgrounds to be used in Selig pictureplays.

Before the party left New Orleans William N. Selig gave a dinner to the voyagers. Among those present were Kathlyn Williams, Wheeler Oakman, Lamar Johnstone, Harry Lonsdale, Sidney Smith, Frank Clark, Jack McDonald, Al Green, Robert Kelly, Helen Coates Ellis, Norma Nichols, Robert Carson, Harry Gerstad, Colin Campbell, director, and Lanier Bartlett, special scenario writer.

Two Receivers For Alco.

Pending Reorganization Judge Hand Appoints Attorneys Goldsmith and Gotthold to Manage Affairs.

THE Alco Film Corporation is again in the hands of receivers designated by Judge Augustus N. Hand of the United States District Court following the institution of bankruptcy proceedings against the corporation with the objective of conserving the assets pending a reorganization of the business.

Milton M. Goldsmith, an attorney of 35 Nassau street, who represents a number of the creditors, and Arthur F. Gotthold, a lawyer of 60 Wall street, were appointed receivers under a joint bond of $15,000, with full authority to operate the business until plans are perfected to complete the reorganization.

The latest court move was precipitated by the position taken by Messrs. James B. Clark, Hunt B. Miller, Albert S. Davis, James Steele and Richard A. Rowland, of Pittsburgh, according to officials of the film company. The men named recently instituted the equity suit in the Federal Court asking for the appointment of receivers, but the court has never taken action on the petition.

Last September the Alco entered into a contract with the above-mentioned parties granting them territorial righs to the Alco service including the release of one feature film weekly on a percentage basis of 30 per cent. and an initial payment of $30,000 of which $5,000 was paid in cash and the balance in four equal notes. Under the terms of this contract the lessees were to have exclusive rights to distribute the Alco films in Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, West Virginia and Ohio and the western part of Pennsylvania.

Owing to internal dissension the film company experienced temporary difficulty in supplying the lessees with films and they started the suit and are said to be maintaining a hostile attitude toward the corporation which threatened to endanger the reorganization plans unless the protection of the court was invoked.

Already the reorganization plans are under way and it is understood the Guggenheim family is willing to advance all the capital needed to place the film corporation on a firm basis. The corporation owes about $250,000 and the nominal assets are said to be about the same amount, but the company is handicapped by lack of quick assets.

Last November William Sievers, then treasurer of the Alco Film Corporation, instituted a suit against the corporation and Mr. Gotthold was appointed receiver. The suit was settled two days later when John D. Dunlop, one of the directors, purchased the interest of Mr. Sievers and Al Lichtman and had the receivership vacated.

The petition in bankruptcy was filed by J. Robert Rubin, former Deputy Police Commissioner, representing the following creditors: the Playgoers Film Company, $2,040; the Standard Engraving Company, $1,800, and James A. Walton, $112.

Mr. Rubin and Job Hedges, representing creditors, presented the application for the appointment of receivers.

Metro Pictures Corporation Formed.

New Combination of Exchange Men Will Buy Pictures and Cut Out the Broker—Old-Timers Interested.

AN ORGANIZATION was formed on Wednesday, Jan. 27, to be known as the Metro Pictures Corporation, by the exchanges that were formerly interested in the Alco program. These interests have raised a large fund for the purchase of pictures and are prepared to pay the highest price for the best the market produces.

All the members of the new combination are experienced in the exchange business and are eminently fitted to judge of the character of pictures required in their respective territories. Further details will be announced next week.

McKinney Leaves Warners

Resigns the Position of General Manager and Will Take a Vacation—Future Plans Not Known.

JAMES A. McKINNEY will cease giving his attention to the promotion and general management of the Warner's Features, Inc., and the United Film Service at the end of the week. McKinney states as his reason for retiring that he has completed the work which had been mapped out for him, that of placing in the field an organization perfect in every detail which in its exclusive marketing and distributing functions introduced a new factor in the industry.

The announcement of McKinney's withdrawal will cause considerable comment, inasmuch as he was considered the most important accession to the administrative ranks in filmdom in years, and it had been accepted as a fact that he had entered the field to remain. In the year and a half that he has been in the control of the Warner organization he has overcome obstacles and unravelled business entanglements that would have proven the Nemesis of many an able man less endowed with energy and experience.

McKinney's executive abilities are recognized in fields apart from the motion picture business as well as being patent to confreres of his in the film industry. He was associated with George W. Perkins in handling the Progressive campaign of which Theodore Roosevelt was standard bearer and has been close to some of the foremost figures of the political and business worlds in executive capacities. His interest in former years has also been enlisted in construction work in the West, which comprehended among the most important achievements in that field. He is a Western man by birth and in ideals and has made his energy felt in the circles wherein he has moved—an energy typical of the West, trained to the plane of economy of highest efficiency.

Other operations will claim Mr. McKinney's attention after he has allowed himself a brief vacation in spite of immediate demands on his services coming from several sources. He stated to a representative of this publication that he preferred, for the present, not to discuss his future plans.

P. A. Powers, president of the United Film Service, in commenting on Mr. McKinney's retirement, expressed deep regret. "Incessant labor on Mr. McKinney's part has resulted in placing the United on the firm footing which it enjoys today," he said. "In the year and a half which Mr. McKinney has devoted to the upbuilding and solidification of this organization he has accomplished the almost incredible."

Private Showing of Selig Feature

Bobbs-Merrill Company and Guests See Harold McGrath's "The Carpet from Bagdad."

A NEW five-reel film feature adapted from Harold McGrath's novel, "The Carpet from Bagdad," was sent from the offices of the Selig Polyscope Co., in Chicago, to Indianapolis, Monday evening, January 18, and was presented for private view to the officers and friends of the Bobbs-Merrill Publishing Company, in the art gallery of the local publishing house. This Pictureplay has not yet been released for showing to the general public and was forwarded to Indianapolis by Colonel W. N. Selig as a courtesy to the Bobbs-Merrill Company, owners of the novel. The Indianapolis newspapers, including the News, Times and Star, were enthusiastic in their press comments. The News, one of the greatest literary journals in the Middle West, says, in part:

"The picture is one of the most magnificent ever shown in this city. From New York to far-away Cairo, Bagdad and Damascus the story carries one. The scenic effects are marvelous. One in particular brought forth enthusiastic applause. It portrayed a sandstorm in the desert. Gradually one sees the clouds gathering. Far off in the distance the whirl is seen coming nearer and nearer. Finally the storm breaks in full force. The caravans scatter. Tents, which have been thrown up as temporary resting places along the way, are pitched in every direction by the terrific wind. The sand pours down as of from the sky in veritable torrents, until everyone and everything is covered. Then, just as gradually, the force of winds spends itself. Light breaks through the rifts in the clouds. From out of the hills of sand, survivors are seen to struggle."

Among the guests at the private view of "The Carpet from Bagdad" were members of the local writer's colony, representatives of the press, local illustrators, members of the Dramatic and University Clubs and others. Notwithstanding a heavy fall of snow, the attendance was very flattering, among those recognized in the audience being: Mr. and Mrs. Meredith Nicholson, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh McGibney, two of the city's most accomplished musicians; Dr. Paul Haworth, a well-known writer on dramatic subjects; Mr. Theodore Kingsbury, editor of the "Indiana Farmer," and wife; the Rev. F. S. C. Wicks, pastor of All-Souls' Unitarian Church, and one of the most prominent clergymen in the city; Mr. H. H. Howland, editor of the Bobbs-Merrill Company; Mr. W. C. Bobbs, president; Mr. D. L. Chambers, secretary, and a number of other prominent club and literary people. Meredith Nicholsen, the novelist, refused to be convinced that the pictures had not really been filmed in Cairo, Bagdad, and the desert.

Gleichman Heads New Company

Edmund Lawrence Is Director and Many Theatrical Stars Have Been Engaged.

THE World Comedy Stars Film Corporation, a one hundred thousand dollar concern, has just been formed with Phil Gleichman, well known in the motion picture field as the dominant figure. The aim of this new corporation is to manufacture and market one-reel comedies with famous stars of the legitimate and vaudeville stage in the leading roles. Contracts have already been signed with Jeff De Angelis, well known as having been the star in "The Beauty Shop," "Fantana" and many other Shubert successes; Lulu Glaser, another widely known star, who has appeared in "Erminie" with Francis Wilson; "Dolly Varden" and other successes too numerous to mention; Florence Tempest of the well-known vaudeville team, Tempest and Sunshine; Katherine Osterman, who made a reputation for herself in "Piff Paff Pouff," "A Persian Garden."

Edmund Lawrence, who has had an interesting and varied experience on the legitimate stage as director, having been with Thomas W. Keene, Lillian Russell, E. H. Sothern, De Wolf Hopper, and recently with the Kalem Company, has been engaged as director; William W. Jefferson of the famous Jefferson family of actors is to be associate director.

The scenarios are to be written by Mark Swan, who has been engaged in turning out scenarios for the Edison Company and who is also a well-known playwright for the legitimate stage.

The World Comedy Stars Film Corporation, according to the advice of Mr. Phil Gleichman, is here to fill a place which, up to the present time, has been sadly neglected. These comedies with well-known names, are to be released on a regular program.

ADOLPH ZUKOR LEAVES FOR LOS ANGELES.

Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players Film Co., will leave on Monday, February 1, on a trip to Los Angeles, where the western studios of the Famous Players Film Co. are now situated, for a purpose said to be of the utmost importance to the trade in general and to the Famous Players' Film Co. particularly. What the real reason for the trip is, is not definitely announced, but it is believed that when the present European wars terminate the Famous Players' plans of producing a series of important feature subjects in Europe, Mr. Zukor began active contemplation of extending his plans to countries not affected by the continental conflict.

Though some intimation was divulged that these new plans were in consideration by the personnel of the Famous Players Film Co., their exact purport was never disclosed. Recently, however, it became a matter of belief that the Famous Players Film Co. were planning to produce a number of elaborate film subjects in Japan. The knowledge that the Famous Players possessed the film rights of "Madam Butterfly" strengthened this impression; and when Mary Pickford was sent to the Pacific Coast, it was generally theorized that she would go thence to Japan to begin work on the film version of this celebrated opera and play.

The fact that Mr. Zukor is expected to be away for a considerable period of time tends to the belief that his ultimate objective is a trip across the Pacific to the Orient. If this possible venture materializes, the trade will be given the first series of subjects produced in Japan, and possibly China, by an American feature concern. That it will be a notable accomplishment is attested by the stupendous results obtained in Europe where "The Eternal City" was produced last summer.

GRACE STEVENS IN DYREDA SUBJECT.

Miss Grace E. Stevens has been cast by the Dyreda Company to play in a new picture, "Always in the Way." The picture will be taken in Florida and the company has already gone south. Miss Stevens has filled with distinction several screen roles and is an actress of wide stage experience. She is secretary of the Alumni of Sargeant's American Academy. One of her parts was the aunt in "A Florida Enchantment," a Vitagraph offering. Her most recent part was Mona Barton in "Time Lock No. 776."

"The Broken Lullaby"

One-Reel Majestic Out of the Ordinary in Its Combined Simplicity and Strength.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

AN old song of many cadences, "The Broken Lullaby," does not obtrude its antiquated plot. The scheme is covered by a situation of simple dignity enforced by some fine acting on the part of Loretta Taylor, the situation of a mother putting her babe to sleep brought into powerful contrast with the brutalizing effect of alcoholism upon mankind. The husband returns with some boon companions, all drunk, and has a "good time" in the rooms below while his wife tries to sing their babe to sleep.

Directors who believe themselves to be exponents of realism often call upon us to admire a great deal of their skill in depicting what is far from admirable, but they do not grasp the fact that realism is not depicting life as they see it, but as we see it. Those of us in front who see the ordinary phases of life may feel a mild curiosity about extraordinary phases, but we are more in sympathy with experiences which we know to be common ones. The power of true realism lies in picturing the known in such a manner as to obtain and hold interest during the story to be told, in bringing strong situations out of the easily-recognizable affairs of our everyday lives. Therein lies the prime merit of "The Broken Lullaby."

Scene from "The Broken Lullaby" (Majestic).

Loretta Taylor, as the mother, is a psychological study at acute moments. As the wife she recognizes, purely from habit, the right of a father to handle his own child, but when he roughly displays the tender thing she has created and nourished to the drunken revelers, she is torn by her outraged sensibilities and her mother instincts and so badly frightened that she places the child with a farm hand, directing him to hide it in an outhouse. He is about to follow her instructions, when he notes the presence of rodents and carries the babe to his own shanty. There he stumbles and is rendered unconscious by a fall, while the babe lies sleeping on the floor.

Meanwhile one of the revelers throws a lighted match carelessly and it sets fire to the outhouse where the mother supposes her babe to be hidden, and some sensational incidents follow. The main impression made by the picture, however, has little to do with the events which lead to the drunken father's death and to a new start for her—it is that enforced by contrast in the earlier scenes. There is an unpreached sermon in every second of that contrast, a sermon more deeply felt that it is not pronounced in words, one to make the spectators think twice.

CAMERA MAN UNDER FIRE.

Lawrence Darmour, camera man for the Mutual Weekly, had his "baptism of fire" recently when deputy sheriffs fired upon strikers at the Cartaret, N. J., fertilizer plant labor troubles. Darmour had set up his camera preparatory to making a panorama of the immense works, with the strikers standing about in the rear, when the deputy sheriffs came rushing through the big gates and opened fire on the crowd. The strikers fled at the first shot, Darmour lugging his heavy outfit the best he could. Bullets were whistling all about, and one cut a clean hole through a new derby hat Mr. Darmour was wearing.

"In the Hands of the Jury"

One Juror Had Robbed Man Killed by Accident and He Alone Votes to Convict Innocent Man.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

Cast.

Doctor Butler.....James B. Ross
Lennice, his daughter.....Anna Q. Nilson
Doctor Haines, his assistant.....Harry Millarde
Murdock, man in financial difficulties...John Mackin
Hugh, the butler.....Henry Hallam

THIS Kalem two-reel picture, "In the Hands of the Jury," will make good entertainment. The situation that it exploits is fresh and striking; its qualities make a deep impression on the imagination. Clever craftmanship in working up the plot has markedly added to the situation's primary effectiveness so that the spectator's attention is led from step to step not only by the suspense-giving promise of a startling denouement, but by the variation of an incident continually unexpected from scene to scene. The picture has plenty of freshly interesting things, things that are human and believable and new, presented in that unostentatious way pleasing to sensible people who know and feel the value of little things.

It is a story of the guilty human conscience, and though there are moments now and then that are not wholly convincing, it is full of truth. The acting is high grade. Doctor Butler is perfectly suggested. Murdock, who needed money and came to the doctor's to borrow it, is played in an intelligently conventional way that quite fills the bill. The juveniles, Lennice and Haines, furnish pretty lovemaking, especially in the out-of-door scenes—where coy, playfulness seems more in keeping and so more convincing, then in the youthful doctor's laboratory—the criticism is admittedly impressionistic. The butler is an ably done figure also.

The producer, Robert G. Vignola, has made the little joining places of his action natural. It is just in this department that experience is much in favor of the director. A man may be endowed with that lively and absolutely human imagination that can criticise the emotional expression going on before the camera and by sheer genius make it convince. But it needs, we most certainly believe, a course of trial and failure to make a director know how to keep his picture free from the little carelessness, little impossibilities, breaks, that often burden even strong stories. Experience also teaches how to use the faint touches of suggestion that are effective, though they come near being crude. The staging is good, but that house was not quite up to the very stiff butler. The photography is clear and life-like.

Scene from "In the Hands of the Jury" (Kalem).

The doctor is really killed by a terrible poison that only touches his bare hand, but his assistant is accused. His daughter loves this young doctor and it is finally through her that the villain, who was in the jury and doing his best to convict her lover, is brought to book. The freshness comes from the handling rather than from the story itself.

J. Barney Sherry, the veteran character actor of the Broncho, is seen again in one of his favorite roles: that of a seedy farmer, in "A Lucky Blowout," a strong drama now released in the Mutual program.

"An Oriental Romance"

In Which King Baggot Featured in Two-Reel Imp Production Dignifies Chinese Character.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

AS a production "An Oriental Romance" is somewhat unique. It is not one that is asking for a place by itself in the world of the photoplay drama, however. Its big moments are not tremendously big, but the picture pleases, and its atmosphere is clean. Its code of honor, so far as the Chinaman is concerned, is without blemish, and, perhaps, that of the opposite party or parties had better be left unquestioned, inasmuch as that the convincing attitude with regard to race distinction assumed in the picture leaves the mind open for conjecture.

To King Baggot has been assigned the role of Hop Kung, a young Chinaman who has become as much Americanized as a Chinaman can become during the term of an American college course. It is needless to draw attention to the fact that the role of the stolid faced Chinaman is an exceedingly difficult one for an animated American actor to impersonate satisfactorily; but it must be acceded that King Baggot has done all that any mortal could do in the face of his difficulties. He has done well.

Scene from "An Oriental Romance" (Imp).

The plot of the story brings the young Chinaman into social relations with the family and friends of his college pal, between whose sister and the Chinaman arises the old question of love. The situation is pounced upon by the girl's brother and father under the influence of the old idea of race distinction, forgetting entirely a great service which the Chinaman has done Dick Fenton, his college friend and the girl's brother.

The moral of the story seems somewhat overbalanced, and it is hard to reconcile one's self with the attitude of our American friends in the affair, and the picture closes without giving us the satisfaction of an acknowledgment of the debt owed the Chinaman.

Arline Pretty plays the feminine lead, and Ned Reardon appears to good advantage in the role of Dick Fenton; Frank Smith portrays the character of Liang Kung, father of Hop Kung.

SPECIAL PERFORMANCE FOR "STOP THIEF."

The extraordinary success of the several special performances of "Du Barry" has caused George Kleine to announce February 7 and 8 as the dates of two special performances of his five-part comedy, "Stop Thief." The beautiful new Candler theater, New York, will be utilized on Sunday, February 7, for three professional performances, at 3:30, 7:30 and 9:15 P. M. An exhibition for the trade will be held at the more convenient hour of 10:45 A. M., Monday, February 8. To avoid a repetition of the crowds which swarmed into the lobby of the Candler during the projection of "Du Barry," reserved seats will be provided upon application to the New York office, 226 West 42d street.

DIRECTOR RIDGELY ON A VACATION.

Edison Director Richard Ridgely is spending a few weeks' vacation at his winter home near Jacksonville, Florida. He has been working hard and untiringly on the Edison 'Olive's Opportunities' Series," by Mrs. Wilson Woodrow, and upon completion of the twelfth and last, "Olive's Greatest Opportunity," he started immediately for the South.

Kennedy Returns to Coast

A. M. KENNEDY, General Manager of Productions for Kriterion Service, left on the Pennsylvania Railroad, Wednesday, January 27, for Santa Barbara, California, where he already has several companies producing for the Kriterion Program. Mr. Kennedy, while in New York, secured the services of a number of prominent film artists to leave for the coast studios.

A. M. Kennedy.

Among those who accompanied him to Santa Barbara on Wednesday were: Jack Byrne, scenario and film editor; H. C. Mathews, who will direct for the C. K. Film Manufacturing Company; L. B. Carleton, who will direct for the Alhambra Motion Picture Co.; Miss Elsie Albert, Baby Early, Victor Scheurick, R. D. Clifton and Anna Brown who will work under the direction of Mr Mathews in the C. K. company; also E. J. Peil, Master Edward Peil and Betty Harte, who will be directed by Mr. Carleton in the Alhambra company. With these acquisitions there will be nine companies in Santa Barbara producing for the Kriterion Service.

Mr. Kennedy upon his arrival at the coast will make a tour of the producing companies of the Kriterion which are located in Santa Barbara, Los Angeles, and San Mateo, as well as opening California headquarters for Kriterion.

JUDGES WORKING ON "MYSTERY" SOLUTION.

Harold MacGrath and May Tinee, of the Chicago Tribune, have been visitors at the New Rochelle studio of the Thanhouser company for several days, where they have been reading the solutions to "The Million Dollar Mystery" sent in by thousands of moving picture fans from all sections of the country.

More than 100,000 solutions have been received. In order to keep the judges from being swamped a large force of clerks has been engaged for weeks in sorting the mail. To the person whose solution meets with the approval of the judges will be awarded the $10,000 prize. The successful solution will be produced as the twenty-third episode of "The Million Dollar Mystery," carrying this famous serial to a happy ending.

"Mystery" Judges at Work. Left to Right, Harold MacGrath, May Tinee, Tribune; Howell Hansell, Thanhouser.

This final episode will be released February 22nd. Howell Hansel, Thanhouser's famous "Mystery" director, will be in charge. Florence La Badie, Marguerite Snow, James Cruze, Sidney Bracy and Frank Farrington will appear in it.

"The Goose Girl"

A Lasky Production Featuring Marguerite Clark and Possessing the Highest Merit.

Reviewed by W. Stephen Bush.

THERE is a charm in this picture which no one can escape, but which few are able to analyze or even describe. To begin with, there is the personality of Marguerite Clark. She conquers her audience in an instant. You cannot very well determine for yourself whether you liked her better in the guise of the goose girl or in the purple of the queen, but you are quite sure that no artist could find a better model of either. Petite, dainty, vivacious, gifted, representing a most exquisite type of American feminine beauty, this little artist takes every heart by storm. The women and children join in homage to her sweet art. In the part of the monarch who would rather be a man than a king, Monroe Salisbury impressed the audience as the beau ideal of a Prince Charming. Equal praise may freely be awarded to every man and woman in the play, with the possible exception of S. N. Dunbar, who played the part of the Grand Duke. Admirers of Lasky pictures could not help regretting the absence of Theodore Roberts. His performance in a similar role in "The Man from Home" will long be remembered.

Scene from "The Goose Girl" (Lasky).

One would have to be blind not to see the outlines of a new school of art in motion pictures in this and in many other Lasky production. "The Goose Girl" is a splendid example of this new school of motion picture art. This new school specializes in beauty. It has a keen eye for what is sweet and beautiful and elevating and seeks to emphasize things on the screen. In "The Goose Girl" this tendency triumphs all the way through. There are from first to last scenes pre-eminent for their artistic beauty, finished in every detail and possessed of an irresistible appeal. Some of the scenes remind one of great paintings that have suddenly sprung into life. The picture is but fifty feet old on the screen when the audience senses the merits of this new school of screen art, and it responds with a will which must be flattering to the friends of good pictures. The audience which saw the feature in the Strand last Sunday was like a crowd of children in a nursery held spellbound by a good story-teller. When the brave little goose girl is rescued from the clutches of the brutal libertine the whole audience breaks into applause.

I cannot, within the narrow limits of this review, go into detail, but there are two or three scenes so bewitchingly beautiful that I cannot help mentioning them. The meeting of the disguised king and the goose girl at the foot of the rude country bridge is a masterpiece of screen-painting, the tinted scenes, without exception, are superb, the courtship in the vineyard is beyond all praise. The feature abounds in touches of genuine humor. The king trying to help the goose girl in keeping her geese in order, the scenes in the home of the goose girl's foster-parents are good samples of this gentle but very effective humor.

The plot has no higher merit than might be found in a dozen stories from Grimm and Anderson, but the handling of the theme is as marvelous as any fairy tale. But for such pictures as "The Goose Girl," the hold which the motion picture has gained upon the best part of the American public might easily be imperiled.

Producing Primarily for the Jews

Boris Thomashefsky Film Co. Launched to Screen Notable Yiddish Stage Successes as World Wide Attractions.

MODERN Yiddish stage successes in motion pictures, produced with the sole object of attracting and pleasing the thousands of Yiddish patrons of the photoplay theaters throughout the world, are announced by the Boris Thomashefsky Film Co., of New York City. In that the new productions are being made primarily for the Yiddish people, the work of the new film company marks a departure in photoplay productions.

Boris Thomashefsky.

Boris Thomashefsky, who has given the new company its name and being, is, perhaps the best known Yiddish actor in the world—certainly the best known in the United States. To him belongs the distinction of having opened the first Yiddish theater in America in a humble building in the Bowery, away down in the Lower East Side of New York City, some thirty years ago. Continuously since that eventful "first night" on the Bowery, Mr. Thomashefsky has been appearing with his own companies in modern and classic Yiddish successes in New York and elsewhere. So popular have the Thomashefsky performances been that Mr. Thomashefsky has become a real impresario and is at present the proprietor of the beautiful Thomashefsky National Theatre at Second avenue and Houston street which represents a financial investment of many thousands of dollars and which is today attracting much attention through the splendid stock productions which are being made there from week to week. At various times Mr. Thomashefsky has taken his company on tour of the principal cities of the United States. Upon other occasions the well known Yiddish star has visited the principal cities in Europe appearing as "guest star" with some of the most important dramatic organizations playing in the Yiddish tongue.

Mr. Thomashefsky believes that there are enough Jews in the United States to support the photoplay versions of Yiddish successes which he has set out to make. Sidney M. Golden, the well known photoplay director who has done notable work for a number of the big producing companies, has been engaged to direct the Yiddish pictures, in each of which Mr. Thomashefsky will appear as the star, supported by the company of able players who are with him at the present time at the big theater on the lower east side. L. Lawrence Barenkopf is business manager of the new photoplay organization.

Although no releases have yet been made, the Thomashefsky company have already filmed a number of notable Yiddish successes, among them "The Jewish Crown," "The Period of the Jew," and "Hear Ye, Israel," which are ready for shipment to such exchanges or exhibitors throughout the country who are alive to the draft which these plays, with Mr. Thomashefsky as the star, will have in any locality.

"AS A MAN SOWS" SHOWN AT SING SING.

Last Sunday at Sing Sing prison, the prisoners had a special treat in witnessing a presentation of the big Sawyer five-reel feature, "As a Man Sows," which was shown twice in the prison chapel under the auspices of the Gold Rule Brotherhood of which George M. Thompson is chairman of the entertainment committee.

Shortly after Thomas Mott Osborne became warden of the prison, Mr. Sawyer offered him the use of big feature productions free in connection with his uplift movement in the great penitentiary. As is the case with all other matters pertaining to entertainment, the matter was turned over to the Golden Rule Brotherhood, who accepted the offer with thanks.

Sidney M. Baber Visiting New York

London Representative of Famous Players and Lasky Companies Will Extend Trip to Pacific Coast.

SIDNEY M. BABER, London representative of the Famous Players and Jesse L. Lasky companies, arrived in New York on Jan. 23. It is Mr. Baber's first visit to the United States. He will accompany Mr. Zukor, president of the Famous Players, and Mr. Goldfish, general manager of the Lasky Company, on their trip to California, leaving New York on Feb. 1. Mr. Baber expects to be away for about three weeks and to sail for home about March 1.

Sidney M. Baber.

Mr. Baber is a film man of experience. For two years he was London manager for B. Nichols of the London M. P. Sales Agency. He has done a lot of professional work on the stage and accompanied Sidney Olcott to Egypt at the time of the production of Kalem's "From the Manger to the Cross," in the cast of which Mr. Baber appeared. Following his engagement by Mr. Zukor Mr. Baber opened small offices for the Famous Players' Film Company, Limited, in Charing Cross Road, but the business expanded so rapidly that he soon was obliged to move into more commodious quarters. The present address of Mr. Baber is 160-170 Wardour street, in the heart of the film center of London.

Mr. Baber says American pictures are very popular in England, and he added that none are more so than those of his own companies, which he says command top prices. Business throughout England is good at present, Mr. Baber said, in spite of what it was generally supposed it would be on account of the war. While many of the cinemas or picture houses situated along the coast have been closed, owing to their taking over by the government for barracks, theaters in other towns have done a fair business and maintained their prices of admission. There is some business to be done on the Continent at the present time, but the low prices prevailing hardly make it profitable. Mr. Baber is also Continental representative for Bosworth, Inc.

Illustrating one of the phases of exhibiting in England today which is militating against the stability of the industry, Mr. Baber alluded to a contract recently entered into between a renter and a large exhibitor under which thirty exclusives were to be shown consecutively at a total rental of 30 pounds. As each exclusive is shown for three days, this meant the exhibitor was getting his show for three days for 1 pound. At the beginning of the war many of the renters had on their shelves many features which they decided to put out, and as a result, Mr. Baber said, quite a number of big features are being booked for three days at a rate of $5 a day.

When Mr. Baber was asked if American features in England were shown at the original length he said they were, "practically." "If the picture has sustaining length it goes," he said. "There are more theaters which will book three-reel productions than those which will handle four and five. Sometimes a four-reel subject may be sent out in three long parts and a five-reel into four long parts. In a picture like 'Tess of the Storm Country,' for instance, exhibitors insist on getting the full length. Even the exhibitors usually showing three-reel stuff insisted on getting 'Tess' in the full five reels. Of course, in England four reels is the usual limit.

"Do the exhibitors pay attention to names of plays or players? Yes, names have much influence in booking. Marguerite Clark, for instance, was not known until the appearance of 'Wildflower.' Now she is looked upon as a great screen actress. The subjects that draw the best in England are those in which there is real heart interest—the dramatic appeals more than the spectacular. It is true that 'The Sign of the Cross' went big. 'The Man on the Box' and 'Brewster's Millions' were in wide demand, too. Mary Pickford is the most popular artist in England. Should she come over to visit us she would get a hearty reception. Mr. Carreras of the Blue Halls of Hammersmith has commissioned me to invite Miss Pickford to visit his houses.

"We are told that we are to have big competition in England this spring. That does not worry us at all. We welcome real competition. If we have more big productions there are bound to be increased prices for bookings—there have got to be in order that the manufacturers may get their money back. We want to get away from this cut-throat competition."

Mary Ryan

MISS MARY RYAN who plays the lead of the maid in George Kleine's "Stop Thief," had no rosy path to follow in acquiring the enviable reputation she now holds. Miss Ryan in addition to her work in the Kleine film is playing nights and two matinees a week in the Broadway hit, "On Trial," which is having such a sensational run at the Candler Theater in West Forty-second street.

Mary Ryan.

"I used to wonder," confessed Mary Ryan, "if I should ever appear in a play that was not a failure. I had depressingly bad luck at the outset. I have been on the stage since childhood, but my first real success was won in the Dearborn Stock Company in Chicago. I became a favorite there and I had acquired a fine opinion of my abilities, much higher, indeed, than that which I entertain just now.

"I came East in a piece called 'An American Princess,' a dreadful affair which never recovered from the ruthless but deserved blows dealt it by the newspapers in Philadelphia.

"And next I appeared here in 'The Girl Patsy,' a still worse concoction by Jane Maudlin Feigl. I was pretty well discouraged by this time, and I shall never forget my sensations when 'Brewster's Millions' made its bow here, preparatory to going to New York. I looked at the long line waiting for tickets on the second night and I said to myself, 'Is it possible that I am at last with a success?' Then it appeared that the management didn't like me in the part I had, but I was determined to hang on to it. And so I did. I believe I remained with the play through sheer determination not to let go of a genuine success. I was with 'Brewster' for two whole seasons.

"I struck the road to failure again in William Gillette's 'Ticey,' a play originally intended for Cissie Loftus. It was a splendid part—the one I had—but the comedy didn't please the public, and it looked like a return to old times, when 'The Fortune Hunter' came along. The part was most congenial to me, because, especially in the second act, it provided me opportunity to do a real character and not an inconsequential conventional heroine, purely a product of the footlight world.

"Then came the part of the light-fingered maid in "Stop Thief" which I liked very much, but the ambition of my life has been realized in my present work in "On Trial." I never expected to secure a role with which I would be so thoroughly contented, and, in fact, in love, as that of Mrs. Strickland in Mr. Reizenstein's wonderful play."

FORD STERLING RETURNS TO N. Y. M. P.

Announcement is made by the New York Motion Picture Corporation that Ford Sterling has signed with that company a contract for two years. Four other comedy leads have recently been secured by the New York—Tolly Moran, Harry P. Gribbon, well known on the west coast in musical comedies; Harry D. Ward and Billie Walsh.

A Real Film A B C

Anderson, Bushman and Chaplin of the Essanay Company Constitute an Unusual Photoplay Combination.

THE accompanying photograph is one that is bound to interest those who follow the photoplay. As the original lay on a desk in this office a prominent magazine man picked it up and remarked: "That's a sure-enough film A B C, isn't it?" Certainly it would be hard in one company to match it for another containing three men so prominent in their own particular line. Each has been markedly successful, two of them in paths distinctly original. Gilbert M. Anderson showed the possibilities in a film way and incidentally in a money way when he went west about seven years ago to portray life as it was in primitive days. Charles M. Chaplin has not been long on the screen, but his popularity as a comedian has been so great that it seems a perfectly safe statement to remark that to-day he is drawing a larger salary than any man working before the camera, and that if that sum is exceeded by any sister actor there is probably but one. Francis X. Bushman has traveled no unbeaten paths, but he has come to the top of his profession in the legitimate screen drama by steady and hard work and sheer ability.

Mr. Anderson has been credited with being the pioneer of the "Western" type of picture plays. Before going West he did a little work for the Vitagraph and Edison companies. When he conceived the idea of making western pictures he submitted the proposition to several prominent Eastern film manufacturers, it has been said, but with the exception of George K. Spoor all of them turned it down. It is likely that many of them have since had occasion to express regret. It is possible that Mr. Spoor was not sure of the popularity of the step at the time he took it, but the pictures produced by Mr. Anderson made a hit with the public, both at home and abroad. Other manufacturers were quick to follow the trail blazed by the Essanay company. Mr. Anderson is now at the head of the company's western studio at Niles, Cal., near San Francisco.

Three Essanay Stars (from Left to Right): Francis X. Bushman, Charles Chaplin, G. M. Anderson.

Mr. Bushman's work for the screen has been confined to the Essanay company. He has been with the Chicago company over three years. He had been successful on the stage before taking up photoplay work, but he found the latter so much more congenial that, so far as known to friends in New York, he has had no thought of returning to it. It was about a year and a half or two years ago that for a time he was out of the Essanay company and made an extended tour of the photoplay theatres. It was a remarkably successful trip. He said at the time that it was of deep interest to him as well. It brought him into direct touch with his friends and brought to his screen work an aspect of which he had not before been aware. While on tour he had many offers of engagements from film manufacturers, but it was the proposal of the Essanay that he accepted.

Mr. Bushman likes Chicago. He is athletic in his tastes. He enjoys nothing better than horseback riding, and many a morning takes a gallop before starting his day's work. He is an accomplished wrestler, too. The story has been told of his bout with a big lumberman and of the amazement of the friends of the Wisconsin camp champion when an actor got the best of the man of the woods in a bitterly contested struggle. Mr. Bushman takes pride in his physical condition. While on tour his weight went up to something over 190 pounds. He remarked to friends in New York that he would have to get busy and get it back to 180 pounds, where he tried to maintain it. His height is six feet, which means that he has to be active to hold down his weight to the prescribed figure. Personally he is popular. His admirers are not confined to women. Among men he is looked upon as a charming companion. Speaking about women, the writer recalls the furore created in the Arena in Boston at the time of the Massachusetts Exhibitors ball. It just happened that this writer accompanied Mr. Bushman as he was "led to the slaughter," as he expressed it, around the crowded hall on that occasion. The remarks that must have reached the ears of the Chicago photoplayer did not seem to hurt him a bit.

Charles Chaplin is the surprise of the screen. Many players have come from the legitimate stage and made quick and remarkable success before the camera, but he seems to lead them all. His position in the comedy field is proof that talent will come to the top despite adverse circumstances. It has been said that in his childhood he had no advantages, not even schooling; that his mother died when he was very young, and that he and his brother Sidney, four years older, were taken on the road by an acrobatic company. He was still a boy when with his brother he came to New York. His experiences here are fresh in his mind. He is said to be about twenty-five years old, which fact makes his success all the more remarkable. There are those who will await with considerable curiosity to see if his popularity is maintained—in other words, to know whether it is himself who is entirely responsible for the great name he has built up as a comedian or how much of that is due to the guiding hand and mind of Mack Sennett. Mr. Chaplin has been credited with the possession of an abundance of originality. Certainly in action there is no one on the screen like him. The public never knows what goes on when the camera crank is not turning. Mr. Chaplin's friends aver that he is resourceful, chock full of ideas, many of which come to the surface at the psychological moment, which, after all, is proof of genius.

One good test of a screen player's popularity is the demand for prints in which he is to appear. An exhibitor remarked to the writer a day or two ago that he knew of one exchange that had put in an order for five Chaplin prints where it had formerly been using one of the company. This is a reflection of the box office side of Chaplin. Personally he is said to be extremely modest, retiring, declining to assume that he has accomplished much worth making a fuss about—which is, after all, one of the best things that can be said about anybody and one of the real proofs of greatness.

SEEKING FORTUNES WHILE TAKING PICTURES.

Under the sea pictures are now well known, and another seemingly impossible prediction has not only been fulfilled, but its records have become a thing of the past, and their continuance a common event.

The inventors of submarine picture taking are, however, becoming practical far beyond the commercial value of their picture taking successes. It is common knowledge that the bottom of the ocean is the resting place of much wrecked wealth, where numbers of heavily and richly freighted argosies have found a watery grave. These the Williamson family are seeking to salvage!

Mr. Williamson says: "Some say there is more gold at the bottom of the ocean than there is in circulation; gold and silver have been sinking in the sea for centuries, millions a year going down and none ever coming up again. We think we have a method of getting such of this treasure which is not in too deep waters."

Plans are already under way for recovering silver bars on the "Mereda," wrecked off the coast of Virginia; also the valuables of the "Empress of Ireland."

CHICAGO LETTER

BY JAS. S. McQUADE

Mrs. Ella Flagg Young and Moving Pictures.

AT AN exhibition of educational moving pictures given in Orchestra Hall, this city, by the Woman's City Club Monday, January 25, Chicago's superintendent of schools, Mrs. Ella Flagg Young, was invited to give a short address on behalf of the educational film.

Much to the surprise of her auditors Mrs. Young took advantage of the occasion to belittle moving pictures. She gave it as her opinion that the extensive use of films is endangering the proper use of the English language, and that the strident tones ascribed to the voices of American women are due to the overuse of the eye and the neglect of the ear.

Mrs. Young said she would be sorry to see the moving picture used to teach history, as she felt certain that the battlefield would be overplayed.

"We must be careful," said Mrs. Young, "not to cultivate the eye too much and the ear not enough. I believe that one reason why the moving picture is supplanting the drama is because our ears are getting dull, and we don't understand what the actors are saying.

"While I believe the moving picture can be used to show children a certain moral lesson, you can't force a moral on children all the time. They like to see something that is human and dramatic. They used to have the yellow-backed novel. That was bad, but if all reading is going out, that is much worse."

Mrs. Young holds that the greatest value of the moving picture is in the study of the earth, including geography, zoology and botany.

Strange to say, notwithstanding the fact that Mrs. Young uses the great influence of her position to decry moving pictures, she acknowledges that she has attended only two moving picture shows, and that at the second one she was ashamed to be there!

Notwithstanding her great prominence as an educator, has not Mrs. Young overlooked the important fact that she cannot be admitted as a competent critic of moving pictures? Theorizing is one thing; but an expression of judgment, based on sound practical knowledge, is the other thing required in this case.

Tyrone Power Champions Moving Pictures.

Tyrone Power from his prominence in dramatic art, now that he has joined the forces that appear before the moving picture camera, is much in demand as a speaker on photodramatic art when he chances to appear before an assemblage, the members of which are still ardently devoted to the dramatic stage.

Mr. Power confronted this situation, one day last week, at a meeting of the Drama League of Chicago when he was requested to give a reason for the eclipse of the "legitimate" drama by moving pictures.

During his remarks he rather startled some of his hearers by stating: "I firmly believe if my friend Richard Mansfield were alive today he would be appearing in moving pictures of his most famous plays. Mansfield was an artist above all else, and there are great opportunities for art in the silent drama."

Then he corrected a current opinion among many as to the real cause of the temporary decadence of legitimate drama and showed that moving pictures are helpful and not antagonistic to the spoken drama.

"High prices for theater seats, actions of the ticket speculators, the influx of off-colored productions, and, perhaps financial stringency, have retarded the future possibilities of stageland," said Mr. Power. "The lovers of the 'legitimate' art are refusing to pay $2 and $3 a seat with opportunities for disappointment. The family goes around the corner to the moving picture theater where, for half the price of a single seat, an hour's enjoyment may be experienced by all, and following which there is no after theater jam and no late-hour rush for home.

"Purveyors of so-called legitimate drama have been protesting that it is the moving pictures that have caused the woeful financial downfall of the spoken drama in the last two years; but great economists and students of the progress of the two arts look upon the moving picture as a means for encouragement to the spoken drama. They believe that moving pictures are educating those who never before were attracted to stageland and to evince a decided interest in the affairs of the footlights."

As is already known to many readers, Mr. Power is the most prominent member of Selig's eastern company; that he has already appeared as the Drainman in "The Servant of the House" and as Maverick Brander in "A Texas Steer," and that he will shortly be engaged in the photodramatic production of Winston Churchill's novel, "The Crisis."

W. A. Daniels Is Dead.

It is with deep regret that I record the death of W. A. Daniels, well known to the trade as the indefatigable and genial president and general manager of the National Waterproof Film Co., of this city. I have known Mr. Daniels since 1909, and during the intervening years he was always a persistent, earnest worker in the interests of his company, which he considered a pet child.

I grew to admire Mr. Daniels for his uniform urbanity and ready wit. At various meetings connected with the trade, he was always a welcome guest and a still more welcome speaker. He had ever something worth while to say by way of advice, and always a sparkling witticism that forced his listeners to forget business and relax in good humor.

It was quite a shock for me to learn of his death fully two weeks after it occurred; for I should have liked to press his hand before he passed out into the shadows.

He died January 7 at his residence, 4022 Sheridan Road, this city, where the obsequies were held. His body was cremated at Graceland cemetery and the ashes were interred in Milwaukee, to which city he came with his parents, in 1866, from Milford, Mass., where he was born in 1852. A widow and a niece survive him.

Important Decision of Photodramatic and Dramatic Rights.

In a decision just handed down by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in a suit over the moving picture rights to Reginald Wright Kauffman's novel, "The House of Bondage," it was held that the sale of the dramatic rights to a book does not convey the moving picture rights unless it is so specifically stated in the agreement.

The decision is one of great importance to producing managers who own dramatic rights to novels.

In the recent decision of the Appellate division of the Supreme Court, in the case of Charles Frohman versus the estate of Clyde Fitch, over the moving picture rights of "Captain Jinks," it was held that a sale to the exclusive dramatic rights to a play conveyed also the moving picture producing rights. The United States Court of Appeals now holds to the contrary, where there has been a sale of the dramatic rights of a book, and a large number of play properties will be affected by the decision.

Donald C. Thompson's Famous War Pictures.

Nearly every reader of news of the great European war is familiar with the name of Donald C. Thompson, known the world over as "The War Photographer from Kansas." I myself have read of many of his daring and hazardous exploits with the German army, and often expressed the wish to friends that we might have the chance to see some of the moving pictures of scenes of the war taken by him. Now Mr. Thompson is in Chicago with 10,000 feet of such pictures; but let him speak for himself.

"I have come to Chicago with 16,000 feet of official German war film, showing the Kaiser at the front, the Crown Prince leading his troops in action, and the camera's own neutral story of what is happening in the trenches," says Mr. Thompson.

"These pictures are official. They were taken for the imperial German government, and their only showing has been before the German officials, from whom I have secured the rights to bring them to America for exhibition exclusively through the Chicago Tribune.

"These pictures will show just what you could have seen had you been standing beside the camera. They will show more than any one could tell in words.

"You will be shown the cheering crowds in Berlin as they massed to give the Kaiser assurance of their allegiance. You will see the Germans in battle; you will see them feeding Belgian children and refugees from the kettles at the field kitchens and ministering to the victims left behind. You will see what happened when the Russians bombarded the German front in East Prussia.

"I am back home in the U. S. A. to rest a few weeks before going back to the war. Since I landed everybody has been asking me: 'How is it going to come out?'

"If you had been with me in Germany and had seen the German soldiery, the wonderful discipline, the endless preparation, the giant guns, all that goes to make up that fighting machine we call the German army, you would have said: 'The whole world can't whip them.' But then, if you had been on the other side with me and could have seen the bravery of the Belgians, the enthusiasm of the French, the cold courage of the English, and the great organization of the allies, you would have said again: 'They can't be whipped.'

"I saw a fine example of the Quixotic heroism of the Belgians when, with a Belgian officer and several soldiers, I escaped from Waldheim in a skiff.

"A shell tore off the officer's right arm and part of his shoulder. We bandaged him up with pieces of clothing and put him in a boat. The boat commenced to fill. The officer said, 'Tell them I did my best.' Then he ordered the soldiers to throw him overboard, and they did. With the boat lightened we got across.

"At Dismude I was hit by Shrapnel and was sent to a field hospital. The German army doctors fixed me up and I rested awhile in London. I never at any time saw any evidence of the reported German 'atrocities.'"

Moving Pictures a Great Library for All the Poor.

Mrs. Carter H. Harrison, wife of Chicago's mayor, has commended moving pictures in the following paragraphs:

The moving pictures form a great library for the poor, a respected entertainment for the most cultured.

Better than history, geography and economics, they teach a tolerance of human nature.

The moral plane of moving pictures is higher than that of the regular stage.

The moving pictures have made good men and good women seem human.

There is good reason for a girl admiring a leading man.

The moving picture hero must be a man among men.

He must be a man of action, not of pretty speeches.

In the old days nobody but the villain smoked.

The moving picture hero wins the girl's hand, not for what he has said but for what he has accomplished.

But you mustn't fall in love with him.

Chicago Film Brevities.

Felix F. Feist, president of the Celebrated Players Film Co., returned from New York City Thursday, Jan. 21, after an absence of five days. Mr. Feist informed me that he has purchased the rights to Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin for "Souls Enchanted" (Gloria-American), in five parts, in which the celebrated actress, Lyda Borreli, is featured. This subject will be released by the Celebrated Players Film Co. on Feb. 1. Mr. Feist also purchased several other strong film subjects during his stay in New York.

* * *

Wm. H. Cadoret, proprietor and manager of the La Petite Theater, Kankakee, Ill., wrote me as follows, on Jan. 19: "But for an unfortunate accident that befell me a few days ago—a broken right leg—I would have called on you personally to give you details of my new theater, which I will start building on March 1. The theater, constructed of brick and stone, with a terra cotta front, will have a plot of 35 by 100 feet, and will seat about 550 people. It will be modern in every way and will have a perfect ventilating system. This system will cleanse and heat the air during the winter, and cool it in summer. An indirect lighting system will be installed, also a mirror screen, etc., etc. I expect it will be finished about May 15. The theater will be located on Court street, 219-21, the main thoroughfare of the city." Mr. Cadoret, who is an old friend of the Moving Picture World, having been a subscriber for seven years, has our kind sympathy for his accident and our best wishes for his speedy recovery.

* * *

H. Rennie, a well-known film man, who has been traveling representative for various offices of the World Film Corporation, resigned recently from the Seattle branch, and has joined his old friend Joe Bloom in Chicago, in partnership, under the name of the World's Celebrated Feature Film Co. Geo. P. Endert, manager of the Seattle Branch office, gave Mr. Rennie a farewell party, at which he was wished the best of good luck in his new undertaking.

* * *

The New World moving picture theater, on Randolph street, near Dearborn, opposite the Schiller Building, was opened Wednesday evening, Jan. 20. Mr. Seavers, formerly owner of the old Alcazar Theater, on West Madison street, is the proprietor. The house seats 300 people and is the first picture theater opened on Chicago's "White Way."

* * *

E. H. Bingham and Ben D. Crose, owners of the Empress Feature Film Co., 47-49 Willoughby Building Indianapolis, Ind., visited Chicago on Monday, Jan. 25, to close proposed business contracts with the Photoplay Productions Releasing Co., of this city. The Empress Feature Film Co. owns and controls 50 state right features for the states of Indiana, Ohio and Kentucky. Mr. Bingham stated that out of all the feature subjects he had purchased and submitted for censorship, only two had been rejected by the Ohio censor board. The members of the Empress Feature Film Co. are booking "The Blue Mouse," and other productions owned by the Photoplay Productions Releasing Co., in Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky.

The screen at the Ziegfeld Theater was occupied during the week beginning Saturday, Jan. 23, by a moving picture adaptation of Harold McGrath's story, "The Goose Girl," with Marguerite Clark in the titular role.

* * *

"The Escape" entered upon its second week at the Studebaker, Monday, Jan. 25.

* * *

The Chicago Herald war pictures, which have been widely advertised in that paper, will be first shown on the screen in this city at the Ziegfeld Theater, Monday, Feb. 1, under the auspices of that paper. These pictures come from New York City, after a successful run at Carnegie Hall. They are being booked throughout the country by the Daily News Film Syndicate, of New York City.

* * *

Charles Chaplin, of film comedy fame, recently acquired by Essanay, left this city for the Niles studio on Jan. 15, where his comedies will be produced. Publicity Manager Eubank, of Essanay, has given Mr. Chaplin unique and wide publicity since he became a member of the Essanay forces. "His New Job," in two acts, Mr. Chaplin's first comedy for Essanay, will be released Feb. 1 through the General Film Co.

* * *

Emporia, Kans., will have local censorship of moving pictures, dating from Jan. 23. On that date Mrs. Robert King was sworn in as the first police woman in the town by the city commission. This body expressed the belief that a woman is better qualified to censor moving pictures for young people than a man. Mrs. King will serve without salary.

* * *

There was quite a flurry in the Paris Theater, Denver, Wednesday afternoon, Jan. 20, when Manager Percy of that theater prepared to run the first episode of "Runaway June." It was found that one reel was missing, and both Local Manager Harry Lustig, of the Mutual Film Corporation, and Manager Percy, of the Paris Theater, believed the reel was stolen, as they had proof that it was shipped and knew that it had arrived in Denver with the rest of the first episode. To make up for the disappointment to patrons, the first two episodes will be shown in their entirety at the Paris on Wednesday, Jan. 27. "Runaway June," it is declared, is creating wide interest in Denver.

* * *

Bertram I. Williams, president of the Motion Picture Publicity & Supply Association, of Trinidad, Colo., was arrested at Memphis, Tex., recently, by Postoffice Inspector C. M. Christiansen, on a charge of fraudulent use of the mails. When arrested, Williams had only eight cents in his pocket. It was found that the only thing he had to show in connection with his business was the literature he was sending out through adjoining states. He induced people to send him $10 for annual dues, as members of his association, promising special rates on the moving pictures he was handling, as well as half rate for supplies. It was shown that, although he had been connected with the moving picture business, therefore he did not have a dollar's worth of material to supply customers. The Motion Picture Publicity & Supply Association was capitalized for $250,000, its sole stockholder, president, secretary and treasurer being the said Bertram I. Williams.

* * *

The Williamson's submarine moving pictures will be transferred to the Studebaker Theater from the Fine Arts Theater on Jan. 31. This change is owing to the expiration of the contract held by Universal with the Fine Arts management.

* * *

Exhibitors are advised to beware of fake Italian earthquake films. At the Chicago office the business department was offered an advertisement on Wednesday, Jan. 20, exploiting films that were represented to be the real Italian earthquake films. It was learned that the men who wished to insert the advertisement admitted that he had copies of the films on hand. Just think of it! The first announcement in the newspapers concerning the great Italian earthquake disaster appeared in the newspapers on Thursday morning, Jan. 14; so that this man had the insolence to insult both our intelligence and common sense. How could pictures representing the disaster have been made and brought to this country in six days, when it takes two weeks alone for passage from Genoa to New York? This man evidently had old films of the Messina earthquake of several years ago, and he thought he could palm them off on exhibitors as the real thing. If this man persists in such practices, his name will appear in these columns. He was at one time wholly engaged in the film business in responsible positions, but is now devoting his whole time to vaudeville, now and then seeking to exploit the film field in the manner just referred to.

* * *

In the "Sue" contest the vote count was surprising for last week. The three highest candidates—Miss Florence Tighe, Miss Gladys Swain and Dorothy Warshauer—ran up their votes to 174,840, 128,220 and 125,375, respectively. The photoplay editor of the Herald states that many contestants and their friends failed to notice the time limit for turning in votes to be included in the weekly count. As a result, a few girls do not occupy the positions in the race which their total votes would probably justify. The time limit is 10 days; that is, no coupons must be held longer than 10 days in order to have them counted. They must be in the editor's hands before the ten-day limit is up.

* * *

A meeting of the Reel Fellows Club was held in the King Louis XVI Room, in the Sherman House, Wednesday evening, Jan. 20. About 75 members were present. A moving picture was taken of the officers and thise assembled after which a number of comedy sketches were enacted by selected members before the camera. These pictures will be screened at the next meeting, which will be held Feb. 17, and which has been designated Ladies' Night.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel S. Hutchinson left the city for Santa Barbara, Wednesday, Jan. 20.

* * *

A new two-story structure adjoining the American Film Manufacturing Company's plant, with a depth of 80 feet and a frontage of 100 feet on Broadway, will be started about March 1. There will be stores in the lower story, and the upper will be devoted to manufacturing purposes, this story opening into the upper story of the north wing of the present plant. The building will cost between $35,000 and $40,000.

* * *

F. O. Neilsen left for New York City Tuesday, Jan. 19, and is expected to return Thursday, Jan. 28.

Selig Publicity Plans

"Diamond S" Company Opens Campaign to Supply Magazines and Newspapers With Instructive Motion Picture News.

THE Selig Polyscope Company for the year 1915 has opened an aggressive and advanced policy in connection with supplying magazines and newspapers with entertaining and instructive news matter concerning Selig productions and Selig players.

The new plan is being introduced in a decidedly novel manner. This publication is in receipt of a large envelope bearing the Selig Diamond "S" trade-mark and containing a wealth of publicity matter calculated to suit the requirements of any publication.

First, there is a proof of a full size newspaper page, entitled "Pictureplay Department, Page One," and bearing the following invitation:

> "Notice: If you will use the plate matter as shown here we will ship the plates to you FREE, express prepaid. A similar page will be issued for every month FREE. In return we ask you to place us on your exchange list. Write or wire immediately if you will use plates.
>
> Publicity Department,
> The Selig Polyscope Company."

This sheet is divided into four sections, each section containing an illustrated synopsis of the Selig two-reel Monday release; also, studio notes and mentions of other Selig releases for the same current week. This will enable the newspapers to print a bright, breezy and entertaining synopsis of the Selig Weekly Program just previous to the date of its release each week. There are six single-column half-tone illustrations of leading Selig players, together with a short biographical sketch of each.

This page is suited to the requirements of thousands of newspapers, each of which conducts a motion picture page or motion picture department. This innovation of supplying plate matter free to newspapers, will, undoubtedly, meet with approval, as hundreds of requests for plate matter have been received by the publicity department of the Selig Polyscope Company.

Another enclosure in the same Selig envelope consists of a set of skeleton press notices for the Selig program for the entire month of February. These notices are so prepared that the exhibitor can select notices for any of the Selig releases of the month and turn them over to his local newspaper, inserting the name of the theater and the date that the picture will be shown at his theater.

Another enclosure is the now familiar Selig Weekly Press News, which has been enlarged to full folio size.

This contains complete synopsis of the Selig program for the following week, together with complete cast, etc. There is also a synopsis of the Hearst-Selig News Pictorial Nos. 5 and 6, and a complete report of the address delivered by Tyrone Power before the Drama League, in which he maintains the prestige of pictureplays. There is also an extensive interview with Randall Parrish, who now writes exclusively for the Selig concern, in which he tells his methods of work, etc. There is also a report of the private showing of "The Carpet from Bagdad," a forthcoming Selig spectacular special, in Indianapolis, under the auspices of the Bobbs-Merrill Company, which was attended by writers, authors and many others interested in the production and exploitation of pictureplays.

Wm. Lord Wright, the well known and distinguished authority on matters pertaining to the writing of scripts and editing of scenarios, has been engaged by the Selig Polyscope Company to write a weekly feature letter for distribution to the press. This letter is included in the current issue of the Selig Weekly Press News.

There is much other matter of interest to the trade and to the general public contained in this printed matter, which is issued by the publicity department of the Selig Polyscope Company. It is well written, in a most interesting style, and while avowedly sent out for the purpose of obtaining free publicity, is accorded the attention which its character deserves by the publishers of the various magazines and newspapers throughout the United States.

Stealing Sunday's Stuff

Lubin Players Get a Line on His Work and Use It in a Picture.

BILLY SUNDAY, the dynamic evangelist who for the past few weeks has been creating sensation after sensation with his preaching in Philadelphia, has been unconsciously giving lessons in evangelistic methods to one of Lubin's well known leading men. Every night George Soule Spencer, who with Miss Gladys Hanson, the well known Broadway star, is to be featured in Henry Arthur Jones' "The Evangelist," has been sitting in one of the front seats of the big tabernacle and watching closely every method used by the famous preacher in swaying his audiences of 30,000 people.

Spencer was selected to play the role of Sylvanus Rebbings, the evangelist in Jones' drama. In the play this character uses practically the same methods as Sunday does at the present time. Rebbings is an English evangelist who uses all sorts of sensational methods to reach humanity. He creates consternation among the clergy because so many people attend his meetings that the churches are almost empty. The clergy object strenuously to his preaching, and especially to the fact that he makes more or less of a theatrical entertainment of his meetings by showing living pictures of events in the Scriptures.

On the day the Lubin Company began making the picture Sunday began preaching in his big tabernacle, and Spencer, glad of an opportunity of having such a model, hustled to the tabernacle and watched the energetic ex-baseball player in action. And it was action, too. Spencer got all the ideas he could use and more besides.

Twice during the following week Spencer stood on a barrel and preached on street corners to get atmosphere for the play. Each time a large crowd gathered, and in nearly every instance Spencer was mistaken for either Sunday himself or one of his numerous workers. On each occasion Spencer pleaded with the crowd to lead better lives, and the crowds paid close attention to him somewhat bewildered, not so much at what he said, but because two motion picture cameras were clicking off every movement he made on the barrel. On another occasion Spencer preached to an overflow meeting just outside Sunday's tabernacle. The scene only took a few minutes, and during those few minutes Spencer used a variety of Sunday mannerisms as he shouted to the hundreds of men and women in front of him. Everyone crowded close to find out what it was all about, but before many of them did Spencer jumped down from the barrel, and, with Barry O'Neil, who is directing the picture, the cameramen and a number of other Lubin players, hustled into a nearby automobile and drove off.

Catalogue of Educational Releases for 1914

By the Rev. E. Boudinot Stockton, S.T.B.

THE following catalog contains all of the pictures, both regular and feature, released in this country between October 1, 1913, and September 30, 1914, that have, so far as careful investigation has been able to ascertain, an educational value. To these have been added a number of pictures, not educational in the strict sense of the term, but having the common characteristic ot affording clean, moral, educative entertainment and amusement, and therefore educational in the broader and more real sense of the term.

The greatest pains have been taken to make the list complete and accurate in every way and the thanks of the compiler are due to the manufacturers and others who have rendered him material assistance in his work, especially the Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Pathe, Thanhouser and Vitagraph companies, the Institut International de Bibliographie de Bruxelles, the Library of Congress, the New York State Library at Albany, the New York Public Library, New York City, and the Free Public Library of Newark, N. J., as well as many individual workers in the educational field, too numerous to mention by name.

A detailed explanation of the system of classification used will be found in the "Moving Picture World," volume 18, pages 1554 to 1555. The following is a list of the abbreviations used:

Adv.—Advertisement.

Com.—Comment on the Film in the "M. P. World."

Mfg.—Manufacturer's advance note in the "M. P. World."

n.s or c.p.—No synopsis or comment published in the "M. P. World."

Sp. rev.—Special review in the "M. P. World."

Syn.—Synopsis as published in the "M. P. World."

2r., 3r., etc.—Two reel, three, reel, etc.

Ja—January; F—February; Mr—March; Ap—April; My—May; Je—June; Jy—July; Ag—August; S—September; O—October; N—November; D—December.

0 GENERAL TOPICS

07 Newspapers Journalism

ANIMATED WEEKLY. Universal. 1 O 1913—30 S 1914. Syn. D, 18:192, 306, 418, 526, 656; N, 780, 912, 1050, 1208; D, 1334, 1470, 1592, 19:92, 216; Ja, 338, 464, 596, 718; F, 872, 1018, 1160, 1298; Mr, 1430, 1582, 1734, 20:114; Ap, 268, 414, 576, 722, 860; My, 1014, 1168, 1299, 1450; Je, 1596, 1734, 1872, 21:116; Jy, 342, 478, 614, 742, 870; Ag, 1002, 1138, 1284, 1424; S, 1551, 1688, 1820, 22:100, 246.

GAUMONT WEEKLY. Gaumont. 8 O 1913. Syn. 18:312.

GOLDEN GATE WEEKLY. California M. P. Co. Mfg 18:744; 20 D 1913—25 Ap 1914. Syn. D, 19:224, 334; Ja, 19:462, 732, 868; F, 1172, 1426; Mr, 1732, 20:264; Ap, 572, 856.

HEARST-SELIG NEWS PICTORIAL. Selig. 28 F 1913—28 S 1914. No syn. pub.

MUTUAL WEEKLY. Mutual. 1 O 1913—24 S 1914. Syn. 18:194, 660; N, 784, 916, 1056, 1212; D, 1336, 1476, 1594, 19:88, 220; Ja, 342, 470, 600, 722; F, 878, 1022, 1164, 1304; Mr, 1584, 1740, 20:118; Ap, 270, 420, 580, 726, 866; My, 866, 1310, 1452, 1600; Je, 1740, 1878, 1880, 21:346; Jy, 346, 480, 620, 750, 878; Ag, 1008, 1146, 1284, 1426; S, 1556, 1692, 1824, 22:104.

NEW YORK WEEKLY. Life Photo Film Co. F 1914. Syn. 19:1024, 1772, 1308.

PATHE'S WEEKLY (Now) Pathe's Daily News. Pathe. 2 O 1913—30 S 1914. Syn. O, 18:184, 286, 410, 520, 650, 652; N, 772, 902, 1044, 1192, 1194; D, 1326, 1328, 1466, 1580, 1582, 19:78, 208; Ja, 328, 330, 460, 586, 708; F, 866, 1010, 1152, 1294; Mr, 1420, 1572, 1732, 20:106, 256; Ap, 408, 572, 712, 854; My, 1158, 1297, 1586; Je, 1586, 1726, 1868, 21:108; Jy, 336, 610, 736, 862; Ag, 1000; no more syn. pub.

07.01 Pictures About Newspapers.

MORNING PAPERS, THE. Keystone 7 My 1914. n.s. or c.p.

08 Polygraphies. Collections

087.1 Children's Stories.

BUSTER BROWN CARTOONS. Edison 26 Ag—30 S 1914. 1. "Buster and His Goat." Syn. 21:1127; Com. 21:1511; 2. "Buster Brown on the Care and Treatment of Goats." Syn. 21:1546; Com. 21:1776. 3. "Buster Brown Gets the Worst of It" Syn. 21:1810; Com. 22:335.

HOUSE THAT WENT CRAZY, THE. Selig 4 S 1914. Syn. 21:1416; Com. 21:1644; sp. rev. 21:1785. A trick photograph comedy full of wholesome slapstick.

LITTLE LORD FAUNTLEROY. McEnnery Feature. 4r. Jy 1914. Sp. rev. 21:69.

SONNY JIM STORIES. Vitagraph. A series of child stories full of heart interest and of child nature, and of high moral tone. Released at irregular intervals.

094 Noteworthy Productions

CABIRIA. Itala. 12R. Ag 1914. Sp. rev. 20:1090. A magnificent production from the script of Gabrielle D'Annuncio, portraying the life, manners and customs of ancient Carthage.

LION OF VENICE, THE. George Kleine 6r. S 1914. Syn. 21:1694; mfg 20:1274; 21:1386; sp. rev. 21:1619. A romance of Venice in the 15th century, made for Klein by the Photo-Drama Co.

NEPTUNE'S DAUGHTER. Universal Special 7r. Je 1914. Syn. 20:1452; Sp. rev. 20:796.

UNDER WATER PHOTOGRAPHY. Submarine Film Co. Pictures taken under water at Watling's Island, Bahamas, Ap and Je 1914, 20:497.

1 PHILOSOPHY & PHILOSOPHICAL TOPICS

17 Philosophical Ethics

172.4 International Ethics

LAY DOWN YOUR ARMS. Great Northern Special Feature. 4r S 1914. Syn. 21:1830; Sp. rev. 21:448, 1078, 1377. Peace propaganda story by the Baroness Bertha von Suttner.

2 RELIGION

221:92 Old Testament Biography

DANIEL. Vitagraph 2r N 1913. Sp. rev. 17:1381. A "Biblical drama" dealing with the Three Holy Children in the fiery furnace and with Daniel in the lions' den.

ESTHER. Eclectic. 3r. 20 Mr 1914. Syn. 19:1588.

JOSEPH'S TRIALS IN EGYPT. Eclectic. 3r. 1 F 1914. Syn. 19:606; Sp. rev. 19:933.

JOSEPH IN THE LAND OF EGYPT. Thanhouser 4r., 1 F 1914. Syn. 19:880; mfg. 19:422.

JOSEPH AND HIS COAT OF MANY COLORS. Sawyer 6r. Jy 1914. Adv. 21:521.

SAMSON AND DELILAH. Universal Feature. 6r. Mr 1914. Syn. 20:274; Com. 20:59; mfg. 18:1019. Sp. rev. 20:504.

232.9 Life of Christ

LIFE OF OUR SAVIOUR, THE. Pathe. 7r. Ap 1914. Sp. rev. 20:188.

FIRST CHRISTMAS, THE. Edison. 13 D 1913. Syn. 18:1186; Com. 18:1543.

241 Moral Theology

REWARD OF THRIFT, THE. Vitagraph. 2r. 19 S 1914. Syn. 21:1545; Com. 22:64; Sp. rev. 21:1627.

LETTER MAN, THE. Famous Players. 4r. 10 Ag 1914. Syn. 21:1150; Sp. rev. 21:1085.

27 Church History

TRIUMPH OF AN EMPEROR, THE. World's Special Film Co. 5r. Mr 1914. Syn. 19:1444; Sp. rev. 19:1073. Deals with the triumph of Christianity over heathendom under the emperor Constantine.

282 Roman Catholicism

FIRST IRISH PILGRIMAGE TO LOURDES, The. Blinkhorn. 2r. 29 D 1913. Syn. 19:98.

29 Anti-Christian Religions and Judaism

MARRIAGE OF CUPID, THE. Pathe. 2r. 9 My 1914. Syn. 20:710; Com. 20:1117; Sp. rev. 20:944.

BUDDHIST TEMPLES AND WORSHIPPERS. Vitagraph. 15 O 1913. Syn. 18:180; Com. 18:495.

PASSOVER MIRACLE, A. Kalem. Syn. 19:1730; Com. 20:213; Sp. rev. 19:1369.

3 SOCIOLOGY

325 Colonization

LAND OF LIBERTY, THE. Majestic 26 Je 1914. Com. 21:572. Immigration into the U. S.

33 Political Economy

LABOR DEMONSTRATION IN HYDE PARK, England. Kalem 26 Je 1914. Syn. 20:1724; Com. 21:255. The I. W. W. meeting of 1914. On same reel, the launching of H. M. S. "Marlborough," and scenes of coaching in Hyde Park.

FROM MINE TO MINT. Powers 10 N 1913. Com. 18:613.

34 Law . Jurisprudence

WHAT EIGHTY MILLION WOMEN WANT. Unique Film Co. 3r. N 1913. Syn. 18:660; Sp. rev. 18:741; mfg. 18:619. Woman suffrage question.

TRAIL OF THE LOVELORN, THE. Thanhouser 2r. 29 S 1914. Syn. 22:250; Com 22:189. Mail order frauds.

ILLINOIS STATE PENITENTIARY, JOLIET, Illinois. Abo Feature 4r. 23 Ap 1914. Adv. 20:103; Com. 20:214.

35 Government. Administration

351.74 Police

IN THE BARRACKS OF THE R. N. W. M. P. of Canada. Powers. 27 Ap 1914. Com. 20:673.

N. Y. POLICE DEPARTMENT CARNIVAL, 26 to 27 June, 1914. Edison 1 S 1914. Syn. 21:1271; Com. 21:1644; Sp. rev. 21:1627. Held at Brighton Beach race track.

LOS ANGELES POLICE PARADE, THE Apollo 14 D 1913. Com. 18:1545.

351.77 Public Health & Safety

PROTECTING N. Y.'S MILLIONS FROM FIRE. Powers 10 Ap 1914. n.s, or c.p.

352 Local Administration

MAKING A MAYOR. Fair Feature Sales Co. N 1913. Sp. rev. 18:740. How the mayor of New York is elected.

35.5-9 Army and Navy. War

ENGLAND'S ARMY. Keith, Prowse & Co. 2r Mr 1914. Adv. 19:1314.

KING'S DEFENSE, AFLOAT AND ASHORE, The. Feature Photoplay S 1914. Adv. 21; 1563. English artillery; submarine workings; English fleet; King George blessing officers before they leave for the North Sea; German Zeppelins over Brussels; etc.

WARRIORS OF EUROPE. Feature Photoplay 1r. S 1914. Com. 21:1647. English army and navy.

ENGLAND'S KING AT LIVERPOOL. Kalem. 28 N 1913. Syn. 18:896; Com. 18:1279; also pictures of the British army and of the French President Poincare.

MILITARY TATTOO AT ALDERSHOT, England. Kalem 19 Je 1914. Syn. 20:1586; Com. 21:64.

TROOPING THE COLORS. Kalem 3 Jy 1914. Syn. 20:1852; Com. 21:432. British army ceremony.

ARAB TROOPS, FRENCH ALGIERS. Pathe 31 Ag 1914. Syn. 21:1276.

SOLDIERS DRILLING IN TURKESTAN Eclair 23 N 1913. Syn. 18:1208. Shows pontoon bridge building and dynamite exploding.

CAVALRY AT FORT MEYER, VA. Princess 24 Jy 1914. n.s. or c.p.

GENERALS OF THE FUTURE. Edison 14 S 1914. Syn. 21:1545; Com. 21:1776; Sp. rev. 21:1627.

U. S. ARMY IN PICTURES. Sp. rev. 19:178. Pictures taken by Major Thomas J. Dickson, U. S. A.

AMERICAN ARMY, THE. Selig. 3r. 5 My 1914. n.s. or c.p. Taken under the direction of U. S. Army officers.

MILITARY TRAINED DOGS, BELGIUM. Pathe 17 Ag 1914. Com. 21:1241.

TRAINING ARMY DOGS, Sweden. Pathe 4 Ag 1914. Syn. 21:1000; Com. 21:960.

35.548 Wars and Campaigns

EUROPEAN ARMIES IN ACTION. George Kleine 4r. Ag 1914. Sp. rev. 21:1079.

WAR EXTRA, THE. Blache. 4r. Ag 1914. Syn. 21:1152; mfg. 21:1110.

FAMOUS BATTLES OF NAPOLEON. Cosmos. 4r. F 1914. Sp. rev. 19:657.
GERMANIA. World's Film. 5r. S 1914. Syn. 21:1560; Sp. rev. 21:275. Napoleon's defeat at the battle of Leipzic.

ON THE FIRING LINE IN TRIPOLI. Mundstuk 5r. Mr 1914. Mfg. 19:1107.

BALKAN WAR, THE. Kinemacolor. 8r. F 1914. Mfg. 19:823. Pictures taken by Colonel John de Loris.
WITH THE GREEKS IN THE FIRING LINE. Schwobthaler 5r. F 1914. Adv. 19:620.

RORKE'S DRIFT. Edison. 2r. 13 F 1914. Syn. 19:714; Com. 19:1088. Zulu war of 1879.
BOER WAR, THE. Kalem. 5r. 10 Je 1914. Syn. 20:1608; Sp. rev. 19:1216.

MEXICAN WAR PICTURES. Wm. A. Brady. 7r. N 1913. Adv. 18:1041.
MEXICAN REBELLION, THE. Ammex. 3r. Ja 1914. Adv. 19:343; Sp. rev. 19:396.
SHELLING OF VERA CRUZ, THE. Napoleon. 2r. Je 1914. Adv. 20:1321.
WAR WITH HUERTA. Magnet. 2r. Je 1914. Adv. 20:1155; Sp. rev. 20:1417.
UNCLE SAM IN MEXICO. Victor. 8 Je 1914. Com. 20:1689.

GENERAL WOLFE, OR THE CONQUEST OF Canada. Kalem 5r. 25 My 1914. Syn. 20:1322; Sp. rev. 18:472, 19:954. Based on Francis Parkman's "Montcalm and Wolfe."
WASHINGTON AT VALLEY FORGE. Universal 4r. 30 Mr 1914. Syn. 20:772; Com. 20:1542.
INDIAN WARS IN THE WEST. U. S. Government. 30r. 27 F 1914. Sp. rev. 19:1370. Historical reproduction by W. F. Cody, "Buffalo Bill" and the U. S. Government.
INDIAN WARS, THE. Historical Picture. 5r. Ag 1914. Adv. 21:899; Sp. rev. 21:1500.

362 Charities and Philanthropy

DECORATION DAY AT OLD SOLDIERS' Home. Vitagraph. 23 Ja 1914. Com. 19:676. At Sawtelle, California.
HOW THE JEWS CARE FOR THEIR POOR. Imp. 9 O 1913. Mfg. 18:272.
BOSTON FLOATING HOSPITAL, THE. Kalem. 17 O 1913. Syn. 18:182; Com. 18:496.

37 Education

COMMENCEMENT AT THE INDIAN SCHOOL. Reliance 17 N 1913. Com. 18:1009. Carlisle, Pa.

39 Manners and Customs

WORKDAY SCENES IN A FLOWERY LAND. Pathe. 24 Mr. 1914. Syn. 19:1572; Com. 20:212. Chinese folk life.
LIFE IN JAPAN. Pathe. 21 Jy 1914. Syn. 21:736; Com. 21:836.
SIAMESE CUSTOMS, INDO-CHINA. Pathe. 22 Ap 1914. Syn. 20:412; Com. 20:820.
NATIVE LIFE IN THE PHILIPPINES. Pan-American. 12r. Mr 1914. Adv 19:1128; Sp. rev. 20:365. Part 1. Head Hunters (6r.); Part 2. From Savages to Civilization (6r.).
NATIVES OF AUSTRALIA. Pathe. 21 N 1913. Syn. 18:772; Com. 18:1151.

391 Costumes. Fashions

MONS. POIRET'S PARISIAN FASHIONS. Kinemacolor. O 1913. 18:1311.
ADVANCED STYLES FOR FALL AND WINTER, 1914-15. Kalem 22 My 1914. Syn. 20:995; Com. 20:1408.
FASHIONS' LAW IN THE SWISS CANTONS. Pathe. 28 N 1913. Syn. 18:904; Com. 18:1279. Native Swiss costumes.

392.5 Marriage Customs

PEASANT MARRIAGE IN HUNGARY, A. Pathe. 2 D 1913. Syn. 18:1044; Com. 18:1411.
BASQUE WEDDING, A. Pathe. 4 Ag 1914. Syn. 1000; Com. 21:960.
JAPANESE WEDDING, A. Melies 30 O 1913. Syn. 18:522; Com. 18:735.

394 Customs of Public and Social Life

PORTOLA FESTIVAL, THE. Apollo. 14 D 1913. Com. 18:1545. At San Francisco.
GREAT PASADENA ROSE TOURNAMENT, The. Apollo. 1 F 1914. Com. 19:809.
ULSTER DAY IN BELFAST. Kalem 19 D 1913. Syn. 18:1316; Com. 19:49.
SAN FRANCISCO CELEBRATION, THE. Keystone 4 D 1913. Com. 18:1152. Anniversary of Balboa's discovery.

398.2 Legends

WILLIAM TELL. Greene Feature 5r. My 1914. Sp. rev. 20:652.
ROBIN HOOD. Thanhouser 4r. N 1913. Syn.

398.4 Fairy-Tales

SANTA CLAUS. Kinemacolor. 3r. D 1913. Syn. 18:1584.
JACK AND THE BEANSTALK. Thanhouser. 19 D 1913. Com. 18:1545.

5 SCIENCE

52 Astronomy

STUDY IN ASTRONOMY, A. George Kleine. D 1913. Syn. 18:1200.

53 Physics

SUNSET IN MANY LANDS. Eclair 21 D 1913. Syn. 18:1332.
ICE AND SNOW. Pathe. 7 Jy 1914. Syn. 21:108.
SIMPLE EXPERIMENTS IN ELECTRICITY. Pathe. 16 Je 1914. Syn. 20:726.
MAGNETISM AND MAGNETS. Eclair 7 D 1913. Syn. 18:1470; Com. 18:1152.

54 Chemistry

OXYGEN. Pathe. 1 O 1913. Syn. 18:66; Com. 18:264.
OXYGEN. Eclair 19 O 1913. Syn. 18:304; Com. 18:49.

55 Geology

VISIT TO THE VOLCANO KILAUEA, HAWAII. Pathe. 31 Mr 1914. Syn. 20:108; Com. 20:360.
GEYSERS OF NEW ZEALAND, THE. Pathe. 2 D 1913. Syn. 18:1044; Com. 18:1411.
HOW MOUNTAINS GROW. Pathe. 7 O 1913. Syn. 18:68; Com. 18:379.

56 Paleontology. Fossils

PETRIFIED FORESTS OF ARIZONA, THE. Pathe. 14 O 1913. Syn. 18:286; Com. 18:380.

57 Life. Man. Biology

LOW CASTE BURMESE. Vitagraph 22 O 1913. Syn. 18:290; Com. 18:611.
CAMPING WITH THE BLACKFEET. Edison 19 N 1913. Syn. 18:636; Com. 18:868. Reservation life and Indian racial characteristics.

58 Botany. Vegetable Life

PLANTS WHICH EAT. Pathe. 7 O 1913. Syn. 18:68; Com. 18:379.
MIMOSA PUDICA, A PLANT WITH NERVES. Pathe. 18 O 1913. Syn. 18:286; Com. 18:496.
ORCHIDS. Eclair. 8 Mr 1914. Syn. 19:1158; Com. 19:1386.

59 Zoology. Animal Life

RUSSIAN ZOO, OSKAMA-NOVA, THE. Pathe. 3 Ag 1914. Syn. 21:1000; Com. 21:960.
NEW ZOOLOGICAL PARK, THE. Kalem 24 N 1913. Syn. 18:776. New York City.
HOW WILD ANIMALS LIVE. Midgar Feature. 6r. O 1913. Adv. 18:438. Sp. rev. 18:592.

SUBMARINE MYSTERIES. Pathe. 20 Ja. 1914. Syn. 19:326; Com. 19:676. Spirographis; cucumaria; jellyfish; eels' larvae; dogfish eggs.
STRANGE SEAWATER CREATURES, Pathe. 24 Mr 1914. Syn. 19:1576; Com. 20:212.
HOSTS OF THE SEA, THE. Pathe. 27 Jy 1914. Syn. 21:736.
EDIBLE FISHES OF THE ENGLISH CHANnel. Pathe. 24 Ag 1914. Sp. rev. 21:1633.
GLIMPSES OF POND LIFE. Pathe. 6 D 1913. Syn. 18:1044; Com. 18:1412.
STRANGE ANIMALS, SOUTH AMERICA. Eclectic S 1914. Com. 22:336.

59.2 Invertebrates

ORGANISMS WHICH INHABIT STAGNANT Waters. Eclair 2 N 1913. Syn. 18:414; Com. 18:497.
POLYPS. Eclair 5 O 1913. Syn. 18:80.
ATOM LIFE IN THE DEEP. Gaumont 2 O 1913. Syn. 18:86.
POND SNAIL, THE. Pathe. 21 N 1913. Syn. 18:772; Com. 18:1151.

59.5 Articulates

ROTIFERS. Eclair 12 O 1913. Syn. 18:414; Com. 18:157.
CRAYFISH, THE. Pathe. 20 Jy 1914. Syn. 21:736.
HUNTING SPIDERS, THE. Pathe. 10 Mr 1914. Syn. 19:1296; Com. 19:1680.

59.57 Insects

BUTTERFLY PRESERVATION. Pathe. 14 N 1913. Syn. 18:774; Com. 18:1007.
INSECTS THAT STING. Pathe. 17 D 1913. Syn. 18:1326; Com. 19:48.
INSECTS THAT MIMIC. Pathe. 20 Ja 1914. Syn. 19:326; Com. 19:676.
POISONOUS INSECTS. Joker 6 My 1914. hs. or c.p.
TERMITE, THE INSECT ARCHITECT, THE. Pathe. 8 Ap 1914. Syn. 20:110; Com. 20:576. 18:1054.

59.7 Fish

EDIBLE FISH OF THE MEDITERRANEAN. Pathe. 2 D 1913. Syn. 18:1044; Com. 18:411.
AMBLYSTOMA, THE. Eclair 9 N 1913. Syn 18:526; Com. 18:736.

59.81 Reptiles

LIZARD LORE. Pathe. 12 N 1913. Syn. 18:774; Com. 18:1007.
DEADLIEST OF NATURE CELEBRITIES, The. Pathe 28 Ap 1914. Syn. 20:708; Com 20:986. The cobra.
VENOMOUS SERPENTS. Pathe. 20 Je 1914 Com. 21:432.
TORTOISES AT CLOSE RANGE. Pathe. N 1913. Syn. 18:520; Com. 18:867.
TURTLE TRAITS. Universal Ike. 25 Ag 1914 Com. 21:1373.

59.82 Birds

BIRDS OF THE INLAND MARSH. Pathe. 12 D 1913. Syn. 18:1194; Com. 18:1543.
AFRICAN SEA BIRDS. Edison 7 Ja 1914. Syn 19:72; Com. 19:412. Malaga's Island, off South Africa; exceptionally good.
OUR LARGE BIRDS. Keystone. 23 My 1914. Com. 20:1261.
STUDY OF BIRDS, A. Eclectic S 1914. Syn. 22:253.
BIRDS OF THE SOUTHERN COAST. Edison 6 O 1913. Syn. 18:178; Com. 18:264.
AT HOME WITH THE HERON. Pathe. 21 Ja 1914. Syn. 19:328; Com. 19:676.

59.9 Mammals

JERBOA, HABITAT AFRICA, THE. Pathe. 12 My 1914. Syn. 20:852.
MARMOT, THE. Pathe. 23 Je 1914. n. s. or c. p.
CAPTURE OF A SEA ELEPHANT, THE. Blinkhorn 5r. My 1914. Adv. 20:639; Sp rev. 20:675.

6 APPLIED SCIENCE INDUSTRIAL ARTS

PANAMA-PACIFIC EXPOSITION UP TO Date. Victor 17 Jy 1914. Com. 21:434.

61 Medicine

HEART AND THE CIRCULATION OF THE Blood, The. Pathe. 6 Jy 1914. Syn. 21:108

613 Personal Hygiene.

PRICE OF THOUGHTLESSNESS, THE. Vitagraph 11 N 1913. Syn. 18:636; Com. 18:868; Sp. rev. 18:1425. Street and road dangers.
MAKING A CONVERT. Edison. 15 S 1914 Syn. 21:1546; Com. 22:63; Sp. rev. 21:1627

614 Public Hygiene

U. S. GOVERNMENT INSPECTION OF BEEF Victor 17 Ap 1914. Syn. 20:576.
U. S. GOVERNMENT INSPECTION OF MUTton and Pork. Powers (25 My) 1914. n. s. or c. p.
LIFE FOR LIFE. Selig 23 O 1913. Syn 18:294; Com. 18:611. Illustrating use of the pulmotor.

615 Therapeutics. Materia Medica

TALCUM POWDER. Kalem 26 D 1913. Syn 18:1584; Com. 19.172.
POISON OF SERPENTS, THE. Pathe 9 Je 1914. Com. 20:1689.

616 Pathology. Treatment of Diseases

VENOM INSTITUTE OF SAO PAULO, BRAZIL, The. Gaumont 16 O 1913. Syn. 18:530.
PRICE OF HUMAN LIVES, THE. Edison 2 D 1913. Syn. 18:1184; Com. 18:1411; Sp. rev. 18:1128. Red Cross seal story.

62 Engineering

622 Mines and Mining

STONE QUARRY IN BELGIUM, A. Lux 6 My 1914. Syn. 19:1166.
SOUTH AFRICAN MINES, THE. Edison 26 Ag 1914. Syn. 21:1127; Com. 21:1511; gold and diamond mines.
PHOSPHATE MINING. Kalem 27 Mr 1914. Syn. 19:1564; Com. 20:212.
OUR LAND OF GOLD. Powers 25 S 1914. Com. 22:65. Alaskan gold mines.
COPPER MINING AT THE CALUMET AND Hecla. Laurium Amusement Co. 2r. Ja 1914. Mfg. 19:425.
MARBLE INDUSTRY, THE. Kalem. V N 1913. ySn. 18:648.
IN A GRANITE QUARRY. Lux 17 O 1913 Syn. 18:312.
GRANITE INDUSTRY, THE. Kalem 31 O 1913. Syn. 18:510; Com. 18:735.
PINK GRANITE INDUSTRY AT MILFORD, Mass., The. Syn. 18:176; Com. 18:379.
SLATE INDUSTRY, THE. Pathe. 14 N 1913 Syn. 18:774; Com. 1007.

623 Military Engineering

FOOD FOR THE DOGS OF WAR. Kalem 30 S 1914. Syn. 21:1809; Com. 22:335; Sp. rev. 21:1627.
(LAUNCHING OF H. M. S. DREADNAUGHT "Marlborough.") Kalem 26 Je 1914. Syn. 20:1724; Com. 21:255. With "Labor Demonstration in Hyde Park, England."
(PONTOON BRIDGE BUILDING.) Eclair 23 N 1913. Syn. 18:1208. With "Soldiers Drilling in Turkestan."

626 Waterways. Canals. Irrigation

RIDING THE FLUME. Pathe. 4 O 1913. Syn. 18:68; Com. 18:264.

JOINING OF THE OCEANS, THE. Edison 10 D 1913. Syn. 18:1186; Com. 18:1544. Panama Canal.
OPENING OF THE PANAMA CANAL, THE. Hagy's Feature. 4r. Je 1914. Sp. rev. 20:1519.

627 Hydraulic Engineering. Dykes Dams

HYDRAULIC MINING. Victor 12 D 1913. Com. 18:1413. Gold mining.
HYDRAULIC WORKS ON THE ADDA, ITALY. Lubin 11 D 1913. Syn. 18:1188.
RAISING A SUNKEN YACHT. Vitagraph 16 S 1914. Sp. rev. 22:321.
TRIP TO THE GREAT NILE DAM, A. Patho 14 Mr 1914. n. s. or c. p.

63 Agriculture

U. S. GOVERNMENT INSTRUCTION TO Young Farmers. Powers 27 Mr 1914. n. s. or c. p.
TWENTIETH CENTURY FARMER, A. Thanhouser 31 O 1913. Syn. 18:528; Com. 18:613.
MONTANA STATE FAIR, THE. Vitagraph 8 Ja 1914. Com. 19:412.
FARMING IN ANCIENT THEBES. Vitagraph 19 N 1913. Syn. 18:760; Com. 18:1150. Threshing and harvesting grain on the banks of the river Nile.
THIS IS TH' LIFE. American. 2r. 24 Ag 1914. Syn. 21:1144; Com. 21:1373. Illustrates advantage of using modern farm implements.

63.3 Special Crops

ACRES OF ALFALFA. Keystone 23 My 1914. Com. 20:1261.
HEMP GROWING, NEW ZEALAND. Pathe 28 Jy 1914. Syn. 21:736; Com. 21:959.
TOBACCO INDUSTRY, THE. Lubin 12 Ja 1914. Syn. 19:210; Com. 19:413.
COFFEE CULTIVATION, SANTOS, SOUTH America. Pathe 27 Jy 1914. Syn. 21:736.
CEYLON TEA ESTATE, A. Selig 10 O 1913. Com. 18:379.
COCOANUT INDUSTRY, THE. Lubin 7 N 1913. Syn. 18:514.
GROWING AND GATHERING COCOANUT Beans. Lubin 19 D 1913. Syn. 18:1320.
PRODUCTS OF THE PALM. Edison 22 D 1913. Syn. 18:1456; Com. 19:172. Banana and cocoanut industries, Jamaica, West Indies.

63.4 Arboriculture

BAHAMAN PINEAPPLE PLANTATION, A. Princess 24 Jy 1914. Com. 21:837.
PRODUCTS OF THE PALM. Edison 22 D 1913. Syn. 18:1456; Com. 19:172.
JAFFA, THE SEAPORT OF JERUSALEM AND Its Orange Industry. Edison 22 O 1913 Syn. 18:406; Com. 18:276,311.
LEMON PLANTATION, A. Melies 20 N 1913. Syn. 18:906.

63.5 Horticulture

FLOWERS THAT BLOOM IN THE SPRING. Pathe. 15 Ap 1914. Syn. 20:256; Com. 20:672.

63.6 Zootechnic. Animal Breeding

ANIMAL EXPORT FROM ALGIERS. Lux 13 F 1914. Syn. 19:1022.
CALIFORNIA RODEO, 1913, THE. Duhem & Harter 3r. O 1913. Adv. 18:187.
ROUND UP AT PENDLETON, 1913, THE. Thomas & Bouman 5r. Mr 1914. Adv. 19:1579.

BEAUTY, THE EDUCATED HORSE. Kalem 6 Mr 1914. Syn. 19:1144; Com. 19:1524.
DUBLIN HORSE SHOW, THE. Kalem 21 N 1913. Syn. 18:894; Com. 18:1151. Also English and French sports in Ireland, England and France.

ELEPHANT AS A WORKMAN, RANGOON, India, The. Selig 1 O 1913. Adv. 17:1356.
ELEPHANTS AT WORK. Vitagraph 16 D 1913. Adv. 18:1252; Com. 19:48.

OSTRICH FARMING NEAR NICE. Lux 12 D 1913. Syn. 18:1478.
OSTRICH FARMING, SOUTH AFRICA. Edison 19 Ja 1914. Syn. 19:574; Com. 19:544.

PUPS ON A RAMPAGE. Vitagraph 6 Ap. 1914. Com. 20:361.

LONG ISLAND SKUNK FARM, A. Kalem 21 F 1914. Syn. 19:858; Com. 19:1237.

63.7 Inert Animal Products

MILK WE DRINK, THE. Keystone 10 N 1913. Adv. 18:515; Com. 18:613. Pictures dairy management.

63.8 Insects Useful to Agriculture

BEE FARMING. Gaumont 19 F 1914. Syn. 19:1166.
BEE INDUSTRY, THE. Powers 31 O 1913. n. s. or c. p.

63.9 Hunting and Fishing Industries

BREEDING TROUT BY THE MILLION. Pathe. 24 O 1913. Syn. 18:286; Com. 18:612.
SOUTH AFRICAN WHALING INDUSTRY, The. Edison 1 D 1913. Syn. 18:1184; Com. 18:1279.
CRAWFISHING. Vitagraph 25 F 1914. Syn. 19:1004; Com. 19:1384. In Sweden.

64 Domestic Economy. Housekeeping

BABY SHOW, THE. Vitagraph 30 D 1913. Syn. 18:1578. Illustrates the care of babies.

65 Means of Communication

SPINNERS OF SPEECH, THE. Pathe 28 O 1913. Syn. 18:410; Com. 18:612. Telephone.
MODES OF TRAVEL IN JAPAN. Pathe 6 Jy 1914. Syn. 21:108.
GRAND OPENING OF THE SHICHIJIO Bridge Kyoto, Japan. Melies 23 O 1913. Syn. 18:402; Com. 18:611.
RIVER TRAVEL IN INDO-CHINA. Pathe 9 Je 1914. Com. 20:1689.

66 Industries

WINE INDUSTRY, MARSALA, SICILY, THE Pathe. 13 Jy 1914. Syn. 21:108.
CANNING INDUSTRY IN CALIFORNIA, THE. Essanay 31 Mr 1914. Syn. 19:1722; Com. 20:370. Peas and asparagus.
GLIMPSE OF THE OIL REGIONS OF TEXAS, A. Powers 6 Ap 1914. n. s. or c. p.
MAKING CUT GLASS. Kalem 9 Ja 1914. Syn. 19:80; Com. 19:412.
HOUSE ON THE HILL, THE. Vitagraph. 2r. 8 Ag 1914. Syn. 21:725; Com. 21:1100. Kirkman's soap factory, Brooklyn, N. Y.
MAKING PIG IRON. American 20 N 1913. Syn. 18:192; Com. 18:265.
MODERN STEEL PLANT, A. American 20 N 1913. Syn. 18:780; Com. 18:689; Notice 18:717. Bethlehem, Pa.

67 Manufactures

IRON AND STEEL INDUSTRY, BOMBAY, The. Pathe 11 Ag 1914. Syn. 21:1000; Com. 21:1100.
MAKING STEEL RAILS. Pathe 26 My 1914. Syn. 20:1160. Com. 20:1408.

LUMBERING IN SWEDEN. Vitagraph 18 F 1914. Syn. 19:860; Com. 19:1236.
LUMBER INDUSTRY OF CALIFORNIA, THE. Joker 18 F 1914. n. s. or c. p.
CYPRESS LOGGING IN FLORIDA. Kalem 20 Mr 1914. Syn. 19:1414; Com. 20:57.
WOOD CARVING AND TURNING AT ST. Claude, France. Pathe 12 My 1914. Syn. 20:852.

ART OF THE FURRIER, THE. Pathe 11 Ag 1914. Syn. 21:1000; Com. 21:1100. Making a moleskin coat.
ABELONE INDUSTRY, THE. Keystone 6 O 1913. Syn. 18:194; Com. 18:265.

MAKING HIGH GRADE PAPER. Kalem 30 Ja 1914. Syn. 19:460; Com. 19:808.

HEMP INDUSTRY OF YUCATAN, MEXICO, The. Joker 19 S 1914. n. s. or c. p.
MAKING EIGHT-TON ROPES. Pathe 28 N 1913. Syn. 18:904; Com. 18:1279.

MANUFACTURING PEARL BUTTONS. Lubin 1 Ja 1914. Syn. 18:1574; Com. 19:289.

68 Trades. Handicrafts

PIANO MANUFACTURING. Kalem 12 D 1913. Syn. 18:1188; Com. 18:1543.

MAKING AN AUTOMOBILE TIRE. Keystone 27 O 1913. Com. 18:737.

JAPANESE SHOEMAKER AT WORK, A. Melies 30 O 1913. Syn. 18:522.

STRAW HAT INDUSTRY IN FIESOLE, THE. Pathe 21 Ap 1914. Com. 20:820.
SHELL COMB INDUSTRY, THE. Lubin 16 Je 1914. Syn. 20:1586; Com. 21:64.

FAN MAKING. Gaumont 12 F 1914. n. s. or c. p.
MAKING LACE FANS. Pathe 12 Mr 1914. Com. 19:1683.

ICE CUTTING IN SWEDEN. Pathe 8 N 1913. Syn. 18:520; Com. 18:867.
HARVESTING ICE. Princess 24 Jy 1914. Com. 21:837.

7 FINE ARTS

71 Landscape. Gardens. Sites

GLACIER NATIONAL PARK IN WINTER, The. Pathe 23 Je 1914. n. s. or c. p.
FLOWERS OF JAPAN. Pathe 18 N 1913. Syn. 18:772; Com. 18:1150. Views of Japanese gardens.
SEVENTEEN-MILE DRIVE, CALIFORNIA, The. Pathe 14 Ja 1914. Syn. 19:208; Com. 19:543.
FOUNTAINS OF ROME, THE. Vero Educational Jy 1914. Adv. 20:1175.
UNVEILING THE PILGRIM FATHERS' Monument. Kalem 23 Ja 1914. Syn. 19:332; Com. 19:676. H. W. Page, the new U. S. Ambassador to England, unveiling the monument at Southampton, England.
UNVEILING THE "MAINE" MONUMENT. Kalem 7 Mr 1914. Syn. 19:1144; Com. 19:1524. Central Park, New York City.
TEMPLES AND STATUES OF ROME. Vitagraph 26 N 1913. Com. 18:1279.
TOMBS OF THE ANCIENT JAPANESE EMperors. Pathe 14 Jy 1914. Syn. 21:108; Com. 21:704.

72 Architecture

ANDREW CARNEGIE'S GIFT TO THE World. Kalem 5 D 1913. Syn. 18:1030; Com. 18:1412. The Peace palace at The Hague.
TEMPLES OF JAPAN. Melies 1 Ja 1914. Syn. 19:76; Com. 19:288.
TYPICAL BUDDHIST TEMPLE, A. Pathe 11 F 1914. Syn. 19:710; Com. 19:1087.
CATHEDRAL AND LEANING TOWER OF Pisa. Selig 11 Mr 1914. Com. 19:1680.
RESIDENCES OF THE POPES. Vero Educational Mr 1914. Syn. 19:748; Sp. rev. 20:810.

73. Sculpture. Plastic Arts

STATUESQUE BEAUTY. Joker 23 S 1914. n. s. or c. p. Living reproductions of famous statues.
STORY OF THE WILLOW PATTERN, THE. Edison 10 F 1914. Syn. 19:714; Com 19:1087.

77 Photography

UNDER WATER PHOTOGRAPHY. Submarine Film Co. Pictures taken under water at Watling's Island, Bahamas, Ap & Je 1914. 20:497.
HOW MOTION PICTURES ARE MADE. Keystone 15 Ja 1914. Adv. 19:187; Com. 19:290. Views of the work of the Broncho, Kay-Bee and Domino companies.
HOUSE BUILT BY ELECTRICITY, A. Melies 16 Jy 1914. Com. 21:705. Trick picture.
UNFORSEEN METAMORPHOSES. Eclair 16 N 1913. Syn. 18:656; Com. 18:737. Novelty picture. Resolving drawings and views.

78 Music

"AFTER THE BALL." Photodrama. 6r. Jy 1914. Syn. 21:622; Sp. rev. 21:584.
"HOME, SWEET HOME." Mutual (Griffith) 6r. My 1914. Syn. 20:1312; Sp. rev. 20:1234; mfg. 19:1694; music for, 21:422.
"THIS IS THE LIFE." Essanay 10 Je 1914. Syn. 20:1434; Com. 20:1828.
TRAIL OF THE "LOST CHORD," THE. American 2r. 17 N 1913. Syn. 18:780; Com. 18:869; Sp. rev. 18:473.
BIRTH OF THE "STAR SPANGLED BANner," The. Edison 2r. 28 Ag 1914. Syn. 21:814, 1127; Com. 21:1512; Sp. rev. 21:814.

79 Sports and Amusements

TRIP TO THE FAMOUS PICNIC GROUNDS, Arshyama, Japan, A. Melies 4 D 1913. Syn. 18:1194; Com. 18:1411.

791 Public Amusements

GREAT RAYMOND, THE. Essanay 16 Jy 1913. Syn. 17:230; Com. 17:535.
PERFORMING LIONS. Vitagraph 10 D 1913 Syn. 18:186; Com. 18:1544.

792 Theater. The Stage

Plays

AFTERMATH. Famous Players. 4r. 20 Ag 1914. Syn. 21:1564; Sp. rev. 21:1348.
ALONE IN NEW YORK. Warner 5r S 1914. n. s. or c. p.
AMERICAN CITIZEN, AN. Famous Players 4r. 10 Ja 1914. Syn. 19:342; Sp. rev. 19:292.
L'ARTICLE 47. Majestic 2r 18 N 1913. Syn. 18:914; Com. 18:1009.
AT THE OLD CROSSROADS. Select Photoplays 5r. Ag. 1914. Syn. 21:1290; Sp. rev. 21:681, 22:351; mfg. 21:1253.
BANKER'S DAUGHTER, THE. Life Photoplay 5r. Mr 1914. Syn. 20:124; Com. 20:519.
BELLS, THE. Sawyer 4r. Je 1914. Syn. 20:1604.
BILLIONAIRE, THE. Biograph (K. & E.) 3r. Je 1914. Syn. 20:1742; Sp. rev. 19:1366.

BREWSTER'S MILLIONS. Lasky 5r. 15 Ap 1914. Sp. rev. 20:336; mfg. 19:298.
CAPRICE. Famous Players 4r. 10 N 1913. Syn. 18:786; Sp. rev. 18:718.
CAPTAIN ALVAREZ. Vitagraph 6r. Je 1914. Syn. 20:1880; Sp. rev. 20:799; music for, 21:823.
CELEBRATED CASE, A. Kalem 4r. F 1914. Sp. rev. 19:814.
CHECKERS. All Star 6r. 29 O 1913. Syn. 18:1480; Sp. rev. 18:992.
CHERRY PICKERS, THE. Selig 2r. 13 Ap 1914. Syn. 20:402; Com. 20:517.
CLASSMATES. Biograph (K. & E.) Syn. 20:1322.
CLOTHES. Famous Players 4r. 10 Mr 1914. Syn. 19:1442; Sp. rev. 19:1527.
COLLEEN BAWN. Kalem 3r. 16 Mr 1914. Reissue of 16 O 1911. Syn. 19:1414; Com. 19:1681; mfg. 19:557.
COUNT OF MONTE CRISTO, THE. Famous Players 5r. 1 N 1913. Syn. 18:534; mfg. 18:500.
DAVID GARRICK. Vitagraph 2r. 11 Ag 1914. Syn. 21:858; Com. 21:1241.
DOLLAR MARK, THE. World Film 5r. S 1914. Syn. 22:106; Sp. rev. 21:1626.
DR. GOUDRON'S SYSTEM. Leading Players 2r. Ap 1914. Syn. 20:584; Sp. rev. 20:530; 1703.
ESCAPE, THE. Mutual (Griffith) Je 1914. Sp. rev. 20:1515.
FATAL WEDDING, THE. Biograph (K. & E.) 3r. My 1914. Syn. 20:1322.
FEDORA. Trans-Oceanic 5r. 1 D 1913. Syn. 19:98.
FROU FROU. Thanhouser 4r. 1 Ja 1914. Syn. 19:94; Sp. rev. 19:277.
GIRL OF THE SUNNY SOUTH, THE. American Kineto Corporation. n. s. or c. p.
GOOD LITTLE DEVIL, THE. Famous Players 5r. 1 Mr 1914. Sp. rev. 17:407; mfg. 19:1249.
GREYHOUND, THE. Life Photoplay 5r. Je 1914. Syn. 20:1316; Sp. rev. 20:1518.
HEARTS OF OAK. Mohawk 5r. My 1914. Syn. 20:1314; Sp. rev. 20:1119; mfg. 19:1539.
HOODMAN BLIND. Pilot 4r. 1 D 1913. Syn. 18:1602.
IN MISSOURI. All Star 5r. Ap 1914. Syn. 20:124; Sp. rev. 19:1688; mfg. 19:400.
KIT THE ARKANSAS TRAVELLER. Kalem 3r. S 1914. Syn. 21:1430; Sp. rev. 21:1075, 1627.
LEAH KLESCHNA. Famous Players 4r. 10 D 1913. Syn. 18:1384; Sp. rev. 18:1392.
LIGHTS O' LONDON. World Film 5r. Je 1914. Syn. 21:487; Sp. rev. 21:437.
LION AND THE MOUSE, THE. Lubin 6r. Ja 1914. Syn. 19:334; Sp. rev. 19:659.
LITTLEST REBEL, THE. Photoplay 6r. Ap 1914. Syn. 21:1562; Sp. rev. 21:1379.
LORD CHUMLEY. Biograph (K. & E.) 4r. Je 1914. Syn. 20:1886.
LURE, THE. World Film 5r. 24 Ag 1914. Syn. 21:1152.
MAKING OF BOBBY BURNIT, THE. Lasky 4r. 17 S 1914. Syn. 22:252; mfg. 21:1529.
MAN'S ENEMY. Biograph (K. & E.) 3r. Jy 1914. Syn. 21:485, 752.
MODEL YOUNG MAN, A. Vitagraph 20 Mr 1914. Syn. 19:1416; Com. 20:57; mfg. 19:424.
MOTHER. World Film 28 S 1914. Syn. 22:106; Com. 21:1778; Sp. rev. 21:1789.
MY FRIEND FROM INDIA. Edison 3r. 15 Ag 1914. n. s. or c. p.
OCTOROON, THE. Kalem 3r. 1 D 1913. Syn. 18:1036; Com. 18:1280; Sp. rev. 18:1716.
ONE OF OUR GIRLS. Famous Players 4r. 10 Je 1914. Syn. 20:1746; Sp. rev. 20:1667.
OUR NEW MINISTER. Kalem 3r. 12 N 1913. Syn. 18:648; Com. 18:1007.
PAID IN FULL. All Star 5r. Mr 1914. Sp. rev. 19:397.
PRIDE OF JENNICO, THE. Famous Players 4r. 20 F 1914. Syn. 19:1170; Com. 19:1071.
SEVEN DAYS. Biograph (K. & E.) 3r. Je 1914. Syn. 20:1886.
SHANNON OF THE SIXTH. Kalem 5r. Jy 1914. Syn. 21:485; Sp. rev. 21:233.
SHE STOOPS TO CONQUER. Cosmofotofilm 3r. Jy 1914. Syn. 21:484; Sp. rev. 21:283.
SHORE ACRES. All Star Ap 1914. Mfg. 18:882.
SPITFIRE. Famous Players 4r. 20 Je 1914. Syn. 21:122; Sp. rev. 21:87; mfg. 20:1273.
SQUAW-MAN, THE. Lasky 6r. F 1914. Syn. 19:730; mfg. 19:298, 553, 689.
STRONGHEART. Biograph (K. & E.) 3r. Je 1914. Syn. 20:1888.
SUCH A LITTLE QUEEN. Famous Players 5r. 21 S 1914. Syn. 22:253; Sp. rev. 22:45.
THIRD DEGREE, THE. Lubin 5r. Ja 1914. Syn. 19:332; Sp. rev. 18:992, 19:30.
UNWELCOME MRS. HATCH, THE. Famous Players 4r. 10 S 1914. Syn. 21:1830; Sp. rev. 21:1752.
WOMAN AGAINST WOMAN. Biograph (K. & E.) 3r. Je 1914. Syn. 20:1884.

Operas

BARBER OF SEVILLE, THE. Klein-Ambrosio 3r. 24 Mr 1914. Com. 20:213; mfg. 19:1537.
MARRIAGE OF FIGARO, THE. Klein-Ambrosio 2r. 3 F 1914. Com. 19:947; Sp. rev. 19:655; mfg. 19:182, 424.
IL TROVATORE. Centaur 6r. Jy 1914. Mfg. 21:593. Notice 21:259.

793 Indoor Amusements

ITALIAN GAMES AND DANCES. Selig 6 F 1914. Com. 19:946.
TYPICAL RUSSIAN DANCES. Pathe 10 Ag 1914. Syn. 21:1000; Com. 21:1100.
DANCES OF TODAY, THE. Victor 26 Ja 1914. Adv. 19:246; mfg. 19:554.
FASHIONABLE DANCES. Rex 10 My 1914. n. s. or c. p.
LATEST SOCIETY DANCES. Sawyer Jy 1914. Adv. 21:521.
STANDARDIZING MODERN DANCES. Report of a demonstation by Miss Elizabeth Marbury in the Assembly Room of the Colony Club, New York City, Mr 1914. 20:71.
MOTION PICTURE DANCING LESSONS. Kalem 3r. 29 O 1913. Com. 18:736; Sp. rev. 18:248.
KOREAN DANCE, A. Selig 20 My 1914. n. s. or c. p.
DIFFERENCE BETWEEN TANGOES, THE. Melies 30 Ap 1914. Syn. 20:706; Com. 20:968.

796 Open Air Sports. Athletics

SEA SCOUTS OF AMERICA, THE. Kalem 10 O 1913. Syn. 18:70.
WINTER SPORTS IN SWITZERLAND. Pathe. 11 N 1913. Syn. 18:774; Com. 18:868.

ARMY-NAVY FOOTBALL GAME. 29 Nov 1913. Commercial 2r. 30 N 1913. Sp. rev. 18:1288; mfg. 18:1156.
CALIFORNIA VS. STANFORD. California M. P. Co. N 1913. Adv. 18:1088.

GIANTS VS ATHLETICS. Commercial M. P. Co. 2r. O 1913. Adv. 18:201.
BASEBALL STARS. Vitagraph 15 Ja 1914. Com. 19:543.
GIANTS-WHITE SOX WORLD TOUR. John J. Gleason 6r. Mr 1914. Syn. 21:122; Sp. rev. 21:69.

GYMNASTICS. Gaumont 27 N 1913. Syn. 18:1056. Swedish.

VANDERBILT CUP RACE, THE. Komic 1 Ap 1914. Com. 20:213.

JAPANESE JUDO, THE. Melies 27 N 1913. Syn. 18:1040; Com. 18:1279. Jiu-jitsu.

ON THE ICE. Edison 24 Je 1914. Syn. 20:1722; Com. 21:255. Fancy skating at Wengen, Switzerland.
FANCY SKATING. Selig 31 Mr 1914. Com. 20:360.

797 Navigation and Aviation

BOATING ON THE SEINE. Lux 20 F 1914. Syn. 19:1022.
VARSITY RACE, THE. Thanhouser 2r. 22 S 1914. Syn. 21:1690; Com. 22:65; Sp. rev 21:1758.
SHOOTING THE FAMOUS HOZU RAPIDS OF Japan. Melies 20 N 1913. Syn. 18:906; Com 18:1150.

798 Horsemanship. Racing

SPORTS IN MERRIE, ENGLAND. Kalem 27 O 1913. Syn. 18:510; Com. 18:612.
CAMBRIDGESHIRE RACE MEET, THE Kalem 2 Ja 1914. Syn. 18:1584; Com. 19:288.

799 Fishing and Hunting

As Sport

SPORT AND TRAVEL IN CENTRAL AFRICA Pathe. 5r. My 1914. Syn. 20:1456.
HUNTING WILD GAME IN THE SOUTH PAcific Islands. Blinkhorn 5r. 18 My 1914. Adv. 20:639.
SPORTS IN MERRIE, ENGLAND. Kalem 27 O 1913. Syn. 18:510; Com. 18:612.
BADGER HUNT, A. Pathe 21 Jy 1914. Syn. 21:736; Com. 21:836.
RUSSIAN BOAR HUNT, A. Pathe 13 Jy 1914. Syn. 21:108.
HUNTING WILD GEESE. California M. P. Co. 2r. Mr 1914. Mfg. 19:1251.
TIGER HUNT, INDO-CHINA, A. Pathe 7 Jy 1914. Syn. 21:108.

(Te be concluded in issue of February 13.)

MRS. CARTER H. HARRISON'S NOVEL TO BE PICTURIZED.

Essanay is making elaborate preparations for the production of a beautiful multiple-reel photoplay, "The Lady of the Snows," dramatized from the novel of Edith Ogden Harrison, wife of Carter H. Harrison, mayor of Chicago.

This is the first of Mrs. Harrison's novels to be dramatized for a photoplay, but others will be put into film form later.

"The Lady of the Snows" is a picturesque story of life in the Canadian woods. With many dramatic settings, it is wonderfully well adapted to photoplay art. The novel itself proved a great success.

The plot evolves about the search in the northern woods for a missing heiress. The girl is betrothed, according to the wish of their families, to an Englishman, whom she has never seen. He hunts for her in vain, finally joins the mounted police force of Canada and falls in love and weds a girl whom he meets. Then it is found that his wife is the missing heiress.

Mrs. Harrison is greatly interested in the filming of her novel and will take an active part in the work of producing it and arranging the correct settings.

"I am exceedingly anxious to see how my stories will look on the screen," said Mrs. Harrison. "I feel that the authors who can make people see their plots as their minds have pictured them must bring their stories far closer to the hearts of the people than the novelist or orator can ever hope to. People are more impressed by pictures flashed before their eyes than by mere words. In this way there is a lasting influence for good. That is why I am such an admirer of photoplays."

KING BAGGOT PLAYS CORSICAN BROTHERS.

The two parts of "The Corsican Brothers," Dumas' famous story, have been combined into one powerful part in a new three-reel Universal photoplay now being made, and King Baggot will play the double role. He will appear as Fabian and Louis De Franchi. On the stage these parts, of course, were played by separate individuals, but with the aid of double exposure Mr. Baggot is enabled to play both parts. He is thereby given a more than usually good opportunity to display his talents. The stage and book versions have been carefully studied, and the best in each will be used for the screen play. Any photoplay in which one man plays the double role is always interesting, no matter what the story, but with King Baggot playing the double part in such a strong drama it should make an exceptionally good production. The snow scenes, of which there are many, will be taken in the Adirondack Mountains. The scenario is the joint product of Mr. Baggot, Frank Smith, George Edwards Hall and George Lessey.

NEW STAGE MANAGER FOR EDISON.

Elberton C. Taylor has been promoted from assistant stage manager to stage manager of the Edison studio, to succeed Mr. Sauer. Mr. Taylor has been with Edison but a year, but in that time he has made rapid progress, due to a training in art and design as book illustrator, then actor, assistant director and then to stage managership. Mr. Taylor first attracted attention when he joined the Edison forces while in Florida not long ago where his sets were much commented upon.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Farrar's Scheme.

STEVE FARRAR, of the Casino, Eldorado, Ill., has found something new. He sent out cards for his Christmas attraction some days in advance. These were enclosed in envelopes suggestive of a high grade Christmas greeting, were addressed neatly and in the same hand was written "Not to be opened until Christmas," just as milions of of other cards were marked. Probably ninety-five per cent. of them were put away with the other cards and opened the day the feature was to be shown. Even better than the written legend would have been the paster with the same lettering, but the main point is that he was certain that in every house he wanted to reach was an advertisement waiting the psychological moment.

In passing he has changed the Casino News to a make up more suggestive of a straight newspaper layout, with good effect.

Just to help along he offers five dollars, a license, a minister and "an article of household furniture" to any couple who will get married on the stage of the Casino any Friday night. Huh! It's worth more than five dollars to get married even in private. He should play them on a percentage basis.

Which?

In its standing announcement the American, Salt Lake City, says:

> Nothing that could offend the most exacting taste will be thrown upon our screens. It is the desire of the management to please the public every day in the year. It's a pleasure to please the public.

But on another page is announced "The Life of Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, with all its sensational episodes." And in the text is a paragraph that reads:

> The meeting of Evelyn with Harry Thaw is most interesting as well as his subsequent attentions to her. Her career as a chorus girl is realistically depicted, also is shown her marriage with Thaw, their gay life in New York, her meeting with Stanford White, their escapades that later became the talk of the world, White's palatial quarters on the top floor of a New York skyscraper, where he entertained Evelyn and her mother, Thaw's enlightenment and his murder of White in Madison Square Garden, and many subsequent events, including Thaw's escape from Matteawan Insane Asylum.

The stuff is not even accurate, as those who followed the nauseating reports of the trial or were acquainted with the actors in the affair well know, but setting that aside, we do not believe that pawing over this old filth is going to help business any, not even in a town where most of the playgoers get in on newspaper passes.

We are sorry to see the house uses questionable medical advertising. This sort of stuff should never be permitted in a program largely offered to women and children. Surely they do not need money badly enough to run such stuff, and if it is merely thoughtlessness, it should be corrected at once.

Bleich's Matinee.

As usual the Empress theater, Owensboro, Ky., gave a morning matinee Christmas day to the poor kiddies and advertised not only to the kiddies but made the plea that adult readers tell those children not apt to be in touch with the daily papers, a touch of thoughtfulness that is a Bleich hall mark. The same bill was offered as at the paid performance, and made complete the purpose of the matinee.

Well Done.

The Queen and Old Mill theaters, Dallas, Texas, issued a handsome and novel booklet for Christmas. The cover was four by seven, but the paper was actually ten and a half inches long, the excess being turned over to the inside, falling half the depth. On this were printed the ciphers of the two houses. The booklet proper was sixteen pages, mostly program. On the back was this matter that may be of equal use to others:

> I am a Moving Picture born of Heart, Head and Hand. I am the offspring of Knowledge and Light joined into wedlock with Art. I speak the language of Enchantment. I come from everywhere. I go everywhere. I have been brought out of the skies, out of Dreamland to earth to serve and bless Humanity.
>
> Many millions call to see me every day. I bring joy and gladness to the oppressed. bring smiles to the world-worn faces of the weary. I lay bare the innermost secrets of the heart; be it joy, gladness, laughter, happiness or sadness, grief, despair. Into each tale I unfold I weave a subtle lesson.
>
> I Uplift, Inspire, Enlighten. I raise the floodgates of laughter, and allow the joys to come a jingling. In days of peace or war alike I bring the news to countless numbers. I lay the world at your feet.
>
> I may be seen at my best every day at THE TWIN THEATERS TRANSCENDENT - THE OLD MILL and THE QUEEN.
>
> I AM A MOVING PICTURE.

It was a most economical booklet because it cost a lot of money, but every penny spent helped to give the impression of elegance, refinement and good taste. E. H. Hulsey, the general manager, is to be congratulated on turning out something really worth while; something that will make new friends and hold old ones.

From the Stanley.

The Stanley theater, Philadelphia, sends in its program for Christmas week and wants an opinion. The sheet is a four-pager six by nine, green stock in green ink with red holly border, front and back pages and a red imprint of the cross and text across the green text for "The Sign of the Cross," the Christmas feature.

It would have been better, we think, to have used the two-color holly border, printing the leaves in green instead of red and using the red for the berries. This would have given less red, but would have been more effective.

But the border will probably be replaced by another after the Christmas season and overloaded front page will be retained. On a nine-inch page the title of the house is run in signature only 9/16 of an inch, set into the border. Below this is a three and a quarter-inch bank of house information, more than half of which is in a solid eight-point that looks more like a leaded six. Below is the underline for the following week opened up with plenty of lead, with the result that the page looks top-heavy and forbidding. Large type should carry the name of the house, the solid paragraphs should be thrown over to the second page, the attraction for the week should run on the front page and the underline on the back, the program proper, now on the back page being moved to the third page, now occupied by a display advertisement. On the third page there should be brief mention of the underline with a reference to the back page for full particulars. With these changes the program would be an attractive one, but at present the makeup is bad. The proper place for the program of the week is on a right-hand page, not on the back page.

Poetical.

The Crescent theater, Southampton, N. Y., goes in for poetry now and then, mostly of the Waltmason style. Get this, for example:

> The Crescent is Southampton's place where you see ginger, vim and grace and drama, farce, and peril and fun, and nearly everything that's done upon this green and busy earth, from salty tears to rolling mirth, displayed upon the magnet screen; life rolling onward, scene by scene.

And this:

> The Crescent, where you bide a wee:
> It gives you films of mirth and glee.
> The Crescent, where the villain chews;
> It serves to drive away the blues.

It doesn't say what the villain chews, but going on general dope, he probably eats the scenery.

They change the form of the program, apparently to suit the paper stock in hand, but they hold to the general plan of eight-point full face caps for titles and lower case of the same for description. Twelve-point caps indicate unusual merit and it takes a five-reeler to rise to eighteen or better. This does not hold down the display, however, and is better than mixed type where much matter is to be run. Most of the copy is home made because whoever gets it out knows how to write.

Bad and Then Some.

A correspondent sends in the program of a western house with some items marked. The top line reads "Highest class productions." That's all right, but it doesn't match up with this line for "The Painted Lady":

> One of the best. Even the board of censors hesitated on passing it.

That sort of English matches up with another paragraph that runs:

> One of the sweetest stories that has packed them in everywhere.

And this is just the type of manager who yells the loudest when some one starts a local censorship; not that the "Painted Lady" is as bad as she is painted here, but because of the deliberate attempt to pander to a supposed desire for the sensational.

Not in Harmony.

John Nelson, of the Grand opera house, Sudbury, Ont., sends in a stock Christmas card in green and red with his added greeting in the blackest sort of ink in a heavy face gothic. That would be excellent work in some connections, but it is too severe and too black to harmonize with the rest of the card and the printer has spoiled the whole effect. An engravers' shaded would have been just the thing, run with a light impression. We have been working the face on our own stationery lately and with a first-class ink and an impression not too heavy it gives a copper plate effect that at first glance would puzzle even an expert. With too much ink it looks like a battered inline, but properly worked it is just the thing for announcements of this sort. The gothic is good in its place, but a heavy gothic is not in place on a card otherwise worked in color.

How About It?

Paramount Pickings has concluded the series of letters on management. We hope that they are considering our suggestion that they be reproduced in book form. They are worth it.

Clip This.

Here's another useful paragraph for program or newspaper work, contributed by W. C. Quimby, of Zanesville, though it does not seem to be original. It can be changed very slightly to serve at any time in the year:

> Of all human achievements, surely the motion picture most unerringly expresses that idea of service to our fellow men which is the spirit of Christmas. Without regard to creed or sect, to all mankind it carries a single message of life and love and laughter. Therefore, at this season of rejoicing, let us especially give thanks that we, as exhibitors, are enabled to play such a part in promoting the happiness of those whom we serve. For we are something more than tradesmen; beyond consideration of value received, we daily give, by the very nature of our work, new cheer to our fellow men. And to do that is to fulfill, in the highest degree, the spirit of Christmas.

Mr. Quimby uses the Hennegan colored program blanks and does not crowd his announcements. He does not have to, since he plays features, but even at that he might load down with type—though he doesn't.

Anyone Can.

What has been done can be done, and plenty of exhibitors have lifted their houses out of the five cent rut without getting nervous prostration. R. W. Hanke, of the Studio, Bridgeport, for example, writes:

> I am a fighter for higher admissions. You have probably noticed reference to the same in some of my programs. It may interest you and some brother exhibitors to know that a little more than a year ago I started as a straight five cent house, but have gradually worked over to four ten cent nights and two fifteen cent nights and now I am fighting for a third fifteen cent night. We are not open on Sundays.

It was not done abruptly and arbitrarily, but through a campaign of education, gradual advance and improved offerings. How it is done is exemplified in this clipping:

> AN EXPERIMENT.
>
> On Wednesday, Jan. 6th, Matinee and Evening we will offer you the first of one long promised "treats." We are firm believers in the quality of PARAMOUNT PICTURES and know that they cannot be beaten, but we also know of some pictures that will equal any PARAMOUNT. This is one of them, too good to let pass by, and too good for a 10 cent admission. However true to our promise we will present this and other masterpieces for 10c., matinee and evening, because we do not wish to burden you with too many 15c. shows. This one, the first, will be a Wm. A. Brady production of "The Pit," in 5 parts, from the great stage triumph featuring Wilton Lackaye in his original role, supported by Gail Kane and Milton Sills. Remember this is an experiment. "The Pit" is an expensive production, costing us the same as Paramounts; we are running a matinee to help pay expenses. If the experiment proves a sucess from a financial standpoint (there is no question of its success as entertainment) we will repeat it with other productions of equal merit.

In the Christmas program, on the sixth page, we do not like the crowded announcement of coming releases. It is solid eight point full face with the titles in all caps, and a person has to take a day off to puzzle it out. Half as many titles in tabular form would be better because these would be read.

A better punch is contained in this extract from the back page:

> We greet you in the evening of a new year. Undoubtedly 1915 will bring great changes in the production of photoplays. The Studio is looking forward to the greatest success in its career. We have been victorious in the past because we have fought for higher standard of production. We have persisted in our efforts to offer the public nothing but the best, this effort necessitated higher admissions, these two—higher admissions and quality photoplays, go hand in hand—one is the outcome of the other. Many have disputed this fact, some still fail to see it; those few we may neglect. The day of the term "moving pictures" and its friend the 5 cent admission is past. We are entering the dawn of a new era, that of—better photoplays; finer theaters and higher admission prices. In 1915 the Studio will offer the best and biggest things in the photoplay world. Nothing is too good for us—and you.

But No Program.

Justin J. Kramer, of the new Grand theater, Dayton, Ohio, issued a twenty-four page booklet for the opening of his house with plenty of chat about everything but the program. He did not even tell the class of stuff he would run. We think this a mistake. Some hints should have been given, particularly in these days when patrons have come to know brands and stars.

Too Much.

The Lyceum Theatre, Monticello, N. Y., sends in a two page circular letter it has been sending its patrons. They write:

> Mr. Richardson—I am enclosing a letter and blanks which we gave ou about a week ago. I know that this dope should go to Mr. Sargeant, but I don't feel that it is worth printing and am only sending it along to show him that we still cling to the idea that "no opposition" most certainly must not be construed to mean "there never will be opposition." What we are trying to do is to impress on our people here that we are doing everything we can for them without opposition, and we are getting that thought into circulation while we have a clear field. Then, when opposition does raise its threatening head all we have to do is to recall these here remarks to their minds and clinch it with another letter just a mite stronger in character. In the meantime giving them the best and being able always to prove that we have been giving them the best. And there you are. "Ladies and Gentlemen: You know what sort of treatment you received when I was alone in the field. If I am forced to the wall do you know what sort of service you will get from the other fellow? Don't exchange a certainty for something worse than doubtful. (In other words, better stick to the man you know than to tie up to one you don't know, etc.). Monticello can only support one showshop. Let me be IT."

The idea is all right, but the form letter is too long. It is set in solid ten point and runs two pages. No one is going to read the entire letter unless he is snowed in somewhere and has no other reading matter. A tenth as many words in snappy sentences would have told as much and would have been better. It means a lot to Mr. Guimond, but he should carry in mind the fact that others are less intensely interested and will not take the time to wade through all of the matter—and yet he is going to write another one. It would be better not to. Tell it in your program and on the screen, a bit at a time. Tell it in your newspaper advertising. Get up and make a three-minute talk to the audience now and then, but do not ask anyone to read a two page letter and then take an encore. It can't be done and it is straining the friendship of a hitherto loyal patronage.

Quite a Lot.

Rossiter and O'Connell of the Edgewood, New Haven, Ct., send in a number of card programs and offer to exchange samples with other managers. Some of the copy is good, about the best idea being the advertisement of a gala week with a calendar for that month and a fist pointing to the particular week. It would have been better yet in two colors, the special week and first being in red with the catchline "every day a red letter day next week." It is the only specimen they show that gives the proper attention to dating. Most of it is merely "week of" and then the same old "Monday," "Tuesday," "Wednesday," and so on. Every day should be dated, no matter where it occurs nor how often repeated. On this bill the day and number of reels is in full face and the attraction in roman. You have to look closely to catch those eight point titles. The titles, too, should have gone into full face, and a larger point than the day.

One fault with this card is that it looks like a blotter—and isn't.

There is nothing pulling in a card with a cut of Uncle Sam and "A Yankee Doodle Show Run by the Yankee Doodle Boys." There is no argument there and nothing save an underline of war views to suggest what a Yankee Doodle show is. It uses up a cut they may have had handy, but it would have been better had they given the cut to some poor printer. They do not seem to get much snap into their work, being content to state the names of some players and the titles, and they seldom play up the titles.

Gives a Postcard.

The Mecca theater, Dayton, Ohio, managed by R. C. Krapf, issues a folder, one sheet of which is a private mailing card with a cut of the house and a space for a message, the card being 3½ by 8½. Of the four remaining pages the house takes one and sells three. It might pay them to buy some of that extra space themselves, though, so far as the week is concerned they get out an intelligent and well-set program something like this:

> Save these Programs, FIVE of them are good for ONE FIVE CENT ADMISSION
>
> Monday, Dec. 14th, 1914
>
> The third eposide of THE MASTER KEY, A Redskin Reckoning, 2 reel Indian drama. When their Wives Joined Forces, and Pathe Weekly.
>
> Matinee at 2 p m. Admission 5c
>
> Tuesday, Dec. 5th
>
> ONE OF MILLIONS, a Shubert feature in 4 acts of gripping, forceful photoplay, featuring Laura Sawyer. Also Billie Ritchie in "Partners in Crime"—some comedy.
>
> Matinee at 2 p. m. Admission 10c

Starting In.

The Opera House, Atoka, Okla., is starting in with a program and sends the first issue, a stiff brown cover and four white pages inside printed on one side only. As they are tied with red ribbon, as well as being wire stitched, perhaps they are used for door knobs as well. It costs $15 for 500, which is entirely too much for a job, even in a country town. For that price better stock should have been provided for the inside pages and a better job of typesetting done. It would be better to discard the heavy cover stock and use a good white stock throughout; a stock that can be printed on both sides without showing through. Then the three inside right-hand pages should be given to the program, two days to a page, the days should be dated and not set in the margin, a more intelligent display should be given by the printer and a little more care in the press work. Too much ink was used for this first issue and the cover smudged.

As it stands the program pages are too black, because the heavy type is crowded together almost into a solid mass. The lines should be opened up and a lighter face used for the work if they have it, if not, cut down the players' names. We should like to see later issues.

THE PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

INQUIRIES.

Questions concerning photoplay writing addressed to this department will be replied to by mail if a fully addressed and stamped envelope accompanies the letter, which should be addressed to this department. Questions should be stated clearly and should be typewritten or written with pen and ink. Under no circumstances will full manuscripts or synopses be criticised, whether or not a fee is sent therefor.

A list of companies will be sent if the request is made to the paper direct and not to this department, and a return, stamped envelope is inclosed.

At the Inquest.

CHANGING back to the Savoy got the Inquesters out on time because here the slide is run announcing the closing reel. But a wet night seemed to have a depressing effect on the attendance and only nineteen gathered in the Morgue, including Clarence Storm, the man who was going to curl up and die, but didn't. From what he said it was evident that he has not yet learned to look at a plot from all sides. One comedy, for instance, was a funny one about a drunken Chinaman, but utterly spoiled because the soused Celestial was permitted to kiss a lot of school girls of kissable age. Most of the plots he told of were similarly damned through a lack of thorough searching and the Coroner used his experience to seek to drive home the lesson that every aspect of the plot should be looked at. Marc Edmund Jones told how a recent Mutual was evolved, taking the original theme and working it up and then away from it to the story that actually had been produced, and Miss Maibelle Heikes Justice called attention to the Kalem, "The Stolen Ruby," which was not a part of the night's program, but which, from its original manner of handling, had strongly impressed her. The story virtually consists of two narratives linked by a little straight action, a novel form of getting the idea over. In the plays seen at the Savoy there was little to be said. A Victor dried up about 800 feet out, and an Imp was still born, while a Keystone was funny in spots, but the spots were duplicated too often to get more footage than the 500 foot idea could supply. The next meeting will be February 1 at the Savoy.

Out.

A. W. Thomas is no longer a member of the Photoplay Authors' League, following the action of the Board of Control at a recent meeting.

His most recent advertising hints that if you enroll in his course you'll have a chance to have him help you in the Thanhouser contest.

Squaring Crime Stories.

Professor Robert Wilson Neal, whose Short Stories in the Making has lately been added to the limited list of useful books for photoplay students, points to one clever solution of a problem that seems to face authors each day: squaring gratitude with justice and the sense of fitness of things. He says:

> Fine judgment and careful management are needed in plots that turn on incidents of violence and crime. The story that does not clearly suggest moral payment by the criminal for his crime, is itself fundamentally immoral, therefore unworthy. A weakness of this sort shows in many filmed stories.
>
> A neat example of plotting that avoids any such effect is to be found in the film stories on page 558 of the M. P. World for January 23—the Eclair drama "Cancelled."
>
> The situation, just before the outcome of the plot is revealed is this: Emrick, an influential man, owes a debt of friendship to Duncan, an outlaw. Duncan is taken prisoner; severe punishment is certain. Emrick, as an able lawyer, doubtless might procure his release or at least interfere with the operation of justice.
>
> At this point is the pitfall for the inconsiderate author or director. For the sake of a little sentimental pleasure, Duncan might be saved at the expense of social order—the criminal might be shown escaping the effects of his own misdeed. But the Eclair story does not show this.
>
> Instead, it is so managed that "after a touching meeting, Duncan is taken to jail, while Emrick promises to see that the outlaw's family shall never want."
>
> There is an outcome that satisfies the requirements of morality as well as of sympathy. Our sympathies are relieved because Duncan will have the comfort of knowing that his family is provided for; our sense of fairness is satisfied because Emrick makes a return for the kindness done him; and yet our sense of moral law is not violated by seeing a criminal escape the consequences of misdoing.
>
> Any outcome that shows the failure of moral justice makes the story itself immoral. In this result, the outcome is the vital part of the plot.

In its most common form this theme relates that the desperado has saved the Sheriff's life and later the Sheriff is called upon to apprehend the lawbreaker. The author thinks that he raises up a most dramatic situation in the question as to whether the Sheriff proves an ingrate or foresworn. Too often the situation is irritating rather than appealing. Professor Neal has lifted from the Stories of the Films an example which as nearly as is possible gives satisfaction without violating a sense of the unities.

Bill Is Busy.

Tastes differ. William Lord Wright seems to like Chicago. At any rate he is there for an indefinite number of weeks doing some special work that will help out and at the same time storing up information that will help his readers later on. Incidentally, there is a nice transaction with a cashier on a certain day a week. And Bill is living on Broadway.. There is just one Broadway, and Willord knows it is not in Chicago. The point is that Bill not only knows how to tell you how to do it, but if he has to he can jump in as overflow man and do it himself. We know some alleged teachers who can't.

Yes.

Capt. Leslie T. Peacocke is not a comedy writer, but a recent letter to Newark Town Talk, in which he passionately urges Herman E. L. Eyer to support Bill Wright in his fight against the schools, is supremely funny, in view of the fact that he is a "consulting editor" of the A. W. Thomas school, into which the aforesaid William Lord Wright recently blew a hole as big as a house.

Those Inquiries.

It is not VERY often that inquirers apologize, but a high-school Professor of English recently added, "I daresay that you have answered these questions many times in your department, but please be lenient. I am a new reader of your paper."

It is precisely that there are new readers being constantly added that we are willing to repeat the old answers over and over again, and it is partly on this account that replies are sent by mail. We are always a little more than glad to reply to any question intelligently asked. It is only the boob questions, such as "I have written a story; where can I sell it?" that coaxes our pet goat off the lot. If you really want to know, and show you'll do something with it when you do know, you are even welcome to ask how many scenes there are to the reel.

Laugh Stuff.

Lately a man who was projecting a school and who had a magazine job sent out letters, ostensibly asking what the market was, but in reality looking for letters that could be reproduced in his school advertisement. Phil Lang was one of the editors queried. His reply was to the effect that they were buying stuff, but that the fake schools dumped so much rot into the office that the Kalem company saw little in the mail worth while. Then he went on to tell a few more things about the schools. The letter was not reproduced in the booklet. And the joke of it is that Mr. Lang had no idea that a school was being projected. He just told what he thought.

Perhaps.

A form letter of the Story Revision Company, of Smethport, Pa., opens with this paragraph:

> As the eminent writer, Mr. W. W. Sargent, aptly stated in a recent issue of Moving Picture World, "The film critic is springing up all over the country." Mr. Sargent further states that most critics "give false encouragement to the incompetent to 'string them along' as long as possible." Of course, he acknowledges that there are a few exceptions to this rule. The Story Revision Company is one exception.

We had not previously heard of this company, but noting a statement that they can revise and make salable an author's idea, we would add we do not believe that this is one of the exceptions. The demand is for good ideas. We do not believe that revision, no matter how elaborate nor by whom made, will help in the least degree. We will go further and express our belief that no company can market a story to better advantage than the author himself and that with one possible exception, where a magazine backs up the efforts of the agents, the agent cannot sell at all, since most companies will not knowingly deal with agents.

A statement that "hundreds of worthy manuscripts are refused every year, simply because of some defect in technique" is equally untrue. It is idea and not technique that sells. Technique is useful merely as a means of properly presenting this idea, and the good idea will show in spite of faulty technique.

It is said that a certain type of person is born at the rate of one a minute. Traps to catch them seem to originate at a rate of one every thirty seconds.

Suiting Studios.

Dash wants between sixty-five and a hundred scenes to a reel. Blank wants not more than forty. What are you going to do about it?

If you are certain that you can write exactly to suit Dash, write reels in sixty-five scenes or over. If you are positive that you can sell nine-tenths of your stuff to Blank, do not go over forty. If you are not certain, write your stuff in as many scenes as may be called for; not using an excessive number. If Blank likes the idea they will cut out a few scenes. If Dash wants it they will find it easy to make two close-ups and three straights of a single scene, and that's the way they get their high numbers. Don't get so feverish about exact needs. Write really good stuff and the number of scenes will take care of itself.

Typewriters.

Lately we said that five-dollar typewriters did not help the sale of a story, and that even the thirty-five-dollar sort was apt to be regarded with suspicion. And right away a lady looks knowing and reminds us that about a year ago we said the $35 machine would do. That's as close as some people can get to a fact. What we did say a year ago was, that a good enough second-hand hundred-dollar machine could be bought for about $35. They still can, but they do work that looks like real typewriting and not like one of the things you can cuddle in your lap. Enlarging, the lady says "reading between the lines leaves the impression that the script readers feel above reading a script from a $35 machine." That is not it. Reading right on the line, the script reader knows that the real, honest-to-goodness writer has a real machine and not a substitute. He has one because he needs it in his business. He is apt to feel that the possession of a makeshift argues that the person sending in the story has not yet arrived at the point where ability both requires a good machine and enables the purchase.

Wouldn't you, yourself, argue that a baker could make better bread with a proper plant than a butcher could, turning out an occasional batch in a Dutch oven? It's the same idea precisely.

Now He Knows.

For a couple of years we have had a friendly correspondent who has seemed to think that our objection to correspondence schools was based on the fact they might hurt the sale of our text book. He took a course and, being intelligent, got some good out of it, because he could separate the chaff from the wheat. He could not realize that it was the methods of the school, the pitiful petty graft to which we objected, but now he writes:

> Do you know I have often thought that you were a bit hard on the schools? You will doubtless remember my telling you long ago that I took a course and I certainly got the worth of my money. I found about the best in the country at the time—the man actually knew something—and I studied his stuff forward and backward, I dived under it and soared over it and ran all around it so that I got every ounce he had to offer. It wasn't good enough to bring me success—I never gained success until I hooked up with a certain practical writer you have heard of—but, as I said before, I got my money's worth, and so I have always had a kind of sneaking notion that you were a bit of a crank about schools.
>
> BUT,—
>
> I have changed my mind. The awakening gave me a heartache, but it did the business. The story is a little human document that will make you more firm, if possible, in your stand against the schools. Let me tell you about it.
>
> The other day a woman came to the office to see me. She was old and very poor. Her seamed and wrinkled face told a story of a life full of hardship, suffering and trouble. Her poor, pitiful, bony hands spoke eloquently of the bitterest kind of drudgery just to live. She was not strong and she was plainly embarrassed at interviewing me, a mere cub writer.
>
> She had a cheap tablet in which she had written the synopses of two stories (?) and a few scenes of each. It was very, very poor—no plot, no development, no climax, every third word misspelled—all utterly impossible.
>
> You must not judge her too harshly. She was not altogether to blame. She is a widow and her life is hard indeed. Only a short time ago a lying ad caught her eye—"Anybody can write them," "Lack of education no bar," "No previous experience needed," etc., etc. The poor soul saw a possible chance to make her life easier, the ad made it all seem so simple, and she wrote for information. They had made her an offer—a SPECIAL offer—of the course for $10, payable in installments with each lesson. But $10 was an awful sum to her. Even in installments, it meant bitter sacrifice, longer hours of work, a harder life in every way to a poor soul whose life was already hard enough, God knows. Did I know about the school and would I advise her?
>
> I knew that there were some pretty mean men in the world, but honest to goodness, I didn't know that anyone was so low as to steal the money from a poor, ignorant, struggling widow like her. A grave robber is a gentleman, a burglar is a hero and a highwayman is an angel straight from heaven beside a man so contemptible as to deceive and despoil a woman like this. Her letter had told her troubles to the school man—he could not plead ignorance of her condition or situation. But in spite of her evident need, this harpy had written back, making her a SPECIAL offer to entice the poor soul to spend her time and money—her money bought with drudgery—on something he absolutely knew would bring her nothing but heartbreaking disappointment.
>
> I scarcely knew how to undeceive her, so I just told her my own experience. I explained that I had a college education, that I had taught, that I had been a great reader with a natural hunger to write, that I had an excellent memory and had studied pictures long and faithfully. Then I went on to explain that with all these advantages, it had taken me almost a year before I sold a thing and almost two years before I gained any established position in the business.
>
> "O, I couldn't afford to give that much time to it," she said. " I have to work hard. If I could do it in a few weeks as the advertisement said, it would be a great thing for me. But I cannot afford to spend the money to go to the shows and to buy the picture magazines as you do."
>
> She thanked me for saving her from the terrible mistake of throwing away her ten dollars and went away. It was not till she was gone that I remembered that I had not got her name or the name of the school. I had been so full of pity that I had neglected to make the simplest inquiries. I sincerely trust that it was not my friend, McIntyre, who was doing this. Yet I am bound to say that I do not see how any school could make ends meet without accepting the incompetents. I like to think of ——— as a gentleman, but it looks to me as if his business was a dead giveaway.
>
> So I am "Off of" the schools. I am indeed sorry that I ever did you the injustice, even in thought, of thinking you were a crank about the matter. It is impossible to be too hard on those fellows who indiscriminately accept the halt, the lame and the blind for soldiers in this army. I only wish there was some practical way to stick them for their deception of such people as my poor old woman.

It is not so much the school course that is objectionable, though it cannot teach the pupil much, since there is little that can be taught. It is the luridly misleading advertising, the creation of the impression that anyone can write plays that not only swindles those who can illy afford to part even with the minimum fees, but sends others into the field almost with a feeling of contempt for the simple art that "anyone" can master. They do not master it because they never try, and they hurt the chances of earnest pupils.

Sticking.

One author writes in a daze of surprised delight that after two years of work he has sold his first script, and for fifty dollars.

Another, a woman, says "I smiled to myself when I read about the chap who has written fifty-four scripts and wants to give up. On New Year"s day it was just three years since I started in to write. Up to date I have sold four; one the first year, a synopsis the second year and two within the past three months. Better still, the editors are beginning to take notice of my work."

This correspondent has to do much of her writing late at night, but she keeps on, and so she is coming into her own, and her success will be the more lasting for the three years' practice work.

On the other hand another woman writer wants to know all about selling on synopsis as she doesn't want to take the trouble to work out a script if the idea is not good; never realizing that perhaps the development of the action will show her what is good and bad, and why. She is too lazy to gain lasting success unless she mends her ways. And to cap the climax she opines that her five-dollar, all-cap typewriter is plenty good enough, and she smiles with superiority over a recent suggestion that a toy typewriter was apt to hurt sales.

Spelling.

Last week Mayme Fickes sent in a practice story; a synopsis. She spoke of her players going to the "capital," later on she spoke of them in the "capitol." We had to sit tight to avoid going out and sending her a wire of congratulation. When her people were in the city that was the seat of government, they were in the "capital." When they went up to the building that housed the government, she changed the spelling and had them in the "capitol."

Sure you know it, too. BUT DO YOU USE IT? The city is the "capital" and the building is the "capitol," but when you get busy writing you forget and spell it all the same—at least, most everyone has in the stories we've seen in the last five years. Let's forget the capitol and capital and travel.

You go into a police station. There is a man at the desk. What is he? It is no compliment to say he is a "sargent" because he is not. He is a "sergeant."

A man has a strong emotion. Is he "affected" or "effected"? Ninety-nine times out of a hundred he is "effected." Look it up in the dictionary. People who are otherwise intelligent use this. We have three college graduates who say "effect" when they mean "affect."

If you can't spell, what makes you think you can write?

Comfort Stuff.

If you know that you are bad, there is still hope for you, and it may help to know that some of the supposed live ones are just as bad. In a recent section of Elaine a detective can tell from the non-committal mark of a hypodermic syringe that Elaine has been in the twilight sleep and has an antidote in his pocket. Har! Har! (Business of coarse laughter.) In a recent script submitted by a man who knows he's good, a detective "intuitively" knows that the accused is innocent and the accuser is the guilty man and goes out and makes the pinch on the hunch. And a very recent universal editor (hired by the brains, etc.) sent another company a five reel script with a total of eight scenes.

Honest you are not as rotten as some of those "reputation" fellows.

Understands.

Now and then we do get a pat on the head. A recent writer says:

> My first impression of you was of a "got there" who took great delight in rubbing it in to us, "want to be" fellows. When I brushed the cobwebs from my brain my opinion of you changed. Rub all you like, for the more thorough the massage, the better the circulation.

We are glad that now and then a chap does see that smashing stuff home is better than colorless trash that reads well but does not help.

Technique of the Photoplay

(Second Edition)

By EPES W. SARGENT

Not a line reprinted from the first edition, but an entirely new and exhaustive treatise of the Photoplay in its every aspect, together with a dictionary of technical terms and several sample scripts.

One hundred and seventy-six pages of actual text.

Special chapters on Developing the "Punch," Condensing the Script, Writing the Synopsis, Multiple Reel Stories, Talking Pictures, Copyrights, etc.

In cloth, two dollars. Full leather, three dollars.

By mail postpaid. Add ten cents if registration is desired.

Address all Orders to

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

17 Madison Avenue, New York City

Projection Department

Conducted by F. H. RICHARDSON

Manufacturers' Notice

IT IS an established rule of this department that no apparatus or other goods will be endorsed or recommended editorially until the excellence of such articles have been demonstrated to its editor.

Important Notice.

Owing to the mass of matter awaiting publication it is impossible to reply through the department in less than two or three weeks. In order to give prompt service, those sending four cents, stamps (less than actual cost), will receive carbon copy of the department reply, by mail, without delay. Special replies by mail on matters which cannot be replied to in the department, one dollar.

The first seventy-four questions are now ready, and printed in neat booklet form. They may be obtained by remitting 25 cents, money or stamps, to the editor. Every live, progressive operator should get a copy. You may be surprised at the number of questions you cannot answer without a lot of study. Canadians should send P. O. M. O., or coin only.

Question No. 70.

Best answer will be published, and the names of others sending in replies of excellence will appear in the Roll of Honor. Theatre managers looking for high class men will do well to watch the Roll of Honor.

It is possible to substitute a motor generator set, called a d.c. to d.c. economizer, for rheostative resistance? The generator of such a set is so wound that a projection arc can be successfully handled without any resistance in series therewith. There being no resistance, is the energy taken from the line all reproduced in light at the arc? Is waste eliminated by these sets? Using a rheostat, there is a certain and large difference in wattage taken from the line and wattage at the arc. Using the above named economizer, how does the wattage taken from the line compare with the wattage at the arc? Explain fully.

Roll of Honor on Question No. 64.

The Roll of Honor consists of Joseph H. M. Smith, Fort Worth, Texas; G. D. Bullock, Hobart, Indiana; J. I. Roberts, Nashville, Tennessee, and George E. Broome, Sapulpa, Oklahoma.

I have selected the reply of Brother Broome as being best for publication.

Reply to Question No. 64.

By George E. Broome, Sapulpa, Okla.

The Question:

How would you arrange your wall shutters so they would drop automatically within two seconds of the starting of a fire either at the machines or the film box? How would you arrange to carry away the smoke? Explain in detail.

The Answer:

The openings for each machine should be provided with gravity shutters, either of sheet metal not less than No. 12 gauge, or of hard asbestos board, not less than ¾ of an inch in thickness. If the latter be used it should be held flat, and prevented from warping by having an X of ¼" by 1" iron bolted to one side. When closed these shutters should overlap the openings on all sides by at least 2 inches. They must be arranged to slide in metal grooves without any binding. These grooves should extend from 2 inches below the lower edge of the opening to at least twice the height of the opening, plus 4 inches. At both the top and bottom of the grooves there must be stops which will limit the action of the shutter. The lower stop must be padded with rubber, felt, or some other equally efficicacious sound deadening material. If this be not done the shutter will fall with a clatter, instantly attracting the attention of the audience to the operating room, the very last thing to be desired in case of fire. The shutters should be held normally open by one master cord, strong, but fine and very combustible. This cord should contain 160 degrees Fahr., fusible links, so arranged that there is a link directly over, and within 6 inches of each machine aperture, and directly over and within 12 inches of the film box and directly over and within 12 inches of the rewinder, the links being held in place by a properly designed spreader made of metal.

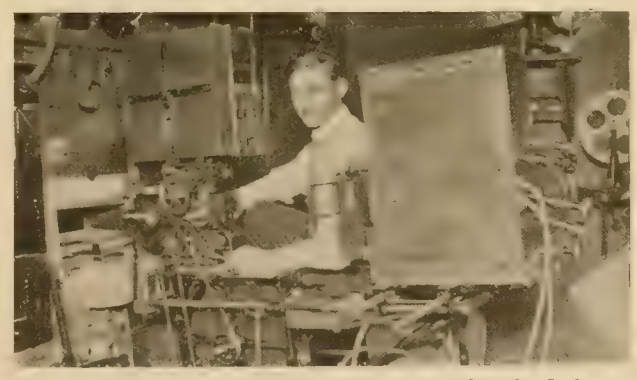
There should be a vent pipe from the ceiling of the operating room to the open air, preferably through the roof, this pipe being designed to allow the smoke and gases of the burning film to escape. The vent pipe should not be less than 13 inches in diameter. (Too small unless a fan is used.—Ed.) If the theater is located in a building where the vent flue cannot be run through the roof by reason of offices or rooms above, then it should be run from a point as near the ceiling as possible to the open air at the most available point. This vent pipe must be thoroughly insulated from all wood-work and other inflammable material as it may get very hot in case of fire. Where the vent pipe runs through the roof it should extend at least 3 feet above the roof level and have a properly designed hood to keep the rain out. If the opening be on the side of the building then care should be taken that the blaze from an operating room fire cannot come into contact with inflammable material on the side of the building or the building adjoining. The vent pipe should have a damper hinged and weighted to remain normally open, and should only be closed by means of a cord attached to the master cord which holds the shutter so that the instant the master cord burns and drops the shutter it will also automatically open the vent flue pipe.

[I cannot very well criticise Brother Broom for having recommended the open vent flue, since in this he has simply followed my own teachings. However, I have finally come to the conclusion that, while there is always a danger that the vent flue fan will not be running when a fire occurs, still there is also a danger that the draft in a natural-draft vent flue will be downward instead of up, therefore I believe a fan in the vent flue is to be advised as against the open flue. Where the fan is used the flue should be 16 inches in diameter and the fan as large as will fit in the opening. Where a fan is used it is hardly practical to install a shutter in the pipe, since it is absolutely necessary that the fan be kept running at full speed all the time, and in winter this is likely to call for glass in the observation and lens ports, else the draft through the operating room is likely to be too strong for comfort and even for health. I am of the opinion that film links in the master cord are to be preferred as against even 160° links. When there is a fire every second the shutters remain up increases the danger, since it is some confirmed idiot in the audience once catches sight of the blaze or smoke and yells fire—good night! The film links will burn in two almost instantly, whereas a 160° link will require an appreciable time before they will let go.—Ed.]

A Puzzle.

Levi Na Varre, Flint, Michigan, writes:

In the issue of December 26th, Mr. Leininger of Ohio wants to know why an operator should be posted on matters electrical, such as the action of dynamos and motors. Well, I do not think it is necessary he should know which way a dynamo will run by examining its connections, but he, nevertheless, should know something about generators and motor-generator sets, also how to measure wires, etc. I am having a little trouble just now. Am using a Fort Wayne compensarc and have a Powers rheostat to warm the carbons and burn craters on a new set. This is connected to my Six A machine lamp, and sometimes when I have a new trim and am using my rheostat, when I pull the carbons apart there is a big flash and a lot of smoke comes from it. What is the cause of this? Am enclosing photograph of my humble self at the Six A.



Well, Brother Na Varre, you do not tell me whether the flash was in the lamphouse or in the rheostat, presumably, however, it was in the lamphouse. Your data, however, are insufficient to form much of any idea of the difficulty. It sounds as if one of your carbons was grounded to the metal of the lamphouse, but if that was the case it ought to burn the metal away, or else the arcing would continue until a fuse let go. Also to accomplish that kind of a stunt it would have to be some ground. Inasmuch as this one occurs in a new trim it is also possible that both the lower and upper carbons strike the metal. That would produce your flash and smoke all right, but it would burn a hole in the metal—and there you are. You will have to send more data before I can locate your trouble.

Benefited Many Times.

Charles Breuning, St. Louis, Missouri, writes:

Just a few lines to show my appreciation of the many benefits I have received through the department. My wife is a piano player for pictures and is naturally interested in the music department, while I am anxious to read the projection news. When the World came it was always a race to see who got it first. Finally, however, we compromised, by each buying a separate copy. Regarding Mr. Leininger's "About-to Bust" article, my idea is that he must have already busted and is still suffering from the explosion. I have read the department for two years and I fail to recall a single instance where the editor has even hinted at condemning an operator because he was not an electrician. He has merely been trying to point out the advantages of being an electrician, or at least of having some knowledge of the electrical end of the game. As Brother Leininger says "positively" and "absolutely" one would not condemn the great Angelo for not knowing the number of hairs in his brush, but, of course, in Angelo's case, if anything happened to the brush, as for instance the hairs falling out, he would have had ample time to go purchase a new one, in the improbable event he did not have another at hand, whereas in the operator's case when anything goes wrong with the electric equipment, if he cannot locate and remedy the trouble, at least temporarily, so as not to have the audience fretting and possibly turned out while awaiting the arrival of an electrician, where would he be? I won't dispute Friend Leininger's ability to project as good a picture as the best electrician-operator, but if current is taken from a motor generator set, or through a rectifier, or from an isolated plant, or, for that matter by any other system, where would Mr. Leininger be as against the electrician-operator in case something went wrong? I, myself, had an experience two years ago down in Oklahoma. A man had been trying to get his house open for two weeks, but owing to the incompetence of the operator was unable to do so. I was sent to the place from Oklahoma City and found the operator (?) trying to get an arc from a 60-volt generator with a 220-volt rheostat in series therewith, using all the resistance. There was an example of an operator who might be able to deliver the goods as long as everything ran along smoothly, but when things began bucking and kicking it was up to the manager to get an electrician to straighten them out. I am not an expert electrician, but am always willing to learn, and, believe me, what I do know about electricity comes in handy in the operating room. I am the proud possessor of both editions of the Handbook and let no opportunity to learn something pertaining to moving picture operating in its mechanical, electrical and optical branch slip by. In closing let me wish the department a happy and prosperous New Year.

Brother Breuning says a lot more, and it was all awfully good stuff too, but space limitations compelled me to cut part of it, though I did not like to a little bit. The letter speaks for itself and the brother talks sense. Friend Leininger's line of conversation was wrong, from any and every point of view, and I think in course of time he will himself realize that fact.

He Takes Liberties.

O. C. Hunt, Colorado Springs, Colorado, says:

It has been some time since anything from the Pike's Peak region appeared in the best magazine published, therefore, I take the liberty of sending you a few lines. Projection here is very good, as is also business. We have three regular picture theaters, the Odeon, Princess and Empress, and last, but by no means least, the Opera House, which caters to high-class vaudeville features, using the Marcus Loew circuit, two days a week, and also the legitimate shows; some mixture, but business is exceedingly good, so "we should worry." All we boys are going to join local 62, I. A. T. S. E., this coming Sunday, and by the time you get this we will be through riding the goat. The I. A. has a fine local here and we are glad to become members. Well, old scout, this is about all for this time, except a lot of good wishes for yourself and the World.

Glad to know you boys are in the I. A. and I trust you will use every endeavor to assist that organization in all its efforts for the good of the operator; that your energies will be used to protect the organization and to sustain and defend it in all that it does that is right, also that your voices will be raised in opposition to anything that it may do that is wrong. My compliments to the Colorado Springs boys; may their shadows never grow less. Will be glad to examine the device you speak of when it is completed.

Yes, That's the Truth.

From Wheeling, West Virginia, comes a letter which is too long to quote, and if I did quote it I might get the good friend into trouble. Briefly, however, he comments on the letter from the Montana brother who handed the projection in large cities, particularly Chicago, a bundle, recently, by calling attention to the fact that the operator is not always to blame for the poor work on the screen. He invites us to consider the fact that many operators are not given proper supplies, are compelled to work with wornout equipment, as well as not being provided with sufficient current to deliver high class work.

He also intimates that we should not blame the operator for poor projection, but place the blame on the shoulder of the manager.

Well, there is often a lot of truth in the brother's contention, yes. Undoubtedly I do occasionally blame the operator for things he should not be blamed for, but in a city like Chicago I take this position: the Chicago operators have a strong organization, but it is an organization which absolutely is not working along the right lines, and is therefore a hindrance rather than a help to the business as a whole, and is by no manner of means the benefit it could be to its own members. It is quite probable that many Chicago operators could not deliver good results on the screen if they wanted to, because of the fact they have not the proper equipment to do it with. Notwithstanding the criticism of our Montana friend, there are many high class operators in Chicago producing as good projection as can be seen anywhere, because in every body of men there are always some who take a pride in their work and who overcome all obstacles. It is also an undoubted fact that there are hundreds of operators in Chicago; and other large cities, who don't place good results on the screen for the very simple reason that (a) they don't know how; (b) they are too infernally lazy to apply what knowledge they do possess. (c) they don't care two whoops in the New Jerusalem about whether the results on the screen are good or bad so long as their little measley, piffling, twenty or twenty-five dollar pay check comes in, and it is also a fact that the Chicago union and many other unions have done little or nothing to improve the work of their members The cry has been more money, more money, more money! with which I thoroughly sympathize. But there has been little or no effort whatever to make the membership at large worth more money; nor has there been any attempt to either induce or compel the members to deliver projection that would be a credit to the union and form a basis upon which to rest the demand for really adequate salaries.

As I have time, time and again said, I believe in good salaries, and by good salaries I mean, in our large cities, from thirty to fifty dollars a week, with salaries of correspondingly smaller amount in small cities, but I also firmly and thoroughly believe in the operator educating himself in the technical end of his business and delivering the goods on the screen in return for his salary. I believe this to be the only solid foundation for both the individual operator and the business as a whole.

The Chicago union, as it has been conducted in the past, is a hindrance rather than a help to the men, in that its leaders have evidently sought to impress upon them the idea that there was only one thing need interest them, viz.: more wages, and these mistaken leaders have attempted to secure wage increase in various instances which have been brought to our knowledge by very questionable methods; also they have tried to put things over which had no basis in common sense, or right and justice. I think no one will accuse the editor of this department of not standing up for the rights of the operator, but, strange as it may seem to some, I am willing to concede that the manager, too, has a few rights, and that is a thing that the leaders of the Chicago union should recognize.

Am well aware of the opinion of a few of the Chicago members in regard to the editor of this department, but that has nothing to do with the case, as I believe many of the thinking men in the Chicago union realize. If the criticism had been of projection in any other city, would it alter the facts in the case? I rather think not.

From a Traveling Man.

John Hupery writes from Louisville, Kentucky:

I am neither operator or manager, but a traveling man picture fan. I never miss a copy of the Moving Picture World, and, strange as it may seem, am deeply interested in the projection department. Have your latest Handbook and think it wonderful. Will you kindly inform me as to the best method for looking over a town for a location. I do not feel quite confident to tackle that proposition as yet, therefore ask your help. Am a great lover of good projection. Why is it that, with all our big picture shows, one never sees a word in the newspapers about the boy who produces the show—who places it on the screen? They are running the Universal picture, "Damon and Pythias," here in Louisville now, and a wonderful production it is. I stepped in last evening and the way that picture was put on the screen was good for sore eyes. It was at Shubert's Masonic theater, and throughout the entire production the projection was superb. I was in every high-class house in this city, but projection, outside the Shubert, at the very best, is only fair. By inquiry of the Masonic theater manager I found Mr. Charles Siler of New York was the operator. The Universal ought to be proud to have a man like him putting on their show. Another thing. Are there no laws compelling a theater to put up a machine room large enough for an operator to work in? The one in question was on the mezzanine floor and I take oath it was not more than 4 x 6 x 6 feet high. The operator was stripped like a man-o-warsman in action, sweating like a mad bull but apparently happy, as he was singing to himself. But never for an instant did he allow a fault to appear in the projection. I intend to have a theater myself somewhere some day, and when I am ready to open I would like to get a man of Friend Siler's calibre. If you know of one I would be glad to have his name for future reference.

Now here is a report I like to get. My compliments to Brother Siler. When an outsider speaks of you thus you certainly must be delivering the goods. No use to give you the names of operators now, Neighbor Hupery, because there is no telling when you will want one, and the names I might give you now would probably not be of much use then. When you get ready let me know and I will see what I can do. Remember, however, that for high class men you will have to pay a high class salary; that is very largely the secret of the whole proposition. As to looking over a town, why it is exceedingly difficult to give you advice in that matter. It is local conditions that count. For instance: are the people accustomed to buying amusement; is the town scattered all over the kingdom-come, with poor sidewalks, so that in bad weather people could not get to the theater even if they wanted to; are the people fairly well and steadily supplied with money, or do they only have it once a month on pay day and are flat broke the rest of the time; can you get a suitable location where you get the transient as well as the family trade; can—but what's the use? I would have to take up pages of this paper to even name all the different equations which enter. I am afraid, Brother Hupery, you will have to be your own judge. I do not like to give advice on this subject anyhow, because if you fail you would blame me, whereas if you succeed you would probably praise yourself.

Operators Will Dance.

The editor is in receipt of tickets and an invitation to attend the reception and ball of the M. P. M. O., Local 244, I. A. T. S. E., Newark, N. J. I haven't much time to attend balls these days, but thank the boys cordially for their invitation, and trust they will have a howling good time.

I had the occasion to give the Newark men a jacking-up a few months ago, but that is sometimes necessary, even with the best organizations. There are good men over in Newark, but, as is the case everywhere else, there is always room for improvement, just the same as there is room for improvement in this department and in everything else in this vale of sorrow and tears.

I am glad to see the Newark boys are men enough not to hold a grudge because I landed on them when they were wrong. I will always do that, and, by the same token, I will be with them to the last ditch when they are right.

He Nearly Busted.

W. H. Shepard, Davenport, Washington, says:

> I noticed an "offering from Brother of Leininger of Akron, Ohio, and I nearly busted when I read what he was about to bust for. I just want to give the brother one little punch. I was an electrician for four years before I became in any way connected with projection. Personally I think what I know about electricity has helped me a lot in my work as an operator. There are little things connected with the outside work which often helps an operator in his work in the inside. That is all I want to say now, and would not have said that had not "father" Richardson left it to the fans.

Well, I don't know as father Richardson has any comment to make on this, therefore why make any?

More Film Injury.

W. T. Pugh, Boswell, Oklahoma, writes:

> Enclosed find two pieces of film, the short one being No. 1 and the long one No. 2. These samples have to do with "film injury," page 1229, November 28th, issue. This is the first difficulty I have had of the kind set forth in that article, and piece 1, I presume, is where the trouble first started, as that is where I first noticed the film had a tendency to leave the sprocket. The other piece is later on in the film, just before the sprocket begins to leave the holes, as described in the diagram on page 1229. It seems to me the injury has been done by the lower sprocket, as the machine lost its lower loop, and I would make another one by pulling the film back from the lower reel, and would have no further trouble. However, after cutting the two pieces I am sending out I had no further trouble. My machine is a Simplex, but I cannot say whether the injury was really done by it or before I received the film, though it lost the lower loop the first time it went through.

I am publishing this because the discussion ought to be kept up until the seat of this particular trouble is located. In this case one of the samples submitted has a bad patch near one end, but the trouble started before the patch was reached. There are what seems to be four lines of punctures, apparently made by the end of a sprocket tooth which has travelled over the film twice, both lines of indentations apparently being made by the same machine, consisting of two minute punctures a little more than 1/32 of an inch apart joined by a small cross bar. The indentation is on the emulsion side of the film. I am afraid I cannot offer any suggestions of value. However, I again ask operators to keep watch, and if you catch your machine doing anything of this kind, and you are sure it is doing it, then let us know the circumstances and the make of machine.

Found the Trouble.

Merritt Jones, Decatur, Alabama, writes:

> Noticed some time ago an operator was having trouble with his compensarc. I had the same difficulty with mine. It would get hot enough to burn your hand. I wrote the Fort Wayne Electric Company, but they could give me no satisfaction except to "send it in and have it overhauled." I went to work on it myself and discovered that the main line to the compensarc was badly grounded to the conduit, the conduit being grounded to the metal of the operating room. I remedied this and had no more trouble with the compensarc getting hot. We have the reputation of giving the best projection of any theater in a town of this size in Alabama. There are three theaters in this little village. I have been operating five years; doing my own repairs ever since I have been in the business and have not fallen down on anything up-to-date, though that is no reason why I should not fall sometime. I have a Powers Six A machine and a mirroid screen.

Well, brother, I don't quite get the idea. Perhaps I am thick-headed, but I do not see how a ground on the primary of the compensarc would cause the machine to heat. It would blow your fuses, yes. If the ground be on the secondary that may be something else. Very glad indeed to hear of your good report, and to know you are putting up the right kind of projection. Keep it up Brother Jones.

I Wonder.

Seattle, Washington, says:

> There is one phase of the lens matter which has not been given sufficient attention, viz.: Assuming too much knowledge of the subject on the part of the average operator. Spherical aberration is divided, following Seidel, into five classes. One of them is axial spherical aberration, which causes rays from the outer edge of the lens to come to a focus at different points than rays from near the center or axis of the lens. The attached sketch makes it very plain how vitally interested projection is > in the elimination of axial spherical aberration. Line A-A in both sketches is intended to represent the film picture to be illuminated. In the corrected lens the film gets the benefit of all the light, but only a part of it in the uncorrected one. The man who claims he got 25 per cent more light from the meniscus combination may not have been over estimating it a very great deal after all. Since we do not care about a minutely perfect image of the arc crater with the condenser, we are not much interested in the other four aberrations. In your comments on my article you are a little timid (and you make my remarks appear to be timid when they are not) on the extent to which this correction may be accomplished in practice. You should not expect "at least a partial" correction of this fault, but almost an entire correction. The co-efficient of axial spherical aberration, or the "aplanatic co-efficient," does not have to be determined for each lens, or for each focal length, but will be constant for a series of lenses of similar design, so that when once determined for the series to be used, the combinations may be calculated by formulas for the various focal lengths necessary in projection. I believe you have always placed too much emphasis on the absorption of light by glass. If you get your absorption data from photographic lens manufacturers it is quite a bit too high for the projection system, since a large portion of the rays absorbed are from the end of the spectrum chemically active on the photographic plate, but invisible, or nearly so, to the eye, and it is the visible portion of the spectrum with which we are concerned in our work. You are correct in pointing out the fact that there would be less reflection from the meniscus than from the plano. The same thing could be said in favor of using a plano instead of a bi-convex for the second lens of the combination.

Well, I wonder if axial spherical aberration can be practically eliminated in a projection system. My own impression is that Seattle is just a little bit ahead of time in making that assertion, because, as I understand it, the amount of spherical aberration depends so much upon the character of the glass, and even the surface of the lens, that unless we go into very expensive lenses it would, it seems to me, be quite difficult to secure identical results with different lots of lenses, and if this is true, then the calculation which Seattle proposes would not be of much value, or at least that is the way it looks to me. As to absorption of light by glass, my data was taken from a series of articles furnished by Mr. Martin of Pittsburgh, from actual photometric tests made by that gentleman under operating conditions, and published in the official paper of the American Society of Illuminating Engineers, and this is, or at least should be, authoritative. Yes, it is quite true that the same argument would hold as against the bi-convex lens, but remember the light strikes the rear lens at a heavy angle, whereas it is presumed to leave that lens in parallel lines, and hence would not meet the front surface of a bi-convex lens at nearly as heavy an angle. There is, of course, added loss of illumination, by reason of reflection, through using a bi-convex front lens, but there is also, or I think there is a very considerable correction of axial spherical aberration by using what is in effect a three lens combination. Come again, Seattle. I would like to have your comments on Brothers Arkin's and Griffiths' articles. We are dealing with a difficult subject, and it will, I believe, take the best efforts of all to arrive at the best results.

Boy Operator Dies.

A letter came recently containing clippings from Sioux City, Iowa, daily newspapers, giving an account of a fire in the Park Place theater, of that city. It seems, from the newspaper account, that Hillis Williams, a 17-year-old boy, who combined operating with peddling daily papers and going to school, was leaning out of the window talking to a girl when something happened inside and the film caught fire, whereupon, instead of leaving the magazine closed Williams, with more courage than sense, pulled the whole film out of the magazine and threw it on the floor. You can imagine what happened. Young Williams was overcome by the fumes and lost his life through suffocation. The paper ingenuously remarks: "He was a student at Morningside College; he carried a route for the Journal; he had been operator at the theater for nearly a year." I do not wish to criticise the boy, because he has paid the highest possible penalty for his foolishness, but the paper further says that Williams "lost his head," and that simply emphasizes the stand the editor of this department has long maintained as against the boy operator. He is more likely to get excited and "lose his head" than the man of mature years. If Williams had left the magazine of the machine closed there probably would not have been any damage done except to the projector itself. As it was, the operating room was gutted, and the student-paper-carrier-operator lost his life.

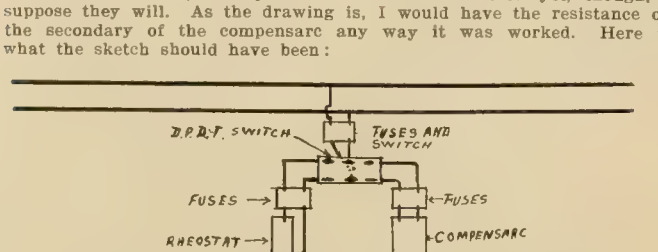
A Blunder.

When I looked at the diagram in "From This Neck of the Woods," page, 216, January 9th issue, I rubbed my eyes and rubbered again. Yes, I drew the thing myself, but must have been walking in my sleep when I did it. No, nobody has said a word about it—yet, though. I suppose they will. As the drawing is, I would have the resistance on the secondary of the compensarc any way it was worked. Here is what the sketch should have been:



What? No! I had not been looking on fermented grape juice, or even the extract of hops. Well, anyhow, I have beat you to it on the correction.

More on the Optical Subject.

S. Arkin, New York City, writes:

Referring to the article, "Griffiths vs. Arkin," November 21st issue, will say that I take it in the same spirit in which it was written. I did not expect everyone to agree with me exactly, but in the main both yourself and Mr. Griffiths seem to do so. You and the brother are surprised that a man who is not an operator should have a practical knowledge of projection. In order to explain this, optics is my side line only. What I really am engaged in is engineering, and in that capacity I have advised managers of moving picture theaters, and have met many operators and have exchanged views concerning practical projection. In criticising my article you say: "I cannot agree altogether with Brother Arkin on the size of the picture, because there are quite a number of equations which enter, the main ones being the wide range of width of auditoriums as compared to length." In reply to this, will say that, although my formula applies to houses where the width does not exceed 60 per cent. of the length, it can be safely used without modification even in places where the width equals the length, but for the benefit of those who like a big picture I will illustrate, by a practical example, how to adjust my formula for wide auditoriums. In issue of October 3d the question is asked: What size screen should be used in an auditorium 125 feet square? You say it should be 18 or 19 feet. Applying my formula we have $\frac{125}{20} = 6.25$. The square root of $6.25 = 2.50$ and $6 \times 2.50 = 15$ feet for the width of the picture. In order to adjust my formula for a house, the width of which is 100 per cent. that of the length, would be $\frac{100}{60} = 1.666$. The square root of 1.666 is 1.29; 15 feet, the width given in the straight formula, multiplied by 1.29, or $15 \times 1.29 = 19.35$. I would not advise the use of a 19.35 picture, as adjusted formula for width gives, but the 15-foot screen the length of the house formula gives, for the following reasons: In the first place the extreme side seats will not be used very often, and even when they are in order to give the 19.35 screen just as good an illumination as the 15-foot screen 67 per cent. more current would be necessary, and with the same current a 19.35-foot screen will have an illumination intensity of 67 per cent. less than a 15-foot screen. To support my contention I will say that the best moving picture theater in New York City is about 120 feet square, and the width of the picture is about 15 feet, and the illumination is the best I have ever seen.

Mr. Griffiths, in criticising my article, says, geometrical optics fail in practice, and in support of that view offers the following: "Taking the figures of Arkin in case 2: $F = 20.5$; $F_1 = 5.9$; slide carrier opening, 3 6/16; then 20.5 : 3 6/16 : : 5.9 : X where X is size of spot at aperture. Expressed decimally, $3\ 6/16 = 3.375$, which multiplied by $5.9 = 19.9$, and this divided by 20.5 gives us .92 as a spot at the aperture—less than one inch in diameter." In this case, however, Friend Griffiths has fallen into error. $20.5 \div 19.9 = .97$, while the width of the aperture is $15 \div 16 = .94$, hence the spot in my case is over 3 per cent. larger than the aperture, and as my mat is similar in form, or shape, to the aperture, the same ratio holds good for the diagonal and the height.

And now, Brother Griffiths, I will analyze a spot taken from your table. Let us take line 10 in the same. Focal length of objective is 5.75 and distance from aperture to condenser is 14.375, hence length of cone is equal to $5.75 + 14.375 = 20.125$, and, as you have made your table for a slide carrier opening 3×2.75, as used at present, the width of the spot is 20.125 : : 3 : : 5.75 : X, X = .86 inch; the height of the spot is 20.125 : 2.75 : : 5.75 : Y, F = .79 inch.

Spot per Arkin's data: Width = .97; in diagonal = 1.20 inch. Height = .71 inch.

Aperture of machine: Width = .94; in diagonal = 1.16 inch. Height = .69 inch.

Spot per Griffiths' table: Width = .86; in diagonal = 1.16 inch. Height = .79 inch.

In examining this table you can see, while my tabular data covers the aperture with about 3 per cent. to spare, Mr. Griffiths' tabular data does not cover the width, and wastes the light in the height of the picture. Friend Griffiths has the choice of shortening the distance from the condenser to the mat (film?—Ed.) and waste more light, or adopt a slide carrier opening, as I did, similar in shape to the aperture.

I think I have proven the case that geometrical optics do hold good in projection. Brother Griffiths, I hope, will take my few remarks in the same spirit in which I took his. His table is a masterpiece, considering he is a moving picture operator, and not an optician.

I will now comment on his formulas. Formula No. 1 should read: Formula for finding length of cone: Multiply the e. f. of the objective lens by 3½. (Not 4½, as in his article.)

Formulas No. 2 and 3 are correct as given, although Friend Richardson kicks about formula 3, and says: $\frac{1}{4.5} + \frac{1}{20} = \frac{1}{X}$ and then leaves the rest for somebody else to solve. Well, I will be the goat, and do the work. $\frac{1}{4.5} = (1 \div 4.5)$ .2222 and $\frac{1}{20} = (1 \div 20)$ .0500, therefore $.2222 + .0500 = .2722 = \frac{1}{X}$. If you wish to have both lenses of the condenser of equal focal length, then $.2729 \div 2 = .1361$ and the reciprocal of .1361 is $1 \div .1361 = 7.35$, which will be the focal length of each of the condenser lenses. But when the back condenser is a standard lens, a 5½ for example, then $1 \div 5.5 = .1818$ and $.2722 - .1818 = .0904$, the reciprocal of which is 11. Hence, the focal length of the second condenser must be 11 inches.

In reply to the question why I selected the 5.5 inch condenser, I would say, because a 5.5 inch condenser will bring more parallel rays from the arc to the second condenser. It is true that the way condensers are now made a 5.5 inch one would not be the ideal lens to use. I am now in correspondence with certain firms, and hope very soon to have condensers of such a shape that a 5.5 inch one will have no greater spherical aberration than an 8 inch one of the shape now in use.

I would not undertake to comment on this matter. I am, and will be for the next six months, engaged on some exceedingly important work, and I have not the time to get down and study this proposition as I would have to in order to make intelligent criticism. I, therefore, depend upon Brothers Griffiths, Arkin, James and La Grow to check up each other's work on optical matters, and I am sure they will do it, and do it much better than I could, too. Another thing: Friend Arkin makes use of reciprocals, and this is something that will be little understood by the average man. Two numbers are reciprocals of each other when their product is equal to one, thus, $.0904 \times 11 = 1$. In order to get the reciprocal of any number divide 1 by that number, thus $1 \div .0904 = 11$, and $1 \div 11 = .0904$. Now, if you divide 1 by the focal length of each condenser lens and add the two together and divide 1 by it you will get, as a result, the E. F. of the combination, thus: Take two 7½ lenses: $1 \div 7.5 = .1333$. Now, since both condensers are 7½, add .1333 and .1333, which makes .2666 and $1 \div .2666 = 3.75$, which is the E. F. of two 7½ lenses. It seems to me, however, that to make this entirely correct, the distance the lenses are apart must also be considered.

Honorary Member for Life.

You will all remember that I have spoken of Charlie Schneider, supply dealer at Springfield, Mass., and New Haven, Conn. Charlie is one of those Dutchman concerning whom our friend, the Swede, would say "ha bane one darned guid fallar."

Local Union No. 186, Springfield, Mass., has recognized that fact by making Brother Schneider an honorary member for life. Well, in the judgment of the editor, it was coming to Charlie all right, because he has been a mighty good friend to the Springfield boys.

OPERATORS Are you perfectly satisfied with the results you get on the screen?

The new second edition of the

MOTION PICTURE HANDBOOK FOR MANAGERS AND OPERATORS

420 Pages Illustrated

By F. H. Richardson

$2.50 Each Postage Paid

will be the standard textbook on the subject for many years.

Address all orders and remittances to

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

17 Madison Avenue, New York City.

Comments on the Films

Licensed.

THE MISJUDGED MR. HARTLEY (Essanay), Jan. 19.—Adapted from The Munsey Magazine. A comedy with no unreasonable action in it to get over. It is finely produced with a good cast made up of Bryant Washburn, Ruth Stonehouse, Helen Dunbar and Mabel Forrest in the leading roles. It is a clever case of mistaken identity, which results finally in a happy marriage. There is much to cause laughter. A clean, meritorious comedy, that will make good on any program.

OLIVE'S MANUFACTURED MOTHER (Edison), Jan. 19.—Ninth of "Olive's Opportunities" series. By Mrs. Wilson Woodrow. It is a picture play filled with sensational scenes, in which a woman, who leads a double life, is imposed upon Olive as her mother, by her enemies. Mabel Trunnelle does some effective work, supported by an able cast, including Edward Earle, Herbert Prior, Helen Strickland and others. It is incongruous in places, but its intensity holds the audience.

CORNELIUS AND THE WILD MAN (Kalem), Jan. 19.—A burlesque comedy of the rough and ready sort, with the scenes laid in a backwoods town, mixing up the rube inhabitants with the members of a cross road circus. John Prescott, Joseph Singleton, Ethel Teare and others make of this quite a funny release for a rough one. On the same reel with "A Night in New Jersey."

A NIGHT IN NEW JERSEY (Kalem), Jan. 19.—A Hesanut cartoon, with a Jersey mosquito as the leading comedian. He camps on Hesanut's trail and makes it pleasant for him. An enjoyable cartoon. On the same reel with "Cornelius and the Wild Man."

GUS AND THE ANARCHISTS (Lubin), Jan. 19.—A rough comedy, written by Fred H. Hayn and produced by J. A. Murphy, with Babe Hardy, C. W. Ritchie and Frances NeMoyer in the cast. The action takes place in a sloppy restaurant, and the comedy appeals only to those who are fond of slap stick stuff. On the same reel with "Cupid's Target."

CUPID'S TARGET (Lubin), Jan. 19.—An Edwin Ray Coffin comedy, produced by J. T. Hevener. Made up of a lot of absurd incidents at a baseball game and a country summer resort. Babe Hardy, Frances NeMoyer, Gerald T. Hevener and Harry Loraine work hard to make it laughable. On the same reel with "Gus and the Anarchists."

CACTUS JIM'S SHOP GIRL (Selig), Jan. 19.—A Tom Mix comedy which contains some very funny scenes, involving a cowboy cast. The plot has to do with a newspaper advertisement for a wife which a city girl answers, but when she sees her prospective husband she kicks, but finally changes her mind. Tom Mix does some clever acrobatic stunts as usual. This is an enjoyable western release.

THE FABLE OF HIFALUTING TILLIE AND HER PLAIN PARENTS (Essanay), Jan. 20.—A George Ade comedy that contains a whole lot more truth than poetry. It shows how a country girl, who after a year in a seminary, returns to her country home and looks upon her father and mother, who are just plain folks, with disdain and jumps on their necks for being behind the times, she even does not like the home cooking. She flees to the city but is glad to get back to pig's knuckles and cabbage. Moral: A bright girl can learn a lot after leaving college.

THE WONDERS OF MAGNETISM (Edison), Jan. 20.—An educational which is full of interest, illustrating the two kinds of magnets in common use, the electro and the steel magnet and their uses, as an aid to science and industry. On the same reel with "A Weighty Matter for a Detective."

A WEIGHTY MATTER FOR A DETECTIVE (Edison), Jan. 20.—On the same reel with "The Wonders of Magnetism." A comedy written and produced by Charles M. Ceay, featuring Jessie Stevens and Arthur Housman, supported by a cast of Edison's stars, in a series of incidents which occur in a small town neighborhood. It gets over for moderate laughter.

BETWEEN MATINEE AND NIGHT (Selig), Jan. 20.—Quite an interesting release and an out of the ordinary story, which contains peculiar complications that eventually develops into a tragedy, enabling an actor in search of "types" to rescue an old friend from an adventuress. A great deal happens in a short interval of time, but, nevertheless, it holds attention and is quite an absorbing offering.

THE RIGHT GIRL (Vitagraph), Jan. 20.—Written and produced by Ralph Ince, featuring Earle Williams, Anita Stewart and William Dunn in the leading roles. It is a nice clean story involving a bachelor who cannot find the "right girl." He is advised by his newly married friend to keep his eyes open and the first one he sees that looks good to him, to follow her and find out her address. What makes the comedy is the fact that he follows his friend's wife, which gets him into all sorts of trouble, but it is eventually straightened out to the satisfaction of all concerned—and he is still a bachelor. A fine comedy release.

HEARST-SELIG NEWS PICTORIAL, NO. 6 (Selig), Jan. 21.—Japanese nurses arrive in San Francisco on their way to England, France and Russia, via New York; East Side New York boy policemen, showing them assisting the regular police in keeping order; automobiles leaving Washington in race to Panama Exposition; some scenes showing Grace Darling, Hearst-Selig reporter; Rajah of Galoir, India presenting British army with motor ambulances for a Red Cross unit scenes at Charlestown naval yard, etc.

THE GANG'S NEW MEMBER (Biograph), Jan. 21.—A picture story of the slums and gang life, in which a cub newspaper reporter who is attempting to make good with his paper, gets mixed up. He is shot by one of the gang and is nursed by a girl whom he has rescued from the attentions of a thug, and a love episode occurs. There is a considerable quantity of dramatic action, which compels attention. Jack Mulhall does some commendable work as the cub reporter and Mary Malatesta, W. C. Robinson and Thornton Cole deserve mention. A good release.

SENTIMENTAL SOPHIE (Essanay), Jan. 21.—Another contest between Slippery Slim and Mustang Pete for the hand of Sophie Clutts, who this time is cook at the O. K. hotel. All kinds of things happen and the finale finds Slim taking refuge in a muddy river. It is all very laughable.

DARE-DEVIL HARRY (Mina), Jan. 21.—These new releases are certainly in a class of their own, considering strenuous work on the part of the actors, innovations in trick photography and originality in construction. This release has more of a western flavor than the others, and in places almost makes a noise. One thing is noticeable, that few in the audience are asleep while the picture is on, and that is saying something in its favor. It is an eye opener.

THE NAVAJO RING (Vitagraph), Jan. 21.—A very pretty story, wholesome and full of human nature, written by Fred R. Ashfield and produced by Ulysses Davis. Illustrating how a family which has been divided by abuse and neglect is finally reunited in later years. There is continued dramatic action throughout and some thrilling scenes. Annie Schaefer and Margaret Gibson have strong roles, which they ably handle, their support do ample justice to their parts. This is a picture that gets over with strong force.

HEART'S HUNGER (Biograph), Jan. 22.—A story illustrating the lives of two married couples. One prosperous and the other struggling for existence. The happiness of the former is stifled by the ambition of the husband, who forgets his wife in his endeavor to accumulate wealth. A physician, a friend of both families, intercedes as a mediator and brings happiness to both families. This is a picture that contains much appealing interest of the every-day sort and holds attention through its simplicity.

COOKY'S ADVENTURE (Kalem), Jan. 22.—A farce comedy picture produced by Chance E. Ward, who plays the leading part, with Marin Sais, Jennie Lee, Bud Duncan and others as helpers. This comes near being a real comedy and contains some very funny stunts, especially those on board a bus. It gets almost continuous laughter from the audience and will make good on any program.

A QUESTION OF CONSCIENCE (Lubin), Jan. 22.—Considerable of the old-fashioned melodrama is involved in the plot of this picture play, written by Paul Powell. There is the dissolute son, the faithful employee and a trusting father, who is finally convinced of his son's short-comings. There is also a sad ending to the story. George Routh, L. C. Shumway, Webster Campbell, Dolly Larkin and others, in the cast do good work. The photography is fine. It is an interesting picture.

WHO WANTS A HERO? (Selig), Jan. 22.—A farce comedy, exploiting the adventures of a fictitious nobleman, who attempts to give his services to two opposing factions. He jumps from one side to the other and finally fights a duel with himself. However foolish it is, it is certainly funny and receives continuous laughter.

WANTED, A NURSE (Vitagraph), Jan. 22.—This is a real comedy, considered from a legitimate view, written by A. N. Hendrickson and produced by Sidney Drew, who plays the suffering lead, held up by Jane Morrow, Courtlandt Van Deusen and several others. There are many funny little things in this offering that must be seen to be appreciated. Mr. Drew can always be depended upon to furnish regular comedy, and he does not fail in this instance.

HIS NIGHT OUT (Biograph), Jan. 23.—The story of a husband who unexpectedly gains an opportunity to slip out for a time with the boys; when his wife goes to confer with a friend about her wardrobe. He overdoes things and gets in bad and scandalizes himself. The cast is made up of prominent Biograph comedians, who do excellent work. On the same reel with "In the Boarding House."

IN THE BOARDING HOUSE (Biograph), Jan. 23.—Quite a laughable picture comedy, involving a dramatic sketch team whose rehearsals annoy a fat boarder, who is endeavoring to write something that will bring him in money, a pretty little maid, a colored waiter, the policeman on the beat, the boarding house mistress and her crusty husband. It gets over for appreciative laughter.

MR. DALY'S WEDDING DAY (Edison), Jan. 23.—Adapted from a story by Frank X. Finnegan, which was published in Short Stories. Langdon West is the director and Bigelow Cooper appears as Daly, a smuggler and counterfeiter and he has in his support such able actors as Herbert Prior, Robert Brower and Edward Lawrence. The plot is quite intricate and has to do with counterfeiting and the smuggling of opium. It is a well-produced picture in every respect and contains much that holds attention.

BRONCHO BILLY AND THE BABY (Essanay), Jan. 23.—A western drama in which Mr. Anderson appears in the character of a desperate outlaw, for which five hundred dollars reward is offered for his capture. He accidentally gets mixed up with a little girlie, who is burying her broken doll. There is considerable sentiment in this release which is well produced, the cast including Lee Willard, Evelyn Selbie and little Bernice Sawyer. The ending is somewhat of a surprise, but very satisfactory.

SHODDY, THE TAILOR (Lubin), Jan. 23.—Written by Epes Winthrop Sargent and produced by Will Lewis, with Raymond McKee, Babe Hardy and Mabel Paige in the leading roles. The only tailor in a small town gets even with the police force for interfering with his peccadillos and gets away with their uniforms when sent to him to be pressed. This must be seen to be appreciated. The force is left in a very embarrassing condition and are compelled to appear in everything available but uniforms. This release gains much laughter.

THE PRIMITIVE WAY (Selig), Jan. 23.—A picture that contains some beautiful seashore scenes which are clearly photographed. The story contains some comedy element intermingled with dramatic scenes. The action shows how the spoiled daughter of wealthy parents, with rather primitive instincts, is won over by the gruffness of a virile man who is in love with her. This picture is quite original and interesting.

Licensed Specials.

THE EVIL MEN DO (Vitagraph), Jan. 19.—A Broadway star feature in three parts. Written by Edward William Fowler and produced by Maurice Costello and Robert Gaillard. The action of the story is filled with dramatic complications. Mr. Costello's role gives him opportunities for some intense work, which he handles with distinction and he is most ably supported by a splendid cast, headed by Mary Charleson. Little Dolores and Helen Costello distinguish themselves as the two little sweethearts and make a very pretty picture. A fine production.

THE LADY OF DREAMS (Biograph), Jan. 19.—The main theme of this two reel picture play, hinges on the fact that an uninvited guest attends a masquerade ball given by one of the smart set and a sort of modern Cinderella romance is developed, involving the leading characters. It is a clean and pretty story. Irene Howley, the modern Cinderella, and Ivan Christie, as the father of the two children (Katherine Lee and Rosanna Logan), are very effective. The whole thing is beautifully costumed and the photography is beyond criticism. A wholesome and entertaining release.

THE CABARET SINGER (Kalem), Jan. 20.—A two act picture drama, written and produced by Tom Moore, in which he and Marguerite Courtot, have the leading roles. It is a story of marital unhappiness, where a man who is a millionaire, marries a cabaret singer, to find that she is shallow and selfish. There are many complications filled with human nature. It is all well acted and splendidly produced. It holds close attention and finally has a happy ending.

HER WEAKLING BROTHER (Lubin), Jan. 20.—Written by Harry Chandlee and produced by John Ince. It is in two reels and seems to be somewhat padded, but, nevertheless, it is an interesting love story, involving an employee, a stenographer and the boss. The worthless brother of the stenographer, who gets mixed up with questionable associates, succeeds in making it disagreeable for all those concerned in the cast. John E. Ince, Flora Lea, Herbert Fortier and others, give a splendid rendition of the various characters. This is quite a pretentious offering, finely produced in every respect.

THE SHANGHAIED BABY (Lubin), Jan. 21.—A three-part picture drama, written by Robert A. Sanborn and produced by George Terwilliger. This is a production that is cram full of action and necessarily holds close attention on the part of the spectator to get a thorough understanding of the plot. There is a large cast, including Edgar Jones, Ormi Hawley, Louise Huff, Edith Ritchie, Earl Metcalf and other prominent stock actors, all of whom do splendid work. Photographically the picture is among the best.

THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR (Essanay), Jan. 22.—This two-part picture play has been reviewed at length by James S. McQuade, in The Moving Picture World and can be found on page 500, issue of Jan. 23, 1915.

TRACKED BY THE HOUNDS (Edison), Jan. 22.—A two-act picture play by Carl Freybe, directed by Charles H. France. This is a picturization full of dramatic action, produced by a splendid cast, including Carlton King, Gladys Hulette, William Bechtel, Harry Beaumont and others. A pair of Siberian wolf hounds trained for police work are an attraction in this feature. A remarkable scenic effect is the burning of a hut. The ending is very satisfactory. This is a very taking release.

WAR (Vitagraph), Jan. 23.—A two-part comedy written by Paul West and directed by George D. Baker, with Jay Dwiggins, Flora Finch, Hughie Mack and Kate Price as the leading fun makers. The comedy is resultant from the fact that German and French families, competitors in the delicatessen business and living in the same apartment house, declare war. Many funny complications occur, but everything ends happily when the eldest son of one family and the pretty daughter of the other, conclude to marry and after a battle royal on a vacant lot, the sight of the American flag makes a happy ending. A very good release.

Independent

PATHE DAILY NEWS NO. 4 (Jan. 13).—Interesting items of this issue are an animated map of Luxemburg and Belgium; Soldiers in the trenches getting the home papers; Canadians drilling preparatory to embarking for the war zone, etc.

PATHE DAILY NEWS NO. 5, 1915 (Jan. 18).—This issue shows Belgians killed by German shells; soldiers in the trenches eating their Christmas cakes and puddings; Jap nurses leaving for the front, and other interesting items.

A GIRL AND TWO BOYS (Beauty), Jan. 19.—This, a pleasing little comedy, is nicely staged, and what might be termed well-dressed. There is a legitimacy about the situations, and a spontaneity about the action of the comedy that is especially pleasing.

ANIMATED WEEKLY, NO. 150 (Universal), Jan. 20.—Views of the annual Pasadena flower show, the new hobo hotel in New York, the one-hundred-year peace celebration, Lord Roberts' funeral and other scenes of interest appear in this number.

THE SEA BRAT (Reliance), Jan. 20.—The scenery of this offering is new and interesting. The story is not wholly pleasant; at least it lacks the things that grip the human imagination. It is well staged and directed except for one poor scene that in which the priest and "brat" find the dead guardian. There the director thought only of getting his story on and forgot to be human.

AFTER TWENTY YEARS (Reliance), Jan. 22.—An Arthur Macley picture in which a man leaves wife and little son to seek gold. He finds it, but forgets his family to live a fast life till twenty years have passed. The action is well handled; but there is nothing in it emotionally human except the forgiveness of the wronged wife at the very close. It is only fair.

HER HERO (Royal), Jan. 23.—Rather an entertaining bit of farce comedy. A young man eager for the hand of the object of his love, is set up in business by his prospective father-in-law. The business which he chooses, that of photography, is one in which he is not expert, therefore his methods of making good are more or less amusing.

A FLURRY IN ART (Komic), Jan. 24.—A farce with a good comical idea—the poor artist cannot sell his paintings, but the sheriff, who forecloses on him, manages to get together a little pile for artist and creditors. How he does it is fairly interesting.

COLORED VILLAINY (Keystone), Jan. 25.—Some good darky character work is brought out in this comedy number. The country lover puts live bees in the city swain's clothes. Later the girl falls in the well and a lot of ridiculous complications ensue. The close is particularly funny.

THE WORLD UPSTAIRS (Reliance), Jan. 25.—A pleasing conceit in which the janitor's daughter becomes interested in the people on the floors above. Love of fine clothes almost gets her into trouble, but she finally comes safely back to her grocer's boy lover. The photography is very good and the story entertaining.

EVAN'S LUCKY DAY (Beauty), Jan. 26.—Might be called a cynical comedy, if that term were not a self-contradiction. It is not convincing and no character in it is quite pleasant.

THE BROKEN LULLABY (Majestic),, Jan. 26.—An unusually strong and artistic story of farm life, with W. E. Lowrey and Loretta Blake in the leads. The abused wife takes her baby to the barn while the husband carouses with friends. The farm hand saves it from flames; the husband dies during his carouse. This is different and appealing; the photography is good.

COALS OF FIRE (American), Jan. 27.—The photography in this offering is very good and the story is fair; but the direction is crude to the point at times of being a bit ridiculous.

THE EXPRESS MESSENGER (Reliance), Jan. 27.—A girl operator story, with Florence Crawford in the leading part. The crooked express messenger and his pal try to make away with the big sum of money, but she manages to outwit them. The action is good and the yarn is one of about average interest.

THE HOME OF SILENCE (Princess), Jan. 29.—A penitentiary story with a surprise ending. Boyd Marshall appears as a young convict just serving a term. He falls in love with the junior warden's daughter. Political complications arise, the junior warden loses his job—almost. It turns out that the young convict is the governor's son gathering prison material for a book. This makes an entertaining reel.

THE VOLUNTEER FIREMAN (Thanhouser), Jan. 29.—The barber yearns to be a hero and is initiated into the volunteer fire company. The work of the country town department is quite amusing and is helped somewhat by the eccentric characters and trick photography. It makes a fairly good comedy number.

THE THIEF AND THE CHIEF (Eclair), Jan. 31.—A pleasing comedy-drama, with Stanley Walpole and Edna Payne as the lovers. He pretends to be a visiting professor, is suspected of being a gentleman thief, and finally turns out to be son of the chief of police. This is better than the average comedy number and holds the interest well.

HELEN INTERVENES (Thanhouser), Jan. 31.—The Kidlet appears in this number in which juvenile interest predominates. She makes friends with a poor boy, whose sister clerks in a big store. Later the Kidlet saves the girl's job for her. This is well photographed and quite enjoyable. Just a pretty little story.

SEVEN AND SEVENTY (Big "U"), Feb. 2.—A pretty little story, written by Calder Johnston, concerning the friendship of a G. A. R. veteran and a small boy. The veteran dies at a soldiers' home and is buried with full military honors. This is a pleasing offering with a touch of pathos in it.

THE BUTCHER'S BRIDE (L-KO), Feb. 3.—An eccentric comedy number with the opening scenes in a butcher shop. None of the characterizations are particularly appealing; the best scenes are toward the close at the beach resort.

THE GIRL AND THE SPY (Rex), Feb. 4.—A number featuring Ben Wilson and Frances Nelson. He is a foreign spy and she the daughter of an ambassador. The story is not very well constructed and has no very strong situations, in spite of the pleasing cast and good photography.

LOVE AND DOUGH (Sterling), Feb. 4.—A knockabout number, with John E. Brennan and Dot Gould in the cast. The scenes in the restaurant kitchen would have been funnier if they had not been so dirty and unattractive. The action in this is good, but it suffers from the slovenly charatcer of the settings and costumes.

LIZZIE'S DIZZY CAREER (Nestor), Feb. 5.—The Nestor company is seen at its best in this number. Victoria Forde is particularly good as the country girl with a voice that makes the dogs howl. The chorus drill made a good burlesque feature. A lively comedy number with many laughing spots in it.

THE BRIBE (Victor), Feb. 5.—Charles Ogle plays the villain in this number. He employs a Hindu hypnotist to exert his power over the judge's daughter, portrayed by Mary Fuller. The action is of a melodramatic type and quite entertaining. The hero saves the girl and the bribe money in the closing scenes.

HE CURED HIS GOUT (Joker), Feb. 6.—This eccentric number has some very amusing spots in it. It deals with the efforts of the girl's father to cure his gout. The wheel chair runaway is well put on and the final plunge in the lake puts an end to the complaint. Good photography.

THE MASQUERADERS (United-Warner-Superba), February.—A portion of this film will pass muster, and is very laughable. The only really offensive point about it being the presentation of the masqueraders who were chased by the police as escaped convicts, each minus a leg. This latter is rather unpleasant realism.

I'M CRAZY TO BE MARRIED (United-Warner-Starlight), February.—With men impersonating women, and utter disregard for any sort of refinement, it cannot be imagined that this film can please a refined audience.

ACH LOUIE (United-Warner-Starlight), February.—There are marks of real merit in this offering from a farce, or eccentric, comedy standpoint. It has been staged with considerable elaborateness, and is characterized by originality in a certain degree, and an absence of the vulgar element.

YE GODS! WHAT A CAST (United-Warner-Luna), February.—Here an attempt has been made to burlesque the making of a moving picture film, but the point of the story has evidently been lost in the making.

WITH DADDY'S AID (United-Warner-Luna), February.—On the same reel with the foregoing, this picture will no doubt elicit considerable mirth, inasmuch as that it exploits a "put yourself in his place" sort of an idea.

IN DUTCH WITH A DUCHESS (United-Warner-Superba), February.—A farce comedy which finds most of its merit in the fact that a novelty has been instituted in the form of a tiger skin rug which wags its tail, and later when used as a hiding place for the hero of the comedy, exudes smoke from its mouth.

THE TICKET OF LEAVE MAN (United-Warner-Superba), February.—In this film a man escaping from prison steals the policeman's uniform, later gets a good position, and is informed against by his enemy and threatened with loss of life if he refuses to rob his employer's safe. The tables are cleverly turned on the villain, however, and with a detective hidden in the safe a good bit of comedy is gotten over.

WITH A GIRL AT STAKE (United-Warner-Premier), February.—A thrilling, old-style western which will go well with many audiences. It is reminiscent of the western productions of some five or six years ago.

THE DEPUTY'S REWARD (United-Warner-Premier), February.—There is nothing out of the ordinary about this production one way or the other. A thrilling rescue of his sweetheart by the deputy sheriff from the man who lured her away from home forms the big scene of the picture.

WILLIE RUNS THE PARK (United-Warner-Rollin), February.—There is a distinct atmosphere of vulgarity about this film, which is inexcusable.

MORE AND MORE (United-Warner-Empress), February.—A farce comedy of not altogether the best sort. In it a man has a nightmare over the number of children his wife bears him. It is remarkable how such a subject treated in such a manner can be thought to be entertaining.

THE VERDICT (United-Warner-Grandin), February.—This picture has not been wisely cast, with the exception of the feminine lead, Ethel Grandin. The story of the film is interesting, and the production is otherwise attractive.

THE STRENGTH OF THE WEAK (United-Warner-Premier), February.—A western story that has only fair merit. An almost continuous use of the gun detracts from the enjoyment of the picture.

WHEN HE FORGAVE (United-Warner), February.—Although this film would be welcomed by many audiences, it cannot be denied that the plot is rather insipid, and the situation presented is not sincere enough to be forceful.

Independent Specials

EXPLOITS OF ELAINE, EPISODE 4 (Pathe-Hearst), Jan. 18.—The fourth episode of the Pathe-Hearst serial, that of "The Frozen Safe," proves almost as interesting as the previous numbers. Another scientific invention is exploited when the new burglar-proof safe at the Dodge home is exploded by means of liquid air. Also an attempt on the life of Kennedy is made which, through the use of the seismagraph in detecting the presence of visitors in the room, is unsuccessful. The same excellent quality in the makeup of the picture is still evident.

THE CRAVEN (Reliance), Jan. 23.—A well-constructed two-reel number of the red-blooded type. Some of the latter scenes are intensely brutal and unpleasant, yet at the same time presented with artistic skill. Wallace Reid appears as a young blacksmith, strong in figure but morally weak. He does not rise to the danger when a stranger trifles with his sister, but later the manhood is roused in him. He follows the stranger, who has shot five or six men, and chokes him to death, bare-handed; then swings the dead body across his shoulders and brings it home to prove that at last he is a man. This is strong, undiluted material, as can be seen from the plot. The photography is clear and the characters are appealing.

THE BETTER MAN (Majestic), Jan. 24.—An interesting two-part offering from script of George Patullo. Its heroine is a ranch girl; its hero the foreman whom she prefers to an English lord, although long mustache, monocle and all, he, too, is a mighty fine fellow. There are unexpected things in the action and it pleases. A good offering.

SILENCE (American), Jan. 25.—A two-reel offering that holds interest right through; because it deals with things that are vividly pertinent. Some may count the picture of these generations—1st, a miser; 2d, a parricide and suicide, and 3d, a maniac—as unpleasant; but the interest much more than overcomes any drag on that account. The picture is well acted, beautifully set and perfectly photographed A good offering.

THE MASTER KEY (Universal Special), Jan. 25.—Episode No. 10. Concluding scenes in the warfare between the Mexicans, miners and operators are shown at the opening of this interesting installment. The governor is appealed to and sends state militia, declaring the camp under martial law. Fresh interest is injected into the story when Dore opens the letter left for Ruth by her father and learns of the plans lying in the chest at the bottom of the sea, telling where the mother lode is located. Wilkerson and his friends obtain a portion of this letter and raise the chest from the bottom of the sea. The number closes with Dore and Ruth in pursuit.

DISCHARGED (Reliance), Jan. 26.—Instalment No. 3 of Runaway June. This goes over again in the first reel several previous scenes. June is taken to a boarding house by her maid, Marie, where she is followed by Blye. The latter conspires with Cunningham and their girl friend, "Tommy" Thomas, to lure June away. Tommy gets her a job as model in a department store; later Blye has her discharged. The plot adheres to the light comedy style in treatment and again bears down on the wife-and-her-money theme. The series shows no signs of becoming a thriller. It still remains to be seen whether the money motive is going to prove strong enough to keep up the interest so far aroused. The construction and details have been carefully looked after and the photography is good.

FINGER PRINTS OF FATE (Thanhouser), Jan. 26.—A two-part melodrama with a surprise at the end made by a rather arbitrary twist given to the action. Its heroine is the rich man's stenographer; the hero, his secretary and her fiancee. The villain is the rich man's nephew; but the real thief is the butler, who had kept in the background through the early scenes. It has pretty scenes; is well acted and, on the whole, a very fair offering.

AFTER HER MILLIONS (L-KO), Jan. 31.—This picture produced in three reels by Henry P. Lehrman, and featuring, beside himself, Billie Ritchie and Gertrude Selby, is laid out on farce comedy lines. It is unfortunate that a higher notch of the art had not been aimed at. The humor of the picture is based on an abnormal degree of drunkenness, and is at times unpleasantly vulgar and suggestive.

A MESSAGE FROM THE HEART (Thanhouser), Feb. 1.—Episode No. 11 of the Zudora series, in two reels. The opening scenes are again in the salon of Mme. Du Val, where the smuggled diamonds have been hidden. The lover, Jim Baird, and a detective are all working to run down the gang. The scenes are, unfortunately, disconnected in character, which interferes with the natural suspense of the situations. Baird finally locates the gang. They send a ghostly messenger to frighten Zudora out of the country. The installments seem to lack continuity, owing no doubt to changes in the cast. The series should improve in future numbers.

CARDS NEVER LIE (Victor), Feb. 1.—A two-reel story of the open road, with Harry C. Meyers, Rosemary Theby, Ruth Fieldman and others in the cast. The handsome young hobo falls in love with a gypsy girl; she tells his fortune. The scene with the cards is unique and attractive. He falls in love with the heiress as she predicts, and inherits great wealth and a title. But he spends his money in riotous living and is soon again a tramp. In the final scenes he again meets the gypsy girl and they are happy. This is not a powerful production in any way, but runs along entertainingly and contains some pleasing scenes.

THE GIRL OF THE SECRET SERVICE (Gold Seal), Feb. 2.—A two-reel crook story, in which Grace Cunard plays the part of a girl detective. She dons a man's clothes and starts in to round up a gang of Japanese spys and save the wife of an aviator who is in their power. There is a great deal of action in this, but it consists mostly of struggles on roof-tops, fighting and running. The story itself has nothing very new in it. At the close the girl detective dies after saving the woman.

THE CUSTOMARY WIFE (Broncho), Feb. 3.—A two-reel problem story with sufficient truth in the plot to deserve the adjective "strong." At the same time the presumption in the preamble that all married men live double lives and that a woman loses attractiveness by being virtuous is not altogether pleasant. Problem stories are not apt to be pleasant, however, and it must be admitted that this is well-constructed and put on in a way that will hold the attention closely. The wife discovers her husband's double life and she herself plunges into the whirl of vice. He is glad to drag her out and save their home. A very frank picture of certain phases of modern married life.

THE LURE OF THE WEST (Eclair), Feb. 3.—A two-reel number which brings out a decidedly novel situation in the first reel. The death of the father calls three children to their Western home, the girl an adventuress and the two young men youths who live by their wits. Not a very promising lot, but well-drawn charatcers who catch and hold the interest. Later all return East and then, tiring of their worthless lives, return home and presumably live happily thereafter. The chief interest is in the first reel, but the offering has considerable novelty about it all through.

HER BARGAIN (Big U), Feb. 4.—A two-reel story with an unusual plot, written and produced by Sydney Ayres, who also plays the leading part. A beautiful young heiress is deserted by her fiancee on her wedding day. He elopes with the bridesmaid and the heiress employs a young workman at $20,000 a year to be her husband in name only. He agrees to this on account of his poor mother, he being out of work. Numerous incidents of one kind and another add interest to the production. The cast includes Doris Pawn, Val Paul, Mrs. Sloman and Mrs. Benson. The production is out of the ordinary in plot.

THE AWAITED HOUR (Imp), Feb. 5.—A thrilling crime story written by Eugene Manlove Rhoades is here produced as a two-reel photoplay. Wm. E. Shay, Wm. Welsh and Violet Mersereau are in the cast. The photography and direction are very good and the story holds the interest firmly. The escape of the falsely imprisoned husband and his revenge on his former employer were strongly presented.

This is eventful and has excellent suspense. It makes a gripping story of its type.

A MODERN NOBLE (Domino), Feb. 4.—A two-reel photoplay with a German locale, the opening scenes being very much on the order of Old Heidelberg, the well known play. A young German student marries the daughter of the inn keeper secretly. His parents object and he is disowned when the truth comes out. He remains true to the girl and becomes a fisherman. Later the parents save the girl from suicide and a happy ending is achieved. This is put on attractively and makes a pleasing offering.

COLLEGE DAYS (Kay-Bee), Feb. 5.—A very pleasing two-reel story of college sports. The student types are varied and interesting. The plot itself follows familiar lines but holds the attention well. It concerns the football matches played by Warwick college. The girl's admirer, Glen Dale, takes to drink and is ruled off the team by the coach. He turns traitor and plays with the rival Indian team in disguise. The hero of the story then saves the game by his superior playing and wins the girl. This is an attractive production of its type.

RIDGEWAY OF MONTANA (Bison), Feb. 6.—It would be hard to remember a moving picture which gives such an accurate view of mining life in the Rockies, during the winter season, as does this three-reel version of Wm. McLeod Raine's novel. The director, Henry McRae, has obtained some very wonderful snow scenes in the high altitudes. The story itself concerns a crooked mining operator against whom the hero pits his wits. It is an absorbing, red-blooded yarn, overacted in numerous places but still maintaining its grip. This is an unusually strong story of the real West and contains many memorable pictorial effects.

SAVED FROM HIMSELF (Pathe-Balboa), February.—A three-reel production in which the story treats of the fall and rise of a young man, who, having squandered a fortune left to him, resorts to burglary for a living. It is unfortunate that the story of his life told to a young girl whose room he has entered at night with the intention of taking her jewels, has been given such a lengthy recital.

THE CONVICT'S CONSPIRACY (United-Warner-A. C. A. D.).—February. This is a three-reel European production of meritorious quality. It abounds with clever situations which have been satisfactorily developed. The theme is based on a double identity problem, and is intensely interesting. In it the scenes are smoothly connected, and the photographic quality of the production is good.

THE OTHER WOMAN (United-Warner-A. C. A. D.).—February.—A good story filmed in three reels, and played by an excellent cast of European players. The production has been splendidly staged, is realistic in action, and has been skillfully and artistically photographed. It is a picture far above the average in detail and action.

THE WHITE TRAIL (United-Warner-Pike's Peak), February.—Considerable realism has been worked into this two-reel western. The character of the old stage driver, which runs only through a portion of the story, is one particularly to be remembered. The situation of the girl taking her dead father's place on the dangerous trail while her lover remained at home, is not exactly a sincere one. There is, however, quite a spirit of adventure about the story which is worked out among snow covered hills, that pleases.

THE HOUSE ON E' STREET (United-Warner-Regent), February.—Developed in two reels in thrilling melodramatic style, there is considerable in this production, and the average audience will welcome it as being of intense interest. A splendid drop of an automobile over a cliff constitutes one of the thrills of the picture. The suddenness with which this scene is flung at the spectator makes it more than usually effective.

British Notes.

AN old saw amongst the folk in the northwest of our island goes, "What Lancashire thinks today England does tomorrow." Today (January 15) along with some of the most prominent exhibitors in Lancashire I had an opportunity of seeing the last six installments of the most advertised film of the moment, "The Trey o' Hearts:" In the industrial localities of Lancashire and Yorkshire this serial has been booked heavily, and, excusing the few minor anachronisms, it must be a satisfaction to the Universal Company to know that after having seen both the beginning and the end of the serial there were today no expressions of disappointment. The first sections of this production were exhibited to the trade a few weeks ago and I remember the proprietor of a circuit of shows sat on my right, saying "New brooms sweep clean. It's all very well holding the first six parts out as a bait to buyers, but what are the other nine like?" In other words, he seemed to judge the film like a box of candy, and without building expectations of the contents from the appearance of the first layer. It was a happy idea of Mr. Tippett's to show the last six parts and one that is bound to be followed by other firms handling serial pictures.

The acting does not, considering the nature of the story, leave much room for criticism beyond this one point; the advisability of Miss Cleo Madison playing the dual role of the twin sisters. This is, of course, slated in the cast, but as the two characters often appear on the sceen together the identification of the two as one and the same person can only be productive of misapprehensions in the mind of the public.

* * *

Mr. John Hassall is engaged in drawing designs for film-posters. The famous artist's first results are being used to advertise the Cines Company's "How Heroes Are Made."

The Hepworth Manufacturing Company of Walton-on-Thames still continue to toil on Dickens' adaptations. Their newest attraction is "Barnaby Rudge," and is as typically English a production in acting scene and atmosphere as Dickens himself could have wished it.

* * *

Criticising a certain Essanay film, a newspaper in the Midlands says of the one and only Gilbert: "He stands in much the same relation to his public as did such a novelist as Dickens toward his. In both cases it is not so much the mere story that attracts, but rather the force of a great and majestic personality shining through the story. And in the case of Mr. Anderson, who employs a pictorial instead of a literary medium, the personal contact seems even closer."

* * *

Syd. M. Baber, director of the Famous Players Film Company, Limited (the English agency of the American parent company), leaves England the same time as this communication, sailing on the Lusitania for New York, January 16. Mr. Baber is only expected to be away for a few weeks, and his business is the consummation of arrangements for the distribution on this side of the forthcoming productions of the Famous Players and the Lasky Companies. By the way, Mr. J. D. Walker, who is associated here with Mr. Baber, is rapidly recovering after his recent illness.

* * *

This is a secret, or, at least, alleged to be, but the Fleet street luminary who confided in me did so unconditionally. Charles Frohman, who I believe is now in the States, and the dramatist, Sir James Barrie, have long cherished the idea of introducing into a legitimate stage production a really new and original picture turn, and recently much of Sir James' time has been absorbed in working a revue in which Mlle. Gaby Deslys is to star at the Duke of York's theater in London. One feature of the piece was to have been a series of moving pictures of celebrities taken under unusual circumstances, and in order to include in the film some of the most notable personages in the land Sir James invited them to a supper at the Savoy Hotel with the ultimate idea, of course, of securing moving pictures of them. Somehow, so the story goes, one of the guests did not wish to be seen on the screen; it may have been one of the cabinet ministers who were present, so he secretly opened the door of the camera. Consequently, the film feature will not appear in the new revue and Sir J. B. is just about $8,000 out of pocket.

* * *

Mr. A. D. Bixey of New York is patenting here something entirely new to England in projection screens. He claims for his screen that it is absolutely non-reflecting. It consists of glass or some such base, coated like a photographic screen; that is to say, with multi-colored starch grains microscopically small. When viewed together they assume a neutral tint and scientifically their purpose is to absorb reflected light. The picture produced by the apparatus (owing to the effect of no light being transmitted through it except that actually projected from the machine) is relieved of the intense brilliancy noticed in projected pictures, so that the effect is very pleasing and not tiresome to the eyes. The pictures, the specification states, can be exhibited in light, even in broad day light, as the picture surface is substantially non-reflecting so that reflected foreign light does not interfere with the picture.

* * *

A recent decree of the Dominion Customs Authority allows lantern slides and photographic films which have been exposed to be imported into Canada free of duty providing they are for the use or exhibition of any religious or educational establishment and are not to be offered for sale. Moving picture films and apparatus are not allowed to benefit under this provision.

* * *

As one immediate outcome of his recent visit to the United States, Mr. J. T. Davison of Davison's Film Sales Agency, of London, has decided to represent in this country the Kinetophote Corporation, of West 46th St., New York. He has already initiated a sweeping advertising campaign and when the first Kinetophote production to arrive in this country—I think Mr. Davison said it was "The Spirit of the Poppy"—comes to be offered as an exclusive there is certain to be keen bidding to secure it.

* * *

When a journal like "The Times," supported by other influential papers up and down the country makes a suggestion for "a permanent national repository for kinematograph films" we may be assured that public interest has at last been aroused in an oft-repeated scheme. Throughout the past week or two considerablue attention has been bestowed by the general press upon the necessity of providing a place for the preservation of moving picture films of historic interest, the exhibition of pictures illustrating the progress of the war has given a decided impetus to the idea. Several months ago the British Museum authorities were approached on the matter, but for reasons not fully divulged rejected the overtures there and then. It was, however, understood at the time that their principal objection to preserving them with the rest of the nation's treasures was solely on account of their inflammability. In face of this, a Manchester paper advocates that the film trade should erect a special museum for the purpose, adding with delightful originality, "that in these days when patriotism overrules business considerations in every walk of life, the appeal is by no means hopeless." This opinion is not shared by the film trade and one or two views given to me on the question were not couched in the politest terms.

* * *

There is a growing public demand here for photoplays featuring Francis X. Bushman of the Essanay Co. If the type and quality of "The Masked Wrestler" be maintained, Bushman stands a reasonable chance of attaining a popular admiration as phenomenal as that enjoyed by Maurice Costello a couple of years ago. There is an increasing curiosity in many photoplay fans to know the full significance of the mystic X. "Is it an emulation of the illustrious Xantippe?" say some; "No, it can be nothing less than Xnomenes," reply others. But what is it really? Perhaps Francis X. will oblige.

* * *

Since the inception of those few crowded streets in our Metropolis as Britain's film market, there has only been one American company of import who have not occupied premises in that area. Now they have decided to toe the line and instead of being a mile or two away the address of the Edison Company will be, in the near future, 162 Wavelour street, London, W. The new offices are both fine and spacious and the private theater as comfortable as any in the vicinity.

* * *

Sir Arthur W. Pinero's case against the Evans Film Company of New York for infringement of the copyright of The Second Mrs. Tanqueray has been given at length in English literary journals. It is stated that no license has been given to produce any of his plays on the screen, either in this country or in America.

* * *

The Russian Government through its military department has authorized a representative of Messrs. Pathe Freres to accompany the Russian troops on their westward progress with permission to take moving pictures of the battles from the firing line. It is only after considerable difficulty that this permit has been secured, and already a Pathe camera man is on his way. The French Embassy at Petrograd has supported the experiment and by it, it is hoped to disprove the statements that the Russian Army has been at work in neutral countries.

* * *

Keystone burglars were discovered the other night raiding the hostelry known as the Holborn Restaurant. Lest wrong impressions be made I should state that the occasion was the annual staff dinner of the Western Import Company. All the guests were decorated with the Keystone iron cross —an imitation of the famous Teutonic prototype except that in the center was a portrait of "Fatty" Arbuckle—and the burglars were energetic members of the London staff disguised as such.

J. B. SUTCLIFFE.

ECLAIR THEATRE OPENS.

A new commodious plotoplay house recently erected in Cleveland, Ohio, has been named the "Eclair Theatre," in honor of the film company of that title. On opening night an all-Eclair program was given, handsome pillow tops of Eclair stars were presented to the ladies, and the Publicity Representative of the film organization, Bert Ennis, made a speech of appreciation of the honor conferred upon his company by the theatre management.

SCOTT SIDNEY AT SAN DIEGO EXPOSITION.

Scott Sidney, the New York Motion Picture Corporation director, has left Inceville and has gone to San Diego to assist at opening the Exposition. Thomas H. Ince, the famous chief director at Inceville and Sidney's boss, has a big concession at the Exposition.

Ethel Louise Lloyd

ETHEL LOUISE LLOYD, one of the members of the Vitagraph Stock Company, was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., on March 23d, 1886. She combines, in direct line, Irish, Scotch and Welsh blood, her male ancestors originally emigrating from Wales to Ireland, where they established a permanent residence and became landed Gentry, acquiring a vast estate near Cork; one of the Lloyds, Edward, being presented with a family crest because of his bravery.

Ethel Louise Lloyd.

Miss Lloyd's father, Gilbert, and her mother, whose maiden name was Katherine Higgins, were both born in Brooklyn, her mother's ancestors coming from Ireland, although they originally were natives of Scotland.

Miss Lloyd received her education in Brooklyn, attending the Sacred Heart Institute and the Girl's High School. Her first position, after finishing her schooling, embraced clerical work for a big business concern, which she left to satisfy her ambition to become a singer on the professional stage. A pleasing personality and an exceptional voice being responsible for her desire to shine as a footlight favorite. Securing an engagement with Virginia Earle in "Sergeant Kitty," she quickly demonstrated her ability to cope with the requirements of an exciting role. Her success paved the way for succeeding engagements with Richard Carle in "The Mayor of Tokio," Maude Adams in "Chanticleer," Henry Miller in "The Rainbow," and the lead in the Ade musical comedy, "Just Out of College." Miss Lloyd has also been in vaudeville, besides spending a season in stock.

A bad theatrical year and a desire to be home with her mother was the cause of Miss Lloyd's forsaking the legitimate stage to become a picture actress. She applied to the Vitagraph management for a position and was given a tryout, her first trial meeting with the approval of her director. She applied herself persistently to the work in hand and a close study of the needs required of a photoplayer soon resulted in her becoming a stock member. Her two principal life portrayals, since she began posing for the camera are Jane, a colored maid in "A Florida Enchantment," and Mabel Emanuel in "The Locked Door," although her work stands out noticeably in such pictures as "Beauty Unadorned," "Fanny's Conspiracy," "Jerry's Uncle's Namesake," "A Model Young Man," "Love's Old Dream" and "The Old Flute Player."

SARGENT DIRECTS FOR THE DRACO.

George L. Sargent has been engaged by the Draco Film Company, Inc., as their chief director. The output of the Draco Company will be released through the Mutual program. Mr. Sargent has organized a company and has started work. After an extensive experience as a stage director in the "legitimate" with Charles B. Dillingham, Cohan & Harris and other managements, Mr. Sargent began his career as a moving picture director with the Gem Brand of the Universal. Afterward he spent two years as director for the Eclair, for which company he produced the "Diamond Master," by Jacques Futrelle; "The Case of Cherry Purcelle," and a nine-reel adaptation of Futrelle's "Elusive Isabel," which is now being released by the Universal under three separate titles, "Adventures in Diplomacy," "For the Mastery of the World" and the third as yet unnamed.

When the studio was removed to Tucson, Ariz., Mr. Sargent declined to leave New York. As a compliment from the company, on leaving he was presented with a letter giving him the credit for making the pictures for them that have the record sale. His next engagement was with the Peerless Feature Film Company, for whom he produced their first and most successful feature, 'The Gentleman from Mississippi," with Thomas A. Wise in the title role.

"Hypocrites"

A Picture of This Day's Society Shown As In Naked Truth's Mirror—A Five-Reel Picture by Lois Weber (Bosworth, Inc.).

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

THIS five-part offering made by Lois Weber for Bosworth, Incorporated, falls whole-heartedly in that group of pictures whose purpose is to administer a correction to mankind for mankind's good. It is, in part, an allegory under whose symbols are held up to clearer light than usually comes into man's dwelling certain morbid knots in the world's intellectual make-up that cause it to behave abnormally. The picture shows society what a hypocrite it is—in its religion, its love, its care of children and in the relations of the sexes.

The authoress knows that evil conditions are at bottom morbid twists away from the truth and that right education would cure a host of ills. The difficulty is that at any moment the biggest part of life is beyond educating: yet has full power to educate according to its own ideas, twisted or straight. The purpose of such pictures as this is to counteract the bad education as much as possible in hope of gradual gain toward civilization. As a perpetual reminder of her purpose and a most truthful and vivid presentation of it, she symbolizes Truth by a quite modestly naked woman and contrasts this woman's modesty with things that merely pass—in certain circles—as modest. That the offering got over to its audience there is no doubt. This reviewer saw it with a well-filled house of paying patrons at the Longacre Theater, New York. It was watched with the closest attention and at the close there was applause. It is destined, we truly think, to enjoy a long and emphatic popularity. The reviewer felt its power and counts its weak places of no great moment at present.

Scene from "Hypocrites" (Bosworth).

A curious thing comes up at the picture's presentation in the Longacre Theater. The prologue is taken from olden times, to introduce a picture of modern times. The effect of this prologue is to throw that modern part of the picture forward into actuality in peculiar degree. The ability to get these peculiar effects is the distinguishing trait of dramatic construction. The Greeks drew a veil of Hades across the proscenium of their plays and the spectator saw not human life; for the player was masked like a statue and stood in his buskins tall as the great dead and spoke in poetry, the language of Olympus and the gods. Every contrivance, including an instrument to change and strengthen the voice, was used to get the presentation into an imaginary sphere. The Elizabethan stage also, by its use of poetry, a high-flown and unnatural speech, sacrificed, in De Quincy's words, actual naturalness for a removed but higher nature in man's soul. Now pictures, to give the effects desired, have to magnify, and so are cold showers of things just as they are, and are apt to "give away" the stage carpenter, the make-up box and the director's admonitions. To make them wholly convincing, it is often necessary to have recourse to tricks, one of which is to introduce them as illustrations in a book or as a tale told.

In this picture the authoress needed to do just the opposite. It is a dream she pictures, but must make it real, even actual. She didn't want us to believe that her minister climbed up a steep mountain; she wanted us to know that all we saw was solely her expedient to teach us a truth. But most of all she wanted us to believe her picture was, though dreamed by the minister, an actual showing of modern life. So she puts an old-time picture at the opening and then she comes in with the modern scenes with a smash. No one could make us accept the prologue as actual; this by contrast, is actual. The fact that she changes from allegory to actuality and does it twice is a bit confusing and by so much hurts her effect; but she did well in beginning with the impossible old tale; for it puts the mind in frame to sympathy with her modern allegorical picture.

But the Longacre manager helped her out. He has an actor to represent the chief character of the picture and, in a monk's robe, speak to us on hypocrisy. This actor lies down before the screen, as the prologue opens, and sleeps. This aids the impression of the prologue, for it is dream-like; but when the actual and allegorical part opens the actor is still there sleeping. He was an aid at first; now he is a hindrance, for the time element is confused. He ought to leave at the close of the prologue. When he speaks again at the close, he is actually in the way—would be useless even if he spoke clearly.

Pathe Enters Canadian Field

ONE of the latest exchanges to commence operations in Montreal is Pathe's Famous Feature Film Syndicate of Quebec. The offices are at 313 Bleury Street, and occupy two floors. Since opening a short time ago they have been working at top speed, Pathe films being very popular in the Canadian metropolis. "The Perils of Pauline" was the new firm's earliest release, and has been meeting with incredible success. A feature of Pathe's advertising is that it is bi-lingual. All heralds, posters, and slides are printed in both languages, and advertising space is taken in French and English newspapers.

L. E. Ouimet.

The personnel of the new firm is an interesting one and bids fair to place the Pathe product in an enviable position in Canada. The general manager and owner of large interests is L. E. Ouimet. Mr. Ouimet speaks English fluently. He may safely claim the distinction of being the pioneer of the film industry in Montreal. Before 1906 Montreal's only opportunity of seeing moving pictures was through the medium of road shows. In 1904 Mr. Ouimet represented in Montreal the Kinetograph Company of New York. The year 1906 saw the opening of the Ouimetoscope theater, still owned by Mr. Ouimet. There are now over sixty moving picture houses in the city of Montreal.

Mr. Ouimet is capably assisted by Charles Lalumiere. Mr. Lalumiere has had large and valuable experience in the film game, having been connected with the European Import Feature Film Company, Warner's Features, and the Picture Playhouse, Ltd.

A branch office has been opened in St. John, N. B., which will attend to the wants of the Maritime Provinces. It has been placed under the charge of C. J. Keegan, formerly connected with the Montreal office of the General Film Company.

FOR ALLIE AND ETHEL JEWETT.

Misses Allie and Ethel Jewett, who are believed to be working with some motion picture company, are requested to communicate with Sidney B. West, care of Rogers, Peet & Company, 13th Street and Broadway, New York. They are also advised of the death of their father, Elliot M. Best, at Los Angeles, Cal.

Renfax Musical Pictures a Year Old

First Twelve Months of Business Shows Steady Increase in Volume of Service.

THE Renfax Film Company, Inc., makers of musical pictures, celebrated its first anniversary during January. It has been a busy year for the officers of the corporation. They have been devoting their efforts more in the direction of a sure building than of rapid building. That they might erect a structure that would endure they adopted methods differing from some of their contemporaries in that they sought to give musical pictures to the small as well as the large houses. They aimed to make the initial installation of their service so reasonable as to place it within the reach of the average exhibitor. Already there are four Renfax exchanges—in New York, Columbus, Ohio; Chicago and Pittsburg. Others will be opened. The company will shortly send out six more men to cover territory in Kansas and Texas.

De Witt Fox.

Arthur M. Hess is president and treasurer of the company, De Witt Fox is vice-president and Harold L. Lewis is secretary. The directors are the officers, and Eugene Meyer, Jr., a member of the Bard of Governors of the New York Stock Exchange; John H. Flagler, founder and until recently president of the Riker-Hegeman Company, operating a chain of drug stores; and Leslie Reis, a prominent merchant. A World man talked the other day with Mr. Fox in regard to the progress of the Renfax. Mr. Fox, who is a graduate of Columbia University, practiced law before taking up the film business. He was led to make this change in his field of activity through his belief in the great possibilities that day in the film industry.

Scene from Recent Renfax Subject.

"It is my observation that what the exhibitors want is a short, varied program," said Mr. Fox. "I say this in spite of what we hear these days about features. We have planned to give them that variety. We have planned to give it to them without great initial expense and without putting them to the necessity of engaging extra operators or spending weeks in training old ones to take up new work. We want a big clientele, and one that will use our service right along, not as an act for a short run and then forget it.

"My idea has been to treat the musical pictures just the same as the ordinary pictures and to be able to make the price at such a figure that we can reach the great bulk of exhibitors, and above all to be able to supply them. We do not try to force anything on the exhibitor by asking him to sign a long-service contract. Another thing we do which I believe works wonders for efficiency and incidentally for synchronization—all films are shipped to an exhibitor direct from an exchange. Nothing goes from house to house. All material is thoroughly inspected before it leaves us.

"I believe in pictures of action—that it is as essential in musical pictures as in ordinary pictures that there be life and movement as in songs and dances. It is action that we especially aim to get into our product. Another point I would like to make: We are conducting this business as an investment, we are building for permanency. We market in each section through our own exchanges. This is neither a stock selling proposition nor a state right plan.

"We have found that musical pictures are particularly attractive now on account of the belief that features are being overdone, that they are being forced on the public in far greater quantity than many like."

The Renfax Company has offices on the seventh floor of the World Tower Building, with a poster and shipping room on the third floor. In the main offices there are, besides the executive quarters, a demonstration room, an inspection room, and storage room. In the department on the third floor are kept the parts which are attached to any projector of motion pictures in order to run musical subjects. The attachment is astonishingly simple. The regular house operator can readily run Renfax pictures.

A World man saw several of the subjects now being and shortly to be released by the Renfax Company. One among them that seemed certain to make a hit is a burlesque on a serial that became very well known. One that is certain to make a big hit features one of the greatest stars in vaudeville.

"Money"

Sensational Five-Part Melodrama with Million-Dollar Banquet and Coming to It of Hungry Workingmen.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

THIS picture, entitled "Money," and offered on the World Film program, is frankly a melodrama. Its feature is a dinner given by a monopolist to the princes of the world, while the workingmen in his shops, on strike because he won't pay more than seventy-five cents a day, are starving. They attack the home of the multimillionaire during the dinner and drive away the guests. The foreman of the factory, who sympathizes with the men, at first tries to stop them from assaulting the house; but not being able to hold them back, follows to protect the rich man's daughter and finds her being insulted by one of her father's drunken guests.

Scene from "Money" (World Film).

The story is not logical nor artistic. The producer has relied on the gorgeous things that he pictures rather than on a convincing tale. His story is cheap, but he has got a few extremely pretty views and has also got another kind of interest from picturing the almost poetically extravagant waste of the banquet.

EDISON STAGE ENLARGED.

Carrying out the plans for a program with two features on their weekly program, one two-reel and one three-reel, the Edison Studio has been enlarged so as to include another stage larger than the average. Director Ashley Miller, the dean of the Edison Studio, is now using it to make Mrs Fiske's great success, "In Spite of All," which, though a feature, is to be released in the regular service program.

"For Her People"

Three-Reel Pathe-Turner Production in Which Sociology is Given First Place.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE appeal of this production, which has chosen for its basis a worthy subject, lies principally in the effects produced by artistic direction, and the ability of the players in carrying out the idea.

The story is an ordinary story of a strike among the employes of a large milling concern in Lancashire, Eng., consequent on an unjust lowering of wages by the mercenary owner of the mill. The principal character of the story, into whose makeup all the strength of purpose, all the heroism, all the beauty of precept has been poured, is Joan, one of the employes of the mill, whose meagre earnings served as the sole support of herself and an invalid mother. This role has been played by Florence Turner, who has succeeded in making of Joan a quaint and ethereal figure, simple in character and determined to stand by the truth of her convictions.

Scene from "For Her People" (Pathe).

A love strain of considerable interest winds its way through the plot of the story, serving as a bolster for various dramatic situations, and a goad to Joan's final heroic action. The role of the heavy has been allotted to Jack Raymond, who has brought with him into the picture a realistic conception of a strike leader whose love for his fellows is not great enough to prevent his inciting them to crime in the attempt to right their wrongs.

A great deal of praise is due to the manner in which the picture has been presented. Nothing could be more pathetic than the attempted thefts of starving mothers and children from the green grocer, some of them even begging to part with almost the last stitch of warm covering belonging to them in exchange for food, previous to theft. Nor could anything be more effective than "an ominous lull," when men and young women, mothers and babies, stand silently about the doors of the closed mill waiting for something to happen.

The production, which is a valuable asset on the side of labor, has been further aided in its action by Clifford Pembroke, Franklin Bellame, and Herbert Dansey.

EAST LIVERPOOL HAS HANDSOME THEATER.

The McKinley theater, one of the biggest and best equipped in the middle west, has just been completed at East Liverpool, Ohio. It has seating capacity for 1,000 persons.

The McKinley was designed by the W. C. Owens Company, Cleveland. The exterior of clay-craft tapestry brick and the general construction is of reinforced concrete. Feature films in addition to a program of regular releases constitute the policy of the McKinley management.

KLEINE MAKES NEW COMEDY.

Director Fitzmaurice, of the Kleine studio, at 11 East 14th street, New York, announces the completion of a new comedy, entitled "Who's Who in Society." The production features a number of well-known players, including Kate Sargeant, who has been identified with many of the big Broadway successes of recent years; Della Connor, Dan Moyles and others.

Brady Announces Pictures Plans

WILLIAM A. BRADY announces that he will double his output of feature pictures beginning May 1. The Brady Picture Play Corporations thus far has released several of the most successful screen plays of the season.

Beginning with Robert Warwick, in "The Dollar Mark," by George Broadhurst, this company has issued in monthly succession, Thomas A. Wise, in "The Gentleman from Mississippi"; Emma Dunn, in "Mother"; Robert Warwick, in "The Man of the Hour"; Alice Brady, in "As Ye Sow"; and Wilton Lackaye, in "The Pit."

William A. Brady.

Work now is under way upon Dion Boucicault's "After Dark" and George Broadhurst's "What Happened to Jones," both with star casts. These will be followed by the picture production of "Trilby," with Wilton Lackaye playing his original character, "Svengali," and a famous woman star in the title part. Negotiations are progressing also toward securing several members of the original cast. The production of "Trilby" will be made by the Brady corporation in association with the Famous Players Company.

Contracts are pending with Thomas A. Wise to appear in a series of "Foxy Grandpa" features. "Woman and Wine," the big French melodrama, is to have a sensational production. Holbrook Blinn has engaged with Mr. Brady to act his original character in "The Boss," by Edward Sheldon, and Robert Warwick is to play Robert Mantell's role in "The Face in the Moonlight."

The Brady company is arranging to take over one of the largest studios and shops in the vicinity of New York on May 1. At present the Brady films are released through the World Film Company. It is expected that during the following year the Brady concern will release twenty-four features.

"EDISON NIGHTS" POPULAR.

"Edison Nights," where the program is exclusively Edison pictures and made more interesting by the appearance on the stage of the characters in the pictures, are proving very popular in New York City and vicinity.

Another such a night was held at the Claremont Theatre, 135th street and Broadway, Sunday night, January 24, when the Edison masterpiece, "Fantasma," "The Courtship of the Cooks," a comedy, and "The Stenographer" of "The Girl Who Earns Her Living" types were shown. Notwithstanding the unfavorable weather, the 1,500-capacity house was packed to the doors and warmly greeted the introduction from the stage of Gertrude McCoy, Marie Le Manna, and Charles Sutton.

The Crescent Theater, on Washington Heights, New York, held a similar gala event on the evening of January 18 when the Edison feature, "My Friend From India," "Lena," a comedy, and "The Pines of Lory" were shown. A great reception was tendered the Edison stars, Miriam Nesbitt, Viola Dana, Mrs. Bechtel, Marc MacDermott, Augustus Phillips, Robert Brower and Edward Earle.

ANOTHER FILM MAN IN THE HOSPITAL.

Charles S. Egan, general manager of the Egan Film Company with offices at 703 Columbia Theater Building, New York, is recovering from a very serious operation. Mr. Egan was taken suddenly ill at his home and hurried to the Englewood Hospital, where an operation was necessary to save his life. Dr. Douglas, specialist of New York, was hurriedly called and used perfect skill in removing a dangerous ulcer from Mr. Egan's stomach, and stated at the time that nothing but a miracle would permit him to recover. The miracle has happened and we are thankful to inform his friends that Mr. Egan is progressing nicely. Mr. Egan is a brother to Agnes Egan Cobb.

Two Edison Releases

"The Voice of Conscience"—One Reel—"Her Husband's Son"—Two Reels.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

TWO plays are of a situation so often shown on the screen that their repetition can only be justified by extraordinary conditions. "The Voice of Conscience" and "Her Husband's Son" both deal with the suspicions of the middle-aged man of ability and standing wedded to a beautiful young woman. Inasmuch as the men and women portrayed admittedly possess a certain amount of worldly knowledge of a highly practical character, that acquired in business, professional and social training, which ordinarily serves to guide conduct, it would seem as though their presentation as having little knowledge of human nature is out of accord with common sense. It looks very much as though these characters are seen through the eyes of inexperience, and portrayed as the author sees them, not as we know them. Until authors and dirctors learn to do away with forced action and unnatural characterization and get down to plain sense, resting their case upon observed facts of today rather than theatrical traditions, they will have no real standing in court.

Scene from "The Voice of Conscience" (Edison).

Strange as it may sound, error is a product of reason, of reason combined with inability to rightly interpret what is passing before our eyes. One traditional error relates to lovely women. Beauty in woman is not unnatural—it is the result of health and normal development and not accompanied by weakness of function in brain or body. Beautiful women receive attention from bright and strong men—nature's bid for survival of the fittest—just as the fittest are surviving in the Edison Company. Women are not dulled by contact with bright men, and if there is anything to be gained from varied human experience they are the gainers. Constantly assailed by predatory males, they know better how to guard the precious well of natural affection than the homely girl of warm heart and little experience. The old tradition of disassociating beauty from brains is not in accord with the evidence. Men also instinctively recognize that so-called "innocent" beauty is oftenest the sign of innate purity, woman's strongest guard.

Scene from "Her Husband's Son" (Edison).

There is nothing particularly innocent about the middle-aged man of ability and standing. He has usually been through an experience which has taught him something about women and a great deal about his brother man. In both "Her Husband's Son" and "The Voice of Conscience" we have the middle-aged man of tried experience and of admitted ability acting like callow simps of seventeen. One has a dissipated son, who repeatedly calls for large sums of money, and is finally refused. Identical with that refusal, the lively young wife calls for the same sum of money as that needed by the spendthrift and has an interview with a man outside the house. The middle-aged husband, who has every reason to believe in his wife's devotion, cannot reason out this childish problem. In the other case, the middle-aged husband deliberately injects a handsome young man into his family life to amuse the lovely wife, while he, the husband, attends to professional duties.

It is to be expected that amateurs will write such stuff—they can cull it from "Comments On the Flms," but it is not to be expected that capable directors should be forcing constant repetitions with those horrors, the dropped letter and arbitrary discovery of compromising false testimony, on a generous public. No dignity and common sense among men of supposed dignity and common sense, no purity and intelligence among women of clean and acute minds. French dramatists could write nothing about the jeunne fille because her life was colorless, so they used the ancient "triangle" as a basis for many plays, and this has been handed down in theatrical circles as representative of what is "dramatic." How can sympathy be won for such inane characters? Where is the sympathetic element? Where is the suspense in a "triangle" situation whose outcome is easily foreseen? Even if in France, where that idea was a typical view of society, there is small need of holding up in constant repetition what only dwarfs and stunts our ideals of men and women. I can only quote in support of my plea for all that is strong, sensible and invigorating in photo-drama what Herbert Spencer said: "All the shores of the great ocean of Time are strewn with these whitened skeletons of misguided thought. Truth furnishes the only real hope. It is truth that should be made attractive, alluring, contagious, to such a degree that it shall penetrate the whole of mankind, crowding out and replacing error that now fills the world."

SWEDISH FILM MAN IN NEW YORK.

Ernest Elmquist, sales manager of the Swedish Biograph Company, is now in New York City looking over the film market. Mr. Elmquist is seeking suitable productions, especially comedies, for release through the offices of his company in Berlin, London, St. Petersburg, Copenhagen and Christiania. While in this country Mr. Elmquist will introduce to the American trade the product of the Swedish Biograph Company, of which he has brought with him as samples two three-reel and two four-reel subjects. Mr. Elmquist is well known to the film men of Sweden. Prior to taking up his work with the Swedish Biograph he was for four years office manager of one of the largest exchanges in Stockholm. Mr. Elmquist may be reached through the Swedish Chamber of Commerce, Produce Exchange, New York City.

LORETTA BLAKE IN "THE BROKEN LULLABY."

Loretta Blake is featured in a one-reel Griffith-Mutual drama, called "The Broken Lullaby," produced by George A. Baranger and now released in the Mutual program. Mrs. Blake appears as the young wife who hides her baby in a hay barn to protect it from her drunken husband. Accidentally the father sets the barn on fire, but a young farm hand, who has secretly loved the mother, succeeds in saving the baby. W. R. Lowery plays opposite Mrs. Blake.

"THE ADVENTURES OF KATHLYN" FOR CHICAGO PUBLIC LIBRARY.

The Chicago Public Library paid a recent compliment to "The Adventures of Kathlyn," novelized by Harold McGrath, by ordering a special edition to be placed on the library shelves. The books were presented to the library by W. N. Selig. There are many calls for this popular work which was written from "The Adventures of Kathlyn" film serial, the first of its kind, and which continues to be immensely popular in this and other countries.

"The Gems of Foscarina"

Glimpse into Past Shows Gems Hidden—Leads to Modern Detective Tale—Setting Is Venice, with Beautiful Views (Five-Reel True Feature Offering).

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

THIS modern detective story, "The Gems of Foscarina," has a prologue taking the spectator back to those times of Venice's glory, when the city was ruined by a Council of Ten to which, if one should be denounced, it usually meant death. It was just a slip of paper put into "the lion's mouth" that caused Baiamonte, husband of the beautiful Foscarina, to flee from the city and to hide his wife's gems.

Years have passed and a Russian woman, descendant of Scene from "Gems of Foscarina" (True Feature).

Foscarina, comes to live in the old Baiamonte palace. She has a maid. A ghost-like creature steals her jeweled necklace in the night and she gets Argo, noted detective, to come to the palace. He finds that the theft is done by two, calling themselves, "the secret friends," and nabs them in the very act of prying open the tomb of Foscarina to get the fabulous gems that it is still remembered she long ago possessed. Only one of the criminals is actually caught, and he has a paper telling where the gems are hidden—the paper came from a locket taken from the tomb. It ends in a chase between the thieves and the detective to get to the hiding place first. The former wins out; but—we have been suspecting by this time that one of the thieves is the maid of the heroine—they are again stolen from the living owner and the detective again rescues them.

There is suspense in the story; but there are places in the construction where the realism and lifelikeness are thin. The beauty and interest of the backgrounds in and about the Queen City of the Adriatic are a big asset to the offering—some of these scenes are simply filled with romance and charm. The photography is clear and artistic.

"DU BARRY" BREAKING RECORDS.

George Kleine's "Du Barry," featuring Mrs. Leslie Carter, which opened its bookings so auspiciously following the special performance for exhibitors at the Candler theater, New York, January 11, is breaking records throughout the east. The Hamilton and 86th Street theaters, which opened the first half of last week with "Du Barry," were compelled to give extra afternoon performances to accommodate the crowds; Flushing theater, Flushing, N. Y., played to large business, booking a return date immediately; the Regent and Duffield, in Brooklyn, played to standing room only, while the record for high-class bookings in Buffalo was broken with thirteen dates in that city. "Du Barry" is booked for a solid week at the Strand, three days at the new Victoria, two days at the Elmwood and two days at the Ellen Terry, all in Buffalo.

REALISTIC DUEL SCENE IN "THE AMBITION OF THE BARON."

A most realistic duel is fought by Mr. Francis X. Bushman and Lester Cuneo in an unusual scene from the Essanay drama, "The Ambition of the Baron." After a lamp has been knocked over, the two men battle with swords in a dark room. The only light by which the men can be seen is made by the sparks as the swords meet. The duelists are seen in a succession of flashes, fading and reappearing with great rapidity.

"Justified"

A Sympathetic Story of a Husband's Injustice and a Wife's Goodness Filmed in Two Parts by the American.

Reviewed by James S. McQuade.

THE American announces for release, on February 8, a two-reel subject that will make a strong appeal to patrons of that make. It has been carefully and connectedly produced by Director Otto and an able cast of western players, with Miss Winifred Greenwood, Ed. Coxen and George Field in the principal roles.

The scenes are laid in the West and reflect faithfully the atmosphere of that section and the types of character at the time of the story. The photography is in full keeping with the reputation of the American in this respect. Advantage is taken of a tremendous, natural rainstorm to further accentuate the woes of the innocent wife, who has been cast out into the night by her hasty-tempered husband. The effect excites a torrent of sympathy on the part of the spectator, as he views the woeful plight of the victim on the screen.

Tom Allen, an industrious young miner, lives happily with his wife in their lonely mountain cabin until he grows jealous of a lazy, good-for-nothing neighbor, Joe Mills, who is known as "The Drone." Tom finds his wife talking to Mills on one occasion and warns her of the fellow's general worthlessness. Soon afterward Mills again makes a point of calling at the Allen home, and is again discovered by Tom, who arrives there at the same time. On this occasion, after ordering Mills from the cabin, Tom wounds his wife's sensitiveness by telling her that unless Mills keeps away he will think that she is in love with him.

Tom keeps the gold nuggets, which he has washed out of his placer mine, in a tin canister, in his bedroom. Mills, during a secret visit, while he watches Tom through the window, discovers the hiding place. One evening, when Tom has left to call on a distant neighbor, Mills enters the room through a window. Tom, missing his pipe from his pocket, returns to his home to get it, and enters the dwelling room about the same time. His wife, who expects a little stranger soon and who desires to spring the glad surprise on her husband later on, hears Tom's footsteps and rushes to the bedroom to hide the little tokens of her motherly providence. There she discovers Mills, and there a moment later they are both discovered by Tom Allen. Mills, when confronted, declares that he is the lover of Tom Allen's wife, and the foolish husband believes him. Then Mills escapes with the nuggets, while Tom disgracefully insults his wife and drives her out into the night.

Five years pass and Tom Allen is still searching for the wife he has so cruelly wronged. One day he enters a saloon far away from the mountain cabin and recognizes among the gamblers seated at a table the worthless Mills. There is an exchange of shots, the first of which wounds Tom in the wrist, while the second presumably kills Mills. Tom flees, thinking he has killed his man, and seeks refuge in the woodhouse of a cottage nearby. This cottage is the new home of his long-sought wife and her little boy. Husband and wife just become reconciled when the sheriff and his posse arrive on the scene and arrest Tom on the charge of murder. A jury trial results in the verdict of "justified," as Mills had not been killed, and furthermore, had been identified as an escaped murderer.

Scene from "Justified" (American).

"Young Romance"

A Jesse L. Lasky Production with Edith Taliaferro in a Bit of Human Comedy.

Reviewed by W. Stephen Bush.

THIS production forever silences the claim that refined comedy cannot be conveyed via the screen. A more refined comedy has never been shown since the days of Moliere. Moreover, it is American refined comedy. You do not have to extract and then study over bits of humor as you have to do in so many foreign comedies (even the best), but the humor of the thing hits you directly in the solar plexus. It is the sparkling, exuberant bubbling humor of our own country condensed and trebly distilled and an everlasting provocation to hearty laughter. Nobody is kicked in the rear (mirabile dictu), there is no trick-hose or seltzer bottle, nobody falls over himself or herself and there is positively no chase. Old-time motion picture men will wonder how a screen comedy can be constructed without these time-honored ingredients, but they will cease to wonder after they have seen "Young Romance." I venture to predict right now that no farce comedy will get more laughs than "Young Romance," and no farce comedy can possibly put an audience into such lasting good humor as "Young Romance." Remarkable as has been the Lasky record in the film portrayal of noted dramatic subjects, this gem of honest, genuine human comedy deserves to rank with the best it has produced.

Scene from "Young Romance" (Lasky).

The theme of the comedy is rich, and in the skilful hands of William C. De Mille and Edith Taliaferro it has yielded no common crop of laughs. Nellie Nolan is bound by fate to the homely realities of a notion counter in a department store, while her romantic soul soars aloft and loses itself in the contemplation of the social glories of the Four Hundred. Tom Nolan, prosaically pursuing the duties of a clerk in the hardware section of the same department store, is tormented by similar yearnings of social ambition. Both of them have saved a little money and, unknown to each other, they yield to the same overpowering impulse and decide to invest their savings in a short but gorgeous and lovely time in Newport. Two finer types than Miss Edith and Mr. Tom Forman could not possibly have been selected. Both in appearance and in acting they fitted their parts like the proverbial glove. Poor Tom's distress at the sight of a bill of fare in French, of which he could understand nothing but the fabulous prices ($3.00 for a pressed prairie chicken), was a most exquisite bit of acting. The conscious condescension of the waiter who served the two lovers and whose keen eye penetrated their thin pathetic tinsel of wealth and social glory was characteristic of the perfection in details, which is found in every part of this feature.

A bit of adventure enters into the action with the person of an Italian adventurer posing as a nobleman and for a time the little store-girl parading as the celebrated heiress, "Ethel Van Dusen," gets enough real thrills to last her long beyond her honeymoon. Tom posing under the classy patronymic of Robert De Vignier, becomes a real hero and rescues the "heiress," who had been kidnapped and marooned on an island by the foreign swindler and fortune hunter. When, after their expensive "romance," the two young people "discover" each other in their true identities right in the department store, they are glad to be what they are, which is about the highest form of human happiness. They celebrate their "discovery" in a cheap restaurant where they feel ever so much more at home. The surroundings and especially the prices seem much more natural than in the "rechercho chambro separee" at Newport, and at the end of the meal Tom goes off to get a marriage license.

Joseph Lamy

IT IS a wide experience in the foreign film market which Joseph Lamy brings with him to New York, to which city he has come as a result of conditions in Europe at the present time. Mr. Lamy has been in the film business eight years. Besides doing a large export business to South America he has been manager of a large Spanish importing concern which successfully represented the Edison, Essanay and Imp productions as well as the output of European manufacturers. Three years ago Mr. Lamy took over the sub-direction of the business of a Parisian manufacturer who was also an importer and exporter of foreign and French films. Mr. Lamy remained with this concern two years, during which time through the negotiation of important producing contracts he materially increased its business. He resigned in order that he might establish his own offices, the Cinema Center, at 94 Rue Lafayette, Paris, and conduct a general agency for film producers and engage in importing and exporting.

Joseph Lamy.

In the positions Mr. Lamy has held he has built up an extensive acquaintance among foreign film men. He has traveled over the most of Europe and in parts of South America. In this way he has become acquainted with the film requirements peculiar to each country. The breaking out of the war interfered with the execution of several important contracts Mr. Lamy had secured, so he decided to grasp the opportunity of coming to the United States and studying conditions here, especially with a view of increasing his export trade to South America, Italy, Spain and France. Mr. Lamy believes there are many opportunities in this country in the exporting line and expects to remain some time. He writes and speaks five languages. He is open for a connection with the right concern, he says, and is confident he will find one to whom his Paris and Barcelona offices and his South American and Italian connections will appeal. Mr. Lamy's address is Box 129, Times Square Station.

REAL MODELS WITH LEW FIELDS IN "OLD DUTCH."

Frank Crane insists upon having things done properly, and when he saw that there would be an occasion to use some beautiful models in the Palm Beach scenes of the Lew Fields photoplay, "Old Dutch," he sent his assistants to the studios of the most famous artists of America to get the models to come to Fort Lee and pose in the Lew Fields picture. The following list of models and the artists they pose for indicates that the assistants did their share of the work, for they all worked in the picture with Lew Fields: Helen Hawley, Howard Chandler Christy; Peggy O'Neil, Hamilton King; Dorothy Goodrich, Haskell Coffin; Mary Smith, James Montgomery Flagg; Dorothy Robbins, Harrison Fisher; Eve Frere, Henry Hutt; Katherine Lane, Charles Dana Gibson; Anita Wood, Penryn Stanslaw.

CATHERINE CARR TAKES VACATION.

Catherine Carr, chief scenario editor of the Kinetophote, left for Bermuda on January 23 for a stay of two or three weeks to recuperate from the stress of work which has been her lot during the past four or five months. She will, however, combine business with pleasure, as she expects to work out some new photoplay ideas while away.

"Tainted"

An Interesting Heredity Problem Picture—Not Sensational and Not a Preachment, but a Melodrama in Which Evil Reaps Its Reward of Trouble.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

THIS two-reel picture from the Kriterion Santa Barbara studio with Fritzi Brunnette in the leading role and directed by Robert Daly, is a melodramatic offering of substantial interest. Its author plainly wanted to write a good story rather than to provide a lesson on the evils of selfish indulgence. In it is a doctor with the taint of gambling, a laborer with the taint of drink, and a rich clubman with what a subtitle calls "the taint." The doctor is called in when the rich man's daughter is born and has to tell him that his child never can see. About the same time, the drunkard's wife gives birth to a son. The doctor, to please the rich client, changes those children and they grow up near each other, the one a rich youth, the other a washer woman's daughter.

Scene from "Tainted" (Kriterion).

As the years pass, the taints work on the three men as such taints do. The clubman has locomotor and incipient paresis. The doctor kills himself in a gambling den after blackmailing the rich man. The drunkard falls down his own stairs and dies. The drunkard's son drinks and has the rich man's money to spend. The blind girl sells flowers on the street. The boy who is "broke," steals a dollar bill from the girl and his luck changes, he wins a big fortune at gambling. This, in repentance, he returns to the blind girl and later he marries her, thus making up in part for the injustice her father had done her in her early days.

The weak point in the production is the change of players in the part of the growing boy. At fifteen, one actor takes the part, and five years later, another is filling his clothes, but not his personality, and this makes for confusion. It is true that the plot is so simple that it hardly requires a close attention, and the story will be understood even with the changed player. The staging and general direction of the offering are of high order.

Kalem Three-Part Features

Will be Released Every Week on the Regular Program—Leading Stars Will Appear.

FROM Kalem comes one of the most important announcements ever issued by that concern and one that is of special interest to every exhibitor. It is to the effect that Kalem will issue a three-act feature production as part of its regular weekly program, commencing March 8.

It is a common complaint that the extra price which the average exhibitor is compelled to pay for feature attractions frequently represents a day's profits. With a three-act Kalem drama as part of his regular service, the exhibitor will be relieved of the necessity of spending additional money for an extra attraction.

It might be stated that the manner in which Kalem has arranged to release these features so as to make it possible for every exhibitor to secure them, is worthy of special comment. According to the announcement, while a three-act production will be issued every week, one will be released every alternate Monday, commencing March 8, and one every alternate Friday, commencing March 19.

From information which has leaked out concerning the nature of these three-act feature productions, and the time and money being expended upon each of them, it is evident that Kalem is sparing no effort to make them noteworthy in every respect. It is claimed that some of the greatest novelties ever shown in motion pictures will be embraced in these productions.

This last assertion is borne out by the statement that among the forthcoming releases will be ten powerful modern dramas, each based upon one of the Ten Commandments. The tremendous appeal possessed by these subjects, and their advertising and attraction values will be instantly apparent to every exhibitor.

Of additional interest, is the statement that the most popular Kalem stars will appear in the three-act feature productions. Some of the stars are Alice Joyce, Alice Hollister, Marguerite Courtot, Anna Nilsson, Guy Coombs, Tom Moore, and Harry Millarde. The theater-filling qualities of these stars have been demonstrated upon more than one occasion.

"Their Delayed Honeymoon"

Excellent Two-Reel Farce Comedy Appearing on the Program of the United Film Service.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

A GOOD comedy is hard to find, and always welcome. "Their Delayed Honeymoon," made at the Paris Eclair studios, is one of the kind that brings a laugh with fun that is clean. It does not belong to the extreme farce comedy order and has, perhaps more of the legitimate comedy element in its makeup than that of the strictly farce.

As is the custom with European productions, the exterior locations chosen are picturesque, and interior settings are dainty and in good taste, and sometimes of the richer, heavier style. A portion of the picture has been photographed on the hill tops and among the crags.

The plot of the story consists principally of the development, by a young woman and a pretty one, of a plan whereby she may secure possession of a fortune left her by a deceased aunt, in the face of adverse circumstances. Her lover, ordered away to visit his father's warehouses all over the world, before marriage, places the young woman in a tight place, inasmuch as that the aunt's will stipulates that the fortune shall be hers on condition only that she marry before her eighteenth birthday.

Scene from "Their Delayed Honeymoon" (Warner).

Her eighteenth birthday fast upon her and her lover not expected to be with her for at least a year, she decides to make a proposal of marriage to her godfather. One of the funniest situations in the picture occurs at the point where the proposal is made and the much-tormented man good-naturedly consents to the farce which is to be dissolved at the return of the lover.

Before there is any chance of the lover returning, however, the young bride and the elderly groom have fallen in love with one another, and the situation is happily relieved through the receipt of a letter from the absent lover telling of a difficulty which he has encountered and which will prevent his returning for the next four or five years.

This comedy production is further blessed with efficient direction and a good cast.

"Winning Back"

Two-Reel Broncho of Live Theme and Attractive Treatment.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

CAST.

Ruth Castle.....Clara Williams
Rex Castle, her husband.....Harry Keenan
Wallace Castle, his brother.....George Fisher
Yvette.....Louise Glaum

PRODUCED by Mr. Barker from a scenario by C. Gardner Sullivan and Thos. H. Ince, "Winning Back" has a great deal more merit than its placarding title would indicate. Above all things, it deals with a problem as old as Scene from "Winning Back" (Broncho).

Adam and ever new in its varied aspects and has a definite purpose. It is the ambition of Ince to paint life frankly as he sees it, yet he unconsciously searches for a romance in his portrayal. "Winning Back" is a story of wealthy people, but they are not sickly idealizations. They are of the earth they dwell upon, with a lot of rugged animality protruding from their fine raiment, and their story brings out what is primitive in human nature.

The problem touches that raised by Elsie Clews Parsons: "Through ignorance of one another's natures and of sex responsibility in general, husbands and wives create conditions very unfavorable to enduring monogamy," and it is elevated by excellent characterization to a much higher place than that attained by most stories of its kind. It presents the case of Ruth Castle, good young wife and mother, enjoying the respect of friends and strong protective friendship of her wealthy husband, but doomed to solitary heart-hunger because he has not finished sowing his wild oats. She preserves her pride and her purity with dauntless courage until confronted with evidence of his infidelity.

It has been said that the only unimagined misdeed in the world is that of which the average wife has not suspected her husband, but Ruth Castle is given no very serious reason to be suspicious until the eighth anniversary of her marriage. On the evening of that day she is tempted to see what her fond husband has brought for a present and discovers a diamond bracelet of unusual design in his overcoat pocket. She restores it and waits with smiles of anticipation. He leaves suddenly on the pretext of keeping a business engagement, and it dawns on her that the sum of his recent conduct is not above suspicion. The suspicion is confirmed when, in company with her mother at a theatrical performance, she sees the bracelet on the arm of danseuse "Yvette."

Like "Francillon" in Dumas' play, she resolves to follow the course pursued by her husband, to live the life that he pursues. If he cannot love purity, devotion and dignity in his mate, she will form herself on the model of women who attract him. The story now develops along very animated lines to an end which the title carefully announces in advance. The construction and treatment entirely satisfactory, the characterization of a superior kind, the types well chosen, the theme up to date, only the title, "Winning Back" is faulty, a summing up on the credit side that makes the entire production well worth while.

The White Rats Actors' Union of America will hold a scamper at their clubhouse on the evening of Saturday, January 30. The fun begins at 11.15.

Constance Alice Talmadge

CONSTANCE ALICE TALMADGE, one of the youngest leading women of the Vitagraph Stock Company, is typically American, having been born of American parents in Brooklyn, N. Y. Her father, Frederick Talmadge, originally came from Connecticut, his ancestors being of English origin, while her mother, whose maiden name was Margaret Brown, is a native of New York City, coming of purely American Stock.

Constance Talmadge was born April 19th, 1899, and is one of the very few still in their teens talented enough to head a company of film artists without first having gained, at least, some knowledge in the school of experience. Her only introduction to the requirements of acting was obtained at Erasmus High School, in Brooklyn, N. Y., where, as a scholar, she was prominent in amateur theatricals, and acquired the nick-name of "Dutch" on account of her excellent impersonation of German character parts.

Constance Alice Talmadge.

Constance, or "Dutch," as she is still familiarly called by her personal friends, had her first try-out before the camera in the Vitagraph Broadway Star Feature comedy, "Uncle Bill," and her work won her immediate membership in the stock company. Her first director was Ralph W. Ince, and it is to his careful direction, she attributes the clearness of her first insight into the mysteries of acting for moving pictures.

Although her first work was as a comedienne, she is equally at home in drama, the picture in which she has already appeared being about equally divided between the two: "In Bridal Attire," "Father's Timepiece," "The Green Cat," "The Peacemaker," "The Mysterious Lodger," "The Moonstone of Fez," "In the Latin Quarter."

Realizing that athletics are an important factor in the curriculum of a motion picture star, Miss Talmadge is fast becoming proficient in such out-of-doors sports as swimming, running, and skating, both roller and ice. Her chief in-door diversion is dancing, although she has recently engaged the services of a boxing instructor who reports satisfactory progress in the art of self defense from his apt pupil.

It is the aim of Miss Talmadge to become one of those who reach the very topmost rung of the ladder of motion picture fame, and if close application to the needs required will accomplish her purpose it won't be long before her name will be flashed on the screen of stardom in letters of fire.

BEAUTIES OF SWITZERLAND.

In the Switzerland Building at the Panama exposition a special place is to be allotted to a moving picture exhibition of the Beauties and Industries of that charming country. Without doubt this will prove one of the most interesting art exhibitions to be seen. Possessing a beauty and quaintness peculiar to itself, distinct from anything possible in any other country, with people and industries at once cultured and artistic, many will be attracted by such an opportunity to see the natural grandeur of the little, yet famous, Alpine republic.

LILLIAN DREW IN ADE COMEDY.

Lillian Drew cleverly portrays a newly rich woman trying to break into society in one of George Ade's funniest Essanay comedies, "The Fable of Elvira and Farina and the Meal Ticket." She cleverly brings out how the ambitious woman will balk at nothing to win her way into select circles. She finally gains her ends after discouragements that would dampen the ardor of any mere man.

MACKLEY, SAMPSON AND LONG IN "THE EXPRESS MESSENGER."

"Sheriff" Arthur Mackley is producing "The Express Messenger" for release in the Mutual program. Teddy Sampson and Walter Long are featured in the cast of this one-reeler, and Mackley himself appears in his time-honored western characterization.

South American Pictures

Depicting the Wonderful Explorations of Captain J. Campbell Besley Among the Andes and in the Regions of the Amazon.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE interesting series of South American pictures being presented by Robt. W. Priest at the Maxine Elliott Theater are as valuable as they are entertaining. Their values exceed in some respects anything of the kind that has yet been placed before the public. The fact that they penetrate the practically unexplored regions of the Amazon River, giving us an accurate idea not alone of its scenic qualities, but of the wild life that inhabits its jungles make them doubly interesting.

These pictures are of great value in the study of archaeology, of zoology, of the industries of the natives of Peru, Brazil and Bolivia; they are of value in the study of geology, and mineralogy, as demonstrated especially in the scenes showing the immense saline deposits in the Andes, through which tunnels have been cut to make way for a railroad which winds for a short distance through the mountains. There are also valuable studies in architecture, and natural history, apart from the topographical and geographical features of interest connected with these remarkable films.

The party, composed of eleven men, including Captain Besley and Franklin B. Coates, started from England and came by way of the Canary Islands to Peru, and thence on their perilous journey to the source of the Amazon, which, upon being reached, was found to possess the usual small dimensions of the source of greatness. It is a mere pool that one could almost step across. And then having found the source they proceeded to make that venturesome trip over the rapids and through the whirlpools of this swift running river, whose currents are indescribable perversity. Once during this trip, fearing to venture through a certain whirlpool, they left their crudely fashioned raft to be let loose by a couple of natives, while they themselves took to the land, hoping to meet the raft farther on.

Their hopes were dashed, however, when later, arrived at the point where they expected again to follow the current of the stream, the raft, what was left of it, floated past, possibly to make firewood for some Indian dame.

Interesting scenes on the Hullalapa River rapids are also shown. Lake Titicaca, which is some 13,000 feet in elevation, forms a beautiful subject for the camera. Macchu Pijchu, a "city in a crater," elevated 3,000 feet above the surrounding river, and other wonderful sights and remnants of a world and an empire which existed thousands of years ago. The ruins of the empire of the Incas, showing their mummies, their pottery, their statuary, and their crumbling residences, some of which only the portals remain, and many other reminiscences of the dead ages one looks upon with awe.

Then, again, there is that wonderfully spectacular picture of the great boa constrictor in the act of climbing a tree. This gives us a new and a correct idea of how this terrible monster accomplishes a feat which is as easy for him as stepping from the street to the pavement is for us. It is interesting to note that he does not wind his body about the tree, but simply folds lap upon lap of his monstrous body part way up the tree, embracing it in a tight grip, and then his head and the rest of him hugs straight up the trunk to its top.

A remarkably large specimen of the anaconda is also shown. This snake is possibly the largest that has ever been photographed. Fine specimens of the jaguar, and also of the various species of birds of South America have been photographed at close range. The Llama as a beast of burden is interesting. The process by which the rubber tree is tapped, and various other scenes of equal interest are shown in the course of these possibly 6,000 feet of interesting film.

It would not be necessary to comment on the photographic quality of films taken in the jungles of South America. That they could be safely transported, and their scenes presented to us in legible condition, is the marvel which we must contemplate.

And not less interesting than any of the foregoing is the trip across the snow-covered peaks of the Andes, showing some of their almost impassibly steep slopes over which men and mules traversed.

The presentation of the Besley pictures has an added interest in the explanatory remarks of Harry Humphrey, who clothes in pleasing and appropriate language the story of the exploration party.

Fielding's Collapsible Studio

Actor-Director Builds One That Can Be Erected in Six Hours and Taken Down in Three.

THERE was a moment's silence. Ten men, trained to the use of the Stillson wrench and instructed as to the purpose of every piece of material at hand, stood waiting. Then followed a shout:

"Let her go!"

And ten men jumped into the task of creating a time record in the construction of a studio. Romaine Fielding was the one who gave the signal and during the six hours which ensued, the time it took to fully complete the erection of the collapsable studio, he was on hand to personally supervise every detail. Six hours after the word "go" had been given there stood at the Fair Grounds at Phoenix, Ariz., a comfortable studio ready for any scene which might be set up.

While there have been constructed sundry and various kinds of collapsable studios or stages for moving picture work, the one which has just been finished by Mr. Fielding for use during his world tour, will undoubtedly establish itself as a criterion for practicability, convenience and simplicity of handling. Three hours is all it takes to tear down the studio, pack it and have it ready for shipping. There are twelve concrete abutments on which the stage rests which takes a matter of a day or two to make, but these are always left behind when moving time comes.

The plans and specifications for this studio were drawn up by the Lubin star prior to his leaving Philadelphia. His idea was to create a sectional studio of sufficient proportions to accommodate any kind of an interior setting from a simple bed chamber to an elaborate ball room, and yet one which could be torn down and transported with the least possible labor and expense. In the present undertaking he has brought to bear all his experience, both in the legitimate and moving pictures.

With double canvas sidings and coverings, one canvas arranged on the outside of the supports and the other on the inside, the whole is absolutely rainproof. And every inch of covering is movable so that the best lighting effects may be obtained. Again, there is no bagging of the canvas in this process; no matter how the coverings are drawn, not a shadow can be cast across the stage proper.

This stage, the flooring of which is sectional, has a 30 by 40 foot clear working space. It is 26 feet high in front and 20 in the rear. All the supports are made of 1½-inch wrought iron pipe with screw jointings. Every support and jointing and floor section has been made according to those specifications which will allow the whole to be packed into a solid mass capable of easy egress from and ingress to a sixty-foot baggage car. White paint has been applied as a coating for the supports, and these supports have all been numbered for identification when the time comes for tearing down and putting up the studio again, which will probably be next summer when Mr. Fielding and his company move on to California. This studio will be carried on the world tour which the company is going to make after leaving Phoenix.

Romaine Fielding Supervising Erection of New Collapsible Studio.

The first scenes to be taken on this stage will be several in "West, Two Thousand Miles," a two-real comedy drama in which Mr. Fielding plays the lead role. He is also the author and director of the piece.

Lee Lawson, formerly technical director at the Universal's old ranch on the coast, has been promoted to the position of general technical director for both the Hollywood and Universal City studios.

"The Millionaire Hundred Dollar Bill"

An Interesting Two-Part Vitagraph Release Featuring Lee Delaney and Leah Baird.

Reviewed by George Blaisdell.

THE Vitagraph Company will release on February 22 "The Millionaire Hundred Dollar Bill," a two-part drama, written by A. Q. Scudder. William Humphrey has produced it. The story is a straightforward one, interestingly told and well played and staged. Its theme is the settlement of a dispute between a millionaire and a district attorney as to the honesty of mankind in general. Singularly enough, it is the latter who takes the brighter side of the question, although there are times when it seems his opponent is going to win the decision on the specific instance they create.

Leo Delaney is the millionaire who leaves in the street a hundred dollar bill with the accompanying injunction that it be put to some good use. Leah Baird is the young woman who not only finds the money, but also an opportunity of gratifying her wish for the new dress which her father has denied her. That she changes her original intention and devotes the money to save from eviction a family in straitened circumstances not only brings out her better qualities, but develops situations that appeal to all. Mr. Delaney and Miss Baird make a strong team. Thomas Brooke, as the district attorney, contributes to the quality of the picture.

Scene from "The Millionaire Hundred Dollar Bill" (Vitagraph).

There are in the course of the two reels three scenes that distinctly stand out. These are as the exhausted saleswoman tells in a restaurant the pathetic circumstances in which her family is placed. Helen, after finding the money, had gone to a modistes to select a dress. While there the saleswoman had collapsed and Helen had played the good Samaritan. Another is where Helen receives the dress she had ordered and later declined that she might give the money to the poor family. The third is the denouement—the declaration of love by the millionaire whose cynicism has been overcome by the benevolence of the young woman who made such good use of the money he left in the street. That she is married in the dress she had selected for wear at a house party makes a happy ending.

NEW THEATRE FOR BALTIMORE.

The Fulton Amusement Company, 1802 Baker street, Baltimore, which concern operates a number of high-class motion picture theaters, is erecting a one-story photoplay house in North Fulton avenue, that city. The plans call for a structure 40 by 140 feet, and it will be constructed of fireproof material. It will have a seating capacity of 600 and it is estimated that $15,000 will be necessary to build the theater. George W. Coggins, manager of the Fulton Amusement Company, says that he hopes to have the new house ready by May next.

LOUIS B. MAYER UNDERGOES OPERATION.

Louis B. Mayer, of Boston, president and general manager of the American Feature Film Company of that city, announced on Wednesday, January 27, that on the day following he would register at the Polyclinic Hospital in New York City and be operated on for appendicitis. His many friends in the film world will wish him a safe journey through etherland and a quick and sound return to them.

"Alice in Wonderland"

Nonpareil Feature Film Company to Present Delightful Film Version of the Well-Known Dream Story.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE dream, or fairy story which all the children in the land and most of the grown folks know so well has been picturized again; this time by the Nonpareil Feature Film Company. Viola Savoy is featured in the production which is in five reels, and which was given its initial showing at the Strand Theater on Jan. 19th to members of the press and other invited guests. It is truly a delightful presentation of the story, and in contemplating it one of the things that stands out strongest is the artistic quality of the photography. The most beautiful locations have been chosen for the telling of the prelude of the story before Alice drops off into that sweet sleep that brought her such wonderful dreams, and subsequent to the stealing and eating of the tarts, and the meeting with the white rabbit and the black cat, and the other animals that Alice loved and which had such a large part in the making of the dream.

Viola Savoy has portrayed the character of Alice with pretty simplicity, displaying the childish wonder and unconscious piquancy of the little country girl in a most pleasing manner. But not far, if any, behind her is the interpreter of the role of the White Rabbit who led the way for Alice into Wonderland. His attention to his toilet, and the frequent changes in his costume, as well as his quaint mannerisms are truly mirth evoking. And again Mr. Mouse, who prudently made himself scarce at the animal convention when Alice indiscreetly mentioned some of the characteristics of her cat is not so far behind either of them when it comes to clever action.

The production will please all who have the good fortune to see it, and the children most of all.

ENTERPRISING WESTERN FEATURE MEN.

George Irving and O. F. Woody, who trade under the firm name of Special Features Company, with offices in the White Building, Seattle, Wash., were in New York during the past two weeks buying features for their territory. Among other good things they secured the Vitagraph feature "The Christian" for Montana, Idaho, Utah, North and South Dakota, Wyoming, Arizona, Nevada and New Mexico. They will give the first exhibition at the Broadway theater, Butte, Mont., and play all legitimate houses in their territory, many of which are included in the Cort time.

An extensive line of advertising has been secured for "The Christian," and this feature will be offered to exhibitors at a flat rate or on percentage.

It is the intention of the Special Feature Company to have a representative in New York to look out for features suitable for its territory.

PETERSON BUYS ANOTHER THEATER.

P. Peterson, owner and manager of the Bijou theater, Somerset, Pa., has bought another motion picture house. It is situated in his home town and by its acquisition Mr. Peterson controls the motion picture business of that place. It was formerly known as the Diamond, but the new owner has changed the name to the Grand. A little over a year ago Mr. Peterson came from Jeanette and purchased the Bijou, which he has been running with success since that time. Mr. Peterson's newer structure is larger than the Bijou. The population of Somerset, which numbers something like 3,000, evidently like serial pictures for Mr. Peterson has played "Perils of Pauline," "The Million Dollar Mystery," and is now showing "Zudora," "Trey o' Hearts," "The Master Key," and "The Exploits of Elaine." Mutual pictures and Box Office Attraction features are also run. A Wurlitzer instrument is used and Mr. Peterson is buying a pipe organ for the Grand theatre.

HORSLEY'S ANIMAL ARENA FORMALLY OPENED.

Invitations have been received in New York for the formal opening of the Frank C. Bostock Arena and Jungle, at Main and Washington streets, Los Angeles, on the afternoon of Tuesday, January 26. The cards were issued in the name of David Horsley, owner, and were signed by Harry E. Tudor, general manager.

FLAMINGO TO RELEASE THROUGH WORLD FILM.

General Manager Hallett, of the Flamingo Film Company, announces that his company has severed all relations with A. H. Sawyer and will hereafter release its product through the World Film Corporation. Mr. Hallett says that his company has a guarantee of the sale of thirty prints.

"Was He a Coward?"

An I. S. Plaut Feature, Full of Thrills and Propounding a Hard Question.

Reviewed by W. Stephen Bush.

THIS coming release of the I. S. Plaut Company, "Was He a Coward?" is a good, strong picture. It has had considerable publicity, owing to the daredevil feats of the hero, one Barney McPhee, and to the fact that the young woman who takes the leading part is said to be a niece of President Wilson. Both Mr. McPhee and Miss Vale, the heroine, show no lack of motion picture experience, though the fact is not unduly obvious.

In the main, the story follows conventional lines. The spendthrift son of a wealthy father exhausts the patience of his parent and is told to leave the paternal roof. He leaves, and, as the title puts it, "Fate deals harshly with him." He is arrested on a charge of picking an old man's pocket and, though innocent, he is found guilty and sentenced to prison. He breaks out of prison with another convict, which gives the photographer a chance to show a thrilling climbing feat on the wall of the prison. For a time he succeeds in concealing his identity, but after he has saved a banker's daughter and is on the high road to prosperity he is recognized as an ex-convict by the detective who arrested him for the first time. He is vindicated on the original charge, but is punished for breaking out of jail. He performs prodigies of daring all through the film; pursued by the detective he jumps from a cliff into the roaring river below, a height of more than a hundred feet.

Scene from "Was He a Coward?" (I. S. Plaut).

Nobody blames the detective for not jumping after him. He again jumps from the Harlem Bridge, and there is a most thrilling rescue of a woman who, we are assured, was going down for the third time when Barney made his wonderful plunge. It would take up too much space to record all of Barney's daring deeds. We are glad to see that in the end he comes out of it all with a whole skin and a cheerful disposition. The banker's daughter admires him so much that she insists on becoming his wife, but Barney, though madly in love with the girl, refuses to marry her, realizing that the shadow that has fallen upon his own life might throw itself across the life of his future life partner.

UNIQUE OPERATING ROOM.

Sol L. Lesser has recently installed an operating room, for screen examination of his productions. It represents a miniature theater. Two machines have been installed.

The walls have been decorated by a well-known artist, with hand paintings of different well-known subjects of art. The ceiling is latticed and draped in the order of an arbor.

Mr. Lesser believes it is quite an asset in booking his production to the best possible advantage.

LYDIA QUARANTA IN NEW ITALA FEATURES.

The first "Cabiria" star to appear in the Itala Film Company's series of new features is Lydia Quaranta, who played the titular role in the D'Annunzio production. Lydia is not a stranger to American audiences, for her excellent acting in "The Palace of Flames," "The Great Aerial Disaster," "Tigris," and other Itala successes is well remembered. Miss Quaranta's latest production is a four-act romantic-thriller, "The Treasure of the Louzats."

"Exploits of Elaine"

Episode Five of the Pathe-Hearst Serial, in which Elaine Barely Escapes Death in "The Poisoned Room."

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THIS time the "Clutching Hand" appears with a bearded mask, and this time Michael the butler in the Dodge home allows his curiosity to master him and he later meets his death through the instrumentality of his criminal master, because he peeked through the keyhole of Elaine's room to see what was happening, and was about to divulge the secret of the "Clutching Hand" to Kennedy in revenge for the black eye which he received as his first punishment.

What Michael saw when he presumed to take a "look in" at the master criminal's movements, was a bent old man, apparently spraying the walls with a mysterious fluid. The next morning when Elaine wakened, both she and her dog, which had slept in the room, were stricken with a strange illness. A note received by Elaine from the "Clutching Hand" puts Craig Kennedy on the criminal's track with more enthusiasm than ever, and as the curtain is drawn on Episode 5 we are thoroughly acquainted with the manner in which the arsenic poisoning was made so effective. We have also become acquainted with the use of the periscope, and also shooting of the poisoned needle, and cannot help wondering how many more scientific inventions can be made effective in the course of this interesting serial.

Marguerite Risser

ANNOUNCEMENT is made that Marguerite Risser, who was so successful in her work in ingenue parts with the Pathe Company, is thinking of returning to the screen. For two or three months Miss Risser has been at home with her parents in New York City, a fact which has been quite satisfactory to Mr. Risser. The father of the little woman has been reluctant to give his permission for Miss Risser to work in the pictures; she is equally anxious to do so.

Marguerite Risser.

Miss Risser received especial praise for her work in the Pathe subject, "Good Pals," a two-reel picture in which she was featured. This was the last production in which she appeared with the Jersey City company, owing to the discontinuance at that time of the stock organizations. Among other Pathe subjects in which she was seen were "The Depths of Hate," "Phoney Alarm," "Mystery of the Crimson Trail," and "The Couple Next Door."

Following her appearance in "Threads of Destiny" with Mrs. Thaw she received an offer to join the Lubin forces, but she was obliged to decline it. "My home is in New York," said Mr. Risser. "My business is here, and I want my daughter with me. If she has an opportunity of engaging with a New York company it may be different."

Miss Risser, who is seventeen years old, was one of the winners of the beauty contest conducted a few months ago by the New York Times. She has been conceded one of the best of the dramatic ingenues on the screen.

VITAGRAPH FILM SUBWAY CRUSH.

On Monday, January 25th, the Vitagraph Company of America took the first motion pictures ever made in the Interborough Subway. Powerful arc lights were installed at the Grand Central Station; the camera was "set up" in the "crow's nest" and arranged to show the congestion at "rush hour" when the crowds changed from the local to the express. This will be used in the reels of the "Greater City" for the Panama-Pacific Exposition.

"Buckshot John"

In a Five-Part Van Loan Drama Hobart Bosworth Matches His Work in "The Sea Wolf."

Reviewed by George Blaisdell.

IT IS Hobart Bosworth, veteran screen actor at his best, we see in "Buckshot John," the first of the Charles E. Van Loan dramas to be produced by Bosworth, Inc. In this five-part subject adapted by Mr. Van Loan from one of his own magazine stories, Mr. Bosworth finds a splendid medium for the display of his skill as a director and his power as an actor. For skill and power he has, as we have seen in the last half dozen years—as Edmond Dantes in "Monte Cristo," one of the early multiple films; as Wolf Larsen in "The Sea Wolf," his first production under his own name; and in many other subjects. In "Buckshot John" the long time Selig player and director has the role of an outlaw—fearless and reckless, too; a bad man in the common acceptance of the term, but a good leader of men, one who can administer punishment and take it as well.

Scene from "Buckshot John" (Bosworth).

Buckshot John Moran is a convincing type. Superbly mounted on his big black horse, armed with his sawed-off double-barreled shotgun, he looks the hard citizen. His appearance on the screen, as we see him stationed by the side of the halted locomotive and its helpless crew, brings illusion with it, and so far as Mr. Bosworth's division of the story is concerned it remains to the end. There is a subsidiary action which somehow in its earlier stages fails to excite any particular amount of interest. We fathom the drift of it as the story proceeds, but it is only as it immediately affects the outlaw that it concerns us.

Courtenay Foote as the Great Gilmore, the fake clairvoyant and later leader of his own home-made Purified Thought cult, is at the head of the supporting cast. Mr. Foote gives a fine performance and is one of the factors in the picture. It is Gilmore who by means of his knowledge of John's history and the art of the ventriloquist learns the hiding place of the plunder. Oscar Linkenhelt as the sheriff is ideal. We note the man who works without fuss and feathers, one of the few who can do exciting things in unexcited manner.

"Buckshot John" is a singular combination of western drama and straight or legitimate drama. The beginning of the story, with its hold-up of the train and its subsequent shooting-up of the town, is remarkably well done. There is realism in the scenes connected with the latter, possibly a bit too much for some in the lynching. The writer will admit that while this was nearer to what must be the truth than anything he recalls at the same time there was an absence of the repugnance he has experienced at the portrayal of many interrupted lynchings. Here the horses are drawn out from under the suspended outlaws as the sheriff rides madly over the roads, only to be too late. His denunciation of his fellow-townsmen for destroying the possibility of learning the location of the cache is characteristic; apparently he is otherwise undisturbed by their anticipation of due process of law.

It is in the last half of the story that it digs in deeply—as we watch the working out of the regeneration of the outlaw. In over twenty years no effort of the warden can "reach" him. Religion is the last resort. The convict spurns the suggestion; but he reads the Book that is left in his cell. The lines in the face soften. The light streams through iron bars—into the mind as into the cell. It is a splendid portrayal

There are situations, too, that stir the blood. There is the interview between Gilmore and the trusty in the old shed where the charlatan leads the trusty to reveal the hiding place of the booty; there are the escape from the guard, the boarding of the fast-moving freight train by Buckshot John, the encounter between John and Gilmore and the recovery of the booty; the surrender to the authorities and the return of the money, and the final pardon.

The story is well staged. The file-room of the newspaper office is especially well done. The employes of many newspapers will look upon it with envy. It is in the exteriors that the picture is at its best, however. Mountains and valleys there are in abundance and in variety. "Buckshot John" is a worth-while picture.

"The Black Box" Universal's Next Serial

E. Phillips Oppenheim, Famous English Novelist, and Otis Turner, Dean of Feature Productions, to Produce Latest Big-U Serial Feature.

THE first installment of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company's latest special feature serial, "The Black Box," will be released during the week of March 8. E. Phillips Oppenheim, the famous English novelist, has written the thrilling episodes of the play which the Universal concedes will be vastly more exciting than "Lucille Love," "The Trey o' Hearts," or "The Master Key." Herbert Rawlinson and Anna Little will be featured in the principal roles under the direction of that master producer, Otis Turner. Mr. Turner, it will be remembered, produced "Damon and Pythias."

E. Phillips Oppenheim.

Profiting by its experience with "Lucille Love" and those two other tremendously profitable serials, "The Trey o' Hearts" and "The Master Key," the Universal has not left the new serial half finished before releasing the first installment. The story of the feature is finished, half the episodes have been filmed, the advertising book is ready for the printer and the syndicate for handling the story of the play and distributing publicity and advertising matter already is formed and is waiting only for the exhibitor to sign up with his local paper. The Universal has learned that in the handling of a serial it is too risky a matter to work only one episode in advance. Accidents to players, inclement weather and a dozen other obstacles invariably arise to prevent the production of the installments on time and it was in order to obviate this nerve-wracking strain that Director Otis Turner started in some weeks ago on the production of the serial.

The story of "The Black Box" was written by E. Phillips Oppenheim, that wizard English craftsman of whom it has been said:

"Mr. Oppenheim is undoubtedly one of the greatest story tellers of the day; his imagination is unbounded, his characters powerfully drawn, his plots well thought out and cleverly developed, with due regard to probability, while his wide knowledge of men gives his romances a distinction which raises them above the ordinary tales of romantic adventure, crime or intrigue."

Otis Turner, the producer of the new serial, has entrusted the leads in the new serial to Herbert Rawlinson, Anna Little and William Worthington, who are supported by Frank Lloyd, Mark Fenton, Laura Oakley and Frank MacQuarrie. "The Black Box" will follow "The Master Key" without a break and will be released as a special feature outside the program, in fifteen two-reel installments.

Manufacturers' Advance Notes

"TERROR" (Eclair).

A psychological study of tremendous force and power is embodied in the two-part picture to be released by Eclair on Wednesday, February 10, called "Terror." The name is suggestive of an out-of-the-ordinary production and it fully lives up to all expectations. A bully and bad man of a western village kills a man in a drunken rage and forces his weaker brother to take the guilt, the innocent one being obliged to flee for his life on the day of his wedding. Time passes and a dreadful plague attacks the town, killing off the villagers, causing a famine and making the town a place of pestilence and stark terror. The bully, a coward at heart, sees grim death stalking at his very side and striking close to him. The maddened and plague-stricken people demand food, besiege his house and strike terror to his craven heart. Meanwhile the brother who has become a doctor is summoned from a neighboring town, and returning, works miracles with a wondrous cure of his own. Coming face to face with the man he wronged, terror seizes the plague-threatened bully in its grasp and he flees, chased by the maddened mob over a precipice where he meets his end on the rocks below. Nobert Myles gives a most convincing and moving portrayal of the bully; Erma Earle plays the brother's sweetheart and the brother is taken by Carl Levinus, who also directed this gripping production.

Scene from "Terror" (Eclair).

"THE NE'ER-DO-WELL" (Selig).

"The Ne'er-Do-Well," a story of Panama, from Rex Beach's great story of adventure, will soon be a spectacular special release by the Selig company. A majority of the scenes have been filmed on the Isthmus of Panama, where Mr. Colin Campbell, the director, together with a company of artists, sojourned for several weeks. Miss Kathlyn Williams takes the leading feminine role in this great story which permits of many opportunities for elaborate scenic investure. Scenes of activity along the Panama Canal, scenes in the native quarters of the city, and odd nooks and corners in the old Spanish quarters will be faithfully reproduced.

NEW "WALK-OVER" SHOE PICTURES.

The Geo. E. Keith Company, Campello, Mass., manufacturers of the celebrated "Walk-Over" shoes, have contracted with the Motion Picture Specialty Corporation of New York for a new series of motion pictures showing the various operations of "The Making of a Shoe."

In connection with this contract, Mr. Alex. T. Moore, of the Motion Picture Specialty Corporation, says:

"This contract is very gratifying for several reasons. I closed a contract some eight years ago with the Geo. E. Keith Company for a similar set of pictures. During this time some 40 reels have been in constant use, and they have been shown all over the world. At the time they were considered quite an achievement in motion picture work. Two years ago I closed a contract with the United Shoe & Machinery Co., Beverly, Mass., for a similar set of pictures, and exhibited the Keith pictures to assist me in getting the contract. Last week I showed the United Shoe pictures to the Keith Company and they returned the compliment by clinching the order for me. So even moving pictures must "have a heart." I was somewhat handicapped by a lack of knowledge of the "pedagogic rules governing the proper sequences" as laid down by certain of self-styled authorities on "advanced" salesmanship which require salesmen to travel in pairs on the theory, I presume, that what one forgets the other will remember, all of which reminds me of the young man who, while dancing, was asked by his partner where he had learned to waltz—'At a correspondence school,' he confidently replied."

ANIMATED WAR SCENES IN UNIVERSAL WEEKLY.

Jack Cohn, manager of the Universal Animated Weekly, is enthusiastic over some war scenes just received from Europe showing the big guns of the Allies on the firing line actually firing shells into the enemy's trenches. The latest number of the Animated also contains views of the German Zeppelin, "Victoria Louise," as she glides over different cities in Germany. This airship since has been destroyed at Antwerp. Some excellent scenes, showing the French retreating at Ypres, also are in the latest Animated Weekly.

GABY DESLYS IN "HER TRIUMPH."

Gaby Deslys, the illustrious international star, will make her first and exclusive appearance in motion pictures in an original story of the theater, entitled "Her Triumph," produced in Paris by the Famous Players Film Company, to be released on the Paramount Program February 8. The subject was written expressly for the distinguished star, and is so constructed as to display to the utmost advantage Mlle.

Scene from "Her Triumph" (Famous Players).

Deslys' versatile and astonishing talents. The production introduces many novelties, such as the Dance Deslys, an original terpsichorean creation, and other features that have won fame for the star throughout the civilized world. Of no little importance, also, is the presence in the cast of Harry Pilcer, who has until recently been associated with Mlle. Deslys as her dancing partner since her first visit to this country, and who appears as her chief support in this picture.

The wonderful and beautiful Gaby is even more bewitching on the screen than she has been in all her previous stage performances, and the fascinating star's famed beauty and charm can be appreciated to even better advantage on the film than from across the footlights.

"THE PASSER-BY" (Selig).

"The Passer-By" is a Selig war drama in two reels, showing how love was won by a cross of gold. Produced by E. J. Le Saint, from the scenario of J. A. Lacy, this multiple reel Pictureplay is crowded with exciting and appealing incident.

Every care has been taken to make this special Picture-play true to life, and many of the scenes are of surpassing beauty. "The Passer-By" will be released by the Selig Polyscope Company on Monday, February 8.

Scene from "The Passer-By" (Selig).

EDISON PROGRAM ANNOUNCEMENT.

Beginning Monday, March 1, the Edison program will contain each week, in the regular service, a three-reel feature and a strong two-reel drama. The first three-reel feature will appear on Monday and the two-reel subject on Friday of the same week. The week following, this order will be reversed,—the two-reel coming on Monday and the three-reel on Friday. Each week the order will thus be alternated, as to Monday and Fridays, allowing better service.

Edison has been putting out a three-reel feature, in the past, about once a month, the rest of the features being in the masterpiece service of the General Film Company. It is likely now that Edison will put all their features through their regular service program, instead of through the feature service. Edison was the first manufacturer to place a three-reel feature in their regular program, and this weekly event will mark the beginning of new life at the Edison Studio where new directors are being added, the scenario department enlarged and improved that this new speed and high standard be maintained. Another innovation that is proving a great success is the featuring, for every week, of William Wadsworth and Arthur Housman in a string of comedies more farcical and step-lively than Edison comedies have been in the past. Both Wadsworth and Housman have been popular comedians as individuals, but the reception given them as a team have surprised even the most hopeful in that organization.

FIRST LUBIN THREE-REEL PICTURE.

The first of the Lubin three-reel plays to be sent out on the regular service will be released Thursday, January 21. It is a strong drama called "The Shanghaied Baby," written by Robert A. Sanborn and produced by George W. Terwilliger and a special selected company of Lubin players.

Heretofore the three-reel plays have been released as special features. Beginning with "The Shanghaied Baby" a three-reeler will be released each week on alternate Thursdays and Wednesdays, and will be of the same high quality as those sent out as specials.

"The Shanghaied Baby" is the story of a youngster who is neglected by his fashionable parents, "borrowed" by an admirer of the mother, and then unexpectedly kidnapped by burglars, who disguise him as a Chinese baby and hide him in the depths of Chinatown. How the captain of a tramp steamer rescues the boy, makes a sailor of him, and how the boy eventually finds his way back to his parents and weds the girl of his choice makes an absorbing story.

The cast, which is an unusually strong one, includes Ormi Hawley, Edgar Jones, Kempton Greene, Louise Huff, Earl Metcalfe, Herbert Fortier, Eleanor Barry, Arthur Matthews and Edith Richie.

DALLAS PAYS "OFFICER 666" RARE COMPLIMENT.

An unusual compliment was paid George Kleine's "Officer 666" by the big Queen Theater, Dallas, Texas, last week. Friday, January 22, is the second anniversary of the Queen, and Manager Bissenger, deciding to make it a gala event in Dallas, selected "Officer 666," although this attraction had finished a two-day engagement at the Queen January 1. Mr. Bissenger stated that his reason for deciding upon "Officer 666" was that it had broken his house record, getting him more than $1,000 on the day.

"HIS NEW JOB" (Essanay).

Charles Chaplin will appear in his first Essanay photoplay "His New Job" on February 1. This comedy is declared by critics who have seen it to be the funniest comedy ever filmed. It is simply a riot of fun from start to finish.

"It is the very best comedy I ever produced," is what Mr. Chaplin says of it himself. "The new surroundings and the clever actors whom I had to work with, enabled me to make the greatest comedy of my life. I couldn't help laughing at it myself when I saw it on the screen."

This two reel comedy is just what its title indicates. Mr. Chaplin built it up on the fact his coming to the Essanay company, though he has instilled incidents into it that would make a Methodist deacon shriek with laughter.

Mr. Chaplin produced the play without any scenario whatever, although he had carefully thought out the outlines of his plot before-hand. Most of the incidents and practically all of the little mirth producing tricks were extemporaneous, however, Mr. Chaplin originating them as the camera clicking out the film.

The result is that the comedy is the most original and the fun the most spontaneous and unstilted of any ever produced. Mr. Chaplin was ably assisted in his work by Ben Turpin, one of the oldest comedians in time of service in the motion picture business. The two men are nearly of a size and make a team that cannot be beaten.

Scene from "His New Job" (Essanay).

Turpin's absurd physique together with Chaplin's peculiar capers and wonderful facial expressions make them a pair unique to the motion picture comedy stage.

Exhibitors from oll over the country have written Essanay inquiring about the first release, and the comedy bids fair to be a world beater in the output.

PATHE OFFICIAL CINEMATOGRAPHER OF RUSSIA.

The house of Pathe has been appointed official cinematographers to the Czar of Russia. Such a privilege means a good deal in Russia since the throne is hedged around with so many restrictions.

"PATSY ON A TROLLEY CAR" (Lubin).

As the adventures progress poor Patsy's troubles double and multiply. Beating his way to Springtown he is discovered and thrown down an embankment. Being very hungry he calls for a pie at a lunch wagon, and having no money to pay for it, he is chased by the lunch man. A tramp drives the lunch wagon off and Patsy joins him, for this Scene from "Patsy on a Trolley Car" (Lubin).

both are given ten days in jail. Patsy then discovers that Jack Prince is assistant superintendent of the trolley line. He applies for a job and is given a trial as conductor. The Bolivars, Sykesy and Tilly arrive in town and board Patsy's car. Sykesy spurs on some roughnecks to create a riot and Patsy is thrown off the car. Mary, who is proceeding to the depot to fill an engagement in another village, picks him up and they both board the train together. Sykesy then informs Jack that his wife has eloped with Patsy. Director Percy Winter has made a picture that will make people laugh their heads off.

"THIRTEEN DOWN" (Essanay).

A daring attempt on the part of foreign spies to steal the design of a powerful new gun purchased by the United States Government is the basis of the plot of "Thirteen Down," released Feb. 12. It is filled with dramatic action, incident to the perilous work of U. S. secret service operators. Dr. Lamarde, inventor of the gun and philosopher, picks out the thirteenth man in a breadline, gives him good clothes and money and makes him his secretary, on his pet theory that anyone under proper environment will make a man of himself. The doctor is well satisfied with the working out of his theory as the vagabond proves to be in every way worthy. The inventor ultimately discovers, however, that the supposed vagabond is a secret service operator, working to foil foreign plotters from stealing Dr. Lamarde's papers with the plans of the gun. The operator's tasks are lightened by his being taken into Lamarde's home, where he finally catches Baron Schoman and his secretary tampering with the safe. The plot being foiled, the man reveals his identity. There also is the thread of a love story running through the play as the U. S. agent and Dr. Lamarde's daughter grow to love each other during his residence in the home. Mr. Francis X. Bushman is featured in this play, supported by Miss Beverly Bayne.

Scene from "Thirteen Down" (Essanay).

EDISON MONTHLY IMPROVED.

The Edison Kinetogram, which for some time has been issued as a monthly, will be issued twice a month hereafter, beginning February 15. This will include all the releases up to the fifteenth, while the issue of the fifteenth will contain the releases for the balance of the month. The change is made with the idea of bettering this branch of the service and making the advance notes more timely for the far western exhibitors. The book will also contain a new department devoted to the players and sidelights on plays and studio life.

MARSHAL NEILAN TO PLAY "THE COUNTRY BOY."

The Lasky Feature Play Company has engaged Marshal Neilan for the title role in the picturization of Edgar Selwyn's famous Broadway hit, "The Country Boy."

As will be remembered, "The Country Boy" tells the story of a young fellow who leaves a small town and goes to the city full of ambition. In the metropolis he meets a variety of people very different from his home acquaintances, such as a newspaper man, a ticket speculator, a chorus girl and their chums. The chorus girl succeeds in infatuating Tom, merely with the object of arousing the jealousy of Jimmy Michelson, a flashy man-about-town, who is her lover. Tom finally discovers that his ideal of the theater is only using him as a tool and sees his whole house of cards tumbling about his ears. He plans to commit suicide but is prevented by his newspaper friend, who suggests that they might go back to Tom's old home and start a little newspaper there. The third chum, the ticket speculator, has won enough money at roulette to finance the undertaking, and so the whole three of them go back to the country where Tom eventually works out his own salvation.

Scene from "The Country Boy" (Lasky).

The two leading feminine roles in the "Country Boy" are played by Florence Dagmar, who appears as the sweet and unsophisticated country girl, and Dorothy Green, of Broadway and 42d Street. Others in the cast are Loyola O'Connor, Mrs. Lewis McCord, Horace B. Carpenter, Edward Lewis, Ernest Joy, Tex Driscoll and Ernest Garcia. February 18 is the release date for "The Country Boy."

"NEPTUNE'S DAUGHTER," SUCCESS IN OHIO.

McMahan & Jackson, who control the state rights of Ohio for Annette Kellermann in "Neptune's Daughter," report that the business has been big in every city where this production has been presented, and they have played many return engagements, which is considered unusual. It has enjoyed quite a long run at the Hippodrome theater, Cleveland; Valentine theater, Toledo; Hartman theater, Columbus; Keith's theater, Cincinnati; Park theater, Youngstown; Colonial theater, Akron, and it has played in many other cities in the very best theaters at prices of from twenty-five cents to one dollar.

McMahan & Jackson consider themselves very fortunate in controlling Ohio for this remarkable photoplay. They are now booking the picture in the smaller houses, and the rental prices are within reach of all.

"THE TERRORS OF THE JUNGLE" (Bison).

"The Terrors of the Jungle," a two-reel animal drama in which William Clifford and Marie Walcamp enact the leading roles, will be released by the Universal under the Bison brand on Saturday, February 13. The photodrama is replete with thrills. The most "active," and that means the most vicious and untamed, of the lions and tigers in Universal City's great zoo were introduced into the picture.

At one point in the story a wild man, lost in the jungle, is torn to pieces by a lioness who thinks her cubs are in danger. Again a lion is driven off the prostrate form of Marie Walcamp. In the filming of this scene "King," the Universal's big lion, was released prematurely from his cage.

Scene from "The Terrors of the Jungle" (101 Bison).

His sudden appearance frightened Miss Walcamp. She started to run and fell. The lion bounded at her. Trainer Jerry Barnes, however, smashed "King" on the tip of his tender nose with a square-edged iron bar just twice and "King" rolled over, roaring pitifully. Quite unnerved by her experience, Miss Walcamp quit work for the day.

The next day after her trying experience Miss Walcamp, Jack Kerrigan, Wallace Kerrigan and William Clifford, constituting the Universal Reception Committee, met and conducted around the Universal City Zoo, Florencio Constantino, the grand opera tenor. Constantino was much interested in the making of the wild-animal picture and complimented Miss Walcamp upon her nerve.

"If ever I lose my voice," said Constantino, "I think I shall come out here and try the silent drama."

Constantino at the time of his visit to Universal City was filling a singing engagement in Los Angeles. Having heard so much of Universal City and its wonderful zoo the grand opera tenor decided to make a visit to see for himself. The tenor shook hands before leaving with all the principals in the "Terror of the Jungle" cast, including Rex de Roselli, Sherman Brainbridge, Lule Warrenton, Baby Wilson, William Clifford and Marie Walcamp.

The story of "The Terrors of the Jungle" tells how Paula and Jonas, sole survivors of a wreck, are cast ashore on the coast of Africa. Jonas annoys Paula with his unwelcome attentions and finally Paula flees. She meets Dick Vedder, a trapper of wild animals, in the jungle. Later they marry and Dick becomes a father. Jonas degenerates into a veritable wild man of the jungle and steals Paula's baby. Dick's bearhound picks up Jonas' scent. Various adventures with wild animals follow when Paula leaves her jungle home to follow the bearhound. Soon after Paula recovers her baby near the water hole where hundreds of animals of all sorts come to drink, Jonas blunders into a lioness and her cubs and is torn to pieces by the infuriated beast.

"A NIGHT'S ADVENTURE" (Lubin).

This is a powerful melodrama written by Marc Edmund Jones with scenes of the missions and underworld. The two stellar characters are a minister's son who has gone wrong and a girl, daughter of another minister, who rebels at the poor circumstance of her home. The girl is sent with money to pay a long-standing bill, and meeting a well-to-do companion, goes shopping. The minister's daughter is tempted to buy a pair of fancy slippers, using some of the money intrusted to her. For this she is scolded and feels that her lot is too hard to bear. In a spirit of rebelliousness she accepts an invitation to go to a dance house ball, which is raided by the police under the direction of her father. He finds one of the slippers which she has lost in the stampede, but the other minister's son who has just won a big roll at gambling succeeds in screening the girl. Repentence and happiness comes and a better life is assured for both, the boy and the girl, who bring contentment to their homes and parents. The play features Velma Whitman and L. C. Shumway of the Lubin Los Angeles stock company.

RAVER SELLS PLATES FOR HERALDS.

Harry R. Raver's idea to assist territorial buyers of Itala features by supplying complete plates for the printing of heralds has met with instant approval. Sol Lesser, of San Francisco, whose initial order for heralds is always fifty thousand, has been obliged to pay at the rate of a dollar and a half per thousand in express charges alone as the rate is over two dollars per hundred pounds. Other territories suffer in proportion to the distance from New York. By the new plan, buyers may take the Itala plates to a local printer and have heralds run off as needed at a figure in many cases as low, if not lower, than New York prices. The Itala herald plates are mortised for the insertion of local theater dating.

NEW BRASS AND METAL SIGN CATALOG.

The Newman Mfg. Co., 717 Sycamore street, Cincinnati, Ohio; 108 W. Lake street, Chicago, Ill., and 101 Fourth avenue, New York, N. Y., has just issued a large and complete catalog showing a great variety of the very latest brass poster frames, easels, and railings, interchangeable metal letter signs, brass and bronze tablets, and mechanical window attractions. In it are some of the very latest and most novel display signs, and it will pay every interested party to immediately get into communication with this concern and obtain its catalog, which is free for the asking.

This firm was established in 1882, more than 32 years, in the production of brass and metal goods and display fixtures, and are in a position to manufacture almost anything in the way of metal signs, metal stands, racks, railings, grilles and fixtures.

NEW NICHOLAS POWER CATALOG.

The Nicholas Power Company has just issued a new catalog of fifty-four pages. The publication is 9 by 7 inches in dimensions and is finely printed on an excellent quality of paper. It is profusely illustrated. On the frontispiece is a photograph of Nicholas Power, inventor of Power's Cameragraph. The contents include general information and foreword, a detailed description of the Cameragraph No. 6A and its parts, and instructions for its proper operation. There are also chapters on "Safety Devices," "Fireproof Film Magazines," "Rheostats," "Electric Current Savers for Alternating Current," "Lamphouses," "Arc Lamps," "Power's New Dissolving Stereopticon," "Projection Lenses," "Special Instructions," two pages of "Table for Film Projection," a page on "Table of Allowances," as well as many other subjects of interest to the exhibitor.

GOLDBURG GOES WEST.

Jesse J. Goldburg started for the west on January 21st with "The Ordeal" and "The Avalanche," two five part features of the Life Photo Film Corporation, to sell state rights on these productions. Mr. Goldberg intends covering the entire United States on this trip.

To January 27 he has disposed of sixteen states and has also contracted with the following concerns for the Life Photo's output for the coming year: Electric Theatre Supply Co., Philadelphia, the Famous Stars Film Alliance, Cleveland, Ohio, the Liberty Film Renting Company, Pittsburgh, the Casino Feature Film Company, Detroit, Northern Film Company of Atlanta, and Celebrated Players Film Co. of Chicago.

Mr. Goldburg reports that after showing "The Ordeal" and "The Avalanche" to the state right buyers, he had no trouble at all in contracting with them for the future productions of the Life Photo Film Corporation.

LASKY MAKES THREE RELEASES WITHIN EIGHT DAYS.

Samuel Goldfish calls attention to the fact that the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company has just completed a series of three releases all of important feature productions and all given to the public within the space of eight days. The first of these is "Young Romance," with Edith Taliaferro as the star, on January 21; the second, Marguerite Clark in a picturization of Harold McGrath's famous romance, "The Goose Girl;" and, third, Edward Abeles in a picturization of the famous comedy dramatic hit by Cecil B. and Wm. C. De Mille, "After Five."

The next release will be the Lasky-Belasco production of Blanche Sweet in "The Warrens of Virginia," on February 15th, and this will be followed on February 18th by "The Country Boy."

NEW BILL AT VITAGRAPH THEATER.

A picturization of another Rev. Cyrus Townsend Brady story, "The Island of Regeneration," will be the feature picture of the Vitagraph Theater program for the week commencing Sunday, January 31. "The Island of Regeneration" is in six parts, produced with all the wealth of detail characteristic of the Vitagraph Company's previous Broadway Star Features, under the direction of Harry Davenport, with a cast that includes Edith Storey, Antonio Moreno, S. Rankin Drew, Bobby Connelly, Leo Delaney, Naomi Childers, Jack Brawn, Lillian Herbert and Logan Paul.

Owing to the length of the feature, the supplemental pictures will be limited to three one-part subjects. The performance will open with a burlesque detective story, "The Green Cat," in which Constance Talmadge and Billy Quirk are the principal funmakers, to be followed by "The Understudy," a thrilling story of the theater, featuring Maurice Costello, and "The Combination," a typical Sidney Drew laughmaker, with Mr. Drew and Jane Morrow (Mrs. Sidney Drew) in congenial characterizations.

Anniversary week, marking the beginning of the second year of the Vitagraph Theater, is announced for the seven days, commencing Sunday, February 7. The Broadway Star Feature Company has arranged a specially attractive picture program to commemorate its first successful year as lessees of Broadway's original high-class photoplay theater and will present "From Headquarters," a strong three-part drama produced by Ralph W. Ince, featuring Anita Stewart and Earle Williams; "A Daughter's Strange Inheritance," a human interest story in three dramatic parts in which Norma Talmadge, Donald Hall and Van Dyke Brooke will be seen to exceptional advantage; "The Wrong Girl," a two-part comedy with Wally Van and Nitra Frazer, and one of the funniest of the Drew comedies, "The Hypochondriac, or, When Greek Meets Greek," in one merry part, in which Mr. Drew and Jane Morrow (Mrs. Sidney Drew) will be seen at their best.

Notes of the Trade.

Margaret Joslin foils two villainous kidnappers in the Essanay comedy, "Sophie Changes Her Mind," Miss Joslin as Sophie Clutts, jilts Slippery Slim. He hires two bandits to kidnap her. They are to meet Slim on the bridge where he has a minister waiting for a quick wedding. Mustang Pete, Slim's rival, learns of the plot and informs Sophie. She has Mustang dress in her clothes while she hides. The bandits throw a bag over the supposed Sophie and drag her to the bridge where the minister performs the ceremony for Slim and Mustang. Then Sophie breaks out of hiding with a party of friends and the laugh is all on Slim.

* * *

"Seen from the Gallery," an Edison Wadsworth and Housman comedy release February 3, presents a novelty in that the action is taken from above, the effect being that the theater patrons will be looking down on a stage from the gallery. This adds to the play, which is built around the old western "Honkitonks," from which so many popular comedians of the stage today have graduated.

* * *

In "Miss Jekyll and Mme. Hyde," a new three-reel subject of the present period, which will go into production this week at the Vitagraph studio, Paul Scardon will use the most subtle make-up ever attempted by him. He is cast at Baron Stana, who is none other than Satan incarnate, and the author, Charles L. Gaskill, describes the character as appearing "almost benevolent in his expression and yet sinister and repelling." This is a wonderfully clever conceptjon of the Sulphurous Monarch, but is probably the most difficult characterization, as the author has drawn it, that a screen star has ever been called upon to interpret, and it will be well worth while to note how Scardon handles it.

* * *

Jerome Storm, Elizabeth Burbridge, Howard Hickman, J. Frank Burke, Walter Edwards and Thomas Kurihara, comprise the strong cast of Inceville stars that will soon be presented in "The Bride of Guadeloupe," a stirring heart interest story of California just produced by the Domino Company, to be released February 11. The story treats of a Spanish peasant girl's pathetic love affair and its happy climax, and is abundant with scenes of Californian beauty.

* * *

Charles Waldron, who has recently won individual distinction in the cast of "Daddy Long Legs," will appear in support of William Elliott in the film version of H. V. Esmonde's celebrated play, "When We Were Twenty-one," now being produced by the Famous Players Film Company. Mr. Waldron will appear in the role of Dick Carewe, the character impersonated by Nat Goodwin in the original stage presentation of the play.

* * *

Mary Fuller, the famous Universal star, enters into the spirit of "Everygirl" with every thought centered on the character she portrays. The story is one of human interest touching the hearts of every one in any walk of life, and will appeal to all picture lovers.

* * *

The end of the wanderings of the beautiful madcap gypsy girl, Olive, played by Miss Mabel Trunnelle, comes in the twelfth of the "Olive's Opportunities," Edison series, in a beautiful wedding scene. Director Richard Ridgely, who has staged so many Edison successes, insisted upon every little detail to make this pretty scene, even to an organ playing the Wedding March, so that all would enter thoroughly into occasion. In this play, after harrowing trials, Vance Coleman, played by Edward Earle, wins the madcap gypsy.

* * *

Director Ashley Miller is congratulating himself upon the beautiful moonlight scene setting secured for "The Glory of Clementine," an Edison two-reel feature, released February 12. The scene is laid in France and the restored old French cloister, brought from France by the sculptor, George Gray Barnard, was used.

* * *

Thomas Chatterton and Violet MacMillan, who was formerly starred by the Oz Company, soon will be seen as sweethearts in "A Modern Noble," released by the Domino Co., February 4.

* * *

The versatility of Murdock MacQuarrie stands out in a most pronounced fashion in "Dad," a late Big U production. It requires no little imagination to realize that the fine old gentleman with the side whiskers, high hat, frock coat and fussy manner is none other than young, handsome Murdock MacQuarrie.

* * *

Miss Beverly Bayne performs two daring feats in the Essanay photodrama "The Ambition of the Baron," which few would dare attempt. She leaps from a second story window, where she is supposed to be imprisoned, into the arms of Francis X. Bushman, her rescuer, without a slip. Then she scales a fifteen-foot wall covered with ice and snow, and jumps from that slippery pinnacle to the top of a hansom cab.

* * *

Essanays' breezy photoplay of frontier life, "When Love and Honor Called," has proved to be a success. Scores of exhibitors have written to Essanay declaring that their audiences were simply carried away with the thrilling scenes and the dramatic intensity of the play, while the love scenes touched the hearts of all.

This is the fifth of the Essanay complete prize mystery plays produced in conjunction with the Ladies' World.

* * *

A handsome French bull assumes one of the leading roles in "All Aboard," a Nestor two-reel comedy, which is said to be one of the best that Al. Christie has ever produced.

Lee Moran adds "a touch of color" by his side-splitting acting as the Pullman porter, while Eddie Lyons, with his winning smile and his droll frown, adds to the general gaiety.

* * *

In order to make his acting realistic in the Essanay photoplay, "The Strength of the Weak," Bryant Washburn paid a visit to an opium den where he spent a night studying the poor wrecks of humanity addicted to the habit. The result was that he was able to portray the role with an exactness that a doctor who witnessed the scenes declared that no one in the world would know but that it was an actual slave of opium who had enacted the part.

* * *

"In the Twilight" has been released by the American-Mutual Company in the Mutual program. It is another installment of the famous "light" series written by Marc Edmund Jones and directed by Thomas Ricketts.

* * *

Mrs. Mary Maurice and Earle Williams of the Vitagraph Company appeared on Wednesday evening, Jan. 20, at the Bronx Church House, New York City, in aid of the Messiah Home for Children. The committee in charge appealed for assistance in this commendable work and they readily gave their services. Their presence brought many friends and admirers to meet them.

* * *

Director Bruce Mitchell of the Crown City Film Company with his company of players have had an extensive stay in the mountain region of Pine Crest, where they were getting snow scenes for their two-reel Paragon drama entitled "The Heart of a Vagabond." Director Mitchell reported that the snow was so deep that they had to leave their automobile three miles from the place where they took the scenes.

* * *

The Liberty Amusement Company of Spokane, Wash., announces the opening of its big new theater, The Liberty, on Monday, Jan. 25. The opening attractions selected by Manager Wm. Cutts is George Kleine's "Officer 666," which plays a three-day engagement. An unusual entertainment has been arranged for opening day.

* * *

At Inceville this week Charles Ray is taking the lead in the two-reeler, "The Wells of Paradise," and has a capital part. The production is being directed by Tom Chatterton and will be released in the Mutual program.

* * *

Elizabeth Burbridge, the Broncho leading woman, is doing some splendid work as a country girl in "A Lucky Blowout," an interesting production now released in the Mutual program. She interprets the part of Annie Crum, an unsophisticated lass from the farm who deserts her sweetheart for the city, only to find that she has erred.

At the Edendale studio of the Selig Polyscope Company work has been started on the production of a four-reel subject taken from one of the famous stories written by Mary Roberts Rinehart. In this forthcoming pictureplay special the principal roles will be taken by Guy Oliver, Stella Roseto, Scott Dunlap and George Hernandez.

* * *

The Santa Barbara brand of comedies produced by Bruce Mitchell, featuring Mary Ruby and Harry Fisher, Jr., have completed four more of the series of clean comedy released through Kriterion Service: "Billy's Strategy," "Billy Makes a Scoop," "Billy's Waterloo" and "Billy's Resourcefulness." Harry Fisher, Jr., who is the son of the veteran comedian of the same name, takes the part of the original Billy in these delightful comedies.

* * *

I. W. Mercer of the Globe theater, Washington, Pa., has a "5c. Admission Sign for Sale." World Film features have induced him to seek a higher grade of patronage for his theater. His price for the future is to be ten or more cents, in keeping with the quality of the productions which he exhibits.

* * *

Sidney DeGray, who is directing the Alhambra brand of comedies released on the Kriterion program, has completed several of his series, "The Painted Anarchist," "Syd's Love Affair," "Syd as a Detective," and "Syd, the Masher.' Mr. DeGray also plays leads in these comedies, Miss Marty Martin playing opposite.

* * *

"The Circular Staircase," Mary Roberts Reinhart's great story, is to be filmed by the Selig Polyscope Company at their Pacific coast studios. Stella Razeto will star.

* * *

Edward B. Selden, one of the special representatives of the World Film Corporation, was seriously hurt in a taxi accident recently that occurred on Broadway and 29th street, New York. Mr. Selden was on his way to the Pennsylvania station to catch a train and the taxi, owing to the carelessness on the part of the taxi driver, ran against another machine coming in the opposite direction. The result was that Mr. Selden was thrown into the street and injured. He was compelled to postpone his western trip for three days because of the accident.

* * *

George Nicol made the production of the one-reel Griffith-Mutual drama, "A Man and His Work," released in the Mutual program. It deals with one day's work of a detective. Thomas Clarey, Eleanor Stone and Howard Gaye take the principal roles in the cast.

* * *

Augustus Phillips, the Edison leading man, has secured the Crescent theater, 168th street and Boston Post road, New York, for a benefit performance to be given Feb. 6 for the Actors' Fund of America. He will appear there on that day in person, pictures in which he appears being shown. He also expects to secure two other theaters for the same purpose, a percentage of the receipts being given over to swell the fund.

* * *

When it comes to versatility in theatrical and other lines, the Thanhouser studio folk—well, they're versatile. They have a baseball team, a football eleven, an eight-oared racing crew, and the other day they organized a minstrel show in forty-eight hours. Boyd Marshall was interlocutor, Jack Sullivan and Gordon Hollingshead bones, and the tambos were Billy Sullivan and Bruce Weyman.

* * *

"Twilight," fifth of the light series written by Marc Edmund Jones, has been released in the Mutual program by the American company for which it was produced by Thomas Ricketts. "Twilight" is more ambitious than its predecessors, "Daylight," "Firelight," "Moonlight" and "Candlelight," and its long cast calls for the entire company and a number of extras. Thirty-four scenes were taken at the John Moore ranch at Goleta.

Picture Theaters Projected.

GLENDALE, CAL.—Henry C. Jensen has opened his new moving picture theater located at 319 Brand Boulevard. The building is 55 by 130 feet, and has seating capacity for 800 persons. The stage is 26 feet deep and can accommodate all the usual vaudeville acts. The lobby is finished in marble, with hand-decorated walls and ceilings.

MILL VALLEY, Cal.—C. L. Mehrten has purchased a site upon which he will erect a new moving picture theater, with seating capacity for about 800 persons. A stage will be included large enough to accommodate various forms of amusement. The lighting, heating and ventilating system will be modern in every detail.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.—The New theater, corner of Polk and Bush streets, has been acquired by H. S. Levin.

TURLOCK, CAL.—Local capitalists of Fresno are interested in a project to erect a new moving picture theater in this city in the early spring.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Frank G. Pierson, Washington Loan & Trust Building, is preparing plans for the remodeling of a two-story amusement building. The improvements will cost about $25,000.

ANDERSON, IND.—The Grand Opera House is being remodeled and made more attractive than ever. J. B. Dennison has leased the house, which he will devote to the exhibit of high-class moving pictures.

HARTFORD CITY, IND.—Glen C. Cloud has opened the New Temple theater in this city.

TERRE HAUTE, IND.—The American Theater Company has completed and opened its new moving picture theatre, the American. The house is of fireproof construction, 50 by 162 feet, has seating capacity for about 1,200 persons, and cost approximately $100,000. The lighting system is most unique in its arrangements and supplied by the theaters' own plans. The screen measures 14½ by 18½.

CARROLL, IA.—Charles C. Ludwig has leased the Armory theater.

MICHELLVILLE, IA.—G. F. Gibson, who was to erect a two-story moving picture theater, 22 by 125 feet, to cost $5,000, has postponed the project for the present.

FRANKFORT, KY.—Franklin Theater Company has acquired the Columbia theater. The new owners will conduct the house as a moving picture and vaudeville theater.

BOSTON, MASS.—If the plans of Mildred Champagne, a writer of note, are successful, this city is to have a "People's Theater," modeled after some of the municipal theaters of Europe, to cost approximately $1,000,000. She has interested Governor Walsh in the project and states that $30,000 has already been pledged, and the promoters are looking about for a suitable location in the heart of the business district. There will be seating capacity for at least 2,500 persons.

DETROIT, MICH.—John H. Kunsky is having plans prepared for a moving picture theater, to be erected at Grand River avenue and Fourteenth st. The new house will cost $125,000, and have seating capacity for 1,700 persons.

SAGINAW, MICH.—The Hippodrome Amusement Company has been incorporated for $150,000 and is having plans prepared for a moving picture theater, with seating capacity for about 1,600 persons.

OMAHA, NEB.—N. J. Hilding, 925 North Twenty-eighth avenue, has been awarded the contract to remodel the moving picture theater owned by W. F. Smith Co. The improvements will cost $6,000. Parlor Theater Company are the lessee.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—Angelo G. Traversi, 6500 Eighteenth avenue, is having plans prepared for a one-story moving picture theater, 40 by 87 feet, to cost $6,000.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Zarland Realty Co., 801 Cauldwell avenue, will expend about $35,000 for alterations and additions to their moving picture theater.

EAST SYRACUSE, N. Y.—Edward Hill is having plans prepared for a one-story moving picture theater, to cost $17,000.

UTICA, N. Y.—Tennis Brothers have opened their new Colonial theater here.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—Superintendent of Police Robinson has served notice upon moving picture proprietors that before granting licenses for the current year, the police will see that all regulations for the safety of patrons are stringently enforced. The regulations require that approved panic bolts be used on all exit doors. The word "exit" in letters eight inches high must be over each exit in addition to a red light. No permanent rails running parallel with the side walls of the theater will be permitted except at the point of entrance. Passages must be kept clear and managers will be held strictly accountable for the crowding of their houses and excessive crowding will be considered an indication of lack of control and will result in the withdrawal of the license.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—The property at the northeast corner of Germantown avenue and Venango street has been sold to Jennie Effinger for $27,500, who will erect a moving picture theater on the site. The lot is 129 feet on Germantown avenue, 67 feet on Venango street, 153 feet on Elder street and 200 feet on the northwest line. The assessed valuation is $35,000.

DALLAS, TEXAS.—H. A. Simon has purchased the Happy Hour theater.

WINCHESTER, VA.—Fred. H. and Herman H. Hable have purchased the old Taylor Hotel from J. G. McCrorey. The hotel will be demolished to make room for a three-story office, store and moving picture theater building. The theater will have seating capacity for about 1,500 persons.

ANTIGO, WIS.—P. J. Hansen & Son are having plans prepared for a moving picture theater, 44 by 185 feet, with seating capacity for about 1,500 persons and cost $50,000.

CHIPPEWA FALLS, WIS.—Leslie J. Dietz will erect a large moving picture theater to be known as the Metropolitan, 28 by 110 feet, with seating capacity for about $500 and to cost $3,000.

MENASHA, WIS.—Frank Winarski contemplates building a two-story moving picture theater, 45 by 120 feet, to cost $10,000.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—Augustus Hinz, 1021 Maple street, is preparing plans for a one-story moving picture theater, 30 by 120 feet, to cost $10,000.

WEST BEND, WIS.—H. Haberman contemplates converting a store property in the business section here into a modern moving picture theater.

SOUTH MILWAUKEE, WIS.—C. Brum will shortly erect a new moving picture theater here to be known as the Lion.

PORT WASHINGTON, WIS.—Zeller & Siebert are building a new moving picture theater. It will have seating capacity for about 500 persons.

DON'T BE FOOLISH

Don't pay a big price for Player Slides when you can get "Niagara's" for $1.75 per dozen. Sample 15c. You need them; if you see one you will have them.

PURE AIR

is as necessary to your theatre as fire exits. You can make the air in your house sweet and clean by using

PARFAIT The Powerful Perfumed Disinfectant in Powder Form

Convenient, economical, safe. Delightful Perfume.

No spraying or apparatus necessary. 50c. per can—4 cans $1.50. Sent express charges paid on receipt of money order.

WOHLGEMUTH, Chemist, 1057 Bergen St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Wilkesbarre Theaters

Interesting Study of Picture Conditions in Pennsylvania Coal City of 75,000 Inhabitants Shows Marked Growth—Large Percentage of Patrons Are Miners and Their Families; But City Supports Several High Priced Shows—Estimate of Money Spent for Pictures.

By Philadelphia Special Moving Picture World News Service.

THE growth of the moving picture business in the anthracite region of Pennsylvania shows a startling increase in the amount of money devoted to this form of entertainment. Five years ago there were nine motion picture theaters in Wilkes-Barre, with an aggregate seating capacity of about 1,800. At the close of the year of 1914 the aggregate seating capacity of the 16 motion picture theaters in Wilkes-Barre was over 10,000.

Of these theaters one represents an investment of $200,000, one an investment of $150,000 and a third an investment of $50,000, as compared with the $4,000 and $5,000 which was the average cost of the small theaters of five years ago. One of these picture houses charges the admission price of 20 cents, another charges 15 cents and still another charges 10 cents, while the rest of the houses charge 5 cents. Most of the theaters give performances from 10 o'clock in the morning until 11 o'clock in the evening, and prominent film men state that an extremely modest estimate of filling the theaters only once a day the aggregate daily receipts are $750, or over $32,000 a year.

There are four film exchanges in this city of 75,000 inhabitants, an unusual number for a city of this size, but it is in the center of the anthracite region, which, it is stated, has more motion pictures per square mile and more seating capacity per capita than any other section of the United States, with the exception of the large cities. Every little hamlet in the region has two or three theaters.

The population of the anthracite counties, according to the latest census report, is 1,122,361 persons; so if Wilkes-Barre, with a population of 75,000, spends $32,000 a year on moving pictures, the total expenditure throughout the region is probably about $480,000. The anthracite mine workers, their wives and families number 822,960 persons, or 73 per cent. of this population. This means that at least a quarter of a million dollars are spent annually on moving pictures. The proportionate calculation makes it $350,000.

TO DISCUSS ADMISSION PRICE.

At the meeting of the State Exhibitors, which will be held in the latter part of January, it has been determined by moving picture men throughout the state to bring up the question of raising the price of moving pictures "in any theater" to ten cents. This state of mind of the picture men is due to many reasons and they sincerely hope that the matter will be put into concrete form in Harrisburg. The Calehuff Supply Company have installed two of their No. 6A machines in the theater along with a Westinghouse rectifier and accompanying paraphernalia.

CHANGED FOR SAFETY.

More than 200,000 improvements to increase safety in case of fire was made in Philadelphia buildings during the year of 1914, according to the report of Fire Marshal Elliott. The changes were brought about after inspection by firemen connected with the Marshal's office. There were 5,786 changes in the construction of theaters as a safeguard against fire. During the year 154,164 buildings were inspected on 45,835 tours of inspection.

Plans are being prepared for the erection of a moving picture theater on Thirty-first street, between Morse and Wilt streets. The new theater will be of brick and terra cotta construction and will be three stories in height. Messrs. Fisher, Lessy and Remish are the owners.

FINED FOR CROWDED AISLES.

Ray Clark, manager of the Northampton Street theater, Easton, was recently arraigned in police court for a hearing on the charge of having permitted rule of the Board of Health to be violated in the theater, in that he allowed the aisles to be overcrowded. He was given the minimum sentence, a fine of $5, which he promptly paid.

NEW THEATER IN TRENTON.

As soon as weather conditions permit, the Padderatz Brothers, contractors, will begin the work of tearing down the Venetian Garden moving picture theater, which is located on the triangular plot of ground facing Anderson and Washington streets and Hamilton avenue, Trenton, N. J. They will then proceed with the erection of an up-to-date moving picture theater on the same site. The new theater will have a seating capacity of one thousand people.

ERIE PROMISED NEW HOUSE.

Leo Wirtheimer, representing a man whose identity was not made known, and who proposes to build a moving picture theater at 922 State street, Erie, Pa., submitted plans to Building Inspector Dundon. Until the plans are approved by the state department of labor and industry, the building inspector will not act. The specifications call for a steel, brick and concrete building with a seating capacity of 1,400 persons. The lobby will be 38 feet long and 15 feet wide. The theater will be extended back to the extent of 108 feet.

DRUG STORES SELL TICKETS.

Some of the leading drug stores of West Philadelphia have taken up the movement started by Mrs. Barclay Warburton for the aid of the home relief work and have consented to selling tickets for moving picture shows in the neighborhood. The stores which have taken up this good work are as follows: Alexander W. Herman, Fifty-third and Market streets; Borell Drug Company, Fifty-second and Market streets; Saterlee Pharmacy, Forty-sixth and Sansom streets. The tickets are good at the following theaters: The Belmont theater, the Fifty-second Street theater and the Apollo theater.

OTHER PHILADELPHIA ITEMS.

It is the intention of the police of the Twenty-sixth street station to lease several moving picture theaters in the neighborhood, for the purpose of running benefit performances, for the relief of the poor of the twenty-eighth ward. In addition to this, each policeman is giving one dollar a month toward the relief fund.

A certificate of incorporation was recently filed in the office of the secretary of state by the Kehr Promoting Company, which is located at Washington and Anderson streets, Trenton, N. J. Henry D. Kehr, Jr., who is the proprietor of a drug store at Hamilton and Anderson streets, is the agent for the new concern. The object of the company is to operate moving picture theaters and is capitalized for $50,000. The incorporators are Henry D. Kehr, Jr., John C. Rupp and Pearson H. Hume, all of Trenton.

"Quo Vadis," the well known feature film and one that is estimated by many to be one of the best pictures on exhibition, was shown at the Stroud theater, which is located in East Stroudsburg, at an entertainment given by the W. B. Easton Bible Class of the Stroudsburg Presbyterian church.

A crowd approximating 1,700 persons recently saw the motion picture, "From Molten Steel to Automobile," a five-reel production showing the process of manufacturing a Maxwell automobile, in the Broad theater, of South Bethlehem, Pa.

Mr. Calehuff, of the Calehuff Supply Company, announces the sale of numerous drumonas. The drumona is an instrument which is used for the purpose of producing a better sounding effect from musical instruments such as organs, pianos and the like. They have also installed two No. 6A machines in the moving picture theater of the Wilson Brothers, which is located at Oxford, Pa.

The Palace theater, of South Bethlehem, Pa., was recently the scene of some Sunday moving pictures. Several first-class pictures were shown for the benefit of the Church of the Holy Rosary of Pompei.

IN FLORIDA STUDIOS.

What Directors and Players of Southern Companies Are Doing—Jere Austin Has Peculiar Accident.

By Leon Louiso, Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

RAINY weather and dark days have delayed the taking of exterior scenes by the local directors. There have been a number of these disagreeable days since the first of the year. Kenean Buel, managing director of Kalem studio, and Robert J. Vignola are working on the Alice Joyce series, and the pictures in which Alice Hollister appear. The studio is a busy place, notwithstanding the slump in the film business.

Jere Austin, who plays the heavies at the Kalem, suffered a severe accident recently that has kept him from work. One of his fingers was bandaged because of a slight bruise. He had been working around one of the cars and the bandage had become soaked with gasolene. Austin is an inveterate smoker and while lighting a match a particle of the head of it, lighted, flew onto the bandage and it caught afire. Efforts to smother it failed and the hand was terribly burned. As a result Jere may lose the use of one of the little fingers, but he still smokes cigarettes.

Arthur D. Hotaling is busy on some of his Lubin comedies. Mae Hotely is playing the leading comedy roles.

Fred Radcliffe took forty people to St. Augustine recently to work in a scene in "M'liss," which is being produced by the Peerless Company. A special car was chartered for the trip.

Geo. Terwilliger, director for the Lubin Company, has a company of players making dramatic pictures here. Ormi Hawley and Earl Metcalf are playing the leads. The length of their stay will likely be about seven weeks.

Fred Mace, one of the directors for the Peerless Company, is putting on "What Happened to Jones." He has a company of twenty and plays the lead himself. The Peerless Company is taking two big scenes in some extraordinary sets. One is a courtyard set, at Kirk's Island. Another is a mission, built by eighteen carpenters, the painting of which is under the personal direction of the company's scenic artist, Geo. Hart. About one hundred people were used in the fete scene in the courtyard set.

The Aetna Company has a company of players here.

Director Buel takes an occasional spin in his speedy Norwalk. The car is of unusual shape and construction and attracts considerable attention when on the uptown streets.

A BIG WINTER FAIR.

A monster movement to raise $250,000 to inaugurate a State Fair to be held in Jacksonville, beginning next November and then to continue through the winter season with exhibits from the counties of the State until April, at which time a final season Fair exhibit will be held, has received great impetus by the offers of assistance and co-operation on the part of citizens in Jacksonville and throughout the State. Jacksonville is the logical gateway to the State, and the Fair will hold tourists and homeseekers over. They will be entertained by a "Stop-Over in Jacksonville" series of various entertainments and amusements. These movements will greatly help the local exhibitors.

HOTALING NOT ORIGINATOR OF CLUB.

A. D. Hotaling wishes to correct a paragraph in last week's Moving Picture World stating that he had inaugurated the organization of a Theatrical Club. The information was not given by him that he was the originator of the proposition. Chas. A. Leach, Jr., D. J. Prince and Carl Rittich were the originators of the movement.

MORE JACKSONVILLE NOTES.

Neal Morton has joined the Peerless Co., as property man, at St. Augustine.

George W. Taylor, an aeronaut at the Florida Ostrich Farm here, while attempting one of his balloon ascensions and five parachute drops, was killed by failure of one of the parachutes to open. Hundreds of spectators saw the ascension and the fall. The remains were shipped to Philadelphia. This is the second accident with fatal results to an aeronaut at the farm.

While in the city a few evenings ago George Ade, writer of the "Fables in Slang" comedies for the Essanay Company, attended the performance at the Imperial where one of the pictures was shown.

J. R. Arbuckle, a real estate man of this city, with a party of friends, witnessed "It's No Laughing Matter," in which his brother, Macklyn Arbuckle, is featured, at the Prince recently.

The Republic theater played a return date for the Selig & Henry, "The Spoilers." The picture is considered one of the very best features ever shown in Jacksonville, and pleased immensely.

"Cabiria" was witnessed by hundreds of eminently satisfied patrons of the Grand. The picture ran two days and it may be returned for another engagement.

The Imperial (N. W. Ramond, Manager), Billy Baird, a popular entertainer in Jacksonville, is at this houses, and is pleasing the patrons. "Salomy Jane," by California Motion Picture Company, and "Nightingale," All Star Feature, two of the Elke releases, recently booked by this theater, proved good attractions.

Harry Lorraine has joined the forces of the Peerless Company, which is working at St. Augustine.

NEWS LETTER FROM WINNIPEG.

By "Williams," Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

THE Walker theater, Winnipeg, had a most remarkable run of "Neptune's Daughter," featuring Miss Annette Kellermann. The house was crowded to the doors at every performance, many being turned away. A return engagement is looked for.

A company was formed here lately, to produce pictures and deal in films, etc. It will be known as the Winnipeg Film Co.

Quite a few theaters are selling tickets, some in book form, from twelve to fourteen for a dollar.

The Pantages theater here has installed a new system whereby from three to five reels of pictures are added to the regular vaudeville program.

A lot of war pictures are being turned down by the Cencor Department these days.

The Winnipeg theater, which was opened a short time ago as a picture theater, had to close its doors again the other day. The price charged was a little too high for the location.

There are quite a few serial films coming in now. Thanhouser's "Zudora" does not seem to take as well as did "The Million Dollar Mystery."

Screen Club Quarters

Pittsburgh Picture Men's Organization Holds Dinner—Hundred Members Present Give Board of Governors Power to Act in Matter of Permanent Quarters for Club—Charter Has Been Applied for—Time Limit for Charter Members Closes When Membership Reaches Hundred and Fifty.

From Pittsburgh Moving Picture World News Service.

THE Board of Governors of the Pittsburgh Screen Club recently arranged a Good Fellowship dinner, which was held in the K. of P. Hall, in the Wabash Building, at which there was about one hundred members in attendance. After the dinner, a business meeting was called to order with H. P. Kester presiding.

A number of members in opening the meeting insisted that the Board of Governors should have secured permanent quarters and some feeling seemed to be growing on account of it not having been done.

Mr. Antonopolos was the only member of the Board present and he reported that he had investigated several locations, but had not acted definitely. He advised what the expense would be and what obligations this expense would put the club under and said that it should be taken care of in a business-like manner.

Dr. Aaronson, manager of the Cameraphone theater, Pittsburgh, then offered quarters in that building, free rent, until May 1.

Elson Hummell, of Brownsville, Pa., said he could not see what benefit the outside exhibitors as members were getting by supporting a luxurious club room, where they could not always attend, due to the traveling they would have to do, suggesting officers for the proper conduct of the business of the club, and a banquet each month, with individual assessment, also that the secretary and treasurer should be paid officers.

T. P. Miller motioned and Mr. Thompson seconded that the Board of Governors to be given the power to act in the matter of securing permanent quarters, using their best judgment as to location and expense. Mr. Gauding offered an amendment and this, together with Dr. Aaronson's offer, pending action by Board of Governors, was accepted and adopted; the original motion was not put.

A motion by Mr. Hanna, which was seconded, that the open charter be extended from the fifteen days' limit until the membership reached one hundred and fifty. The motion was adopted unanimously.

Mr. Hanna reported that the charter had been applied for and the fees paid.

At this meeting attendance at the Harrisburg convention, to be held Jan. 26, 27 and 28, was urged. It is said that this will be a very important convention.

The Screen Club will give a dinner and smoker in the near future, when all arrangements for permanent headquarters shall have been completed.

The slogan of the Screen Club will be "Meet Me at the Screen Club." Members will each be furnished with a button signifying membership in the club, and although it has not yet been definitely decided upon, the button will typify the business which occupies the attention of the owner.

LYRIC THEATER BURNED.

Fire Starting in Adjoining Restaurant Destroys Lyric Theater and Damages Globe Near By—Loss About $18,000.

A fire on Monday, Jan. 18, completely destroyed the Lyric theater on Fifth avenue, McKeesport, near Pittsburgh, Pa., and damaged the Globe theater, and but for the hard work of the fire department a serious conflagration might have followed which would have destroyed an entire business block.

The fire started in the lower portion of the Coney Island restaurant in a building adjoining the Lyric theater, an explosion of a hot water boiler being the cause. It burned for several hours and it was thought for a while that nothing could save the Globe theater from being destroyed after it was seen that the Lyric theater was a total loss. But the heroic work of the fire department made it possible to hold the loss of the Globe theater down to $1,000, while the Lyric theater suffered a loss of $18,000.

These two theaters are among the finest in this section and are considered a distinct loss to the circle of motion picture houses. Frank Panolopos, manager of the Lyric theater, has not decided yet whether he will rebuild or not, while the damage done to the Globe theater is under repairs.

FREE PICTURE-LECTURES.

Educational motion picture films, loaned through the University of Pittsburgh to organizations for free entertainments, are increasingly popular. They may be obtained from the extension department of the university.

Among the societies that arrange these moving picture lectures each week are: Lawrenceville Y. M. C. A., East Liberty Y. M. A. C., Hollidaysburg Y. M. C. A., Wilmerding Y. M. C. A., Casino night school of the Westinghouse Company, East Pittsburgh; Wilmerding public school; Boys' branch, Y. M. A. C., Northside, and West Penn Playgrounds.

Some of the reels for this week include "Automobile Construction," "Pure Food," "Watch-making," "Shoe Industry," "An American in the Making," "Crime of Carelessness" and "A Workman's Lesson."

OTHER PITTSBURGH ITEMS.

William Kimelman, proprietor of the Penn theater, McKeesport, has since his incumbency changed the policy of the theater and is meeting with encouraging success.

Counselor A. C. Stein is now attorney for both the Moving Picture Exhibitors' Association and the Pittsburgh Screen Club. He succeeds Attorney Joseph H. Thompson in this capacity for the former association.

The season of motion pictures and the Holmes travelettes in the Schenley theater, Pittsburgh, Pa., came to a close last week.

The Olympic theater, Fifth avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa., has contracted for the Renfax Film Company's service. The necessary apparatus has been installed and Mr. Antonoplos, manager of the Olympic, has carefully considered the proposition and is pleased with the synchronism and other details of the mechanism and the results attained.

Edw. Bolson, manager of the Family theater, Braddock, near Pittsburgh, Pa., announces that he will probably make extensive improvements in his theater soon.

Manager Urban of the Grand theater, Wilkinsburg, near Pittsburgh, Pa., reports business is very good and has not found it necessary to charge ten cents admission.

Fin Reynolds, formerly with the Hudson Feature Film Company, Pittsburgh, Pa., is now with the George Kleine Attractions, same city.

Mark Scott of the Colonial Film Company is a busy man these days and is pleased with the outlook for the screen-producing business in Pittsburgh. Mr. Scott claims to have several stars in the making, who will be the screen favorites of the future.

Boost Educational Films

Cincinnati Woman's Club, Leading Social Organization of City, Will Help Along Shows of Educational Pictures Especially for Children—To Co-operate with Mothers in Getting Carefully Chosen Programs at Local Theaters on Fridays and Saturdays.

By Kenneth C. Crain, Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

A MOVEMENT has been started by the Cincinnati Woman's Club, including a membership of several hundred of the leading women of the city, which is full of possibilities for exhibitors in this vicinity, and indicates strikingly the growing appreciation of the educational value of motion pictures.

The Forest theatre, in Avondale, an aristocratic suburb, had the honor of entertaining about three hundred members of the Club with a program of educational subjects, including several reels loaned by the University of Cincinnati from its course of studies illustrated by pictures, and in connection with this meeting several speakers addressed the gathering, expressing interesting ideas on the possible usefulnes of moving pictures in educating children.

Among the films shown at this special exhibition were those showing laundry processes, glass-making, the operations of a loan agency and scenes in one of Cincinnati's prettiest parks. The real object of the meeting, as developed by speakers, was to start and encourage a movement for the co-operation of mothers in securing special educational programs for children at moving picture theaters on Friday and Saturday afternoons, which would not only warrant exhibitors in preparing such programs, but would make it an object for mothers to encourage their children in attending theaters showing them. One speaker also advocated better music at the theaters, expressing the opinion that most of the patrons would appreciate much better offerings than are usually given. Local exhibitors are interested in the movement, and several have expressed themselves as being perfectly willing to co-operate to the extent of receiving and endeavoring to comply with program suggestions along the line indicated.

COURSE OF CENSORSHIP.

Cincinnati Exhibitors Letting Censor Question be Thrashed Out on Its Merits—Want Films on Time.

Interest in the pending fight in the Legislature between advocates and opponents of State censorship is waxing warm in Cincinnati, although a canvass of the exhibitors does not disclose that many of them are preparing to take any considerable personal part in it. Their attitude, for the most part, appears to be that of spectators. They are willing, if the expressions of several may be taken as typical, to let the matter be decided on its merits, and with both factions at Columbus well represented, take it for granted that the Legislature will be fully advised on the subject, and will act accordingly. "All we want is to get pictures for which we have contracted in ample time for exhibition, and without mutilation," declared one exhibitor. This is about the general sentiment on the subject, and it is sufficiently neutral, at least on its face, to free local exhibitors of any charge of partisanship.

SUIT OVER FAULTY DEED.

Title to the property upon which the Family theater, one of the leading downtown houses in Cincinnati, is located, with a lease on the premises for twenty years, has been brought seriously into question by a recent decision of the United States District Court in favor of one Robert H. O'Neal. O'Neal is a grocery clerk at Rising Sun, Ind., and is a descendant of a holder of the property in question who died in the forties. Litigation concerning it was instituted seventy years ago, and the title was apparently settled, but the decision in question holds that the Ohio court of that day was wrong. The Family Theater Company, with other occupants and lessees of the property, besides the holders of the title, was necessarily made one of the defendants in the case, which has aroused much interest. The ultimate outcome will not affect the theater company in any way, as it would merely mean a change of landlords, at the most.

PICTURE MEN SWINDLED.

A small house in Covington, Ky., across the river from Cincinnati, known as the Royal, which is owned by W. Hodgeson, of Cincinnati, was made the subject last week of an extremely brazen swindle on the part of a man calling himself Herbert E. Messenger, and described as being six feet tall, weighing about 220 pounds, and with a mole under the right eye. According to the police, who have been investigating the case, Messenger arranged a lease of the theater after attending one performance; and after running the place one night he advertised for a partner in the enterprise. From those who answered his advertisement he selected for the honor of partnership Walter Roth, of Cincinnati, who, it seems, paid $250 in cash for a half-interest, and E. C. Harris, of Richmond, Ind., who paid a like amount, he says, for another half-interest. The two met at the theater, finding themselves partners in a lease, and nothing more, the owner of the house holding a mortgage on the furnishings given by Messenger. Roth and Harris are now looking for Messenger.

OTHER CINCINNATI NOTES.

One of the best of the recent Parmount productions at the Strand was the Frohman film version of Marie Doro's stage success, "The Morals of Marcus," presenting this popular little star in her first appearance in moving pictures. This ran the first half of last week at the Strand, showing to large houses, and was followed by a Lasky production of high merit, featuring Edith Taliaferro in "Young Romance," another dramatic success with its original star.

Max Figman and Lolita Robertson, who have become fast favorites with patrons of moving pictures, appeared to excellent advantage in "The Truth Wagon," the Masterpiece production which was the Sunday feature at the Orpheum last week. As usual, the Orpheum was "turing 'em away" all Sunday afternoon and evening, filling the biggest house in Cincinnati at every performance.

A new moving picture theater, to be known as the Nixon, was completed and thrown open to the public in Youngstown, O., last week, with excellent prospects for a prosperous career. The house was constructed for Mary Kuhar, of Pittsburg, and while small, is perfectly appointed. It is built to be fireproof, has complete heating and ventilating systems, and is equipped with two 1915 model Powers 6-A machines to handle the projection work. The house seats about 300 persons, and will specialize on high-class first-run attractions.

The proprietor of the Scenic theater, at Ironton, O., which recently ran "Life's Shop Window," found it necessary, on account of reports regarding the nature of the attraction which had gained circulation, to insert in the papers a statement pointing out that there is nothing objectionable in the picture, and offering a personal guarantee of this fact. Mrs. Rivkin signed this statement with Mr. Rivkin, adding much weight to it, in view of the nature of the supposed objection to the picture.

William Peerless Brown, the first 1915 baby in Portsmouth, O., made his public appearance under the most up-to-date auspices possible, inasmuch as the presentation to him of numerous gifts by merchants was attended by a moving-picture camera man, who saw that every detail was registered faithfully on the imperishable film. Manager Fred N. Tynes, of the Columbia theater, was responsible for this bit of enterprise, and showed the resulting film to large audiences at his house later on.

The new picture house opened some weeks ago at Manchester, O., under the management of Delbert Watters, who leased it from the builder, has been doing an excellent business, and seems to have filled a long-felt want in that prosperous community. J. E. McNeill built the house, and complied in every way with the strictest requirements of the Ohio building commissioner's office, the "safety first" idea being paramount in his plans from the beginning, with the result that the house is first-class in every respect.

Otto Strahlem, manager and owner of the Gem theater, of Sidney, O., was recently taken to Columbus following a sudden attack of appendicitis, and was operated upon successfully. He rallied readily from the shock, and is now on the road to complete recovery.

MISSOURI NEWS LETTER.

By Kansas City Special Moving Picture World News Service.

GERTRUDE HOFFMAN played a week recently at the Orpheum theater in Kansas City. While here she gave an interview to the press announcing that after her present engagement was completed she would go into the "movies." She said that she expetced to embody several of her dances in a drama, and possibly she might stage a ballet. Manager Durrin of the Twelfth Street theater, which was running Annette Kellerman in the Universal feature, "Neptune's Daughter," during her stay here, says that she visited his theater twice. She was no doubt studying the acting of Miss Kellerman in that masterpiece.

The mystery photoplay "Zudora" which is being shown at the Lona theater, and read in the Sedalia Democrat is the hit of the season. The Democrat in announcing the first episode warned readers that there were only a limited number of copies of the paper. They were soon sold. Then the Democrat suggested that headers borow their neighbor's paper. Now the Democrat has reprinted the opening episode. The Lona theater is showing the second episode to crowded houses.

The Mystic theater, at Columbus, Mo., has been purchased by F. M. Thompson and F. T. Cook from the former owner, Charles R. Smith. It is being remodeled and redecorated. Messrs. Thompson and Cook have installed a player orchestra of the Rudolph Wurlitzer Company's $1,500 type.

The Star theater in Hannibal, Mo., is putting on some choice features for its patrons, who, in return, are showing their liking for that class of photoplays by attending in large numbers. Some of the features that will be shown there soon are the Bosworth production "False Colors," a Shubert (World Film); "When Broadway Was a Trail," a Thanhouser; "Zudora," Marguerite Clark in a Famous Players, offering "Wildflower" and the Famous Players release, "The Sign of the Cross."

"Gertie," that Box Office attraction, got more than her share of plaudits when she was shown at the Colonial theater in St. Joseph, Mo. This film is booked out of the Kansas City office of the Box Office Attraction Co., and it was shown recently for one week at the Willis Wood theater in Kansas City.

The Landers theater in Springfield, Mo., has booked the great colored Pathe release, "The Life of Our Saviour." The film will be shown two days from two o'clock in the afternoon until eleven o'clock in the evening. The churches of the city are all behind the enterprise and it is throught by the management of the theater that the attendance will be large.

Manager Rau of the World In Motion theater has had several rumors that he intended to sell his theater brought to his attention recently. Mr. Rau wishes to deny this rumor. The facts of the matter is that Mr. Rau intends to enlarge and remodel his house at the first sign of spring. And when the work is completed he expects to have one of the finest houses in the city.

The Willis Wood theater in Kansas City has adopted a very unique system of using twenty four-sheet posters in announcing its advance bookings. The theater, which is equipped with large "wings," being formerly a legitimate house, has made arrangements to drop a 24-sheet poster down on the stage during each intermission. The poster is left suspended in the air while the orchestra plays the overture and the people that are coming in take their seats. This, in some respects, is thought to be better than heralds, because every one sees the poster and reads it, while heralds are often thrown on the floor unread. The theater closed a very successful week's run on the World Film, "The Pit," Saturday, Jan. 16. "A Fool There Was," a Box Office attraction, commenced a week's run Sunday, Jan. 17.

The Universal release, "Neptune's Daughter," in which Annette Kellerman plays the leading role, was so successful in a week's run at the Twelfth Street theater, the Standard Amusement Co., owners of the house, decided that it would be well to run it in the Tenth Street theater, which is also owned by the same company. The film will be run there for a week.

G. E. Akers, special representative for "Runaway June," already has eight Kansas City bookings and many out of town. He recently completed a trip in Missouri where the film is meeting with great success.

IN LOUISVILLE.

An unusual use of motion pictures was recently resorted to when the moving picture feature "Damon and Pythias" was placed at the disposal of Jailer Charles C. Foster, of the Jefferson County Jail, by Leslie Thurman, manager of the Masonic theater. The prisoners were treated to the show, which was given in the jail for two hours, starting in the morning at 9.45 o'clock. Mr. Foster afterward announced that he was very much in favor of pictures for prisoners, as they have a good effect on the inmates' conduct and helps to break the dull monotony of jail life.

The Parkland theater, which follows the Majestic theater with the Paramount program, recently had a very unique as well as attractive way of advertising "The Bishop's Carriage," one of the latest Mary Pickford productions. An old carriage and six horses were secured at a nominal expense and a bugler was stationed on top of the carriage. A large picture of Mary Pickford and a couple of streamers carried the necessary advertising. This unique advertisement was driven around Parkland previous to and during the showing of the big production.

Henry A. Guthrie, a former Shubert man in the East, has been busy in Louisville and out through the state booking a Belgium war film on which he controls the state rights. Mr. Guthrie said business locally had been good, but that things were somewhat off in Western Kentucky due to the tobacco situation. Mr. Guthrie was also connected with the Monopole Film Company, of New York, at one time.

Motion picture theatres catering to negroes have been reduced to one show house. The Olio theatre, which was purchased by the proprietors of the Ruby theatre several weeks ago.

New Keith Theater Chain

Keith Interests May Start Circuit of Picture Houses in Louisville, Kentucky—Already Operate Mary Anderson Theater There—Arcadia Theater May be Start of Venture—Where New Houses May be Built—Men Who Are Prominently Associated with Project.

By George D. Crain, Jr., Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

PLANS are under way for forming a new company in Louisville with the object of starting a chain of about ten new theaters in the city, the principal link of which will be the Arcadia theater, at the corner of Fourth and Broadway. Local promoters of the deal have interested J. J. Murdock, executive manager of the Keith circuit, in the project. Mr. Murdock was recently in Louisville and two conferences were held with Frank Fehr, representing the Arcadia stockholders, and a number of leading business men of the city. Tentative plans were outlined at these meetings, which were attended by Fred Levy, one of the Keith stockholders; Frank Fehr, Louis Seelbach, Basil Doerhoefer, Pat Hanlon, Arthur Mueller, Harry Brennan and Mr. Murdock. Another meeting of these combined interests will be held in New York in about ten days, and all indications show that the plan will be executed. It is proposed to have these new theaters booked by the B. F. Keith Feature Picture Company. Fred Levy said that no definite information could be given on the subject at this time, but that he and Frank Fehr, a wealthy brewer of this city, would attend the meeting in New York. It is proposed to convert the property, now owned by the promoters, into motion picture houses. The Arcadia building will probably have a vaudeville theater, and the upper floor will be used as a moving picture theater. According to tentative plans a large theater will be erected on property at Third and Avery streets, adjoining Magnolia Garden. Another site has been selected on East Broadway, and one on West Broadway. Some of the promoters have buildings in good districts which could be remodeled into motion picture houses at no great expense and one or two houses already in operations may be included in the string. Mr. Murdock and Frank Fehr made a trip to Chicago following the meetings in Louisville. The promoters are all wealthy and influential business men of the city and are prepared to go into the venture in a big way. Mr. Murdock made an automobile tour of the city and looked over a number of proposed sites. Up to the present time the B. F. Keith Company has practically confined its motion picture activities to the East, but has been operating the Mary Anderson theater, of this city, for several months.

THEATER FOR EMPLOYES.

Mengel Box Company Has Built Picture House at Mengelwood for Employes and Their Families—House Is Popular.

An instance of the important part which the moving picture is playing in the industrial work of the country is given in the experience of the Mengel Box Company, of Louisville, which operates saw mills at Mengelwood, Tenn., as well as at other points. The company decided that in addition to maintaining a store at Mengelwood and providing for the material wants of its men, it would be good policy to arrange for a legitimate form of amusement, and consequently it established a moving picture theater.

The theater is well constructed, under underwriters' supervision, and has a fireproof operators' room. It is equipped with a Powers 6-A machine, operated by a motor for which current is furnished by the company's own power plant. The theater is open three nights a week, and plays to crowded houses every time, the general public of the little community, in addition to employes, being admitted, and a nominal admission fee being charged, though the purpose of the venture is not at all commercial, but to benefit the men. The popularity of the show has been so great that a gallery has been constructed for the use of negro patrons. The Mutual program is now being used, the films being provided by an exchange in Memphis. W. M. Kerrick, purchasing agent at the general offices in Louisville, buys supplies, arranges for film service, etc., and those interested should get in communication with him.

MAY START NEW HOUSE.

L. J. Dittmar, president of the Majestic Amusement Company, is about to close a lease on an old brewery building at Shelby and Mary streets, which will be remodeled into a five-cent theater seating approximately 1,500 persons. The proposed theater is in the center of a densely populated section of the city and should prove a successful venture. Mr. Dittmar has also closed a deal whereby he will open an airdome in Portland early in the summer. This airdome will be located next door to the old Portland Opera House. Mr. Dittmar also expects to start an airdome at Third and Central avenue, next door to the Railroad Y. M. C. A. Both locations are good ones, according to local show men.

NEW THEATER STRING.

Nelson Van Gurnee, manager of the Gurnee Amusement Company, of Lexington, Ky., which operates the Ada Meade theater, was recently in Louisville conferring with Dennis Long, secretary-treasurer of the Fourth Avenue Amusement Company, which operates the Alamo theater. Mr. Long is also a stockholder and officer in the Gurnee Amusement Company. According to Mr. Gurnee and Fred Dolle, of the Fourth Avenue Amusement Company, the Gurnee Amusement Company is contemplating the erection of a string of motion picture theaters, of the class of the Ada Meade, in a number of Indiana and Northern cities. No definite plans have been decided upon so far.

OTHER LOUISVILLE NOTES.

Charles Pressy, of the S. & P. Film Supply Company, is making numerous bookings throughout the Southern states on a war film which the company booked very successfully in Louisville.

W. L. LeCompte, of the Owl Feature Film Company, recently made a trip to Chicago to purchase films and supplies.

Johnson Mussellman, manager of the Parkland theater, recently started a good deal of commotion in the western part of the city when he advertised that a live baby would be given away on a special night. The announcement did not carry the information, however, that the live baby happen to be a baby pig. The humane society and a number of social workers were "taken in" and raised a howl over the proposed giving away of a baby. The house was packed and jammed at the performance and officers of the Humane Society were present to take evidence with which to start something. It took the entire crowd in.

The first moving pictures shown at the Gayety theater for some time were started on Sunday, January 17. These were the pictures taken by permission of the German General Staff, and had just finished a run at the Deutsche theater (Irving Place theater), New York City.

Inspections Not Needed

President Fowser, of Michigan Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors, Is Making Special Efforts to Have State Authorities Withdraw Fire Inspections—Two Fees Every Year Burdensome and Theaters as Now Built Don't Need Inspections—Local Inspection in Detroit.

By Jacob Smith, Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

THE Michigan Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors has started the new year most auspiciously and is out "to do things." As mentioned previously, one of the aims of the association will be to have eliminated at least one of the semi-annual inspections by the State Fire Marshal's department; in fact, if possible, both inspections will be wiped out. On Saturday, Jan. 23, President Fowser and former President Peter Jeup went to Lansing, the State Capital, where they had a conference by appointment with Hon. John T. Winship, State Fire Marshal. The matter was thoroughly gone over and Messrs. Fowser and Jeup were assured that the state fire marshal department would give consideration to their recommendations. They are confident that Mr. Winship will grant the Association some concession in this regard.

President Fowser told the state fire marshal that it was the intention of the Michigan exhibitors to live up to the law and that most everybody was doing so; that the entire industry should not be held responsible because occasionally some exhibitor (not even a member of the association) refused to comply with the requirements. As a matter of fact, President Fowser said he believed that there was no class of buildings better equipped for fire prevention than the theaters devoted to motion pictures. With the fireproof booths it was impossible to do any damage to the theaters even if fire should break out in the booths; as for the auditoriums, they were well supplied with exits, and as none of them were on the second floor, the audiences could be dismissed very quickly. He called attention to several instances where small fires did occur, and although inconsequential from a standpoint of damage, the auditoriums were emptied in a few minutes because of the many exits.

In the city of Detroit, the theaters are constantly being inspected by local authorities, so that additional inspections of the state department, particularly in view of their costing $10 each, were entirely uncalled for.

NEW CENSORSHIP BILL.

Law Makers of Michigan Considering Censorship Measure—Bill Killed Two Years Ago—Provisions in New Bill.

Representative Fred L. Warner, of Belding, Mich., reports that he is preparing a bill to be introduced shortly into the state legislature, to provide for the establishment of a state board of censorship for moving pictures, to be under the direction of the department of the commissioner of labor. In a general way, his bill is similar to the one defeated at the 1913 session of the legislature. The earlier bill, however, was opposed by the members from the upper peninsula, on the ground that northern peninsula moving picture houses received their films from Chicago and Milwaukee and that shipment to Detroit or Lansing for censoring would result in a prohibitive delay. To obviate such opposition this time, Representative Warner proposes that one of the members of the board of censors shall be from the upper peninsula and shall perform his duties in such a location as to remove, so far as possible, this delay. Mr. Warner's idea is that the censorship board shall comprise three members to be appointed by the labor commissioner. The salaries of the members shall be paid from fees received for censoring films. Representative Warner also plans that the fee be $1 for the examination of each 1,000 feet of film or fraction thereof. In other words, the minimum fee for an inspection would be $1. There are a number of other changes in the new bill from the earlier one, similar to the statute now in force in Ohio. "At present only a few of the larger cities in the state have boards of censorship," said Mr. Warner. "Many of the films rejected by these boards are shipped into the small towns, where there is no board of censorship. While the location of the members of the board will be left to the judgement of the labor commissioner." Mr. Warner favors the headquarters being situated in Detroit, owing to its importance as a moving picture center.

The Michigan league is not prepared to state what action will be taken on this proposed bill. Nothing can be done, of course, until the bill is presented. The association does not want state censorship and is determined to make every effort to oppose such a requirement. The league contends that it is both expensive and unnecessary. It is a fact that very little undesirable film is being shown in Michigan to-day. The demand is growing less for high-seasoned criminal pictures, and on the whole the tendency is towards the "uplift" of the industry. The exhibitors themselves realize that they cannot stay in business by showing pictures that are offensive, and the number of exhibitors who are even showing crime pictures is very small as compared to a few years ago. And supposing there were three censors? Would they be able to be all over the state at one time? And would that prevent theaters in certain localities from showing undesirable films if they wanted to? The whole idea is entirely inexcusable and unwarranted at this particular time, and only will mean more money out of the pockets of the exhibitors, in addition to causing them a lot of trouble.

BALL COMMITTEE AT WORK.

The committee, appointed to arrange for a ball to be given in the spring, under the auspices of the Michigan Association in Detroit, reports favorable progress. A personal call has been made on the film exchanges, the managers of whom have written to the film producing companies, asking what they could do in the way of furnishing stars. Replies already at hand indicate that there will be no difficulty in securing a good representation of prominent men and women appearing on the screen. The committee is negotiating for the Arcadia Dancing Academy, located at Woodward avenue and Stimson place, which can accommodate about 3,000 people. As Detroit is dancing mad, and is one of the best towns in the country for the motion picture industry, the committee feels that the coming ball, with the picture stars as an added attraction, should be one of the biggest public affairs ever given in this city. Not only will Detroit turn out in large numbers, but exhibitors throughout the state will also come and bring many friends with them.

A. J. Gillingham, manager of the General Film Company, Detroit, is confined to his home on account of sickness.

C. Howard Crane, of Detroit, is drawing the plans for the theater to be erected by the Saginaw Amusement Company in Saginaw, Mich. It will be located on Genesee avenue and will be a block square.

MADE LEGITIMATE SHOW PAY.

"Tess of the Storm Country," played by a dramatic stock company at the Avenue theater the week ending Jan. 16, did an immense business, owing to the story being popularized on the screen by Mary Pickford, according to Frank Drew, manager of the Avenue. "Hundreds of people who came to the ticket window asked us if this was the same play in which Mary Pickford appeared, and when they learned it was they purchased seats," said Mr. Drew to the Moving Picture World correspondent. There were not enough seats in the big Avenue playhouse to accommodate all who wanted to witness the first performance of this attraction. While the play differs in some minor details from the moving picture production, it is essentially the same.

COLISEUM GIVES PARTY.

Messrs. Cohen, proprietors of the Coliseum theater on Greenwood avenue, gave a free matinee on Friday, Jan. 15, to 900 school children of that neighborhood. The attraction was "Little Lord Fauntleroy," distributed by the Alco. The children were accompanied by their teachers. The next day, the Coliseum showed "Cinderella" with Edith Taliaferro. The theater was packed to the street. The admission price was reduced to five cents. The school teachers in that vicinity have taken a great interest in the Coliseum and 'phone several times each week to find out what the attractions will be. Messrs. Cohen aim to get something every Saturday that will particularly appeal to the children. On Tuesday he has "Amateur Night," which is put on very complete, and always packs the theater. Ben Cohen operates as a side line, an exchange for furnishing amateur theatricals, and his "Amateur Night" companies are very much in demand in Detroit and adjacent cities.

MORE ITEMS FROM DETROIT.

At the banquet tendered the dealers of the Paige-Detroit Motor Co., at the Edelweiss Cafe on Wednesday evening, Jan. 20, motion pictures were shown of the recent Los Angeles-Phoenix road race. The film was taken by daring operators, who caught some of the wild features that are a part of this desert on the mountain grade of 700 miles. There was also a film of 800 feet taken at the Paige factory, which shows graphically the various processes of construction of Paige cars in the shop and tests on the road.

Smith and Kohrer, architects in the Free Press building, are taking bids for a two-story building, 30 by 108 feet in size, to be erected at Hamtramck, a suburb in the northeastern part of Detroit. The first floor will be a theater for motion pictures and the second floor a dance hall. The cost of the structure will be $15,000. It is to be erected at once.

Architect J. G. Kastler, in the Chamber of Commerce building, has plans in progress for a theater to cost $25,000. It will be two stories high, 98 by 165 feet in size, of brick and terra cotta.

W. J. Fitzgerald, representative of the Central Film Co., was a recent visitor in Detroit. This firm is really a part of the Jones, Linick & Shafer Co., vaudeville booking agents, who also operate a number of theaters in Chicago. A motion picture department was recently added, and it was in the interest of this department that Mr. Fitzpatrick came to Detroit.

John Kaiser, Woodward avenue clothier, has purchased the property at the northeast corner of Woodward and Watson streets, and plans to erect thereon a large building for retail purposes, and in the back will have a large auditorium devoted to motion pictures. It will be reached by an entrance from Woodward avenue. These plans are not definite, however, and are subject to change.

MICHIGAN STATE GRANGE FOR CENSORSHIP.

By Midwest Special Moving Picture World News Service.

THE legislative committee of the Michigan State Grange, outlining its program for the coming session of the state legislature, has a plank in its program declaring:

"We favor state censorship of moving picture films."

PUBLIC GETS WHAT IT WANTS.

The editor of the Grand Rapids News believes the producers are giving what the public wants. In commenting upon the attack of Rev. Hugh Birney, "Cleveland's probing pastor," who declared moving pictures "ubnormalized," he says: "The remedy does not lie in attack upon the authors, nor in regulation by censors, but with the public itself, and must therefore be considered a matter of education. Producers of cinema films are not foisting upon the public any special emotional and cheaply sensational ideas of their own. If they were the effort would be short-lived. With their commercial instincts, they must have the evidence of diminished box-office receipts to believe that they have gone astray, and when that comes they will be very quick to mend their ways."

HAD TO RENT UPPER FLOORS.

Somebody in Calumet, Mich., got busy, and the Grand theater was ordered closed temporarily by state authorities. There is a state law prohibiting residential tenants above the main auditoriums in theater buildings. The tenant above the Grand had been there ten years, the permit had been granted and the house inspected twice before the warning came. Manager C. S. Sullivan made plans to take over the entire building in order to keep it free from illegal tenants. Complaint also was made in court by Inspector C. M. Dewey, of Manistique, that Sullivan violated the state law by having an operator less than eighteen years old. Sullivan demanded a court examination, stating that the operator in question had been employed at Dewey's last inspection and had given his age as eighteen years.

A NEIGHBORHOOD HOUSE.

Affairs of Brown & Budde, operating a moving picture house on Bridge street, N. W., Grand Rapids, were pretty thoroughly aired in a meeting of the City Council, after which discussion George H. Budde, of the firm, was denied a license to operate a new house at 612 Bridge street, N. W.—in the same neighborhood. Chairman Rogers of the License Committee attributed the application for the license to the fact that the partners could not agree. He also stated that the present house was not making money. Residents of the neighborhood did not want another house there, he declared. The two aldermen from the Eighth Ward also protested against another theater, and the council voted unanimously to refuse the license. Budde's attorney offered the records of Brown & Budde's house to show that it was a paying proposition. Budde had purchased a 78-foot lot as a site for the new house, and his lawyer made the plea that the construction of the theater would do something toward lessening the unemployment problem in Grand Rapids.

LOCAL 291 HOLDS BANQUET.

The members of the Operators' Union No. 291, at Grand Rapids, held their annual banquet Jan. 12 at Snyder's Cafe, in that city. W. E. Brown was toastmaster and the speakers were Claude Taylor, C. R. Bright, Ernest Moneyhan and Roy Gardner.

MORE MICHIGAN ITEMS.

W. H. Arthur and associates, of Marshall, are interested in a project to erect a 40x120 theater and store building on State street, in Marshall, and have taken an option on a site. Tentative plans have been drawn calling for a house reached through an arcade, and seating 600 persons. Primarily it will be a moving picture theater, but the promoters have an inclination to talk of vaudeville. The local Board of Commerce is giving the enterprise its moral support.

C. F. Beach, of Battle Creek, is reported to be contemplating the erection of a motion picture theater upon a site which he owns in Albion.

"Seeing New York with the Movie Man" was put on at the Washington theater, in Bay City, four days, in co-operation with the Tribune, of that city, which published reduced-admission coupons.

The Paul J. Schlossman Company, which has purchased a site on Western avenue, in Muskegon, will erect a two-story 66x115 theater, store and office building. It will seat about 1,000 persons on the first floor, but will be so constructed that later a third floor may be added to the building and a balcony installed. It will cost about $25,000.

J. J. Kelly, "Detroit's favorite baritone," has been an attraction at the Orpheum theater, in Lansing.

J. P. Bowen, owner of the Diamond Hotel property, in North Saginaw, is one of the largest stockholders in a company which will erect a $15,000 stucco front moving picture theater on the site of the hotel.

Construction of the new moving picture theater for T. C. Palmer, at Hastings, is progressing. The house will seat 500.

John Brown has purchased the equipment of the Star theater, at St. Joseph, and will open a moving picture show at Baroda.

J. C. Woodworth, formerly handling the Miller Brothers' 101 Ranch feature pictures in upper Michigan, has leased the Rex theater, at Ontonagon, from W. A. Jamison, and will personally manage the house. Woodworth was manager of the Grand theater at Marquette.

The Star Theater Company has been formed at Negaunee by Allen & Rytkonen and Arthur Paoli. The Star theater, which Allen & Rytkonen purchased from Ed. J. Butler, and the Royal, owned by Paoli, will be operated by the new company. The Royal will continue as a five-cent house. "The Master Key," which had been running at the Royal, has been transferred to the Star, which has a larger capacity. Paoli will operate independently the Lyric theater, at Ishpeming, which he owns.

W. H. Carr has resigned as manager of the People's theater, at Laurium. He is succeeded by Lyman Fisher, of that city.

The opening date of the New Franklin theater, at Saginaw, was fixed for Jan. 25. The night show has eight acts of Pantage vaudeville, preceded by a five-reel photoplay feature. The daily matinees at 2.30 will be preceded by a picture show beginning at 1 o'clock.

H. E. Davis, of Charlotte, has sold the Arcade theater at that place to Carl E. Newman, of Ionia.

The First National Bank made arrangements for the showing of the film "The Reward of Thrift," at the Savoy theater, in Hancock, for two days.

R. D. Lemmon, owner and manager of the Opera House, Constantine, Mich., played "Neptune's Daughter" to big business in a downpour of rain all day and night. a return engagement soon. "The Spoilers" coming Feb. 5.

Two moving picture theater owners at Houghton, Robert Nelson and L. Richards, upon complaint of Inspector Dewey, were each fined $5 for employing children under the legal age limit.

It was only a paper-wad, but it put a picture show out of business for two nights. A youngster shot one of these annoying, but ordinarily harmless missiles at the operator in the Star theater at Manton. It lodged in the machine and played havoc. It took two days to replace the broken parts, but fortunately the machine was repaired in time to start the Saturday matinee. Anything that looks like a pea-shooter is now contraband in the Star and will be confiscated.

OHIO NEWS LETTER.

By J. D. Raridan, Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

A clever advertising stunt by Fred W. Brandt, manager of the Alhambra theater, Euclid avenue and East 105th street, Cleveland, set his patrons talking. Mr. Brandt, before the opening night of "Runaway June" had some prettily designed wedding invitations for June's marriage printed.

The United Film Service has opened exchange offices at 212 Columbia building, Cleveland, in the rooms formerly occupied by Warners' Features, Inc. Walter M. Williams is in charge of the United offices. Mr. Williams has profited under the tutelage of C. G. Thompson, manager of the Cleveland exchange for Universal productions.

Two Zanesville picture houses are under new management. The Hippodrome is now controlled by Kenny & August, who also have taken over the Grand. The Hippodrome, by way of publicity, is giving away souvenir plates each Wednesday. Patrons are given coupons that are redeemable at the box office.

The Dreamland, Elyria, has installed a new heating system and made additional improvements in the seating arrangement of the house.

The Pastime, Jefferson, is conducting a novel advertising campaign in the newspapers of that city by publishing on occasions the picture of a motion picture star with the caption underneath: "Who is This?"

Manager John Pekras, of the American, Elyria, has closed a contract with the World Film Corporation for the presentation of exclusive rights in that city to that company's productions.

The Standard Film Service Company has been incorporated for business in Cleveland, with capital of $25,000. J. C. Fishman, M. W. Bruml, H. Ganger and F. L. Richman are the incorporators.

"How a Movie Queen Makes Up," is the title of a magazine feature story published in a recent Sunday issue of the Cleveland Leader. The story reveals the methods of dressing and the use of cosmetics in preparing for appearance before the camera. It was published as a result of popular clamor for information concerning the "inside" of the studio.

Frank Demetros of Steubenville will erect a three-story theater and store building at a cost of $50,000. Plans have been prepared by Peterson & Clark, architects, Steubenville, and construction will start soon.

The C. F. Jackson Company, Findlay, O., is building a picture theater addition to the present building.

F. C. Howe, of the National Board of Censorship, paid a recent visit to old friends in Cleveland. He spoke to civic organizations on "City Planning."

The Grand theater at Orrville, O., has adopted a policy of running at least two features each week in connection with the regular release bill.

Motion pictures showing the construction and use of electric automobiles were exhibited at the offices of the Gould Storage Battery branch, Cleveland, following a luncheon to members of the Electrical League of Cleveland recently.

NEWS NOTES FROM THE SOUTH.

By Midwest Special Moving Picture World Service.

CARL KETTLER, who has been operating the New Bijou and Arcade theaters at West Palm Beach, Fla., has formed a partnership with Alfred A. Tano, who will have charge of these enterprises. Kettler will devote his time to the Standard Oil Company. Tano is still interested in the Dixie theater at Kissimmee, Fla., which he built. The Bijou will be used as an exclusive picture house giving four reels of Mutual service. Although the Arcade will book theatrical and vaudeville attractions, the photoplays will not be eliminated; features will alternate with the "legitimate." E. W. Garner will have charge of the proection at the Bijou.

EXCHANGE BUILDS FIREPROOF VAULTS

Golden Gate Film Exchange, Inc., Installs Vaults—Fears Destruction of Thousands of Reels of Film—New Exhibit Room.

By T. A. Church, Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

ALTHOUGH the local ordinances do not provide for the storage of films in fireproof vaults, as is required in many cities, the Golden Gate Film Exchange, Inc., is taking steps to safeguard its stock of more than six thousand reels and work is now under way on the construction of vaults of reinforced concrete. One of these will be in the basement and the other will be directly above on the first floor. This concern is also fitting up a handsome exhibition room in the basement and when finished this will be among the finest to be found in any exchange on the coast. Mural decorations adorn the wall and the ceiling has been covered with a lattice work which will support vines, after the fashion of a Pompeiian arbor.

WAR PICTURES POPULAR.

The Portola theater is featuring the Hearst-Selig war pictures this week and the demand to see these was so marked that at one time the crowd in front of the theater could not be controlled. Manager Eugene H. Roth was brought before Police Judge Brady, charged with violating an ordinance permitting the blockading of the lobby and the sidewalk, but was released at once when the circumstances were explained. Mr. Roth stated that the jam occurred despite his protestations and the efforts that were made to keep people moving.

YOUNGEST EXHIBITOR.

W. I. Sandell, who has for some time been conducting the Family theater at Kingsburg, Cal., is believed to be the youngest exhibitor in the country having full charge of a moving picture house. The lad is but sixteen years of age, but has been making a success of the playhouse after it had been given up by an older exhibitor. He is showing pictures four nights a week and is giving a feature program.

PICTURE MAKERS MOVE.

The California Motion Picture Corporation, which has maintained headquarters at 356 Pine street since its formation over a year ago, has made arrangements to move at an early date to splendid quarters in the new Call Building, on New Montgomery street, adjoining the Palace Hotel. Very attractive offices have been fitted up here and those having business with the concern will welcome the change, as the new location is in the heart of the business district of the city. A company has been sent to Boulder Creek to commence work on the "Lily of Poverty Flat" and Charles Kenyon, author of "Kindling," is assisting in arranging the scenario. "Mignon" was released here recently, but before it had its public showing it was reviewed by members of the Bevani Opera Company, now playing in this city. Arrangements have been made with Silas Christofferson, the aviator, for the taking of a moving picture of the Exposition grounds from a hydro-aeroplane, the film to be used for publicity purposes.

OPERATORS' UNION ELECTS.

At the annual meeting of the Moving Picture Operators' Union of San Francisco, officers were chosen to serve during the year 1915 as follows: President, A. Howell; vice-president, C. Sweeney; secretary, A. L. Noriega; financial secretary, H. Braly; treasurer, C. Jones; sergeant-at-arms, J. Moser, and business agent, L. Dolliver. The latter has been ill for some time but is recovering.

OTHER SAN FRANCISCO ITEMS.

Charles V. Kavanaugh, secretary of the Nat. A. Magner Company, Inc., a leading feature exchange of this city, passed away on Jan. 10 of heart failure. He had not complained of being ill and attended to his duties at the exchange up to the time of his death. He leaves a widow, two sons and a daughter. Mr. Kavanaugh was but 45 years of age, but had an enviable record in theatrical circles, having been connected with several leading coast companies. His position with the Nat. A. Magner Company, Inc., is being filled by Charles Stillwell, who recently became associated with this concern.

Moving pictures of the Auditorium Ball were made at the formal opening of the municipal auditorium recently by Miles Bros. and two hours and a quarter later these were projected on the screen for the inspection of the dancers.

Charles Reed, formerly manager of the Liberty theater on Haight street, now has charge of the Sunset theater in the Haight street district. The Liberty theater changed hands recently and is now being conducted by a Mr. Sherman.

Charles Ross and Robert McNeil, formerly of the Panama theater, have rented space near one of the entrances to the Exposition grounds and will conduct a photograph gallery.

The great measure of popularity that has been achieved by Charles Chaplin has induced Davis Bros. to put out a unique herald in two colors that will fit any Chaplin subject. This is already meeting with an unprecedented demand.

David Bershon, well known here through his former connection with the California Film Exchange, and for some time manager of the Los Angeles branch of the California Film Exchange, has returned to this city and has taken charge of the Lincoln theater. This house is now owned by Sam Gordon and H. Sack, the interests of Mr. Gordon's former partners having been taken over recently.

The Washington State Building on the Exposition grounds is installing a Simplex projection machine and Wagner Converter and the California Viticultural Exhibit is being fitted with similar equipment. The Sperry Flour Company, Hunt Bros. Company and the Grand Trunk Railway are also installing moving picture equipment with their exhibits.

Ackerman, Harris & Levin, well known theater owners of this city, have taken a concession at the Exposition.

W. F. Crone has been appointed special representative in this territory for the "Runaway June" serial and is making his headquarters at the local Mutual office, which is in charge of his brother, J. R. Crone. The initial bookings have exceeded expectations.

The building at Jones street and Golden Gate avenue in which the California Film Exchange, Inc., and the Box Office Attraction Co. have quarters, has been named the Film Exchange Building.

Irving Lesser, of the Golden Gate Film Exchange, Inc., has returned from a very successful trip through the lower San Joaquin Valley, where he found exhibitors doing good business.

The Southern Pacific Company is completing a handsome two-story exhibit building at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, a feature of which will be the "Sunset theater," where moving pictures will be shown. A Motiograph machine has been purchased.

The Claremont theater, Oakland, Cal., has added a Motiograph projection machine to its former equipment.

W. B. Crooks of Benicia, Cal., is remodeling the Orpheum theater and has arranged to install a Baird projector when the work is completed.

New Powers No. 6A projection machines will be installed shortly in the Golden Gate Photoplay theater being erected on San Pablo avenue, Oakland, Cal., by J. Wiseman.

J. Southwick, formerly of the Maze theater, Stockton, Cal., now has charge of the Panama theater of that city.

A new moving picture house is to be opened at Newman, Cal., about the middle of February.

Mike Athens, of Fresno, Cal., has taken over a moving picture theater at Fowler, Cal., and is conducting this in conjunction with houses at Fresno and Porterville.

The Kinema theater at Marysville, Cal., has been taken over by Fisher & Matthews.

J. B. Travelle, of the Elite theater, Placerville, Cal., plans to conduct a new moving picture theater to be erected at Roseville early in the spring. The new house will have a seating capacity of more than 600.

The Theaterette, Santa Rosa, Cal., has been disposed of to Lamont & Grosse by the Columbia Amusement Company.

The Colonial theater, Oakland, Cal., has changed hands and will be reopened after being renovated throughout.

The Excelsior theater in the Mission District, San Francisco, has been reopened under the direction of Green & Dow.

The Lyceum theater, Modesto, Cal., is now being conducted under the management of F. J. De Borbon.

Green's theater, San Bruno, Cal., is putting in an Edison projection machine.

The Wigwam theater has been opened at East Bakersfield, Cal., by Cuneo Bros.

The Pastime theater, Fresno, Cal., is now under the management of K. T. Lamme.

The great Selig production, "The Spoilers," was recently shown in the leading towns of the California oil fields at a uniform admission price of 50 cents. It enjoyed a phenomenal run, crowded houses being the rule.

A new one-story brick theater is being erected on Twelfth street, near Seventh avenue, Oakland, Cal., by Elizabeth Loughrey.

The Alaska Film Corporation has been incorporated at Los Angeles, Cal., with a capital stock of $10,000, the directors being L. S. Sugden, C. P. Norton, A. B. Ferguson, R. J. Huntington and C. C. Legerton.

NORTHWEST NEWS LETTER.

By Midwest Special Moving Picture World News Service.

Wallace Potter has sold the Bell theater, at Springfield, Ore., to J. J. Bryan, of that city. The new owner plans to move, some time in the spring, to a new building nearer the center of the business district. Bryan operated one of the first photoplay houses in Springfield and later acquired an interest in the Savoy, at Eugene.

The Orpheum theater, at Aberdeen, S. D., has discontinued its vaudeville, and is now operating only as a photoplay house.

A petition signed by fifty residents in the neighborhood of Thirty-eighth street and Nicollet avenue, in Minneapolis, Minn., protesting against granting a permit for a moving picture show there, was received by the city council. No application had been made.

Thomas R. Dwyer is the new manager of the Empress theater, at Brainerd, Minn., which has been reopened by the Empress Theater Company.

Al Graves, proprietor of the Elco theater, at Ely, Minn., has purchased the moving picture house there which has been operated by the Ely Opera Company. He will operate his new acquisition only on Sundays and holidays.

The building department at Minneapolis, Minn., refused a permit to the Bremer school to install a moving picture machine because the school auditorium did not fulfill the fire prevention ordinances.

The Rotary Club, of Tacoma, Wash, has been making arrangements to use moving pictures of Tacoma to advertise the city at the San Francisco and San Diego fairs. A permanent booth will be maintained, but the films with pertinent lectures will be used but once a week.

"The Master Key" was promoted at the Page theater, in Medford, Ore., by giving free tickets to the first hundred adults that presented themselves at the ticket window two nights.

Moving pictures of the opera "Samson" were shown by the Church Club, at St. Paul, Minn.

Local pictures, made in Idaho Falls, Ida., by D. L. Shantis, were shown at the Scenic theater in that city.

The Star theater, at Medford, Ore., recently added a vaudeville program made up of local talent to its regular picture bill.

E. F. Wallter and R. A. Huffacker, who recently secured control of the Dime theater, at Idaho Falls, Ida., announce that the house will make a specialty of comedy photoplays. The Idaho Falls Post co-operated in a promotion plan by exchanging at its office a ticket to the Dime for three coupons published in its paper.

H. R. Binz and J. S. Short, who recently purchased the Shell moving picture theater, at Tacoma, Wash., have taken possession of it.

The "Hiawatha" film was shown to the pupils of the Tuttle School, at Minneapolis, Minn.

Miss Elizabeth Lemm and Frank Beranek are now managers of the Star theater at Hamilton, which formerly was under the management of G. C. Mitchell. Miss Lemm has been pianist at the house and Beranek was in charge of the projection.

The opera house at Lake Benton, Minn., was damaged by fire.

Manager L. F. Cullins, of the Casino theater, at The Dalles, Ore., has new musical features, with Miss Grace Marvel as pianist and Miss Effie Davenport at the drums and traps.

The Huree theater, at Caldwell, Ida., made a feature of the films of Idaho's scenic wonders, which were taken for the San Francisco fair.

A local contest is being conducted for "The Million Dollar Mystery" in Baker, Ore., where the story is being run by The Baker Herald and the film at the Orpheum theater. Three prizes are offered for the nearest correct solution of the mystery—$10 in gold, a six-months' pass to the Orpheum and a three months' pass to the Orpheum.

Wintheiser Brothers, of St. Peter, have taken charge of the Scenic theater, at Hastings, Minn., which they purchased from Christian Jensen.

The Unique theater, at Minneapolis, Minn., at present the vaudevilel house for the Lowe interests, will become an exclusive picture house, if the plans for a larger vaudeville theater do not fail. Marcus Loew recently was in Minneapolis and announced that an eight-story theater and business building would be erected in the downtown district, construction to commence some time next spring. It will cost about $600,000 and the theater will seat 3,500. Mr. Loew was accompanied by Morris Kohn, of New York, and Peter Schaefer, of Chicago.

In a statement to a local paper Manager S. B. Steck, of the Lyceum theater, at Ogden, Utah, says that although his house is equipped for vaudeville, the picture policy is proving popular and he anticipates confining his attention to this phase of the show business.

The exterior of the Bligh theater, at Salem, Ore., has been redecorated.

"Doc" Crews, of the Dime and Arcade theaters, at Walla Walla, Wash., who always runs chatty reading notices about his picture shows under the head of "Crews News," is using a half-column half-tone caricature in these readers. It is a full length view of a personable manager holding aloft a reel of film. On the streaming film is printed: "Pictures and Music."

FILM INDIAN CEREMONIES.

Prof. A. E. Jenks and A. N. Gilbertson, of the University of Minnesota, spent five days at the Nett Lake reservation, near Orr, taking moving pictures of Indian tribal ceremonies and gathering data for a series of illustrated lectures.

Pictures a Godsend

States in Northwest Finding Value of Pictures in All Shut-in Places, as Asylums, Reformatories, Prisons—Their Encouraging Effect on Demented People—Institutions and Prisons Where Motion Pictures Are Already Being Used as Helps in Education or Treatment.

By Frank H. Madison, Special Correspon dent of Moving Picture World.

MOVING pictures in shut-in places have brought more happiness than any other invention," shows the value the Minnesota Board of Control places upon the photoplay as a factor in the proper care of the state's defectives and prisoners. The board's bulletin, compiled by Miss Miriam E. Carey, supervisor of the library, contains statements by heads of the various institutions, all praising motion pictures.

Much emphasis has previously been placed on the value of dances in the treatment of the insane patients. The comparison of moving pictures with dancing is significant. The Rochester State Hospital for the Insane has been using films two or three times a week. "It is the best amusement we have ever attempted in our institution," says Dr. Kilbourne, the superintendent, "and brings out from 50 to 60 per cent. of our patients. We think the results are highly beneficial. As compared with dances, we find the moving pictures reach a much greater number of patients." Dr. Welch, superintendent of the Hospital for the Insane at Fergus Falls, coincides with this view. "The patients enjoy the dances very much, but these are a little monotonous toward the end of the year, so I think they would really get more pleasure the year round from moving pictures."

The Moving Picture World here wishes to interpolate the similar results in Illinois. Following his regular inspection of the asylums of the state, A. L. Bowen, executive secretary of the Illinois State Board of Charities, included in a report to the Governor and the State Board of Administration the following regarding the hospital for insane at Kankakee: "During the last two months the experiment has been tried of taking 800 of the most untidy and demented patients to the amusement hall one afternoon each week for a picture show. Nothing has occurred to cause the management to regret this step. These shows are one element in the course of re-education which is being inaugurated among these classes."

Reports from the penal institutions are similar to those of other states—practically all the prisoners attend the shows. At the state prison at Stillwater, where they are shown twice a week, only one form of entertainment is more popular, and that is the annual Thanksgiving show given by a troupe from St. Paul.

CLEMMER'S SUCCESS.

James Q. Clemmer, Picture Man of Seattle, Knew What Was in Films When Others Laughed—How His Theater Came.

Intimate glimpses of James Q. Clemmer, the photoplay manager and the story of how greatness was thrust upon him, are given in a bright Seattle (Wash.) weekly. His breaking into the photoplay business is described: "Young Clemmer was for a time engaged with his father in the contracting business in Spokane. In some manner they got hold of the Kenneth Hotel, on First avenue. There was a storeroom in connection which stood them $600 per month. They could not rent it. And so in desperation young Clemmer opened it as the Dream theater, then the best picture house in the city. And listen! At the end of four years it was paying him a net profit of $25,000 per year. One day young Clemmer took his father, who was paying him a visit, in tow, and showed him the bright lights of Second avenue. Coming to the site of the present Clemmer theater he said:

"'Dad, what do you think of that as a location for a picture house?'

"'Fine. Can you get it?'

"'I don't know.'

"'Well, let's find out.'

"Inside of twenty-four hours the lease was signed. Five weeks later the elder Clemmer died. The men who had promised him the funds to complete the theater could not see the 'boy.' And it was then that Young Clemmer showed what he was made of. Many financiers looked upon the picture business as merely a passing fancy of the public. In their estimation it could not possibly last. Others thought the plans too ambitious and could not see a first-class theater, where only 10 cents was to be charged, with a spy-glass. But anyhow, Clemmer knew that the right men were somewhere in existence, and he kept on until he found them. And now he has the pleasure of standing in the foyer and grinning at several substantial citizens who gave him paternal advice three years ago, but would now be willing to give him a bonus for what they then brushed aside."

How Clemmer inspires confidence was cited by a Seattle financier: "The first time I met Clemmer he came rushing into my office, pulled off his coat, unrolled a set of plans and started to talk. I excused myself, rushed into the next room and locked the safe. I was afraid he would grab my money, push me into the safe and run. Before he was through talking I began to tremble in my boots for fear I could not remember the combination of the safe in time to grab some of the stock of the Clemmer before it was all gone."

PICTURE SUPERVISION THROUGHOUT NORTHWEST

Civic Associations in Western Cities Show Wakeful Interest in Motion Pictures—Are Anxious to Encourage the Best.

Regulation of moving picture exhibitions is suggested in various ways in various Northwestern cities. In St. Paul, Minnesota, Anthony Yoerg, commissioner of education, advocates and promises supervised films for social centers. The educational film is a good thing, he believes, but he also thinks it should have some sort of supervision.

The Federation of Woman's Clubs in Walla Walla, Wash., appointed a committee to call upon the city commissioners and request a local censorship of moving picture shows.

The Betterment League of Salt Lake City, Utah, had a Betterment Sunday. Among the subjects selected for discussion from the various pulpits in the city was the demand that vaudeville and moving picture shows should be clean and not suggestive.

SUFFRAGE PICTURE IN MIDWEST.

"Your Girl and Mine," the woman's suffrage World Film picture, has reached Minnesota. It was booked for the New Garrick (formerly the Miles) theater at Minneapolis, Jan. 21-23. Bookings were made for St. Paul for the first three days in February under the auspices of the Minnesota Equal Franchise League. The league promotes the sale of tickets and local girls who usher also present petitions which will be sent to the state legislature. Twenty per cent. of the receipts go to the local suffrage work and 5 per cent. to the national.

Bay State Censorship

Deputy Chief George C. Neal, of Massachusetts State Police, Has His Own Ideas as to What Is Right on Sabbath—Says That Motion Pictures with Dancing, New or Old, or Cruelty to Man or Beast, or Crime, Rough Play or Use of Firearms Cannot be Shown on Sunday.

By Edwin McCloskey, Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

DEPUTY CHIEF GEORGE C. NEAL, of the Massachusetts State Police, who are the official censors of moving pictures for the state, has ruled that no pictures shall be exhibited on Sunday which show dancing, new or old; crime, rough play, cruelty to human beings or animals, or the use of firearms. In commenting on his ruling, Deputy Neal said, "Only such pictures as would satisfy a New England conscience may be shown in moving picture theaters in Massachusetts on Sunday."

This ruling was given after a manager of a film exchange had complained that the story of the life of Christ had been ruled out by the censors for Sunday exhibition because it represented a crucifixion in one of the scenes. The censor thought that it was too cruel.

Pictures of the life of Abraham Lincoln were barred, because the censor thought that the battle scenes were too strong for the Sabbath.

CHARLES DOOLEY ACQUITTED.

Charles A. Dooley, treasurer of the Massachusetts Amusement Company, with an office at No. 100 Boylston Street, Boston, was freed from custody when arraigned before Judge Wentworth in the Boston municipal court on a charge of larceny of $300 from Joseph J. Sullivan, a retired sailor of No. 1508 Washington Street, Boston. The judge, it is alleged, scored the Boston attorney who represented Sullivan and caused the arrest of Dooley just after the latter had returned from his honeymoon.

NEW HOUSE IN DORCHESTER.

A written pledge signed by Frank B. Crane and Horace E. Farrington, certifying that the Upham's Corner Theater Company agrees to commence work immediately on the construction of a first class theater at No. 554 Columbia Road, Dorchester, Mass., which will cost more than $100,000, was demanded by Mayor James M. Curley, of Boston, before he would grant a license for theatrical performances in that neighborhood. After granting the permit, the mayor said, "Protests would undoubtedly have been made by a few, but a public hearing by the mayor is only a courtesy, and the unemployed situation is getting acute. The theater is to be started within ten days and doing the work at this time of year will cost the corporation in question thousands of dollars extra."

OTHER NEW ENGLAND NOTES.

Manager Samuel Bernfield, of the Pathe Exchange, Inc., of New England, has received many books for "The Life of Our Savior," during the Lenten season.

Secretary Lake of the Massachusetts Fire Prevention Commission visited several of the film exchanges during the past week. He found everything in first class order, but insists that all films must be kept in the tin boxes even when they are in the vaults.

The Humanology production of Ella Wheeler Wilcox's silent drama, "The Price He Paid," is scoring a tremendous success in this territory. Manager Fred B. Murphy, of the United Film Service, has secured many advance bookings on the film, among them being the Princess theater, Westerly, R. I.; Leavitt's theater, Sanford, Me.; Graphis theater, Bangor, Me.; Gem theater, East Boston, Mass.; Winthrop Hall, Dorchester, Mass.; Gaiety theater, Providence, R. I.; Nickel theater, Biddeford, Me.; Empire theater, Portland, Me., and the Comique theater, New Bedford.

Paul W. Panzer, the Pathe star, who is touring this section on a vaudeville engagement, was pleasantly surprised last week while playing an engagement at the Bowdoin Square theater, Boston, when he was presented with a diamond stickpin, by the members of the orchestra of the Nashua theater, Nashua, N. H., where he had played the week previous.

Peter Maguire, formerly manager of the Broadway theater, Lawrence, Mass., has resigned to accept a similar berth at the Empire theater, Salem, Mass. He is succeeded at Lawrence by Fred Demarra.

James W. Farrell, roadman of the General Film Company, spent the past week on a trip through Vermont. He reports that business conditions are booming on account of the reopening of many of the manufacturing plants through that state.

A bill has been introduced in the Massachusetts legislature providing for the exhizition of moving pictures in penal and charitable institutions at least once a month.

Meyer Scheffer, formerly with the World Film Corporation, has been placed in charge of the poster department of the New England office of the United Film Service.

Albert B. Shaller, assistant manager of the New England Universal Film Service, has returned to his desk after a five days' absence during whichm time he was confined to his home with an attack of the grippe.

The Royal theater, Worcester, Mass., will open on February 15, with United Film Service. This new house will be under the management of Fred J. McAloon.

J. A. Eslow, manager of the New England office of the Universal Film Service, accompanied by Mrs. Eslow, spent a week-end at the Lewiston, Me., camp of Bill Gray, of the Gray and McDonough circuit.

Martin F. Lydon, of the Columbia theater, Norwood, Mass., visited several exchanges in Boston during the past week, booking features.

Leslie W. Stone has been added to the sales staff of the New England office of the United Film Service. He will work from the Boston office.

Newell P. Taylor, of the Little Hippodrome, Newport, Me., was a visitor to Fred B. Murphy, of the United Film Service, at his office at No. 209 Pleasant Street, Boston.

William Cowan, booker for the Pathe Exchange, Boston, has resigned. He is succeeded by Frank Cavanaugh. Mr. Cowan was formerly assistant booker for the Mutual Company.

Leo Getzler, of the Greater New York Film Rental Company, was a visitor to the Hub during the past week. He was registered at the Copely Plaza Hotel.

The picturized production of Robert Hilliard's greatest success, "A Fool There Was," broke all records at the Modern theater last week. Manager Pinanski of the theater desired to book it for another week, but Manager Harry F. Campbell, of the Box Office Attraction Company, was unable to accommodate him.

The Hub theater, located at the corner of Dover and Washington Streets, will reopen in the near future under the management of Herman Sivovolos.

Needham's first theater was opened last week by former Selectman David Murdock, who has had the old town hall renovated and remodeled for photoplay exhibitions. Mr. Murdock is a newcomer to the moving picture ranks. He has been a resident of Needham for many years. He was a member of the present Board of Selectmen, but resigned from office to accept a license to operate the theater. He is chairman of the Needham Board of Trade, and announces that he will only use film productions of the hightest character.

The many friends of Napoleon L. Demarra, of Lawrence, state that he is to desert the ranks of bachelorhood, but refuse to divulge the name of the girl or the date of the coming event. Some of his friends say they would not be surprised if he is a benedict already.

The bowling team of the Massachusetts Exhibitors' League had little difficulty in defeating an aggregation representing the General Film Company at the Scollay Alleys, Scollay Square, Boston. The winning team was composed of Arthur E. Lord, Ernest H. Horstmann, of the Gordon enterprises; Samuel Grant, of the Eastern Theaters Company, and Harry F. Campbell, of the Box Office Attractions Company. As usua., Harry Campbell was the high man.

The Kincaid theater, Quincy, Mass., and the Somerville theater, Somerville, Mass., have contracted with Manager Harry F. Campbell, of the Box Office Attractions Company for the use of his company's productions, which are making a tremendous hit with the moving picture patrons of New England.

The town of Stoneham, Mass., was very much aroused by the production of "Traffic in Souls" in that town. Several protests were presented to the selectmen by the local clergy and citizens. The remonstrants included Rev. James H. Higgins, of St. James M. E. Church; Rev. Edward Hilton, of the Evangelical Church; Rev. Arthur S. Beale, of the Congregational Church; Professor George W. Bell, of the Unitarian Church; and Prof. Edgar L. Patch. They stated that the film was too indecent and immoral for production.

NEWS FROM SOUTHWEST.

By Midwest Special, Moving Picture World Service.

REMODELLING of the Orpheum theater, at Enid, Okla., which recently was acquired by Foster McSwain, has commenced. A handsome new front is one of the improvements.

The moving picture show operated by the members of the fire department at Hammon, Okla., has been removed to the Cuff Building, at Seventh and Main streets in that city.

The management of the Wigwams theaters, at San Antonio, Tex., which recently staged voting contests for the most popular street car conductor and the most popular woman school teacher, has announced another in which a prize will be given the most popular street railway motorman.

Jacob Styner has leased the Palace theater, at Keifer, Okla., to I. A. Tuttle and W. B. Eamey, who have assumed possession.

Chester Hardy has opened a moving picture show at Navasota, Tex. The town formerly boasted two photoplay houses, but both have been closed for some time.

The new theater which is being erected for J. R. Campbell, owner of the Crystal Palace theater, at Texas City, Tex., will cost about $5,000. It will occupy the first floor of the Malin Building, on Sixth street, between Sixth and Seventh avenues.

Something like local interest was manifested in the Mexican War pictures which were shown at the Yuma theater, at Yuma, Ariz., by Dr. Charles A. Pryor.

Fire, the origin of which is a mystery, destroyed the opera house at Longview, Tex.

It is getting to be the thing down here in Houston for friend to ask friend, not whether he has been to the Prince, Houston's legitimate theater, or to the Majestic, the big vaudeville house; but to the Queen, the Pearce or the Zoe, the three biggest and best motion picture houses. They are as large as the other theaters, have pipe organs and boxes where (we quote from a letter to the editors) "one can see the would-be rich sitting up and taking in the show with the airs of a millionaire."

SPELLING BEE IN INDIANA.

By Indiana Moving Picture World. Special Indiana News Service.

THROUGH the ingenuity of a Kokomo, Ind., manager, the movies are soon to lay new claim to worth as an educational instutition. Mrs. Fleet Ager, manager of the Ideal theater, has planned to have contests in spelling at stated intervals in which the general public will be invited to participate, and with a view to making them of peculiar interest to pupils of the public and parochial schools. On each occasion a substantial cash prize will be paid to the one most proficient in spelling. On appointed nights the contest will be limited to children in certain school grades. On other occasions the contest will be open to everyone and the prize will go to the one spelling down all comers.

ANNETTE SHAW NOT ENJOINED.

It appears that Annette Shaw was not restrained by injunction from delivering in Fowler, Ind., her address with the picture, "White Slavery." The Opera House there was booked for Friday early in December. There was a corn show in town at the same date and the business men of the town wanted to show a corn picture. Miss Shaw writes that the only thing that kept her from delivering her lecture and showing her picture was that the Business Men's Association of the town had leased the house "over her head." There was no injunction at all.

TROUBLE OVER WATERLOO THEATER.

The Lyric theater, a moving picture house in Waterloo, Ind., is the center of much litigation. Allen Dunten had a lease on the building and last summer sold his interests in fixtures and furniture to Mrs. Susannah Shull and Johnathan Shull. The Shulls ran the place until about a month ago when a man named Swank put up the claim that he was the owner of the piano. The Shulls refused to give it up and replevin proceedings were started. In purchasing the out fit from Dunten the Shulls paid him some cash and gave him two notese. Proceedings were commenced in the courts against Dunten and a restraining order prohibiting him from disposing of the notes was issued. While the Shulls were absent from Waterloo, Jessie Elson, of Ft. Wayne, and John Roger, of Waterloo, forcibly entered the building saying they had rented the place from Mrs. W. H. Leas. Johnathan Shull appeared on the scene and made affidavits against the two men, charging them with breaking unlawfully into the building. Warrants were issued for their arrests.

Crawfordsville, Ind., is to have a new moving picture house which will have a seating capacity of 600.

OTHER INDIANA NOTES.

The Lyric theater, Columbus, Ind., formerly owned by Frank Clevenger, has been bought by Charles H. Hess, of Richmond, Ind. The theater will be conducted in the same efficient way with a complete change of films each day.

Homer Knox, proprietors of the Colonial theater, Bloomfield, Ind., has installed a new picture machine of the lastest pattern. The picture patrons of Bloomfield are much pleased with it as the pictures are vivid and steady.

The Lyric theater, Kokomo, Ind., is open again after being closed for a few days while improvements were being made. The house has done a big business since the opening, proving the popularity of the house and the Whitleys, who are managing the theater for Charles Lyons. The Whitleys also sing at each show. The Lyric is to be re-named. A contest is being held to get the most popular name and the contestants are asked to leave their votes at the ticket office.

The East Side School, Union City, Ind., will again be given charge of the Star theater for one night. The vocal features will be quartette, duet and solo numbers. A full orchestra will play while the pictures are being shown.

Gen. A. L. New, Greenfield, Ind., will erect a building in that city, which will be used as a moving picture house. He will put up a fire-proof building of pressed steel, with self-supporting roof so that there will be no columns on the inside of the building. He has not leased the proposed building as yet and is looking for a competent man to start such a business as he proposes.

Two of John Bunny's visitors when he played the Lyric Theatre, Indianapolis, were Henry Harney and Tod Wilson, two small boys. One year ago when Bunny was in town he spied the two "newsies" looking over a baker's cellection of pies, cakes, cream puffs and sweets with longing eyes. He took the two kids into the place and fed them until they could hold no more, then took them out and bought them clothes from head to foot. The boys scraped enough together to give the comedian a bouquet and Bunny in return saw to it that they were given box seats for the show.

The Star Theatre, Van Buren, Ind., has been sold to Earl Calvin by the former owner, Charles Foust. Mr. Calvin has had considerable experience in the motion picture business and is planning a number of improvements.

NEWS LETTER FROM ST. LOUIS.

By A. H. Giebler, Special Correspondent of Motion Picture World.

THE Hickory theater, on South Jefferson, near Hickory street, which has been under the management of John Melvin, has been sold to Chas. F. Monette, a well-known exhibitor from Webb City, Mo. The new management of the Hickory is making many improvements in the place, which includes an alteration of the south end of the building that will increase the seating capacity of the house by one hundred.

The McKinley Amusement Company have begun work on a twenty-five thousand dollar moving picture theater at 1020 and 1024 Franklin Ave. The new building, which will be called the Majestic, will be fire-proof throughout and equipped with all of the late improvements and devices known to modern theater building. The auditorium and balcony will seat fourteen hundred patrons. John Carzin, proprietor of the Royal and Casino Theaters on Market Street, and the Paradise Airdome on 18th and Chestnut Streets, is president of the company promoting the Majestic, and A. D. Papas will be active manager when the building is completed.

The Eclipse Garden in Carondelet, added a reel of moving pictures made by the Dittman Shoe Company, to their program a few nights ago. The films, which show the process of manufacturing shoes in ancient and modern times, are very instructive and are well liked by all who see them. The shoe films have been shown in various theaters in St. Louis, and form an attractive addition to any program.

The Minusa Products Company is the latest addition to the number of dealers in moving picture supplies and accessories in St. Louis. The Minusa Company are exploiting a practical motion picture camera that will go in the pocket like a kodak, hold fifty feet of film and weighs only four and a half pounds, and a projector, suitable for home, school and commercial work. Nat. I. Brown, formerly connected with Atsco Inc., is the Vice-President and General Manager of the Minusa Company, the name of which is made up of the initial letters of the words, "Made In United States America."

CHINESE LIKE PICTURES.

Moving pictures are so popular in China that high-class women go to the shows nearly every afternoon, declared Miss Abbey Shaw Mayhew, former Y. W. C. A. physical director in China, at a meeting in Milwaukee, Wis.

MAY LEGALIZE SUNDAY SHOWS IN MAINE

Pine Tree Law Makers Considering New Bill for Localities Where Opinion Differs from Blue Laws.

By John P. Flannagan, Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

A BILL to repeal the so-called "Blue Laws" of Maine, to legalize the transaction of many businesses and the holding of public amusements on Sunday, has been presented in the Maine legislature by Representative Pierce, of Houlton. This act grows out of the many troubles which have arisen in different parts of Maine in recent years.

Under this bill, the municipal officers of any city or town may grant upon such terms and conditions as they deem reasonable, a license for public amusements to be held on the Lord's Day, not inconsistent with the observance of the Lord's Day. The license shall be issued, subject to such terms or conditions as the municipal officers may prescribe, but no such license shall be granted to have effect before one o'clock in the afternoon.

PORTLAND THEATER GETS NEW $25,000 ORGAN.

The new $25,000 organ at the Nickel moving picture theater in Portland, which is being installed by the experts who constructed the mammoth organ presented to the City of Portland by Cyrus H. K. Curtis, the millionaire publisher, was tried recently to demonstrate its mechanical effects in the reproduction of certain noises commonly used in stagecraft. The howling of the wind; the pattering of the rain; the rumble of thunder; the crash of breakers upon the shore; the rattle of a railroad train; the jumbled and confused noises of street traffic were all simulated with startling realism by this organ.

MORE MAINE NEWS.

Closely following the opening of the Park theater, at the corner of Park and State Streets, Bangor, Maine, with an admission of ten cents, the Graphic theater, managed by Grant and Burns, has just announced reduction of admission to five cents. Bangor now has two five-cent theaters, the Palace and the Graphic; one ten-cent theater, the Park; and one vaudeville theater, the Bijou.

The Park theater has been doing a land office business since it opened early this month. One of the most popular attractions was Annette Kellerman in "Neptune's Daughter." The Park announces a serial, "The Exploits of Elaine."

A certificate of organization has been filed in the Registry of Deeds, Augusta, Me., by the Life Targets Company of America, formed for the purpose of making and dealing in moving picture films. The capital stock is $500,000; par value, $100; paid in, nothing. The officers are: President, A. F. Jones; clerk, J. E. Manter; treasurer, T. L. Croteau. Directors, A. F. Jones, T. L. Croteau and A. B. Farnham.

A certificate of organization has been filed in the Registry of Deeds, Portland, Maine, by the recently incorporated Princess Theater Company, for the purpose of furnishing high class entertainments. Capital stock, $10,000. Par value, $100. Paid in, nothing. Officers are President, James W. Greeley; clerk, Charles S. Campbell; treasurer, James W Greeley. Directors, Frank N. Nixon, James W. Greeley and Charles S. Campbell.

The Emory Hall theater at Bucksport, Maine, has been recently renovated and a new heating plant has been installed. This house is under the management of Hussey & Terrill. Big business was done with the World Film Corporation's production of "Last Days of Pompeii."

ILLINOIS SUNDAY LAWS.

In Some Cities Ministers Are Against Sunday Opening of Theaters—War Tax Weighs Impartially on Public Shows and Church Shows.

By Frank H. Madison, Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

UNDAY shows and local and government taxes are live issues among Illinois exhibitors. In Washington of that state the city council has passed an ordinance which prohibits Sunday shows. Two ministers were present at the council meeting to advocate the passage of the measure. After much deliberation a tie vote, three and three was taken, and the mayor decided in favor of the ordinance. L. E. Zinser's license runs until May 1 and some of the aldermen thought he was entitled to seven days a week until it expired.

Action was taken by the city council at Farmington to enforce the ordinance which requires a $10 quarterly fee from photoplay houses. As a result the local managers have started Sunday night shows, declaring the additional night's receipts are necessary because of the added expense.

Clergymen at Batavia have learned that they must pay the war tax for moving picture shows when they give entertainments at which admission is charged. They appointed Rev. E. J. Rose, pastor of the Methodist church, to take up the matter with revenue officials and found out that, except when free-will offerings only were taken or pictures shown free, the tax must be paid. This is a blow at the religious institutions which had been using slide and film entertainments, instead of the old-fashioned oyster supper, to replenish the treasury.

CENSORSHIP LAW BY FILM MAN.

The moving picture censorship law has been dug up in the village of Oak Park and remodeled so that it can be used. The measure was passed more than a year ago, but was never enforced because literal application of its provisions would have closed the moving picture houses.

Its resurrection is due to Village Trustee H. E. Krauth, at one time owner of the Park theater. It is not likely that the working of the plan will cause any great hardship for the exhibitors. The rulings of the Chicago Board of Censors will hold for most pictures. If a film is offered which has not been inspected in Chicago the local board must approve it and the village clerk issues a permit for its exhibition. Most of the pictures, if not all, now shown in Oak Park have been passed at Chicago and the provision for the inspection of other films is merely a precautionary measure. The board in Oak Park is to be appointive.

WON'T HELP REAL BUSINESS.

An Illinois exhibitor has a "punch board" at the door and every patron is entitled to take a chance at a prize. Parents in many neighborhoods have made strong fights before city councils against these boards and even in liberal Springfield they are not allowed in cigar stores.

NEW SCHOOL OF ACTING.

Secretary of State Stevenson at Springfield has issued a charter to the Mutual School of Motion Picture Acting of Chicago, with capital stock of $2,500, to give instruction in motion picture acting. The incorporators are George H. Miller, S. Minot Jones and Alfred W. Craven.

WANT SHOWS FOR CHILDREN.

Belleville exhibitors will be asked by the Belleville Mothers club to inaugurate a system of special matinees at which instructive pictures for children will be offered. A committee consisting of Mrs. F. L. Casey, Mrs. William Powers and Mrs. B. E. Twitchell was appointed to confer with the managers. The women believe that many pictures not suitable for children are shown in Belleville houses and have announced that they will patronize the houses which give judiciously selected programs.

"JULIUS LEEVES RARISON."

The Princess theater at Rochelle is advertising its picture shows with a breezy column headed "Princess Chatter" in one of the local papers. The announcement that it is "edited by Julius Leeves Rarison" is somewhat mystifying. If the name is, at it seems, take-off on that of an authority on photoplays, the significance is lost on The Moving Picture World represenative. The column is worthy of the real author's signature.

OTHER ITEMS FROM ILLINOIS.

Galesburg exhibitors, at a conference, decided not to raise admision prices.

Mayor J. F. Bidinger of Waukegan has again refused a permit for the showing of "The Drug Terror," taking the position that its exhibition would have no effect in remedying conditions. This stand, it is pointed out, is in line with a general policy which will allow the showing of only constructive photoplays in Waukegan.

Stock has succeeded vaudeville with pictures at the Empire theater in Rock Island.

When the regular program of the new K theater at Clinton did not arrive the management gave a free show. Overtures by two pianists are featured on the musical program of this house.

The Illinois theater, Chicago Heights, vaudeville and feature photoplays, has a song publishers' contest every Monday night.

The New Majestic theater at East St. Louis joins in the chorus: "'The Spoilers,' Selig's feature, broke attendance records."

Patrons of the Varietie theater at Canton have become so absorved in "The Perils of Pauline" that it has been speeded up and installments are running weekly instead of bi-weekly.

Quincy people wanted "Neptune's Daughter" again and the Colonial theater took advantage of this demand for two days, with the added advantage of a new copy of the film.

Slater and Smith have been giving the patrons of the opera house at Bowen some vaudeville in connection with their three-reel picture show for ten and twenty cents.

The Electric theater at Monteno has installed new projection apparatus.

The Chatterton theater at Springfield, which has been using more than the regular quota of photoplay attractions for a "legitimate" theater, has installed a stock company.

The Film Product Company of Chicago has been incorporated with capital stock of $10,000 to manufacture motion picture films. The incorporators are Morton L. Vance, William E. Cuthbert and Walter E. Herzberg.

One night recently the Bond theater at Pontiac gave to its patrons 1,500 pictures of Mary Pickford.

Curtis & Hayes, proprietors of the Majestic theater at DuQuoin, were hosts at one of their picture shows to the inmates of the Children's Home in that city. Each of the young visitors was given a box of candy.

The Motion Picture Specialty Company of Chicago has been incorporated with capital stock of $20,000 to manufacture and deal in motion picture films and machinery. The incorporators are William F. Warren, William A. Jennings and P. H. Bishop.

W. J. West, manager of the Majestic theater at Kewanee, recently was at Galesburg looking over Weinberg's new moving picture theater in South Prairie street, which is in course of construction. West will be manager of this house, which is dated to open early in February.

The Gem theater at Lewistown has lengthened its operating schedule and is now open on Friday nights.

The Yale theater at Carbondale is boosting America's Sweetheart by advertising that woman wearing Mary Pickford caps will be allowed to wear them in the rear seats of that house.

The Lyric theater at Morrison, replacing the house which was destroyed by fire, will be new from the ground up. Workmen have been razing the ruins and clearing the site for the construction of the new house.

The Rich theater at Fifth avenue and Lake street in Maywood has passed into the hands of the Kennedy System of Theaters with George W. Moore as manager.

The New Colonial theater at Galesburg has another new screen. A rush order was placed with the Goldenite Screen Company of St. Louis and under the supervision of President W. R. Rowley of that company a new screen was placed.

D. Orville Reese has resigned as manager of the Moline theater at Moline to take a place in the general offices of the Baker-Dodge Amusement Company at Keokuk, Iowa.

Moving pictures of the Haney Fire Fighter, the invention of a Bushnell resident, were shown at the Varietie theater in Canton.

The Vogue theater at Lincoln has reduced its admission to five cents for all.

Stultz & Fowler have sold the Princess theater at Macomb to Charles Nunn, Clarence Ferster and R. W. Kline, who operate the Gem in that city. The new owners will operate the Princess and in addition will have the Gem open three or four nights a week. Stultz & Fowler will devote their time to the Royal theater at Monmouth which they recently purchased.

The Main Street theater at South Evanston has changed its program and will use General Film company service.

Vaudeville and moving pictures at the Majestic theater in Lincoln have given way to theatrical attractions. Fred Null has resigned as manager and is succeeded by Frank G. Bragger.

The Washington theater at Belleville recenly had a Modern Woodmen of America night.

Along with the four reels of "Life in the Joliet Penitentiary" the Earl theater at Fourteenth and State streets in East St. Louis showed six other reels—for five and ten cents.

"We are not handing you a package when we tell you this photoplay is one that will hold you spell bound throughout" is the guarantee of the Harriet theater at Pinckneyville for "The Exploits of Elaine."

The orchestra, which was so popular at the Lyric theater in East St. Louis, will be a regular feature at the New Majestic, under the leadership of John Livaudais. Following the switch in houses, piano accompaniment for the pictures was given a trial, but there was a demand for the orchestra.

Along with its regular shows for two days the Castle theater at Havana showed its "made-in-Havana" pictures.

The American theater at 319-21 Missouri avenue, East St. Louis, which adopted a device put out by a local factory, is advertising that it is "The first pay-as-you-enter show in the United States operating automatic registers."

The Grand theater at Joliet is advertising its too-generous bill of six reels for five cents. It has been publishing coupons good for free admission for ladies and children except Sundays.

The Schulze Bread company is giving away with bread purchases at Peoria coupons which are good for admission at the Lyceum, Empress, Duchess, Hippodrome, Palace, Garden and Illinois theaters. Ten coupons are good for a five-cent admission and twenty for a ten-cent ticket.

The Nickel Bijou theater at Decatur gave a benefit performance for the local lodge of Moose.

Concerts by an Edison Amberola were recent stunts at the Empire theater at Raymond, which is operated two nights a week by A. R. McNeal.

COQUILLE SETTLES SUIT.

New Orleans Picture Producing Company Settles Out of Court with Actor—Company Declared Financially Strong.

By Moving Picture World Southern Newspaper Bureau.

THE suit and petition for a receiver recently brought against the Coquille Film Company, the new producing organization with headquarters in New Orleans, has been settled out of court, the plaintiff abandoning the case after a conference between his attorney and the officers of the company. The suit was brought by an actor whose connection with the company has been severed; it sought to force payment of certain monies said to be due and to place the company in the hands of a receiver, alleging that the company was insolvent.

The film company settled on its own terms, according to M. B. Trezevant, an officer of the company. This settlement was made and the case dropped, says Mr. Trezevant, only after the plaintiff's attorny had issued a public statement to the effect that the company was in a strong financial position. The plaintiff in his petition stated the insolvency of the company as being a matter of his own personal knowledge. Since this statement was not subject to proof he was in no position to do anything but abandon the case.

The company is composed of New Orleans men entirely and the list of its stockholders includes the names of some quite wealthy men.

OTHER NEW ORLEANS ITEMS.

Abe H. Kaufman, former manager Kaufman Film and Supply Company, has been appointed branch manager of the Memphis exchange of the United Film Service of Louisiana, Inc.

O. Knox Bourgeois, who blazed the Universal trail in Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi, Georgia, Tennessee and Arkansas, is now right hand man of Karl Bugbee, manager World Film Corp.

The Trianon (Pearce's Interests) issued wedding invitations numbering 18,000 to every member of New Orleans' society set last week. The names were culled from the "Blue Book." Manager J. E. Pearce said that the returns justified the expense of printing and postage. The invitations were printed on the usual wedding bond engraved, and sent through the mails in the usual wedding envelope. That their pulling power is unqestioned is shown by the fact that on Monday, January 19, several hundred people were turned away from "Runaway June." The crowds that witnessed Number Two of the popular serial were so large that Manager Pearce kept his theater open until fifteen minutes to midnight.

Cabiria terminated four weeks' engagement on January 23 at the Lafayette. Mr. Herman Fitchtenberg will circuit it throughout Louisiana and Mississippi, having purchased exhibition rights from Harry R. Raver.

S. T. Stephens, formerly on the road for the World Film Corporation, has been put in charge of the New Orleans office of Box Office Attractions, just opened in the Southern city, 310 Weis Bldg. Hunter Bennet, general western representative for the B. O., came down with Mr. Stephens and was greeted by a number of old friends of the days when he was New Orleans manager for the World Film Corporation.

Arthur Lucas, district manager for Mutual Film Company, with his headquarters at Philadelphia, was in town Thursday on a tour of inspection.

Warner Features, Inc., in the territories of New Orleans, Atlanta and Memphis have been absorbed by the United Program Film Service of Louisiana. New Orleans capital is backing the enterprise. The new company is composed of some of the best known film men through the South. Officers: R. M. Savini, New Orleans, president; P. A. Chase, New York City, vice-president; Joseph A. McKinney, New York City, secretary; Abe H. Kaufman, New Orleans, treasurer; A. J. Himel, Jr., New Orleans, assistant secretary. Paul L. Ford, of New Orleans, one of the board of directors, will manage the New Orleans office. Mr. Ford, being an exhibitor himself, is universally liked by exhibitors in Southern territory and will make an excellent manager to boost the United Program.

Herman Fichtenberg's Plaza theater opened Jan. 17 with a day and night policy. Herman is the pioneer of motion pictures in New Orleans. Herman came to New Orleans twenty-five years ago, borrowed fifty dollars, and began on Canal street New Orleans' first nickelodeon, long before motion pictures in their present developed state were even dreamed of.

The Moving Picture World's correspondent happened to stay up with a sick friend the other night and was surprised, when he dropped into the Plaza at three o'clock in the morning, to see a score or more, comprising the audience, enjoying a rollicking Keystone. Asking the Plaza's press agent whether the venture paid expenses, he was told that he (the press agent) wished he had the profits on the night's business.

Al Durning, with the Warner Office for a year, has been given a new title by the United Program Film Service of Louisiana, Inc., and now carries the stamp of special representative, in which capacity he will act for the new company between New Orleans, Atlanta and Memphis.

New Wonderland theater, in Canal Street, P. A. Fabacher owner, is booking all the big attractions that come his way.

The Apex Film Company has opened offices in New Orleans with Mayer Simmonds, formerly on the road for the company, manager, offices 310 Baronne Street.

The Paramount's New Orleans office reports excellent results in the Southern territory from the company national advertising campaign; numerous picture fans seeing the Paramount's Saturday Evening Post's advertisement of the company, the Paramount reports, besieged their local theaters until there was no choice but to put on Paramount pictures. The Paramount's office was established here only last August.

NEW YORK STATE JOTTINGS.

The opening of the new Beman Symphonic orchestral organ attracted crowds to the Allendale theater, Buffalo, Monday night. The seats were reduced from ten to five cents. Lewis Isenberg, manager, had thousands of printed tags advertising these features. The tags were tied to many door knobs and very few escaped being read.

Mrs. Hastings, manager, announces that the New Victoria theater, Buffalo, will be opened at an early date. The house will have a twelve-piece orchestra.

Henry Marcus, manager, has returned to Shea's Hippodrome, after an illness of a few days.

Paul Graf has become manager of the All-States moving picture theater, 649 Main Street, Buffalo. This house uses the Mutual service. Mr. Graf, who was formerly an operator, has applied for membership in the Moving Picture Machine Operators' Protective Union of that city.

The new Palace moving picture theater, Main Street, near South Division, Buffalo, will open February 20. The house will have a three-manual pipe organ and an orchestra of ten men. The interior of the Palace will be similar to that of the Strand.

Manager Edel, of the Strand, Buffalo, used an effective plan to advertise "The Pit," a moving picture production. In his lobby he placed barrels of flour on which were appropriate signs announcing "A Gigantic Corner in Wheat," and other details of the play. During his offering. "The Deep Purple," featuring Clara Kimball Young, Mr. Edel and his assistant, Mr. Hyman, used an entire color scheme of deep purple to boost the piece. The lighting effects, slides and signs were in that color and the plan was impressive.

SUNDAY SHOWS IN NEW YORK.

Varied Opinion in Empire State on Question of Sunday Opening—Some State Items on Sabbath Shows.

By Billy Bison, Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World, 23 Victoria Avenue, Buffalo, N. Y.

THE Ministerial Association, of Newark, N. Y., has presented to the village board a protest against the opening of moving picture shows in that town on Sundays. The ministers and others also asked that an ordinance be passed prohibiting such shows, where an admission is charged. As a result, village Attorney J. H. Eagan informed the petitioners that a New York state law permits such Sunday shows.

An ordinance prohibiting Sunday moving picture shows was passed recently in Jamestown, N. Y. Paul Vibbard, manager of the Samuels theater in that city, stated that it was his intention to run the pictures on Sunday and make a test case.

Several New York State newspapers printed a recent report that Justice Morchauser, in the Supreme Court in White Plains, N. Y., handed down a decision in which he finds that it is illegal to have motion picture shows on Sunday. The decision was in an action brought by Alfred E. Hamilton, as treasurer of the Yonkers Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association against Mayor Lennon, of Yonkers. Mr. Hamilton waived an injunction against an ordinance which prohibits performances on Sunday.

The Schenectady system of collecting money from moving picture theaters for the privilege of Sunday shows for charitable organizations was recently discussed by the Common Council of Glens Falls, N. Y., but City Attorney Singleton of that place said the plan was illegal.

OTHER NEW YORK ITEMS.

B. J. Hopkins has taken over the Arcadia theater at South Salina and Colvin Streets, Syracuse. The house will be reopened at once.

The Common Council of Binghamton, N. Y., has voted down an ordinance, which would terminate all theater licenses there on December 31 of each year. The proposed measure was aimed at Sunday moving picture shows.

Burt C. Ohmann will build a moving picture theater in Lyons, N. Y. He will continue as lessee of the Memorial theater of that place.

The T. M. Harton Co., of Pittsburg, will build a theater in Elmira, N. Y. The entrance will be at 109 East Water Street. The house will be known as the Strand, and will seat about 1300 persons. The company plans to use the house for all kinds of attractions, including moving pictures of the highest class, drama, opera and vaudeville. The theater will be open with movies about June 1st. The front will be of white marble, tile and glass, and will be the most pretentious theater in Elmira.

It is said that plans are under consideration for another big moving picture theater in Binghamton, N. Y. A report from that city says in part: "If this enterprise is established it will be connected with the biggest producers of films in the world, and be one of the most important picture circuits in the United States."

Fire department officials of Binghampton, N. Y., recently showed "a fire prevention film" at a theater in that city. The purpose was to spur Binghamton factory owners and merchants to better and stricter precautions against fire.

The Buffalo Times recently said that New York and Buffalo men are considering a plan to build a new theater on Main Street, near Utica, Buffalo. The report said that the house, if built, would play vaudeville and moving pictures at a moderate cost.

At a public hearing in Buffalo recently a real estate dealer said that moving picture theaters enhanced the value of property in a neighborhood where they were located.

Licenses Held Up

City Architect of Toronto Holds Back 1915 Licenses—New Building Regulations Are Being Prepared and Will Be Enforced Throughout City—Exhibitors Talk of Organizing to Withstand Wholesale Onslaught Against Theaters and Get Equality in Taxation and Regulation.

By David Billings, Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

THE city architect is still withholding the 1915 license for every moving picture theater in Toronto, and is preparing a set of specifications with which every theater will have to conform before this year's license will be granted. Some of the theaters, which were only built two or three years ago will find it almost impossible to conform to the new standard, and already the Temple theater, on Queen Street, has closed rather than spend the money necessary to get the license. There is considerable talk of a united action on the part of the picture exhibitors to protest against the wholesale expenditures that are being demanded for the remodelling of theaters that a year or so ago were considered quite safe and that conformed to the building law, but which this year are out of fashion, and declared unsafe. If the city does not loosen up its demands there will be several other houses that will close down.

One of the theaters, the Garden, was last year re-seated under the instructions and according to plans submitted and approved by the city architect, this year Manager Brick has been told to remove over thirty seats in order to get his license. This wholesale attack on the theaters, coming as it has right on top of the heavy workmen's compensation tax, has caused considerable indignation, and various ways of combating the onslaught are being discussed.

NATIONAL CENSOR BOARD NEEDED.

Lack of Present Unanimity in Local Censor Boards—Thought That National Board for All Canada Would Help.

There has been considerable talk recently of forming a national censorship board for Canada, along the same lines as that in the United States. On account of the distinctly different classes of people in Ontario and Quebec, there is considerable clashing in censorship, and some films have been horribly mutilated by the combined censors. As an instance the film "Tipperary," which passed the Ontario censors, almost without a cut was entirely condemned by the Quebec board, while "The Marked Woman," condemned in Ontario, was allowed to pass without even an adverse criticism in Quebec. Some films have not been as lucky, however, and have been terribly hacked by both censors, who each saw something different that he thought undesirable. It is quite probable that a meeting of exchange men and exhibitors will be held shortly to discuss this matter.

There is no discontent as to the ability of either the Ontario censors or those of Quebec individually, in fact Douglas Cooper, local representative for George Kleine, stated recently that in his experience with censors all over the continent he had never met a board more lenient or with better judgment of picture value.

OTHER TORONTO NOTES.

Last Tuesday a private exhibition of the Selig feature, "The Spoilers," was given in Leow's Winter Garden, attended by representatives of the press, theatrical men, and a large delegation of the city clergy. The picture has been brought to Canada by George L. Broy, formerly of San Francisco, and it will probably be shown at one of the big local houses for a week's run in the near future.

G. W. Brownridge, manager of the United Features, has taken over the agency for the output of the Conness Till Company, and reports that the pictures are being greedily snapped up by exhibitors anxious to give them a showing.

Ed. Golden has been appointed manager of the local office of the World Film Corporation to succeed Ed. Sheldon, who was given temporary command when the office was taken over from the Famous Players Film Service. Harry Siskind is now in charge of the Montreal office of the company. An innovation is being tried out by Manager Golden, he having engaged Maurice Thaler as special city traveler, to look after the placing of World Film features in the local theaters. S. Glazer and P. Doyle have also been added to the travelling staff, on the road.

M. McGeachie, manager of the Opera House at Cobalt, Ont., and Dr. Borrows, owner of the Princess theater in Sudbury, Ont., were in the city last week closing a deal with Manager Fischer, of the United Film Service, to show Warner's Features.

The St. Denis theater on Queen Street west, was closed last week, having been purchased by the city for the purpose of street widening. The house was one of the oldest in Toronto, and for many years was the only theater in the district.

The Standard theater, on Queen Street, west, closed its doors indefinitely this week. The continued building of factories in the district and the consequent retreat of residents was given as the cause of the failure.

After unsuccessfully trying to make good under four different managers, the Royal theater, Edlington, went out of business, and its manager, A. Reed, was placed in charge at the Yorke theater, its closest rival.

Harry Kauffmann, manager of the Montreal office of the Famous Players, was in town for several days this week visiting the local office, as was also J. J. Allen, owner of company, who was on his way from New York to his home in Calgary, Alberta.

L. E. Conness, President of the Conness Till Film Company, left for New York last Tuesday to try and secure an additional director for his company.

W. A. Campbell has been placed in charge of the Special Feature and European feature department of the Famous Players Film Service, and has made arrangements to import several well known English pictures.

WASHINGTON, D. C., LETTER.

E. D. Aiken, of Kannarock, Va., is reported to be putting up a new moving picture theater which will shortly be ready for business.

The Effingham, now in the course of construction at 518 Effingham Street, Portsmouth, Va., will soon be ready for its opening. The house is to be operated by C. H. Werner.

W. H. Mackenzie, of Cooper, W. Va., is planning a house in that place.

It is reported that J. E. Wells has broken ground on Broad street, Richmond, Va., for the erection of a new theater. The location is said to be between the Theato and New motion picture theaters.

J. A. Koerpel, manager of the local office of the General Film Company, was last week called to New York by the death of a younger brother. The sympathy of the entire trade is with Mr. Koerpel in his sad loss.

Miller Francis, formerly manager of the Eastern Theater, is about to assume the management of the Senate theater, on Pennsylvania Avenue, Southeast. This house is soon to be remodeled, redecorated and enlarged.

The Kriterion Film Company, of Baltimore, Md., last Sunday staged an exhibition of their films at the Strand theater under the direction of Mr. Keene. The films were declared to be very good by all of those who viewed them. The exhibition was for the benefit of the Washington exhibitors, and was for the purpose of introducing the company's products in this city.

Isaac Schlank, of the United Film Service Company, of New York, paid a visit to the local office last week.

Mrs. Cora C. Brame and Miss Sadie P. Cohen have disposed of their holdings in the Regent theater, on Eighteenth Street, to Harry Given. Mr. Given is an old-time show man, having been connected with exhibitions in Atlantic City and with the legitimate stage here and in other cities. He is planning a number of innovations and electrical display features and to use his own expression, "will make a real theater out of the Regent."

WASHINGTON POST OFFERS EDUCATIONAL FILMS FREE

Washington, D. C., Newspaper with Pathescope Company Plans to Help Instructive Pictures in Schools.

By Clarence L. Linz, Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

THE Washington Post, with the cooperation of the Pathescope Company, of 1217 F street, Northwest, is offering "Free demonstrations of educational motion pictures. The Post will give a program of educational motion pictures before any school or educational institution, or before any organization concerned with education. It will supply the necessary apparatus, films, and also operators to conduct the demonstrations, without charge of any kind." A concerted effort is being made to have motion picture machines of the type that do not require an operator's box, installed in the public schools of Washington, and it is believed that the offer of the Post is being made to bring this about. If this effort is successful and the machines are installed in the schools, the problem of children's shows will be solved. There would be little or no competition with the regular theaters resulting, as it has often been hard to make expenses from strictly educational films. On the other hand, such exhibitions, if open to the parents of the school children, might foster business, as there would be many attending such exhibitions who had never before seen motion pictures. It would merely be the making of more "movie fans." The idea was advanced that the business in the residential sections would be affected. This is denied on the ground that the grown-ups and the children as well want the surroundings that are to be found within the motion picture theater (there are other things besides the pictures themselves), the music, lights, decorations, and the dramas and comedies that make them forget all but that which is provided for their amusement. The school exhibitions would be confined to educational and scenic films and very often there would be little or nothing in the way of music.

COUNTRY STORE NIGHT GOES.

Carolina Theater of Washington Finds That Scheme Cheapens the House—Doesn't Pay in Long Run.

The country store which has been operated on Saturday afternoons at the Carolina theater has been discontinued, and its place is to be taken by children's matinees. To the World correspondent, Mrs. Brame, who operates this house, stated as her reason for discontinuing the country store, that this served to greatly cheapen the house and was not a real business aid, although considerable extra admissions were paid in on the days it was used. "I did not approve of country store proposition from the start," she said, "but I thought I would try it to see how it would work out. Our business was greatly increased, and very profitably too, but I do not believe it is desirable. The people who have been attending the shows on these days want it, but I find it cheapens the house.

"I have now arranged to have matinees especially for the children on Saturday afternoons. Some time ago I received a letter from the Mother's Club of that section asking me to take this step and I have since been consulting with the members and have arranged for the first exhibit to be made on the last Saturday of this month. Children's plays and educational features are to be run exclusively during the afternoon, while in the evening there will be the regular ten-cent show." There has long been a cry in Washington about the lack of shows suitable for children, and it will now be seen whether or not the people will support a proposition of that kind. The exhibitors are always willing to co-operate with the public, and if the people are really in earnest, other exhibitors may be counted upon to follow suit.

IN MONTREAL.

The World Film Corporation's local office is now located in the Jaeger Bldg., St. Catherine street west. The entire upper floor has been taken over, and when it is completely fitted out will prove to be one of the finest exchange offices in Montreal. R. S. Bell is sales manager, with G. W. Kerr as his assistant. Mr. H. Siskind, of Boston, is in town supervising the company's reorganization.

We are given to understand that the Boy Scout film which has been so well received in the towns it has visited is about to be released in Montreal. The film has been made the opportunity for most enthusiastic rallies. It should prove a great patriotic subject.

Geo. Kleine's Cines production, "Quo Vadis," is to have a revival in this city at the Imperial. It will run two days, Jan. 27 and 28. Good results are expected, as it created a furore in this town over a year ago when it had a long run at His Majesty's.

S. H. Decker has joined the local Famous Players forces as assistant manager to Harry Kaufman. Though young, Mr. Decker has had ample experience to fit him for his present position. He has been connected with the Universal, in Montreal, and the International Film Co., of New York. He has our best wishes.

The Zita Ladies' Orchestra has proved such a success at the New Grand that the management have seen fit to re-engage it. "The Circus Man," a product of the Lasky studios, was screened at this house.

A busy and wide-awake house is the Electra. It is managed by Alex. Silvio, formerly manager of the Readoscope. The Electra is a handsome house and well patronized. Mr. Silvio was recently the recipient of a beautiful traveling bag, donated by the employees of the Electra and the local exchange men.

Leon E. Ouimet was in St. John, N. B., last week, opening Pathe's Maritime branch. It is located at 167 Prince William street. A. P. Keegan is in charge.

John E. Boldt, formerly connected with the Canadian Cinematograph Co., Ltd., is managing the Bellevue theater, St. Denis Boulevard. It is a cosy and clean little house of approximately six hundred seats. Mr. Boldt has been operating the house only about a month, and from a worn-down trade has hustled so that an "S. R. O." sign is a necessary thing around the Bellevue. He is at the head of the Canadian Animated Weekly, the first release of which played twenty-nine houses in Montreal alone. He has received some tempting offers for marketing his productions and is preparing to produce shortly.

A recent visitor in town was Geo. C. Talbot, of Hull, Que., a town situated across the river from Ottawa, Ont. Mr. Talbot owns and operates the Talbotoscope, in Albert street of that progressive manufacturing town.

Organization Needed

Exhibitors and Exchangemen in Montreal Are Without Organization in Face of Many Difficult Problems—Censorship Fees and Picture Cutting Is One Difficulty and Taxation Is Also a Question—It Demands Mutual Campaign of Education of Small and Large Exhibitors Who Are Truly in Same Boat.

By Gerald T. Gallagher, Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

LAST week, in commenting on the proposed new rate of taxation for picture houses, I advocated the organization of film men in Montreal into a body for purposes of self protection. I spoke only in general terms.

Two organizations are required—one for exhibitors and another of exchange men. At no time in the history of the local film industry has there been such a crying need for co-operation of some kind or other in the ranks of film men.

The recent bill passed at Quebec, which provides that two dollars be charged for every reel submitted to the censors, and that an additional dollar for a condemned reel submitted for re-consideration be exacted is, to say the least, unpopular with exchange men. What puzzles a good many is that any fee should be charged at all. Evidently, it is the public who wishes that its amusements be censored, and in justice to everybody the public should foot the bill. I am merely recording one imposition which could be alleviated if the exchange men got together. There is also discontent with the censoring on general grounds. An organization was attempted some time ago among local exchange men, but the scheme fell through. If an organization was so truly needed and the organizers failed in attaining their object because of lack of support—then exchange men have only themselves to blame for the existing conditions. If you, Montreal exchange men, went about it in the proper way and in the proper spirit, you could obtain justice and have the laws made reasonable.

There are many things exhibitors could do for their mutual betterment. One question is that of admission prices. An amicable settlement with the authorities over the question of taxation could also be effected. Some years ago such an organization existed. It is now a thing of the past, most probably forgotten. Like the exchange men, exhibitors have themselves to blame for the hardships they are enduring. The Montreal bill goes up for its first reading in the latter part of February. In it is contained an amendment providing for the taxation of theaters at the rate of eighty-five cents per seat. It will be a gain to the very small house and an outrage to the big fellow. What are you going to do about it, Mr. Exhibitor? In 1913 out in Saskatchewan it was proposed to set an exorbitant tax upon picture houses. As one man, the exhibitors rose up and demanded justice. They got it. You can do the same.

SUMMONSED FOR VAUDEVILLE.

Montreal Picture Men Charged by Authorities with Giving Vaudeville in Houses Not First Class.

A number of owners of moving picture theaters appeared before the Recorder on Jan. 22 on a charge of giving vaudeville shows when possessing a license for moving pictures only. Chas. Farhood, of the Chanteclerc, pleaded not guilty, and his trial was fixed for the 27th. Elie and Michel Thomas, owners of the Maple Leaf, were also remanded until the same date. Joseph Rosenberg and H. Heller, proprietors of the Majestic, and Charles Robinovitch, owner of the Eagle, had the charges against them discontinued on their promise to discontinue the performance of vaudeville shows and paying the costs of the case.

The authorities are to be commended for their efforts in making as safe as possible the public halls of the city. The step taken by them will also help to give the public shows fit to be seen. I am told that certain cheap vaudeville shows in this city would disgust any healthy-minded citizen. Let it be understood that these remarks are not aimed at the houses mentioned in the preceding paragraph. I am happy to say that I know of nothing deteriorating in this respect regarding the houses against which the city has already taken action; but I hope that the authorities will not delay in prosecuting graver offenders. I am also of the opinion that such corrupt and smutty tabloids are more worthy of being censored than unoffending moving picture films.

TIMES GOOD FOR PICTURES.

"Canadians are having a reaction from the trying nervous tension of the first months of the war. As a sedative, they are resorting more than ever to motion pictures. Thousands of people who previously ignored their existence have now discovered that the movies present to them the most economical and interesting form of entertainment known. Of course, any scenes connected with the war are of warm interest to all."

This is the observation of the field representative of the Universal Film Mfg. Co. of New York, Mr. Magie, who with his wife is visiting various Canadian cities on business, and is now in Montreal inspecting the local branch under the management of Mr. H. W. Harwell. He thinks the local field for moving pictures is excellent. He is a fluent French speaker, and finds Montreal a very interesting city, being much impressed with its steady advance. Mr. Magie leaves soon for Toronto and Detroit.

OTHER MONTREAL NOTES.

Mr. Charles Handford, local manager of the Allied Features, Inc., reports good business. Mr. Handford, it will be remembered, is a member of the Buffalo Federal League team. He is about to join his team mates shortly at the training camp down south. His absence will be surely felt among local film people, as he has earned the reputation of being a good-fellow and keen business head. Mr. Lubin, general manager of the Allied, was in New York recently on business. "The Opium Smoker," made by the Great Northern and handled by the Allied, was screened at the Mount Royal theater recently.

The Crystal Palace is running the Reliance serial, "Runaway June," and is doing good business with it.

Mr. Tom Cross, manager of the Consolidated Film Co., has been ill for some time, due to the tricky weather Montreal has been having. He expects to be back at his desk shortly.

Manager Kashin of the Victora theater is in the hospital, having recently undergone an operation. Mr. Duquette is manager pro tem. The World Film's "The Marked Woman" was a recent fixture.

A. F. Quintal has left the Picture Playhouse Co. and connected with Pathe's Feature Film Syndicate.

The Domino theater, Mount Royal avenue east, is having its lobby enlarged. It seats about six hundred people and has a good trade. All Stars' "America" was recently screened.

Recent local attractions were: World Film's "The Deep Purple," Strand; Famous Players' "The Conspiracy," New Grand; Universal's "A Study in Scarlet," Mount Royal; Kalem's "The School for Scandal," Imperial; Lasky's "Ready Money," Fairyland; World Film's "The Pit," Tivoli.

NASHVILLE OPERATORS MUST GET LICENSES

Supervisor of Buildings in Tennessee City Announces That Operators Must Take Examination for Fitness.

By G. D. Crain, Jr., Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

A RATHER interesting as well as unusual case has arisen in Nashville, Tenn., in which the city building authorities have decided to license all operators of motion picture machines. During 1915, according to a recent announcement of the supervisor of buildings in Nashville, no moving picture machine will be operated in theaters of Nashville, unless the operator has first secured a license at the city hall. This will mean that he has passed muster at the hands of a board of examiners appointed by the supervisor of buildings to test operators and see that they come up to requirements in the knowledge of their work and their general reputation for carefulness and skill. Questions are being prepared for the applicants for licenses in this work, and they will be ready shortly after the building and motion picture laws of the city have been published. Most of the applicants at present are men who are already engaged in this work and who wish to gain the right to continue. A number of new rules have been adopted in connection with electrical work and inspection. These rules have been incorporated in the new building restrictions.

PHOTOPLAY WRITING AT Y. M. C. A. NIGHT SCHOOL

W. H. Lippold, educational secretary of the Y. M. C. A., has announced arrangements completed whereby night classes in photoplay writing have been established and that pupils are now enrolling. J. H. Monaghan and Stuart W. Cayce, photoplay writers, many of whose productions have been seen in Louisville theaters, will teach. The instruction will combine lectures, discussions, practice work, observation and criticism. The course opened January 21 for the first session with a moving picture demonstration and a lecture.

SUFFRAGISTS BOOST SHOW.

The idea of having society women and suffrage leaders as "barkers" for a motion picture show is a new idea in Chattanooga, Tenn. Captained by Mrs. R. B. Cooke, suffrage leader of the city, a large number of ladies were recently in evidence around the Alcazar theater. Mrs. Cooke was reluctant to admit that her followers were "barkers," but said they were almost that. These ladies all had a number of tickets for sale to see "Your Girl and Mine," the World Film picture, which was on exhibit at the theater. An effort was made to have everyone in the city see the show and particularly "scoffing masculinity." One reason for the effort of the suffrage leaders was that the picture is a movie argument for equal suffrage, and the other reason was that the local association received 25 per cent. of the proceeds of the ticket sales. This picture is not onliy a screen argument for equal suffrage, but is a very interesting story. A number of the scenes are laid in South Carolina, where the laws in regard to the rights of women are particularly objectionable to Southern suffragists. The evil of child labor are also brought out strongly and make a strong appeal to Southern women.

Record was recently made at Nashville, Tenn., of the incorporation of the Anderson Film Exchange, with a capital stock of $5,000. The incorporators are Harry Anderson, Joseph E. Morris, N. R. Anderson, Alfred T. Levine and Wendell J. Levine. The company proposes to buy, lease and sell motion picture films, and to operate motion picture houses and other places of amusement. The new company expects to start its work at once. Harry Anderson will be in active charge of the company's affairs.

GOOD PICTURES NEEDED.

Hard Times in South Make Poor Pictures Bad Investment—Only Best Offerings Go Well.

By G. D. Crain, Jr., Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

TO make people forget themselves is hard work under almost any conditions, but during the past few months it has been especially hard to make Southerners forget themselves and their business, and take real interest in theatrical productions even of the picture type. The moving picture men of Memphis, Nashville and other leading Tennessee cities have therefore been unusually particular in selecting shows which have superior merits. Films that have already enjoyed long New York runs have been pushed with success. Conditions throughout the state have improved somewhat during the past thirty days and business with most of the moving picture houses is fairly good.

MORE NEWS FROM TENNESSEE.

Contractors, of Memphis, Tenn., will shortly submit bids to Charles E. Speer for the erection of a motion picture house to be located at Madison avenue and Cleveland street. The plans have been drawn by John Gaisford, a local architect. The approximate cost of the building will be $6,000. It will be two stories in height and will have a terra cotta front. Most of the theaters in this portion of the town are of the airdome type and can only be used during fine weather. The new house will be roofed and will otherwise contrast with most of the show houses in the district.

The special shows for children which were recently started at the Princess theater at Memphis through the efforts of the Council of Jewish Women, have proven very successful. Good attendances have been present at the shows and are improving steadily. The Board of Education is expected to lend its co-operation in the movement.

Memphis and Memphians were recently featured in a Selig News Pictorial production shown at the Majestic theater No. 2. The Selig Company featured scenes in the city showing the cotton industrial scenes and the great terminal warehouses in South Memphis. Every Memphian present was decidedly interested in the big boost for the city. It has been shown in various parts of the country.

Theater goers of Memphis who saw the World Film offering, "Gentleman from Missippi," which was recently shown on the screen at the Majestic theater No. 1, agreed with ex-President Thedore Roosevelt, who said that the famous comedy of Washington social life was "Bully."

The Nashville Building Specialties Company, at No. 50 Arcade Bldg., Nashville, Tenn., has asked prices on seats, especially of such types as are in general use throughout the country in theater and moving-picture houses.

C. V. Ezell, of Paris, Tenn., is advertising for sale a new up-to-date moving picture theater on the best square in a growing city. The house is arranged to seat 340 persons and the entire equipment is new. The present owner has stated that he is unable to give the theater proper attention on account of other interests. Mr. Ezell describes the theater as a capital investment for anyone familiar with the business.

Young's Opera House, at Brownsville, Tenn., has changed both its name and management. Henry Sonfield will have charge of the enterprise during 1915 and the name has been changed to the "Lyceum theater," which is a popular and appropriate name for the house. Mr. Sonfield has announced a number of high grade productions which are booked.

Fire of unknown origin, which started in the basement of Elder's Opera House, at Clarksville, Tenn., spread rapidly to the Lillian theater. Before the flames could be checked something more than an entire block was burned in the business district of the city. The fire broke out at 6 o'clock in the evening and burned nearly all night. The estimated damage to the city was placed at $250,000. The Lillian theater had been doing a very nice business, and will probably be rebuilt and continued. The Elite theater, as a consequence of the recent blaze, is now handling capacity crowds. Francis X. Bushman, in the Esanay offering, "Scars of Possession," drew exceptionally well.

Manager Eix, of the Dixie theater, at Ripley, Tenn., has completed painting and interior decorating at his show house. The work was done by Mr. Eix, personally, who is a high grade painter as well as show manager. His aptness with the pot and brush keeps the Dixie theater in the top notch.

"The Sign of the Cross" made such a big hit at the Majestic theater, No. 1, of Memphis, Tenn., on its first showing that the management had the feature rebooked and had a larger success with it the second time.

The Reliance Motion Picture Corporation has made arrangements with the Nashville Tennessean, one of the leading daily papers of Nashville, to run the story, "Runaway June." This feature, which is written by George Randolph Chester and played by high-class actors, is expected to make a big hit in the city. The first announcement was on Saturday morning, January 2, when a half-page advertisement appeared.

Charles E. Speer, of Memphis, Tenn., is receiving bids for the erection of his new motion picture house on Madison avenue and Cleveland street. The house will be two stories high, of brick, with terra-cotta front. The cost of the new house will be about $6,000. John Gaisford, of Memphis, is the architect.

The Alcazar theater, of Chattanooga, Tenn., which shows the first run Paramount program, recently showed Mary Pickford in "Cinderella." The feature was shown for two days, Friday and Saturday, and drew big crowds even at the day performances. "Hushing The Scandal," a two-reel Keystone comedy, was shown on Friday at the Crescent theater.

..Clara Kimball Young, in the big drama, "Lola," of the World's Film Corporation, recently played a return engagement at the Alcazar theater, of Chattanooga. This film has made a great hit in Chattanooga, and in fact in all of the Southern cities in which it has been shown.

"The Naked Truth," the Kleine feature, was recently offered at the Fifth Avenue theater, of Nashville, Tenn. The big production almost started a furor among movie patrons and the house had considerable difficulty in handling the crowds. The film makes a strong appeal to women. "False Colors," by Bosworth, Inc.; "The Crucible," by Famous Players; "The Country Mouse," by Bosworth, Inc., and "The Man Who Could Not Lose," a Favorite Players offering, are other big attractions recently shown at this theater.

The Engineers' and Architects' Club, which has large rooms on the fourteenth floor of the Starks Building, has a large sheet at one end of the hall. It has been found of considerable advantage in lecturing and describing new ways of handling big contract work. Good attendances are always present when motion pictures are to be shown on the screen.

Charles Long, Everett Earp and James Lisle, who have been showing a series of children's pictures at Harriman, Tenn., have returned to their home at Winchester, Ky., after conducting a number of very successful performances. The men are new at the game, but are handling a road show of special interest to children. The first town shown in was Somerset, Ky. After a short rest the men expect to start out again with the road show.

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD WELCOMES NEWS ITEMS OF INTEREST.

LICENSED FILM STORIES

ESSANAY.

"SWEEDIE GOES TO COLLEGE" (Feb. 8).—Sweedie, the cook, reads an ad in the newspaper for a maid to give her services in exchange for college tuition. She applies and is accepted. At college her sleeping quarters are in the dormitory, and that night while Sweedie sleeps the other girls cook a rarebit. The matron is awakened by their giggles, and when they hear her approaching they put the rarebit dish in Sweedie's bed, then pretend they are asleep. The matron finds the dish and scolds the innocent Sweedie. After she leaves a pillow fight ensues, in which Sweedie is victorious. Next day she receives a note from her Romeo telling her to meet him at 11:00 P. M. and they will elope. He tells her he will wear a mask and advises her to do the same. Another coed receives a note from her sweetheart to the same effect. The result is that the elopers at the last minute are about to marry the wrong party.

"A ROMANCE OF THE NIGHT" (Feb. 9). - Bob Halran, while riding in his machine, is struck by a small slipper which is thrown from a passing limousine. He suspects that the owner is in trouble, so speeds up, and by using a wrench as a revolver, forces the driver to stop. He then helps the girl into his car and they speed back to the city. Meanwhile Regan, who is at the bottom of the kidnapping plot, has made his demands upon her father, and after a struggle has fled with "the other half" of the plans of a lost mine, his half being useless without the remainder. Mr. Darrel, the girl's father, then tells Bob the location of the rendezvous of Regan's gang, and with the aid of his speedy car arrives and has their half of the plans in his possession before Regan arrives with Darrel's half. When Regan appears, Bob forces him to turn over his loot at the point of a gun.

"THE FABLE OF THE GOOD PEOPLE WHO RALLIED TO THE SUPPORT OF THE CHURCH" (Feb. 10).—The loyal women of the congregation decided to pull off a festival and raise some coin for the support of the church. The next Thursday at prayer meeting the minister announced the glad news to the faithful. Then all began to get ready. The gazelles blew about $82.00 for finery to wear at the big doings, while the older sisters used up $27.00 worth of complexion and $19.000 worth of groceries fixing up cakes, candy, etc. The deacon and the special committee put in $12.00 worth of time decorating the parlors, and the table decorations cost just $20.000. Some of the spenders brought their girls in taxicabs. It cost them $2.00 each, but they were willing to help the church. Lucy Wilkens rented a Gypsy costume for $6.00 and told fortunes. She took in $2.75. At 10 P. M. much of the refreshments were unsold, so the kids were given a free hack at it. The expenses of the affair amounted to $250.00. When the sisters found that they had taken in $46.80 they agreed that the festival had been a great success.

"SLIM THE BRAVE AND SOPHIE THE FAIR" (Feb. 11).—Slim calls on Sophie, but has no more than gotten comfortably settled when Mustang arrives and is given all the attention. Very shortly Hiram, Sophie's father, comes downstairs and kicks Mustang out. Mustang returns with a note telling Sophie to meet him next day when the stage coach arrives and they will run away. Sophie tears up the note, but Slim pieces it together and reads it. Next day Mustang and Sophie climb aboard the stage with their suitcases. Just as they are congratulating themselves on their cleverness a bandit steps out in the road and orders the driver to stop. The driver takes to his heels, then Mustang is ordered to do likewise. The bandit then takes off his disguise and it is none other than Slim. He is now a hero in the eyes of Sophie, so they proceed to the minister's home.

"BRONCHO BILLY'S SENTENCE" (Feb 9).—Broncho Billy, an outlaw, after robbing a stage coach, goes to the cabin of an old man who lives with his daughter and demands food. While here the posse comes along and Broncho orders the girl out to tell them that he has not been seen, while he holds the old man at the point of a gun threatening him with death if he opens his mouth. The posse believe the girl, so go on. When Broncho leaves, the girl, mad with anger, brings out a Winchester and shoots him in the head. He drags himself to a hollow stump, where he hides the money he stole. He then makes his way to a small town, where he goes to the church and tells the minister and his wife how he was accidentally shot. Broncho lived at the minister's home for some time and becomes converted. One night he steals out, taking with him a Bible. He leaves a note saying he lied about being accidentally shot and that he is an outlaw. He goes to the sheriff's office with his loot and gives himself up. Years later find him a prisoner in the penitentiary. He still has his Bible and each morning conducts a prayer meeting in the chapel. Finally one morning he is called into the warden's office and given his freedom for good behavior. (Length, approximately 1,000 feet.)

"THIRTEEN DOWN" (Special—Two Parts—Feb. 12).—Dr. Lamarde, the inventor of the Lamarde gun, has an argument with James Gordon one evening. Lamarde claims there is nothing in luck, but everything in environment. Gordon does not agree with him, and to prove his point they go to the slums, and after picking the thirteenth man from the bread line tell him they wish him to thwart a plot to steal the plans of the Lamarde gun. He is then informed he must act as Lamarde's secretary while working on the case. Lamarde has no intimation that there is a plot afoot, but takes this method of securing the vagabond's interest.

Robert Orson, one of Jeanne Lamarde's suitors, has been seen several times conferring with the butler, and acted most suspiciously when interrupted. Lamarde now is convinced that there is a real plot to steal his gun plans.

One day Jeanne discovers the vagabond secretary kneeling at her father's safe. She demands an explanation, but he gives none. She orders him to leave the place, but does not expose him. That evening while Jeanne and her father are attending the opera, the vagabond discovers two men about to open the safe. He has a terrible battle and overcomes them just as Jeanne and her father return. The two intruders are discovered to be Baron Schoman and his secretary, two of the guests of honor at Miss Lamarde's reception the day before.

Next morning the vagabond proves to be none other than Arnold Austin, a chief in the U. S. secret service. Orson and the butler are his assistants, and they have been on the trail of the Baron for months. Austin was working on a clue when picked up from the bread line.

EDISON.

SUSPICIOUS CHARACTERS (Feb. 8).—So tired have two burglars become of phychological breakfasts and "make-believe" dinners that they gather up their yeggman's tools and start off to rob a pantry. Of epicurean tastes, despite the fact that Jim and Bill have been progressing well on the forty-day fast, they hold up a policeman and ask him where the richest man in the neighborhood lives, so as to find the best stocked larder. Up the street they go, with the policeman following them, first with his eyes, and then in person.

His suspicions rapidly rising within him, the policeman approaches the burglars, who are stationed at a window of the palatial place, watching the man of the house put the family jewels into the safe. He looks them over closely as they pull their domino masks down. He shakes his head wisely and moves on, leaving the famished burglars standing at the window with a saw, an axe, drills, "soup" and the other requisites. The lady of the house pulls the curtains down in their faces and they brand the act as evidence of ill manners.

Little Rachel has stepped into the open safe and her father has carelessly closed the steel door. Jim and Bill jimmy their way into the place and immediately begin with the safe. Bill tells the alert policeman that they are piano tuners when the bluecoat follows them into the house and asks them what they are doing, as they are in the act of drilling the strong box. Bill plays an air on the piano, and even the safe dances to the alluring strains.

The man of the house, who is seen in the corridor executing a little terpsichorean stunt with his wife while the music continues, realizes that there are burglars in the house and rushes downstairs with a revolver. Jim and Bill hold up their hands and the safe at the command. Meanwhile, the policeman is trying to convince himself that the men are burglars. Jim and Bill roll the safe into the pantry, where they find some pies. They are unusually soft, and the cop and the man of the house make good targets for them, when they attempt to follow the burglars into the pantry. While the policeman stands outside the pantry door, suspecting mischief, the burglars blow the safe and Rachel steps out. The burglars are showered with thanks and money, but are immediately arrested by the policeman, who was knocked over by the pantry door and walked on by the entire party for several minutes before being discovered and rescued. At the station, the burglars walk through the bars and grab the policeman, and, after hauling him through into a cell, leave the jail in high spirits.

OLIVE'S GREATEST OPPORTUNITY (a dramatic portrayal of the twelfth and last episode of "Olive's Opportunities"—Feb. 9).—Vance Coleman is invited by Olive to attend a skating party, and they meet at Madame Forresti's bungalow. When Olive and Madame Forresti arrive there the place is locked and Olive climbs through the window and unlocks the door. There is a note from the caretaker to the effect that there is illness in the family and she has to go home. Madame Forresti is suspicious, but she is ridiculed by Olive for her fear.

Vance and Olive join the many skaters at the lake, and as Madame Forresti sits at the camp fire at the edge of the lake she sees Franz Delli, a gypsy. She is startled and then laughs hysterically. Vance leaves and Olive and Madame Forresti go into the bungalow and prepare to retire. They are sitting before the brisk fire, and Madame Forresti tells Olive of her childhood, remarking that when she was a farmer's daughter she married a romantic gypsy, named Franz Delli, and a girl was born to them. At this juncture Madame Forresti shows Olive a locket, and Olive recognizes the image in it as that of her father. Madame Forresti thereupon takes Olive in her arms, and mother and child are reunited. A noise is heard and Olive insists upon investigating, but is restrained.

Madame Forresti goes downstairs, and as she approaches a screen it moves. Quickly pushing the screen aside, she sees the form of Delli, crouching. He utters a few revengeful words and attacks her. Olive hears the tussle and proceeds to the scene of the battle with a shotgun. She fires and misses, but Delli is frightened and escapes. Olive is restrained from shooting further by Madame Forresti, who tells her that the intruder is her father. Vance arrives at the bungalow the following morning and shows a newspaper with a story telling of the discovery of the body of a gypsy floating in the lake. The final scene shows the interior of a church, and the principals are Vance and Olive, who are made man and wife.

THE LIFE HISTORY OF A SILKWORM (Feb. 10).—The eggs of the silkworm, called graine, are hatched out by artificial heat at the period when the mulberry leaves are ready for the feeding of the larvae. The moth of the silkworm lays about two hundred eggs. A view of the eggs hatching is especially interesting.

Pieces of paper, punctured with small holes, are placed over the trays where the eggs are hatching, so the worms can creep through to the light and scrape off any fragments of shell which, adhering to the shell, might kill them by constriction. The little worms, of voracious appetite, feed on the mulberry leaves. As the moulting periods approach, the worms lose their appetite and cease eating. The silkworm moults about four times. When the caterpillars are mature, which takes about a month, and ready to undergo their transformation into the pupa condition, they cease eating and ascend the brushwood branches or echelletes provided for them, and in which they set about spinning their cocoons. They complete their cocoons in from three to four days, and in two or three days thereafter the cocoons are collected and the pupae killed to prevent further progress.

Such cocoons as are selected for the production of the graine, on the other hand, are collected, freed from the external floss, and preserved at a temperature of 66° to 72° Fahrenheit, and in about two weeks the moths appear. The coupling, which immediately takes place, is carefully attended to; the males are afterward thrown away.

THE TAILOR'S BILL (on same reel as foregoing—Feb. 10).—Platz has just worked the bill with a string attached game on Grimm, the tailor, who has rented him a variegated coat in which to attend a masquerade ball. Grimm is angry when he finds the bill gone, and Platz returns and places the bill on the counter again, and, of course, removes it with the aid of the subtle string. In his room, Platz receives a note from the tailor to the effect that he will expose him at the ball if he doesn't pay for the suit. Platz kicks the bearer of the note out of the window and prepares for the ball.

Platz goes out of the house to get something to supplement his already cumbersome masquerade costume and is spotted by Grimm. There is a chase and Platz catches on to the rear end of an automobile. Grimm has nothing to do but shake his fist after the elusive Platz. The man with the vanishing money is next seen walking up another street laden with bundles. He is attacked by Grimm, and with his arms full of bundles is unable to repel the attack. The bundles are strewn promiscuously about and, in a rage, Platz picks them up and hurls them in all directions. One hits a policeman, another a woman, etc. Grimm is discouraged at not finding the money and goes back to his shop and burns about four gross of matches looking for the bill.

Mrs. Ralston has words with her husband, who is disinclined to attend the masque ball. She throws his costume from the window. Platz sees it and throws his out also. A boy finds them and sells Platz's to a big husky. Platz decides to attend the ball without a character costume.

(Continued on page 870.)

Calendar of Licensed Releases

Releases for Weeks Ending February 6 and February 13

Current Releases

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 1, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—Fate's Protecting Arm (Drama).
EDISON—Found—A Flesh Reducer (Comedy).
ESSANAY—The New Teacher (Comedy).
KALEM—The Swindler (Special—Two parts—Drama).
LUBIN—Patsy on a Trolley Car (No. 6 of the Patsy Bolivar Series—Comedy).
PATHE—Pathe's Daily News No. 9, 1915 (News).
SELIG—The Vision of the Shepherd (Special—Two parts—Drama).
—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 9, 1915 (News).
VITAGRAPH—Cabman Kate (Comedy).

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 2, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—Three Hats (Special—Two parts—Comedy).
EDISON—Olive and the Heirloom (Eleventh of the "Olive's Opportunities" Series—Drama).
ESSANAY—The Creed of the Clan (Drama).
KALEM—The Insurance Nightmare (Comedy).
LUBIN—The Belated Honeymoon (Comedy).
SELIG—Forked Trails (Western—Drama).
VITAGRAPH—How Cissy Made Good (Broadway Star Feature—Special—Three parts—Comedy).

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 3, 1915.

EDISON—Seen from the Gallery (Comedy).
—A Thorn Among Roses (Comedy).
ESSANAY—The Fable of "Elvira and Farina and the Meal Ticket" (Comedy).
KALEM—The Apartment House Mystery (Second of "The Girl Detective" Series—Special—Two parts—Drama).
LUBIN—A Night's Adventure (Special—Two parts—Drama).
PATHE—Pathe's Daily News No. 10, 1915 (News).
SELIG—Just Like a Woman (Drama).
VITAGRAPH—The Combination (Comedy).

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 4, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—The Borrowed Necklace (Drama).
ESSANAY—Sophie's Home-Coming (Western—Comedy).
LUBIN—The Regenerating Love (Special—Three parts—Drama).
MINA—In the Palmy Days (Comedy).
SELIG—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 10, 1915 (News).
VITAGRAPH—The Understudy; or Behind the Scenes (Drama).

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 5, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—It Doesn't Pay (Drama).
EDISON—Oh! Where Is My Wandering Boy To-Night (Special—Two parts—Drama).
ESSANAY—Third Hand High (Special—Two parts—Drama).
KALEM—The Hicksville Tragedy Troupe (Comedy).
LUBIN—The Nameless Fear (Drama).
SELIG—Cats (Comedy).
VITAGRAPH—The Green Cat (Comedy).

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 6, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—Winning the Old Man Over (Comedy).
—The Club Pest (Comedy).
EDISON—The Stone Heart (Drama).
ESSANAY—Broncho Billy's Greaser Deputy (Reg. U. S. Patent Office—Western—Drama).
KALEM—The Escape on the Fast Freight (Thirteenth of the "Hazards of Helen" Railroad Series—Drama).
LUBIN—The Furnace Man (Comedy).
SELIG—The Leopard's Lair (Jungle—Zoo—Drama).
VITAGRAPH—For Another's Crime (Special—Two parts—Drama).

Advance Releases

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 8, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—The Stray Shot (Drama).
EDISON—Suspicious Characters (Comedy).
ESSANAY—Sweedie Goes to College (Comedy).
KALEM—In the Hands of the Jury (Special—Two parts—Drama).
LUBIN—Patsy Bolivar No. 7, "Patsy in a Seminary" (Comedy).
PATHE—Pathe's Daily News No. 11, 1915 (News).
SELIG—The Passer-By (Special—Two parts—War—Drama).
—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 11, 1915 (News).
VITAGRAPH—Hearts to Let (Comedy—Drama).

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 9, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—Pere Goriot (Special—Two parts—Drama).
EDISON—Olive's Greatest Opportunity (Twelfth of "Olive's Opportunities" Series—Drama).
ESSANAY—A Romance of the Night (Drama).
KALEM—Mr. Pepperie Temper (Comedy).
—The Mexican's Chickens (Comedy).
LUBIN—His Soul Mate (Comedy).
SELIG—Roping a Bride (Western—Comedy—Drama).
VITAGRAPH—The Wrong Girl (Two parts—Comedy).

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 10, 1915.

EDISON—The Tailor's Bill (Comedy).
—The Life History of a Silk Worm (Educational).
ESSANAY—The Fable of "The Good People Who Rallied to the Support of the Church" (Comedy).
KALEM—The Disappearance of Harry Warrington (Third of "The Girl Detective" Series—Special—Two parts—Drama).
LUBIN—Bags of Gold (Special—Three parts—Drama).
PATHE—Pathe's Daily News No. 12, 1915 (News).
SELIG—The Odd Slipper (Melodrama).
VITAGRAPH—Breaking in (Comedy—Drama).

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 11, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—Getting Rid of Nephew (Comedy).
—The Big Night (Comedy).
ESSANAY—Slim the Brave and Sophie the Fair (Comedy).
LUBIN—The Trapper's Revenge (Special—Two parts—Drama).
MINA—The Masquerade Hero (Comedy).
SELIG—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 12, 1915 (News).
VITAGRAPH—On the Altar of Love (Drama).

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 12, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—Their Divorce Sund (Comedy—Drama).
EDISON—The Glory of Clementina (Special—Two parts—Drama).
ESSANAY—Thirteen Down (Special—Two parts—Drama).
KALEM—Ham and the Sausage Factory (Comedy).
LUBIN—An Obstinate Sheriff (Drama).
SELIG—The Perfumed Wrestler (Farce—Comedy).
VITAGRAPH—When Greek Meets Greek (Comedy).

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 13, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—The Woman Who Paid (Drama).
EDISON—The Girl Who Kept Books (One of the phases of the life of "The Girl Who Earns Her Living"—Drama).
ESSANAY—Broncho Billy's Sentence (Reg. in U. S. Patent Office—Western—Drama).
KALEM—The Red Signal (Fourteenth of the "Hazards of Helen Railroad" Series—Drama).
LUBIN—When Father Interfered (Comedy).
SELIG—The Bugle Call (Jungle-Zoo—Animal—Picture).
VITAGRAPH—Mother's Roses (Broadway Star—Feature—Special—Three parts—Drama).

Truth and Simplicity is the Keynote of Biograph Advertising and all this white space represents the Biograph policy of having Biograph pictures judged on their merits. Biograph pictures have attained their prominent position on programs solely through their quality, and the FIVE BIOGRAPHS will continue to merit your approval through the same high standard of Biograph Quality.

For descriptions of all Biograph releases read THE BIOGRAPH mailed free each week.

BIOGRAPH COMPANY
807 EAST 175TH STREET
NEW YORK, N. Y.

Calendar of Independent Releases

Releases for Weeks Ending February 6 and February 13

Universal Film Mfg. Co.

SUNDAY, JANUARY 31, 1915.

ECLAIR—The Thief and the Chief (Comedy—Drama).
L-KO—After Her Millions (Three parts—Comedy).
REX—No release this week.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 1, 1915.

IMP—The Story the Silk Hats Told (Drama).
JOKER—The Blank Note (Comedy).
VICTOR—Cards Never Lie (Two parts—Gypsy—Drama).

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 2, 1915.

BIG "U"—Seven and Seventy (Drama).
GOLD SEAL—The Girl of the Secret Service (Two parts—Detective—Drama).
NESTOR—All Over the Biscuits (Comedy).

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 3, 1915.

ANIMATED WEEKLY—Number 152 (News).
ECLAIR—The Lure of the West (Two parts—Western—Drama).
L-KO—The Butcher's Bride (Comedy).

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 4, 1915.

BIG "U"—Her Bargain (Two parts—Society—Drama).
REX—The Girl and the Spy (Drama).
STERLING—Love and Dough (Comedy).

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 5, 1915.

IMP—The Awaited Hour (Two parts—Melodrama).
NESTOR—Lizzie's Dizzy Career (Comedy).
VICTOR—The Bribe (Drama).

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 6, 1915.

BISON—Ridgeway of Montana (Three parts—Mining—Drama).
JOKER—He Cured His Gout (Comedy).
—The Sierras from the Base to the Summit (Scenic).
POWERS—No release this week.

SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 7, 1915.

ECLAIR—Their Hobo Hero (Drama).
L-KO—Zip and His Gang (Comedy).
REX—The Flash (Two parts—Human-Interest—Drama).

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 8, 1915.

IMP—The Heart Punch (Drama).
JOKER—The Plumber Wins the Girl (Comedy).
—The Baltic Sea (Educational).
VICTOR—Everygirl (Two parts—Allegorical—Drama).

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 9, 1915.

BIG "U"—Dad (Comedy—Drama).
GOLD SEAL—The Heart of Lincoln (Three parts—Civil War—Drama).
NESTOR—No Release This Week.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 10, 1915.

ANIMATED WEEKLY—Number 153 (News).
ECLAIR—Terror (Two parts—Western—Drama).
L-KO—Father Was a Loafer (Comedy).

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 11, 1915.

BIG "U"—The Vaudry Jewels (Two parts—Detective—Drama).
REX—The Phantom Warning (Drama).
STERLING—Billie Was a Right Smart Boy (Juvenile—Comedy).

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 12, 1915.

IMP—The Stake (Drama).
NESTOR—All Aboard (Two parts—Comedy).
VICTOR—A Bogus Bandit (Western—Drama).

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 13, 1915.

BISON—Terrors of the Jungle (Two parts—Animal—Drama).
JOKER—Won with Dynamite (Comedy).
—Artistic Paper Cutting and Designing (Educational).
POWERS—The Vengeance of Sampson (Western—Drama).

Mutual Film Corporation

SUNDAY, JANUARY 31, 1915.

KOMIC—Cupid and the Pest (Comedy).
MAJESTIC—A Farewell Dinner (Two parts—Drama).
THANHOUSER—Helen Intervenes (Thanhouser—Kidlet—Drama).

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 1, 1915.

AMERICAN—The Law of the Wilds (Two part—Drama).
KEYSTONE—The Home Breakers (Two parts—Comedy).
—Fatty's New Role (Comedy).
RELIANCE—At the Bottom of Things (Drama).

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 2, 1915.

BEAUTY—Which Would You Rather Be (Comedy—Drama).
MAJESTIC—An Old Fashioned Girl (Drama).
THANHOUSER—In the Jury Room (Two parts—Drama).

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 3, 1915.

AMERICAN—Imitations (Drama).
BRONCHO—Shorty's Adventures in the City (Two parts—Drama).
RELIANCE—The Beast Within (Drama).

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 4, 1915.

DOMINO—A Modern Noble (Two parts—Drama).
KEYSTONE—Hogan, the Porter (Comedy).
MUTUAL—Weekly Number 5, 1915 (News).

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 5, 1915.

KAY-BEE—College Days (Two parts—Drama).
MAJESTIC—The Double Deception (Comedy—Drama).
PRINCESS—Nell's Strategy (Romantic-Drama).

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 6, 1915.

KEYSTONE—Title not announced.
RELIANCE—Heart Beats (Two parts—Drama).
ROYAL—The Star Boarder (Comedy).

SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 7, 1915.

KOMIC—Bill Turns Valet (No. 16 of the "Bill" Series—Comedy).
MAJESTIC—Imar, the Servitor (Two parts—Oriental—Drama).
THANHOUSER—Big Brother Bill (Comedy—Drama).

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 8, 1915.

AMERICAN—Justified (Two parts—Drama).
KEYSTONE—Title Not Announced.
RELIANCE—The Studio of Life (Drama).

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 9, 1915.

BEAUTY—Mrs. Cook's Cooking (Drama).
MAJESTIC—His Last Deal (Comedy—Drama).
THANHOUSER—The Smuggled Diamonds (Two parts—Drama).

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 10, 1915.

AMERICAN—A Heart of Gold (Drama).
BRONCHO—The Chinatown Mystery (Two parts—Drama).
RELIANCE—The Chinese Lottery (Newspaper—Life—Drama).

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 11, 1915.

DOMINO—The Bride of Guadeloupe (Two parts—Drama).
KEYSTONE—Title Not Announced.
MUTUAL—Weekly Number 6, 1915 (News).

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 12, 1915.

AMERICAN—The Wily Chaperon (Comedy—Drama).
KAY-BEE—The Tennessee Hills (Two parts—Drama).
PRINCESS—Across the Way (Comedy—Drama).

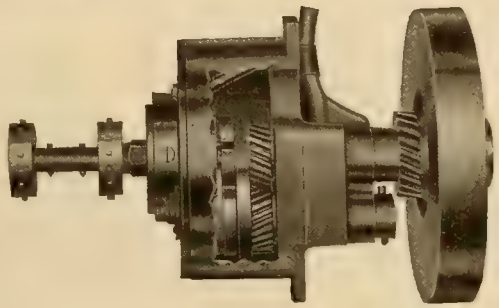
SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 13, 1915.

KEYSTONE—Title Not Announced.
RELIANCE—The Death Dice (Two parts—Drama).
ROYAL—The Escort (Comedy).

Simplex

Intermittent Movement

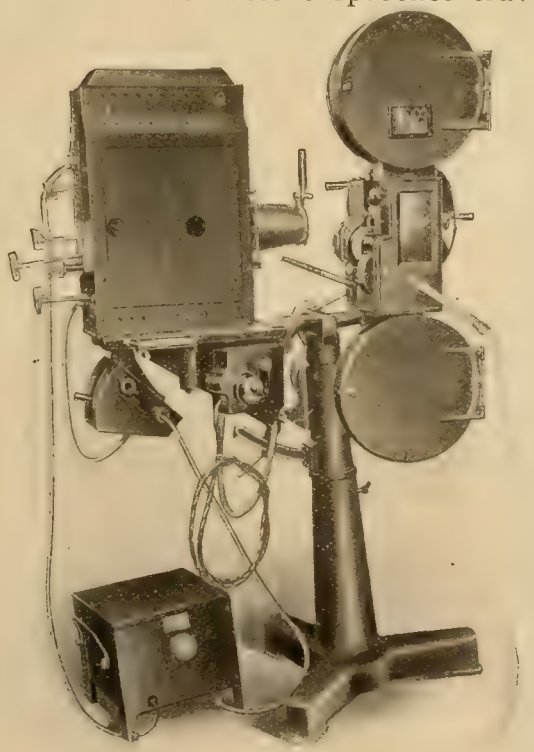
Simplex
TRADE MARK PAT'D



The intermittent movement is the most vital point in a motion picture projector; therefore, when purchasing a projector, it is the first feature of the machine to be considered.

It is a well known fact that the intermittent sprocket must be started and stopped sixteen times or more each second. Whenever it starts, it pulls down three-quarters of an inch of film and then must stop dead still. The least movement or quiver is fatal to a steady picture.

To suddenly start or stop a rapidly moving body requires great power and means much strain on the parts employed. The circumference of the SIMPLEX intermittent sprocket travels three-quarters of an inch in one-sixty-fourth of a second, or at the rate of 2880 ft. per minute, thus giving some idea of what it means to bring it to an instant stop.



To reduce the strain and vibration to a minimum, it is necessary, first, to make the parts as light as possible consistent with good mechanical principles; and, second, to keep the circumferences of the rotating parts near the center of rotation, so as to reduce the peripheral speed and the consequent strain of stopping it dead still.

A glance at the cut will show that the intermittently moving parts of the SIMPLEX carry out these principles and are made so accurately (correct to 1-10000 inch) that we obtain snug fit without undue friction or wear, practically noiseless action and no vibration or back lash. The shape and size of the intermittent sprocket teeth also have much to do with the steadiness of the picture.

Do not confuse the cam and star of Geneva movement as used in the SIMPLEX with similar movements of other makes of machines. The principle may be the same, but the distinctly SIMPLEX method of design and accuracy accounts for the great difference in results.

MADE AND GUARANTEED BY

THE PRECISION MACHINE CO. INC.

317 East 34th St. New York

(Continued from page 865.)

Grimm is stationed at the door of the hall when the husky comes along with Platz's costume, accompanied by his girl. Grimm starts to belittle him before his lady friend, and the result is that Grimm is trimmed up in proper style. Mrs. Ralston appears at the ball in her limousine shortly in advance of Platz. Grimm, recovering from the effects of the beating, recognizes Platz and follows him into the ball. Platz leaves the ball in a hurry and leaps into Mrs. Ralston's limousine, which is, at this time, in charge of an intoxicated chauffeur. The driver heads for the Ralston home and then pulls Platz into the house. Mrs. Ralston returns, and when she learns the story they all have a laugh. Mr. Ralston arrives, but he is rushed into the background. Grimm appears at the window and soon a policeman is brought into the house. Platz pays the tailor the bill to the policeman, and all shake hands.

THE GLORY OF CLEMENTINA (Special—Two Parts—Feb. 12).—Mrs. Angela Quixtus, wife of Ephraim Quixtus, a rich, congenial and gullible business man of London, agrees to pass an amorous letter from Will Hammersley to Nora Duglade, an unhappy married woman, and because of the unannounced entry of Quixtus into the room the letter is hastily thrown into a drawer of Mrs. Quixtus' desk. She forgets it, and subsequently, after her demise, it remains undelivered. Meanwhile, Will Hammersley leaves for India in order that Nora's husband's suspicions might not be aroused.

Quixtus, now a widower and always a good spender, gives a weekly dinner to three ne'er-do-wells, and at one of these parties he hears them talking ill of him behind his back. Simultaneously, he receives a letter from the absconding junior member of the firm to the effect that the firm has been disgraced. As the last straw, he finds the letter to Nora Duglade in his wife's desk and he is overcome. The letter is addressed to "My darling" and written so that Quixtus believes it to be a letter to his wife from Hammersley. The ne'er-do-wells are expelled from his good grace, and they evolve a scheme with the fascinating Mrs. Fontaine, by which they expect to get some of Quixtus' money.

Quixtus is a friend of Clementina Wing, an eccentric but successful artist, who watches jealously over him, although she does not evidence her feeling for him. She is advised to take a trip to France for her health, and she takes Tommy along with her, hoping to get Etta Concannon, with whom he is in love, to join the party later. The party goes to France, and it is in Paris that Clementina meets Quixtus, Huckaby, one of the ne'er-do-wells, and Mrs. Fontaine. Quixtus having gone to France to attend a congress of a society of which he was the London president. The meeting between Quixtus and Mrs. Fontaine, prearranged, of course, by the plotters, was seemingly "by chance." Clementina treats the plotters with an air of indifference bordering on disdain, and takes Quixtus out of the hotel to Marseilles, where Hammersley is dying. After his death, Quixtus and Clementina take Sheila, Will's child, and harbor her. A letter is found in the desk of Hammersley, which is signed by Nora Duglade, clearing up the original letter found in Quixtus' wife's desk.

After the return to London, Clementina is directed to design the dinner decorations for an affair to be given in honor of Etta and Tommy. Mrs. Fontaine is invited, and, in the midst of the brilliant affair, Clementina, the erstwhile eccentric artist, appears, exquisitely gowned. Quixtus, as well as everyone else, is blinded by her radiance and surprised at the wonderful transformation. Mrs. Fontaine is in the shade from then on. Quixtus and Clementina then come to an understanding and Quixtus is permanently saved from the clutches of the vampire, Mrs. Fontaine.

THE GIRL WHO KEPT BOOKS (one of the phases of the life of "The Girl Who Earns Her Living"—Feb. 13).—Gertrude and Jarvis are talking in the office of the latter, who is an expert accountant. He is commending her on her auditing work. Gertrude goes to the hallway to drop some letters down a mail chute and meets Nelson Thorpe, who, by his courtesies, wins a place in Gertrude's list of eligibles immediately. She returns to her office and Thorpe enters, passing Crawley, a bookkeeper, who covers the book he is at work on. The president of the firm and others of the men higher up appear in the offices and indicate that there is something wrong with the books. Crawley is nervous.

To prevent a run on the bank, which would be resultant from the auditing of the books if the fact were made known, President Bushton suggests that the examination be made at his hotel. Gertrude and Jarvis are given the task.

Concealed behind a pillar, Crawley watches Gertrude and Jarvis come out of the hotel, and when Gertrude refuses Jarvis' offer to escort her home, he follows her. Thorpe, one of Gertrude's silent admirers, happens along and decides to follow. Crawley attacks Gertrude in a deserted section and is frustrated in his effort to get the books by the timely arrival of Thorpe. Crawley writes an anonymous letter to Gertrude warning her that Thorpe is an adventurer. She also receives a note from Thorpe asking that she permit him to escort her to the hotel. She compares the handwritings with the entries in the book and discovers that the alterations have been made by Crawley. Crawley then writes a note to Mrs. Jarvis telling her that her husband is seen nightly entering the Vandergilt Hotel in the company of a woman. Mrs. Jarvis, who was suspicious when told by her husband that he had to go out on business, is now aroused and goes to the hotel to satisfy her mind. At the entrance she sees her husband with Gertrude. Crawley gets into the auditing room and begins to demolish one of the books by tearing out leaves. There is a scene in front of the hotel, occasioned by the appearance of Mrs. Jarvis, and before Gertrude can explain she faints. The party adjourns to the interior, and Crawley, hearing them approach, hides. Gertrude is revived and she explains the situation to the satisfaction of Mrs. Jarvis. Furthermore, she tells of her findings after studying the handwritings. Crawley attempts to escape, but is caught. Thorpe and Gertrude, in the meantime, reach an understanding.

VITAGRAPH.

"THE GREEN CAT" (Feb. 5).—Within twenty-four hours after Bedelia, an old maid, has lost her green cat, she is begging Boggs, of the National Detective Agency, to find her lost pet and offering him $1,000.00 reward as an added inducement. Billy, Boggs' assistant, goes out on the case, with all the detective paraphernalia and the proper mysterious atmosphere. With the aid of a telescope, a waste paper basket and a bunch of catnip, Billy finally tracks down a kitten which had received an accidental bath from a can of green paint. Boggs decides he will earn the reward a little easier, and tells his daughter Constance to get him a stray cat, which he intends to paint green, then claim the reward. Constance tells a small boy of her wishes, and he passes the word on to a bunch of other youngsters. When it is learned that Constance has promised a dollar to the first one who brings in a stray cat, the boys are soon gathering in every member of the feline species within that district. The result is that when Boggs comes

FREE! FREE! FREE!

OPERATORS

You can get one copy of

HALLBERG'S NEW BOOK

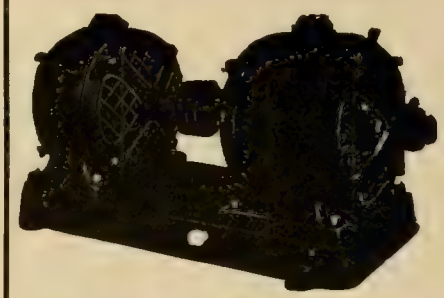
"Motion Picture Electricity"

including

"Hallberg Electrical Talks"

which costs $2.50, by sending this ad with a cash order for $25 worth of merchandise before March 1st, 1915.

LET ME KNOW YOUR WANTS!



HALLBERG

A. C. to D. C.

Economizer

The results on your screen will amaze you, please your audience and put your competitors In The Shade.

Let me post you on the latest. Write today. RESULTS COUNT—NOT LOW PRICES.

Send $2.50 for new book

MOTION PICTURE ELECTRICITY

EVERYBODY NEEDS ONE

SIMPLEX

Distributor "BAIRD" and Motiograph M. P. Machines

BAIRD

Distributor Power's 6-A and Simplex M. P. Machines

POWER'S 6A

Factory Selling Headquarters for BAIRD, POWER'S, SIMPLEX, MOTIOGRAPH and EDISON MACHINES, "HALLBERG" STANDARD A. C. ECONOMIZERS. "HALLBERG" D. C. ECONOMIZERS, MERCURY ARC RECTIFIERS, MOVING PICTURE MACHINE and FLAME ARC CARBONS

I EQUIP THEATRES COMPLETELY

Free Circulars on all makes of M. P. Machines, but Hallberg's Big Catalogue, 100 pages, costs you 25c. by mail

J. H. HALLBERG SWEDISH ENGINEER "THE HOUSE OF QUALITY" 36 East 23rd Street, New York

back from the paint store he finds his office filled with a squalling, mewing crowd of cats, of all descriptions, sizes, shapes and ages, some dilapidated and others of high degree. After much trouble, he clears out the place, gives one of them a dollar, and paints his cat green. Boggs starts for Bedelia's home, and there runs into Billy coming with a basket containing a green cat on his arm. A riot is imminent, when turning, they see Constance handing Bedelia the real green kitty which the old maid had lost and receiving the $1,000.00 reward. She spies the two men, notes their sheepish looks and the suspicious-looking baskets, and, laughing heartily, waves them a merry ta-ta. With a look of hearty disgust, the two disgruntled detectives sneak off in different directions. Billy drops his kitty into an empty barrel, while Boggs allows his cat to escape in an open lot.

"HEARTS TO LET" (Feb. 8).—Married to a woman who does not understand him or his work, Birnell, a novelist, is unhappy. He neglects the little attentions so dear to women's hearts, and when Grace Martin, an author-friend of Elene's, calls, and almost monopolizes the conversation on being introduced to her husband, Elene becomes intensely jealous. Miss Martin consents to collaborate with Birnell on his new novel, and both find a rare similarity of tastes and ideas in each other. Serious trouble begins when Elene discovers a letter containing the most ardent love terms in an envelope addressed to her husband. During a stormy scene she accuses him of everything he did not do, and orders him to assist her in securing a divorce at once. First puzzled, then angry, his pride overmasters everything else, and, deciding that a divorce was what she has wanted for some time, he determines to see that she gets it. After the separation, Elene has regrets, but that doesn't prevent her from accepting the attentions of young Ralph Lyons. They become engaged and he selects an apartment for their new home. She goes to look it over. Birnell, meanwhile, has returned from abroad, where he has found temporary forgetfulness of his troubles, and with his eye open for a suitable apartment happens to select the one in which Grace is roaming around. The superintendent of the apartment is called away hurriedly and takes with him the broken door-knob to the room in which Grace and Birnell come face to face. After the first shock of surprise and desire to escape, which is frustrated by the locked door, they decide to make the best of it. The humor of the situation appeals to them, they become friends again and go on planning the decorations of the place as if they intended purchasing it. Discovering that, after all, both have interests in common, a complete reconciliation takes place. They decide to take the apartment together as man and wife once more.

"THE WRONG GIRL" (Special—Two Parts—Feb. 9).—Banker Dryden's daughter Elsie is persistently courted by the Count Fromage De Brie, ably assisted by Elsie's French maide, Zelie, secretely the Count's sister. Elsie and Tom Hastings, her brother Jack's college chum, happen to see each other's photographs, and both become desirous of meeting the original. Tom is to play the "Leading Lady" part in the Junior Dramatics at college, and Jack invites Tom home to dinner. He and Elsie fall in love at their first meeting. The maid tells the Count what Elsie will wear the night of the play so that she may be easily recognized by Jerry, the Count's chauffeur, who is to abduct the girl. The college Seniors, in order to ruin the Junior play, steal the "star's" leading lady clothes, so that Tom has to borrow Elsie's dress. It happens to be the one described by Zelie to the Count. During the performance Count Fromage sends a note to Elsie, asking her to step outside for a moment. Tom happens to come out first in his "leading lady" costume, and is mistaken by Jerry and the Count for Elsie. They hustle him into the cab, despite his struggles, and drive off, while the Seniors pounce on Elsie when she emerges and carry her away, believing they have captured the Juniors' star performer. They learn their mistake on seeing her face, and in the confusion she escapes. Tom, after beating up his abductors in a most unladylike manner, also gets away, meets Elsie and the two hasten back to the show, while the Juniors and Seniors go at each other hammer and tongs. Elsie and Tom quickly explain matters to her anxious father and friends. At this moment Jerry appears, angrily demanding his fare, which the Count cannot pay. The Juniors arrive in the midst of the commotion, seize the Count and Jerry and duck them both in the rain barrel, while Tom, with a whoop, takes Elsie in his arms before them all. Pa Dryden, after recovering his breath, gives his hearty consent to their engagement and Tom feels sure HE has got the "RIGHT GIRL."

BREAKING IN (Feb. 10).—Feeling that his wife and daughter, Melba, should see more of life than that afforded by the Western plains, where they live, "Silent" Jones, a self-made millionaire, takes his family to New York. Melba is in love with Frank Johnson, a young plainsman, and the young people are saddened at the separation. They are given a typical Western "send-off." In New York, Jones enters the Wall Street game, where "The Big Six," a clique of financiers including Van Ardsley, lure him on with the intention of "fleecing" him. Jones determines to help his wife and daughter "break in" to society. They plan a party in their new mansion on Fifth avenue, to which the Van Ardsleys and other members of the "Big Six" are invited. When Mrs. Van Ardsley receives the invitation, she scornfully tears it up, and tells her husband she has no desire to help the Joneses "break in." The others have different excuses, and they are so palpable Jones realizes their intention of snubbing him and his family. As a result, their party is a dismal failure, and finding his daughter crying, Jones swears to get even with "The Big Six." He at once orders his broker to buy up all available shares of a certain stock and when he has quietly gained control of it, he orders his broker to begin to buy the stock on the Exchange. The "Bix Six," thinking to ruin Jones, agree to go short to the limit, but after some exciting battles, Jones emerges from the fray with the "Big Six" absolutely in his power. They learn this to their horror and Van Ardsley humbly goes in person to Jones' home and begs for mercy. He is told, "You were too good for my wife and baby girl, now I've got you, I'm going to break you!" He is then shown out the door. Mrs. Van Ardsley then attempts to intercede with Jones for her husband, but meets with no better success. Sickened with their experiences in the city, the Joneses go back to the plains and there Melba finds happiness with Frank Johnson as her affianced lover.

Marguerite Risser

ONE YEAR
LEADING INGENUE

PATHÉ

LATEST PICTURE

"RACHEL" in

LUBIN'S

"Threads of Destiny"

Only leading dramatic ingenue parts considered in New York or vicinity

ADDRESS
600 WEST 113TH ST.
NEW YORK CITY

ON THE ALTAR OF LOVE (Feb. 11.)—Spurred on by the cold cynicism of her practical-minded father and an over-mastering ambition to succeed in art, Margaret Dare, after a quarrel with her sweetheart, Gerald Lynn, leaves the farm and comes to the city to study painting. At the art school she is astonished to meet Gerald, who has also come to the city to complete his studies in the same profession. They become the best of friends, but pride prevents Gerald from speaking of love to her. They have studios in the same building, and when hard times come, both secure a position as cashier in a restaurant. Each one works alternately morning and afternoon. In this way they are enabled to earn enough to live on and still continue their painting during spare time. A small fortune in prize money is offered by the Society for the Advancement of Art for the best painting submitted and both Gerald and Margaret decide to compete for it, after agreeing not to show each other their pictures until the day before the contest closes. Gerald's eyes begin to bother him, and he does not see that his painting is getting all out of proportion, but an old musician living in the house does and tells Margaret. Gerald finishes what he thinks is his masterpiece, and shortly afterwards goes blind. Margaret, when she sees the picture, realizes at once its hopelessness, and pity bringing out all the love in her heart for Gerald, she impulsively substitutes her own painting in place of the one he has produced and signs his name to it. Her picture wins the prize and Gerald becomes famous almost over night. Not knowing of her sacrifice and that she is responsible for it all, he forgets her temporarily. Broken-hearted, she returns home, to endure the ridicule of the villagers. Gerald's sight is gradually restored and he then learns from the old musician of the substitution. He hastens to Margaret, tells her he knows all, and when he asks her to be his wife, she knows that in place of the laurel wreath she had sacrificed on the altar of love, she now has a rose garland of happiness.

WHEN GREEK MEETS GREEK (Feb. 12).—Although he has determined not to marry, Hudson Turner, a millionaire bachelor, falls in love with Margery, the beautiful and charming daughter of Cooke, the hotel manager at Laughing Springs, where Turner is spending the summer. His nephew Ellis, Hudson's sole heir, reads of his uncle's engagement in the paper, and greatly worried for fear he will lose the fortune, hurries to New York, where he meets his uncle and tries to persuade him that Margery is marrying Hudson solely for his money. He is skeptical, but finally decides to prove Margery's love by a test. Hudson returns to Laughing Springs on crutches, with his nephew and valet, and with a terrific grouch against the world in general, pretending he is very ill. Margery, however, proves most solicitous and sympathetic. This proves conclusively to Hudson that her love is sincere, and Ellis, seeing his plan failing, decides to squeal on his uncle and see what effect that will have to break up their engagement. He accordingly tells Margery of his uncle's little scheme. Then it is a case of "Greek meets Greek." Margery, while she refuses to believe Ellis, has her doubts, and determines to try her fiance. She has Doctor Diggs subject him to the most strenuous and uncomfortable treatment. After an exciting time, Hudson finally pretends that he is dying of heart trouble and makes a brief will which is in Margery's favor. Ellis is wild with rage, but to the astonishment of both men, Margery tears the will to pieces and falls on her knees beside the bed. In tears she begs forgiveness for being the cause of the strenuous time Hudson has gone through lately, and, pointing to Ellis, tells of that young man's deception and blaming him for it all. A great light dawns upon Hudson, and, realizing his nephew is a blackguard, he gently assures Margery that he feels his heart will be safe in her keeping, and that he has no heart disease except that of love.

MOTHER'S ROSES (Broadway Star Feature—Three Parts—Special—Feb. 15).—John Morrison, Wall Street financier, is in the habit of bringing home to his wife daily a bunch of beautiful roses. Delevan, a recognized Money King, meets Helen, the financier's daughter, upon whom he seems to immediately exert a hypnotic influence. She becomes infatuated with him. Payne Morrison. Helen's brother, recognizes Delevan as the man who forcibly took the last life-preserver from a woman in a shipwreck, and warns her against the man. She ignores the warning and Delevan secures her promise to elope with him. The sudden illness and death of her mother prevents this. The shock of Mrs. Morrison's death deranges John Morrison's mind, and the business is carried on by Payne. Delevan again tries to get Helen to elope, but at the critical moment her mother's face appears to her in a vision and she refuses. The rascal then schemes to ruin the Morrisons through their holdings in railroad stocks. He discovers they hold a thousand shares less than his company in a certain stock and plans to have himself elected president of the road. Delevan's stenographer, whom he professed to love, prior to his attachment for Helen Morrison, hears of his engagement, and in revenge, informs Payne of the scheme to ruin him. Remembering his father had at once time presented Mrs. Morrison with a block of that particular stock, Payne realizes if he can only locate them, it will throw the balance of power into his hands. He seeks his father about them, but John Morrison remembers nothing of it. In despair, Payne is about to give up when the spirit of his mother appears and points straight at the family Bible. Between its leaves are found the five thousand shares and the excitement of it all clears John Morrison's mind. At the directors' meeting, the Morrisons vote in the extra shares, completely defeating Delevan, and John Morrison, now himself again, is asked to take the president's chair, while a beautiful vision of Mother appears and smiles upon them.

KALEM.

THE SWINDLER (Two Parts—Feb. 1).—Blinded by the man's wealth, Bess marries Harris. Tom, who loves her, is heartbroken. Shortly after Harris takes his wife to the city, Tom, tired of country life, follows.

Harris, an unscrupulous swindler, is conducting a get-rich-quick scheme. One of his victims is Mrs. Boyden, a widow. The man's promises cause the woman to invest every penny she posseses in a "radium mine."

Bess is ignorant of her husband's business. In the meantime, Tom comes to the assistance of Roy, Mrs. Boyden's crippled son, and thus meets the lad's mother. Later, Tom learns of how the widow has been buncoed. Accompanied by Mrs. Boyden, he calls upon Harris.

Bess, dropping in to see her husband, hears the men quarreling. What she overhears causes her to see Harris as the scoundrel he is. Tom, unable to get the widow's money from the swindler, gives Mrs. Boyden his own savings. Bess returns home and divests herself of the costly attire that had been purchased with stolen money.

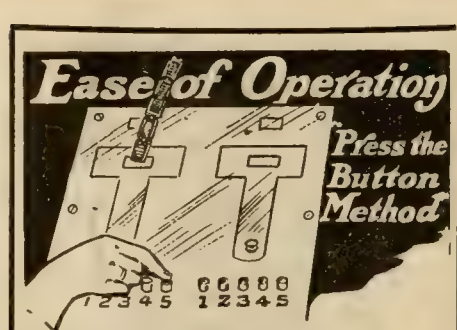
Harris' victims, learning how they have been swindled, descend upon the man's offices. A furious struggle takes place. At the same time, a detective enters the private office and endeavors to place Harris under arrest. A shot fired by an infuriated victim hits the swindler, killing him instantly.

Longing for the peace of the country, Bess returns to the old farm. There she finds Tom. Her former love for him reawakens and she promises to be his wife.

THE INSURANCE NIGHTMARE (Feb. 2).—In an evil moment, Fosdick, who has barely escaped being hit by an automobile, tells his club mates that he intends to take out life insurance. This gets to the ears of Doyle and Drake, insurance agents. Bobby Brass, in love with Fosdick's daughter May, also hears of the incident.

Fosdick's life is immediately made a burden. Doyle and Drake pursue him like grim death. In desperation, Fosdick turns upon the two men and beats them up. The agents flee in terror. Bobby, however, aided by May, plans a regular campaign in his effort to insure his prospective papa-in-law.

When Fosdick reaches his office, he is confronted by a huge sign on his desk bearing the legend, "Bobby Brass, Insurance." Similar signs face him when he has lunch and when he mounts the veranda of his home.



The Best
Accounting System for your theatre is the AUTOMATIC
Ticket Selling and Cash Register

and Moving Picture Theatre owners throughout the country who use the AUTOMATIC System of accounting are sure of their profits.

FIRST—Because the machine is absolutely accurate and counts every ticket without a mistake.

SECOND—Because it adds under lock and key, and the proprietor holds the key.

THIRD—Because it makes reselling of tickets impossible.

FOURTH — Because it eliminates the cost of labor and extensive bookkeeping.

FIFTH—Because the business is balanced when last ticket is sold.

You can throw away your old-fashioned bookkeeping systems, and let the AUTOMATIC do it, with greater accuracy, speed and efficiency.

Write for booklet, "Selling Tickets by Electricity," and you'll know all about the best accounting system.

The Automatic Ticket Selling & Cash Register Co
1476 BROADWAY NEW YORK CITY

Every dish placed before him that evening contains Bobby's card. The 'phone constantly brings him messages from his future son-in-law. Wild with nervousness, poor Fosdick goes to bed. But sleep brings him no relief. A huge monster, representing all insurance agents, torments him in his dreams.

Waking with a scream, Fosdick, donning an overcoat over his pajamas, hastens to Bobby's house. Despite the lateness of the hour, he insists upon signing his application. This done, Fosdick heaves a sigh of relief, hastens home and to bed.

THE APARTMENT HOUSE MYSTERY (A Two-Part Episode of The Girl Detective Series—Feb. 3).—Appointed Special Investigator as the result of her work in rounding up a band of counterfeiters, Ruth finds herself called upon to solve the mystery surrounding the death of a man found on the roof of the Heywood Apartments. The girl detective soon learns that the dead man is Rodger Hastings. A button attached to a piece of cloth clutched in the dead man's hand furnishes the first clue.

While interviewing Mrs. Hastings, Ruth discovers a sprayer filled with brandy on Hastings' dresser. Later, while interviewing Warren, who lives in the Heywood Apartments, she sees a similar sprayer on the man's buffet. Clever work by Ruth results in the discovery that Warren is conducting a gambling joint in his apartment.

A raid follows. Warren is arrested. The girl detective finds a coat in the man's apartment which the cloth and the button she had taken from Hastings' hand match. Breaking down, Warren confesses that the man had died in his apartment of an attack of heart disease. This was caused by a drug habit formed shortly after Hastings became a habitue of the gambling joint.

Fearing less his wife discover his weakness, Hastings sprayed himself with whiskey to make it appear that he was drunk. The man died while begging Warren for some of the drug. In falling, he seized the gambler's coat button, tearing it loose. Fearing lest he be accused of murder, Warren carried the body to the roof.

Satisfied with the result of her work, the girl detective returns to Police Headquarters.

THE HICKSVILLE TRAGEDY TROUPE (Feb. 5).—Vincent, the beautiful ribbon salesman, all in a flutter because of the approaching performance of the Hicksville Tragedy Troupe, pays no attention to his customers. Fired, Vincent wafts a kiss to his former employer and gently speeds on his way.

Vincent is cast for the hero's role. Ethel, the girl he loves, is to be the heroine. Vincent's rival, Spike Hennessy, is given the cold shoulder by Ethel when he states his opinion of amateur theatricals. Angered by the knowledge that Vincent is Ethel's favorite, Spike vows vengeance.

On the night of the performance, Spike and his cohorts get seats right in the front row. The play is a fearful and wonderful thing. Never was hero so handsome and heroic! heroine so fair and so persecuted; villain so wicked and cruel. The only hitch occurs when the property man, his anger aroused by the villain's cruelty, heaves a brick at him and knocks him flat.

At last the heroine's tribulations come to an end. Vincent steps before the curtain and grandly bows in response to the applause. The premature dropping of the curtain knocks him flat. This is the chance which Spike and his friends have been waiting for. With one accord they rise and bombard the helpless hero with elderly eggs, mature tomatoes and stale custard pies.

When Vincent is finally rescued, he looks so ludicrous that Ethel's love gives way to ridicule. The fickle girl, giving poor, plastered Vincent the icy stare, walks home with Spike.

THE ESCAPE ON THE FAST FREIGHT (13th Hazards of Helen Railroad Series—Feb. 6).—Bill and Pete, yeggmen, learn that a large sum of money has been left in the care of Helen, who is on night duty at Ferndale. The men are successful in holding Helen up. After locking the telegrapher in a closet, they escape with the money.

Helen's predicament is discovered and she is freed. The report of the robbery causes the railroad officials to decide to supplant all female employees doing night duty with men. Helen thus finds herself out of a position.

Shortly afterward, Helen, standing on a bridge which crosses over the freight yards, sees Bill and Pete climb aboard an outgoing freight. Filled with a desire to capture the men, the girl takes a frightful chance and drops to the roof of one of the cars as the train passes beneath the bridge.

Helen hastens to the caboose, where she tells her story to the train crew. The men run forward and find Bill and his pal on one of the flat cars. A furious struggle ensues. Bill frees himself. Climbing to the roof of the next car, he rushes toward the caboose.

Helen, however, sees him coming. She tackles the yeggman and knocks him flat. The two fight on the roof, finally rolling off the edge just as the freight crosses a river. The train is brought to a halt. Helen, struggling in the water with Bill, receives assistance when several brakemen dive off the bridge.

Bill and Pete are placed under arrest. Helen's heroism is reported to headquarters and the brave girl is reinstated.

IN THE HANDS OF THE JURY (Two Parts—Feb. 8).—While Dr. Butler is discussing with his young partner, Dr. Haines, a deadly poison which the latter has discovered, a caller is announced. Haines steps into an adjoining room just before the visitor enters.

The latter proves to be Murdock. In financial straits, the man seeks a loan. Refusing Murdock's request, Butler turns his attention to a vial of Haines' poison. Angered, Murdock attacks Butler. The vial is shattered and its contents instantly kill the doctor.

Frightened, Murdock seizes a hat from the hall rack and flees. It happens that the man has taken Haines' hat, which resembles his own, by mistake. Lennice, Butler's daughter, returns from the theater just as Murdock rushes down the street. A few minutes later she discovers her father's body.

Circumstances point to Haines' guilt. The young doctor is tried for the murder. Fate grimly chooses that Murdock should be drafted on the jury trying the case. Lennice finds Murdock's face strangely familiar, but cannot recall where she has seen him.

Although his fellow-jurors seek to acquit Haines, Murdock holds out for a verdict of guilty. At the same time, Lennice discovers that the hat on the rack in her home does not belong to Haines. It takes her mind back to the night of her father's death. She then remembers where she had seen Murdock.

Rushing back to the Court House, she finds the jury filing into the Court Room. The girl denounces Murdock. Taken aback, the man breaks down and confesses. While the guilty wretch is taken away, Haines seizes Lennice in his arms.

MR. PEPPERIE TEMPER (Feb. 9).—Pepperie Temper's temper, set on a hair-trigger, is continually getting him into hot water. While out hunting with his friend Andrews, Temper becomes stuck in the mud. Unable to pull his boots loose, Temper climbs out of them, and then, in anger, shoots the footgear to pieces. As the result, he walks home in stockinged feet. The following morning, in his desire to read the account of the trip in the local paper, Temper goes after the sheet the moment the newsboy leaves it outside the door. This is at 6 o'clock. The man carelessly allows the door to close behind him. Temper thus finds himself outside, clad only in pajamas and bathrobe.

In vain he tries to awaken his slumbering wife. The language he uses is so strong that his neighbor, an old maid, turns the hose on him. It is a humble-spirited individual who slinks into the house when his wife finally opens the door.

THE MEXICAN'S CHICKENS (On the Same Reel—Feb. 9).—When he learns that the revolutionists have stolen his chickens, Senor Sourface joins the Federal Army in revenge. He is captured by General Caramo, the leader of the rebels, and sentenced to be shot at sunrise.

Does this terrify the brave Sourface? Not at all! The news, however, causes his wife and daughter to come on the run. They are informed that Sourface is to be shot out of a cannon. At the hour of execution, Senora Sourface and her daughter mystify the beholders by hastening to a spot a mile away, armed with a blanket. Sourface is shot out of the cannon. It happens that the man, an ex-circus performer, used to do this act twice a day, and he lands in the blanket held by his wife and daughter, unharmed.

THE DISAPPEARANCE OF HARRY WARRINGTON (A Two-Part Episode of The Girl Detective Series—Feb. 10).—Fresh from her triumph in solving the Apartment House Mystery, Ruth, the girl detective, finds herself confronted by the mystery surrounding the disappearance of Harry Warrington, a young society man. Warrington, after being found unconscious on the veranda of his mansion, was taken to his room and put to bed. That same night the young man was kidnapped.

A piece of paper bearing an address affords Ruth the clue she seeks. Investigation reveals the fact that it is the rendezvous of a band of anarchists. Disguised in mean attire, the girl detective enters the place and makes a friend of Olga. This girl is the sweetheart of Michaels, one of the leaders of the band.

Michaels arouses Olga's jealousy when he flirts with Marie, a woman of the underworld. Playing upon this jealousy, Ruth succeeds in inducing Olga to aid her in entering the room where the band meets. There she learns that Warrington had been kidnapped because he failed to perform a mission entrusted to him.

The young man had become interested in the band, under the belief that it was organized to aid the people of the slums. The girl detective learns that Warrington is imprisoned in an adjoining room. Aided by Olga, she gains admission into this room, after first notifying the police.

The anarchists discover her presence. They make her a prisoner just as the police arrive. A wild battle ensues and Michaels is slain. While Olga, grief-stricken, weeps over her lover's body, the girl detective is congratulated upon her solution of the mystery.

HAM AND THE SAUSAGE FACTORY (Feb. 12).—Hungry and broke, Ham and Bud are ready to commit murder for a meal. Schweitzmeier, proprietor of a sausage factory, employs the two. The man lets Ham and Bud into his dark secret. It is directly due to his industry that dogs are becoming extinct in the town.

Bud is ordered to collect dogs and drop them into a chute which leads to the cellar of Schweitzmeier's plant. There Ham stands ready to grab the doomed canines and drop them into the hopper of the sausage machine. A turn of the handle converts the dogs into sausages.

Bud's quest for dogs leads him into many adventures. As fast as he sends the animals down the chute, Ham manfully attends to his part of the job. The intelligence of some of the dogs is amazing. Even when converted into sausages, they follow Ham about and do all sorts of stunts for him.

A bulldog makes a meal of a stick of dynamite. Its master discovers what has happened. He tries to catch the animal, but it gets away. A mob is soon chasing the dog. Bud sees it coming. Grabbing it, he hurries to the factory and turns the dog over to Ham. The animal tries to eat a piece out of the sausage maker's leg. In self-defense, Ham swings at it with a sledge hammer.

The next instant, a terrific explosion wrecks the sausage factory. Ham and Bud are hurled into the air. Ten minutes later the two land on the arms of a sign post, four miles away, draped in the links of their victims.

THE RED SIGNAL (14th of the Hazards of Helen Railroad Series—Feb. 13).—Shortly after Helen had been relieved by Brent, the night operator, the man is knocked unconscious by a piece of lumber projecting from a passing freight. Brent is rushed to a cottage near by. Helen is informed of the accident and ordered to remain on duty until relieved.

A furious storm arises during the night. Brent recovers consciousness, but his injury has rendered him temporarily insane. The man rushes from the house and makes for the tower. At the same time a track walker discovers a washout and wires a warning to Helen.

Brent enters just as Helen receives the message. Knowing that the Limited is due to arrive in fifteen minutes, the girl sets the danger signal. Brent, however, thrusts the girl into a closet and causes the semaphore arm to swing back to "Clear."

A fire axe in the closet enables Helen to pry up the flooring. The brave girl thus makes her escape through the floor to the bottom of the tower. Unscrewing the turnbuckle connecting the lever in the switch tower to the semaphore rod, Helen exerts all her strength and sets the semaphore at "Stop."

The girl seizes a lantern and rushes to the scene of the washout. Despite the danger, Helen crosses the swollen stream and reaches the opposite side after a hard battle. The 12.05 Fast Freight approaches. The engineer sees Helen's signal and stops his train on the very brink of the ruined trestle.

Meanwhile, the Limited is halted by the semaphore signal. The train crew investigate and find the insane man in the tower. Helen returns a few minutes later and tells her story. Again she becomes the heroine of the road.

SELIG.

THE VISION OF THE SHEPHERD (Special—Two Parts—Feb. 1).—Old Jacob, the shepherd, while securing his flock of sheep for the night, stands entranced because of a wonderful vision of the Supreme Being. In the vision the Lord asks him if the sheep are all safe in the fold. Jacob replies that they are; but discovers later that a little lamb is missing. Lanter in hand, he goes forth to search for the missing lamb. He discovers the frightened little creature and restores it to the distressed mother ewe.

Old Jacob has accepted the vision as a literal inquiry about the welfare of his flock. The simple old fellow does not realize that his most precious lamb, Nell, his only daughter, stands on the threshold of a great indiscretion and that her safety requires his intervention.

She has become infatuated with a young scoundrel, Arthur Harding, who has persuaded her to elope with him under the promise of marriage. Nell flees from the safety and comfort of her modest home and betrays the affections of two honest old hearts that beat only for her.

THE SPOILERS

SELIG'S

(8 reel) Masterpiece

By REX BEACH

EIGHT reel reasons why you should book this picture:

Some picture.

Positively repeats.

Outplays competition.

ntensely interesting.

Liked everywhere.

Exhibitors enthusiastic.

Results satisfactory.

Service satisfactory.

NOW BOOKING

Ohio, Indiana, Wisconsin, Michigan and Illinois (except Cook County).

Wire or write

F. O. NIELSEN

720 Schiller Building

Chicago, Ill.

Address all communications to Dept. B.

Again old Jacob has a vision of the Lord. This time he replies to the question, "Are all of the sheep safe in the fold?" with a sad shake of the head and the word "No." Again the vision directs him to go forth and seek the missing. Jacob decides to go to the city at once to try and and find his daughter, Nell.

In the meantime, Harding, who is as rich as he is unscrupulous, has taken Nell in his automobile to the city, where he has installed her in his handsome apartments. He realizes that it will be impossible for him to persuade the simple country girl to accede to his demands without making her his dupe as well as his prey. He invokes the aid of an unprincipled old scoundrel named Giles, an actor, who agrees to act the part of a minister and perform a mock marriage between Nell and Harding.

The hour for the ceremony is set and Giles performs a bogus ceremony. He falls in a faint, however, before the final words have been spoken by his false lips. Harding rushes into an adjoining room for stimulants, which he does not find ready to his hand, and while searching for same, Giles revives. The heart of the old scoundrel is touched by the innocence and sweetness of Nell and he tells her the truth.

In horror, she seeks flight and Harding returns too late to prevent her escape. Giles, who is now determined to try and set matters right, sturdily opposes Harding's pursuit of Nell, who reaches the street safely and flees into a small public park.

Nell passes a miserable night on a bench in the park. On the following morning while battling with her perplexities as to what course she shall pursue, Harding discovers her. He attempts to reassure her and persuade her to go with him, but her horror at the disclosure of his falsity and treachery causes her to cry out for help in her extremity and anguish. Maggie Hunt, a Salvation Army lassie, is passing through the park at this time and her attention is attracted by the frenzied appeals for help on the part of Nell. Harding takes flight while Nell accompanies her rescuer to the Salvation Army barracks.

Maggie gives her food and induces Nell to attend the morning services in the Salvation Army Chapel.

Old Jacob has turned his footsteps toward the Salvation Army Chapel and there he is overjoyed to find his daughter. He returns home with her.

FORKED TRAILS (Feb. 2).—Moya Lantry, a belle of Cattleland, has captured the hearts of two bold cowboys, Bob Davis and Frank Scott. They arrange a contest to decide which shall marry her and Scott wins out by a trick. Old man Lantry is suspicious of Scott, and tells him to earn a thousand dollars before he can marry Moya.

Scott rides away and encounters Manuel Baca, a disreputable Mexican, who plans to hold up the stage. Scott joins him in the venture, which proves successful, but, while escaping with his share of the plunder, Moya and Davis discover him.

With Scott eliminated from the field through his own crooked acts, Bob and Moya obtain her fathers' consent to their marriage.

JUST LIKE A WOMAN (Feb. 3).—Louis Dutton believes in the future of Centerville and buys "The Record," the local newspaper. He finds Phyllis Darel employed as assistant editor, but, because of his dislike for the plan of employing women, he discharges her.

Howard Folsam, proprietor of the local department store, is secretly infatuated with Phyllis, and when he hears of her discharge he calls on the new editor and threatens to withdraw his advertising support unless Dutton reinstates Phyllis. This makes Dutton furious, and he refuses Folsam's demands and orders him from the shop.

Folsam, actuated by a desire for revenge, and also wishing to entangle Phyllis in his coils, backs her in starting a new publication in opposition to Dutton.

The loss of Folsam's advertising endangers the prosperity of "The Record." Dutton is desperate. His establishment catches fire and he faces bankruptcy, but Phyllis comes to the rescue with charming forgiveness and they consolidate the two newspapers. Also their domestic affairs.

CATS (Feb. 5).—Jinks is a morose man. He loves his wife, but Mrs. Jinks loves cats, and Jinks finds himself in despair. Whenever he comes home he finds cats on the piano, on the tables and chairs, while the floor is covered with them. He cannot walk through the house without stumbling over cats.

The limit of his forbearance is reached when he discovers a litter of tiny kittens reposing in his silk hat. He plans some desperate action to release himself from the enforced companionship of felines.

Jinks gets a big trunk and a wheelbarrow. In the absence of Mrs. Jinks he jams the cats into the trunk, places it on the wheelbarrow and starts for the river.

The Spoilers

WM FARNUM AS "GLEINSTER" IN "THE SPOILERS"

Rex Beach's Wonderful Story

Produced by

Selig Polyscope Co.

Tillie's Punctured Romance

Six Reel Keystone

Featuring

Chas. Chaplin
Mabel Normand
and Marie Dressler

For N. Y. State and City

New York Alco Film Service, Inc.

1465 Broadway, New York

The noise of the cats creates suspicion. However, Jinks escapes serious consequences by compromising with his wife upon a maximum of five feline pets.

THE LEOPARD'S LAIR (Feb. 6).—Bob Wheeler, a sturdy young South African hunter, makes his living by killing wild beasts. His modest home in the veldt is made comfortable and happy by the presence of Ruth, his pretty, young wife, little Annie, their eight-year-old daughter, and the baby.

The neighborhood is infested by leopards. These brutes become familiar almost to the point of fearlessness, and one day little Annie is frightened by the invasion of the clearing of a pair of leopards. Little Annie is watching the baby, but in her terror at the approach of the leopards she hides in a closet.

The leopards vault through the open window; one seizes the baby in its mouth and, followed by its mate, springs through the open window and leaps into the forest. An alarm is raised by Annie, and neighbors are called to help in the search in the hope that the baby may be found uninjured. After a battle with the ferocious brutes, the baby is found, fortunately uninjured, and the agonized parents are reunited to their beloved baby.

THE PASSERBY (Special—Two Parts—Feb. 8).—Fay Thompson, the village belle, is besieged by a host of arduous lovers, who seek her hand. She is the pride of her old parents, who conduct a country hotel. She is devotedly attached to her nineteen-year-old brother, Jamie.

Wallace Richards, a young villager, has been generally accepted as her chosen sweetheart. They hold trysts and have selected a hollow post as the receptacle for their love messages.

Fay's father dies, leaving the family in poor circumstances, with Jamie, the boy, the only means of support. The war between the North and South has just broken out and Jamie is drafted by Colonel Morrison, who refuses to release him, notwithstanding the pleas of his invalid mother and his sister, Fay. Frank Coakley, a manly young fellow of good appearance and genuine integrity, arrives in the village while the draft for the army is being made.

Jamie's family is too poor to buy him a substitute and they face the terrors of hunger and poverty. Fay appeals to Wallace, her sweetheart, to act as a substitute for Jamie, but Wallace evades the request, and she then recognizes him for his actual worth. Then Fay calls a convention of her admirers. She takes from her neck a tiny cross of gold, pins it to the trunk of a tree under which the meeting has taken place and announces that the man who will act as substitute for her brethren, Jamie, shall be entitled to wear the cross and claim her for his bride upon his return.

The admirers protest their love and admiration, but there is no struggle to reach the cross on the tree. All depart without having disturbed the bauble, and Fay is thereby enabled to realize the actual value of their protestations of love.

Frank Coakley hears the discussions and is intensely moved both by the beauty of Fay and the alarming terrors of her prospective dependence on the world. Coakley is a patriot, while within his heart there abides a desire for romance. Therefore, after the cowardly swains have departed, Coakley removes the cross from the tree and, making his way to the headquarters of Colonel Morrison, announces that he has come to act as substitute for Jamie.

At midnight the brave soldier boys march away. Jamie is left behind to support his invalid mother and sister. Fay finds that the cross is gone and realizes that one of her admirers must have taken her at her word, but, inasmuch as no message has been sent her, she does not know who has picked up her challenge.

The local soldier boys acquit themselves with credit on the battlefield. Coakley distinguishes himself and is promoted rank by rank until he becomes a captain. One day he is wounded in a desperate charge and is removed to the field hosiptal, where, according to the rules, he is divested of all valuables, among which is the gold cross, the insignia of his chivalrous act.

Colonel Morrison happens to become possessed of the modest valuables belonging to Coakley, among them being the gold cross. The official records are destroyed by accident, so that it is impossible for him to ascertain the owner. Coakley returns home from the war after a long siege at the hospital and falls in love with Fay.

In secret, she has worshipped during the period since the departure of the troops the unknown hero who played the part of substitute for her brother, Jamie. The hollow post which had been the receptacle of her love messages is now almost filled with love notes addressed to the unknown hero. Coakley presses his suit and modestly affirms that he is the one who took her brother's place.

She is incredulous and demands that he show her the cross. Then he explains the manner in which it was lost. Fay becomes indignant and thinks he has been trying to deceive her.

(Continued on page 878.)

UNITED FILM SERVICE

NOW OFFERS

Filmdom's Foremost Funmakers

In Daily Releases

15 Companies Are Now Producing Exclusively for the UNITED

Single and Double Reel Plays Pulsing with the Poignant Realities of Life Inject Contrast into the Programs Compiled by the United Service for a

Daily Average Audience of 4,000,000

Special
An Unusual 3-Reel Drama

The Convict's Conspiracy
A Remarkable Tangle of Circumstances Involving Two Men and a Woman

The Gaumont and Ramo Companies Have Recognized the Superior Distributing Facilities of the United Film Service; They Are the Latest of the Great Producing Companies to Become Affiliated with Our Producing Arm, the United Motion Picture Producers, Inc.

UNITED FILM SERVICE

Branch Offices Everywhere

130 West 46th Street, New York

UNITED FILM SERVICE

THIS SUPERIOR PROGRAM BEING RELEASED

THROUGH THE

UNITED FILM SERVICE

Address all inquiries for service to the "United Film Service" at any of its 43 Exchanges throughout the United States and Canada, or the Home Office, 130 West 46th Street, New York City.

Mr. Exhibitor— You cannot afford to let the opportunity slip to secure this superlative program for your locality. DON'T HESITATE.

MEMBERS OF

UNITED MOTION PICTURE PRODUCERS INC.

ALBUQUERQUE FILM COMPANY
Studio and Office, Los Angeles, Cal.

GAUMONT COMPANY
Studio at Flushing, Long Island, N. Y. City

ST. LOUIS MOTION PICTURE COMPANY
Studio at Santa Paula, Cal.
Office at St. Louis, Mo.

MITTENTHAL FILM COMPANY
Studio at Yonkers, N. Y.
Office at 110 West 40th St., N. Y. City

SMALLWOOD FILM CORPORATION
Studio and Office, New York City

FEATURES IDEAL, Inc.
Studios at Tucson, Ariz., and Los Angeles, Cal.
Office at 130 West 46th St., N. Y. City

RAMO FILMS, Inc.
Studio at Flushing, L. I.
Office at 47th St. and 7th Ave., N. Y. City

CRYSTAL FILM COMPANY
Studio and Office at 430 Claremont Parkway, N. Y. C.

PIKES PEAK FILM COMPANY
Studio and Office at Colorado Springs, Colo.

UNITED FILM SERVICE

UNITED FILM SERVICE

The United Motion Picture Producers
Incorporated

Releasing the Following Program Through

THE UNITED FILM SERVICE

EMPRESS Produced in America by GAUMONT COMPANY. Comedies and Two Reel Society Dramas Featuring Marian Swayne.

L U N A Comedies featuring the versatile DOT FARLEY. Made by the ALBUQUERQUE FILM COMPANY, Direction Gilbert P. Hamilton.

PREMIER Dramas Produced by THE ST. LOUIS MOTION PICTURE CO., featuring Edythe Sterling, Fred'k Church and Jos. Franz.

STARLIGHT Farce Comedies of Superior Quality. Made by THE MITTENTHAL FILM COMPANY. In Preparation. TWO REEL DRAMAS.

GRANDIN Featuring the Charming ETHEL GRANDIN in two reel dramas that you cannot afford to miss. Made by THE SMALLWOOD FILM CORPORATION.

I D E A L Two Reel Dramas now being Produced in AMERICA. Releasing regularly a Two Reel Drama. Made by FEATURES IDEAL, INC.

REGENT Two Reel Society Dramas Produced by RAMO FILMS, INC. "NUFF SED."

SUPERBA Comedies produced by the CRYSTAL FILM COMPANY. Box office winners of established reputation.

L A R I A T Western Dramas featuring GEORGE GEBHART, JR. Produced by THE PIKES PEAK FILM COMPANY.

UNITED FILM SERVICE

UNITED FILM SERVICE

UNITED FILM SERVICE

(Continued from page 874.)

although in her heart she has learned to love this modest and unassuming young man. She thinks, however, that she is bound by her promise and that the man who brings to her the cross is the man entitled to her hand.

Colonel Morrison comes back from the war, bringing the cross with him. Fay learns that he has the cross in his possession and offers him her hand in marriage, according to the compact which she voluntarily made. Colonel Morrison then explains his possession of the cross and, upon meeting Coakley face to face accidentally, at once identifies him as the battlefield hero from whose neck the cross had been removed when he was taken to the hospital.

Fay is delighted to find that her compact is wholly in accord with the desires of her heart and their dream of love is realized.

ROPING A BRIDE (Feb. 9).—Tom and Dick are staunch friends. They are both in love with Vera, the beautiful daughter of the local doctor, who likes both boys but cannot decide which one she likes best.

They discuss the situation in an amicable way and decide finally to appoint a friendly rancher as arbiter.

It is arranged that the two cowboys shall engage in a contest of skill, the winner to claim Vera's hand as a prize. She is to stand at the terminal point of the race to be contested by Tom and Dick. They shall ride at full speed up to her and cast their lariats, the one making the first successful cast to win her as the prize.

The contest takes place and everybody in the neighborhood is present to witness it. Both boys ride well, but Dick makes the first cast and wins Vera as his bride.

THE ODD SLIPPER (Feb. 10).—Dr. Randall is mystified by the dropping of a dainty slipper on his shoulder as he is leaving the hotel. He examines the slipper carefully and has a vision of a lovely girl, whom his mind pictures must be the owner.

Grace Villers, an orphan, occupies an apartment in the hotel. She has just had a strenuous struggle with her uncle and aunt, who have bound and gagged her. During the struggle she has succeeded in kicking one of her slippers through the open window.

Dr. Randall is called to administer treatment to Grace, who is claimed by her uncle and aunt to be crazy. The doctor examines Grace, and she succeeds in conveying to him the information that her uncle and aunt are trying to make away with her to obtain her fortune. She whispers that a message contained in the slipper will explain the mystery.

The doctor consults with the police and discovers the message concealed within the lining of the slipper. Grace is rescued and her fortune is restored, while Dr. Randall is rewarded with her heart and hand.

THE PERFUMED WRESTLER (Feb. 12).—Fritz, a slow-witted, clumsy, German boy, works as clerk in a grocery store. He is in love with pretty Mamie, who, however, prefers the attentions of Patsey, the champion wrestler and all-around athlete.

Patsey chases Fritz away from courting Mamie, which causes Fritz to plot revenge. Fritz eats some limburger cheese and discovers the terrible blows he can inflict as a result.

He plots to defeat Patsey, the champion wrestler, and issues a challenge. Fritz then proceeds to train for the match by eating enormous gobs of limburger, punctuated with strings of garlic, while he takes a daily bath in noisome and pungent chemicals. Fritz wins the contest almost without a struggle, but his sweetheart proves false, and he escapes from vengeance of the community with difficulty.

THE BUGLE CALL (Feb. 13).—Ehrman Wolfshon, a serious-minded young farmer, who lives in the neighborhood of a South African military post, falls in love with Nancy O'Farrell, daughter of the Colonel in command. His signal for calling upon Nancy has been the bugle call, announcing drill at the neighboring post.

Some of his soldier friends decide to play a practical joke. Taking some articles of Nancy's clothing, they prepare them in such a manner that when Ehrman discovers the same he thinks she has been slaughtered by some wild animal, many of which are to be found in the neighborhood.

The mind of the young lover is overwhelmed by the awfulness of his discovery. Nancy restores his sanity by arranging that he shall hear again the well-known bugle call.

HEARST-SELIG NEWS PICTORIAL NO. 7 (Jan. 25).—Weather Bureau at Washington is preparing book of rules to insure uniformity of forecasting by the two hundred observation stations throughout the country. Officials at Washington show the instruments used and the methods followed.

Mrs. Harry Johansen of St. Louis, society leader, wins championship for woman auto racing drivers of America. She poses in interesting pictures.

Recruits for the British army in England are given realistic schooling in modern war. Under the eyes of officers they work with shovels digging trenches after the pattern of those adopted by the allies in Belgium and France. Other scenes show them learning to lift field cannon over obstruction.

Canadian contingent of recruits to the British army get order to strike camp on Salisbury Plain ready to move to the front. Pictures showing them tramping through mud, driving cars over roads that are veritable quagmires and wading through water give vividly a new insight into some of the unpleasant sides of soldiering.

Rep. A. P. Gardner of Massachusetts has instituted an agitation for a bigger navy. Sec. Daniels has come forward with a program of not less than two new battleships per year. Both men pose for the Hearst-Selig News Pictorial in a novel series of pictures that give the ideas of both men of the needs of the service, and the present standing of the navy. Some unusual pictures of submarines and the dreadnaughts at battle practice are included.

HEARST-SELIG NEWS PICTORIAL NO. 8 (Jan. 28).—Gov. Cole S. Blease of South Carolina, who emptied prisons and disbanded militia, poses for Hearst-Selig News Pictorial on day he resigns.

U. S. Troops for first time since Spanish-American War parade through streets of New York. Are reviewed by Mayor and General Wood.

Federal league leaders strive to have organized baseball declared monopoly in restraint of trade. Leaders of both sides pose especially for Hearst-Selig News Pictorial.

Navy's biggest submarine takes ways in Fore River yards, Quincy, Mass.

Marty O'Toole, $22,500 hurler of the Pittsburgh National, bats .300 in the domestic league. He chops wood and takes in the washing to help Mrs. O'Toole, while Baby James directs his industries.

U. S. Army cooks are given special course in bread baking at field kitchen at barracks at Washington, D. C.

Grace Darling, Hearst-Selig reporter, goes down to New York Bay on revenue cutter, boards incoming liner Lapland with other ship news reporters, interviews Edna May and pays a visit to the steerage.

Famous palace at Versailles, France, is transformed into Red Cross hospital by British troops and is thronged with wounded from the battle front.

PATHE.

PATHE'S DAILY NEWS NO. 6, 1915 (Jan. 20).—War's Heroes.—Desperate chances taken by despatch riders.

Woman Raid Victim.—Wounded in German sea attack.

Back to Front.—French wounded ready to fight again.

Peace Centennial.—With England marks Jackson Day.

'Quake in Italy.—Scenes in neighborhood of catastrophe.

Recruits U. S. Horses.—Thousands bought for French cavalry.

San Diego Races.—Battle of auto speed kings.

PATHE'S DAILY NEWS NO. 7, 1915 (Jan 25).—Review by Czar of His Life Guards.

Neutral Officers Observe War in France.

Zeppelins Raid English Royal Palace.

New U. S. Destroyer Cushing Launched.

Hospital Ship Takes Wounded Home.

Our Own Soldiers Reviewed on Fifth Avenue, New York.

Strikers Shot in New Jersey Wage War.

BIOGRAPH.

FATE'S PROTECTING ARM (Feb. 1).—Breaking into a house, Dick Foster and his companion, Ann Markham, overpower the old couple, bind and gag them. The wife has given the alarm, however, aud the police arrive. The robbers pass themselves off as the householders, regret that it was a false alarm, and get away with the spoils. Through the newspapers Ann learns that the old man is a preacher. Revolting from her past life, she leaves Dick and gets a post as governess to the daughter of Robert Hall, a widower. Dick meets her in the park and she gives him a fictitious address. He follows her home and sends her a note demanding admittance to the house. She has already made up her mind to leave, and is stealing away when from the library comes a familiar sound. Dick has broken into the house. Ann switches on the light, there is a struggle, and she knocks him down with a heavy vase. Recovering, he lunges at her; his revolver, which she has seized, goes off; and Dick falls. Mr. Hall comes in and Ann learns that she will never have to go away.

THREE HATS—SPECIAL (2 Parts—Feb. 2).

The First Hat.

Sam Selwyn's, of course—you couldn't mistake that ultramodish block. Sam lived in great style—butler, and all that sort of thing. Mrs. Sam ruled the roost; he got his first chance to be gay when she took daughter to visit mother. Fred Bellamy had just come to spend a few days with Sam. "We'll make a night of it," Sam declared. "Nothing of the sort," said Fred; "I'm going to see Lottie Blithers."

The Second Hat.

Bosco Blithers, like his hat, was a trifle seedy. Lottie couldn't keep papa from the cabarets. But she wasn't lonely that night when Fred called. Bosco came tiptoeing home and was caught. He had to promise to let her marry Fred, whom he had never seen. One thing troubled him—in a collision with several other exhilirated gentlemen he had lost his hat. It would never do for Lottie to find him out.

The Third Hat.

Thompson was the name on the band—and there are a lot of Thompsons in the directory. Sam Selwyn got this hat by mistake and, in distress, he sent Fred out to look up all the Thompsons. He had given a cute little lady Fred's name as a safeguard, and when Lottie sent Fred a note Sam was in panic lest Mrs. Sam find him out. Then Lottie herself came, and Sam locked her in his room. She kicked the door down.

THE DENOUEMENT (On Same Reel as Foregoing—Feb. 2).—Captain Katskill loved Sam's daughter. Mrs. Sam encouraged him. He went in to see papa—and saw Bosco Blithers, who had called in search of his hat. "Take her, my boy," said Bosco, thinking this was Fred asking for Lottie. Later, Fred asked him the same question. Consternation—explanations—joy.

THE BORROWED NECKLACE (Feb. 4).—Mrs. Morrison's diamond necklace, a birthday gift from her husband, is one of the beautiful things Florence Barlow cannot afford. She can afford an imitation, however, and she has one made—an exact copy of the necklace, which she borrowed to wear to a ball. By mistake she returns the imitation and Morrison locks it away in his safe. The butler steals it when the safe is accidentally left open for a few minutes. When the jewel is missed, Morrison recalls having seen Florence near the safe while it was open. At a supper in celebration of her engagement she is wearing the original necklace when detectives arrest her, and the jeweler identifies the genuine stones. On the day of her trial Mrs. Morrison accidentally discovers the stolen necklace where the butler had hidden it; the man observes her and cupidity makes him incautious; Morrison, returning, finds his wife struggling with the thief—and at the eleventh hour Florence is cleared of the charge, the butler being held for robbery.

WINNING THE OLD MAN OVER (Feb. 6).—Doctor Slap sent his negro assistant to rob the graveyard. The frightened darky depended upon some friends of Tom, whom the doctor had forbidden to see his daughter. Tom played the corpse, and on threat of arrest as a body-snatcher the old man consented to their marriage.

THE CLUB PEST (Feb. 6).—His club mates bet him fifty dollars that he wouldn't spend the night in a haunted house, and proceeded to make ghostly things happen. Discovering

Watch This Space Every Week

EXHIBITORS NOTICE

Out of the last lot of machines advertised in the trade papers we have left—

One Simplex Machine	$215.00	One used No. 5 machine	$70.00
One No. 6 A complete with 14" upper magazine	178.00	One Used No. 6A complete, good as new	145.00
One 220 V. Ft. Wayne Compensarc (used)	40.00	One No. 6A Equipment, with 14" upper magazine, used one week only, good as new	62.00
One No. 6 used machine	115.00	One Simplex Machine, used two nights only, almost new	190.00
One New No. 5 Machine, complete	115.00

Will refund your money if goods are not satisfactory. Let us quote you on carbons and supplies.

THE STERN MFG. CO. 109 N. 10th St., Philadelphia, Pa.

the trick, Mr. Bore pretended to commit suicide, turned the tables on his friends, and won the bet.

IT DOESN'T PAY (Feb. 5). Tom West was a ne'er-do-well. While his mother lay ill he took his sister's last dollar under pretence of looking for work, and gambled it away. Returning home, he met the boarder—an old man who was night watchman at the factory. The watchman had been taken ill soon after going on duty, and the bookkeeper, working late to make up the payroll, had sent him home. While the old man slept Tom stole his key, entered the factory, and was surprised by the bookkeeper. After a struggle he got away with the money and buried it in the cellar. The key he left in the lock, and a piece of his coat, torn off in the struggle, condemned him, and he went to prison. His mother dead, his sister moved away and the old house was shut up. All through his prison term Tom dreamed of the hidden treasure. Released at last, he broke into the deserted house by way of the cellar. Not until then did he realize the futility of crime—for the rats had gnawed the treasure away.

MINA.

A TERRIBLE BREAK (Feb. 18).—Harry is an omnivorous reader. The perusal of a society story causes him to yearn for society life. At midnight he picks up an invitation to a reception given by Mrs. von Picklefield, the society leader. Merrily Harry goes on his way, but soon collides with an unsteady gentleman resplendent in a full dress, and trying to get home early. Harry takes a sudden liking to the full dress and makes the needed change. Properly togged up, he proudly marches to Mrs. von Picklefield's mansion, in front of which he meets his sweetheart, Polly. His behavior at the reception, his refusal to take off his silk hat, his mad dash for the dining table, his odd dancing and numerous other strange antics of his create a general uproar, in the midst of which Polly suddenly breaks in two; her lower half rushes out of the house, while the upper part remains in Harry's arms.

A wild chase follows with Harry in the lead. Downstairs, upstairs, across country, over railroad ties, garden fences and into the lake. The fugitive half of Polly is finally captured and she becomes a unit once more. Amid the general rejoicing the owner of the full dress appears and demands Harry's arrest. Harry soon finds himself splashing in the water—then he wakes up.

GREAT AMERICANS (On same reels as foregoing) (Feb. 18).—A short picture showing cartoon sketches of some of our Presidents in various moods. These are done along new lines and are a very entertaining finish to this split reel.

LUBIN.

PATSY BOLIVAR SERIES NO. 6.—Patsy on a Trolley Car (Feb. 1).—In No. 5 of the series we left Patsy leaving the village of Roseville on the trucks of a freight train. At the village of Springtown he is discovered and thrown down an embankment. Picking himself up, he wanders up the road and encounters a lunch wagon, whereupon he orders a pie for breakfast. But, not having any money, the lunchman kicks him out and Patsy runs away, pursued by the lunchman. As they disappear the wagon is driven off by a tramp and Patsy, eluding his pursuer, joins the tramp. Both are arrested by the village constables, and given ten days in jail.

In the meantime, Jack Prince and his wife come to Springtown, where Jack has secured a position as assistant superintendent of a trolley company. On being discharged from the lockup, Patsy applies for a position in a drug store, but, being recognized by the magistrate who sentenced him, he is driven away, and then goes to the office of the street car company, where he is placed on trial as a conductor and has several unfortunate experiences. Tilly, having become tired of the attentions of Sykesy, and still favoring Patsy, also comes to Springtown on a visit to Mary, where she is found by Patsy, and his attention to her almost loses him his position. Jack writes to Patsy's parents disclosing his whereabouts, which causes them to set out for Springtown. From them the faithful Jane learns where he is and also takes the train, pursued by Sykesy. Jane finds her way to Mary's house, but immediately on her arrival Mary receives a telegram calling her to a seminary, where she has applied for a position, and sets out for the station. At the same time, Patsy, now entrusted with the duties of conductor, encounters his family as passengers and, spurred on by the revengeful Sykesy, a rough crowd throw him from his car. He is picked up by Mary and the two go to Jack's office to find that he has gone with the Bolivars to investigate the throwing off incident. She leaves a note for him, sending it back by the office boy, and proceeds to the train with Patsy. Here she tries to induce him to return to the village, but, finding that his father is after him, he insists upon running away and departs on the train, with Mary, just as her husband and the others arrive, to be told by Sykesy that she has eloped with Patsy Bolivar.

GITHCIL FILM RENOVATOR

Two Cents is the average cost to clean a reel

The only renovator that cleans, softens and renovates films. Positively non-combustible and non-inflammable, as shown in analysis made by Bureau of Fire Prevention of City of New York. Endorsed by leading film exchanges.

Can be applied with soft cloth.
No machinery necessary.

Githcil Chemical Company
220 West 42d Street
(Candler Building)

'Phone Bryant 2968 New York City

Send $1.00 for Sample Pint—money refunded if not satisfactory.

Frank H. Crane

DIRECTOR, PEERLESS CO.

COMEDIES
Manufactured by
HISTORICAL FEATURE FILM COMPANY
105 West Monroe Street
Chicago

TYPE W FLAME ARC
Powerful LAMPS Economical
For brilliantly illuminating the outside of your theatre
General Electric Company
4987 General Office, Schenectady, N. Y.

Developing and Printing for the Trade
Quality and Prices Right
WANTED—SCENARIOS for One Reel Comedies
ATLAS MOTION PICTURE CO., INC.
600 Liggett Building Detroit, Mich.

THE BELATED HONEYMOON (Feb. 2).—John Roller, a scientist, reaches the age of thirty-five without ever having been kissed by any female other than his mother. Although in comfortable circumstances, he shuns all society and devotes all his time to the study of the American Indian and gathering of Indian relics. When his friend, Professor Munger, seeking a husband for his ward, Agnes, puts it up to John as a sacred duty to give the girl a home, John feels that he cannot decline. Agnes is a diffident little thing about nineteen and does exactly as she is told. The peculiar marriage takes place and Agnes finds herself in John's home. John's old housekeeper, Delia, proves a disagreeable companion for the girl and John's attitude towards the girl is the same as it would be towards any orphan. He goes right on with his study, never dreaming of love or what married life really means. When Agnes does make an attempt at companionship it fails through his ignorance of femininity. This state of affairs continues for almost a year.

Then comes John's cousin, Billie, a rollicking, bouncing young man of twenty-five. He drags John and Agnes to a dance. Agnes meets a lot of lively young folks, watches their love making, tingles to the dance music, contrasts it all with her dull life and realizes she is missing all that belongs to a young woman. Her efforts to wake John up to this fact fails and in desperation her yearning spirit seeks elsewhere for romance. She buys fashionable clothes and attends parties. There are some flirtations. Gaston, a Frenchman, falls head over heels in love with her, and although she cares nothing for him, his attentions in a way make up for John's stupid neglect and she does not discourage him. John finally learns of her escapades and is strangely disturbed. That he is jealous does not occur to him—until—— John is in Boston delivering a lecture when a telegram from his housekeeper informs him that "Agnes is carrying on scandalous with the Frenchman." The lecture ends abruptly, John jumps aboard a home bound train within ten minutes.

Next evening Gaston calls to see Agnes, but, having become "too fresh," is refused admittance. John arrives just after the door has been slammed in Gaston's face. Gaston has left his cane on the steps; John thinks the Frenchman is in the house. He rings the bell furiously. Agnes thinks Gaston is ringing again and does not answer. John kicks the door open. Hearing the crash Agnes and Delia barricade all the inner doors, retreating from room to room. John smashes through everything until, bursting into the kitchen, he is confronted by Agnes, who in desperation has grabbed the carving knife prepared to defend herself against the supposed Frenchman. When things have been explained John realizes he is in love and Agnes is delighted to find she is loved by a real, red-blooded man. Their honeymoon begins from that moment.

A NIGHT'S ADVENTURE (Special—Two Parts—Feb. 3).—George Heath, the son of a minister, has gone wrong, and is discovered in the sordid environment of the lower city sections. Grace Walton, the daughter of a minister, the Rev. Walton, is discovered in the proverbial needy condition of one of a minister's family. George receives a two-dollar bill from his family and his conscience is pricked when he reads the letter telling of the pinching necessary to spare the two. He determines that nothing will tempt him to spend the bill for drink or similar unworthy objects.

Grace is sent to the great department store to pay a long overdue bill. On the way she meets Adele, a fashionable girl friend, and

OPTIC PROJECTION
S. H. Gage, B. S. and H. P. Gage, Ph. D.
Postpaid $3.00
A comprehensive book of 700 pages, with over 400 illustrations on all forms of projection apparatus. Write for circular giving table of contents, sample pages and illustrations.
THE COMSTOCK PUBLISHING COMPANY,
Roberts Place, Ithaca, New York

T. S. M. QUALITY
Brass Lobby Display Frames
EXPENSIVE? NO, INDEED!

You would be surprised at the really high grade goods and original designs that we produce at moderate prices. A well dressed lobby will get the best possible returns for any money that you spend on your theatre. May we suggest to you the best styles that can be made to fit your house?
QUALITY is our motto.
A postal card from you will bring our quotation, for the new or remodeled house.

The Theatre Specialty Mfg. Co.
318 LONG AVENUE, CLEVELAND, OHIO

when she accompanies Adele to a shoe store she is tempted to spend part of the money for a pair of fancy slippers. George, with all his money gone but the sacred two-dollar bill, decides that it is useless for him to struggle further and goes down to the river. Here he is only saved from suicide by the memories that the two-dollar bill and the letter from home bring. Grace, taking the slippers home, is scolded and goes to her room with a feeling of great rebellion against her lot. George, with a happy inspiration that perhaps the two dollars will bring him luck, is inspired to use that as the outside of a fake "roll" and to fare forth where the fake "roll" attracts the attention of Hoyt, a gambler, who pays George's expenses and leads him into a game. George, with beginner's luck, soon has a real roll.

Grace, in her rebellion against her lot, expresses to Arthur Luck, a suitor, a wish to go to just one dance, and he tempts her to go to a dance hall which her father is preparing to raid with the police. When he leaves her for a moment she meets George, and George aids her in a spectacular escape when the raid occurs. Unfortunately, she has dropped one of the slippers, and this is found and recognized by her father. But George, taking Grace home, by a ruse persuades her father that he is mistaken, and George then uses his newly acquired funds in buying a ticket for home. His better impulse is uppermost.

THE REGENERATING LOVE (Special—Three Parts—Feb. 4).—Years of family quarrels finally culminate in Henry Davison leaving his wife, Julia, and baby daughter, Ethel, well provided for while, with his baby son, Bob, he goes away West. With Bob's coming into manhood his father's ill temper becomes unbearable. Unable to learn anything of his mother, Bob leaves his father and tries to make his way in the world alone. Davison, broken in health, fails in his search for Bob and returns East, ultimately effecting a reconciliation with his wife. He dies, content in all but his son's absence, his last request being to find him and see that he is made heir to his large estate.

Reverses have led Bob's feet into unwonted paths and he falls in with Belle and Hayden, a vaudeville song and dance team playing in cheap music halls. Through a newspaper article Hayden learns of the search for Bob and in a drunken revel gets all the facts of the boy's life. He sees an opportunity to escape the drudgery of his present existence and compels Belle to unwillingly assist him. While she keeps Bob drunk, he goes back East and with papers and facts establishes himself as the son and heir.

A regenerating love soon springs up between the four young people and the philosophy of their lives and characters undergo a wonderful change. Hayden, unable to bear living his false character of brother to Ethel, the girl he loves, goes West to get Bob and bring him into his own. Ethel learns the truth from the letter he leaves behind, but awakens to the fact that the love she bears this man is not a brotherly one and her heart cries out for his return.

Belle and Bob have married and the fear of Hayden's return grows daily. When he does return, not for her but Bob, she uses all her influence to mislead him, but eventually the truth is made manifest to all three, and Bob refuses unless they go with him. He finally wins them over and they go back East. Bob is accepted without question and his wife received with open arms. Their happiness makes it easy for Ethel. Hayden is forgiven and wins the reward his regeneration merits.

"THE NAMELESS FEAR" (Feb. 5).—In a lonely old house lives Dulcene, a girl of twenty, companionless except for Dr. Ferguson, her guardian, and Meg, an old Servant. Ferguson, who is mad with a miserly love for gold, has determined that he will not give up the control of the girl's fortune when she reaches her majority, and has forced Meg to become his accomplice. Ferguson's intention being to wreck her mind, counting on the fact that if he succeeds he will be made her permanent guardian. There is in the house a certain door, which has always been kept locked, and which to Dulcene has the fascination and vague horror of the mysterious.

At length she finds the door ajar, and ventures fearfully through, to find only an empty room at one end of which hang, closed, heavy black curtains. As she slowly approaches these, Ferguson appears in the room with the warning: "There are some things so fearful that they may not be even named—if you would keep your reason, do not look beyond that veil!" Dulcene shrinks away from the curtains, but she cannot put the thought of them from her—sleeping or waking, she is haunted by fear of the thing they may conceal.

Dulcene chances to meet Fred Raymond, a young engineer, who is at work in the neighborhood, and they find for each other a tender regard. That night Fred sees a vision of the girl, imploring his aid, and on impulse he hurries to the house. Meanwhile, Ferguson has exerted his powers to the end that, rousing from her sleep, Dulcene feels herself irresistably drawn to the room of the closed curtains. No sooner has she stepped in than the door is locked behind her, and she knows herself a prisoner. Sick with horror, yet unable to resist the terrible fascination, she moves slowly to the curtains, peers between them and, with a shriek, falls senseless upon the floor. Fred, hearing her wild cry, bursts into the house, to be met by Ferguson. A struggle follows, from which Fred emerges, leaving Ferguson unconscious. Fred breaks down the door of the room of mystery and strives to revive Dulcene.

At this moment a police officer and a doctor arrive, having been brought by Meg, who in fear has turned informer. Ferguson has revived, and, laughing wildly, explains his plot. The curtains are torn aside, revealing only an empty alcove—the horrors which Dulcene thought she saw were but the suggested fancies of her own mind. It is now discovered that Ferguson himself is totally insane, and he is led away. Dulcene soon recovers from the shock she has experienced, and love promises happiness.

"THE FURNACE MAN" (Feb. 6).—Begrimed and with clothes awry, John Dayton, a young society man, after hours of labor, leaves his stalled automobile in front of a furnace man's basement shop. He leaves to get aid from a garage, taking with him the furnace man's card. John rescues Marjory Gordon's dog. She thanks him and promises a reward for his service. John, carried away by her charm, impulsively thrusts the furnace man's card in her hand. Marjory, thinking John a real furnace man, sends for him to repair the trouble in her home. John seizes the opportunity and persuades the furnace man to let him undertake the job.

In the Gordon home John is treated as befits his assumed position. He performs his duties with a will. At a tea the drawing-room becomes so hot that Marjory orders John to adjust the register. John is stared at by all the guests. He sees a fellow paying ardent attention to Marjory, and in revenge manipulates the furnace so that dense smoke pours through the register. The guests are driven out and the party broken up. Marjory indignantly discharges John, and John, mocking her anger, kisses her.

Before leaving, John gets an inkling of the grave business troubles harassing Marjory's father, and he deliberately proposes himself as Gordon's business partner and son-in-law, declaring his identity and confessing the deception. But Gordon will not barter his daughter. Marjory, in John's presence, demands that her father put John out of the house. John is discharged, with a knowing wink—and Marjory bursts into tears of chagrin. At night, immaculately dressed, John, the erstwhile furnace man, comes to dine with Gordon and Marjory. The girl's perplexed gaze suddenly turns to joy, and very quickly she decides that John will be partner to both herself and her father.

"PATSY BOLIVAR" SERIES NO. 7—"PATSY IN A SEMINARY" (Feb. 8).—Arriving at Sunnyside and finding Patsy inclined to still remain in her company, Mary tells him that such a thing would, of course, be impossible, owing to the jealousy of her husband, but he does not know what to do in his impecunious position, so Mary secures for him a position in the seminary as gardener.

The presence in their midst of so young a man causes great excitement among the young women. For a time all goes well, but soon Patsy is discharged on account of too much attention to the young ladies. Immediately there is a strike among them, and they demand his reinstatement. Inquiry develops that Patsy is a college man and an athlete, and as Mrs. Squills, the head of the seminary, contrary to the wishes of her husband, desires to develop physical culture in the seminary, Patsy is promoted to the chair of physical science. Trouble awaits him, however, for his ideas that young women should be trained as young men are and put through the same variety of exercises finds its way into the newspapers, and brings to the seminary a large body of protesting parents, who insist upon the elimination of the objectionable instructor or they will remove their daughters and charges.

They interrupt Patsy at work with his pupils in the gymnasium and Patsy is summarily discharged. His evil genius, Sykesy, has come to the seminary in the interest of his sister Jane, and Patsy, believing that this new trouble is his doing, administers a severe beating, ending with a ducking in the swimming pool. The edict has gone forth that Patsy must go, but that night the young ladies give him a reception at midnight in one of the rooms in order to express their disapproval of his dismissal. The noise in the room is heard by Mary, who is sleeping just below, and, going up stairs, she knocks at the door of the refectory room, Patsy is let from the window by a rope hastily constructed from sheets. This breaks and Patsy falls through a skylight upon the bed of his admirer, Mrs. Squills. In order that he may not be discovered, she conceals him under the

NEWMAN
Brass Frames and Rails

READ what Mr. W. S. McLaren of the Colonial Theatre Co., Jackson, Mich., says in commenting on the "Newman Frames" just shipped to him:

We wish to compliment you upon the GERMAN SILVER FRAMES we purchased of you recently. They are the talk of the town, being the only ones of their kind in the city. They sure do beautify the lobby, and we cannot speak too highly of them:

Respectfully yours,
(Signed) COLONIAL THEATRE CO.
W. S. McLaren, Mgr.

Write us today for our New Catalog chuckful of new ideas for lobby display.

The Newman Mfg. Co.
CINCINNATI 717 Sycamore St. NEW YORK 101 Fourth Ave. CHICAGO 108 W. Lake St.
Established since 1882

Oil Your Projector
With Real Filtered Oil

Don't think any old oil is good enough for your machine.
B. & H. Projector Oil is triple refined and filtered (not acid bleached) and will not gum or corrode.
$1.25 per gal. delivered by parcel post in 1st and 2nd zones. For 3rd zone add 15c.—4th, 30c.—5th, 45c.—6th, 65c.—7th, 85c.—8th, $1.00.

Bell & Howell Company
Manufacturers of Cinemachinery.
1805 Larchmont Ave., Chicago, Ill.

BE UP TO DATE
Install
CORCORAN TANKS
Get No. 6 Price List
A. J. CORCORAN, Inc. 11½ JOHN STREET NEW YORK CITY

PRINTING and DEVELOPING FILM TITLES
Give us a trial. All work guaranteed
Prompt service. Prices right
If there is any event that you want photographed, we can furnish expert camera men.
STANDARD MOTION PICTURE CO.
Phone, Central 2853, 5 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago

SIMON ARKIN
CONSULTING ENGINEER
Theatre Construction, Projection, Illumination, Lenses and Optometry
346 EAST 173RD STREET
NEW YORK CITY

blankets, but there he is found by the irate Squills, who horsewhips him and again turns him out upon the pitiless world.

"BAGS OF GOLD" (Special—Three Parts—Feb. 10).—Eliot, a business man, lives in the country. Weldon, a friend, returns from Alaska and turns his gold over to Eliot to be put in his vault. Weldon leaves to return in a few days. Reed, Parker and Brent, three crooks, learn of the gold left with Eliot. Reed gets into the office as Eliot's secretary; Parker into the house as butler, while Brent is given charge of a woodchopper's shack. Eliot frequently brings his secretary home with him and the thieves exchange words.

Gradually the fascination of the gold grows upon Eliot. He plans to transfer it to his home and arrange a fake robbery. Hardy, an artist, has been in the Eliot home painting a portrait of Eliot's daughter, Nan. He has watched the crooks and suspects that something is up. Parker discovers that Eliot has been transferring the gold to the library. He gives this information to Reed in a note. Hardy gets a view of this transaction through a mirror in the adjoining room and later offers Reed a drink. He purposely spills the liquor on Reed's coat. With hurried apologies he takes it to the lavatory to cleanse, and there discovers the note. There is only one more bag of gold left in Eliot's vault. Parker discovers the hiding place of the gold and telephones Reed to get what is left. Reed gets the last bag from the vault. Eliot enters and finds the gold missing. He suspects Reed, but, realizing his own doubtful position, is afraid to make a charge. Instead, he instructs Reed to accompany him home. Stealthily watching each other, they board the train for home. Hardy is suspected by Brent, knocked unconscious, bound, gagged and left in the cabin with a lighted fuse and a keg of gunpowder. Parker is discovered in the library by Mrs. Eliot. He escapes as far as the porch, where he is surprised by the gardener. They struggle, Parker escaping. Nan rushes to the house in time to see Parker leap into the gardener's wagon, and she springs into the back of the vehicle.

Hardy is rescued just before the cabin is blown to atoms. Brent is pursued by the woodchoppers to the edge of a precipice and falls to his death. The horse driven by Parker becomes unmanageable with Nan, terrified, in the back part. Parker exchanges shots with Hardy, who is galloping close behind, and is finally wounded, falling helplessly across the seat. As the runaway wagon passes under a low bridge Nan sees the train approaching, she catches onto a beam and hangs there, while the runaway horse dashes towards the railroad tracks. Hardy later rescues Nan from her perilous position. On the train Eliot feigns sleep. Reed tries to escape with his satchel of gold. Eliot jumps upon him; they struggle on the platform, where Reed, minus the satchel, falls over to his death. A moment later the train smashes the runaway wagon carrying Parker's wounded body. It has dawned upon Hardy that he is in love with the daughter of a crook-to-be. He sees, however, that the terrible experiences have brought Eliot to his senses, and is not slow in asking for Nan's hand.

"HIS SOUL MATE" (Feb. 9).—Albert Maynard thinks he is in love with two coquettes—one as great a flirt as the other. His stenographer, Nellie, is truly in love with him, but she realizes the hopelessness of it when she sees he is determined to marry either Dolly or Polly. At an afternoon tea he meets both girls and tries to figure out to which one he will give the engagement ring which he has with him. It is first Polly and then Dolly that takes his attention, and finally with one on each side of him he is even in a greater quandary than ever.

That night he has a dream. He imagines that he marries Dolly, only to lose her. Polly's sympathy leads to a second marriage, but eventually she goes over the great divide as well. His stenographer, Nellie, fails to appear one morning, and he learns that she, too, has passed beyond. Broken down with his sorrow he fights on, but a little while later his soul leaves his body and goes to meet his wives in heaven. He is admitted with sympathy and starts on his search. First, among the many white-robed figures along the way, he finds Dolly, only to learn that she is the soul mate of the man that is with her. He seeks out Polly with a sinking heart and finds that she, too, is not his mate, but the affinity of another man. Discouraged, he pleads for knowledge as to who really is his soul mate, and they point to a far-off cloud. There he finds Nellie, and also discovers that he can be very happy with her. He wakes and the next morning goes to the office with the feeling that Nellie's kisses are still on his lips. It does not take him long then to find out how much she does love him and to realize that after all she really was the one he loved from the beginning.

"THE TRAPPER'S REVENGE" (Special—Two Parts—Feb. 11).—Jean and Pierre are Canadian trappers, but also in league with moonshiners in the north woods, and carry illicit whiskey concealed in their loads of furs. In Jean's cabin there is a hiding place for the jugs until the regular weekly trip to the trading post with furs, when they are transferred to a secluded hut, a step further on to the settlements.

Pierre is in love with Marie Dupree, the daughter of his partner, Jean. Marie is a capricious coquette, really in love with Paul Marr, a member of the mounted police, though she torments him without mercy. She has only contempt for the trapper, Pierre. When Marie meets Hugo Sinclaire, a recruit in the police, she forgets the more quiet Paul, and imagines herself deeply in love with the newly-met officer. Her father discovers her secret meetings with Hugo, and forbids her to see him. Hugo has only been amusing himself with Marie, and openly boasts of his conquest in the guard room of the post. Paul comes to the girl's defense, and only the interference of others prevents serious trouble.

When Marie fails to meet Hugo as usual he goes to her father's cabin and surprises Jean in the act of concealing the jugs of illicit whiskey. He attempts to capture Jean, and in the struggle the trapper is injured, and as he is falling to the floor he fires at Hugo. From the inner room where she has been made a prisoner by her father Marie hears the shot and tries frantically to release herself. Hugo goes to her assistance, but as he reaches the door he is shot and killed by Pierre, who has crept to the window and has taken the opportunity to rid himself of his rival. When Jean regains consciousness he finds the body of Hugo and imagines himself to be the murderer. In terror he drags the body to the road, and then returns to sink before the shrine of the Virgin in prayer. Hugo's body is found by the police, who, remembering Paul's quarrel with the dead man, accuse him and cause his arrest. Marie learns of Paul's peril and hurries to Father John, a priest, for advice. Under his urging, Jean confesses the crime, and Paul is liberated. Pierre, returning alone with a cargo of skins and whiskey, is set upon by a party of half-breed renegades and badly wounded. He is brought into the post by the police, just as Jean is being led away. Dying, Pierre confesses to Father John that it was he who killed Hugo and that Jean is innocent. That evening Jean kneels before the shrine with the priest, promising to give up his connection with the moonshiners. In the moonlit woods, Paul takes Marie in his arms.

"AN OBSTINATE SHERIFF" (Feb. 12).—Steve, a cowpuncher, and the sheriff's daughter are sweethearts. The sheriff objects to the match and, catching the young couple at the trysting place, reprimands his daughter and admonishes Steve to cease his attentions. Undaunted by the sheriff's powerful physique, Steve renews his lovemaking and carries an engagement ring to the girl. At the same time the sheriff comes home to dinner and is amazed to find his daughter playing the role of a Juliet in the arms of Steve. The girl shows her father the ring. The sheriff returns it to Steve with his compliments. Steve registers an objection, whereupon the sheriff throws Steve out of doors. He returns to the ranch a downcast cowpuncher. He tells his troubles to the rest of the cowpunchers, who find more humor than pathos in the tale. After thinking matters over he decides to elope with the girl.

Meanwhile the sheriff has been seeking a pair of desperadoes who have been terrorizing the country. As Steve and the girl ride hurriedly away to find a parson they come upon Mexican Pete and his pal. The bandits recognize the girl as the sheriff's daughter, so they take her prisoner, and, after binding Steve securely, ride away. Unable to rise, Steve rolls along the ground to a nearby hay field, where he knows there is a mower. Rolling against the mower, he is able after a while to cut his bonds by rubbing them against the grass knives. Hurrying to the ranch he obtains assistance, and a posse of cowpunchers, headed by the sheriff who has been summoned, goes in pursuit of the bandits and the girl. They are finally cornered, but the posse dares not attack them because they use the girl as a shield.

Steve, however, sees how he can make an attack from the rear. It proves successful and, taking the bandits off their guard, he holds them up until the cowpunchers bind them. In the confusion Steve and the girl slip quietly away. After the bandits have been disposed of the sheriff hunts up his daughter and finds her with Steve. He congratulates him on his conduct and starts to lead his daughter away, but Steve, finding that his adventure has given him new courage, has a few words with the sheriff, which present to that individual a new point of view.

WHEN FATHER INTERFERED (Feb. 13).—The Wallingtons are a very old and aristocratic family. Arthur, the only son, is a bachelor clubman of about thirty-five. When quite accidentally he meets little Dolly, an actress in a local stock company, her sweetness and innocence appeal to him strongly and he falls in love with her. Arthur's gouty old father and aristocratic Aunt Emma are scandalized upon learning that their Arthur, the pride and hope of the Wallingtons, is in danger of being ensnared by a "woman of the stage," and immediately lay plans to "disillusionize" him. Dolly is convinced that Arthur's marriage to her would ruin his prospects and she consents to do the old stunt of "disillusionizing" him. Cousin Herbert Wallington is called upon to play the man in the case.

Accordingly, on a certain evening, Dolly cancels an engagement with Arthur, hires some loud clothes and goes out with Cousin Herbert to a bohemian cafe. At the same time his father surprises Arthur by asking him to a little supper at this same cafe. Arrived there, Arthur catches sight of Dolly and Cousin Herbert doing their best to appear drunk and abandoned. He also observes certain signals pass between Dolly, Herbert and his father.

A moment's thought on his part gives their little plot away and Arthur decides to play the game through—but to play it his way.

His father's ingenuous efforts to make him see the supposedly abandoned girl fail. At last the old man points, saying, "Who is that bold baggage over there with your Cousin Herbert?" This is where Arthur turns the tables. Instead of being shocked and horrified at his fiancee's indulgence in cigarettes and champagne, Arthur insists on all hands joining in one party and on ordering more drinks. And he makes sure that every one drinks. At three o'clock in the morning he sends father and Cousin Herbert home, ossified, in a taxi with a waiter and a policeman, and himself conducts Dolly to her boarding house. Next morning he calls upon her and makes her confess that her part in the orgy was acted only to "disillusionize" him "for the sake of his future." Then he produces a minister and a marriage licence and——

PICTURE PLAYHOUSE FILM CO.

THE EXPLOSION OF FORT B 2 (Five Parts).—Carl Ranke, an Italian inventor, after a series of dangerous experiments, discovers a new high explosive which, after being tested by the Italian Government, gives them the assurance necessary to enter the great conflict. At the reception given by His Highness, Ranke falls in love with the daughter of Colonel Colonna, and in keeping an appointment with her is kidnapped by the Austrian spy, Captain Otto Senza, who is serving in the Italian Army.

He is imprisoned in the little magazine Fort B 2 and is given the choice of revealing his secret of the formula or death, but he, game to the last minute, though death is staring him in the face, prefers to sacrifice his life rather than betray his country. He is saved from the very jaws of death by his faithful dog, and the despicable Austrian meets the death intended for his captive.

Sylvia tries to save him but only succeeds in getting into the toils of the spy and sees from her cell window, as she thinks, the death of her lover. After a series of adventures, Ranke succeeds in getting back to his own country just in time to marry the girl who has been faithful to him, in her heart, all through his trying experiences.

THE BLACK ENVELOPE (Four Parts).—Hard pressed for funds in his campaign for Mayor, Jim Creelman does not know where to turn; but Olga Bateman, an actress, who has fallen deeply in love with the handsome politician, offers to loan him twenty thousand dollars to insure his election, hoping that in the end he will marry her. He makes good use of the funds and his campaign is carried to a successful termination. A short time afterwards, however, he meets Miss Syble Chatfield, the fiancee of Estaban DeBussy, the editor in chief of the leading daily paper, and falls desperately in love with her. He wins her away from DeBussy and they are married.

In the midst of their honeymoon they are surprised by the announcement in the paper of the loan made to Creelman by the actress Olga, and never repaid, when, as a matter of fact, Jim Creelman repaid the money shortly after his election and obtained a receipt for it. Creelman tells his wife of his old affair with Olga. His wife, believing in his integrity and anxious to help him in any way to defeat the blackmailing scheme to discredit him before the town, helps him to search for the receipt, which had been placed in a black envelope, but they find that it has been stolen from his desk.

The revengeful suitor, DeBussy, meets the faithful wife and tells her that the receipt has come into his possession and that he will give it to her if she will come to his house that night. To save her husband's honor she goes, and when she obtains the receipt, in order to preserve her husband's good name, she kills her suitor, after a struggle. Overcome with grief at the unjust suspicions of her husband, and his failure to believe her story, she kills herself as soon as he leaves the house.

Ready For Rele
EPISODE
T
MIL
DOL
MYS
By Harol

Announcing the Winner of the $10,000.00 Prize

Episode No. 23 of the The Million Dollar Mystery will be ready for release February 22nd. The thousands of exhibitors who have been fortunate enough to run this successful photoplay will now have an opportunity to run this final and closing episode, which shows a complete solution of the Mystery and announces the winner of the $10,000 prize, offered by the Thanhouser Film Corporation for the best solution.

Ten Millions Are Waiting for This!

More than ten million people have already seen the early episodes of The Million Dollar Mystery. Thousands of people are still following this serial photoplay at the leading theatres. Everyone who has seen the 22 episodes will want to see the closing episode, portraying the solution of the mystery.

Marquerite Snow

Sidney Bracy

Booking Dates Now Being Arranged

Exhibitors who have not arranged dates for showing Episode No. 23 of The Million Dollar Mystery should, at once, get in touch with their Mutual Exchange, either by letter, wire or telephone. Everyone will want to see this, the most powerful and attractive episode of The Million Dollar Mystery series.

Pres
SYNDICATE FIL
71 West 23rd S
Produced by the Tha
New

se February 22nd

NO. 23 of

E
ION
LAR
TERY
MacGrath

The Same Great, All Star Thanhouser Cast

The same cast which enacted the early episodes of this successful play will be seen in Episode No. 23. It will be headed by Florence LaBadie, James Cruze, Marguerite Snow and Sidney Bracy. This popular cast of characters is familiar to millions of movie fans throughout the country.

Bound to Draw Packed Houses!

Exhibitors are bound to play to crowded houses with the final episode of The Million Dollar Mystery. The story of this episode by Harold MacGrath will appear in 500 newspapers throughout the country. With this thorough co-operation and the tremendous interest already aroused in this great mystery photoplay, exhibitors will find it necessary to run the 23rd episode for several days in order to accommodate the crowds.

Write, Wire or Phone, Now!

If you have not yet booked The Million Dollar Mystery communicate with the Mutual Film Corporation Exchange nearest you, and arrange to secure the early episodes at once so that you will have an opportunity to run Episode No. 23 announcing the winner of the $10,000 prize. Do not delay. Write, wire or phone, now, the nearest Mutual Exchange.

by
CORPORATION
New York City
r Film Corporation
, N. Y.
43

INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES

UNIVERSAL

NESTOR.

ALL ABOARD (Feb. 12).—Eddie leaves on the train for his uncle's place to meet the girl who has been picked out for him to marry, much to his displeasure. Victoria sets out for her aunt's for the same purpose and takes the same train. Neither knows the other and has no idea in what the other looks like.

The fat man and his wife and three children board the train. Finding that they have left the baby's nursing bottle behind, the wife gets off to buy another and misses the train. At the next stop the fat man gets off to telegraph to his wife, leaving the children in charge of Eddie, who is his friend.

Eddie meets Victoria, and after a short courtship they are married by a minister on board, not knowing they are fulfilling the wishes of their respective aunt and uncle. The porter comes to Eddie's assistance in caring for the children, not without having trouble with every one aboard. Victoria arrives at her aunt's before Eddie, and they are pleasantly surprised to find they have already been married, which brings the story to a happy conclusion.

L-KO.

FATHER WAS A LOAFER (Feb. 10).—Bummel is blessed with a family of four when his wife presents him with triplets. This addition to the family causes him to desert. He meets Miss Rocks, the multi-millionairess. This lady is out driving when her horses run away. Bummel rescues her at great risk to his own life. Out of gratitude, her father bestows her hand and fortune on the needy Bummel and the marriage day is set.

In the meantime the deserted wife outgrows her sorrow in the company of Baldwin. This latter gentleman does not mind the seven children Bummel has left behind. He has just about landed her, when she reads of the approaching marriage of her spouse and the multi-millionairess. How she arrives at the Rocks mansion at the moment her husband is about to marry the heiress is scarcely as dramatic as the subsequent attempts of Bummel to escape.

STERLING.

DUDE RAFFLES (Jan. 21).—A gentleman sneak thief has for an accomplice a trick dog, which enters the room of the guests by the way of the fire escape, bringing back to his master all the valuables he may find. While at work one day the dog comes upon a second burglar who has lighted a stick of dynamite and placed it upon the safe. The dog takes the stick of dynamite and brings it back to his master, driving the second crook ahead of him.

The crooks flee panic-stricken, over the roofs, followed by the dog, who still carries the dynamite. They find their only way to escape by the chimney, which brings them into the police station. The dog, with the stick of dynamite, following, creates a panic.

BILLY WAS A RIGHT SMART BOY (Feb. 11.).—Billy is flirting with Olive when he sees Carmen. He leaves Olive to go with Carmen. Carmen tells him she wants a doll, so Billy steals Olive's and gives it to Carmen. Olive gets angry and Billy is forced to procure a doll for her, so he looks about for one till he comes upon some negro children, from whom he steals a doll and gives it to Olive. Olive is not satisfied with it and throws it away. The negro children chase Billy to a place where he finds the doll thrown away by Olive, and he thereupon returns it to the negro kid.

Billy then goes back to Carmen and steals her away from her sweetheart and takes her to an ice-cream stand, where he treats her. He finds he has no money to pay for the ice cream, however, but quite undaunted he goes to the sweetheart he stole from and borrows a dime, with which he returns to the stand and pays for the sodas. The sweetheart, watching him, sees his nervy trick and gets angry. He at once rushes upon the young gallant and proceeds to "mix" this in a lively fashion. Billy comes out of the encounter much the worse for wear and now scorned by both Carmen and Olive.

ECLAIR.

SIGHT OF THE BLIND (Feb. 14).—The monotony of "tending store" in the village palls on Edna King. One day a stranger comes to town and sees Edna. He is impressed with her beauty. She has never seen this type of man before and falls an easy prey. Edna's father is called away on business. The man from the city calls and persuades the innocent country girl to go away with him. Before leaving, she prepares the medicine for her blind sister. In her nervous condition she takes poison tablets and tells her sister to take the medicine when the clock strikes five. In the city her dreams are shattered. She realizes her terrible mistake.

However, she does not know that Martin, her farmer lover, has followed her. The shot fired by the would-be betrayer attracts the attention of the police. The scoundrel is locked up. Edna discovers she has left poison for her blind sister. The girl explains to the sergeant, and while she is talking a chauffeur is arrested for speeding. The sergeant has an idea. Bundling them all in the machine he tells the arrested driver to make fifty miles an hour, but to reach Centerville by five o'clock. They reach there in time and Edna dashes the fatal medicine from her blind sister's hand.

JOKER.

THE PLUMBER WINS THE GIRL (Feb. 8).—Dad will not allow "any plumbers' 'prentices foolin' round me gal!" So Tom has to go on his way. Mandy, upset at Dad's action, gives vent to her feelings in the kitchen. She accidentally breaks a water pipe.

Then dad is given something to think about. He cannot stop the water. Neither can mamma. It nearly becomes a swimming matter. So the boss plumber is sent for, with orders to leave his apprentice behind. But the cute apprentice overhears and follows.

After a time the boss arrives. His slowness is more than dad can stand. Enraged, he ousts the boss. Then the apprentice, now a most welcomed visitor, is rushed in to stop the deluge. But the wise lad refuses to perform this service until dad and mamma consent to his engagement with Mandy, and under the circumstances he does not find this hard at all to obtain. The way he then stops the torrent of water amazes them all.

WON WITH DYNAMITE (Feb. 13).—Tom loves Mandy. Papa objects. The town council orders Papa Higgins to round up an outlaw. Higgins encounters this desperado. He is too much for Higgins, who takes refuge in an auto truck. Bart, however, corners Mandy and protests his love. Mamma Higgins hears her cry and calls out the deputy constable. Bart sees them coming and forces the truck driver to aid him to escape. The truck starts off, carrying Mandy.

Tom comes along in his auto. He offers his services. They all pile into his auto and give chase to the truck. Bart tries to fight his way with sticks of dynamite, with which the truck is loaded. Suddenly the dynamite explodes and the truck is blown skyward with its occupants. All, however, return safely to earth, Bart falling into the arms of the waiting constables. Higgins then lauds Tom for aiding the rescue and all opposition to a "city feller courtin' Mandy" is removed.

BISON.

THE TERRORS OF THE JUNGLE (Two Parts—Feb. 13).—Paula Deering and Bill Jones are the sole survivors of a wrecked schooner. Jones was first mate aboard, and Paula owed her escape to Bill's hardihood. Their makeshift raft finally drifts to land. Bill assists the exhausted Paula ashore, and the two then start inland. Paula collapses, and Bill makes a temporary camp. Unknown to the castaways, they are on the African shore, and their first night sees them in the midst of a horde of animal prowlers. Bill does his best to drive the marauders off, and morning finds the couple on their way inland. Again Paula collapses, and again Bill makes camp.

A month elapses. The castaways are lost in the jungle. Bill persecutes Paula with his attentions. Paula, desperate, steals from the camp and heads into the jungle, where she loses her way.

Dirk Vedder is a trapper of wild animals. With his assistants he is on one of his annual "hunts." Tracking a lion, Dirk hears a woman's scream. He hastens forward to find Paula held spellbound in the path of a lioness. Dirk drives off the beast, then hastens to the assistance of Paula, whom he revives, and then takes to the home of his mother, who does her utmost to make the girl comfortable. That night Paula tells her story. The impressionable youth listens, his heart going out to the homeless castaway.

Bill Jones, having missed Paula, starts after her. He comes upon Dirk's homestead, his appearance throwing Paula into a panic of fear. Bill's passions get the better of him, and he takes Paula in his arms. A struggle ensues, in the midst of which Dirk appears. The two men fight, and Dirk lashes Bill with a whip. Bill exits, vowing vengeance on both Dirk and Paula.

A year elapses, Dirk and Paula have married, and the pair are the parents of a pretty baby. Bill Jones, now a veritable wild man of the jungle, and still smarting with his hate of Dirk, succeeds in stealing the infant from the Vedder home. The child is missed, and Dirk, frantic with worry, rounds up his men and starts forth to scour the jungle. His bear hound picks up the scent, starts off, with the men following him.

Bill Jones, hampered by the child, makes but little headway through the jungle. Hard pressed, he abandons the baby. Dirk's dog comes upon the child, picks it up and carries her to Dirk. Forgetting for the moment his desire for revenge, Dirk hurries home with the baby. Jones blunders into a lioness and her cubs and is torn to pieces by the infuriated beast.

Dirk, having placed the baby in his wife's arms, takes up the search for Bill Jones, only to come upon the latter's corpse in the den of the lioness.

POWERS.

THE HEART OF SAMPSON (Feb. 13).—In the Canadian mountains, Val Sampson and his sister Nan live the primitive lives of their parents before them. Old Foxen, a trapper, looks upon Nan with the love of a father. Cash Durkin and Dick Clark meet Nan. Val departs for the settlement. Old Foxen sees Nan dreaming. Warned by Clark to keep away from the trapper's cabin, Durkin scoffs at the idea, and leaves his camp, placing on his neck a large handkerchief. Promising to marry her and take her away from the Mountain, Nan permits Durkin to come into the Sampson cabin.

Later rushing back to his camp, Durkin gives orders to break camp and move on. His picture is brushed off the table. Foxen tells Val of Durkin's perfidy. They rush back to protect Nan. She finds the picture of Durkin. Putting it in her bosom, she returns, broken-hearted, to her cabin.

Val and Foxen return. Nan confesses to her brother. They resolve to find the man. They enter the cabin, only to find the sister dead, the picture of Durkin in her bosom, which gives her brother the clue to the man. They meet. Val is shot at by Durkin, who rushes to his side, thinking he has killed the brother of the girl he wronged. Val grabs his rifle, and now meets the betrayer of his sister face to face. Wresting the rifle from the hands of Durkin, a fight to death ensues.

IMP.

"THE HEART PUNCH" (Feb. 8).—Jess Willard, after an all day's fruitless search for work, returns and informs his wife of his non-success. Later that evening in a saloon he becomes involved in a fight, and Jack Gordon, a sporting promoter, is impressed by Jess' physical prowess. Inviting Jess to his home, he tells Jess that if he put himself in Gordon's hands that he will make him a champion. Jess agrees.

Jess does not inform his wife of the agreement. Later in training he astonishes the spectators by his rapid progress so much that he signs articles to meet a celebrated heavyweight.

Jess' wife is reading a newspaper of the death of a pugilist. One evening the baby picks from Jess' pocket the articles of contract for the fight, which she shows to her mother. She pleads with Jess not to fight. Jess, thinking of their need of money, gives her no definite promise.

The baby's health has been failing, and on the night of the fight the little one's condition has become critical. Torn between his obligation to Gordon to fulfil his contract and his yearning to remain with his sick baby, he finally decides to fight. In the ring Jess' skill triumphs. Hastily donning his street clothes Jess runs home and finds that his baby is still alive. In the morning the crisis has passed and he pledges his word to his wife that this shall be his last fight.

THE STAKE (Feb. 12).—John Thornton and his supposed nephew, Tom, live together in the city. They are fond of each other, but the elder man is worried about Tom, for the boy has fallen into the habit of gambling heavily at his club. One night Tom leaves for the club. An old beggar breaks into the house and comes to the library. John captures him. The beggar is too ill to protest. He sees a blue ribbon lying on the floor and picks it up. "My wife always wore a blue ribbon like that," he says. Thornton is startled. He looks closer at the man and recognizes him. Thornton phones Tom.

The boy has gambled heavily and lost. Conscience-stricken he goes home and tells his uncle. The older man then tells him the story of a gambler.

Twenty years before, John Thornton is a lawyer. Mary, daughter of the storekeeper, is his sweetheart. Hack Martin, a drummer, comes to the store to get an order, meets Mary and is interested in her. John objects. They quarrel. A month later Martin and the girl are married and move to the city. Martin is a gambler and drinks heavily. He loses his position and decides that they will go back and live with Mary's father at least until after her child is born.

Later Mary is ill and the doctor says her husband must be called. John offers to find him. He locates Martin in a saloon gambling. He tells him to come, but Martin will not leave. John plays the man for his wife's happiness. John wins Martin's money. Then John makes the proposition that Mary's freedom and happiness shall be the stake. John wins and drags the drunken man to the house. Mary is dead; the baby born. Martin starts to take it, but John steps in and takes the child as his stake. The picture fades into the library, the white-faced boy and the old man. The latter leads the lad to the bedroom where the butler has put the beggar to bed.

"He is your father, Tom," says Thornton. The beggar is dead.

GOLD SEAL.

THE HEART OF LINCOLN (Three Parts—Feb. 9).—The story is cast in the years just before the Civil War. Two old friends, one a colonel of the South, the other a colonel of the North, are debating the merits and demerits of Abraham Lincoln. Both are ardent friends of Betty, a young and beautiful girl, who is also a fervent admirer of Lincoln.

The girl has a gathering at her house for her friends. Among the guests are the two colonels and Abraham Lincoln. As the guests are departing the girl makes Lincoln a present of a pair of socks she has knitted with her own hands, which touches him deeply.

The emancipation proclamation comes out and the two colonels are bitter toward each other, the Southerner upbraiding Lincoln and the Northerner taking his part. They leave for their respective commands when war starts, one to the South, the other to the North.

The Southerner's mother is suddenly stricken. Betty gets word to him through the lines and he manages to reach his home safely. As he is entering his house he is seen by his former friend, the Northern colonel, but rather than cause his arrest he makes report of the Southerner's presence in the vicinity.

Another Northern soldier sees the Southerner and reports the Northerner's failure to arrest the Southern colonel. Both men are arrested. At the court-martial the Southerner is condemned to death as a spy, while the Northerner is held to answer a charge later.

Betty learns the news and writes a note to Abraham Lincoln, in an effort to help her two friends. The note is given to the President's secretary, who fails to give it to the President. Hurt by the President's failure to answer, Betty thinks he has forgotten her. She goes out with downcast head and heavy heart. Outside she meets the President's little boy, who is having trouble with his goats. She helps him out, and while she is still busy the President comes along. She tells of her troubles, and the President tells her he is powerless.

That night a mysterious rider makes his way to the place where the colonels are imprisoned. He gives the commander an order to let the Southerner escape. A sentry on the outskirts fires a shot and the guards rush over to him, thinking it is the enemy. The Southerner finds a horse left conveniently for him and makes his escape. The Northerner is released upon the recommendation of the President, and both men, in different parts of the country, have reason to be thankful for the great heart of Lincoln.

REX.

THE PHANTOM WARNING (Feb. 11).—Alice, a seamstress, comes to work for Manton & Son, waist manufacturers. She finds the girls in the factory overworked and underpaid. She protests to Victor Manton, the junior partner, head of the firm.

The father discharges Alice for conspiracy. Alice waits for the girls outside the factory door and when they come out at noon she advises them to strike.

The bosses have her arrested. The son is deeply affected. He sees a vision: his father sitting by a huge grinder into which pass sad-faced working girls and out of which streams a flood of money. He sees himself spending that money in fistfuls on dissipation.

Just as the grip about his heart becomes unbearable, his father wakes him up to tell him that he wants him to take the business over entirely. Victor joyfully accepts the responsibility and his first step is to have Alice released from jail. With her hand in his, he brings on a new era of comfort and justice to the workers in his factory.

WOLVES OF SOCIETY (Two Parts—Feb. 14).—Ruth Mayhew, an heiress, lives with her uncle, Henry Mayhew, who is also her guardian. She has a sweetheart in Richard Dare, a rising young engineer. Paula, an adventuress and her accomplice, Gilbert Carstairs, work themselves into the confidence of old man Mayhew, posing as brother and sister.

Richard Dare, after a tender parting with his sweetheart, leaves for Mexico, to take up the construction of a new railroad line there. Paula lays siege to the heart of Henry Mayhew and he finally marries her. She and her accomplice then proceed to do the old man out of his fortune. The new turn of affairs proves irksome to Ruth Mayhew, and she leaves her uncle's house to make her own living, but is unsuccessful.

Later Richard Dare returns from Mexico and, going to the Mayhew home, learns of Ruth's continued absence. He is very much worried. Outside the house he meets an outcast, who informs him that inside the Mayhew home is the woman who has been the cause of his ruin. Richard Dare cares for the outcast, who is on the verge of collapse. The outcast tells Dare how at one time he was a trusted employe in a bank; how he later was led to commit a crime by his false sweetheart, the same woman who is now plotting the ruin of Henry Mayhew. He declares that at that time, as now, she works with her accomplice, Gilbert Carstairs.

Richard Dare informs the police of the maneuvers of the guilty pair. By chance he meets Ruth Mayhew and together they go to the Mayhew home. The police arrive and take into custody the adventuress and her accomplice. Ruth and her uncle are reconciled and the story ends happily.

BIG U.

DAD (Feb. 9).—Dad receives a letter from a friend telling him that his son and his wife are going a fast pace. Dad decides to go and visit the boy. The son and his wife are giving a dinner dance at their home when Dad arrives and walks into the ballroom unannounced. The guests smile at the old "fogy" and Dad instantly sizes up the situation. A week elapses. Kitty breaks a luncheon engagement for Dad, and he meets her at a cafe in a private stall, adjoining the one occupied by Willie's wife and Van Alstyn. Dad offers him $10,000 to leave a letter which he will dictate so that Willie's wife can discover it. Van Alstyne accepts and Dad writes a letter coming supposedly from Van Alstyne's wife to the effect that his wife knows of his affair with Willie's wife. Willie's wife finds it and leaves Van Alstyne. Dad then turns on Kitty and offers her the same amount to send a note to Willie to the effect she is to marry him (Dad). Kitty accepts Dad and Willie's wife return home. They find Willie, who has received Kitty's note. Dad indicates he knows about it and Willie sheepishly admits he has been foolish. Dad joins their hands together.

THE VANDRY JEWELS (Two Parts—Feb. 11).—The Secret Service has long been puzzled by the operations of Mrs. Vaudry, a fashionable crook, who has successfully eluded their efforts to get her "with the goods."

The chief of the Secret Service details Dudley Crisp upon the case and admonishes him to leave no stone unturned in his effort to capture the clever woman. Crisp finds that Mrs. Vaudry makes repeated trips between Europe and America and that she invariably returns to Europe on the same boat by which she arrived. He further learns that she regularly advertises for a maid upon arriving at her hotel and that the maid is always the same person.

He makes several attempts to get trace of the smuggled jewels upon Mrs. Vaudry's person or in her baggage, but without results. Crisp finally notices that the maid always accompanies Mrs. Vaudry on board as her ship is leaving, and that just before the time for sailing leaves, apparently having bidden her mistress farewell. His suspicions fall upon the maid, and, examining her, he recovers the jewel reported to have been smuggled.

Crisp has succeeded in cultivating the acquaintance of Mrs. Vaudry and a mutual attraction for each other has sprung up. It is his duty to act, however, and, having learned that Mrs. Vaudry and her accomplice, the maid, is with her, he goes to her stateroom just before the ship sails, confronts her with his discovery. He learns the clever method by which the jewels have been concealed in a small hole under the rug in the stateroom, and then handed over to the maid for disposal just before sailing. After a struggle with himself, Crisp decides to allow the woman he has come to love to escape. She is pleased with his magnanimous offer, but realizes that his honor is at stake and surrenders herself to the authorities. After one year the two are reunited.

SEVEN AND SEVENTY (Feb. 2).—Little Bobbie Mortimer has always longed for a grandpa, his own having died before he was born. When he meets Captain John Brent, a veteran of the Civil War, at the Old Soldiers' Home he "adopts" him as his grandpa.

After Bobbie pays many visits to the Soldiers' Hme, "Seventy and Seventy," as the old soldier calls himself, finally consents to visit Bobbie's father and mother. Bobbie's mother, Mrs. Mortimer, receives him kindly. Bobby persuades his parents to offer Captain Brent a permaare best obtained with a direct-current arc in the machine. The light is steady. Focusing is easy.

(Continued on page 888.)

Steady pictures

If your electric service is only alternating current, a

WESTINGHOUSE-COOPER HEWITT RECTIFIER OUTFIT

will give you the direct current required.

With this outfit you need not worry about a dense film. You can to suit the film. A brighter light for dense films. Once set, the machine will regulate the current. No adjustment required while running the film. The outfit also saves money in carbons and current. Write for Folder 4205-A for details.

ADJUST THE LIGHT

Westinghouse Elec. & Mfg. Co.
East Pittsburgh, Pa.
Sales Offices in All Large American Cities

$3 BUT ONLY ONE THEATRE

in any one city (must be 15,000 population or greater) can obtain my $5 FRONTLITES at this Special Introductory Price of $3 each,—with weatherproof hanger, $3.25 each. I want ONE Theatre in EVERY city in the United States to use my Frontlites. Then others will want some, and will pay the regular price. Frontlites have 12-inch Dresden Glass Spheres which look like bulbs of beautiful bright light. Hood of SOLID brass, polished and lacquered. Use with NITROGEN LAMP, any size or voltage. Lamp not included at above prices. Frontlites are great for lobby display and poster lighting. Frontlites draw the crowds and put your competitor in the shade.

LUDWIG HOMMEL & CO.
Complete Theatre Equipments
422 First Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.

The "Fulco" Book No. 5

NOW READY—ASK FOR IT

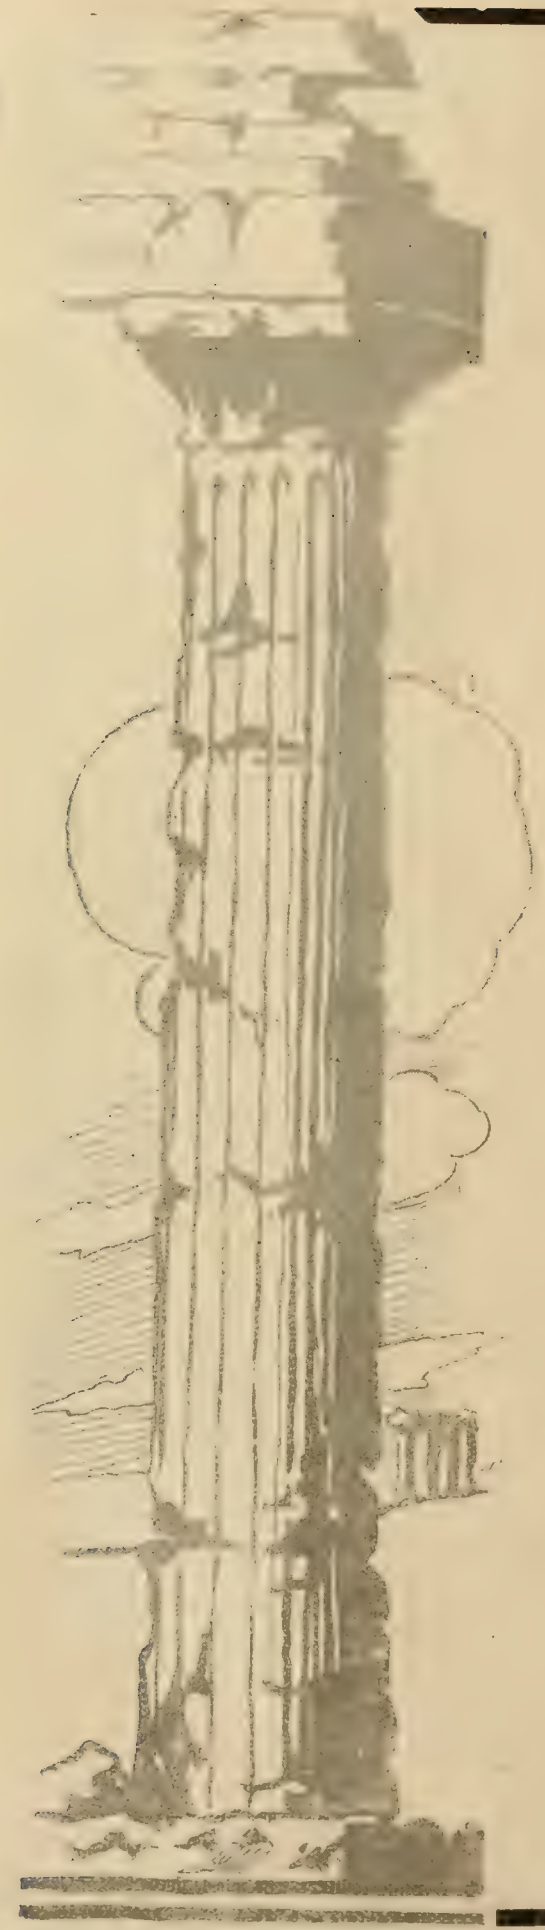
FITS YOUR POCKET

Most complete catalogue in existence of machines and supplies, involved in the presentation of

MOVING PICTURES

Buy the Best From the Best Place to Buy

E. E. FULTON CO.
152 W. LAKE ST., CHICAGO
Sole Agents for the Wonderful "Guil Pastil"



SPECIAL

DANIEL FROHMAN
ANNOUNCES FOR RELEASE

FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM CO.'S
STUPENDOUS PHOTO-SPECTACLE TRIUMPH

"THE ETERNAL CITY"

By HALL CAINE

with

PAULINE FREDERICK

A mammoth photo-spectacle of Hall Caine's inspiring masterpiece—produced amid the grandeur and beauty of Rome—the Eternal City, under the direction of Edwin S. Porter and Hugh Ford.

Added to its general and unusual value is the vital timeliness derived from the recent disastrous earthquakes in Italy, which injured many of the historic and ancient buildings that form the background of the screen production of Hall Caine's stirring romance.

ANNOUNCEMENT

No other film offering in the history of the screen ever received such unstinted praise from the trade papers as:

"Will rank with the world's greatest kinematographic achievements." —Moving Picture World.

"The finest dramatic work thus far made, here or elsewhere. Developed with surpassing skill—magnificent settings new to photoplays—a tremendous scenic accomplishment." —Dramatic Mirror.

"In 'The Eternal City' the Famous Players have turned out a film which it can be fairly said is the most pretentious production which any American concern has placed on the market." —N. Y. Telegraph.

"Nothing would be more ridiculous than to compare 'The Eternal City' with any other picture. It stands in a class in which others may be placed in the future, but not in the present." —Motion Picture News.

"Held the audience spellbound for two hours—nothing finer in the camera art." —Variety.

"Set a new standard in picture-making." —Motography.

"Tremendous—a revelation." —N. Y. Evening Mail.

"Fulfills the highest mission of the photo-drama—deserves the adjective great." —N. Y. Evening Sun.

For theatres that can house long runs—the greatest booking possibility ever presented!

Bookings may be obtained from

Select Film Booking Company, Room 1410, 110 W. 40th St., N. Y. City

GEORGE M. WELTY, Representative

Famous Players Film Company

ADOLPH ZUKOR, President

(Continued from page 888.)

nent place in their home. After much urging "Seven and Seventy" finally consents to stay.

He remains for many months, but when the Mortimers go away to the mountains for their summer vacation he returns to the Old Soldiers' Home. Illness seizes him and he dies in the post hospital. In the autumn Bobbie and his parents return home and immediately visit the home to see Captain Brent. They learn with sorrow of his death, and Bobbie is only consoled when the commandant gives him a valor medal which the old "Seven and Seventy" left him on his deathbed.

UNIVERSAL.

ANIMATED WEEKLY NO. 151 (Jan. 27).—SAN DIEGO EXPOSITION OPENS—Secretary of Treasury McAdoo represents President Wilson at opening of Southern California fair—San Diego, Cal.

FOR THE LONESOME IN THE BIG CITY—Under the personal patronage of New York's prominent women, a dance hall and restaurant for all ranks of society is opened on top of Strand Theater—New York City. Sub-title, Miss Anne Morgan.

SAVING SOULS IN WASHINGTON—Billy Sunday is welcomed by Secretary of State Bryan when he comes to preach to government heads at the country's capital.

BACK FROM THE FROZEN NORTH—Mayor Mitchel reviews Thirtieth United States Infantry on their return from three years' service in Alaska—New York City.

OFF TO BATTLE PRACTICE—U. S. Battleship "New York" passes under Brooklyn Bridge on way to Guantanamo Bay, Cuba.

UP-TO-THE-MINUTE FASHIONS—Latest creations designed in America. By courtesy of Madame Yovin.

"ALL THAT WAS LEFT OF THEM"—Famous regiment of London Scottish comes back a mere handful after disastrous charge at Dixmude, Belgium.

ENGLAND'S DRILLING GROUNDS FLOODED—Extraordinary rains cause flood and hamper the manouvers of Canadian troops preparing for the front at Salisbury Plains, England.

ENGLAND'S HEAVIEST FIELD GUNS—Traction engines impressed to pull "Long Toms," most powerful artillery pieces used by Allies.

REFUGE OF STRICKEN ITALY—Panoramic view of city where thousands of earthquake victims from stricken Avezzano are being cared for—Rome, Italy.

CROWN PRINCE FRIEDRICH WILHELM—Germany's future ruler directs artillery manoeuvers of troops, whose training has proved of great worth—Germany.

CARTOONS—By the World Famous Caricaturist, Hy. Mayer of Puck.

VICTOR.

EVERYGIRL (Two Parts—Feb. 8).—Truth, the mother of Everygirl lives in their comfortable, cozy little cottage near New York. Love calls for Everygirl to take her to work with him at the office of Work and Pleasure, a strange partnership. Trouble looks upon the attentions of Pleasure for Everygirl, and gloats over Love's discomfort at a situation over which he has no control. Work takes Pleasure to task for his lack of business interest and his attentions to Everygirl, only to be laughed at by Pleasure and told in a polite way to mind his own business.

That night Everygirl prepares to go out with Pleasure after having told Love that she will not stand for his dictations. To the surprise of her mother, Everygirl goes with Pleasure to a cafe, where Vice and Temptation have Vanity, Conceit and Frivolity awaiting for the new prey. Vanity assures her she is too plain. Conceit instills her powers into Everygirl's mind. At first Everygirl refuses wine, but after all the others laugh at her for her shyness, Everygirl forgets her promise to Truth and tastes of the wine. Vice spots her as a new diversion, and after Vanity and Conceit has arranged her hair, Vice entices Everygirl to a private nook. At first Everygirl likes him, but when she awakens to the fact that his intentions are not good she shuns him and returns to Pleasure, begging him to take her home. She leaves the cafe.

Next morning early Vanity and Conceit call on Everygirl with more fashionable gowns supplied by Pleasure. Truth has trouble awakening Everygirl from her slumbers, though she office Everygirl has trouble refraining from brightens at the sight of the finery. At the office Everygirl has trouble refraining from yawning. This troubles Work, but pleases old Trouble, who seeks the downfall of Everygirl. Love looks on brokenhearted at his sweetheart leaving him.

When Everygirl is called by Pleasure, she brightens at his recalling the night before, but shudders at the thought of Vice's suggestions. On her return to her desk Work warns her of the danger of her associations with Pleasure, Vice and Temptation. He tells her such gowns as Vanity and Conceit would have her wear are not for Everygirl and begs her to go home and rest and think it over.

On her way she meets Vice and Temptation, but, remembering the advice of Work, she refuses their offers, as those of Conceit and Vanity. At home with Truth, Everygirl waits for Love, who comes and takes her once more to Work, who welcomes the old Everygirl.

After marriage Everygirl has Happiness, which more than takes the place of Pleasure, Vice, Temptation, Vanity and Conceit. Trouble comes no more to Everygirl, who lives on with Love, Truth and Happiness.

A BOGUS BANDIT (Feb. 12).—Buck Carson receives his pay along with the other cowboys. He is held up and robbed of all he has. Next morning Carson comes upon a sign offering $500 reward for the apprehension of one Bat Collins, outlaw. A description follows and Carson realizes that he had been held up by Bat Collins the night before. An old drifter and his daughter are wandering overland in their camp wagon. Buck Carson makes their acquaintance, just after the girl's old father has broken his leg.

An idea strikes him. He decides to pass himself off for the outlaw and turn himself over to the sheriff, with instructions that the reward money be paid to the old man and his daughter. Buck is incarcerated. The men of the country around make up their mind to lynch the notorious outlaw.

Meanwhile the real Bat Collins endeavors to hold up a ranchman who rides to inform the sheriff. He arrives just as they are about to string up Buck Carson. The story of the old man and his daughter is made public and the old ranchman passes around his hat.

As the story closes, Buck Carson receives his reward in the love of the maiden for whose sake he has offered to make the sacrifice.

MUTUAL FILM CORP.

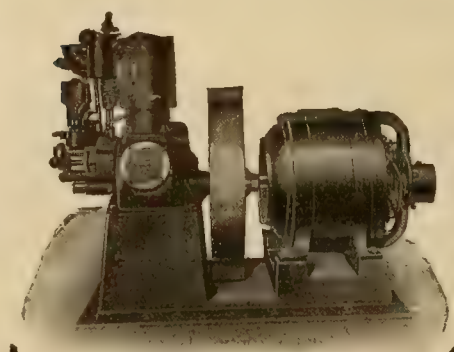
THANHOUSER.

IN THE JURY ROOM (Two Parts—Feb. 2).—Caleb Green, a rich factory owner, cruel and unscrupulous, has caused himself to be hated by all who have come in contact with him. His employes, to his mind, exist only to be driven to their utmost limit, and when worn out, to be discarded and replaced by younger and stronger men. Arthur Graves, a young mechanical engineer, who several years previously was in Green's employ, shares the feeling of Green's employes. A champion for the factory owner's victims arises in the person of Dr. Middleton, a well-known surgeon, noted for his philanthropy. The physician threatens to expose Green's flagrant violation of the health regulations in the conduct of his factory unless he reforms. However, by accident Green comes into possession of information affecting the reputation of Dr. Middleton's daughter, and with this trump card defies the doctor to do his worst. The doctor angrily hurls himself at Green, seizes him by the throat, and only the opportune arrival of his office employes saves the manufacturer from serious injury.

Dr. Middleton calls at Green's home and tries to obtain possession of the compromising letters, but Green refuses to surrender them unless the doctor agrees to abandon his campaign for the betterment of the factory people. This Middleton refuses to do and a quarrel ensues. A servant enters in time to witness the dispute, but Green orders him away. Middleton soon after leaves the house, but an hour afterwards Green is found dead, and evidence points to the physician. The doctor is arrested and the trial is soon held.

Graves, the young engineer, has followed the tragedy with great interest. He is drawn for the jury. The evidence is handed in and the jury goes to its room to decide the prisoner's fate. The evidence is so strong against the prisoner that only one man votes in favor of acquittal. Ballot after ballot invariably shows eleven for conviction and one for acquittal, but they finally learn that the man who is "hanging" the jury is Arthur Graves. Argument after argument is hurled at him, until finally, worn out by hours of questioning, he yields and tells them why he believes that the prisoner should go free.

Several years previous when Graves was a poorly paid worker in Green's employ, but one who had placed his employer in his debt many times for earnest and unselfish service, Mrs. Green became ill. The husband appealed to his employer for aid, but Green replied brutally, "Let her die," knowing that unless expert surgical aid could be secured that she could not live. At last the frantic husband went to the greatest surgeon in the city, Dr. Middleton, whose services cost the rich fortunes. The surgeon's wife was seriously ill, but he listened to the pitiful tale of the young workman, and accompanied him to his home. The operation was performed, but the crisis had not passed when a servant arrived to tell Dr. Middleton that his own wife was dying and unless he re-



2 k. w. Direct-connected Outfit

The above shows our k. w. Direct-connected

Brush Electric Lighting Set

For many users our 4 k. w. Lighting Set is larger, and perhaps more expensive than necessary. The 2 k. w. outfit is just as good in its way as the other.

Send for catalogue

The Chas. A. Strelinger Company

Box MP-2

Detroit, Michigan, U. S. A.

A man's mail will reach him where no mortal can

Mailing Lists

99 GUARANTEED

covering all classes of business, professions, trades or individuals. Send for our complete catalog showing national count on 7,000 classifications. Also special prices on fac-simile letters.

Ross-Gould 411Z N. 9th St. St. Louis

WE BUY, SELL and RENT

Moving Picture Machines, Films and Chairs

THEATRE BROKERAGE EXCHANGE

440 S. Dearborn Chicago, Ill.

turned at once he would not see her alive. The doctor hesitated, but the call of duty prevailed over the call of love. He stayed and saved the life of the mechanic's wife, while his own wife died.

The story finished, the dissenting juror turned to his comrades. "Gentlemen, Dr. Middleton is accused of a brutal, cowardly murder. Do you believe he is capable of it when he brought my wife from the shadow of death while his own wife died without seeing him?" There was no need for the cry of "No" which burst from the lips of the assembled jurors. Their faces were sufficient. But before a vote could be taken, the door opened and a court officer appeared. "Gentlemen," he said, "the trial is over. The real culprit has confessed." The jurors filed out into the courtroom and there in the prisoner's dock stood one of the dead man's employes, whom remorse had driven to confession.

The prisoner is released and the jury discharged. Dr. Middleton, surrounded by congratulating friends, feels a timid touch on his shoulder. He looks inquiringly into Graves' face. "Dr. Middleton," the young man says falteringly, "I want to congratulate you." The doctor presses the proffered hand and passes on, not realizing in the excitement and joy of the occasion that the man to whom he has spoken was one of the jurors who deliberated upon his fate and husband of the woman for whom he made the greatest sacrifice in his power.

FINGER PRINTS OF FATE (Two Parts—Jan. 26).—William Gray, an aged scientist, is found dead in his library. His safe, which was known to have contained a large sum of money, has been rifled, and suspicions point to the scientist's favorite nephew, Morris Grey, who is found a few minutes later in the library, and who only a few hours before has been disinherited for making love to his uncle's secretary, Margaret Seymour. The young man, on arrest, has nothing to say for himself. The money is not found, but the police believe that it has been removed at some time previous to the murder, and that the slayer had returned to remove some traces of his crime. Margaret is the only person who contends that he is innocent. At the beginning, too, she had almost believed him guilty, for she had noticed a finger-mark on the side of the safe and had been almost convinced that it was Morris'. Later, hiding in the room, she had seen him enter, find her glove and carefully remove it as though he would divert suspicion from herself. She reasoned then that he was not guilty, for in that event he would not have seemed to suspect her. It takes some clever detective work to clear up the case. But Margaret is a born detective, and at last she proves conclusively that the crime was committed by two men who have no connection with Morris Gray.

THE VOLUNTEER FIREMAN (Jan. 29).—David Simpson, the village barber, is also a volunteer fireman. When he hears the fire bells he abruptly leaves his customer in the chair, and throwing the razor on the floor, rushes to the scene of action. He especially desires to distinguish himself, as he is in love with the belle of the village and has a formidable rival in Hiram Jones. But in the end Jones wins out. He kicks Simpson off Mazie's front porch, and the volunteer fireman is picked up by Jack, the smallest and bravest policeman on the force, and bundled off in the patrol wagon which is a dog-catcher's cart.

HELEN INTERVENES (Jan. 31).—Helen, the lovable little daughter of the Carltons, a wealthy couple, makes friends with everybody she meets. In the toy department of a big store she first sees Marion Carter, a pretty salesgirl, and later, with the consent of her mother, her friendship with Marion is continued. The Carltons learn that Marion has a great deal of musical talent, and longs for the opportunity to perfect her violin playing, but the care of her mother and younger brother and sister make this impossible. When the manager of the store decides to cut down the force and Marion is discharged, things look pretty black. But little Helen intervenes in behalf of her friend. The manager finds he cannot withstand the pleadings of this child of five, who seems to regard him as the very nicest man alive, much to his secret delight. Marion receives back her position, and the Carltons help her to get the musical training she desires.

ROYAL.

RING AROUND ROSY (Jan. 30).—When Myron Sawyer, an old widower, is left two thousand dollars by his uncle's will, the gossips who had criticised him become very friendly and one old maid determines to marry him. But Myron fancies another, a blooming young lady, beloved by a young chap, who sends her a note asking her to wear a red, red rose in her hair if she reciprocates his affections. The note, by a series of extraordinary mishaps, travels the rounds of the village, with the result that everybody wears a rose in their hair, including the old maid and Myron. The widower plunges into the mill pond to escape, but is pursued by the determined spinster and the parson. The latter then and there ties the nuptial knot.

RELIANCE.

THE WORLD UPSTAIRS (Jan. 25).—Mary Ann was the motheriess daughter of Janitor Madigan. One day Mrs. Waring's maid upstairs hurt her finger and was sent home. There was no one to fasten the gowns of her mistress and Elizabeth Waring, when they came to dress to go out that afternoon, so Mrs. Waring telephoned down to Madigan and he sent them Mary Ann. The little girl looked with amazement upon the lavishness and finery she beheld in the Waring apartment, and when she went back to the basement it was with glowing thoughts of beautiful things to wear. On their way out, the Warings left the key to their rooms with Madigan, so that Franklyn Gilbert, Mrs. Waring's brother, who lived with them, might get in during their absence. Mary Ann, succumbing to curiosity, went upstairs and let herself into the apartment. There Gilbert, who was something of an old reprobate, found her, and instead of chiding her for trying on Elizabeth's clothes, brought her another and finer gown, bidding her put it on. The unexpected return of Elizabeth and her mother precipitated matters, and Mary Ann was somewhat sadly disillusioned regarding "the world upstairs." But Bobby, her sweetheart, soon restored her faith in life.

THE EXPRESS MESSENGER (Jan. 27).—During the illness of her father, Toni Carter, Milly takes his place as station agent. She is loved by both Dave Snowden, a freight engineer, and Bill Mailey, an overland express messenger, who distrusts and dislikes Dave. The former, seeing that both the girl and her father favor his rival, determines to disgrace the station agent and his daughter. A package containing $10,000 is brought by Bill to be forwarded to Pocoima. Milly signs for it, but it cannot be sent on till next morning. Bill and a pal of his break into the station and tie up Milly and her father, whom they force to tell the combination of the safe. The girl, however, is able to phone the sheriff, who arrives in time to take the crooks into custody. All this time the money has been hidden under the cushion of the chair in which Milly is tied.

THE LOVE PIRATE (Two Parts—Jan. 30).—Viola Marsh early discovers that her power of fascination for men is to be the motive force of her life. As stenographer to a railroad magnate, she does not hesitate to ruin her employer, who deserts his wife for her, and afterwards, having lost his social position, commits forgery to cater to her extravagant tastes. When he realizes that Viola is growing tired of him, he warns her that if she attempts to leave him he will kill her. She elopes with her next prey, and the man she has stripped of honor and money swears to hunt her down. Several years later he is employed as valet to a young clubman. He discovers that his master is supporting in luxury some woman, and that his neglect of his wife is breaking her heart. At last, at a house-party in the siren's honor, to which he accompanies the clubman, the valet comes face to face with his master's inamorata. She is Viola. That night, in a room remote from the festivities, her first victim carries out his revenge.

AT THE BOTTOM OF THINGS (Feb. 1).—Frank Ferris, a master crook, while working on a job, is surprised by the entrance of Harry Thomas, another of his profession. He hides, permits Thomas to rob the safe, and then, holding him up, takes the loot from him. This is the beginning of a long enmity. Later, Thomas meets socially and falls in love with Celeste, the attractive daughter of Ferris. Celeste already is interested in Jack Leeds, and Ferris favors their union. One evening Ferris finds both Leeds and Thomas, whom he instantly recognizes, calling on his daughter. Without explaining anything, he orders the gentleman crook from the house. Not long after this, Ferris is captured and sentenced under an alias to prison. Celeste, who has no inkling of her father's occupation, but supposes he is a traveling man for a firm, mourns him as dead. Thomas renews his suit, but remembering her father's dislike of him, she repulses his attentions. A few weeks later Thomas finds himself Ferris' cell mate. He threatens to betray to Celeste her father's business if he does not permit him, on the expiration of their terms, to become his daughter's accepted lover. Thomas is freed first. Ferris, dreading lest he coerce Celeste into marriage, determines to make his escape. He reaches home just in time to save Celeste from Thomas, whom he kills in a fight outside. Meanwhile the wedding of Jack and Celeste is in progress within. The father, knowing that his daughter is happy, returns, the murder on his head, to prison.

PRINCESS.

THE HOME OF SILENCE (Jan. 29).—Alice Parker becomes interested in a young convict, who is serving a sentence for forgery in the prison of which her father is the deputy warden. Her regard for Ralph Jenkins is increased when he saves her father from the attack of a dangerous prisoner. Charles Sims, a politician, is made warden. He falls in love with Alice, who dares not repulse him for fear of losing her father his job. One day, however, Sims seizes her in his arms and tries to kiss her; and Jenkins, who happens to be on the scene, knocks him down. Sims orders Jenkins placed in solitary confinement and compels the deputy to resign. Several weeks later Parker and his daughter read in the paper that Jenkins has been given an additional sentence for his "unprovoked attack" upon Warden Sims and has been transferred to another prison. They determine to appeal to the governor. The governor grants the case a hearing, and Sims comes to the capitol, surrounded by numerous eloquent witnesses. The Parkers' hopes are turning to despair when Ralph Jenkins in citizen dress enters the room. The governor introduces his son, who has been committed to prison to study conditions from the inside. Sims is dismissed from his post; Parker is reinstated; and Alice Parker marries the governor's son.

MAJESTIC.

A FAREWELL DINNER (Two Parts—Jan. 31).—John Ewing, a young surveyor, bids his fiancee good-bye and goes West to undertake a contract. Mrs. Standish, Eleanor's ambitious step-mother, wishing to marry the girl to Roy Lessiter, a millionaire, takes her to New York, hoping she will forget Ewing. Lessiter previously has had an affair with Gladys Ladeau, once very beautiful, now desperately ill, and the object of Mrs. Standish's and Eleanor's sincerest sympathy. Though they know that a faithless lover is at the bottom of Gladys' troubles, they have no notion of his identity. Later, Gladys dies, Lessiter's photograph clutched in her hand, which Mrs. Standish replaces with that of Ewing. When Eleanor recognizes it she connects him with the unhappy woman's past, and herself heart-broken accepts Lessiter's proposal of marriage. The millionaire, meanwhile, has removed by stealth certain letters and papers from Gladys' apartment, among them the photograph of Ewing. Ewing returns from the West and follows his former sweetheart to New York, where he learns of her engagement. He is invited by Lessiter to his farewell bachelor dinner, and afterward discovers the photograph of himself on his host's desk. Lessiter, who knows that formerly Eleanor was in love with Ewing, now recognizes that he and the photograph are the same, suspects the step-mother of treachery. Before the others he forces from her a confession of how she exchanged his picture for one of Eiwng in the dead woman's hand. Then, magnanimously, he withdraws, leaving Eleanor and Ewing together.

AN OLD FASHIONED GIRL (Feb. 2).—Abigail, the pretty daughter of a village school teacher, and Jared Guild are lovers. Bertha comes from the city to visit in the little town. Her charms prove too strong for Jared, who neglects Abigail to dance attendance upon the new belle. The country girl is broken-hearted, though she hides her sorrow from her erstwhile sweetheart. A wealthy young planter, however, soon cuts out Jared with Bertha. Young Guild recognizes the city girl's mercenary motive, and he and Abigail are happily reunited.

KOMIC.

CUPID AND THE PEST (Jan. 31).—Tony, a printer, is affected by the love-making in the air. He tries to fascinate Maryola, the cook at his boarding-house, but is repulsed with a shower of pots and pans. He butts in upon two happy couples, who prove to him that they are in no mood to be disturbed—and in revenge on returning to the printing office he interchanges the dates of the wedding ceremonies in the local paper. The nervous grooms forget the hour of their weddings, refer to the newspaper notices, and on arriving at the church each meets the wrong young woman. Their common misfortune, however, draws them together and they are married. In the cafe the interchanged couples take adjoining tables, and when Tony enters the grooms vie as to which shall outdo the other in giving the printer the one good feed of his life. Soon Tony begins to feel his oats. He returns to Maryola and, braving a volley of kitchen utensils, seizes her in his arms. This time she is conquered.

WHICH WOULD YOU RATHER BE? (Feb. 2).—Edward Small and Henry McDonald, two young salesmen, stop off at a small country town, where they meet Sadie and Edith Lane, daughters of the general merchant and postmaster. The salesmen make a hit, and Edward is promised a position as clerk in the post office if he marries Sadie, and Henry a place in the store if he marries Edith. Henry gets cold feet and beats a hasty retreat, while Edward stays and makes good. Later, however, not finding business in large centers very profitable, as he is no nearer to setting up for himself than when he began, Henry is glad to reconsider. The death of Father Lane decides him. He returns to Edith and comes into his own.

"Birth of Kriterion"

Gentlemen:

On August 26, 1914, a combination of energy, brains and money came to the conclusion that there was an opportunity at the inception of the year 1915 to put on the market an all-American made regular film program made by experienced directors and proven talent. They proposed giving the theatre owners in the United States and Canada something to tender the American public that would please them and make money for the theatre owners.

Upon looking over the field they ascertained that apparently there were three or four individuals or a combination of individuals who were advertising widely and blatantly a multitude of new programs.

Upon investigating the basis of this advertising the "KRITERION" combination ascertained that these were "programs on paper." The film men in the Kriterion combination, however, appreciated that the essential necessity in connection with a successful program was motion picture film. They also appreciated that an additional essential to make for success in a program was motion picture film of quality. Therefore, without any blowing of horns and without informing the trade of their intentions, they started to spend money and make film. Incidentally, the making of motion picture films is an extremely costly experiment. They, therefore, eliminated the experimental phase and assured themselves that every individual employed by them was an experienced, capable and proven master in his particular line, whether it be director, cameraman or actor. This procedure of making a program on film has proceeded without a stop during the last five months, and the result is that the vaults of the "KRITERION" are at present filled with negative, representing the releases of the "KRITERION" for the next twelve to fourteen weeks.

In the interim the exchange specialist in the combination was studying not only the conditions and attitude of the legitimate independent exchangemen, but likewise was investigating the economic status of the exhibitor, and here the combination ascertained an astounding fact, viz., sixty (60%) per cent. of the motion picture theatres in America were losing money. This knowledge was not confined to the principals in the "KRITERION." The executives of every large faction in the trade were equally cognizant of this astounding fact. Every time they met together in discussion they figured the months, the weeks or the days that would transpire prior to the entire business becoming bankrupt. Not so with the "KRITERION." They immediately bestirred themselves with a view to the amelioration of this condition and after considerable deliberation arrived at the conclusion that their policy of a perfect motion picture program on film, if economically administered, would rescue the exhibitor who was not making money from his precarious position. They based this conclusion on the following facts: Other organizations in the motion picture trade are financed on a basis that means a return on the original investment of from 50 to 500%. Understand, this return is not based on the capitalization of the company, but the originators of the companies. They capitalized their companies in such an amount so that they themselves could and would realize this enormous profit on their original investment.

The "KRITERION" Program is financed on a basis that places the "KRITERION" principals in a position where a small return on their investment each and every year will more than satisfy them.

Compare the two conditions—you exhibitors who are losing money! Do you want to deal with a concern who are making films on a par with any film being released on the American market today and who are satisfied with a small return on their investment, or deal with other conditions, knowing that every week, when you hand your exchange manager your check for rental, approximately 30% of that check is not being paid by you for real film service? In other words—Do you want to rent film or do you want to pay interest on the financial manipulations of shrewd promoters?

If you really want the film and that is all you want to pay for, you will be using the "KRITERION" Program within the next thirty days. Not only do you have to base your choice of this service on the fact that mayhap you can get it for less money, but we also ask you to compare the quality of our film with any other on the market.

We ask you to see the exhibitors in your town who are using the "KRITERION" Service. Ask them whether or not they are satisfied. And finally, we insist that you see our exchangeman in your territory and make him "SHOW YOU."

By permission, we thank you in advance,

Yours,
"KRITERION,"
B. E. Clements,
Vice-President and General Manager.

"Decidedly Distinctive"

KRITERION
1600 Broadway New York City

"Decidedly Distinctive"

KRITERION FOR MINE

Book These Films Now. See Our Exchanges.

DRAMAS IN TWO REELS

"$500 Reward"
(PARAGON)
Featuring Dorothy Davenport and Lee Hill

A wholesome rural drama full of love and character, with a doctor from the "old school" portraying an interesting character.

"An Intercepted Gift"
(ALHAMBRA)

A story with its settings laid in Mexico, in which a necklace and a man's jealousy combine in making a strong drama.

"Tainted"
(SANTA BARBARA)

A story that is a real feature produced in two reels of powerful drama.

"The Adopted Baby"
(MONTY)

A child taking care of a foundling is embodied in one of those stories which pull the heartstrings.

"The Foster Brother"
(TRUMP)
Featuring Justina Wayne and Craufurd Kent

Unusually strong. Unusually entertaining. The gambler's son, who is marked for life, lives down an inherited trait.

"Thoughts of Tonight"
(NAVAJO)
Featuring Lucille Younge and Wallace MacDonald

An Easterner shows he is no tenderfoot in this thrilling story of the West. Told in two reels of exciting drama.

COMEDIES IN ONE REEL

"Percy Made Good"
(SANTA BARBARA)
Featuring Mary Ruby and Harry Fisher, Jr.

The second of this series of delightful comedies, in which Percy shows the old man that he is "on the job."

"The Boob's Elopement"
(THISTLE)
Featuring Frank Moore

The "boob" has an exciting time in trying to get "hitched" in this comedy.

"Capturing Stella"
(C K)

A pleasant comedy drama in which the sheriff shows he is a great man after all.

"Frank's Nightmare"
(ALHAMBRA)

A Dream—
It's a scream—
On the screen.

"A Wonderful Lamp"
(PYRAMID)

A fantastic comedy in which the "Dook" has his wishes gratified.

"Cotton Industry"
(NOLEGE)

Instructive study of our Cotton Industry.

"A Man for A' That"
(PUNCHINELLO)
Featuring Tom Ward

A count changes clothes with his valet, causing lots of trouble, but winning a girl.

Dramas—Ones, Threes and Sixes Comedies—Two Styles of Ones Heralds and Photographs

In justice to you as exchange men and exhibitors of motion pictures, we told you last week how our exchanges began their first week's release of Kriterion Service. Our men are sending us this special information by wire and we are publishing it as we receive it without any embellishments.

Another of our exchange men sent us the following telegram:

"Closed 44 exhibitors. Have contracts to be signed to-day for ten more, making total of 54 customers of the Kriterion Program. Exhibitors are very enthusiastic and more than pleased with the Kriterion pictures."

A wire like that rings true, doesn't it? It is simply another proof that Kriterion Service is the greatest achievement in the history of the film business.

Get in touch with us at any of our exchanges. We want you to know us. Our welcome to you is always broad enough to show our future releases at any time. We leave the question of taking our service entirely to your judgment.

Make Reservation now for Kriterion ★ Brand

KRITERION

1600 Broadway New York City

AMERICAN.

COALS OF FIRE (Jan. 27).—John Vincent, a man of wealth, is obsessed with love and ambition for Ben, his son. He neglects his daughter, Mary, and after the death of Mrs. Vincent the girl leads a lonely life until her marriage to Henry Love. Later, Vincent realizes his hopes for Ben when he makes him junior partner in the firm. On an inspection tour of the factory, however, young Vincent is stabbed and killed by a fanatical employee called Mad John. Mary takes her little boy and girl and rushes home to comfort her grief-crazed father. He has a stroke and loses his memory. It seems to him that Mary's son is little Ben. He lives over the past with his grandchild, whom Mary allows to comfort him to the end.

THE LAW OF THE WILDS (Two Parts—Feb. 1).—Frank Storm and Steve Baker are prospectors and partners. Both are in love with Jennie, the unhappy wife of Pete Lear, trapper and suspicious character. But while Baker annoys her with familiarities, Storm keeps his real feelings a secret. On one occasion, however, he defends her from Baker's unwelcome advances and later, confessing to her that it were best for him to go away, is discovered by her husband in what appears to him a compromising attitude. Lear attacks Storm. Meanwhile, the sheriff arrives with his posse, tracing the thief who has robbed the food caches of many trappers and prospectors in the region. Lear, taken unawares, leaps out of the window, where he is killed by a shot from the sheriff's gun.

IMITATIONS (Feb. 3).—Ruth and Harry are childhood playmates. The coming of Dora, a little girl from the city, however, makes trouble between them. Harry continues to find his new friend more fascinating, and as the years pass he grows to believe himself in love with the clever Dora. But Ruth cannot forget. When she is a young woman she visits Dora, with whom she has kept up the friendship. She is convinced then that the city girl is only playing with Harry's honest love. Skillfully, Ruth, who, though country bred, is by by no means stupid, arranges things so that Harry begins to suspect the truth. Little by little he reviews the past, and the present appears in a clearer and less rosy light. Then, he sends Dora a bouquet of flowers and a ring, both imitation; and she reads his meaning—that he has waked up to the fact that her affection for him also is mere imitation. Harry and Ruth renew their childhood romance, which is soon crowned by marriage.

BRONCHO.

SHORTY'S ADVENTURES IN THE CITY (Two Parts—Feb. 3).—After the round-up the ranchman sends Shorty to the city in charge of some cattle. Arriving in the city and having settled up his employer's business, Shorty leaves to see the sights. He meets Madge, a flashy dame, and she takes him to a restaurant to dine. She and the waiters do Shorty right. They get him drunk and rob him of his wad.

After shooting up the restaurant Shorty goes on his way. He gets into a fight with a party of gangsters in trying to protect Nell, a working girl, from them. This fight is witnessed by Brady, manager for Bull King, a prizefighter, and, seeing in Shorty a new protege, Brady makes him an attractive proposition. Shorty accepts and enters the ring with Kid Mason. The Kid is afraid of Shorty's punch and his manager doctors the Kid's gloves with plaster of paris. Shorty is getting the worst of the fight when he orders the Kid's gloves examined. New gloves are ordered and Shorty delivers the Kid a knockout blow. Brady tries to persuade Shorty to stay in the business, but he says back to the ranch for him. At the railroad station he meets the Kid, who starts to jeer at him. From the back of the observation car Shorty throws his rope and lassoes the Kid, and the picture finishes with the Kid dangling along after the fast-moving train.

DOMINO.

A MODERN NOBLE (Two Parts—Feb. 4).—Ludwig Von Hoffman, son of a German nobleman, elopes with Gretchen, daughter of Schultz, the innkeeper near "Old Heidelberg" college. Ludwig's father disowns him because he has disgraced the family name, and Ludwig becomes a fisherman. The boy writes to his father with the hope of effecting a reconciliation with him. The reply to the letter falls into the hands of Gretchen, who realizes the only way to have the son forgiven is to put herself out of the way. She leaves a note for Ludwig telling him her reason for drowning herself. Gretchen is rescued by the Count's driver and taken to their hotel. The Count realizes the only way to bring back his son's reason, which he lost when he finds Gretchen's note, is to forgive and forget, which decision he puts into effect.

KAY BEE.

COLLEGE DAYS (Two Parts—Feb. 5).—Nell Saunders is the daughter of an innkeeper in a college town. She is loved by Glen Dale, the quarterback of the college team, and also Pierson, the fullback. Jimmy Cripps, an odd character, is the devoted friend of Nell and is also a great student of military strategy. Nell's father desires her to marry Dale because he is wealthy and a good customer. The girl refuses and is particularly angry because Dale has met and roughly handled Cripps, who is returning from the village with a bunch of Nell's lingerie in a package and which is thrown over the road.

An important match is about to be played with the Indians. Dale is discovered drinking and bounced from the team. He offers his services to the Indians and is made a member of the team by disguising himself as an Indian. Jimmy Cripps volunteers to teach the college eleven certain plays which he has learned from his military book, and they win the game. Dale is injured and discovered. The Indian team and Dale are run out of town. The story ends with the winning of a large sum of money by Cripps, which has been bet by Dale, and the reunion of Nell and Pierson.

MUTUAL.

MUTUAL WEEKLY NO. 4 (Jan. 28).—European war illustrations. Latest pictures from the seat of war. French soldiers live in straw huts near the battle line. German equipment abandoned on French battlefield. The oil ship "Vedra" is destroyed off Barrow with loss of 35 lives. More guns are rushed to the front. The city of Baocarat, in Eastern France, after the bombardment.

New York's Newest Hostelry, "The Hotel de Gink," Is Opened by Jeff Davis for Unemployed Hoboes.—Subtitles, "Mullivan Stew," "The Jungle Court," "Chicago Shorty" is pinched by a "Bull" for spitting on the floor.

Trans-Continental Auto Trip Is Started. The first car to arrive in San Francisco wins a prize of $5,000.

U. S. S. "New York" Sails for Mobilization in Southern Waters Previous to Trip Through the Canal.

30th Infantry, Back from Alaskan Wilds after Record-breaking Trip Through the Panama Canal.—Subtitles, Leaving San Francisco, Escorted by New York's Crack Seventh Regiment, they are reviewed by Mayor Mitchel and Major-General Wood.

Torpedo Boat Destroyer "Cushing" Takes to the Water at Quincy, Mass.

Deputy Sheriffs Fire on Strikers at Cartaret, N. J., Killing One and Seriously Injuring Nineteen.

Shipwreck of the S. S. "Eureka," Torn to Pieces by Tumultuous Waves on the Rocks of Point Bonita, near San Francisco.

Miss Irene Sanden Performs Brahm's Hungarian Dance for the Black Cross Society's "Feed-America-First" Ball.

The "Snow Birds" and the "Polar Bears" Play Annual Game on the Ice at Washington, D. C., Umpired by Congressman Richard Pearson Hobson.

Chariot Races.—Ancient Sports of Old Rome Are Revived at Pasadena, California's Annual Rose Carnival.

MENGER & RING
304 W. 42d St., New York City

FEATURE FILM STORIES

WORLD FILM CORP.

"MONEY" (Keanograph—Five Parts).—The drama takes as its period the year 1921 and relates how John D. Maximillian, commonly known as "Croesus," has acquired control of the money interests of the world, together with a majority stock in all public utilities. At the opening of the photodrama, the wheat market of the world has passed into his hands. He is assisted in his financial operations by Cyrus L. Livingston, his junior partner and chairman of his board of directors, better known as his financial cabinet. "Croesus" has an only daughter, Ruth, from whom all knowledge of her father's financial transactions and oppression of the poor has been withheld.

For the first time she visits the great steel works of her father in company with some lady friends and escorted by Livingston. During the visit to the plant, Livingston absents himself from the party, taking advantage of the fact that George Crosby, the superintendent, is conducting Ruth and her friends through the plant, and that Hope Ross, stenographer and sweetheart of Crosby, is alone in the superintendent's office. Livingston has on several occasions been offensive in his attitude towards Hope, and he now seizes her roughly and insults her just as Crosby returns in time to defend his sweetheart. He gains Livingston's enmity and is about to be discharged when Ruth Maximillian intervenes and assures Hope that in the future she will be protected from any offense on the part of Livingston. Ruth and Hope become friends. At this time Ruth does not know of the friendship between Hope and Crosby, whom she (Ruth) admires.

The struggle of the union laboring classes against the oppression of Maximillian reaches a climax in a great strike, which begins at the Maximillian steel works. Maximillian has refused the demands of the union laborers, and to further show his utter contempt for their threats orders a banquet at his palace to outrival the famous feast of Bacchus. While the banquet is in progress, the union forces assault the palace. Ruth has left the orgie in disgust, followed by Livingston, who in an intoxicated condition, roughly assaults her just as the strikers have broken into the palace. Crosby, who was with them attempting to dissuade them from violence, rescues Ruth from the drunken junior partner of her father. Crosby is seriously injured during the struggle and is later carried into the home of his sweetheart, Hope Ross.

A week later Ruth Maximilian, accompanied by Hope, with whom she has taken up charitable work in the lowly quarter of the city, visits the Ross home, where Crosby is now convalescent. It is here she realizes the affection existing between Crosby and Hope. Later Livingston, in conjunction with Johanoson, an anarchist, plot to abduct Ruth, with the idea of holding her for ransom. Livingston has been completely stripped of his fortune by "Croesus" on account of his insulting behavior on the night of the banquet. Hope, who is wearing a cloak loaned her by Ruth, is mistaken for the latter and carried away on a vessel hired by the abductors. Word is carried to Crosby by Ruth and they follow the abductors in a machine. The chauffeur is wounded by a shot fired from the fleeting taxi, and Crosby continues the chase alone. He enlists the services of the police patrol. The yacht, upon which is Livingston, Hope and the anarchist, attempts to escape by running through the dangerous reefs of Devil's Gap.

The yacht is wrecked. Crosby swims from the police boat in time to rescue Hope after having engaged in a terrific struggle with Livingston, whom he forces beneath the water in the sinking vessel and drowns.

A great lightning storm sweeps over the city of New York. The palace of "Croesus" is struck and destroyed by flames. "Creosus," himself, struck by a falling column, falls to his death in a fountain situated in the court of his great palace. Ruth now assumes the reins of financial government and deals out justice and equity to all. The scale of wages is restored and Hope marries Crosby, who is now general manager of the Maximillian steel works.

WILDFIRE — (Shubert — Five Parts). — The story relates how Bob Barrington conducts a racing stable on Long Island without the knowledge of his daughters, Henrietta and Myrtle. Barrington is traveling in the West and meets John Keefe, a gambler. They play cards alone and Keefe kills Barrington and steals the bill of sale to his racing stable, leav-

"CABIRIA" STARS

BERTA NELSON

DAVESNES EDOUARD

AMERIGO MANZINI

ITALEA MANZINI

CHELLINI AMELIA

ALEXANDRE BERNARD

DANTE TESTA

LYDIA QUARANTA

Itala Film

Itala Film

[illegible] IN NEW PRODUCTIONS HAVE MADE SPLENDID IMPRESSION

LYDIA QUARANTA

(CABIRIA HERSELF)

IN THE NEW 4-ACT DRAMA

"The Treasure of the Louzats"

RECEIVES HIGHEST PRAISE FROM HARRISON, DENIG, PROCTOR, CONDON AND OTHER CRITICS IN LEADING MAGAZINES

BOOKING DEMANDS

IN TERRITORY ALREADY SOLD INDICATE GREAT RETURNS FOR BUYER AND EXHIBITOR ALIKE, WHILE UNSOLD STATES ARE YET TO BE HEARD FROM

MONEY EASILY MADE

RENTING AND EXHIBITING

ITALA PRODUCTIONS

EXPERTS AND THE PUBLIC AGREE THEY SURPASS IN QUALITY AMERICAN FILMS AND, HAVING BEEN "MADE FOR AMERICA," THEY DO NOT APPEAR "FOREIGN."

WRITE FOR LIST

OF OPEN STATES ON THE NEWEST PRODUCTIONS ALSO ADDRESSES OF OFFICES WHERE "CABIRIA" AND OTHER RELEASES MAY BE SECURED

Simply Address

HARRY R. RAVER, Manager

ITALA FILM CO., of America

New Address

110 W. 40th Street, NEW YORK

ing a sheet of the inventory on the floor, together with a curious cigarette holder, taking all the papers of the dead man. There is an inquiry as to the cause of the death conducted by John Garrison, the young sheriff. The verdict is suicide, the body being unidentified. Gorman, a pal of Keefe's, is the only person who knows the truth.

Keefe goes East and claims the stables, but Matt Donovan, the trainer, suspects foul play. Keefe changes his name to Duffy and becomes infatuated with Henrietta. John Garrison also goes East and sees Henrietta and thinks he recognizes in her a striking resemblance to the picture found in the watch of the dead man. Keefe and Garrison meet at the home of Henrietta. Keefe denied his indentity, but Garrison incidentally shows him the curious cigarette holder and Keefe betrays himself. Garrison sends West for the watch and the missing sheet of the bill of sale. He starts with the watch for the home of Henrietta but loses it en route. It is found by a street beggar and pawned. Henrietta happens to be passing the pawshop and is attracted by an article in the window. She enters and finds her father's watch with her picture in it. She overhears Keefe tell Donovan that he bought the stable of her father and her suspicions are aroused. She shows Keefe the watch and picture and he again betrays himself and she is certain her father met with foul play. While playing tennis with Henrietta the missing sheet of the bill of sale falls from the pocket of Garrison and she finds it and the mystery deepens. Henrietta resolves to take no one into her confidence. She visits the office of Keefe, secretes herself outside the window, and overhears a conversation between Keefe and Gorman. They leave the office and she finds the complete bill of sale and compares it with the missing sheet. Ralph Woodhurst, the fiance of Myrtle, has been induced by Keefe to bet large sums at his pool room.

The day of the big handicap is approaching and Wildfire, the crack filly in the Keefe stable, is being backed to win. Keefe sends Donovan to rob Henrietta of the missing sheet, but she covers Gorman with a gun and the plan is frustrated. Henrietta, on the day of the big race, seeks out John Garrison, and accuses him of being in collusion with Keefe or Duffy. She shows Garrison her proofs, the watch and the missing sheet. Garrison tells her the truth. Keefe realizes that he must flee the country and he prepares for a final coup. He backs another horse to win, bribes Chappy Raster, the rider of Wildfire, to use the whip on the mare, which will cause her to sulk, if the flag on the racing stable is up when the horses start. Henrietta overhears the plot and goes to the office, where she has a terrific struggle with Keefe. She succeeds in pulling down the flag while fighting Keefe, Garrison coming to her assistance and dragging Keefe down the stairway, where a furious struggle ensues. The story closes with Henrietta on the roof, the flag down, in the arms of her lover, Wildfire having won the race.

KRITERION SERVICE.

(The following are synopses of the pictures to be released on the Kriterion Program during the week of Monday, February 1 to Saturday, February 6, inclusive).

$500 REWARD (Paragon).—David Garth, a country physician, earns only enough for a bare existence. His daughter, Winifred, takes care of their home. The doctor distrusts modern medical science and refuses to have anything to do with it. He is, naturally, infuriated when he learns that Kent, a young surgeon, has come to the village. The old man is further incensed when he learns that Winifred has taken a liking to Kent and refuses to meet him. Despite her father's prejudice Winifred and Kent become infatuated with each other and hold clandestine meetings.

Dr. Garth falls into the snares of Shrubbs, a money lender. Shrubbs has a note of the doctor's and threatens to foreclose on the cottage. Tom, a servant of Garth's, steals the note from Shrubbs' office. Kent, in response to a letter from Winifred, leaves his office while Tom is committing the theft. The next morning the theft is discovered and Shrubbs offers $500 reward for anyone who will identify the thief. One of the townsfolks volunteers the information that Kent left the building late in the evening and the doctor corroborates the statement.

Meanwhile Tom offers the note to Winifred and she tells him to return it. He leaves town at the same time Kent is accused of the robbery. Tom rushes back to Winifred and tells her of the arrest. They go to town to vindicate Kent. Tom declares his guilt and demands the $500 as a reward for finding the thief, himself. Shrubbs is compelled to pay and Kent makes him promise not to prosecute Tom. The doctor consents to the marriage of Kent and Winifred.

PERCY MADE GOOD (Santa Barbara).—Percy calls for Betty and takes her out in his auto. Father takes another auto and pursues them. He catches up with them and makes Betty come home with him. Percy follows and goes to Betty's home; they plan to elope. Percy decides that if he is going to be married he needs more money, so he goes to the bank. After a short talk with the clerk, Percy draws out all of his money. He goes back to Betty's home and finds a check of father's on the floor. He takes it and rushes to the bank to have it cashed. Father returns for the check and cannot find it. When Percy returns he tells father the bank failed at two, but that the check has beencashed. Father after a little persuasion gives Betty to Percy and all ends well.

AN INTERCEPTED GIFT (Alhambra).—Al Ross, an outlaw, steals a string of pearls belonging to Captain Torres and gives them to his sweetheart, Alice Montrose. Captain Torres sees the pearls on Alice's neck and asks where she got them. She tells him Ross gave them to her. Torres threatens to arrest them both unless she marries him. She refuses and both are arrested.

When in prison, Torres again offers to free Ross if she will marry him. She consents and tells Ross of the agreement. Ross, feigning illness, gets the guard within his cell, overpowers him and escapes. He follows Torres and Alice and rescues her. They shoot Torres and his guards and ride over the border.

THE BOOB'S ELOPEMENT (Thistle).—The Boob and his sweetheart, Rena, plan to elope, and Rena's father overhears the plans. Freddy, a lunatic, escapes from the asylum. He arrives at the farm and makes father exchange clothes with him. He then follows Rena and the Boob. After many adventures the "Nut" catches up with them and when they discover he is perfectly harmless they go to a minister and are made one. Freddy is led back to captivity, and father thinks he might as well give his consent and blessings.

TAINTED (Santa Barbara).—Mr. Richmond is the man with the taint; Peter McGraw, the man with the liquor taint; and Dr. Jackson the man with the gambling taint. Mrs. Richmond gives birth to a child and it is born blind. Richmond begs Dr. Jackson to keep this from his wife. At the same time Mrs. McGraw, a washwoman, gives birth to a child and the doctor suggests they change the babies. The change is made unknown to all except Richmond and the doctor.

Twenty years later we find the babies grown, one to womanhood, the other to manhood. McGraw is killed by a fall from the stairway. The girl, blind, sells flowers. Dr. Jackson, heavily in debt from gambling, demands more money from Richmond or says he will divulge the secret. Richmond, now paralyzed, tells him that it is the last, as he is going to right the wrong done the children. Dr. Jackson is discovered cheating and shoots himself, so Richmond is the only one knowing the secret.

In the meantime Robert Richmond has met the girl and fallen in love with her. He takes her to his home and his parents consent to their marriage. Richmond, knowing all will be well, does not tell the secret and all ends happily.

CAPTURING STELLA (C K).—The sheriff of a small Western town, in love with Stella, is being jollied because of his inability to locate a horse thief who is causing a great deal of trouble in the neighborhood. Stella meets the horse thief, and not knowing who he is consents to go to a dance with him. The sheriff seeing them together becomes jealous. Going home from the dance he sees a fellow put a note under the wheel of an abandoned wagon. When the fellow has left he takes the note, reads it and discovers that the fellow Stella is infatuated with is the horse thief. Stella is taken home by the thief and he takes her to his cabin. The sheriff follows and is shot in the arm by the rustler. The sheriff, sitting at the table, rolls a cigarette, throws the tobacco in the thief's face, blinds and overpowers him, then turns to the girl. The posse arrive and lead the thief away, while the sheriff and his sweetheart embrace each other.

THE ADOPTED BABY (Monty).—A baby is abandoned on the doorsteps of a wealthy family. The child of the house discovers the baby and, thinking it more to her liking than her dolls, decides to take and keep it in her doll house. Finding it difficult to keep the baby without detection, it is brought to the house. The father and mother decide to adopt the baby in place of one that is gone.

FRANK'S NIGHTMARE (Alhambra).—Frank introduces Fred, his pal, to his fiancee, Rena, and becomes jealous. This jealousy is increased when he finds Fred looking at Rena's picture. He goes to bed and, falling asleep, dreams. The story on the screen then shows Frank's nightmare. Fred climbs out of bed, dresses and leaves the room. Frank follows in his pajamas. Suspecting Fred of planning to elope with Rena, he stays close behind. This is exactly what Fred has planned, and when Rena refuses, he carries her off. After saving her from Indians, highwaymen, counterfeiters, and Fred's hired assassins, Frank wakes up to find himself being shaken by Fred, and wants to know what the trouble is.

THE FOSTER BROTHER (Trump).—Paul Burke is an adopted son of Dr. Burke. The doctor had promised the dying wife of a drunkard and gambler to care for the child. Paul has three cuts upon his wrist which he carries through life as a result of his father's fury while in a drunken frenzy. Edwin Burke, the doctor's son, is in love with Edith, a ward. Paul becomes jealous and goes out to a gambling den. While playing poker he is caught cheating by the owner of the den, Paul's real father. The gambler recognizes his son by the marks on his wrist. He takes advantage of the fact that the young man is in debt and has cheated at cards. He persuades Paul to steal a formula of a cancer cure which the doctor has discovered. While Paul and his real father are in the home of the doctor to secure the valuable data, Paul turns a gun on him and in the fight that follows he is injured.

The police are after the gambler and trap him in the laboratory, where he is killed in a skirmish. Paul, although inheriting the gambling instinct from his father, saves the formula and proves that his present home environment has helped make a man of him.

A WONDERFUL LAMP (Pyramid).—This is a story showing the adventures of a tramp who dreams he finds an old lamp. There suddenly appears before him a genie who says that he is the slave of the lamp and anything that he desires, as he is now possessor of the lamp, he will procure for him. After many delightful adventures the tramp awakens to find a policeman standing over him.

COTTON INDUSTRY (Nolege).—This is an interesting film showing the latest inventions for the betterment of the cotton industry.

THOUGHTS OF TONIGHT (Navajo).—A young Easterner helps a girl who is getting water from the brook and learns she is the daughter of Mountain Charlie, a guide. He is accepted as a boarder during his visit in the West. Black Steve, a half-wit, takes a dislike to him. During a hunt, Mountain Charlie and the Easterner take different trails and the Easterner, mistaking him for a deer, shoots him. Thinking that he is dead, the Easterner rushes to the cabin for assistance and arrives just as Black Steve has about overpowered the girl.

Mountain Charlie, coming to his senses, wanders away. When the Easterner and the girl arrive upon the scene they find him gone and upon their return to the house they find Black Steve has unbound the cords around him and escaped. That night the half-wit sets a bear trap for the Easterner and when he goes to feed the horses the following morning he is caught in it. The half-wit goes for the girl.

At a surveyor's camp, to which Mountain Charlie has wandered, he picks up a picture of his home and recognizing it regains his memory and rushes for home. The Easterner writes a note begging for help and ties it in the horse's neck. Mountain Charlie stops the horse, reads the note, jumps on the horse's back and starts for home at top speed. He arrives in time to save the girl from Black Steve. They bind Steve and leave him in the back of the house. Hearing screams, they run back to find that he has been bitten by a rattlesnake and is dying.

A MAN FOR A' THAT (Punchinello).—Vera's father insists she marry Count Di Lucca, a man whom she has never seen. Vera objects to the marriage. A persistent suitor also hears of this proposed marriage and schemes to kidnap the Count and substitute an organ-grinder in his place. Di Lucca, desiring to ascertain the girl's worth, changes place with his valet. As a result the valet is kidnapped and when the count arrives, after being delayed, he finds the household in a turmoil because of the antics of the supposed Count. His valet escapes from the office in which the kidnappers put him and hurries to the house. After due explanations the count reveals himself and all are made happy. Vera has no further objections to the marriage and we see her resting contentedly in the count's arms.

THANHOUSER SYNDICATE CORP.

ZUDORA (Episode Eleven—Reels 21 and 22—"A Message From the Heart").—Soon after the robbery of Zudora's apartment, as set forth in Episode Ten, which she had taken after the fire that had destroyed her house, circumstances arose which made it necessary for her to change her quarters. In some mysterious fashion her income is cut off, which, as its sources have already been something of a mystery to her, made it difficult to trace. John Storm and Jim Baird, however, have taken the task upon themselves, while the strangely missing Hassam Ali, whom many believe dead, but whose remains were not found in the burned house, is not there to answer the many pertinent questions which

The Alliance Films Corporation

Announce for Release

"The Picture the Public Demanded"

THE NEW

WIZARD OF OZ

A Spectacular Film Version of the Famous Extravaganza Which Played for Eight Years Throughout the Country.

Produced under the Personal Direction of L. Frank Baum by the Oz Film Company.

This is the One Real Sensation and Money Getter of the Season.

Have You Played These Alliance Features?

"IN THE SHADOW" with GORDON DE MAINE and WM. A. WILLIAMS
From the novel by JOHN HYMER

'THE CHOCOLATE SOLDIER" with TOM RICHARDS and ALICE YORKE
Adapted from BERNARD SHAW'S Famous Play, "Arms and the Man"

"THE LAST CHAPTER" with CARLYLE BLACKWELL
By RICHARD HARDING DAVIS

"THE TRUTH WAGON" with MAX FIGMAN and LOLITA ROBERTSON
From the play by HAYDEN TALBOT

"THE LAST EGYPTIAN" with J. FARRELL McDONALD and VIVIAN REED
From the book by L. FRANK BAUM

"HEARTS AND FLOWERS" with MRS. THOMAS WHIFFEN
From the celebrated play of the same name

"THE MAN WHO COULD NOT LOSE" with CARLYLE BLACKWELL
By RICHARD HARDING DAVIS

"THE HOOSIER SCHOOLMASTER" with MAX FIGMAN and LOLITA ROBERTSON
From the great American story by EDWARD EGGLESTON

"WHEN FATE LEADS TRUMP" with OCTAVIA HANDWORTH
From the novel by JOHN HYMER

"THE KEY TO YESTERDAY" with CARLYLE BLACKWELL
From the novel by CHARLES NEVILL BUCK

"THE PATH FORBIDDEN" with OCTAVIA HANDWORTH
From the novel by JOHN HYMER

"AT THE OLD CROSS ROADS" with ESTHA WILLIAMS
From ARTHUR C. AISTON'S famous play

These Features can be obtained at all of the twenty-three Alliance Exchanges situated at strategic points in all parts of the country as previously advertised. If you are not familiar with the Alliance Programme, get acquainted—it will mean money in your pocket. Write to Your Nearest Alliance Exchange. Do It Now!!

ALLIANCE FILMS CORPORATION
130 WEST 46th ST. N.Y.

the young lawyer and the newspaper man would have liked to have asked. So it happens that Zudora, refusing all financial aid from her friends, goes to live with a certain Mrs. Ramsey, a kindly woman, and an old friend of her mother's.

In the meantime, the affairs of Madame Duval and her band of conspirators have prospered. Having identified Zudora as the daughter of the owner of the Zudora claim, they plot against her, as they have designs of their own on this fabulously wealthy mine. Baird and Storm both suspect that she has had a principal part in depriving Zudora of her fortune, but as yet neither of them has obtained the slightest evidence against her. In her Grecian salon, Madame Duval is constantly surrounded by a veritable court, her satellites being her principal aids in the numerous evil schemes in which she is the central ngure.

It happens that on this particular day the band are gathered together for an especial purpose. As they chat, the cleverly constructed fountain in the center of the salono signels that a newcomer is about to enter, and Captain Radcliffe, most favored of Malam Duval's many suitors, steps to the secret elevator behind the portieres and admits three of the rougher members of the band. The three confer with their fair chieftainess. Then Madame Duval steps to a secret vault, adroitly hidden in a pillar, and brings forth a bag which fairly bulges with diamonds. They are the gems which Bruce has brought. The brilliants are spread upon a table, where they glisten and glow like live things.

Captain Radcliffe draws a heart with a dagger through it on a piece of paper. This he passes around the circle, and each member holds it, while their beautiful leader writes her initials within. She gives a few brief instructions to the three newcomers, who then take their departure. They do not know that Jim Baird has trailed them thither, nor that he again follows them as they leave the house. For Baird has hit upon a clue. He knows that Bruce, whom he sought to trail from the steamer, later being made captive by some of the band, as told in Episode Ten, has brought to America diamonds from the Zudora properties in South Africa. So when he trails the three men to a diamond cutter's, he feels that he is close to a solution of the mystery. How to observe their dealings with the diamond cutter is a problem, but Baird, never at a loss in time of need, procures a rope, ascends to the roof of the building and lowers himself down to a point where he can peer in through the window at the doings of the trio.

Meanwhile, John Storm, also following the devious paths of the conspirators, might have been found in the office of Tom Hunt, the detective, carefully scrutinizing some scraps of burned paper which Zudora had found in an old trunk, one of the few things rescued from the fire. He gets some information, which he sends to Tom Hunt,' which interests that astute individual mightily. Straightaway the detective sets forth on another line of inquiry.

While all these things are happening, Zudora, never suspecting the vital events that are taking place, sits safe at home, toying thoughtfully with a bracelet which has just been given her by John Storm. Suddenly, there appears at the window a startling apparition, bearing a heart-shaped shield, on which is written a warning message, bidding her to flee the country on pain of worse befalling her. But before the girl can call for aid the spectre vanishes.

In the meantime, Tom Hunt has not been idle. Acting on the information he has received, he trails two of the band to the hut where he had rescued Baird and Zudora from their clutches a short time before. And there ensues another encounter, which is even more desperate than the first. At last, however, Hunt, by his superior agility, overcomes both burly ruffians, and, covering them with his revolver, puts handcuffs on their wrists. Then, having safely disposed of them, he goes to find Zudora, whither Storm and Baird have already gone, to tell her of their respective discoveries.

UNIVERSAL SPECIAL RELEASE.

THE MASTER KEY (Episode 11—Two Parts —Released Week of January 25).—It will be remembered that Wilkerson and Dore are both striving to recover the secret to the rich lode of ore in the mine, which secret is contained in a sea-chest, which Wilkerson has recovered from the depths of the Pacific Ocean.

Wilkerson's ship continues toward land, and he at once forces the chest open and makes a search for the paper, from which he hopes to learn the secret of "The Master Key" mine. He fails to find any such slip, but does find the Indian idol, which he casts aside with the other contents as being worthless.

Meantime, Dore's boat, which has been pursuing Wilkerson's vessel, reaches shore. Mrs. Darnell upbraids Wilkerson for his seeming stupidity, and another quarrel between them ensues. Members of the crew examine the seemingly worthless contents of the chest, and one of the sailors appropriates the idol among other articles, with a view to selling them in port.

Upon arriving in San Diego, Mrs. Darnell goes to a hotel, while Wilkerson remains to pay off the captain and crew. Dore's boat puts into dock, and, with the captain and Ruth, he hastens to find Wilkerson and the mysterious idol.

In the interim, the sailor, with his idol, goes ashore and seeks out a pawnshop where he may sell his treasures. On the arrival of Dore and Ruth at Wilkerson's boat another altercation ensues between the two enemies, the respective sea captains interfering. Wilkerson gives Dore the laugh, but the latter at once realizes that Harry Wilkerson has not found the papers.

Wilkerson goes into town to cash a check with which to pay off the captain. Dore thereupon questions the latter regarding the idol and is referred to members of the crew. He learns that one of the sailors had taken some of the articles in the chest, and search is at once continued. Wilkerson returns to the ship with the cash, and from the captain learns of Dore's inquiry.

Thus Wilkerson realizes that he has missed the clue to his search. He goes ashore to shadow Dore. A Hindu peddler visits the pawnshop to sell his wares, consisting of a few Oriental rugs. In the shop he sees the idol, recognizes it and hastens to his squalid quarters, where he holds it close to him in a pathetic manner. As he gazes at the little image it seems to dissolve from view, and a series of pictures of the past appear.

The Hindu sees himself as a watcher in a temple. A sailor enters the sacred confines and watches him roam about. He sees him standing before a sacred shrine. The Hindu turns from the visitor and takes up his religious duties where he had left off when he first saw the visitor. Later he notices that the sailor is gone, and, on walking to the shrine, in the performance of a sacred rite, he finds that one of the idols is gone. He immediately commences a search for it and, recalling the incident of the sailor, he runs forth and gives an alarm. He is severely censured by the high priest and is sent forth to find the idol.

He visits the wharves and when boarding one of the ships he peers through a porthole and in a cabin sees the sailor gloating over the idol. He moves nearer and the sailor, seeing him, thrusts the idol into his chest and closes the lid. Other sailors come along the dock and question the Hindu. The first sailor comes from his cabin and joins the party. Realizing that the Hindu is searching for the idol, the sailor tells his comrades to throw him overboard. The Hindu is thereupon seized and thrown into the water.

He swims ashore and, on being unable to board the ship again, is forced to watch her as she sails away. He returns to the temple and is told that he is banished until he returns with the sacred image. He returns to the wharves and boards another vessel.

The Hindu's vision then closes and Ruth and Dore are seen to enter the pawnshop with Wilkerson following close behind, although they are unaware of it. Ruth and Dore question the shopkeeper closely, but the latter evades their queries.

GLORIA AMERICAN CO.

SOULS ENCHAINED (Five Parts).—Alba was one of those rare passionate women who love but once in their lives, and, being thwarted in love, die. Alba's daring and her craving for excitement sought the sports of the air, and it was not long before she was acknowledged as the foremost aviatrix of the world.

Baron D'Oro had long since fallen a victim to her charms, but she only laughed blithely at his ardent wooing. One day as she returned from a record flight her eyes fell upon Romero Fanelli, who had been sent to the aviation field to report the news. Romero s own heart was set afire by the sparkle of Alba's eye. In a moment fate enchained them both, and thereafter love blotted out the world for them. Manfully did Romero struggle against the stress of passion because he was married, but it was all in vain.

Romero wrote a letter to Alba begging her to forget. When Alba reecived this message her heart was aflame with resentment and, to spite Romero, she yielded to the entreaties of Baron D'Oro and became his wife. She plunged into the gaieties of high society, she visited the glorious beauty spots of Italy, all to forget the memory of Romero Fanelli. In the midst of social pleasure, in the whirl of the dance, on the Grand Canal of Venice, in the theater, wherever she went, the face of Romero followed her. She saw him in Venice and, casting aside all womanly reserve, obedient only to the call of passion, she sought him out and, exercising all her siren arts, she conquered his strong heart, and the chains were forged again, this time never to break.

One day haunting remorse struck down Romero. He was taken ill and the doctor pronounced his life in danger. Alba went forth into the streets pawning her few belongings and even danced in the haunts of the underworld to get money with which to buy the means to restore her lover's health. When one day she returned with a hand-full of money she found that the soul had fled from the body of the man she had enthralled. With Romero gone she loathed life, and she knew her prayer for deliverance would be heard. She was taken to the hospital and the day after she was brought there the good sisters found her lifeless form upon the floor. The fingers of her right hand had closed in the stiffening grip of death about a small picture. Gently they loosened the dead woman's hold and found the portrait of Romero Fanelli.

ALLIANCE.

THE CHOCOLATE SOLDIER (Five Parts).—Major Spiridoff is in love with Nadina, daughter of Colonel Popoff, who, like the lover, is an officer in the Bulgarian army. The major's love dream is shattered by the declaration of war between Bulgaria and Servia, and he goes to the front after exacting from "the girl he left behind him" a pledge to remain faithful to him.

At the Servian Camp Lieutenant Bumerli, a young Swiss adventurer, joins the army as a volunteer. The two armies meet and the Servians are defeated. Lieutenant Bumerli escapes, hotly pursued, and is chased into the garden of Colonel Popoff. He climbs the balcony, which opens from Nadina's room. Nadina is about to retire for the night. He wins her sympathy, until she sees him eating his last chocolate drops. The Servians surround the house to search it. Nadina hides her chocolate soldier behind the curtains. Mascha and Aurelia aid in the deception and at last the soldiers withdraw. Mascha wants to see the fugitive. For three days and nights Bumerli has lived only on chocolate drops. Now the best in the house is none too good for him, and, though in the enemy's country, through the kindness of the three lonely women, he is permitted to spend the night as their guest.

Bumerli's dream. He thinks he has been captured by the enemy, but it is only a dream. The soldiers are still on guard, waiting in the hope of finding the fugitive. Bumerli tries to get away, but sees that the house is surrounded. Back to the three lonely women. He must have a disguise in order to get away. Aurelia, Nadina's mother, thinks of her husband's coat—a uniform of the Bulgarian army. Bumerli is provided with the garment. Nadina, Mascha, her cousin, and Aurelia each secretly slips a photograph into one of the pockets. The escape of Bumerli. The Bulgarians salute him as he passes them. Massakroff, a Bulgarian officer, however, is suspicious. Massakroff follows, but Bumerli forces him to jump off a steep cliff. To get rid of the coat, Burmerli pawns it.

Meanwhile peace has been agreed upon, and Bumerli and Popoff are both sent as delegates to sign the treaty of peace. After signing the treaty, Bumerli tells of his narrow escape at the hands of the Bulgarians. Three lonely women had aided him by lending him a coat. What a joke. "That old fool husband of hers would never know." The return of the heroes. Alexis and the Colonel tell of the amusing Captain Bumerli and how some Bulgarian women helped him to escape. Consternation—if the Colonel and Alexis should learn the truth. The Colonel wants his coat. It is missing. Bumerli, anxious to repay the favor done him, redeems the coat and determines to restore it to the three charming ladies who had aided in his escape. Bumerli visits the home of Colonel Popoff, ignorant of the fact that the ladies are his daughter, his wife and his wife's cousin. The recognition proves a mutual surprise. The Colonel gets his coat, but does not notice the photographs, which are still in the pockets.

The three women are worried about their photographs. Nadina asks Bumerli to return hers—"From Nadina to her Chocolate Soldier." He has never known it was in the coat. The same with Aurelia and Mascha. They attempt to recover the photographs from the Colonel's coat. Bumerli secures the photographs and hands them back, but gives each of the ladies the wrong one.

Meanwhile, Alexis prepares for his wedding with Nadina, and makes satisfactory financial arrangements with the Colonel. The wedding morn. Bumerli is a guest, but a sad one, for the girl who saved his life is about to be married to the enemy. The entrance of Massakroff creates a sensation, for he recognizes Bumerli as the man who had been chased in that very garden. Alexis sees the photograph which Nadina had given Bumerli. He demands an explanation, but Nadina gives him back his ring and breaks the engagement. The challenge. Bumerli and Alexis fight. Bumerli disarms his adversary, and the duel comes to a sudden end. They return after the conflict. Alexis and Mascha decide they are congenial to each other. Bumerli is about to be turned away as an unwelcome guest, but once more he visits the balcony where he had been saved. Nadina, too, is lingering on that balcony. The two lovers find out that they have cared for each other all the time, and Nadina gets her Chocolate Soldier.

State Rights Have Come Back

In less than one week the

LIFE PHOTO FILM CORPORATION

HAVE SOLD

THE ORDEAL, AVALANCHE and A MODERN MAGDALEN

TO

Electric Theatre Supply Company Philadelphia, Pa.	for { Eastern Pa. Delaware District of Columbia Maryland
Famous Stars Film Corporation Cleveland, Ohio	for { Ohio Kentucky
Liberty Film Renting Company Pittsburgh, Pa.	for { Western Pa. Western Va.
Casino Feature Film Company Detroit, Mich.	for { Michigan Wisconsin
Northern Film Company Pittsburgh, Pa.	for { Western Pa. Ohio Western Va. Kentucky
Celebrated Players Company Chicago, Ill.	for { Illinois Indiana

The above concerns have contracted for our output for the next twelve months.

There's a lot of luscious territory just ripe for our productions, still open.

If you are interested, write or wire us now.

LIFE PHOTO FILM CORP.

220 West 42nd Street, New York City

APEX.

THE PRICE OF JUSTICE (Four Parts).—Jim Beresford is a lieutenant, lately attached to the regiment commanded by Colonel Earle. Immediately after joining he is presented to the assembled guests at a bazaar held in the gardens of the Dean of Blankhampton, where he is introduced to Nancy, the daughter of Colonel Earle. She, not knowing his identity, remarks that she wants to meet "Beautiful Jim," adding that he is called by that title because he is "so ugly." Beresford's amazement and amusement show her the mistake she has made, and in explanations and laughter their acquaintance quickly ripens into something more important, at least so far as Jim is concerned.

Unfortunately, Nancy's brother, Tommy Earle, is a young scapegrace who has an intrigue with a barmaid in the neighborhood. One night after a scene at the mess, Tommy goes out and, in a spirit of bravado, gives to the girl a ring which is an heirloom of his family. This comes to the ears of Jim through his servant, Leader, and Jim informs Captain Owen, his friend, asking him as senior captain to reprimand Tommy and save the regiment from the disgrace prepared for it.

Owen buys the ring from the girl, who tells Tommy to whom she has sold it. Mad with anger, Tommy visits Owen and is treated with contempt, whereupon he seizes a golf club and kills Owen with it. Beresford is suspected of the murder, as the golf club is his, but there is no other evidence, and the verdict of the jury is "murder by some person or persons unknown."

In order to shield himself, Tommy throws suspicion on Jim, and writes a letter to his sister. There is a delightful scene in the regimental anteroom after a parade, in which Jim, Nancy and the Dean take part. Tommy, in the meantime, has been talking to his father, and on the departure of the Dean, Colonel Earle commands his daughter to forget Jim till he has cleared himself of suspicion.

Colonel Earle takes his daughter away. Afterwards Jim suspects Tommy, and finally gets a confession from him. But it is useless—disgrace to the regiment would ensue, the loss of Nancy must be faced, and with a set face he walks out of the room, leaving Tommy cowering on a settee. That evening Nancy visits Jim and upbraids him for saying nothing. Something he says gives her an idea and leads her to visit her brother, when she wrings a confession from him, which she makes him write, but again it cannot be used; her lips are sealed for her father's sake, so she puts the confession away unpublished.

The end comes quickly. Tommy is killed, Jim is wounded in action, and while in the hospital Nancy comes to him. In spite of Jim's protest she insists on telling her father the truth, and the picture closes as, hand in hand, they comfort the Colonel, whose pride in his dead son has been shattered, but who solaces himself with his love for his daughter and admiration for Jim's honor and constancy.

A LIFE AT STAKE; OR THE ARMSTRONG MYSTERY (Three Parts).—Sybil, daughter of Silas Armstrong, is aroused by a noise. She makes her way downstairs, and, alarmed at receiving no reply to her knocking at the door of her father's study, arouses the servants, who, upon forcing the door, discover the dead body of Silas Armstrong, and, in a semi-conscious condition, Meredith, Sybil's lover, grasping a weapon by which the old gentleman had apparently met his death. There is a knock on the door of a cupboard, and out comes George Fielding, Sybil's cousin, who appears to be overcome with grief at the sight before him. The police are summoned and Meredith is arrested for the murder.

Sybil, however, convinced of her lover's innocence, seeks the aid of Detective Kees. He examines the spot where the body was found, and accidentally touching a spring, is startled by a vivid flash, the origin of which he is unable to ascertain. He obtains Fielding's and Meredith's versions of the affair, and feels convinced that the latter is innocent, but is unable to solve the mystery.

At the trial, Sybil stated that her father objected to Meredith's proposal for her hand, and hasty words passed between them. Fielding stated that he attempted to pacify Meredith, but he was forcibly locked in a cupboard by the prisoner. Meredith said that he was returning to apologize to Silas Armstrong, when he was struck down from behind, and remembered nothing until arrested. Despite the evidence, he is found guilty and sentenced to death.

Sybil, unable to reside in her dead father's house, sells the furniture. Fortune now favors the detective, as he receives an invitation to spend the evening with a friend who had purchased a pedestal that originally stood in the room where the crime was committed. They examine it and discover a cleverly concealed camera, in which is a plate, which, when developed, reveals the form of Silas Armstrong, and bending over him with a weapon in his hand—George Fielding.

Kees is puzzled by the knowledge that Fielding was locked in the cupboard, which could only be fastened from the outside. He returns and discovers a means by which a person could get in the cupboard and lock it from the inside, while appearances would show that it had been fastened from the outside.

Uncertain how to proceed, he consults Lady Blakeley. She suggests that with the evidence of Sybil and Meredith, combined with the discoveries already made, they should have a film produced depicting the murder as they surmised it had taken place. This done, Lady Blakeley decides to exhibit it at a party to which she invites Fielding on the day preceding that on which Meredith's execution is to take place. Fielding taking his place among the visitors witnesses his own crime. Realizing that his secret is discovered, he escapes, and, rushing into the bedroom, attempts to escape from the window. His pursuers, however, are too quick for him, and they fire just as he is about to climb out of the window. The shot is fatal, and in his dying moments he confesses.

Their anxiety is not yet over, for they realize that Meredith has only two more hours to live. They hasten to the Home Secretary with the confession and obtain a pardon, and arrive at the prison just as Meredith is being led to the scaffold. He is released, but loses consciousness. At home he is informed that the real murderer has confessed, and he is once more a free man, entirely exonerated from blame.

HISTORICAL FEATURE FILM CO.

THE SHOOTING STAR.—Of course, every one loves pretty Flossie. She was irresistible. So you could not blame Frank for falling victim to her charms. He ascended into a seventh heaven of delight when she put her arms around him and tried to lead his clumsy feet through the maizes of the tango.

But Bert, the Darktown nimrod, upset his calculations by boasting of his prowess as a hunter. Flossie was impressed by Bert's story, much to Frank's disgust. Finally a shooting match was arranged, the winner to gain the hand of the dusky belle.

Bert practiced on the day previous to the big event and found that his mouth was a far better weapon than a revolver. He could not hit a warehouse with a gatling gun. But the thought of Flossie's dancing eyes quickened his brain, so with a bright new fifty-cent piece and a box of blank cartridges, he induced his bosom pal to move the sliding door behind the paper target, and "ebery time I shoot, you poke a hole."

The great day arrived and the whole town turned out for the big show. Frank shot carefully and well; Bert fired carelessly, but just as well. (His pal knows how to poke holes!) And so they tried three times, each time Frank shooting good, but somehow Bert shooting better—or rather the holes are poked closer the center of the target.

And suddenly light dawned upon Frank. Why should the torn shreds of the paper target, where the bullet passed through point outwards? And light also dawned upon Bert that it was time for him to beat it. He did, and the crowd after him.

Up the street, through the alley, around the corner, all pell mell after him. Over the sand dunes, down the hills, until, hardpressed, he was forced to take refuge in a cabin over which there was the glaring sign:

"Danger—Dynamite—Keep Out!"

One shot from Frank's revolver, and then—zip bing bam! Up went dynamite, cabin, Bert and all! Up, up, up and then down, down, down—down onto the back of a horse, and from thence with a thump to Mother Earth. Of course, Frank won Floss.

MONEY TALKS IN DARKTOWN.—Flossie is a lady, dusky and charming. Her admirers are numerous, but she experiences difficulty in deciding between Sam, the husky piano mover, and Jimmie, the dandy. With his little pile of savings, Sam buys Flossie a solitaire. Sam is as black as the ace of spades and thinks he will prove more acceptable if his skin is of a lighter hue. He purchases face bleach and hair straightener and applies them vigorously.

Flossie goes to "Uncle Isaac's" and learns that the prized solitaire is nothing but paste. As she is about to leave, stirred by revengeful thoughts, Jimmie the dandy, arrives and, seeing his opportunity, buys her a real diamond. Flossie immediately transfers her affections to Jimmie. In the meantime Sam is having a terrible time. His treatment is even more successful than desired. He awakens and discovers that his face is mottled and his hair stringy.

Indignantly he throws the cosmetics out of the window. They just miss Colonel Morgan, a sideshow owner. The Colonel rushes into the house and, finding Sam in his peculiar condition, offers him a job as wild man in his sideshow. Next day Sam is behind the bars at the County Fair. Jimmie and Flossie happen to stroll that way. When Sam sees them he breaks the bars and vanquishes his rival. Flossie decides that the color of Sam's face makes no difference—it's the color of his money that talks.

ALADDIN JONES.—Jonesy, dusky and shiftless, finds it much more pleasant to listen to the story of Aladdin as read by Buddy, his son, than to help Mandy with her arduous tasks. 'Tis washday, and after reluctantly grinding the wringer for his tyrannical wife, he decides that no washday can possibly be complete without a "bucket of suds." No sooner thought than done. The suds produce a peculiar effect and Jonesy drops off into a slumber with the story of Aladdin dominant in his dream mind.

As he wanders along he meets a patriarch dressed in flowing Oriental robes, who accosts him. "Come with me and I will make you rich," says the white bearded man from the East, at the same moment "with a simple turn of the wrist" changing Jonesy's apparel from a weather-beaten shirt and patched trousers to the gaudy pantaloons and turban of the Arab.

Jonesy follows the old man through the maizes of marvelous vegetation and experiences numerous surprises. At last he secures possession of the wonderful lamp with its supernatural powers, and escaping from the patriarch, brings to life the Genii, slave of the lamp.

Now truly he has become Aladdin Jones, for he possesses the art by which his least desire may be satisfied. He asks for Budweiser—it flows freely. He asks for money—it descends from the skies. He asks "fo' a shack to sleep in"—and is confronted by an Oriental palace of wonderful size and magnificance. He lies on a divan and is entertained by a charming dancer. But in all his glory the fearful image of his wife rises before him. He runs for dear life, followed by his infuriated spouse.

At last, with a cliff before him and his wife behind him, he chooses the lesser evil and plunges into—the washtub! All the Oriental splendor vanishes. He is plain Jonesy once more.

GENERAL FILM COMPANY.

THE WHITE MASK (Lubin).—The Duchess and Duke of Granville are social leaders of Brussels and favorites at the Court of King Leopold. The Duke, however, pays more attention to great speculative enterprises than court functions, and leaves the Duchess to her own sweet will as far as amusements and admirers are concerned, and she has many of both. Aside from the King himself, her most ardent admirer is Prince Nordoff, a Russian adventurer, and his attentions become so distasteful to her that she is compelled to rebuke him in the presence of a large company, thereby incurring his secret enmity.

One night a grand reception is given at the Palace of the Duchess, and, among other entertainments, the Duchess creates a sensation by giving a dance of great beauty and abandon, which creates the impression among her titled guests. While the festivities are at their height, the Duke is going over the accounts of his wildest financial enterprise, finds himself suddenly made bankrupt, and is taken home, where the splendid entertainment is brought to a sudden termination by the news that he is lying at the point of death. Left a widow, the Duchess finds herself penniless, with an idolized son, Victor, whom she determines shall be reared in affluence.

Accordingly, she places him in a school, presents herself for trial before a noted theatrical manager, and soon becomes the most famous dancer in Europe, under the title of "The White Mask." This soubriquet grew out of the fact that, not wishing to make public property of such a noble title as that of her dead husband, her performances have always been given with her face concealed behind a white mask, and not even her manager has the slightest notion of her identity. Attracting the attention of King Leopold, she is showered with many gifts from him, and is even honored by a banquet at the Regal Palace, where many notables pay her court. During the progress of the feast the King asks her to grant him the honor of permitting him to see her face, and she consents on condition that the disclosure shall be made only to him.

As they withdraw from the table, the other guests, quite as anxious as his Majesty to learn who "The White Mask" can be, prevail upon Nordoff, who is present, to act as a spy upon the King and his noted guest, so that they, too, may be let into the secret. When he returns, however, he is compelled to announce that it was impossible for him to see the face of the dancer as she lifted her mask for Leopold. But at the close of the banquet, as she was stepping into her carriage, he impertinently tore the mask from her face, for which act the indignant lady slapped him with her fan and reported him to the King. The next day the newspapers were full of glaring headlines announcing the identity of "The White Mask," but from that day she never appeared in public again, and disappeared from Europe.

Fifteen years elapse, and we find the former Duchess of Granville living in splendor in New York, as Mrs. Dean, a notable woman financier and leader of society. Her son, Victor, fresh

Cosmofotofilm Co

Trade Mark
London Film Co.

"Where the REAL FEATURES come from."
Presents the Peerless Productions of

THE LONDON FILM COMPANY
"The Victoria Cross," "The Black Spot"
"Incomparable Bellairs," "1914," etc., etc.

ADDRESS US AT World's Tower Bldg., 110 West 40th St., New York

Trade Mark
London Film Co.

Draw the Crowds with Tepco

The Enamel Products Co.
CLEVELAND OHIO, U.S.A.

Theatre Signs

The snappy Tepco Signs will do it. They attract the eye. Bright colors. Big, readable letters; always clean, neat and trim, they will decorate your theater entrance.
You can get them in any style, size or color. There are small signs reading Today, Coming, Program Changed Daily, Matinee Today, Admission 10c., or any other wording. Then there are large signs for the building—all the Tepco kind that last a lifetime—made by fusing special vitreous enamel on 20-gauge steel at a temperature of from 1,800 degrees to 2,000 degrees.

12 Tepco Signs, $5.00

Here is a chance to try the durable, washable Tepco Signs. A set of twelve 4 x 17 signs is ready for you now. It includes three signs reading "TODAY," one for each day in the week and two "COMING." Throw away the old torn, worn cardboard kind and get this Tepco set that can be thumb-tacked or put up permanently. Shipped C. O. D. with privilege of returning within one week if unsatisfactory. Don't get signs of any kind without first writing us.

The Enamel Products Company,
Eddy Road and Taft Ave. Cleveland, Ohio

NOTICE: ROSE E. TAPLEY and HUGHIE MACK OF THE VITAGRAPH COMPANY

Will Lead the Grand March
AT THE
First Annual Reception and Dance
OF THE
Moving Picture Machine Operators' Protective Union
Local Number 244
International Alliance Theatrical Stage Employees
At Krueger Auditorium
Belmont Ave., Newark, N. J. Music by Cadmus Orchestra
Friday Evening, February 5th, 1915
Tickets, 25 Cents Come and Enjoy Yourself

FOR SALE

The finest stock of single reels in the United States.

Prices from $4 Up

Perfect Condition—No Junk

Also a number of 3 and 4-reel features, both Negatives and Positives

DONALD CAMPBELL
145 West 45th Street, New York

MAKE 'EM YOURSELF SLIDES

Make them yourself. Written with pen and ink or typewriter. Three minutes to make a slide. Used for advertising slides, to announce future or feature programmes, for chorus slides when chorus slide is missing. We send four colors of gelatin. The slides look well and anyone can make them. They are handy also for announcing vaudeville acts. In fact, they may be readily used for anything you may wish to say to your audience.

For the sum of $3.50 we will send, by parcel post, prepaid and insured, the following:
24 cover glass, 1 package binder strips, 1 dozen mats, 1 instruction sheet, 1 form sheet and 50 strips assorted colors gelatin—enough for from 300 to 400 slides. Order now. Address:

UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO.
1733 West 9th Street Brooklyn, N. Y.

TURN YOUR ALTERNATING CURRENT INTO DIRECT CURRENT AND YOUR ALTERNATING RESULTS
INTO DIRECT PROFITS
THE Wotton REXOLUX
will turn the trick for Moving Picture Houses. Most economical and practical rectifier, consuming less current and making clear, sharp pictures.
Send for further information to
ELECTRIC PRODUCTS CO.
Cleveland, Ohio

from college and supplied with an abundant fortune, has become betrothed to Frances, only daughter of millionaire Blake, and his mother has given her hand to John Emerson, a well-known and very wealthy capitalist and promoter.

Nordoff and an associate named Von Stader have come to America to float a rubber enterprise in the United States, and have letters of recommendation to John Emerson. Before these letters are presented, however, the two men encounter Emerson and Mrs. Dean at the jeweler's, and at once recognize her. Von Stader insists that they both keep her secret inviolate, but Nordoff decides to apply it as one of the levers to secure the confidence of Emerson. Nordoff has won the friendship of the dashing widow Bryce, whom he finds most valuable as an assistant in perfecting his financial plan, for she has once been betrothed to Emerson, and is only too willing to approve any plan that may successfully blackmail Mrs. Dean.

At a reception given by Mrs. Dean to celebrate the coming union of four great fortunes, the first steps are taken toward the perfecting of their nefarious enterprise. Fearful of what the consequences of the disclosure of her true identity may be, Mrs. Dean permits herself to be morally blackmailed by the villainous Nordoff, and promises to advise Emerson to enter the financial schemes brought to America by him and Von Stader. But woman's jealousy thwarts the plans of the conspirators, for Mrs. Bryce is seen so much with Emerson during the evening that she excites the jealousy of Mrs. Dean, is called to account, and calls the guests together to inform them of an impostor sailing under false colors when Nordoff prevents her and takes her from the house. Nordoff is refused admittance to the Dean home, and word is sent to him to do his worst, since Mrs. Dean has decided not to carry out her bargain with him.

Nordoff and Mrs. Bryce repair to Emerson's office and tell him the story of "The White Mask," without telling who she had been before assuming that title. Emerson breaks his engagement with Mrs. Dean and tells her that he has resumed his severed engagement with Mrs. Bryce. The letter arrives when Mrs. Dean and Victor are together, and the impetuous youth rushes from the house to Emerson's residence, followed by his mother. The son arrives there before his mother, has a stormy interview with Emerson, who is about to strike Victor when he seizes a dagger paper knife from the table, defends hemself with it, and in the struggle to wrest it from the boy, the two fall to the ground and Emerson receives the weapon in his heart.

At the critical moment the mother arrives, finds Emerson dead, and hurries with Victor back to her now broken home. In an impassioned interview with him, she shows him that he must not sever the tie between him and the girl he loves, and must permit his mother to stand trial for the killing of Emerson. The thought is at once spurned by Victor, when his mother compels compliance by producing a vial of poison and swearing to kill herself. On the following day she is arrested for the crime. During all of the trial the heart-wracked son cannot speak because of his mother's threat, and his one comfort is his fiancee, Frances, who, in spite of the commands of her parents, leaves her home and clings to mother and son during the fearful ordeal. All of the evidence, save alone that of Von Stader, who tells the story of her heroic past, is against her, and the verdict is guilty. Then it is that the son can no longer be silent, and immediately upon the pronouncement of the word "Guilty," he avers his own guilt, and his heart-broken mother falls to the floor and is carried to an adjoining room, where she passes away just as Victor is being led to prison.

During the progress of the trial, the associates of the dead man Emerson discover that the business scheme of Nordoff is a fraud, and he and Von Stader are summoned before them. Nordoff refuses to make a single move toward reparation, but Von Stader, who learns for the first time of the perfidy of his associate, surrenders his entire fortune to preserve his hitherto unblemished reputation.

On the day of Mrs. Dean's death, Von Stader purchases a pair of handcuffs, and going to Nordoff's room, binds and gags him so that he may not escape and goes to report his case to the police. As he passes down the stairs he discovers that the hotel has caught fire through the explosion of a boiler. His first impulse is to save Nordoff, but, believing that this is the retribution selected by Heaven, he proceeds to the street and coolly watches the hotel burn to the ground. In due time Victor is tried and summarily acquitted.

PATHE EXCHANGE, INC.

"THE EXPLOITS OF ELAINE" (Seventh Episode—Two Parts—"The Double Trap").—Perry Bennett, former secretary of the slain Taylor Dodge, and now Elaine Dodge's suitor, and assistant in running the mysterious murderer to earth, is in his law office when his office boy presents a card with the inscription, "Mrs. Taylor Dodge." Bennett seems greatly perturbed, but is interrupted from the thoughts this card inspires by the entrance of Elaine, who has a sympathetic interest in the weeping woman she has just noted in the outer office. Elaine's query as to the woman's identity and business is answered by a written note from the woman, brought in by the office boy, in which she claims to be the lawful wife and widow of Taylor Dodge. Elaine, overcome, asks Bennett what it means, and is informed that the lawyer is aware of some scandal connected with her father. Weepy Mary takes Elaine to the church wherein she was married to Taylor Dodge to prove the truth of her words.

Craig Kennedy, the scientific detective, who is endeavoring to run down the super-criminal, receives a visit from "Gertie the Peach." Gertie tells him that her jewels have been stolen, and asks him to recover them. Kennedy realizes that it is all a ruse of the Clutching Hand, but resolves to see it through, first arming himself with a small metal box and a test tube. Elaine, Weepy Mary and her "son" arrive at the church, and Elaine is assured by the "minister" that he married Taylor Dodge to Weepy Mary. Once inside the church, the door is locked, and Elaine sees that she has been trapped. She is horrified at the sight of the Clutching Hand, who jeers and tells her that they will shortly be joined by Craig Kennedy, when both she and her sleuth will be checked forever in their search for the master criminal. In "Gertie's home" Kennedy is set upon by desperadoes, but paralyzes them with fright when he informs them that he holds a box of fulminated mercury, which if dropped will blow the whole neighborhood to atoms. He further cows the leader by threatening to inoculate him with the dread disease, leprosy, unless he is led immediately to the Clutching Hand's lair. The crook, his nerve gone, agrees.

Gertie, who has escaped, 'phones to the Clutching Hand, informing him of the failure of their scheme. Furious, he leaves the church, charging the bogus minister to guard Elaine. Kennedy and Jameson arrive, and Jameson is set to guard their informant, while Kennedy makes for the church. A deadly fight ensues, in which Elaine is felled and Kennedy wounded. The crook starts for the belfry with the wounded detective hot after him. Cornered on top of the steeple, the crook turns to give fight. Clinging to the Cross, Kennedy is fast losing strength, when a timely bullet from Elaine's gun topples his assailant to the ground, dead. Elaine and Kennedy, each devoutly grateful that the other has been saved, show the depth of their attachment in the first kiss of their love.

"THE EXPLOITS OF ELAINE" (Eighth Episode—"The Hidden Voice"—Two Parts).—Assisted by Craig Kennedy, the scientific detective, Elaine Dodge still seeks to bring the Clutching Hand to justice. Kennedy decides to connect the ultra-modern Vocaphone between his rooms and the Dodge home to assist in the detection of the master criminal or his aides. The Vocaphone not only hears like the well-known Dictograph, but enables one to talk back. He leaves his rooms, and the sinister genius of the underworld enters them. Elaine Dodge in her home comes accidentally upon the papers given her father by the Squealer, Limpy Red, informing against the Clutching Hand. She rings up Kennedy, and is answered in his rooms by the Clutching Hand, who feigns to be Kennedy, and tells her to put the papers back 'til he sees her in the evening. He then evolves a brilliant plan to detain Elaine in her shopping, in order to get time to effect the theft of the dangerous papers. He is assisted in this by fakers whose wiles cannot be detected but by one living among them.

Elaine is informed by an old settlement worker, however, that her sympathy is being wasted on a "starving" family, who are nothing more than professional paupers. In the meantime, an emissary of the Clutching Hand, disguised as a window cleaner, gains admittance to the Dodge home. He is permitted to proceed with his work and a butler is set to watch him. Elaine, homeward bound in her limousine, is further detained by "Double-jointed Johnnie," who throws himself before her car and feigns by contortion to be frightfully hurt. She rushes him off to a hospital, where a shrewd doctor recognizes the talented accident faker, and promptly kicks him out of the place. His purpose has been effected, however, for Elaine has been detained sufficiently to allow the Clutching Hand to execute his plans. The watching butler is eliminated by a pre-arranged 'phone call in another part of the house, and the Clutching Hand enters the Dodge library by the extension ladder of the pseudo-window cleaner. He is interrupted in his search for the incriminating papers by the long-delayed entrance of Elaine, who goes immediately to the secret panel to see that the evidence is safe. The malevolent criminal slips from behind the portieres and leaps at the unsuspecting girl from behind in a desperate effort to snatch the papers from her. He is assisted by his accomplice, who strives to silence the girl. Her vibrant, high-pitched voice, free for a moment, registers clearly in the Vocaphone on the wall. Kennedy, in his rooms, gets the signal, and, appreciating the dire peril of Elaine, he shouts back through the transmitter in such a way that the desperadoes, thinking they have been apprehended, make a hurried getaway without their coveted papers. Elaine and Kennedy, each at an end of the Vocaphone, indulge their sentiment in the very limited expression permitted by this marvel of science.

"COLONEL HEEZA LIAR—GHOST BREAKER" (Bray).—Colonel Heeza Liar has returned to our midst again, and we are sure a right royal welcome will be extended to him. The Colonel, who is undoubtedly the greatest rival of his contemporary, Baron Munchausen, enters into a new field of investigation—that of psychic research. He is the guest of honor of the Royal Society of Ghost-Chasers, who regale him with tales of hair-raising and harrowing experiences. They look for evidences of fear in his countenance, but only scorn radiates therefrom. Who ever heard of the doughty Colonel fearing a mortal, much less an immortal? To prove his utter disrespect for apparitions, he agrees to sleep at the ancient Castle Clare, owned by his friend, Lord Helpus. He enters his assigned chamber and prepares for a snooze. The magic hour of midnight at last rolls 'round, and in a moment the air is filled with weird and ghostly sounds. The banshees are at work. The Colonel, from his bed, gives vent to these thoughts: "If I could see who makes that din I'd bust his bloomin' coco in." The next moment he does see, and his blood suddenly turns to water and freezes at the dread apparition. Seeking to evade the midnight prowler, the now quaking Colonel rises from his bed and flees for his life; but nothing seems proof against the advances of his awful foe. Should the Colonel lock a door, the Ghost comes through the key-hole; should he crawl beneath the bed clothes, there also follows the shadow demon. Just as the Colonel is about to expire from fright, his life is saved by the ghost's mortal enemy, "One o'clock." With a final wail, the banshee hies itself to a neighboring graveyard. The Colonel breathes again.

THE CALL OF THE CHILD (Two Parts).—Ernest Schiller, a wealthy merchant, has the cherished ambition to secure as his son-in-law the Count De Grechy, a member of the nobility. His ambition is about to be realized, for the Count has accepted an urgent invitation to be Schiller's guest. His arrival is hailed with delight by the merchant, who offers the freedom of his home. Bertha, Schiller's daughter, does not experience the same enthusiasm which is manifested by her father. The reason for this is that she has pledged her heart and hand to Franz Rambauld, her sweetheart. The Count's attentions, therefore, are greatly distressing to Bertha. Nevertheless, through her father's insistence, the unfortunate girl is compelled to engage herself to the Count. To celebrate her engagement, her father gives an elaborate reception. During the festivities Bertha joins Franz, and they run away to be married. Three happy years follow, and a little child makes glad the heart of the parents.

Franz, through unfortunate speculation, becomes indebted to the Count, who insists upon being paid. To add to his distress, his child is stricken seriously ill, and only the attention of a celebrated specialist can save it. In her distress, Bertha is forced to humbly seek assistance from her mother. Successful in her quest, Bertha returns home. She arrives as her husband is pleading for more time to pay his debts. Realizing her husband's position, she pays the Count's agent with the money she has just received from her mother, forgetting her child's condition for the moment. The neglect proves fatal, and death claims their child. Overwrought by her grief, the mother's mind becomes unbalanced. Even after the child has been laid to rest, the little one still lives in the mother's imagination. Her sad condition breaks down the barrier between her father and herself. Thinking to ease her mind, Franz takes her to the plot where the child is buried. Returning home, she broods over the fact that her child lies in the cold ground, and, in spite of the fact that it is mid winter, she rises in the dead of night and starts for the child's grave; but the grim hand of death claims her ere she reaches her destination.

THE BOMB THROWERS (Pathe—Three Parts).—"Red Mike" Davis, a notorious bomb thrower, has been landed in jail through the activities of Lawrence, the district attorney. During his incarceration, dissension prevails among his lawless followers. Lawrence's wife, noting the great notoriety caused by "Red Mike's" final execution, fears that his gang may do her husband harm. In fact, "Red Mike's" followers have sworn to "get" his prosecutor. Soon after, Lawrence's child is taken ill, and causes great uneasiness in the household. Feverish and restless, the child hears the strains of Tony's hand organ and pleads for the music to be brought nearer. In answer to the mother's appeal, Tony consents to take his organ and play for the stricken child. The child is greatly amused by Tony and his pet monkey. The bomb

WHY SHOULD I BUY

THE HIGHEST PRICED SCREEN ON THE MARKET

This is the WHY!

QUALITY

It is built to order to meet the precise conditions of your house.

It is absolutely in one piece; without a seam.

It produces most beautiful pictures of depth, of brilliancy, and of clearness.

It uses the lowest amperage; pays for itself.

It pleases the public; pays you.

DAY AND NIGHT SCREENS, Inc., 110 West 40th St., New York

A clear picture

is as essential as a good scenario. Because the basic product is right the clearest pictures are on Eastman Film. Identifiable by the stencil mark in the margin.

EASTMAN KODAK CO.,

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

FOLLOW A LIVE WIRE

Loew's New York Theatre at Broadway and 45th St., covering more than half the block, has just been remodelled by this enterprising showman and all the blank walls have been made brilliant by our hand colored pictures in our SILVER FRAMES. HE MAKES THE EYE GLAD of all that pass by; that's his secret. Your lobby can perform the same mission for YOU. Wherever you are, you can have a BROADWAY HOUSE by decorating it with OUR HAND COLORED PICTURES.

The Silver Frame we trim our 11 x14 pictures with has caught the fancy of the "live ones" who can see the advantages of a brilliant lobby effect. These are the little things that count.

52
LARGE PICTURES OF THE STARS
Hand colored, size 22 x 28 inches, 75c. each-Framed, $2.50 each.

New 5 x 7 Pictures, black and white and colored, of the leading ladies of the films, $10 and $20 per thousand.

POST CARDS of all the players, 400 names, $3.00 per thousand; hand colored $10.00 per thousand.

PHOTOGRAPHS, size 8 x 10, of all the prominent players, Association and Independent, 400 different names, 20 cents each.
55 LARGE PICTURES HAND COLORED, size 11 x 14. Prominent players, $2.00 per dozen; in aluminum frames, 50 cents each.
FAC-SIMILE OIL PAINTINGS of the stars, all sizes, from $8 to $25 each, with heavy gold frames.
Photographs for lobby display of the two and three-reel features of all of the Mutual multiple reels—set of 6, $1.00. Always ready 10 days ahead of release.

KRAUS MFG. CO. · 220 West 42nd Street
12th Floor, CANDLER BUILDING
Send for Catalogue of over 400 players and samples. Write us, giving details of your dull nights, and we will send you a remedy.

SAMPLINER ADVERTISING CO., Inc.

ANNOUNCES

that MR. J. SAMPLINER, Designer and Creator of New Ideas, has severed all connections with the Kessel Advertising System, and is now connected with the SAMPLINER ADVERTISING CO., Inc.

At His Old Office
71 West 23rd Street, New York City

where he will be pleased to hear from you and prepare your Theatrical Advertising in New Ideas.

A 3 ft. x 12 ft. Muslin Banner mailed to you, including postage. $1.05

Send us your Copy—Catalogue Sent on Request

NOW BOOKING
HELEN GARDNER
IN
A Princess of Bagdad

An Entirely New and Original
ARABIAN NIGHTS STORY
In SIX Parts
The daintiest and most exquisite picture play ever made.
TWO HOURS OF MIRTH, EXCITEMENT AND SUSPENSE

FOR OPEN DATES
Write or call

The S and A Feature Film Co.
145 W. 45th St. New York
Other good 3, 4, 5 and 6 reel features

throwers, noting Tony's friendliness with the district attorney, decide to use him as a means of revenge, and accordingly approach the honest organ grinder with their scheme, but he will have nothing to do with them, in spite of their pleading and threats.

Through overwork and lack of nourishing food, Tony's wife, Marea, becomes ill. Tony is greatly distressed. The gang, realizing that with Marea out of their way Tony can be persuaded to join them, set their plans accordingly. Remembering his friend, the district attorney, Tony hastens to him for assistance. Lawrence promises to help him and calls at his home with a doctor, who leaves medicine for the sick woman. Marea, however, succumbs to her illness. The gangsters convince Tony that the district attorney, through his interference, has caused her death, and so poison his mind against his benefactor.

Seeking for revenge, Tony is persuaded to join the gangsters, and a plan is concocted against the district attorney. By an unfair method, Tony is chosen to be the messenger of death, and with a bomb concealed in a suitcase he starts on his errand. Mrs. Lawrence calls at Tony's home to see if she can assist him in any way. Noting Tony's absence, she decides to take Rosa, his little girl, home with her. Tony, grip in hand, gains access to Lawrence's home and plants the bomb in the cellar. Making his exit he is horrified to see the district attorney's wife enter the home with his little girl. The awful possibilities of his terrible act come to him, and he rushes back to the cellar. Grasping the sputtering bomb, he hurls it through the window, and it lands in the midst of his followers, who had come to see that his work was carried out. Realizing his dreadful mistake, and the injustice he has done his friend, the district attorney, he confesses his rash act. He is calmed by the doctor, who convinces him of the district attorney's innocence. The district attorney generously forgives the poor, misguided man.

RODS OF WRATH (Three Parts).—Wolf Erickson, captain of the "hell-ship" Ellen Miller, returns to port after a very successful voyage. On account of his terrible temper, he is greatly feared by his entire crew. Even his son, John, a lad of about ten years or so, is victim of his father's wrath. The son, however, has not inherited his father's hasty temper. In a boyish scrap John severely trounces the son of the ship's owner, who complains to the boy's father. Erickson thrashes his son with a rawhide whip. For this, Erickson's wife severely reprimands him. The brutal captain silences her and falls asleep.

Ten years roll quickly by, and John, now grown up, calls at the home of Nell, his sweetheart, to take her to a dance at the Crescent Club. He still feels the weight of his father's stern hand, however, and it is only by stealth that he manages to keep his appointment. Furious at being disobeyed, John's father follows him to the dance, where he thrashes his son and sends him home.

Sick at heart, John decides to leave his tyrannical father, and after three days' traveling reaches the city. He goes to a cheap hotel for lodging, and falls in with one of the denizens. This man is a member of a band of shanghaiers, who causes him to be drugged. Losing consciousness, he is carried to a ship lying in the harbor. A day later, he sleeps off the effects of the drug, and is horrified to be confronted by his father, for whose ship he has been shanghaied. His father instructs the mate to be as severe with his son as with any other member of the crew. The mate proceeds to carry out instructions, and soon a furious battle rages. John vanquishes the mate.

Pursued by his father, John strikes him with a crowbar and jumps overboard in a desperate effort to escape. During the melee a lamp was overturned and soon a fire rages in the hold. Desperately the crew battle against the raging flames, but the fire gains steadily. From the shore John sees the crew escape from the doomed ship, which sinks to the bottom after a terrific explosion. John returns home to seek solace and sympathy at his mother's side. While his mother is ministering to his wounds his father returns. The captain suspects his son's presence. He enters John's room, followed by the anxious mother. During the scuffle that follows, John shoots at his father but kills his mother.

With a start the father awakes and realizes that it was all a horrible nightmare. Deeply impressed by the vivid dream, he surprises both mother and son by declaring that never more would his hand be raised in anger.

THE BETRAYING MARK (Three Parts).—Being young and wealthy, Mrs. Elise Chapin, a charming widow, becomes the centre of attraction. Among her admirers is Ralph Dorling, whose admiration might be explained by the fact that he is heavily in debt. His marriage to the widow would greatly benefit him. She, however, favors the Viscount Maurice Byard.

Helen, the little daughter of Elise Chapin, gives a birthday party and invites Dorling to it. At the party Dorling is chagrined to learn that the Viscount has succeeded in gaining Elsie's consent to marry him. Returning to his hotel, he feels the presence of some one in his room. After a careful search he discovers a mysterious woman burglar, and is greatly surprised to note the wonderful resemblance of her to Mrs. Chapin. He agrees not to prosecute the woman if she in turn consents to impersonate the wealthy widow. She agrees. Dorling then writes to the Viscount an anonymous note informing him that his fiancee is false to him and offers to prove it. The Viscount is taken in by the note and goes to the place mentioned. He sees what is apparently his fiancee in the arms of Dorling. He confronts the couple and severely berates the woman for her duplicity, not penetrating her disguise. Dorling congratulates himself on his subtle plan. He next sends a decoy note to Mrs. Chapin, advising her that her fiance is injured and asking her to return with the bearer of the message. She falls into the trap and is captured by Dorling, who imprisons her in the tower of an ancient castle. His female accomplice is then installed in the home of Mrs. Chapin, and, owing to the remarkable resemblance, easily passes herself off as the real mistress of the household. Even Helen is deceived.

The real Mrs. Chapin, after many efforts, succeeds in attracting the attention of a passerby, who effects her rescue. She returns to her home and creates surprise among the servants and others to whom she tells her tale. She cautions them to remain silent and plans the conspirators' arrest. On their return they are confronted by the police. The brazen impersonator, however, insists that she is the real Mrs. Chapin. Helen, however, has noticed a strange mark on the arm of her supposed mother which she cannot remember ever having seen before. The police commissioner uncovers this mark, thereby exposing the well-laid plans of the conspirators, who are then taken into custody.

THE GREAT-EARED BAT (Madagascar).—The great-eared bat is the largest specimen of this peculiar family of mammals and is found in Madagascar. To one who has never had an opportunity to study this particular species, this picture offers exceptionally interesting series of intimate views. Being in natural colors, the effects are greatly enhanced.

POWER'S

Have You Ever Sent Us A Rush Order

For Some Small Item That You Had to Have Immediately

SIMPLEX

If You Have, Then You Know

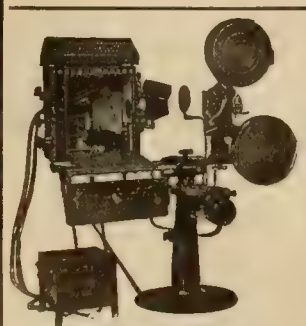
You Received a Quick Response

If You Have Not

We Would Appreciate the Opportunity of Convincing You of Our Promptness

Supplying the Best in Supplies to the Modern Photoplay Theatre.

We Equip Motion Picture Theatres Completely

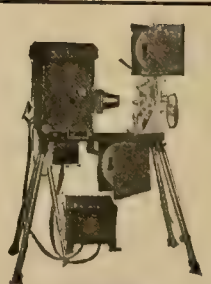


MOTIOGRAPH

Picture Theatre Equipment Co.

19 West 23d Street, New York

The Largest Motion Picture Supply House in America



EDISON

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS

Classified Advertisements, three cents per word, cash with order; 50 cents minimum; postage stamps accepted.

SITUATIONS WANTED.

GOOD TENOR—Would like position as "spotlight singer." Will commit and put a new song over each day. Billy McManus, Box 114, New Milford, Pa.

YOUNG MAN—8 years' film business experience in Europe and So. America. Knowledge of all European and So. American markets. Speaks fluently Spanish, English, German, French, some Italian. Alert worker, first-class New York references. Moderate remuneration. Write C. C., c/o M. P. World, N. Y. City.

CAPABLE MANAGER—Operator and feature representative at liberty, ten years' experience, married. Can furnish references as to honesty and ability. Make me an offer. Address H. M. Williams, 1114 Fla. Ave., Bristol, Tenn.

MANAGER—Seven years' experience, modern business methods. Now in charge Brooklyn, N. Y., house. Want to make change. Have made thorough study of business. Can make good anywhere. 32 years of age, married, A-1 reference, bond if desired. A. W., c/o M. P. World, N. Y. City.

MANAGER—Operator and wife, pianist and pipe organist. Best references. The Palmers, 137 Front St., Deposit, N. Y.

MOV. PICT. OPERATOR.—Ten years' experience, married, sober, reliable. Best references. Chas. H. Amos, 126 Advent St., Spartanburg, S. C.

HELP WANTED.

WANTED—Bookers for features and a modest price moving picture program. Must have experience. Answer Bees, c/o M. P. World, N. Y. City.

GOOD DEMAND for short negatives of news events suitable for moving picture weeklies. Send to Ray, 326 5th Ave., N. Y. City.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES.

CINEMATOGRAUH EXPERT—One of the pioneers of the industry in Britain is prepared to undertake the sole agency for the handling of exclusive films and others for the United Kingdom or for the United Kingdom and the Colonies. Apply J. T. RUFFELL, 5 Gt. Newport St., London, Eng.

A NEW YORK FILM COMPANY owning excellent money-making five-reel feature, with subject that is world wide, fine posters and photographs, desires representatives in every state to handle on percentage agreement. Must furnish bond, references as to film business ability and financial standing. Excellent opportunity for hustlers of the right sort. M. L. FORD, Rm. 504, 43 Cedar St., N. Y. City.

WOULD YOU like to make four dollars in four hours? If so, write me. F. A. HOLMES, Brewster, N. Y.

THEATERS WANTED.

WE ARE desirous of obtaining grade A theters everywhere, especially in Greater New York and its environs suitable for photoplay purposes. Houses now in operation or to be built to suit our requirements will be of interest. Correspondence solicited. PARAMOUNT THEATERS CORP., 331 Madison Ave., N. Y. City.

WANT TO LEASE—Opera house or large picture show. Condition and location must be the best. Experienced. Pamell, Bristol Hotel, Oklahoma City, Okla.

AN EXPERIENCED moving picture manager with some money wants a going business in Central Illinois city of 20,000 up. Give full particulars about your house, lease, equipment, service, etc., in first letter. Box 317, Springfield, Ill.

THEATERS FOR SALE OR RENT.

THEATER FOR LEASE in middle west city of 15,000; fine location; seats 375; fully equipped ready to show. Furnishings the best. PASTIME AMUSEMENT AND SUPPLY CO., Austin, Minn.

HANDSOMEST MODERN photoplay theater in middle west, everything new. Big railroad center and manufacturing city of 50,000. Lifetime opportunity; would consider part time or a live partner. Bargain; act quickly. P. O. Box 1312, Joliet, Ill.

FOR SALE—Vaudeville and picture show in manufacturing town of six thousand population, center of oil and gas field and wheat belt. Monthly pay roll $150,000. Show newly remodeled, fireproof conduit wiring system, opera chairs, excellent piano, seats four hundred. Only one other show in town. R. E. McCluer, Claremore, Okla.

FOR SALE—Picture theater, bargain if sold in next fifteen days. Write Dreamland Theater, Box 129, Waverly, Ohio.

STAR THEATER—Pictures, Wisconsin city 1,500. Must be sold at once. $1,500 cash. If you haven't the money don't write. Address Star, c/o M. P. World, N. Y. City.

EQUIPMENT WANTED.

WANTED—Second hand Williamson Perforator. P. R. M., c/o M. P. World, N. Y. City.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

BRASS POSTER FRAMES—For one, three and six sheets. Also brass easels, brass railings. Write for complete catalog. THE NEWMAN MFG. CO., Cincinnati, O., 101 4th Ave., N. Y.

WE BUY, SELL AND EXCHANGE second-hand moving picture machines and films. Write for bargains. MONARCH. FILM SERVICE, Memphis, Tenn.

MUST HAVE MONEY QUICK—Will sell any part of my theater, operated only 3 months and forced to close through poor business. Power's 6A with loop setter, $125; Simplex, $140; five-ply opera chairs, 75c. ' Ft. Wayne compensarc, $30; iron booth, underwriters' inspection, $25; Excello flaming arc lamps, $50 pair. All goods guaranteed good as new; will ship subject to inspection. GLEN ALFRED, 2110A Olive St., St. Louis, Mo.

WRITE OR WIRE—The Lears Theatre Supply Co., 509 Chestnut St., St. Louis, Mo., the largest exclusive theater equipment concern in the West, for seats, all leading makes of moving picture machines, operating booths, curtains and all other theater accessories. They always have some slightly used goods in stock for immediate shipment and sell them at bargain prices. Folding chairs, 40c each up. Opera chairs, 60c each up. Moving picture machines, $50 each up. Send them an exact list of your wants and see why they sell them all.

OPERA CHAIRS—Bought and sold. 600 pedestal chairs, 300 mahogany, New Jersey, fifty cents up. Cash for your chairs. Empire Business Exchange, Corning, N. Y.

FOR SALE—Powers 6A motor drive with loop setter. Price $230, almost new. P. O. Box 267, Selma, Ala.

OPERA AND FOLDING CHAIRS—Large assortment, unequaled values, also slightly used perfect chairs 75c each. Atlas Seating Co., 501 Fifth Ave., N. Y. City.

AS COMMON LAW ASSIGNEE I have for sale the following: Second-hand No. 5 Powers machines and mechanisms; also a full line of parts for Powers No. 5, No. 6 and No. 6A; also odd lots of rheostats, lamp houses, lamps, lens and miscellaneous supplies; also a lot of two and three-reel features and about 125 single reels. The above will be sold at low prices, either in large or small quantities. Address E. M. Schwarzenberg, Assignee, 1138 Old South Bldg., Boston, Mass.

FOR SALE—Complete road show $50 Edison machine, model "B" gas outfit, two reels films, set of slides all in trunk. Rebuilt machines guaranteed one year; Edison Ex. model complete $65, Powers No. 5 complete with legs $75, Powers No. 6 perfect condition $75, Motiograph slightly used $150, Powers 6A new condition $140, Compensator $20, Rectifier $120. We sell new machines and take old outfits in part payment; liberal allowances. Stelzer Bros., 417 Broadway, Lincoln, Ill.

$100 OPTIGRAPH—$90 gas outfit, $87 Edison phonograph, all $200. J. G. Howard, Waterman, Ill.

FOR SALE CHEAP—Powers No. 5 machine complete, five and ten-cent electric sign and four direct current arc lamps. Comet Theater, 100 3rd Ave., N. Y. City.

FOR SALE—Rebuilt machines, Motiograph No. 1, $50; Edison 1 Pin Exhibition model, with fire shutter, $55; 2 Edison 1 Pin Exhibition models, no fire shutter, $50 each; Edison 2 Pin, $40; Powers No. 5, $60. All machines with lenses, new legs, table, switches, leads, 40-ampere Powers rheostat, upper and lower magazines; also new machines, all makes. Supplies all kinds. Write or wire Ludwig Hommel & Co., 422 First Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.

CAMERAS WANTED.

PROFESSIONAL CAMERA and equipment with at least 300 feet retorts, two extra retorts wanted also. Must be in good order and price right; Urban camera preferred. Address S. B. Williams, Gen. Del., Kansas City, Mo.

CAMERAS FOR SALE.

MOTION PICTURE CAMERAS.—Apparatus and supplies for sale. Motion Film Co., Box 532, Kansas City, Missouri.

WILLIAMSON TOPICAL CAMERA—Tripod tilt, extra magazines. Cost $141, only $80. Ray, 326 5th Ave., N. Y. City.

FILMS WANTED.

WANTED TO BUY.—Western features, 2, 3 and 4 reels, must have full set of posters. In good condition and cheap for cash. Address Meyer Jewelry Co., 2116 Market St., Galveston, Texas.

LICHTIG wants to buy 3, 4, 5-reel second-hand features. Send lists and prices. 1203 Candler Bldg., N. Y. City.

TO BUY—Mutt and Jeff cartoon film, Educational and Scenic, also Indian War Dance. Must be best condition, lowest prices. State all first letter. Box 1228, Pocatello, Idaho.

WANTED FEATURES—Multiple reels, give titles, length and price. Must contain original paper. Give full particulars by first mail, quick buyer. Address E. G., c/o M. P. World, N. Y. City.

EDUCATIONAL FILMS WANTED—Scenic, industrial, travel, all kinds. Give details and prices. Inspection. 1208 Gas Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

FILMS FOR SALE OR RENT.

FOR SALE—200 single reels, with or without posters, no junk; also scenic reels and educational subjects. FEDERAL FEATURE FILM CO., 220 West 42d St., N. Y. City.

FEATURES.—Two, three and four reelers, with plenty original posters at astonishing prices. Send for list. Imperial Films Corp., Manhattan Bldg., Milwaukee, Wis.

30 FEATURES FOR SALE 30—In 2, 3, 4 and 5 reels, in good condition, original paper, sell one or all. J. E. Burns, Rm. 1107, 145 West 45th St., N. Y. City. Phone Bryant 7078.

FOR SALE—150 reels National Exclusive films, with about 4,000 one-sheets, 25 of a kind, all for $1,200. Economy Film Co., 105 4th Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.

PANAMA CANAL—In course of construction. 1,400 foot negative and one positive print. Never released. Price on application. Monarch Film Mfg. Co., 145 West 45th St., N. Y. City.

SALE OF ANIMAL FEATURES—Panther's Prey, 2 reels, Gaumont, $75; Lion Let Loose, 2 reels, Gaumont, $55; Lion Hunters, 2 reels, Gaumont, $50; Attacked by a Lion, 2 reels, Gaumont, $40; Kings of the Forest, 2 reels, Selig, $50; Cheyenne Celebration, 2 reels, $50. These features were used with my week stand traveling shows only and are in fine condition. Send a small deposit or leave the money with your express agent and send his guarantee of charges and I will ship C. O. D. with privilege of examination. Guil Pastils $1 each. C. E. Lindall, Bar Harbor, Me.

MILLION DOLLAR PEARL MYSTERY—3-reel, thrilling detective; 1, 3, 6-sheet, photos, heralds; $75. Good condition, late release, pick it up. Davenport Film Exchange, Davenport, Ia.

MISCELLANEOUS.

HAVE YOUR SCENARIOS neatly typewritten. 10c per page, with carbon copy. Prompt work. L. SULZER, 4306 Calumet Ave., Chicago, Ill.

SLIDES.—Expert designing, beautiful coloring, unexcelled service. Write for catalogue. Texarkana Slide Co., Texarkana, Ark.-Tex. "The largest and best in the south."

SCENARIOS WANTED—First-class one-reel comedies. Address Dra-Ko Film Co., Inc., 217 East 24th St., N. Y. City.

GAS USERS—Let us cut your expense for you. Valuable information free. Box 771, Norfolk, Va.

STICKTITE CEMENT—Something new, guaranteed to hold or money refunded; special prices in large quantities; sample bottle with brush 25c. Sticktite Cement Co., Turners Falls, Mass.

INDEX

TO CONTENTS.

ADVERTISING FOR EXHIBITORS..... 819
"ALICE IN WONDERLAND" (Nonpariel). 841
BAY STATE CENSORSHIP..... 858
BOOST EDUCATIONAL FILMS..... 852
BRADY ANNOUNCES AMERICAN PLANS. 834
BRITISH NOTES. 830
"BLACK BOX, THE," UNIVERSAL'S NEXT SERIAL. 843
"BROKEN LULLABY, THE" (Majestic).. 807
"BUCKSHOT JOHN" (Bosworth)..... 843
CALENDAR OF LICENSED RELEASES... 866
CALENDAR OF INDEPENDENT RELEASES. 868
CATALOGUE OF EDUCATIONAL RELEASES. 815
CHICAGO LETTER. 812
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Licensed).. 827
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Independent) 828
"EXPLOITS OF ELAINE" (Pathe)..... 842
FACTS AND COMMENTS..... 799
FEATURE FILM STORIES..... 892
FEATURE RELEASE DATES..... 908
FIELDING'S COLLAPSIBLE STUDIO..... 840
"FOR HER PEOPLE" (Pathe)..... 834
"GEMS OF FOSCARINA, THE"..... 836
GLEICHMAN HEADS NEW COMPANY.... 806
GOLDEN ASS, THE..... 801
"GOOSE GIRL, THE" (Lasky)..... 809
"HER HUSBAND'S SON" (Edison)..... 835
"HYPOCRITES" (Bosworth) 832
INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES..... 884
INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES..... 906
"IN THE HANDS OF THE JURY" (Kalem) 807
INSPECTIONS NOT NEEDED..... 854
JOIN THE LEAGUE..... 800
"JUSTIFIED" (American) 836
KALEM THREE PART FEATURE..... 838
KENNEDY RETURNS TO COAST..... 808
KEYSTONE MEN IN CONVENTION..... 802
LAMY, JOSEPH. 837
LICENSES HELD UP..... 862
LICENSED FILM STORIES..... 865
LICENSED RELEASE DATES..... 910
LLOYD, ETHEL LOUISE..... 831
McKINNEY LEAVES WARNER'S..... 806
MANUFACTURERS' ADVANCE NOTES.... 844
MASSACHUSETTS LEAGUE DINNER..... 804
METRO PICTURES CORPORATION FORMED. 805
"MILLIONAIRE HUNDRED DOLLAR BILL, THE" (Vitagraph)..... 841
"MONEY" (World Film)..... 833
MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR, THE.... 804
NEW KEITH THEATER CHAIN..... 853
NOTES OF THE TRADE..... 848
ORGANIZATION NEEDED. 863
"ORIENTAL ROMANCE, AN" (Imp)..... 808
PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT, THE. 821
PICKFORD PICTURES FOR BIG THEATERS 805
PICTURE THEATERS PROJECTED..... 849
PICTURES A GODSEND..... 857
PRIVATE SHOWING OF SELIG FEATURE 806
PRODUCING PRIMARILY FOR THE JEWS 809
PROJECTION DEPARTMENT. 823
REAL FILM A. B. C. A..... 811
RENFAX MUSICAL PICTURES A YEAR OLD. 833
RISSER, MARGUERITE. 842
RYAN, MARY. 810
SCREEN CLUB QUARTERS..... 851
SELIG COMPANY IN CANAL ZONE..... 805
SELIG PUBLICITY PLANS..... 814
SIDNEY M. BABER VISITING NEW YORK 810
SOUTH AMERICAN PICTURES..... 840
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Licensed)..... 865
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Independent).. 884
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Features)..... 892
STEALING SUNDAY'S STUFF..... 814
"TAINTED" (Kriterion) 838
TALMADGE, CONSTANCE ALICE..... 839
"THEIR DELAYED HONEYMOON" (United Film) 838
TO COMBAT ADVERSE LEGISLATION.... 804
TWO EDISON RELEASES..... 835
TWO RECEIVERS FOR ALCO..... 805
"VOICE OF CONSCIENCE, THE" (Edison) 835
"WAS HE A COWARD?" (I. S. Plaut).... 842
WILKES-BARRE THEATERS. 850
"WINNING BACK" (Broncho)..... 839
WOLFF CALLS NEW YORK CONVENTION. 804
"YOUNG ROMANCE" (Lasky)..... 837

TO ADVERTISERS.

CARBONS AND CARBON ACCESSORIES.
HOMMEL, LUDWIG CO..... 885
KIEWERT, CHAS. L., CO..... 913

ELECTRICAL & MECHANICAL EQUIPMENT.
BELL & HOWELL CO..... 880
CALEHUFF SUPPLY CO..... 916
DETROIT ENGINE WORKS..... 915
ELECTRIC PRODUCTS CO..... 899
ERKER'S. 914
FORT WAYNE ELECTRIC WORKS..... 909
FULTON, E. E..... 885
GENERAL ELECTRIC CO..... 879
HALLBERG, J. H..... 870
PICTURE THEATER EQUIPMENT CO.... 902
SMITH, L. C., CO..... 912
STERN MFG. CO..... 878
STRELINGER, CHAS. A..... 888
SWAAB, LOUIS M..... 914
WESTINGHOUSE ELECTRIC & MFG. CO.. 885

FILM EXCHANGES.
BRADENBURG, G. W..... 912
CAMPBELL, DONALD. 899
GREATER NEW YORK FILM RENTAL CO. 910
MARION, LOUISE M..... 912
McMAHAN & JACKSON..... 916
NEW YORK ALCO FILM SERVICE..... 874
S. AND A. FEATURE CO..... 901
THEATER BROKERAGE EXCHANGE.... 888

INDEPENDENT FILM MANUFACTURERS.
MAJESTIC MOTION PICTURE CO..... 772
NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CORP.... 773
RELIANCE MOTION PICTURE CO..... 781
THANHOUSER FILM CORP..... 767
THANHOUSER SYNDICATE CORP..766, 882-83
UNIVERSAL FILM MFG. CO.....768-69, 907

LENS MANUFACTURERS.
GUNDLACH-MANHATTAN OPTICAL CO.. 916

LICENSED FILM MANUFACTURERS.
BIOGRAPH 867
EDISON, THOS. A., INC.....794-95
ESSANAY FILM MFG. CO.....770-71
KALEM. 793, 798
LUBIN MFG. CO..... 796
MINA FILMS. 911
SELIG POLYSCOPE CO..... 919
VITAGRAPH CO. OF AMERICA..... 797

MISCELLANEOUS FEATURE FILMS.
ALLIANCE FILM CORP..... 895
ARCTIC FILM CO..... 905
CALIFORNIA PICTURE CO..... 792
CELEBRATED PLAYERS FILM CO..... 916
COSMOFOTOFILM CO. 899
COSMOS FEATURE FILM CO..... 912
FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM CO.....774-75
FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM CO. (SELECT FILM BOOK AGCY.).....886-87
FLAMINGO FILM CO..... 786
GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO..... 908
HISTORICAL FEATURE FILM CO..... 879
ITALA FILM CO. OF AMERICA..... 893
KRITERION SERVICE. 890-91
LASKY, JESSE L., FEATURE PLAY CO..776-77
LIFE PHOTO FILM..... 897
NIELSEN, F. O..... 873
PATHE EXCHANGE, INC.....782-85
PARAMOUNT PICTURES CORP.....778-79
PRIVATE FEATURE FILM CO..... 912
RENFAX FILM CO..... 913
SELECT FILM BOOKING AGCY..... 780
SENNETT, MACK. 914
STERLING CAMERA & FILM CO..... 912
UNITED FILM SERVICE (WARNER'S FEATURES). 875
UNITED MOTION PICTURES PRODUCERS. 876-77
WORLD FILM CORP.....787-91

MISCELLANEOUS.
ARKIN, SIMON. 880
ALLISON & HADAWAY..... 914
AMUSEMENT SUPPLY CO..... 912
ATLAS MOTION PICTURE CO., INC..... 879
AUTOMATIC TICKET SELLING & CASH REGISTER CO. 872
CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS. 903
COMSTOCK PUBLISHING CO..... 879
CORCORAN, A. J..... 880
CRANE, FRANK H..... 879
EASTMAN KODAK CO..... 901
ENAMEL PRODUCTS CO..... 899
EXHIBITORS-EXCHANGEMEN. 915
GITHCIL CHEMICAL CO..... 879
GUNBY BROS. 915
INDUSTRIAL MOVING PICTURE CO.... 912
KRAUS MFG. CO..... 901
McGUIRE, W. C..... 915
MOTIONSCOPE CO. 917
M. P. WORLD PUBLICATIONS..... 918
NATIONAL TICKET CO..... 906
NEWARK OPERATORS' BALL..... 899
ONE DROP OIL CO..... 917
RISSER, MARGUERITE. 871
ROSS-GOULD. 888
SAMPLINER ADV. CO..... 902
STANDARD MOTION PICTURE CO..... 880
STOCKTON'S SCRIPTWRITING SERVICE. 917
TRADE CIRCULAR ADDRESSING CO.... 912
SHURE, N., CO..... 917
WOHLGEMUTH, CHEMIST. 849

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.
DEAGAN, J. C..... 915
SINN, CLARENCE E..... 917
SEEBURG, J. P., PIANO CO..... 917

OPERA CHAIR MANUFACTURERS.
ANDREWS, A. H..... 917
HARDESTY MFG. CO..... 917
PEABODY SCHOOL FURNITURE CO.... 917
STEEL FURNITURE CO..... 917
WISCONSIN SEATING CO..... 917

POSTERS AND FRAMES.
MENGER & RING..... 892
NEWMAN MFG. CO..... 880
THEATER SPECIALTY MFG. CO..... 879

PROJECTION MACHINE MANUFACTURERS.
ENTERPRISE OPTICAL CO..... 908
POWER, NICHOLAS. 920
PRECISION MACHINE CO..... 869
SIMPLEX PROJECTOR D. CO..... 904

PROJECTION SCREEN MANUFACTURERS.
DAY & NIGHT SCREENS, INC..... 901
GENTER, J. H., CO., INC..... 912
SIMPSON, A. L..... 913

SONG AND ADVERTISING SLIDES.
NIAGARA SLIDE CO..... 849
UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO..... 899

THEATRICAL ARCHITECTS.
DECORATORS' SUPPLY CO..... 915

Eternal Projector, the Master Machine, Stands Supreme Test

About two years ago this machine replaced two other popular makes at a theatre in 14th Street near Broadway, where the pictures are run at

TERRIFIC SPEED 15 HOURS EVERY DAY

Write direct to us for this marvelous machine

SIMPLEX PROJECTOR D. COMPANY, 1465 Broadway, corner 42nd Street, NEW YORK.

No Picture Ever Shown at the

STRAND THEATRE

New York City's Phenomenally Successful Picture Theatre

has received more favorable comment nor excited keener appreciation than the Salmon Drive and other wonderful scenes in which delighted large audiences of this famous Moving Picture House during all of week ending January 23, 1915.

The Arctic Hunt

State Rights for Sale

as low as

10c. Per Foot—TEN CENTS—Per Foot 10c.
for some exceptionally fine territory.

Six reels may be divided into two three-reel or three two-reel features and booked in large or small houses.

Exhibitors are warned against booking or using our paper on Arctic films that are not the genuine Arctic Hunt Films. Information requested in regard to productions being offered as Capt. Kleinschmidt's Arctic Hunt.

WRITE OR WIRE AT ONCE TO

Arctic Film Company

Suite 1209—220 W. 42nd St., N. Y. Phone Bryant 3559

Write for bookings in New Jersey and New York States

INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES

UNIVERSAL RELEASE DAYS.

Sunday—Eclair, L-KO, Rex.
Monday—Imp, Joker, Victor.
Tuesday—Big "U," Gold Seal, Nestor.
Wednesday—Animated Weekly, Eclair, L-KO.
Thursday—Big "U," Rex, Sterling.
Friday—Imp, Nestor, Victor.
Saturday—Bison, Joker, Powers.

BIG U.

Feb. 2—Seven & Seventy (Drama).
Feb. 4—Her Bargain (Two Parts—Society Drama).
Feb. 9—Dad (Comedy-Drama).
Feb. 11—The Vaudry Jewels (Two Parts—Detective Drama).

BISON.

Jan. 30—The Mystery Woman (Two parts—Western Drama).
Feb. 6—Ridgeway of Montana (Three Parts—Mining Drama).
Feb. 13—Terrors of the Jungle (Two Parts—Animal—Drama).

ECLAIR.

Jan. 24—The Clue of the Portrait (Drama).
Jan. 27—Cancelled (Two parts—Western Dr.).
Jan. 31—The Thief and the Chief (Com.-Dr.).
Feb. 3—The Lure of the West (Two Parts—Western Drama).
Feb. 7—Their Hobo Hero (Drama).
Feb. 10—Terror (Two Parts—Western Drama).
Feb. 14—Sight of the Blind (Drama).

GOLD SEAL.

Jan. 26—The Madcap Queen of Gredshoffen (Two parts—Drama).
Feb. 2—The Girl of the Secret Service (Two Parts—Detective Drama).
Feb. 9—The Heart of Lincoln (Three Parts—Civil War Drama).

IMP.

Jan. 25—How Mary Fixed It (Comedy).
Jan. 29—The Millionaire Engineer (Two parts—R. R. Drama).
Feb. 1—The Story the Silk Hats Told (Drama).
Feb. 5—The Awaited Hour (Two Parts—Melodrama).
Feb. 8—The Heart Punch (Drama).
Feb. 12—The Stake (Drama).

JOKER.

Jan. 30—He Fell In Love With His Mother-in-Law (Comedy).
Feb. 1—The Blank Note (Comedy).
Feb. 6—He Cured His Gout (Comedy).
—The Sierras from the Base to the Summit (Scenic).
Feb. 8—The Plumber Wins the Girl (Comedy).
—The Baltic Sea (Educational).
Feb. 13—Won With Dynamite (Comedy).
—Artistic Paper Cutting and Designing (Educational).

L-KO.

Jan. 31—After Her Millions (Three parts—Comedy).
Feb. 3—The Butcher's Bride (Comedy).
Feb. 7—Zip and His Gang (Comedy).
Feb. 10—Father Was a Loafer (Comedy).
Feb. 12—All Aboard (Two Parts—Comedy).
Feb. 14—Peggy's Sweethearts (Drama).

NESTOR.

Feb. 2—All Over the Biscuits (Comedy).
Feb. 5—Lizzie's Dizzy Career (Comedy).
Feb. 9—No release this week.

POWERS.

Jan. 30—The Crime of Thought (Drama).
Feb. 6—No Release This Week.
Feb. 13—The Vengeance of Sampson (Western Drama).

REX.

Jan. 28—The Measure of a Man (Two parts—Canadian—N. W. M. P.—Drama).
Jan. 31—No Release this Week.
Feb. 4—The Girl and the Spy (Drama).
Feb. 7—The Flash (Two Parts—Human Interest Drama).
Feb. 11—The Phantom Warning (Drama).
Feb. 14—Wolves of Society (Two Parts—Society Drama).

STERLING.

Jan. 14—Those German Bowlers (Comedy).
Jan. 21—Dude Raffles (Comedy).
Jan. 28—Treasure Seekers (Comedy).
Feb. 4—Love and Dough (Comedy).
Feb. 11—Billie Was a Right Smart Boy (Juvenile Comedy).

VICTOR.

Jan. 25—His Guardian Angel (Two parts—Domestic Drama).
Jan. 29—How She Fooled Aunty (Comedy-Dr.).
Feb. 1—Cards Never Lie (Two Parts—Gypsy Drama).
Feb. 5—The Bribe (Drama).
Feb. 8—Everygirl (Two Parts—Allegorical—Drama).
Feb. 12—A Bogus Bandit (Western Drama).

UNIVERSAL SPECIAL FEATURES.

Dec. 21—The Master Key, No. 5 (Two Parts—Drama).
Dec. 28—The Master Key, No. 6 (Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 4—The Master Key, No. 7 (Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 11—The Master Key, No. 8 (Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 18—The Master Key, No. 9 (Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 25—The Master Key, No. 10 (Two Parts—Drama).
Feb. 1—The Master Key, No. 11 (Two Parts—Drama).
Feb. 8—The Master Key, No. 12 (Two Parts—Drama).
Feb. 14—The Master Key, No. 13 (Two Parts—Drama).

MUTUAL RELEASE DAYS.

Sunday—Komic, Majestic, Thanhouser.
Monday—American, Keystone, Reliance.
Tuesday—Beauty, Majestic, Thanhouser.
Wednesday—American, Broncho, Reliance.
Thursday—Domino, Keystone, Mutual Weekly.
Friday—American, Kay-Bee, Majestic or Thanhouser, Princess, Reliance.
Saturday—Keystone, Reliance, Royal

AMERICAN.

Jan. 25—Silence (Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 27—Coals of Fire (Drama).
Feb. 1—The Law of the Wilds (Two Parts—Drama).
Feb. 3—Imitations (Drama).
Feb. 8—Justified (Two Parts—Drama.)
Feb. 10—A Heart of Gold (Drama).
Feb. 12—The Wily Chaperon (Comedy-Drama).

BEAUTY.

Jan. 26—Evan's Lucky Day (Comedy-Drama).
Feb. 2—Which Would You Rather Be? (Comedy-Drama).
Feb. 9—Mrs. Cook's Cooking (Drama).

BRONCHO.

Feb. 17—Shorty's Secret (Two Parts—Drama).
Feb. 24—The Grudge (Two Parts—Drama).
Mar. 3—Winning Back (Two Parts—Drama).
Mar. 10—The Wells of Paradise (Two Parts—Drama).

DOMINO.

Feb. 18—The Secret of the Dead (Two Parts—Drama).
Feb. 25—The Man at the Key (Two Parts—Drama).
Mar. 4—In the Warden's Garden (Two Parts—Drama).

KAY BEE.

Feb. 12—In the Tennessee Hills (Two parts—Drama).
Feb. 19—Mr. Silent Haskins (Two parts—Dr.).
Feb. 26—On the High Seas (Two Parts—Drama).
Mar. 5—On the High Seas (Two Parts—Drama).
Mar. 12—The Girl Who Might Have Been (Two Parts—Drama).

KEYSTONE.

Jan. 16—Hash, House, Mashers (Comedy).
Jan. 18—Love, Speed and Thrills (Comedy).
Jan. 18—Mabel's and Fatty's Simple Life (Two parts—Comedy).
Jan. 21—Hogan's Mussy Job (Comedy).
Jan. 23—Fatty and Mabel at the San Diego Exposition (Comedy).
Jan. 25—Colored Villainy (Comedy).
Jan. 28—Mabel, Fatty and the Law (Comedy).
Feb. 1—The Home Breakers (Two Parts—Comedy).
Jan. 30—Peanuts and Bullets (Comedy).
Feb. 1—Fatty's New Role (Comedy).
Feb. 4—Hogan, the Porter (Comedy).

KOMIC.

Jan. 24—A Flurry in Art (Comedy).
Jan. 31—Cupid and the Pest (Comedy).
Feb. 7—Bill Turns Valet (No. 16 of the "Bill" Series—Comedy).
Feb. 14—Music Hath Charms (Two Parts—Drama).

MAJESTIC.

Jan. 31—A Farewell Dinner (Two parts—Dr.).
Feb. 2—An Old Fashioned Girl (Drama).
Feb. 7—Imar, the Servitor (Two Parts—Oriental Drama).
Feb. 9—His Last Deal (Comedy-Drama).
Feb. 14—How Hazel Got Even (Two Parts—Drama).

PRINCESS.

Jan. 29—The Home of Silence (Drama).
Feb. 5—Nell's Strategy (Romantic Drama).
Feb. 12—Across the Way (Comedy-Drama).

RELIANCE.

Jan. 27—The Express Messenger (Drama).
Jan. 30—The Love Pirate (Two parts—Drama).
Feb. 1—At the Bottom of Things (Drama).
Feb. 3—The Beast Within (Drama).
Feb. 6—Heart Beats (Two Parts—Drama).
Feb. 8—The Studio of Life (Drama).
Feb. 10—The Chinese Lottery (Newspaper—Life-Drama).
Feb. 13—The Death Dice (Two Parts—Drama).

ROYAL.

Jan. 23—Her Hero (Comedy).
Jan. 30—Ring Around Rosey (Comedy).
Feb. 6—The Star Boarder (Comedy).
Feb. 13—The Escort (Comedy).

THANHOUSER.

Jan. 24—The Dog Catcher's Bride (Comedy—Drama).
Jan. 26—Finger Prints of Fate (Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 29—The Volunteer Fireman (Drama).
Jan. 31—Helen Intervenes (Drama).
Feb. 2—In the Jury Room (Two Parts—Drama).
Feb. 7—Big Brother Bill (Comedy-Drama).
Feb. 9—The Smuggled Diamonds (Two Parts—Drama).
Feb. 14—The Gratitude of Conductor 786 (Comedy-Drama).

SERIAL PUBLICATION CORP.

Jan. 20—Runaway June (Episode No. 2—Two Parts—"The Man in the Black Van Dyke"—Drama).
Jan. 27—Runaway June (Episode No. 3, "Discharged" (Two Parts—Drama).

THANHOUSER SYNDICATE CORP.

Jan. 4—Zudora, Episode No. 7, "The Mystery of the Lost Ships" (Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 11—Zudora, Episode No. 8, "The Foiled Elopement" (Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 18—Zudora, Episode No. 9, "Kidnapped" (Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 25—Zudora, Episode No. 10, "The Gentleman Crooks and the Lady" (Two Parts—Drama).
Feb. 1—Zudora, Episode No. 11, "A Message From the Heart" (Two Parts—Drama).

ROLL TICKETS

PRICES

Five Thousand	$1.25
Ten Thousand	$2.50
Twenty Thousand	$4.50
Twenty-five Thousand	$5.50
Fifty Thousand	$6.50
One Hundred Thousand	$8.00

Your own special Ticket, any printing, any colors, accurately numbered; every roll guaranteed. Coupon Tickets for Prize Drawings, 5,000 $2.50. Stock Tickets, 6c per 1,000. Prompt shipments. Cash with the order. Get the samples. Send diagram for Reserved Seat Coupon Tickets, serial or dated.

NATIONAL TICKET CO.
SHAMOKIN, PA.

Here's a big job for a big man

—The Universal Film Mfg. Co. wants to add to its producing staff still another director who has produced.
—A man with a record already made.
—Performance alone will count—not promises.
—Must be a Director with actual moving picture experience, not a dramatic director of the speaking stage.
—A man big enough to produce features—BIG FEATURES—any sort of big features he may be called upon to direct.
—A man who does his own thinking; who is not only resourceful—but who knows how to use to the very best advantage, the greatest facilities ever placed at the disposal of a Moving Picture Director.
—This is a chance to increase even the biggest reputation.
—Salary will be adequate.
—All communications will be kept strictly confidential.
—Apply by letter only to the office of

CARL LAEMMLE, President

Universal Film Mfg. Co.

1600 Broadway New York

MISCELLANEOUS INDEPENDENT and FEATURE RELEASES

ALCO FILM CORP.

Dec. 14—The Three of Us (Rolfe—Five Parts—Drama).
Dec. 21—Tillie's Punctured Romance (Keystone Six Parts—Comedy).
Dec. 28—Springtime (Drama).
Jan. 4—The Garden of Lies (Five Parts—Dr.).

ALLIANCE FILM CORP.

Dec.—The Last Chapter (Favorite Players—Five Parts—Drama).
Jan. 4—In the Shadow (Drama).
Jan. —The Chocolate Soldier (Five Parts—Drama).

APEX.

Jan.—For King or Kaiser (Drama).
Jan—The Vultures of the Coast (Three parts—Drama).
Jan. —Revolutionist (Drama).

BOX OFFICE ATTRACTIONS CO.

Dec.—Samson (Drama).
Dec.—A Fool There Was (Drama).
Jan—The Children of the Ghetto (Drama).
Jan—The Gilded Fool (Drama).
Jan—The Butterfly on the Wheel (Drama).
Jan—The World and His Wife (Drama).
Jan. —Gertie (Comedy).

COSMOFOTOFILM CO.

Dec.—The Black Spot (Four Parts—Drama).
Dec.—The Two Columbines (Drama).
Dec.—A Christmas Carol (Drama).
Jan.—The Victoria Cross (Three parts—War Drama).

COSMOS FEATURE FILM CORP.

Jan. 11—The Little Girl That He Forgot (Five Parts—Drama).

GLORIA AMERICAN CO.

Jan. —Souls Enchained (Five Parts—Drama).

GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO.

Dec.—The Adventures of Gar El Hama (Four Parts—Drama).
Jan.—A Woman of Impulse (Four parts—Dr.).

HEPWORTH.

Dec.—The Basilisk (Three Parts—Drama).
Dec.—Through the Valley of Shadows (Four Parts—Drama).

ITALA FILM CO. OF AMERICA.

Dec.—Jules Porel-Serpent (Three Parts—Dr.).
Dec.—The Treasure of the Louzats (Four Parts—Drama).

IVAN FILM PRODUCTIONS, INC.

Dec.—Should a Woman Divorce? (Five Parts—Drama).

KINETOPHOTE & K. & C. BOOKING CO., INC.

Dec. 7—The Span of Life (Five Parts—Dr.).
Dec. 21—The Little Jewess (Four Parts—Dr.).

KRITERION SERVICE.

[Releases for week of February 1st to 7th, inclusive:]

$500 Reward (Paragon—Drama).
Percy Made Good (Santa Barbara—Comedy).
The Intercepted Gift (Alhambra—Drama).
The Boob's Elopement (Thistle—Comedy).
The Taint (Santa Barbara—Drama).
Capturing Stella (C K—Comedy).
The Wilful Son (Monty—Drama).
A Man for A' That (Punchinello—Comedy).
A Waif of the Woods (Trump—Drama).
A Wonderful Lamp (Pyramid—Comedy).
Cotton Industry (Nolege—Educational).
Thoughts of Tonight (Navajo—Drama).
Frank's Nightmare (Alhambra—Comedy).

(Releases for week of February 8th to 15th, inclusive.)

Paragon—The Adventurer.
Santa Barbara—Billy Now a Medico.
Alhambra—The Loaded '45.
Thistle—A Disappointed Suitor.
Santa Barbara—The Bigot.
C. K.—Oh, Those Kids.
Monty—The Wilful Son.
Punchinello—Poor Little Rich Man.
Trump—None So Blind.
Nolege—Making a Great Newspaper.
Pyramid—Cartoon.
Navajo—The Sign of the Star.
Alhambra—The Painted Anarchist.

PARAMOUNT PROGRAM.

Feb. 1—Mistress Nell (Famous Players—Five Parts—Drama).
Feb. 4—Buckshot John (Bosworth—Four Parts—Drama).
Feb. 8—Her Triumph (Famous Players—Five Parts—Drama).
Feb. 11—The Bachelor's Romance (Famous Players—Four Parts—Drama).
Feb. 15—The Warrens of Virginia (Lasky-Belasco—Five Parts—Drama).
Feb. 18—The Country Boy (Lasky—Five Parts—Drama).
Feb. 22—David Harum (Famous Players—Five Parts—Drama).
Feb. 25—The Love Route (Famous Players—Four Parts—Drama).

PATHE EXCHANGE, INC.

Jan.—Romiet and Julio (Pathe—Cartoon—Comedy).
—Malga, Southern Spain (Pathe—Educational).
Jan.—A Scratch of the Pen (Pathe—Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 11—The Exploits of Elaine, Episode 3—"The Vanishing Jewels" (Pathe—Two parts—Drama).
Jan.—The Tip Off (Pathe-Balboa—Three parts—Drama).
Jan.—Happy's Mishaps (Pathe—Comedy).
Jan.—Fires of Affliction (Pathe—Three parts—Drama).
Jan. 18—The Exploits of Elaine, Episode 4, "The Frozen Safe" (Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. —An Eye for an Eye (Balboa—Four Parts—Drama).
Jan. —Pete the Pedal Polisher (Comedy).
—The Valley of Chamonix (Scenic).
Jan. —Queen and Adventurer (Four Parts—Historical—Drama).
Jan. 25—The Exploits of Elaine (Episode 5, "The Poisoned Room"—Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. —It's a Long, Long Way to Tipperary (Three Parts—Drama).

PHOTO DRAMA CO., INC.

Jan.—Time Lock Number 776 (Six Parts—Dr.).

PICTURE PLAYHOUSE FILM CO.

Jan. 22—The Three Black Trumps (Four Parts—Drama).
Jan. 27—The Explosion of Fort B 2 (Five Parts—Drama).
Feb. 2—The Black Envelope (Four Parts—Drama).

SAWYER.

As a Man Sows (Aquilla—Five Parts—Drama).
A Factory Magdalen (Five Parts—Drama).
The Lady of Lyons (Five Parts—Drama).
Jan. 31—The Sibyl of the Film (Comedy Dr.).

SUNSET MOTION PICTURE CO.

Jan.—Rescue of the Steffansson Arctic Expedition (Topical).

UNITED WARNERS.

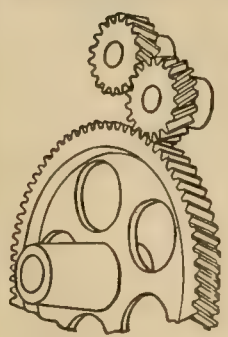
Jan. 20—Henpecked Smith (Starlight—Comedy).
Jan. 21—Such a Business (Luna—Comedy).
Jan. 23—Married in Disguise (St. Louis—Comedy).
Jan. 23—When Shadows Fall (Premier—Comedy).
Jan. 24—Novelty in Servants (Superba—Comedy).
Jan. 26—A Mix-Up (Grandin—Comedy).
Jan. 27—Her Lesson (Starlight—Comedy).
Jan. 28—Hickville's Diamond Mystery (Luna—Comedy).
Jan. 29—Courting Trouble (Gaumont—Comedy).
Jan. 30—Her Phoney Lovers (Jupiter—Comedy).
Feb. 7—Target Practice (Superba—Comedy).
—Such a Picnic (Superba—Comedy).
Feb. 8—Ach Louie (Starlight—Comedy).
Feb. 9—Love Thy Neighbors (Lotus—Comedy).
Feb. 10—Convict's Conspiracy (Features Ideal—Three Parts—Drama).
Feb. 11—Wheeled Into Matrimony (Luna—Comedy).
Feb. 12—Automatic House (Empress—Comedy).
Feb. 13—With a Girl at Stake (Premier—Drama).

WORLD FILM CORP.

Feb. 1—Money (Keanograph—Five Parts—Drama).
Feb. 8—A Daughter of the People (Dyreda—Five Parts—Drama).
Feb. 15—Old Dutch (Shubert—Drama).
Feb. 22—Alias Jimmy Valentine (Liebler—Five Parts—Drama).

WORLD FILM SPECIAL RELEASES.

Feb. 3—The Adventures of a Boy Scout (Drama).
Feb. 17—In the Land of the Head Hunters (Curtis—Drama).



Buy the Motiograph

Then you are sure of the BEST. We do not buy cheap die cast parts from other manufacturers and stamp our name on them. That's not the MOTIOGRAPH way—every part is made in its own factory and under the direction of experienced mechanics and that's why the MOTIOGRAPH has Longer Life and gives Better Satisfaction.

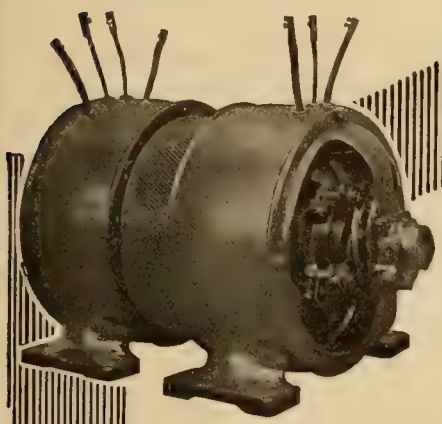
Write for Motiograph Literature

The Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co., 574 W. Randolph St., Chicago, Ill.

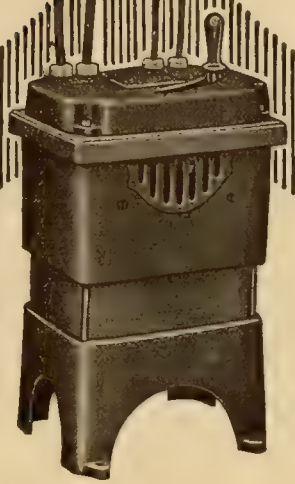
Eastern Office, 19 W. 23rd St., New York — Western Office, 833 Market St., San Francisco

STILL LEADING IN THE FIELD OF FEATURES
GREAT NORTHERN
110 W. 40th Street FAMOUS FILM PRODUCTIONS NEW YORK

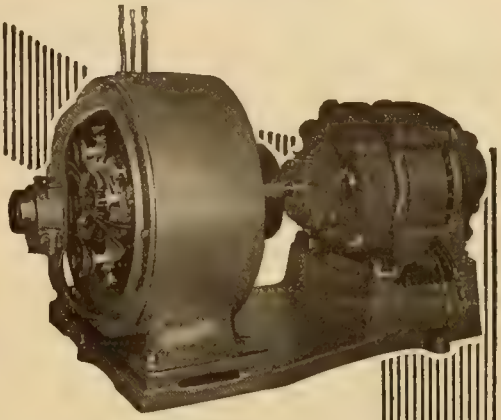
BETTER LIGHT LESS CURRENT



The DC Compensarc lowers the voltage of a direct current supply to that required at the lamp without needless waste.



The AC Compensarc cuts ⅔ from your lighting bill if you use alternating current.



The AC to DC Compensarc will transform alternating into direct current and reduce the voltage at the same time without needless waste.

No matter what current you have---Alternating or Direct---or what voltage or frequency, one of the will enable you to secure a light that will give those clear, bright pictures that everybody now demands.

FORT WAYNE COMPENSARCS

What's the use of paying extra money for special screens, projecting machines, and first run films and then spoil the whole result with poor light? With the Fort Wayne Compensarcs you can get any kind of light you want regardless of the kind or quality of your current supply.

The Compensarcs will give you

STEADY LIGHT. No flickering, no sputtering, even when changing intensities or from one machine to another.

WHITE LIGHT. No yellow streaks, no ghosts.

BRIGHT LIGHT. Three times the light with two-thirds the current.

They are safe, efficient, easy to operate, fool proof and reliable.

FORT WAYNE ELECTRIC WORKS
OF GENERAL ELECTRIC COMPANY
1702 BROADWAY
FORT WAYNE, INDIANA

Compensarcs are so commonly found in motion picture theatres that many people now call all current saving and transforming devices by that name.

But Remember

If it isn't a FORT WAYNE *it isn't a "COMPENSARC"*

Send TODAY for this FREE descriptive booklet

LICENSED RELEASE DATES

RELEASE DAYS.

Monday—Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Pathe, Selig, Vitagraph.

Tuesday—Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.

Wednesday—Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Pathe, Selig, Vitagraph.

Thursday—Biograph, Essanay, Lubin, Mina, Selig, Vitagraph.

Friday—Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.

Saturday—Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.

BIOGRAPH.

Jan. 26—File 113 (Special—Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 28—Milady's Boudoir (Drama).
Jan. 29—Her Slumbering Conscience (Drama)
Jan. 30—The Dancer's Ruse (Drama).
Feb. 1—Fate's Protecting Arm (Drama).
Feb. 2—Three Hats (Special—Two Parts—Drama).
Feb. 4—The Borrowed Necklace (Drama).
Feb. 5—It Doesn't Pay (Drama).
Feb. 6—Winning the Old Man Over (Comedy).
—The Club Pest (Comedy).

EDISON.

Jan. 26—Olive In the Mannouse (Tenth of "Olive's Opportunities" Series—Dr.).
Jan. 27—The Terrible Trunk (Comedy).
—Lodgings for Two (Comedy).
Jan. 29—An Invitation and An Attack (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 30—In His Father's Footsteps (Edu.).
Feb. 1—Found—A Flesh Reducer (Comedy).
Feb. 2—Olive and the Heirloom (11th of the "Olive's Opportunities" Series—Drama).
Feb. 3—Seen from the Gallery (Comedy).
—A Thorn Among Roses (Comedy).
Feb. 5—Oh! Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight (Special—Two Parts—Drama).
Feb. 6—The Stone Heart (Drama).
Feb. 8—Suspicious Characters (Comedy).
Feb. 9—Olive's Greatest Opportunity (Twelfth of "Olive's Opportunities" Series—Drama).
Feb. 10—The Life History of a Silk Worm (Sericulture).
—The Tailor's Bill (Comedy).
Feb. 12—The Glory of Clementina (Special—Two Parts—Drama).
Feb. 13—The Girl Who Kept Books (One of the Phases of the Life of "The Girl Who Earns Her Living"—Drama).

ESSANAY.

Jan. 26—At the End of a Perfect Day (Drama).
Jan. 27—The Fable of "The Syndicate Lover" (Comedy).
Jan. 28—When Slippery Slim Bought the Cheese (Western Comedy).
Jan. 29—The Ambition of the Baron (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 30—Broncho Billy and the False Note (Reg. in U. S. Patent Office—Western—Dr.).
Feb. 1—The New Teacher (Comedy).
Feb. 2—The Creed of the Clan (Drama).
Feb. 3—The Fable of Elvira and Farina and the Meal Ticket (Comedy).
Feb. 4—Sophie's Home-Coming (Western Comedy).
Feb. 5—Third Hand High (Special—Two Parts—Drama).
Feb. 6—Broncho Billy's Greaser Deputy (Reg. in U. S. Patent Office—Western Drama).
Feb. 8—Sweedie Goes to College (Comedy).
Feb. 9—A Romance of the Night (Drama).
Feb. 10—The Fable of the Good People Who Rallied to the Support of the Church (Comedy).
Feb. 11—Slim the Brave and Sophie the Fair (Western Comedy).
Feb. 12—Thirteen Down (Special—Two Parts—Drama).
Feb. 13—Broncho Billy's Sentence (Reg. in U. S. Pat. Office—Western Drama).

KALEM.

Jan. 26—A Model Wife (Comedy).
—Fatty's Echo (Comedy).
Jan. 27—The Affair of the Deserted House (First Episode of "The Girl Detective" Series (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 29—The Cause of It All (Comedy).
Jan. 30—The Little Engineer (Twelfth of the "Hazards of Helen" Railroad Series—Drama).
Feb. 1—The Swindler (Special—Two Parts—Drama).
Feb. 2—The Insurance Nightmare (Comedy).
Feb. 3—The Apartment House Mystery (Second of "The Girl Detective" Series—Special—Two Parts—Drama).
Feb. 5—The Hicksville Tragedy Troupe (Comedy).
Feb. 6—The Escape on the Fast Freight (Thirteenth of the "Hazards of Helen" Railroad Series—Drama).
Feb. 8—In the Hands of the Jury (Special—Two Parts—Drama).
Feb. 9—Mr. Pepperie Temper (Comedy).
—The Mexican's Chickens (Comedy).
Feb. 10—The Disappearance of Harry Warrington (Third of "The Girl Detective" Series—Special—Two Parts—Drama).
Feb. 12—Ham and the Sausage Factory (Comedy).
Feb. 13—The Red Signal (Fourteenth of the "Hazards of Helen" Railroad Series—Drama).

LUBIN.

Jan. 26—Green Backs and Red Skins (Comedy).
Jan. 27—The Attorney for the Defense (Special—Three parts—Drama).
Jan. 28—In Her Mother's Footsteps (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 29—The Language of the Dumb (Drama).
Jan. 30—Another Shade of Green (Comedy).
Feb. 1—Patsy Bolivar No. 6, "Patsy on a Trolley Car" (Comedy).
Feb. 2—The Belated Hooneymoon (Comedy).
Feb. 3—A Night's Adventure (Special—Two Parts—Drama).
Feb. 4—The Regenerating Love (Special—Three Parts—Drama).
Feb. 5—The Nameless Fear (Drama).
Feb. 6—The Furnace Man (Comedy).
Feb. 8—Patsy Bolivar No. 7, "Patsy in a Seminary" (Comedy).
Feb. 9—His Soul Mate (Comedy).
Feb. 10—Bags of Gold (Special—Three Parts—Drama).
Feb. 11—The Trapper's Revenge (Special—Two Parts—Drama).
Feb. 12—An Obstinate Sheriff (Drama).
Feb. 13—When Father Interfered (Comedy).

MINA.

Jan. 21—Dare-Devil Harry (Comedy).
Jan. 28—Black and White (Comedy).
Feb. 4—In the Palmy Days (Comedy).
Feb. 11—The Masquerade Hero (Comedy).

SELIG.

Jan. 26—The Grizzly Gulch Chariot Race (Farce Comedy).
Jan. 27—Heart's Desire (Drama).
Jan. 28—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 8, 1915 (News).
Jan. 29—She Wanted to be a Widow (Farce Comedy).
Jan. 30—The Hunt In Sycamore Gap (Melodrama).
Feb. 1—The Vision of the Shepherd (Special—Two Parts—Drama).
Feb. 1—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 9, 1915 (News).
Feb. 2—Forked Trails (Western—Drama).
Feb. 3—Just Like a Woman (Drama).
Feb. 4—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 10, 1915 (News).
Feb. 5—Cats (Comedy).
Feb. 6—The Leopard's Lair (Jungle-Zoo—Drama).
Feb. 8—The Passer-By (Special—Two Parts—War Drama).
Feb. 8—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 11, 1915 (news).
Feb. 9—Roping a Bride (Western Comedy-Drama).
Feb. 10—The Odd Slipper (Melodrama).
Feb. 11—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 12, 1915 (News).
Feb. 12—The Perfumed Wrestler (Farce Comedy).
Feb. 13—The Bugle Call (Jungle-Zoo Animal Picture—Drama).

VITAGRAPH.

Jan. 26—The Life of Game (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 27—The Home Coming of Henry (Comedy).
Jan. 28—The Barrier of Faith (Drama).
Jan. 29—The Chief's Goat (Comedy).
Jan. 30—Under the Paint (Broadway Star Feature—Special—Three parts—Drama).
Feb. 1—Cabman Kate (Comedy).
Feb 2—How Cissy Made Good (Broadway Star Feature—Special—Three Parts—Comedy).
Feb. 3—The Combination (Comedy).
Feb. 4—The Understudy; or Behind the Scenes (Drama).
Feb. 5—The Green Cat (Comedy).
Feb. 6—For Another's Crime (Special—Two Parts—Drama).
Feb. 8—Hearts to Let (Comedy-Drama).
Feb. 9—The Wrong Girl (Two Parts—Comedy).
Feb. 10—Breaking In (Comedy-Drama).
Feb. 11—On the Altar of Love (Drama).
Feb. 12—When Greek Meets Greek (Comedy).
Feb. 13—Mother's Roses (Broadway Star Feature—Special—Three Parts—Drama).

MISCELLANEOUS LICENSED FEATURES.

BIOGRAPH.

Nov.—The Woman in Black (Four Parts—Dr.).
Nov.—Under the Gaslight (Four Parts—Dr.).

BROADWAY STAR FEATURES.

Dec.—The Locked Door (Three parts—Drama).
Dec.—Sylvia Gray (Four parts—Drama).
Jan. 5—Two Women (Three parts—Drama).
Jan. 16—The Sage Brush Gal (Three parts—Drama).
Jan. 19—The Evil Men Do (Three parts—Dr.).
Jan. 30—Underneath the Paint (Three parts—Drama).
Feb. 2—How Cissy Made Good (Three parts—Comedy).
Feb. 13—Mother's Roses (Three parts—Dr.).

EDISON.

Dec. 19—Fantasma (Five parts—Drama).

ESSANAY.

Dec. 19—The Battle of Love (Drama).
Jan. 18—When Love and Honor Called (Dr.).
Feb. 18—The Accounting (Three Parts—Drama).

GEORGE KLEINE.

Nov.—Officer No. 666 (Five Parts—Comedy).
Jan. 18—Du Barry (Six parts—Drama).
Feb. 15—Stop Thief (Five Parts—Drama).

KALEM.

December—The School for Scandal (Four Parts—Drama).

LUBIN.

Nov.—The College Widow (Five Parts—Com.).
Dec.—The White Mask (Drama).
Dec.—The Valley of the Lost Hope (Drama).
Jan.—The District Attorney (Drama).

SELIG.

January—The Carpet from Bagdad (Five Parts—Drama).
January—The Rosary (Drama).
January—The Servant in the House (Drama).
January—The Ne'er Do Well (Drama).
January—A Texas Steer (Five Parts—Comedy).
January—The Crisis (Drama).
January—History of the World's Greatest War (Five Parts—Topical).

Greater New York Film Rental Company
All Specials Supplied. Main Office: 126-132 West 46th Street.
Licensed Film Supplied to Licensed Exhibitors :-: :-: :-: :-: :-: Write or Call for Particulars

SOMETHING EVERY EXHIBITOR SHOULD KNOW ABOUT

MINA FILMS

The maker of MinA Films was the first to make a fortune out of one reel comedies exclusively—more than seven years ago—before anyone else dared attempt such difficult work. Now he has the finest equipment in the world—plus experience—and is making MinA Films the best and funniest in the market. So good that they are on the General Film Program. You know what that means, don't you? Then don't hesitate—order from your licensed exchange today. Released Thursdays.

? WHOM WOULD YOU PREFER TO DO BUSINESS WITH ?

THE "FLY BY NIGHT" MANUFACTURER

WHOSE GUARANTEE IS NOT WORTH THE PAPER IT IS WRITTEN ON

OR

The J. H. Genter Co., Inc., of Newburgh, N. Y., Makers of Mirroroide

the flexible, metalized glass surface Screen, the Screen with a 5-Year Guarantee, backed by an incorporated company doing business under the laws of the State of New York, and since organization 6 years ago under the same management.

Read the following from a firm we have sold 8 screens:

Winnipeg, Manitoba, Canada. Jan. 5th, 1915.

J. H. GENTER CO., INC., Newburgh, N. Y.
Gentlemen: Please ship immediately to Empress Theatre, Calgary, Alta., Canada, by express, one Mirroroide Screen, size 16 x 21 feet. We want one with a coarse finish.
We are pleased to say that the Mirroroide Screen sent here about two weeks ago is giving very good satisfaction, and in our opinion shows one of the best pictures we ever had in this house. Yours truly, STARLAND, LIMITED, Starland Building.

Send for Large Free Samples—Prove These Claims

Moving Picture Theatre Mailing Lists for Sale

20,192, covering United States and Canada, price $40.00, or $3.50 per thousand for such states as you want.

1025 Film Exchanges, U. S..... $4.00
109 Manufacturers and Studios, U. S..... 1.00
210 Moving Picture Machine and Supply Dealers stating line of goods handled..... 1.50
231 Film Exchanges, Foreign Countries..... 3.00
520 Moving Picture Theatres, Foreign Countries.... 3.00

Ask us for full particulars.

TRADE CIRCULAR ADDRESSING CO.
166 West Adams St., Chicago. Established 1880.

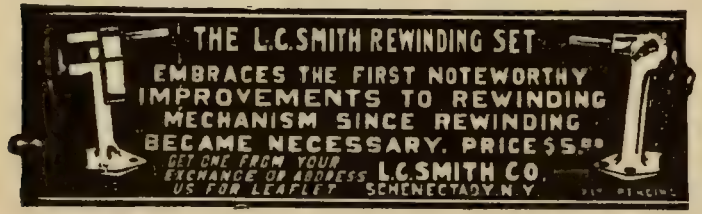
Perfect Developing and Printing

FOR AMATEURS AND PROFESSIONALS IN ANY QUANTITIES

We guarantee quality plus prompt delivery and personal service

Prices, References and Factory Description Sent at Your Request

Industrial Moving Picture Co.
223-233 West Erie Street, Chicago



THE L.C.SMITH REWINDING SET
EMBRACES THE FIRST NOTEWORTHY IMPROVEMENTS TO REWINDING MECHANISM SINCE REWINDING BECAME NECESSARY. PRICE $5.00
GET ONE FROM YOUR EXCHANGE OR ADDRESS US FOR LEAFLET
L.C.SMITH CO.
SCHENECTADY, N.Y.

Money Makers, Get Busy!

THE STRUGGLE OF THE EUROPEAN WAR

FIVE PARTS RELEASED JANUARY 25th

Actual Scenes of Battle on Land, on Sea and in the Air

STATE RIGHTS NOW SELLING

Private Feature Films Company
O'Brien Bldg., Cleveland, Ohio

RELEASED JANUARY 11TH BOOK FROM YOUR EXCHANGE

BEULAH POYNTER

In Her Greatest Success

"The Little Girl That He Forgot"

A Five-Part Drama of Intense Heart Interest and Human Appeal

COSMOS FEATURE FILM CORPORATION
126 W. 46th Street, New York City

BARGAIN LIST OF FEATURES

Title.	Length.	Maker.	Posters.	Price.
JACK SHEPPARD	4,000	IDEAL	1-3-6	$240
Daughter of a Jew	2,500	Drankoff	1-3	125
Reunited at the Coffin (Asta Nielsen).	2,500	Union	1-3-6 (as new)	150
Wheels of Fate	3,000	Monopol	1-3-6	150
Victims of White Terror	4,000	Messter	1-2/3-6	175
The Emigrants	6,000	Monopol	1-2/3-6	250
Possessed of the Demon	5,000	Deu Bios	1-2/3-6	250
Honeymoon under Difficulties	4,000	Deu Bios	2/1-1/3-6	200
Into the Depths (Asta Nielsen)	3,000	Union	1-3-6	150
Aeronautical Intrigue (Asta Nielsen)	4,000	Union	1-3-6	175
The Cry of the Child (Asta Nielsen)	3,000	Union	1-3-9	125
Exposure of the White Slave Traffic	3,800	Gt. North.	2/1-2/3-6	150
The Devil's Gap	4,000	Werner	1-3-4	175
The Black Ship	3,000	Dragon	1-3-6	85
Engine of Death	4,000	Apex	1-3-6	85
Mexico	4,000	Mexico	1-3-6	90
And There Was Light (Helen Gardner).	4,000	Gardner	1-3-6	125
For the Queen's Honor	4,000	Ambrosio	1-3-6	125
Diamonds of Destiny	4,000	Imperator	1-3-6	100
Detective Finn	4,000	Imperator	1-3-6	100
Golden Beetle	4,000	Cines	1-3-6	200
The Little Angel (Asta Nielsen)	5,200	Union	2/1-2/3-6	200
Spanish Blood (Asta Nielsen)	4,500	Union	1-3-6	150

First Class Single Reel Dramas, Comedies (including Keystone Comedies) always For Sale or Rent. Write for Lists.

G. W. BRADENBURGH 802 Vine Street, Philadelphia, Pa

THEATRE MANAGERS:

See

Louise M. Marion's Great War Pictures and Patriotic Novelties

Which crowd the theatres.

Louise M. Marion
419 West 21st St., New York

REBUILT MACHINES

We have on hand at all times a number of REBUILT MACHINES All in First-Class Order

Power's No. 5 Complete, with Fire Shutter	$75.00
Edison Exhibition, one pin movement	65.00
1911 Motiograph Complete	110.00
1912 Motiograph Complete	125.00
Power's No. 6, Complete	125.00
Power's No. 6, with 1912 Motiograph Lamp House	135.00

A-1 Condition Guaranteed
Will sell for CASH or on EASY PAYMENTS
Write for new catalog just off the press.

AMUSEMENT SUPPLY COMPANY
160 North Fifth Avenue Chicago, Illinois

STATE RIGHTS NOW SELLING

THE PHOTOGRAPHIC TRIUMPH

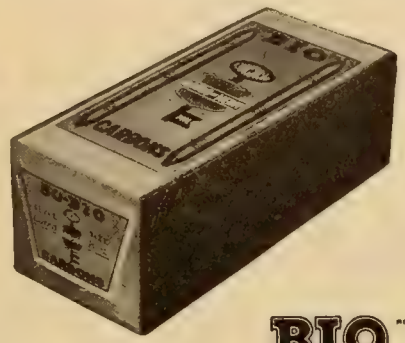
THE LAND OF THE LOST

IN 4 PARTS

STERLING CAMERA & FILM CO. 145 W. 45 NEW YORK N.Y.

A Whole Lot of Bright, White Light

IN A SMALL PACKAGE



At all Live Film Exchanges

... OR ...

Charles L. Kiewert Co.
NEW YORK

SAN FRANCISCO
143 22nd St.

MILWAUKEE
114 Huron St.

BIO CARBONS

OF COURSE!

You Can't Turn a DEAF EAR to

RENFAX SINGING PICTURES

Please Your Audiences and Increase Your Box Office Receipts

RENFAX FILM CO., Inc.

Makers of Musical Movies

110 WEST FORTIETH STREET, NEW YORK

PITTSBURGH, PA.: 417 Fourth Avenue
CHICAGO, ILL.: 154 West Lake Street
COLUMBUS, OHIO: 312½ North High Street

RENFAX FILM CO., INC.
110 West 40th Street, New York City.
Gentlemen:—Please send, without obligation to me, information regarding your Musical Movies.

(Theatre)

(Address)

(State)

Why Advertise?

In last week's issue of this paper appeared the following advertisement:

Did You See

"Tillie's Punctured Romance"

¶ We are not spending good money for advertising without knowing what sort of pictures we are going to release.

¶ The value is in the picture, not in the advertising.

¶ Again, will the picture be a good box office attraction?

Our purpose of advertising is to have you become acquainted with feature productions produced by

Mack Sennett

Because,

There is now in preparation a new multiple reel production with an all star Broadway cast.

The above is our reason for saying

Watch for the Next

SENNETT FEATURE

SIMPSON SOLAR SCREEN

The Original Daylight Screen
(Patented 1908)

THE BEST THE CHEAPEST

It has been proven that Aluminum is the only metal usable for a projection surface that will neither tarnish nor deteriorate.

That is why we use it.

Why is Aluminum the perfect projection surface?

Because it is White.

Thousands in use
—Ask the man who has one—

For further particulars address

ALFRED L. SIMPSON
113 West 132nd Street, New York City

N. B.—Our patents cover metalized screens—infringers will be prosecuted.

LEWIS M. SWAAB

PIONEER SUPPLY HOUSE IN PHILADELPHIA

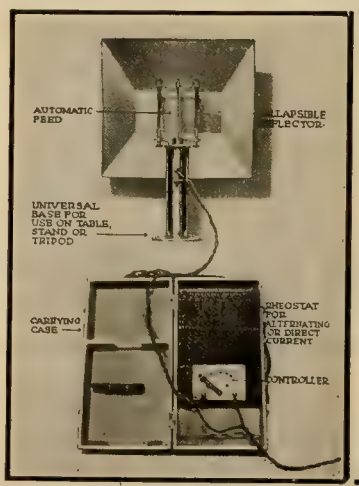
Principal Jobber in Power's, Simplex and Baird Machines

Mirror Screens, Motor Generator Sets, Mercury Arc Rectifiers, the Daylight Screen, Fire Extinguishers, Radium Gold Fibre Screens, Ft. Wayne Compensarcs, Power's Inductors, Ticket Choppers, Brass and Wood Poster Frames, Film Shipping Buckets, Carrying Cases, Asbestos Booths, Announcement Slides, Carbons, Oil and Cement, Exit Signs, Tickets, Pianos and Columbia Phonographs and SCREENCOAT, $3.00 per gallon will make an old screen new. Mortimer Film Cleaners.

Sole Agents for the Celebrated Mirroroide Screen

THE HOUSE WHOSE GUARANTEE IS WORTH 100%

1327 Vine St., Philadelphia, Pa.



"A great light—it gives the Director 25% more latitude in his work and makes possible scenes never before filmed"—

That is what one of the real big men wrote us about the

A-H. Panchroma Twin Arc Lamps

8000 c. p. per unit. Weight in case, 19 lbs. Either Direct or Alternating Current. Can be transported anywhere by a boy. The biggest advance in motion picture lighting yet made. Write for descriptive matter or call for a demonstration.

ALLISON & HADAWAY
Photographic Importers and Manufacturers
235 Fifth Ave. New York

ERKER'S THEATRE YEAR BOOK

A well arranged bookkeeping system for the theatre. Your receipts, expenses and profits, also a record of films can be told at a glance. Printed on good ledger paper, well bound, with reinforced corners. Sample sheet sent on request. Price $1.00, postage. If postage is not included, it will be sent by express.

GET ONE TODAY and when you order ask for that 120-page catalog

Everything pertaining to Motion Pictures can be had at

ERKER'S

608 Olive Street ST. LOUIS, MO.

Feature Rights Men, Attention!

A Deagan Unaphone
Will Double Your Receipts

READ WHAT ONE USER SAYS:

Carthage, Mo., Nov. 27, '14.

J. C. Deagan:
"I cleaned up $105.00 here yesterday; all due to advertising with the Unaphone. I wouldn't be without it for a Thousand Dollars.
(Signed) W. R. HART."

Write for particulars.

J. C. DEAGAN,
Deagan Building,
1776 Berteau Avenue, CHICAGO, ILL.

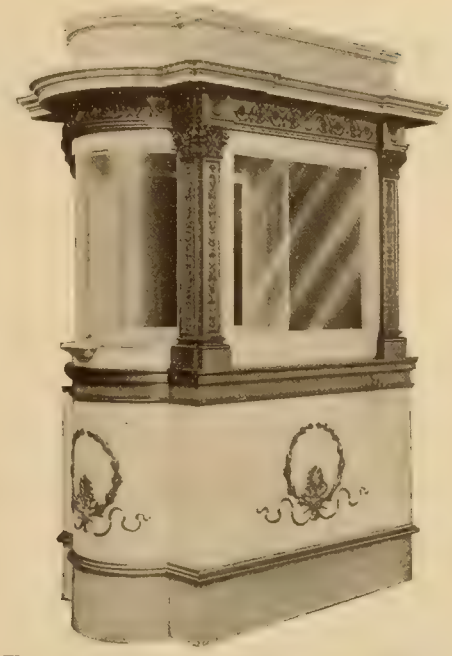
QUALITY FIRST!!
YOUR NEGATIVE DEVELOPED, PRINTED, TITLED and SHIPPED within 12 hours.

5c. per foot complete
Local work given preference over all other.

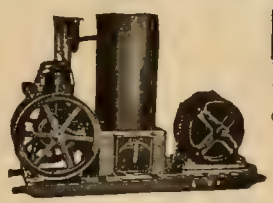
6c. TITLES per foot
We lead, let those that can, follow.

GUNBY BROS., Inc.,
145 West 45th Street, New York City

WANTED
Two Old Power's No. 5 or No. 6 Heads
Condition no object if price is right. State all in first letter.
W. C. McGUIRE
229 N. State St. Chicago, Ill.



TICKET BOOTHS
FOR
MOTION PICTURE THEATRES
DESIGNED AND MANUFACTURED BY
The Decorators Supply Co., Chicago
SHOW ROOMS AND FACTORY LOCATED CORNER ARCHER AVE., LEO & LIME STS
SEND US YOUR BLUE PRINTS, AND WE WILL WORK OUT THE MOST ARTISTIC AND EFFICIENT LIGHTING SCHEME
Send for our catalog of moving picture fronts



MOVING PICTURE ELECTRIC LIGHT PLANT
Used and highly endorsed by the United States Army. Biggest Sensation in the Moving Picture World. Can be operated by a boy 10 years old. One customer writes:
"Plant running like a top and delivering the 'juice' right along every day for our moving picture house. Costs us about one-tenth as much as public service. Also pumps water to all our buildings, 2,000 gallons per day."
Write today for Bulletin 101. It is a mighty interesting booklet.
(163) DETROIT ENGINE WORKS, Dept. 102, DETROIT, MICH., U. S. A.

EXHIBITORS—EXCHANGEMEN

If you are having trouble getting the Moving Picture World each week from your newsdealer, fill in name and address below, send with one dollar, and we will mail paper direct for four months.

Moving Picture World, 17 Madison Avenue, New York

Name .....

.....

Theatre ....

ALLIANCE PROGRAM

One "Worth While" Feature Each Week

For

Illinois and Indiana

Controlled by

Celebrated Players Film Co.

Leaders in Filmdom's Progress

64 W. Randolph Street, Chicago

See Alliance Films Corp. ad. this issue for releases

Carbons Carbons Carbons

Exhibitors! Why pay an Exorbitant Price for your carbons when you can save plenty of money by buying the kind made in the U. S. A. from us? Get our prices and you will appreciate the saving.

The only Jobbers in Philadelphia for the 4 best known Machines in the world—Edison, Powers, Simplex and Motiograph—ALWAYS in STOCK.

Let us improve your Light by installing a WESTINGHOUSE MERCURY ARC RECTIFIER or a WAGNER CONVERTER.

A large stock of 14-inch STEEL REELS to carry 2000 ft. of film. The best on the market, $1.00.

Scenery of all kinds made to order. Expert repairing done on all machines at short notice. The House that handles nothing but the Best and Only GENUINE PARTS of everything. If you are not one of our customers, you are losing money by not dealing with the WIDE AWAKE CONCERN.

Bargains in Slightly Used Machines. Power's No. 6A, 3 Power's No. 6, 2 Power's No. 5, 1 Edison Model B and 1 Edison Exhibition Model; all complete.

These are Bargains and will be closed out quickly. Do not Delay.

Estimates on New Theatres cheerfully given.

CALEHUFF SUPPLY COMPANY, Inc.

1301 Race Street, Philadelphia

Gundlach Projection Lenses Have Made A Reputation

They are now so well known we can refer you to almost any exhibitor, film exchange, dealer or manufacturer for an opinion about them and with certainty that every man who has seen results will tell you they are the best lenses made—absolutely the best.

Gundlach-Manhattan Optical Co.

808 Clinton Ave., So., Rochester, N. Y.

IT'S ALL IN THE LENS

NOW BOOKING The Sensation of the Age!

ANNETTE KELLERMANN, in "NEPTUNE'S DAUGHTER"

KEITH'S HIPPODROME, CLEVELAND, OHIO, 2 weeks' run
HARTMAN THEATRE, COLUMBUS, OHIO, 3 weeks and 3 days' run
KEITH'S THEATRE, CINCINNATI, OHIO, 2 weeks' run
VICTORIA THEATRE, DAYTON, OHIO, 2 weeks' run
VALENTINE THEATRE, TOLEDO, OHIO, 3 weeks' run
PARK THEATRE, YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO, 1 week's run
COLONIAL THEATRE, AKRON, OHIO, 1 week's run
And many others to record-breaking business.

← TREMENDOUS, RECORD-BREAKING BUSINESS EVERYWHERE

Will rent or play on percentage. FOR BOOKINGS, WRITE, WIRE OR CALL ON McMAHAN & JACKSON, 109 West 5th Street, Cincinnati, O.

Non-Breakable and Sanitary STEEL and CAST IRON

HIGH Quality

LOW Price

Opera Chairs

immediate shipment on many styles; Second Hand Chairs; out-of-door seating. Send measurements for FREE SEATING PLAN. Mention this paper.

STEEL FURNITURE CO.
Grand Rapids, Mich.; New York, 150 Fifth Ave.

THE PEABODY SCHOOL FURNITURE CO
North Manchester, Ind.

Opera Chairs
Folding Chairs
Complete Line
Prompt Shipments
Write for Catalogue
With Direct Factory Prices

FOR the best music obtainable for motion pictures find out about the new

SEEBURG-MOTION-PICTURE-PLAYER

Manufactured by

J. P. SEEBURG PIANO CO.
Republic Bldg., 209 S. State St., CHICAGO

Stockton's Scriptwriting Service

To aid those who wish to guard against the formation of bad writing habits, or who wish to estimate their progress, I offer the following service:

Script Criticism For a fee of two dollars for each reel, I will read your manuscript and write a personal letter, pointing out the faults of plotting, technical development, manuscript preparation, etc. Sometimes I can help you to make the script salable, but I do not guarantee a sale. I do not revise manuscript; I do not typewrite it, nor do I offer it for sale. I simply write you a letter that tells you what the trouble is.

Plot Estimates If your stories do not sell and you want to know why, send me five synopses and one full script. I will criticise the script and tell you whether it is your plot or your development that is wrong. The fee for this service is $5 for the five synopses and additional plot. Synopses must not run more than 300 words each. Send a synopsis of your undeveloped plot and fee of one dollar and you will be advised as to whether it will pay you to develop the same.

Please Note My fees do not include envelopes or return postage. Send prepaid and self addressed return envelope and remit in New York exchange; not local checks. I reserve the right to return unread (with fee) any story or plot that does not warrant treatment. All scripts must be typewritten.

REV. E. BOUDINOT STOCKTON, S.T.B.
161 So. Arlington Ave., East Orange, N. J.

OPERA CHAIRS

FOR EVERY PURPOSE
1,000 STYLES
ESTABLISHED 1865
WRITE FOR CAT. NO. 31

The A. H. Andrews Co.
115-117 So. Wabash Ave.
Chicago, Ill.
Branches in all Leading Cities
New York Office
1472 Broadway, Long Acre Bldg.
Seattle Office
508-10-12 First Ave., So.
San Francisco Office
782 Mission St.

See the New "1915" Models, After Jan. 1st

"UNLIKE THE ORDINARY CHAIRS"

ADDRESS:
THEATRE CHAIR SALES DEPT.
NEW LONDON,
U. S. A. WISC.

CASTEEL THEATRE CHAIRS

MADE ONLY BY
WISCONSIN SEATING FACTORIES

FACTORIES IN NEW LONDON
PT. WASHINGTON
SHEBOYGAN
U. S. A. GRAFTON

The "Standardized" Theatre Chairs

Do you want a life-saving chair?
Do you want a space-saving chair?
Do you want a sanitary chair?
Do you want a scientifically built, double standard chair?

We operate the largest exclusive theatre chair factory in the world, AND SELL DIRECT TO YOU. WRITE US

The HARDESTY MFG. CO., Canal Dover, Ohio

Are You Tired

of playing waltzes and popular songs for all your pictures? Try "bringing out" the dramatic scenes with dramatic music. The

Orpheum Collection

contains the best music of this kind published. Issued in Three Series:

No. 1, No. 2 and No. 3

Piano, (24 pages each), 58 cts. for each series; $1.15 for any two; $1.70 for all three. Violin, 40 cts. each; 75 cts. for any two; $1.05 for all three. Cornet, 35 cts., each; 65 cts. any two; 95 cts. all three. First and second series have parts for Cello, Flute, Clarinet, Trombone and Drums. Practical for piano alone or in combination with any above instruments. Discounts on orders for four or more parts. Send for free sample pages. Note new address.

CLARENCE E. SINN
1942 West 21st St. Chicago, Ill.

WHY NOT NOW?

Bull Dog Cement
and
One Drop Oil

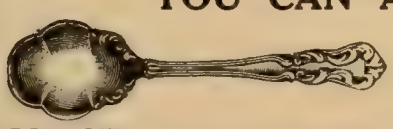
ONE DROP OIL COMPANY
2222 W. Monroe St., Chicago

—Portable Projector—
BARGAIN

Demonstrating model portable projector for impromptu exhibitions, lectures, salesmen and home use. Projects 6-ft. picture, fire-proof, works on any current. The Motionscope Projector is the finest machine on the market; regular price is $225.00, but for these Demonstrating Models, only slightly used, guaranteed in good condition, only $135.00 net cash. Shipped subject to examination on receipt of $10.00 to cover transportation.

MOTIONSCOPE COMPANY
Indianapolis, Indiana

YOU CAN ALWAYS PLAY TO A "FULL HOUSE"



if you make judicious use of PREMIUMS, such as we furnish to hundreds of MOVING PICTURE HOUSES.

If you are interested, write for our 700-page CATALOGUE No. 578, which lists an endless variety of appropriate premiums at the lowest prices.

N. SHURE COMPANY 230 West Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.

THERE'S A REASON

for doubt on technical points when authoritative information for the Exhibitor, Manager or Operator can't be obtained. The contents of the books herewith advertised place all necessary information and practical assistance within reach of every reader. For instance, every weekly issue of the contains an unequalled fund of information in regard to every angle of the moving picture art. Its staff is an aggregation of the best posted men in the industry who have devoted years to a study of the requirements of all our readers. Its correspondents are located in all the principal centers and its columns contain the most complete data possible. In a class by itself as a trade paper for every intelligent student of moving picture production and exhibition.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

F. H. RICHARDSON the recognized expert on projection has a second edition of his "THE MOTION PICTURE HANDBOOK FOR MANAGERS AND OPERATORS," consisting of 420 pages of fully illustrated articles on the subject of projection, that is enjoying an exceptional sale. This will be the standard textbook for managers and operators for many years. The price is $2.50.

J. H. HALLBERG well known as an authority on electricity has compiled a 278-page fully illustrated book, entitled "MOTION PICTURE ELECTRICITY," containing up-to-the-minute information on picture theatre electrical equipment. Also necessary tables and practical advice to the operator. A revision of all his Electrical Talks published some years ago in one of the trade papers. The price, $2.50.

EPES W. SARGENT is author of "TECHNIQUE OF THE PHOTOPLAY," an exhaustive treatise on the writing of the Photoplay, containing sample scripts and complete detailed instruction for experienced as well as inexperienced writers. Price, $2.00. All published by

Moving Picture World

17 Madison Avenue New York

Selig

Don't Jump About Like a Grasshopper and Get Nowhere. Jump Right Into Prosperity by Booking the Selig Program.—SELIG SNAPSHOTS.

Selig Regular Program for Week of February 8-13

Brilliant 4-Color Selig Posters Ready for Shipment on all Releases. Order from Your Exchange or from This Office

A SELIG TWO-REEL WAR DRAMA RELEASED MONDAY, FEB. 8

THE PASSER-BY

A beautiful village belle besieged by a host of admirers beseeches one of them to volunteer as substitute for her young brother who supports her and her invalid mother. An unknown young man, fascinated by her beauty, quietly accepts the challenge ignored by the other swains and after a brilliant service in the army comes back to claim his bride. Many complications give a zest to the plot. STELLA RAZETO and GUY OLIVER play the leading parts supported by other Selig favorites. The story is vividly pictured.

PICTURES FROM BATTLEFIELDS

Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 11

RELEASED MONDAY, FEBRUARY 8 ONE REEL

Very latest and most up-to-date consignments of war-news pictures photographed in Europe by our intrepid and fearless camera men. Other international news also shown in pictures.

A SELIG WESTERN COMEDY-DRAMA.

Roping a Bride

RELEASED TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 9 ONE REEL

TOM MIX and his company of western cowboy actors present another of those lively and entertaining picture-plays which are always acceptable to theatre patrons, and which revive box office activity. The riding "stunts" by TOM MIX are a feature.

A. SELIG MELODRAMA

The Odd Slipper

RELEASED WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 10 ONE REEL

This is the story of two disreputable old schemers who try to rob a beautiful heiress of her fortune. The hero finds the facts in the lining of a slipper and rescues the girl. An exciting mystery story.

GREAT WAR NEWS PICTURES

Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 12

RELEASED THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 11 ONE REEL

An intensely interesting series of news pictures depicting world events, including the very latest, authentic motion pictures taken on the world's greatest battlefields.

A SELIG FARCE COMEDY

The Perfumed Wrestler

RELEASED FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 12 ONE REEL

A series of absurd and ridiculous situations, depicting the adventures of a grocer clerk who adopts unfair methods to defeat a wrestling champion. It's a strong story about limburger cheese.

A SELIG JUNGLE-ZOO WILD ANIMAL PICTURE

The Bugle Call

RELEASED SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 13 ONE REEL

Several of the celebrated Selig Jungle-Zoo wild animal actors portray active parts in this pretty love story, the scenes of which are laid in a South African military post. A sure business bringer.

SELIG REGULAR PROGRAM RELEASED THROUGH GENERAL FILM CO.

THE SELIG POLYSCOPE COMPANY

Executive Offices; Chicago, Ill., 20 E. Randolph St.

TRADE S MARK

NPCo

ELIMINATING TROUBLE

Exhibitors and Operators caused much annoyance.

With audience dissatisfied, Exhibitor losing patronage.

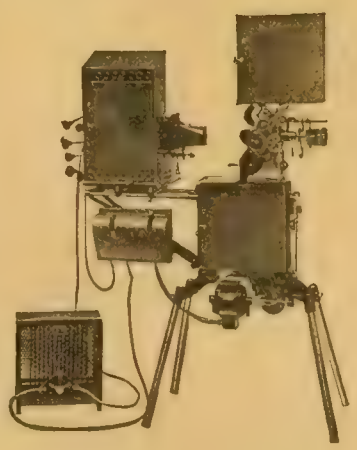
Impending trouble always thought of by Operator.

Through loss of lower loop, meaning interrupted picture.

All this can be avoided by use of ingenious device.

This device is Power's Automatic Loop Setter and

Is used exclusively on machines of Power's manufacture.



Write for Catalog G With Full Details

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY

Ninety Gold Street New York City

Vol. 23, No. 7 February 13, 1915 Price 10 Cents

H E HOFFMAN

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE FILM INDEX

EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

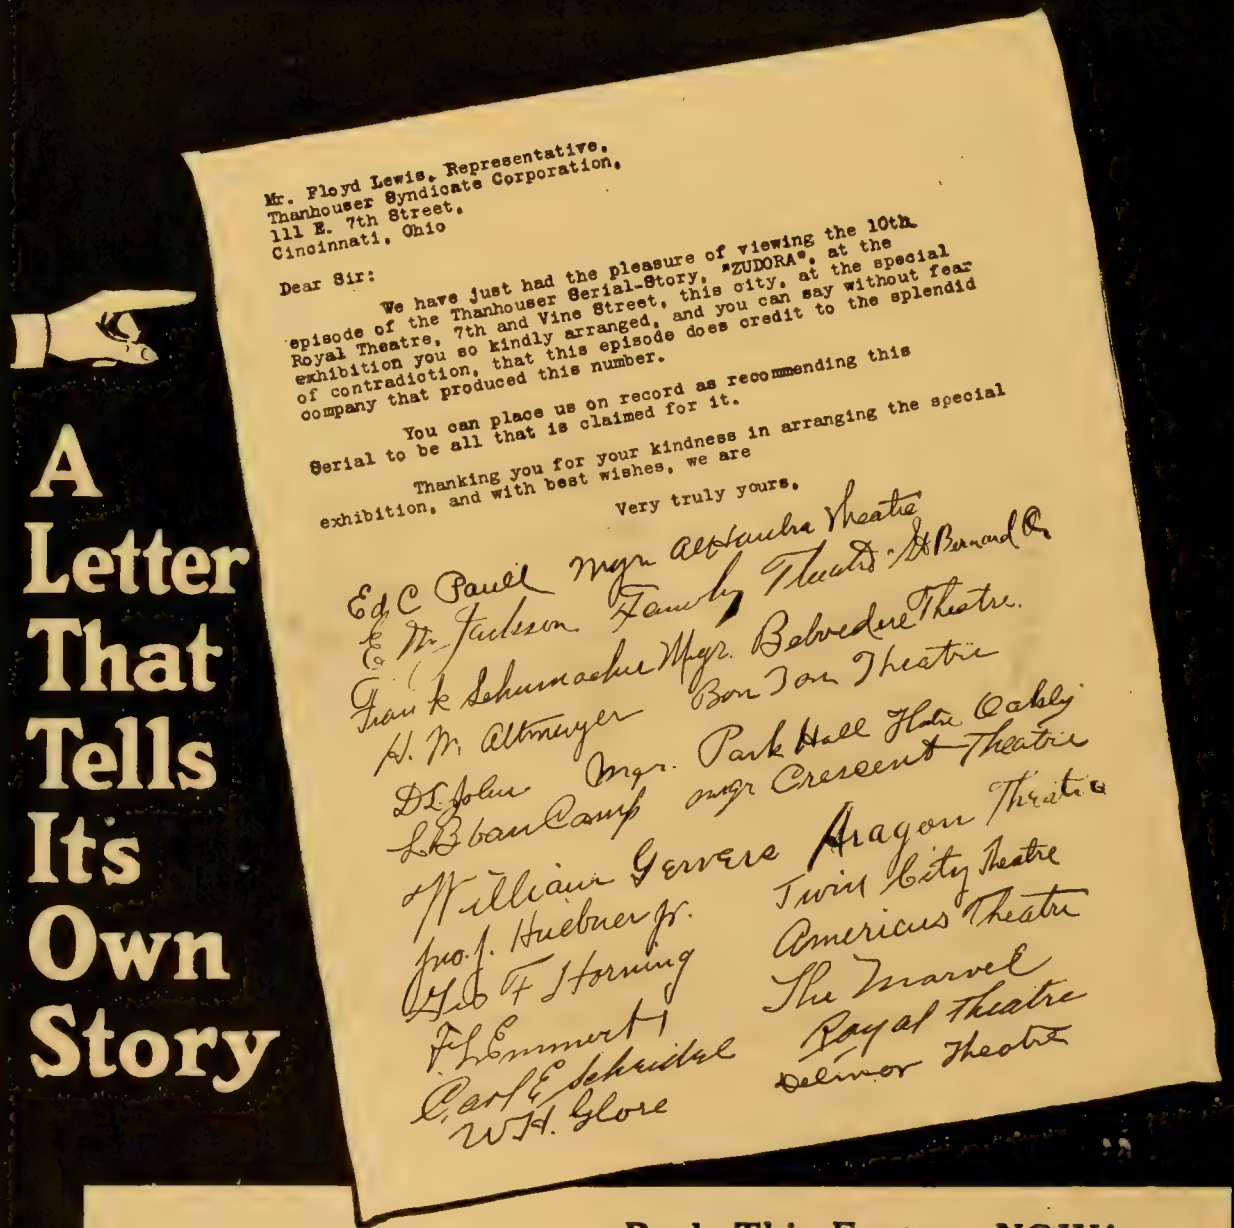
Scene from "The Millionaire Hundred Dollar Bill" (Vitagraph).

Post Office Box 226
Madison Square Station

NEW YORK

17 Madison Avenue
Telephone Madison Square 3510

ZUDORA IN THE TWENTY MILLION DOLLAR MYSTERY



Mr. Floyd Lewis, Representative,
Thanhouser Syndicate Corporation,
111 E. 7th Street,
Cincinnati, Ohio

Dear Sir:

We have just had the pleasure of viewing the 10th episode of the Thanhouser Serial-Story, "ZUDORA", at the Royal Theatre, 7th and Vine Street, this city, at the exhibition you so kindly arranged, and you can say without fear of contradiction, that this episode does credit to the splendid company that produced this number.

You can place us on record as recommending this Serial to be all that is claimed for it.

Thanking you for your kindness in arranging the special exhibition, and with best wishes, we are

Very truly yours,

Ed C Paul Mgr Alhambra Theatre
E M Jackson Family Theatre St Bernard Ohio
Frank Schumacher Mgr. Belvedere Theatre.
H. M. Altmayer Bon Ton Theatre
D L John Mgr. Park Hall Hyde Cable
L B Beauchamp mgr Crescent Theatre
William Gevers Aragon Theatre
Jno. J. Huebner Jr. Twin City Theatre
Geo F Horning Americus Theatre
F L Emmert The Marvel
Carl E Schmidel Royal Theatre
W H. Glore Denver Theatre

A Letter That Tells Its Own Story

Book This Feature NOW!

The cast in this great Thanhouser Serial includes James Cruze—the hero—Marguerite Snow, Sidney Bracy, Mary Elizabeth Forbes, Harry Benham and Frank Farrington—all stars.

The story by Harold MacGrath is now appearing in 300 newspapers. The photoplay is being directed by Howell Hansel—director of "The Million Dollar Mystery." A new two-reel episode is released each week. See our representative at any Mutual Exchange in America for bookings.

THANHOUSER SYNDICATE CORPORATION, 71 W. 23rd St., New York City, N.Y.

ALWAYS DOING THE UNEXPECTED!

KEYSTONE

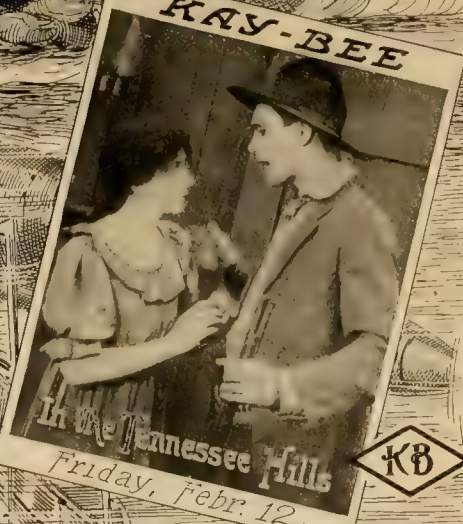
FORD STERLING IS BACK

K

BRONCHO

Wednesday, Febr. 10.

KAY-BEE



Friday, Febr. 12.

KB

Released Exclusively through the Mutual Film Corporation

DOMINO

THE PRIDE OF GUADELOUPE

Thursday, Febr. 11.

D

8"-10" Photos of our Players can be had by sending to Publicity Dept 15 Cents for one-50 Cents for set of 4.

A WONDERFUL LOBBY DISPLAY

22"-28" Photo layouts in Character makeup of Mabel Normand & Roscoe Arbuckle 20 Cents each

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CORPORATION

LONGACRE BUILDING, 42d STR. AND BROADWAY, NEW YORK. KESSEL & BAUMANN, MANAGERS.

Demand Your Booking Date NOW

Don't let anything stop you. Don't make excuses. Don't accept any. The "BLACK BOX"—the biggest Photoplay Special Serial ever offered you, is ready for Booking. Don't hesitate. Be a business man and a money getter. You'll have the powerful help of the greatest Advertising and Publicity Campaign ever produced. NOW! NOW! NOW! It's up to you.

"THE BLACK BOX" is the achievement extraordinary and beyond compare, of the master minds of the Moving Picture Industry. Produced by

The World's Greatest Story Writer—E. Phillips Oppenheim—The most successful of all writers of detective and mystery stories.

The World's Greatest Moving Picture Director—Otis Turner—The Daddy and the Past Master of them all.

The World's Greatest Producer—The Universal Film Manufacturing Company—Largest Makers of Moving Pictures in the Universe.

The World's Greatest Studios—The Million Dollar Plant at Universal City, Cal. Where 1,500 People are engaged in making Moving Pictures.

Book this powerfully pulling play for Big Business. It will fill your house to overflowing at every episode. Such intense and gripping situations were never before seen in the silent drama.

The whole wide world has been searched, the realm of science explored, and the genius of man utilized to provide in "The BLACK BOX," scenes, settings, situations and climaxes that will lift your audiences off their seats, and send them from your theatre eager for the next episode.

Take advantage of this opportunity to book

The BLACK BOX

And you can put a crimp in competition. There is absolutely no doubt or question on this point.

You will receive wonderful and unparalleled support and co-operation, the most startling, eye-stopping newspaper ad cuts FREE. The most powerfully written general publicity, posters, heralds, art stamps and albums, novelties and supremely clever advertising stunts that will create a furore in your town.

We have done everything that the keenest brains in the moving picture industry could do. Everything is ready. We've done our part. NOW IT'S UP TO YOU.

Write or wire instantly to your exchange, or to the

UNIVERSAL FILM MANUFACTURING CO.

"Largest Film Manufacturing Concern in the Universe"

1600 BROADWAY CARL LAEMMLE, President NEW YORK

From Hartlepool, England To the New York Subway

Seems a long sweep, but the "Animated Weekly" cameras caught the damage at the first place the day after the German visitation, just as "Animated Weekly" cameras caught the rescue work at the second, TEN MINUTES AFTER THE ACCIDENT. And no other cameras caught either of these important happenings, which were fraught with interest to thousands of people and had been read about in the papers by millions! EVERY topical weekly SHOULD HAVE had these views, of course.

These Were Just Two of Many January Scoops by "The Animated Weekly!"

Every month sees similar EXCLUSIVE NEWS VIEWS in the "Animated." Its scoop views of events dealing with the breaking out of the European conflict are moving picture history. Exhibitors who use the "Animated" AND SOME OTHER NEWS WEEKLY will tell you: "There's Nothing Like the Animated!" It's a national phrase. All because "Animated" abounds every week in the news views all the weeklies SHOULD HAVE and none of them DO HAVE—because EVERY week is "scoop week" with the "Animated."

To Get In On February Scoops See a Universal Exchange Today!

UNIVERSAL FILM MFG. CO.

1600 BROADWAY LARGEST FILM MANUFACTURING COMPANY IN THE UNIVERSE. CARL LAEMMLE, President NEW YORK

There's Nothing Like "The Animated!"

Majestic Motion Picture Co.

Two-part feature for release SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 14

How Hazel Got Even

DOROTHY GISH

An unusually attractive comedy drama of love and pugilism, featuring

Dorothy Gish

in a characterization well suited to her delightful personality

MAJESTIC AND KOMIC GUIDE FOR EXHIBITORS

(In which we try to tell only the truth about all Majestic and Komic releases)

AN OLD-FASHIONED GIRL (1 Reel Majestic). Release date Tuesday, Feb. 2. A pleasing comedy drama featuring Dorothy Gish. The recreant lover at last finds the "old fashioned girl" the true idol of his heart.

THE DOUBLE DECEPTION (1 Reel Majestic). Release date Friday, Feb. 5. An amusing comedy drama featuring Miriam Cooper. The wealthy young lovers are married, each believing the other to be of the working class.

IMAR THE SERVITOR (2 Reel Majestic). Release date Sunday, Feb. 7. A strong drama of the Arabian desert. Imar the slave saves the sweetheart of his American friend.

BILL TURNS VALET (1 Reel Komic). Release date Sunday, Feb. 7. No. 16 of the Bill the Office Boy stories, featuring Fay Tincher as the stenographer and introducing a new office boy in the character of "Bill."

HIS LAST DEAL (1 Reel Majestic). Release date Tuesday, Feb. 9. A ne'er-do-well father wrecks his son's hopes but retrieves the situation and takes himself out of their lives.

HOW HAZEL GOT EVEN (2 Reel Majestic). Release date Sunday, Feb. 14. A comedy drama featuring Dorothy Gish. The little waitress is deserted by her sweetheart who becomes a pugilist, but in the end she evens the score with him and gains a more worthy husband. A story of special merit and amusing interest.

MUSIC HATH CHARMS (1 Reel Komic). Release date Sunday, Feb. 14. An excellent farce comedy telling of the downfall of a musical impostor.

MAJESTIC MOTION PICTURE COMPANY

Studios, 4500 Sunset Blvd., Los Angeles, Cal.

Business Office, 29 Union Square West, New York City

Mutual Movies MakeTime Fly

ABOVE ALL QUALITY

MUTUAL PROGRAM

MUTUAL PROGRAM

MUTUAL PROGRAM

THE MAN VOTED THE WORLD'S MOST POPULAR PHOTOPLAYER

Mr. Francis X. Bushman

Essanay

"FIRST TO STANDARDIZE PHOTOPLAYS"

1333 ARGYLE ST., CHICAGO

Trademark Reg. U. S. Pat. 1907

Trademark Reg. U. S. Pat. 1907

Mr. Francis X. Bushman

Is Presented in

"The Accounting"

(In 3 Acts)

THIS is a thrilling drama of the secret service, to be released in conjunction with the complete prize mystery story in the March issue of The Ladies' World. Large prizes are offered by the magazine for the best written paragraph missing in the story.

Released February 18 through the Feature Department of the General Film Co.

Released Monday, February 15

"The Victor"

How a henpecked husband gained the respect of his mother-in-law.

Released Tuesday, February 16

"A Pound for a Pound"

By JAMES OLIVER CURWOOD

A thrilling story of the ice-bound Yukon district.

Released Wednesday, February 17

"The Fable of the Cold Gray Dawn of the Morning After"

By GEORGE ADE

Mr. Rounder blames it all on the fruit.

Released Thursday, February 18

"Snakeville's Beauty Parlor"

The beauty doctor finds life rather rough in Snakeville.

Released Friday, February 19

"An Amateur Prodigal"

(In 2 Acts)

How a young society man makes happy the last hours of a mother's life by posing as her son. Adapted from Short Stories Magazine.

Released Saturday, February 20

"Broncho Billy and the Vigilante"

(Reg. U. S. Pat. Office)

A western drama featuring MR. G. M. ANDERSON.

Charles Chaplin

The Funniest Photoplay Comedian is Presented in

"His New Job"

(In 2 Acts) and the second Essanay-Chaplin Comedy

"One Night Out"

(In two acts.) Released Feb. 11th

RELEASED THROUGH ALL THE BRANCH OFFICES OF THE GENERAL FILM CO.

Mr. G. M. Anderson

Is Presented in

"When Love and Honor Called" and "The Tell-Tale Hand"

Mr. Francis X. Bushman

Is Presented in

"THE BATTLE OF LOVE," by Mrs. Wilson Woodrow

"IN THE GLARE OF THE LIGHTS" and "THE PLUM TREE"

These complete three reel prize mystery plays are thrilling millions all over the country.

RELEASED THROUGH THE FEATURE DEPT. OF THE GENERAL FILM CO.

Trade Mark Reg. U. S. Pat., 1907

Essanay

"FIRST TO STANDARDIZE PHOTOPLAYS"

1333 ARGYLE ST., CHICAGO

Trade Mark Reg. U. S. Pat., 1907

FAMOUS PLAYERS—CHARLES FROHMAN CO.
PRESENT

WILLIAM H. CRANE

IN HIS GREAT CHARACTERIZATION,

"DAVID HARUM"

BY EDWARD NOYES WESTCOTT,

One of the quaintest and noblest character studies ever contributed to the American stage,
IN FIVE PARTS,

Released February 22d, on Paramount Program

PRODUCED BY THE

FAMOUS PLAYERS

ADOLPH ZUKOR, President
DANIEL FROHMAN, Managing Director
EDWIN · S · PORTER, Technical Director

36 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR

Forthcoming Attractions

February

MARY PICKFORD in
"MISTRESS NELL,"
The Noted Romantic Drama by George C. Hazelton, Jr.
Released February 1st.

JOHN EMERSON in
"THE BACHELOR'S ROMANCE,"
Martha Morton's Popular Comedy-Drama
Released February 11th.

GABY DESLYS in "HER TRIUMPH,"
The Celebrated International Star's First and Exclusive Appearance in Motion Pictures
Released February 8th.

WILLIAM H. CRANE in
"DAVID HARUM,"
A Faithful Film Version of the Distinguished Star's Greatest Characterization
Released February 22d.

"THE LOVE ROUTE,"
Edward Peple's Sensational Comedy-Romance Triumph
Released February 25th.

A quintette of remarkable consistency and variety—a group of subjects that in every respect adhere to the traditions of

FILM COMPANY

Executive Offices
213~229 WEST 26TH ST.
NEW YORK

36 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR

JESSE L. LASKY

IN ASSOCIATION WITH

DAVID BELASCO

PRESENTS

BLANCHE SWEET

THE WARRENS OF VIRGINIA

IN A PICTURIZATION OF DAVID BELASCO'S PRODUCTION OF WM. C. DE MILLE'S CIVIL WAR DRAMATIC MASTERPIECE

PRODUCED UNDER THE DIRECTION OF CECIL B. DE MILLE

SUPREME MILITARY SPECTACLE—SYMPATHETIC HUMAN DOCUMENT SHOWING THE SORROWS AND SUFFERINGS OF CIVIL STRIFE

RELEASED FEB. 15TH THROUGH THE PARAMOUNT PICTURES CORP'N.

JESSE L. LASKY

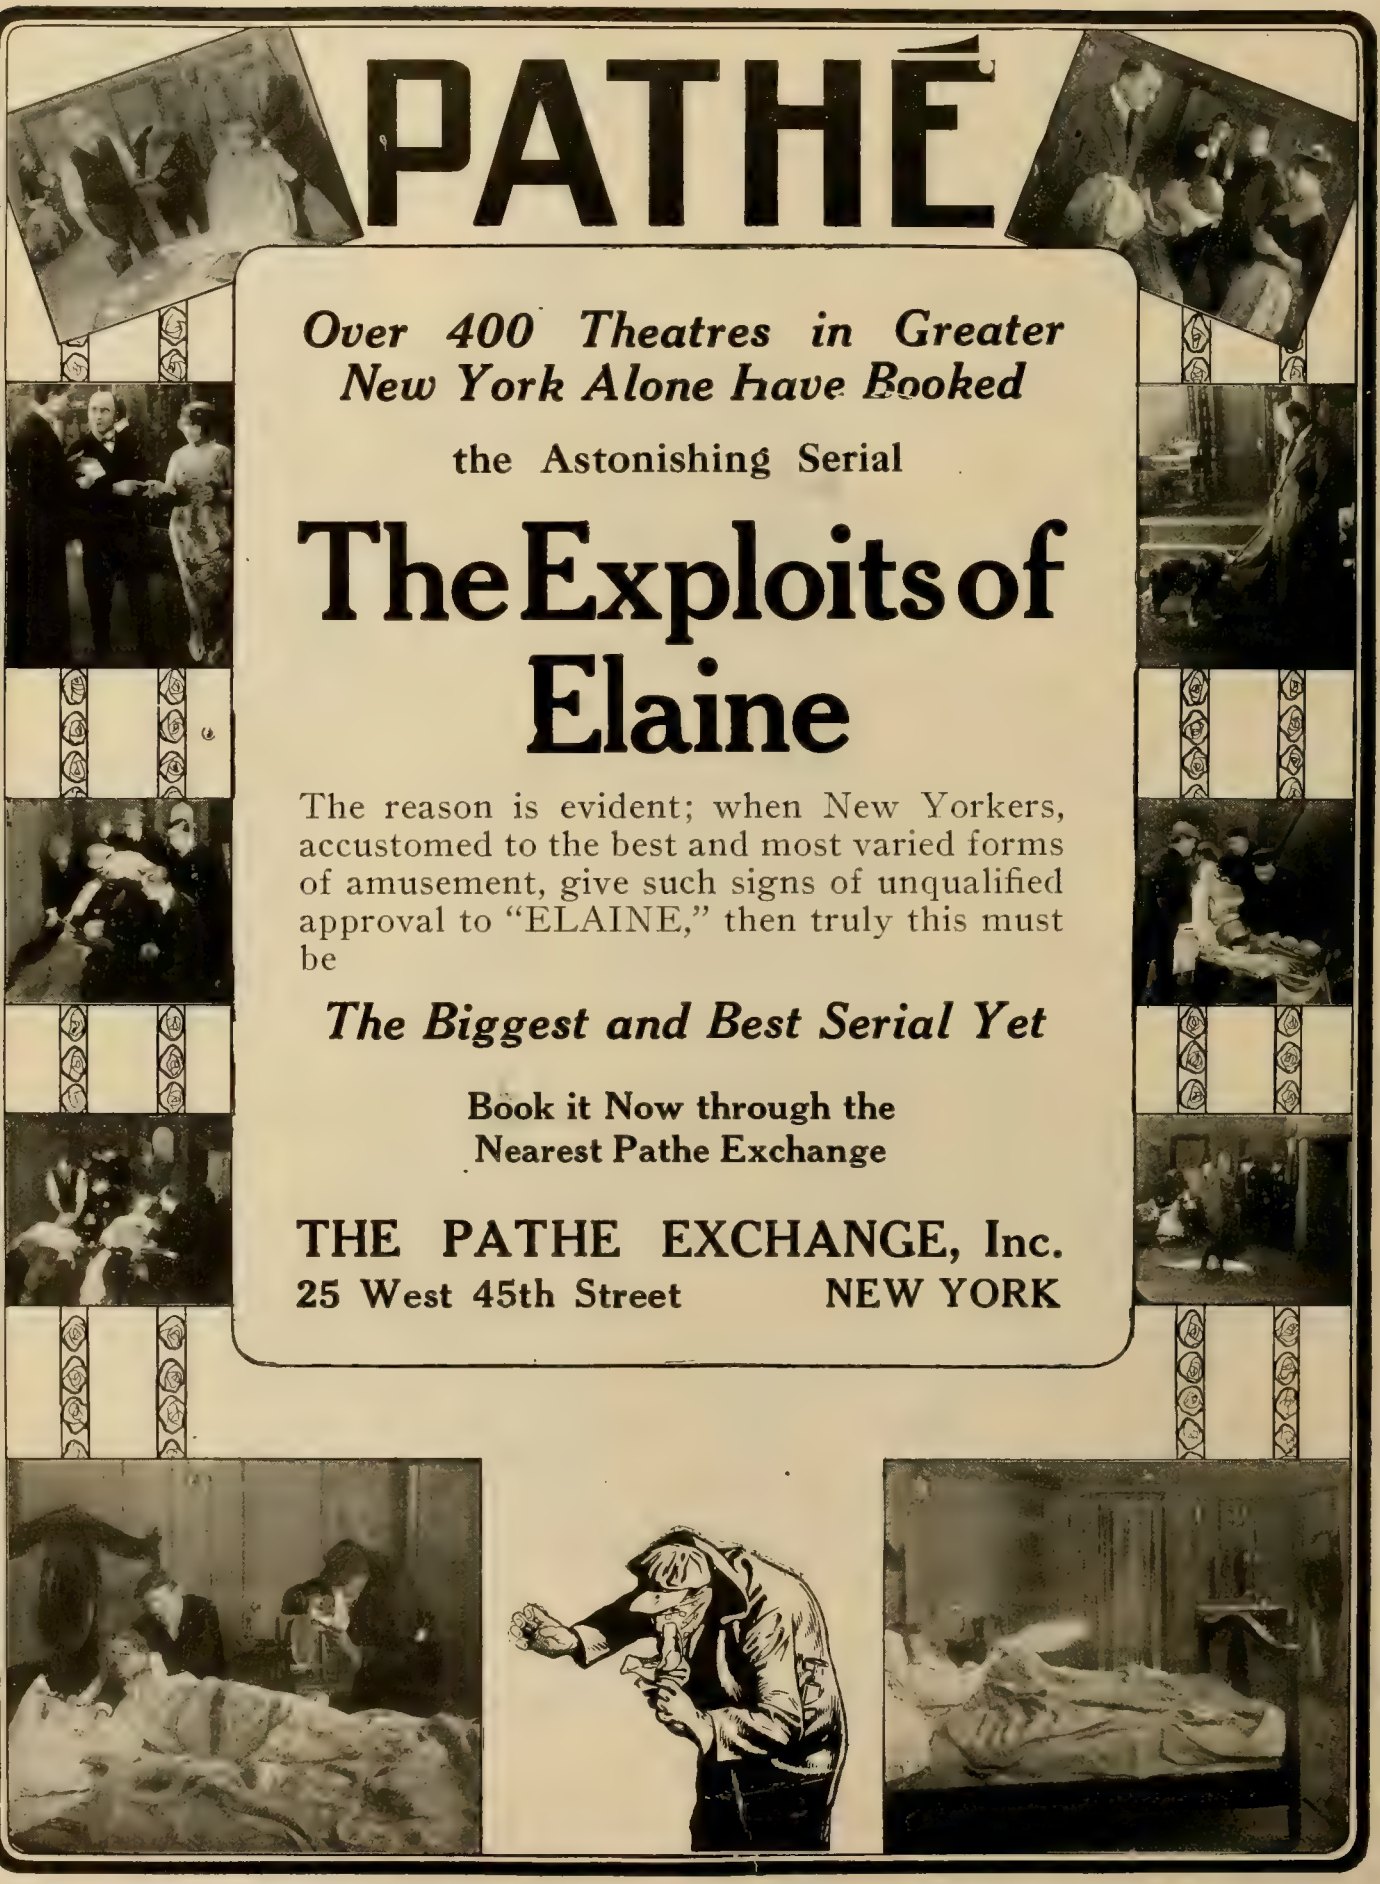
220 WEST 48TH STREET

JESSE L. LASKY, Pres. SAMUEL GOLDFISH

FEATURE PLAY CO.

NEW YORK CITY

Treas. and Gen. Mgr. CECIL B. DE MILLE Dir. Gen.



PATHÉ
Over 400 Theatres in Greater New York Alone have Booked
the Astonishing Serial
The Exploits of Elaine
The reason is evident; when New Yorkers, accustomed to the best and most varied forms of amusement, give such signs of unqualified approval to "ELAINE," then truly this must be
The Biggest and Best Serial Yet
Book it Now through the Nearest Pathe Exchange
THE PATHE EXCHANGE, Inc.
25 West 45th Street NEW YORK

Do YOU Play to a Line?

HERE'S A LIVE EXHIBITOR WHO DOES!

Read what he says: ⟶

You Too Can Get

Big Business

If You Book

The Exploits of Elaine

THE BEST IN MOTION PICTURES ALWAYS

HOME OF THE PLATE GLASS MIRROR SCREEN (EASY ON THE EYES)

MILLER'S THEATRE

Junction of Ninth-Spring and Main St.

House Phone F-5081

LOS ANGELES, CAL. January 12 1915 .....191.

RECEIVED JAN 18 1915

Pathe Film Exchange,
Los Angeles, Calif.

Mr. Loper:-

In response to your enquiry asking for my opinion of "The Exploits of Elaine", I want to say that it has been the biggest surprise I have encountered in the Picture Business.

When I first booked the picture I thought three days would be about all I could stand on a serial. But, after seeing the first Episode, I concluded it was good for a weeks run, and the result exceeds my greatest expectations. The picture is breaking all records for my house, and I have played to a line every night of the week. There is no doubt about the immense drawing power of the picture, and the cast, photography and action is the best I have ever seen in motion pictures.

The best stroke of business I ever did was the booking of "The Exploits of Elaine".

Cordially yours,

Ind A Miller Manager

Miller's is the newest, most beautiful as well as one of the largest down town motion picture theaters. Besides being handsomely decorated and furnished throughout and having large roomy comfortable upholstered seats, it has many unique and exclusive features. A large spacious lobby greets one on entering a splendid ventilating system insures comfort at all times a plate glass mirror screen (the only one in the city) gives a clearer, brighter and handsomer picture, making the figures in the story seem actually to live and there is none of the eye strain so noticeable on other kinds of screens, and last but not least, real picture music played on the wonderful "Fotoplayer" by experts who follow the action on the screen with marked success.

ARNOLD DALY

PEARL WHITE

SHELDON LEWIS

THE PATHE EXCHANGE, Inc.

25 West 45th Street New York

PATHÉ

THE BOMB THROWERS

A three part American drama featuring Edwin August. Highly praised by the reviewers and bound to bring good business through Mr. August's popularity. 1-3-6 sheet posters.

THE CALL of THE CHILD

A two part drama featuring Asta Nielsen, the world celebrated film actress. 1-sheet posters.

Mr. EXHIBITOR—

You always get prints in good condition when you book Pathé pictures. This is because Pathé manufactures the raw stock as well as being a printer and developer. Pathé prints are frequently renewed.

PATHÉ EXCHANGE INC.
25 WEST 45TH ST., NEW YORK

Wise is the exhibitor who features and shows

The Pathe News

Twice a week it brings back old patrons and makes friends of new ones.

"The One Indispensable Film"

THE PATHE EXCHANGE, Inc.

25 WEST 45th STREET, NEW YORK

FROM ZERO WEATHER RUNAWAY JUNE TAKE A MESSAGE

WESTERN UNION

Form 2500

DAY LETTER

GEORGE W. E. ATKINS VICE PRESIDENT NEWCOMB CARLTON PRESIDENT BELVIDERE BROOKS VICE PRESIDENT

RECEIVER'S No.	TIME FILED	CHECK

SEND the following Day Letter, subject to the terms on back hereof which are hereby agreed to

DIOOCH ACT 77 N.L. 6 EX COUNT ONS 1 WD

ROCKFORD, ILLS. JANUARY 24TH 1915.

RELIANCE MOTION PICTURE CORPORATION

29 UNION SQUARE, NEW YORK.

IMPOSSIBLE TO ACCOMMODATE CROWDS LAST NIGHT TO WITNESS EPISODE TWO "RUNAWAY JUNE" THERMOMETER REGISTERED THREE BELOW ZERO AND THEY WAITED IN THE EXTREME COLD FOR A HALF HOUR AT ONE PERIOD TO GET INSIDE. IN SPITE OF OUR CAPACITY OF OVER ONE THOUSAND WE HAD THEM STANDING OUT FOR OVER TWO HOURS IT IS THE TALK OF THE TOWN AS WELL AS THE SERIAL WHICH HAS MADE A BIG HIT.

H. E. GRAMPP MGR. GRAND OPERA HOUSE, ROCKFORD, ILLS

1AM

Runaway June will Pack your House
no matter where it is order from our Representative in any Mutual Exchange

SERIAL PUBLICATION CORP.
29 UNION SQ.,N.Y.CITY

TO BALMY BREEZES

PACKS ALL HOUSES FROM THE WIRE

The Great Geo. Randolph Chester Photoplay Serial

15 Episodes 2 Reels each

Produced by Reliance

PARAMOUNT PICTURES

BOSWORTH INC.

PRESENTS

AN ALL STAR CAST

IN

"BUCKSHOT JOHN"

By

CHARLES E. VAN LOAN

"BUCKSHOT JOHN" IS THE FIRST OF MR. VAN LOAN'S FAMOUS STORIES TO BE FILMED AND CONTAINS MANY OF HIS CHARACTERISTIC TOUCHES. AMONG THE UNIQUE DETAILS OF THIS PRODUCTION IS A SCENE, ACTUALLY TAKEN BY MOONLIGHT, WITHOUT THE AID OF ARTIFICIAL LIGHT

RELEASED FEBRUARY 4TH

BOSWORTH INC.

211 NORTH OCCIDENTAL BV'D.
LOS ANGELES, CALIF.

IN ASSOCIATION WITH THE OLIVER MOROSCO PHOTOPLAY CO.

220 WEST 42ND STREET
NEW YORK, N.Y.

BOSWORTH INC.

THE PRODUCTIONS OF

FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM CO. In Association with Daniel Frohman Chas. Frohman~Henry W. Savage

JESSE L. LASKY FEATURE PLAY CO. Associated with David Belasco The Liebler Company

BOSWORTH INC. In Association with THE OLIVER MOROSCO PHOTO-PLAY CO. Oliver Morosco and John Cort

CONSTITUTE

Paramount Program

Stars in the Paramount Firmament—

The Highest Salaried Artists appearing in any motion picture productions may be seen in pictures on Paramount Program—Mary Pickford, Dustin Farnum, Elsie Janis and the others—

Do you show these pictures in your theatre?

Write our nearest exchange for information.

Paramount Pictures Corporation
ONE HUNDRED and TEN WEST FORTIETH STREET
NEW YORK, N.Y.

Paramount Program

Paramount Program

Paramount Program

Paramount Program

Lewis J. Selznick

How to Make Money

by Lewis J. Selznick

No. 3

This series of articles is planned to make money for you—to show you why my ideas have succeeded—and why they will succeed for you if you will weigh each one carefully. Some of them will sound egotistical. I want them to—it's the only way I can drive home my arguments.

LEWIS J. SELZNICK.

The Cozy-Tracey Theatre, of Boise, Idaho, has advanced the price of admission to 20c. opening at the new price with "The Lure," Tom Wise, in "A Gentleman from Mississippi," Robert Warwick in "The Man of the Hour"—three World film releases.

I take this from a paragraph in a recent issue of "The Moving Picture World," because it carried out all the things I have said and am going to say—because it is one of hundreds of similar incidents.

In my last letter I said that our contract department was my special pet—that I took great pride in it because it was good for the exhibitor and good for World Film.

Some people high up in filmdom took exception to that statement when I made it first.

But the joke is, that several of their own brothers and relatives who own picture houses have voluntarily signed World Film contracts because they knew it gave them a secure way to offer the best features of the year in their locality—the greatest players and money makers they could get—and an opportunity to advertise so as to make more money.

Some features are stronger than others. This is true of EVERY program, but I say that World Film features will give you more and bigger success during the year than any other program in the world—and I can prove it. Many theatres have offered us a bonus to cancel a contract with a competitor and give them the service, but it's a poor rule that does not work two ways. It is a protection for you as well as World Film—and every additional week's advertising you do—telling the public that you have World Film features, makes your contract just so much more valuable and profitable to you.

What program has offered in such a short time so many great features as World Film? In three months we have produced ROBERT WARWICK in "ALIAS JIMMY VALENTINE," VIVIAN MARTIN in "THE WISHING RING," CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG, in "LOLA," ALICE BRADY, in "AS YE SOW," WILTON LACKAYE in "THE PIT," LILLIAN RUSSELL in "WILDFIRE," CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG in "THE DEEP PURPLE," LEW FIELDS in "OLD DUTCH," "THE SEATS OF THE MIGHTY," with LIONEL BARRYMORE—every one a success that would justify its being shown at double price.

It's the liberal policy of the World Film that has made its success, and that success, great as it is, is only in its infancy.

These same policies that have been applied to the World Film will be successful when applied to your theatre.

SHUBERT FEATURES
WORLD FILM CORPORATION
Exclusive Rights to all
WILLIAM A. BRADY Picture Play Co. inc. FEATURES
Lewis J. Selznick Vice Pres & Genl. Mgr.

A Dyreda Art Film Feature

"A Daughter of the People"

The Broadway Success Produced by J. Searle Dawley, "The Master of the Screen," With Laura Sawyer, Frederick de Belleville and Robert Broderick

in 5 Acts

Released Feb. 15

EXCHANGES AT

Boston, Buffalo, Chicago, Atlanta, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Detroit, Dallas, Denver, Pittsburgh, Indianapolis, New Orleans, St. Louis, Los Angeles, Philadelphia, Kansas City, Seattle, Omaha, New York, Minneapolis, San Francisco, Salt Lake City, Washington

Canada—Vancouver, Toronto, Winnipeg, Calgary, Montreal, St. John, N. B.

HOME OFFICE: 130 WEST 46TH STREET, NEW YORK CITY

EDELMAN

LEW FIELDS'

The Hardest Movie Audience in the World (the Studio Employees) Laughed and LAUGHED and LAUGHED

That's what YOUR audiences will do when they see the greatest World Film Corporation Comedy

LEW FIELDS in "OLD DUTCH"

With VIVIAN MARTIN

Including CHARLES JUDELS, GEORGE HASSELL, MARIE EMPRESS and W. J. FERGUSON, and an all star cast.

Greatest Comedy Stage Success

A Shubert Feature in Five Acts

Released February 8

World Film Corporation HOME OFFICE 130 West 46th St.

LEWIS J. SELZNICK, Vice-President

BRANCHES EVERYWHERE

The New Rip-Snorting Edison Comedy

Those–Ha! Ha!–Twins, "Waddy and Arty"

(Alias Wadsworth and Housman)

in "One Way to Advertise"

(Released Feb. 22—500 Feet)

Another one of that great string of the new kind of Edison comedies—the Waddy and Arty kind—that makes life worth living. Read the sign on the house in the picture above—of course it's a mistake, but it starts off, "One Way to Advertise" in the breeziest of ways that rips 'em off till the house is a gurgling gale of laughter. Leave it to Waddy and Arty (Wadsworth and Housman) to make the screen scream with that fresh-every-minute kind of funny comedy that is making Edison Comedy something to look forward to—as welcome as pay day "the morning after." Book 'em—the Waddy and Arty Comedies. Start right now with "The Courtship of the Cooks" and holler for your turn—or you'll do some awful hollerin' when you find that the other man in the house around the corner got there before you. Here are some of them—and they are going to keep a-coming!

Ten "Waddy and Arty" Comedies

(Wadsworth and Housman)

"The Courtship of the Cooks"—1000 feet. Released December 30th.

"The Champion Process Server"—1000 feet. Released January 4th.

"Expensive Economy"—1000 feet. Released January 6.

"A Superfluous Baby"—1000 feet. Released January 11th.

"Lodgings for Two"—500 feet. Released January 27th.

"Found—a Flesh Reducer"—1000 feet. Released Feb. 1.

"Seen from the Gallery"—500 feet. Released Feb. 3rd.

"Suspicious Characters"—1000 feet. Released Feb. 8th.

"The Tailor's Bill"—600 feet. Released Feb. 10th.

"A Spiritual Elopement"—500 feet. Released February 17th.

Some Other Edison Comedies Coming

"In the Plumber's Grip"—1000 feet. Released February 15th. Pretty little Bessie Learn, to win her plumber sweetheart against papa's wishes, cuts the pipe in the bathroom and floods the house. Papa gives in and the couple, standing on a chair in the bathroom, are married while Papa wallows in his watery troubles. Then the pipes ARE fixed.

"Their Happy Little Home"—500 feet. Released February 17th. A happy young couple's troubles begin when they buy a suburban home and especially so when, unknown to each other, rival gangs of painters are engaged to paint the house on the same day. Some paint applied!

The New Edison Heart-Gripping Dramas

Gertrude McCoy and Robert Conness

In a powerfully tense 2-part Drama,

"Her Husband's Son"

(Released Feb. 19th—2000 Feet)

"Her Husband's Son" is typical of the new and bettered dramas that are making Edison plays a succession of brilliant achievements in mirroring life at the high tide, at the feverish moments of life when the heart stands still with suspense and is enthralled with life's burdens—yet shows the way.

Gertrude McCoy, as the girl-wife wrongfully suspected of having a lover when on her mission of mercy, has a wonderful opportunity to show the depths of her rare emotional power. Her characterization of this truly noble part earns for her even greater laurels.

Robert Conness, the father who loves his son but casts him off because of his gambling habits, and in the end shoots him for the wife's lover, gives one of those splendidly true and vigorously manful portrayals that rouse one to unstinted admiration of what a thoroughly accomplished actor can make live for us.

Some Forthcoming Edison Dramas

Frank McGlynn, Sally Crute and Richard Tucker in "THE VOICE OF CONSCIENCE"—1000 feet. Released February 20th.

Jean Dumar and Frank McGlynn in "FROM A LIFE OF CRIME"—1000 feet. Released February 23rd.

Frank McGlynn in "THE LIFE OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN"—2000 feet. Released February 26th.

Bessie Learn in "THE EXPERIMENT"—1000 feet. Released February 27th

EDISON FEATURE FILMS

"My Friend from India," with Walter E. Perkins in the role he played thousands of times on the stage, in this richly funny 3-part comedy. "Fantasma," one of the greatest of fantasies that made millions for its famous producers, Hanlon Brothers, with Hanlon and other famous actors in original roles. Both films supplied through the special film service of the General Film Company. Now ready.

TRADE MARK
Thomas A Edison

Thomas A. Edison, Inc.

239 Lakeside Avenue, Orange, N. J.

All Edison Films are passed upon by the National Board of Censorship and released through the General Film Co.'s Program

What's a Kleptomaniac? A wealthy person of extraordinary absent-minded tendencies and morbid impulses.—WEBSTER.

FOR RELEASE FEBRUARY 15th

That Funniest of Farces

"STOP THIEF!"

Founded on the Cohan & Harris Play by CARLYLE MOORE

FEATURING

MARY RYAN and Harry Mestayer

In a story of infinite fun that has already proven itself one of the greatest laugh-producing properties on the American stage. It's an uproar from title to tail-piece.

And the cast—just glance it over! We're giving you TWO stars of national reputation SUPPORTED BY THE ORIGINAL COHAN & HARRIS COMPANY! Even the "bit" parts are done by actors—not "extras!" That's an important consideration you shouldn't forget.

THE CAST

NELL JONES (a light-fingered maid).....MARY RYAN
JACK DOOGAN (her fiance, also a thief).....HARRY MESTAYER
MR. CLUNEY (a self-confessed kleptomaniac).....HAROLD HOWARD
MR. CARR (another self-confessed kleptomaniac).....ALBERT TAVERNIER
DR. WILLOUGHBY (who thinks he knows a kleptomaniac when he sees one)
WILLIAM BOYD
MRS. CARR (mother).....AUGUSTE BURMESTER
JOAN CARR (Dr. Willoughby's fiancee).....DELLA CONNOR
MADGE CARR (Mr. Cluney's fiancee).....MARGUERITE BOYD
THE DETECTIVE .....DAN MOYLES
THE CLERGYMAN.....SOLDINE POWEL

Make your dates quick through the Kleine office nearest you!

New York
226 W. 42nd Street
Boston
597 Washington St.
Los Angeles
701 Majestic Theatre Bldg.
Pittsburgh
509 Lyceum Theatre Bldg.
Chicago
166 N. State Street
Dallas
238 Saner Bldg.
Minneapolis
210 Temple Court Bldg.
San Francisco
653 Pacific Bldg.
Toronto
56 King St., W.
Seattle
213 Orpheum Theatre Bldg.
Atlanta
43 Moore Bldg.
Denver
405 Railroad Bldg.
Philadelphia
1309 Vine St.

GEORGE KLEINE

Two Hundred Days SOLID!

THAT'S THE FORTY-EIGHT HOUR BOOKING RECORD OF JUST ONE KLEINE OFFICE!

DU BARRY

FEATURING

MRS. LESLIE CARTER

IN THE TITLE ROLE

IS PROVING THE MOST EXTRAORDINARY BOX-OFFICE MAGNET IN THE HISTORY OF THE KLEINE ATTRACTIONS!

"SMASHED THE RECORDS OF MY PANORAMA AND PRESIDENT HOUSES," SAYS MAX ASCHER OF THE ASCHER CIRCUIT, CHICAGO. "ABSOLUTELY THE BEST MONEY-GETTING FEATURE I EVER PLAYED!"

Three Successful Weeks at the Big Studebaker Theatre, Chicago

THE HAMILTON AND EIGHTY-SIXTH STREET THEATRES, NEW YORK, GAVE EXTRA PERFORMANCES TO ACCOMMODATE THE CROWDS—THE REGENT AND DUFFIELD OF BROOKLYN PLAYED ALL DAY TO STANDING ROOM ONLY!

Just Random Samples of the Many!

When Do You Play Du Barry?

New York
226 W. 42nd Street

Boston
597 Washington Street

Los Angeles
701 Majestic Theatre Bldg.

Pittsburgh
509 Lyceum Theatre Bldg.

Chicago
166 N. State Street

Dallas
238 Saner Bldg.

Minneapolis
210 Temple Court Bldg.

Seattle
213 Orpheum Theatre Bldg.

Toronto
56 King St., W.

Atlanta
43 Moore Bldg.

Denver
405 Railroad Bldg.

Philadelphia
1309 Vine St.

San Francisco
653 Pacific Bldg.

GEORGE KLEINE

LUBIN

PRESENTS

Multiple Reel Masterpieces Ready and About to Be Released

"EAGLE'S NEST" - - - - - With EDWIN ARDEN and ROMAINE FIELDING
Mr. Arden's Successful Drama — Direction Romaine Fielding

"THE SPORTING DUCHESS" - - - With ROSE COGHLAN and ETHEL CLAYTON
Supported by George Soule Spencer
Comedy Drama by Cecil Raleigh — Direction Barry O'Neil

"THE VALLEY OF LOST HOPE" - - - - - Featuring ROMAINE FIELDING
A Powerful Drama by Shannon Fife — Direction Romaine Fielding

---

"THE DISTRICT ATTORNEY" With GEORGE SOULE SPENCER and DOROTHY BERNARD
Drama by Charles Klein and Harrison Grey Fiske — Direction Barry O'Neil

---

"THE WHITE MASK" - - - - - - - - - - Featuring LILIE LESLIE
Drama by Clay M. Greene — Direction Joseph W. Smiley

"THE COLLEGE WIDOW" Featuring ETHEL CLAYTON and GEORGE SOULE SPENCER
Comedy by George Ade — Direction Barry O'Neil

NOW SHOWING TO CROWDED HOUSES EVERYWHERE

By arrangement with Fred Mace

EVELYN NESBIT THAW and her son Russell William Thaw in "THREADS OF DESTINY" Drama by William H. Clifford — Direction Joseph W. Smiley

and

The laughing hit of the year, "PATSY BOLIVAR," a series of 14 reels, one every Monday. By CLAY M. GREENE
Direction Percy Winter

Posters by A. B. C. Print, Cleveland — Dodgers by Hennegen Print, Cincinnati

---

SIX REGULAR RELEASES EACH WEEK

PATSY BOLIVAR No. 7

"PATSY IN A SEMINARY"—Comedy, Monday, February 8th.

"HIS SOUL MATE"—Comedy, Tuesday, February 9th.

"BAGS OF GOLD"—Three Reel Drama, Wednesday, February 10th.

"THE TRAPPER'S REVENGE"—Two Reel Drama, Thursday, February 11th.

"AN OBSTINATE SHERIFF"—Drama, Friday, February 12th.

"WHEN FATHER INTERFERED"—Comedy, Saturday, February 13th.

SPECIALLY DESIGNED ONE, THREE, SIX AND EIGHT SHEET POSTERS

LUBIN MANUFACTURING COMPANY

Philadelphia, Pa.

Chicago Office - - - - 154 West Lake Street

ALICE JOYCE

In a Four-Act Production of

Alice Joyce as Lady Teazle .

Sheridan's Greatest of all Comedies

The School for Scandal

For one hundred-and-forty years "THE SCHOOL FOR SCANDAL" has been regarded as the greatest of all comedies. The foremost stars of the stage have appeared in the various productions of this play within recent years. Its advertising value is tremendous. The fact that Alice Joyce, Guy Coombs and an all-star cast of Kalem's most popular players appear in this production, makes it the strongest attraction you can secure.

1, 3 and 6-Sheet, Four-color Lithographs that bring business, for this feature.

Released through General Film Company's Special Service

Other Kalem Masterpiece Features Released through General Film Company's Special Service

The Invisible Power
Four Acts

The Barefoot Boy
Three Acts

A Celebrated Case
Four Acts

The Boer War
Five Acts

Wolfe, or The Conquest of Quebec
Five Acts

Kit the Arkansaw Traveler
Three Acts

The Death Sign At High Noon
Three Acts

The King of Chance
Three Acts

The Other Half of the Note
Three Acts

FRANCIS MARION "The Swamp Fox"
Three Acts

The first to issue big Posters for Motion Pictures, Kalem has consistently issued the BEST. Cubist and other "near art" effects have never marred its paper. Kalem posters are Four-Color Lithographs which are designed to persuade every person passing your house to stop and see the show. Use these posters and do REAL Business!

VITAGRAPH

SPECIAL Broadway Star Feature

IN FOUR PARTS

RELEASED THROUGH GENERAL FILM, SPECIAL SERVICE

C.O.D.

From the Play by Frederic Chapin
As produced at the Gaiety Theatre New York City

That Put
The Laugh in Laughter

And Showed
BROADWAY
The Way to Laugh

AND THIS IS WHAT THEY SAID:

"A laughing comedy in four parts. The laughing is continuous, proof of which statement may be had by any doubting ones if they will drop in on the entertainment."—N. Y. World.

"The producers of 'C. O. D.' have wrought a highly laughable farce-comedy that possesses the virtues of novelty in the situations and humor in the acting."—Dramatic Mirror.

"You had better have your sides insured before going to the Vitagraph Theatre this week, for 'C. O. D.' may split them. Nothing has caused so much laughter as 'C. O. D.'"—N. Y. American.

"There are situations in 'C. O. D.,' four reels of jollity, that are side-splittingly funny. There are times when the audience actually rocks and writhes in paroxysms of mirth."—The Morning Telegraph.

VITAGRAPHS

VITALAUGHS — LIFE PORTRAYALS

"Hearts to Let"

Comedy-Drama .....MONDAY, FEB. 8

After a separation, they meet in a vacant apartment, where they re-establish their love and themselves. LEAH BAIRD and LEO DELANEY are the principals.

"The Wrong Girl"

Two-Part Comedy .....TUESDAY, FEB. 9

In their anxiety to get her, the Count and the Seniors get the wrong girl. The right man gets the right girl and thereby hangs a tale. WALLY VAN and star cast.

"Breaking In"

Comedy-Drama .....WEDNESDAY, FEB. 10

As a social lion, Wall Street ignores Jones. They try to make a lamb of him, but he makes goats of them. LILLIAN WALKER and NED FINLEY in the leads.

"On the Altar of Love"

Drama .....THURSDAY, FEB. 11

She sacrifices her ambition for his. He learns of it. Together they share each other's happiness and success. Presenting MAURICE COSTELLO.

"The Hypochondriac"

or "WHEN GREEK MEETS GREEK"

Comedy .....FRIDAY, FEB. 12

As direct heir, he accuses his uncle's fiancee of mercenary motives. She disproves the accusation and becomes his aunt. SIDNEY DREW as the hypochondriac.

"Mother's Roses"

3-Part Drama. Broadway Star Feature
SATURDAY, FEB. 13

The abiding love of a mother is an ever-present protection to the evils that surround us. It lives when all else withers and dies. MARY MAURICE, JAMES MORRISON, DOROTHY KELLY, and all-star cast.

Six a Week, including a Three-Part Broadway Star Feature

"THE PROFESSOR'S NIGHTMARE"
Comedy .....Monday, Feb. 15

"O'GARRY OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED"
3-Part Drama. Broadway Star Feature Tuesday, Feb. 16

"SOME WHITE HOPE"
Comedy .....Wednesday, Feb. 17

"THE QUALITY OF MERCY"
Drama .....Thursday, Feb. 18

"A MADCAP ADVENTURE"
Comedy .....Friday, Feb. 19

"TWICE RESCUED"
Drama in Two Parts .....Saturday, Feb. 20

VITAGRAPH ONE, THREE AND SIX SHEET POSTERS

The Vitagraph Company of America, E. 15th St. and Locust Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

BROADWAY STAR FEATURES

PRODUCED BY THE VITAGRAPH COMPANY OF AMERICA

AS PRESENTED AT THE VITAGRAPH THEATRE, NEW YORK CITY

BROADWAY STAR FEATURES THAT HAVE PUT BROADWAYS ALL OVER THE MAP

RELEASED

A MILLION BID	5 PARTS
GOODNESS GRACIOUS	3 PARTS
MR. BARNES OF N. Y	6 PARTS
LOVE, LUCK & GASOLENE	3 PARTS
CAPTAIN ALVAREZ	6 PARTS
SHADOWS OF THE PAST	3 PARTS
BINGLES' MELODRAMA	3 PARTS
MY OFFICIAL WIFE	5 PARTS
UNCLE BILL	3 PARTS
THE PAINTED WORLD	3 PARTS
FLORIDA ENCHANTMENT	5 PARTS
413	3 PARTS
THE WIN(K)SOME WIDOW	4 PARTS
THE TANGLE	4 PARTS
THE LOCKED DOOR	3 PARTS
SYLVIA GRAY	4 PARTS
THE LITTLE ANGEL OF CANYON CREEK	5 PARTS (From Book)
THE MAN BEHIND THE DOOR	4 PARTS

BROADWAY STAR FEATURES THAT HAVE PUT BROADWAYS ALL OVER THE MAP

COMING

"Nothing has caused so much laughter since 'Charlie's Aunt.'"—N. Y. American.

FOUR PART COMEDY C.O.D.

FROM FREDERIC CHAPIN'S PLAY

FIVE-PART HISTORICAL DRAMA

Hearts and the Highway

PICTURIZED FROM REV. CYRUS TOWNSEND BRADY'S NOVEL

With Lillian Walker and Darwin Karr

SIX-PART PICTURIZATION REV CYRUS TOWNSEND BRADY'S STORY THE ISLAND OF REGENERATION

With Edith Storey and Antonio Moreno

FOR TERMS AND PARTICULARS APPLY

BROADWAY STAR FEATURES THAT HAVE PUT BROADWAYS ALL OVER THE MAP

GENERAL FILM COMPANY'S SPECIAL SERVICE

By Arrangement with Broadway Star Feature Co. (Inc.)

BROADWAY STAR FEATURES THAT HAVE PUT BROADWAYS ALL OVER THE MAP

STAR FEATURES

THE GIRL DETECTIVE SERIES

Two-Act Episode for Wednesday, February 24

OLD ISAACSON'S DIAMONDS

"Real detective stories!" is what police officials say of this great series. In this episode the Girl Detective finds herself matching wits against a criminal of extraordinary ingenuity. It's the best episode released thus far. Are you showing this series?

Advertise this Feature with the 1, 3 and 6-Sheet, 4-Color Lithographs—the returns will delight you!

Other Kalem Releases for Week of Feb. 22

THE SECRET ROOM

A Two-Act Drama of the Occult

Down and out, a derelict sells himself, body and soul, to a scientist. The result is one of the most novel stories of the year. Tom Moore, Marguerite Courtot and Robert Ellis in the leading roles.

Released Monday, February 22d. Striking 1, 3 and 6-Sheet, 4-Color Lithographs

SHE WOULD BE A COWBOY

A cowboy's life isn't half so romantic as the novels had led her to believe. It takes only a couple of days to make her realize this. A mighty funny comedy.

Released Tuesday, February 23d

HAM AND THE JITNEY 'BUS

A New "Ham" Comedy

If you thought the previous Ham comedies funny, just wait until you see this one. Ham and Bud start a 'bus service. The result is a scream from start to finish.

Released Friday, February 26th

The OPEN DRAWBRIDGE

Saturday, February 27th, Episode of the

Hazards of Helen Railroad Series

Helen's eighty-foot dive into the river; her battle with the thieves on the drawbridge; her wonderful rescue of the railroad detective—these are a few of the incidents in this action-filled episode.

Striking scenes in the 1 and 3-Sheet, 4-Color Lithographs

Kalem Company

235-239 West 23rd Street New York City, N. Y.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD
THE FILM INDEX
EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

J. P. Chalmers, Founder.

Published Weekly by the

CHALMERS PUBLISHING COMPANY

17 MADISON AVENUE, NEW YORK CITY.

(Telephone, 3510 Madison Square.)

J. P. Chalmers, Sr.....President
J. F. Chalmers.....Vice-President
E. J. Chalmers.....Secretary and Treasurer
John Wylie.....General Manager

The office of the company is the address of the officers.

WESTERN OFFICE—Suite 917-919 Schiller Building, 64 West Randolph St., Chicago, Ill. Telephone, Central 5099.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and Philippine Islands.....$3.00 per year
Canada ..... 3.50 per year
Foreign Countries (Postpaid)..... 4.00 per year

ADVERTISING RATES.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING—no display—three cents per word; minimum charge, 50c.

DISPLAY ADVERTISING RATES made known on application.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

All changes of address should give both old and new addresses in full and clearly written.

NOTE.—Address all correspondence, remittances and subscriptions to MOVING PICTURE WORLD, P. O. Box 226, Madison Square Station, New York, and not to individuals.

(The Index for this issue will be found on page 1060.)

Entered at the General Post Office, New York City, as Second Class Matter

Saturday, February 13, 1915.

Facts and Comments

TALKING with an old friend of THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD who had just returned from a long trip through many Western states, the writer was told that out of seven big dailies printed in the principal cities of the area covered by the traveler four printed more motion picture advertisements than the regular theatrical announcements. The other three ran about even in the matter of motion picture and of purely theatrical advertisements. We have not tried to gather statistics on the subject, but it seems most likely that similar conditions prevail throughout the country. In part, at least, this fact accounts for the mighty change that has come over the press in its treatment of motion pictures.

There is scarcely a paper in any large city in the Union which does not give special attention to the motion picture. In Philadelphia one of the evening papers prints a complete list of the programs in the principal motion picture theaters in the city. The list is arranged alphabetically according to the principal features shown. The idea has met with decided public approval and will no doubt be copied all over the country.

* * *

A FEW faint spirits among the exchange men in the two states where official censorship exists are in favor of compromise on the question of censorship. They say that an absolute repeal is too much to hope for and then they point out that something would be gained if the fees for the examination of duplicate films were abolished. There can be no compromise here. A vital principle is involved. Even if the official censors were willing to forego all remuneration, censorship would be no less objectionable. Exhibitors frown upon such a compromise and a little reflection ought to convince every exchange man that he cannot afford to even think of compromise on such a question.

* * *

THE idea of having a big Broadway theater devoted exclusively to the presentation of extraordinary film features, selected from the world's market and intended for prolonged runs, is one which will be hailed by all friends of the motion picture. It is proposed to charge a maximum of one dollar by way of admission, and to have a presentation which is to be in keeping with the extraordinary character of the picture. It is said that about six big features will keep the house busy for one year. We believed for some time past that such a theater was a necessity because a highly meritorious production cannot be exhausted in one week's run. Some recent productions of supreme quality have suffered through the lack of such a house where they might have been shown to the best advantage.

* * *

IT takes a real danger to bring the exhibitors to a realization of the fact that organization is an absolute necessity. The New York Board of Aldermen threatens to enact an ordinance which is even more drastic than the Canadian law, of which we spoke in these pages recently. The proposed ordinance practically requires the exhibitor to find out the exact relation between a minor under sixteen years of age and the person who is taking such a minor into a motion picture theater. We are glad to note that the local organization here has risen as one man against this iniquitous ordinance and has in two days raised a substantial sum to fight and defeat it. Just why the Board of Aldermen should want to take this action when the state law amply regulates the admission of minors is one of those political mysteries which needs a lot of explaining.

* * *

AT the very last moment the House Committee on Education has reported favorably the Federal Censor Bill introduced by Congressman Hughes, of Alabama. The real author of the bill is Rev. Wilbur F. Crafts, a professional reformer located at Washington. It is, of course, impossible for the bill to be reached for passage at this session of Congress and it is likewise true that the opposition in the House and the Senate will halt any further progress of the bill for the time being. In spite of all this it would be foolish to deny that the bill has made some progress and that we must without delay begin a strong campaign for its defeat. It should be borne in mind that federal censorship will not in the slightest degree relieve us from state or minor local censorship; it is only an added burden all around. There are still simple souls who cannot grasp this fact and who fondly imagine the federal censorship would immediately do away with every other kind of censorship. If the Smith-Hughes Bill is allowed to become a law by default it will harm and cripple this industry to an extent that human imagination can scarcely conceive.

Pickle-Faced Pessimism

By Louis Reeves Harrison.

"MOVING PICTURES," says Walter P. Eaton in the Atlantic, "are capable of expressing more personality than a static photograph, but please try to imagine in them the princely quality of Forbes-Robertson's Hamlet, that concrete emanation of a lofty ideal."

Mr. Eaton is sincere. He has written a number of essays on problems and performances of the American stage, sharply criticising the men responsible for syndicate standards, "the majority of them utterly devoid of artistic sensibility," "utterly unfitted to control the destinies of a Fine Art, utterly unfitted to shoulder the responsibilities of influencing the thoughts, tastes, the emotions of a vast portion of the public." He thus referred to men in control of theatrical productions, yet it does not seem to have occurred to him that a like condition could exist in the younger art of producing motion pictures.

"After seeing many—hundreds and hundreds, as I have done," he continues, "experience tells you that only the skeleton of narrative is possible and usually that narrative is utterly banal."

Long devotion to critical work of theatrical methods has saturated Mr. Eaton with his subject. To him, an actor in the role of Hamlet represents the concrete emanation of a lofty ideal, whatever that may be. To him American idealism draws its material from the performance of some Broadway favorite. The fact that he lives in a little world explains why the theatrical critic cannot realize modes of thought and modes of thought-expression different from his own. No writer of broad and logical mind would be guilty of generalizing from false premises, from contrasting one art with another. That he fails to discriminate between a pictured representation and that which dribbles through words, even to discriminate between an art and its examples, is shown in every line.

"There can be no Shakespeare in the movies," Eaton deplores. "No Shaw, no Booth, no Jefferson, no Gilbert and Sullivan, no Johann Strauss, no Julia Marlowe or Mrs. Fiske. What does it matter if such as these latter players act before the screen? 'Mrs. Fiske in Tess' is announced in the motion-picture houses, but you almost weep when you witness that travesty on her poignant art."

This is rather a bizarre grouping. One does not expect either Sir Arthur Sullivan or Johann Strauss to find expression through other medium than that of music. If Booth and Jefferson had been adequately portrayed in action by moving pictures, their fame would not have suffered. They were men of striking personality, and it is just that personality which Mr. Eaton admits can be transferred to the screen. Mrs. Fiske has doubtless appeared in roles not suited to her on the stage, and I have seen theatrical presentations of Shakespeare's plays that would make the Immortal Bard turn over in his grave. What have any of them to do with a medium of expression that is not of utterance and not of the artificial stage?

I do not claim that the production of moving pictures is an absolutely free art. There is no such thing. Transcendent freedom is in conflict with all experience. Mr. Eaton has often described theatrical conditions which are in poor accord with our finest ideals, and these conditions were links in the chain of causes which led to the development of a new art. Then moving pictures depend upon performers who can visualize thought and emotion, many of them trained to act on the stage. The popularity of moving pictures is contingent upon a sum of preceding conditions, but the art of their development is along lines of freedom from stage methods and traditions.

"They have a cruel realism," Mr. Eaton says of the pictures, "which at once dulls the imagination and destroys the illusive romance of art."

All the strangeness of scene, novelty of adventure, rich atmosphere, distance of space and time, that prove endlessly fascinating to the fifteen millions of people who attend the picture shows every day seem to be lost on the pessimist. He can see nothing but the crudeness of an art that has only a few years instead of two thousand behind its evolution. He does not realize that the dead weight of realism so long oppressing other mediums has resulted in a reaction, that a new romance has bred from the forces which destroyed the old, reaching out through the mysteries of science into new realms. Common people have faith in the medium despite the faulty examples.

"A nobler want of man," says Ralph Waldo Emerson, "is served by Nature, namely, the love of beauty. Such is the constitution of all things, or such the plastic power of the human eye, that the primary forms, as the sky, the mountain, the tree, the animal, give us a delight in and for themselves, a pleasure arising from art, time, form, color, motion and grouping. This seems partly owing to the eye itself. The eye is the best of artists as light is the first of painters." "Words are perverted to stand for things which are not; a paper currency employed where there is no bullion in the vaults."

Emerson was not writing of the "movies" nor was Edward Garden Craig in his work "On the Art of the Theatre," when he said, "To me there is ever something more seemly in man when he invents an instrument which is outside his person, and through that instrument translates his message." "Art which shall spring from movement will be the first and final belief of the world; and I like to dream that for the first time in the world men and women shall achieve this thing together." How fresh, how beautiful it would be! And as this is a new beginning it lies before men and women of the next centuries as a vast possibility. Get on with the thought of the invention of an instrument by which you can bring movement before our eyes. When you have reached this point in your developments, you need have no further fear of hiding your feeling or your opinion. You will have risen above the theater and entered into something beyond it."

It is quite true that many screen portrayals do not stir the imagination, but set definite bounds to it. That is less due to the limitations of the art than to the limitations of those now responsible for its worst specimens. Therefore, critical writers who have seen a few hundred crude examples of a young art rush into print with pessimistic promulgations of which they will not be proud when they come to grasp the magnitude of their subject. I might remind Mr. Eaton, for one, to listen to himself at his best when in "Confessions of a Critic," he says, "Art exists in answer to a human need, for humanity." Present interpretation in this youngest of arts is not perfect, but it is well to remember that no interpretation in any art is final. None is a whole sphere of feeling and cycle of thought.

Read the Advertisements

By W. Stephen Bush.

WE LIVE in the age of merit and service. This is a critical generation and it will apply the most improved acid tests. Not a day passes but civil service principles, or, in other words, the plain and strict system based on merits, gains new recruits and conquers fresh territory.

Advertising which not so long ago was bestowed largely as a matter of favor today goes inexorably to the publication which insures the best results. We have come to look upon this policy as axiomatic, forgetting that it is of comparatively recent application. Proceeding upon the theory of a maximum return for a judicious investment in the purchase of advertising space, we come upon the trade journal as the most profitable of all mediums of systemized and intelligent advertising.

A few days ago we were favored with a most interesting communication upon this subject, sent to us by an old friend and reader of The Moving Picture World, who conducts a well-known advertising agency in one of the most progressive and prosperous parts of the South. His letter might well form the basis of an exhaustive dissertation on the science of advertising and we would like to quote it in full. The restrictions of space forbid, however, and we must content ourselves with quoting some extracts and commenting thereon.

Says our friend and subscriber: "To those discerning space-buyers who dole out their own funds and to many advertising men who have spent time and thought in the use of and following sales results from this class of media, i. e., the trade journal of character, specializing in any line of commercial and professional activity, is a positive and proved sales agency for those advertisers who seek business from the merchants or individuals composing the circulation list of the trade paper."

Perhaps this advice is open to the objection of repeating and emphasizing what is really obvious, but we are willing to share this risk with the writer. It cannot be said too often that the advertising columns in a trade publication are entirely different from the advertising columns in a daily publication. All advertising in the daily press is essentially miscellaneous and scattering. In the trade publication, per contra, all advertising is homogeneous and concentrated. In plain English, it is all of one kind and it all appeals to the one clientele. We again yield the editorial floor to our friend and reader.

Here is what he says:

"I repeat the primary motive of a very large percentage of trade-paper subscriptions is to secure reliable and valuable market information contained in the advertisements. What to buy and where to buy it is one of the biggest questions the retail dealer has to answer for himself, or have answered for him, almost daily. The modern successful retailer or jobber reads his favorite trade journal as a text-book from cover through to cover, and if the advertiser's space is correctly used he can trace a most satisfactory volume of sales actually closed to this source."

Note what our friend said above: The trade journal of character. Therein lies the solution of the problem. The Moving Picture World has, in the course of the years, through persistent and conscientious effort, won the confidence of the men who are interested in any of the branches of the industry. There is no question at all that this confidence, the precious result of a long growth, travels from the text of the paper to its advertising columns. Indeed, it has always been the earnest aim of The Moving Picture World to justify this confidence as covering both the news columns and the advertising pages. From its very beginning it has been the policy of this paper to exercise a strict supervision over all the matter that goes into the advertising columns of the paper. There have been no complaints within recent years as to the tone or the reliability of our advertisements. In the very early days of the industry such complaints were not unheard of, but our readers will bear us witness that we were in the habit of acting promptly upon every complaint. If there were any reasonable grounds for sustaining the complaint the offending advertising was thereafter rigorously excluded from the advertising pages of The Moving Picture World. This scrutiny over the advertisements in the paper is maintained in the office of the paper to this hour. It has a double purpose: In the first place, it protects the reader, whose interest must at all times be paramount to the publisher, and in the second place it protects the honest advertiser who dislikes being forced to travel in doubtful company.

Who does not know that advertising in the trade journals is read and examined as advertising in the daily press never is, and in the nature of things, never can be?

Let us once more quote from the communication of our Southern correspondent: "Most live men and women who think and act these days if interviewed on the subject will compare a favorite trade journal to a specially prepared encyclopedia in which information pertinent to his or her pursuits is epitomized for their particular requirements, and if the investigation is continued you will find that in the purchase of materials or supplies they are largely guided by advertisements and suggestions gleaned from this source."

Verily, the advertising pages of the paper are the most essential part of the living history of this fine and useful art of motion pictures. To be out of the advertising part is to be like Goldsmith's traveler, "slow, unfriended, melancholy and remote." In less classic language, he who fails to advertise in the trade journal is no longer in the trade. Speaking of the importance of the news and the advertising columns in a trade paper as compared with a daily publication, which appeals to the public generally, our friend says: "The advertising agent who advises publicity in the daily press in preference to advertising in the trade paper overlooks the fact that the majority of subscribers take the daily papers for the news, and the reading of advertisements is both incidental and accidental, while, on the other hand, a very large percentage of subscribers to a trade journal take it for the advertisements."

It pays to be specific because the "ad" that is worded with a view single to certain readers will attract just those readers and prevent the waste of time and money which follow upon a general and indefinite advertisement. There used to be and there still is a characteristic phrase in some of the old amusement weeklies. The advertiser would urge prospective correspondents to "state all in first letter." Clever wording in the first instance would have made this caution superfluous.

In conclusion we urge our readers not to skim the advertising pages. They will save themselves many an inquiry and needless anxiety by making themselves thoroughly familiar with the advertising pages. These are replete with information at all times and are worth studying from one issue to another.

Great Film Plays for Long Runs

The Waybroad Film Company With Famous Players Affiliations Will Open the Broadway Theater on February 20th—Stanley V. Mastbaum of Philadelphia to Be General Manager—"The Eternal City" to Be the First Play.

ALMOST ambitious undertaking is projected by the Waybroad Film Company, which is headed by Adolph Zukor, of the Famous Players. Mr. Zukor and a group of business associates, among them Daniel Frohman and E. S. Porter, have acquired the leasehold of the Broadway Theater from Mr. Stanley V. Mastbaum, of Philadelphia.

The new company proposes to devote the theater exclusively to the exploitation of the greatest film productions in the world. Only such productions are considered which give good promise of a run extending over a period of not less than two months. The plays selected will be presented in the most modern and effective way possible. Mr. Rothapfel, of The Strand, has promised his assistance in the selection of the best and most suitable music. A large symphony orchestra has been engaged and a conductor of national repute will be entrusted with the leadership. The theater will be closed on February 13th, and extensive alterations and improvements will be made. On February 20th the theater is to be reopened and the first production to be shown will be "The Eternal City." It is expected to run for something like three months. The prices will range from 25 cents to one dollar.

Stanley V. Mastbaum, of Philadelphia, who has achieved such remarkable successes in the management of the Stanley circuit of high-class motion picture theaters, will be the general manager. A representative of The Moving Picture World, who had learned of the formation and the plans of the new company, called upon Mr. Mastbaum at his office in the Stanley on Market street in Philadelphia. Mr. Mastbaum, who has the reputation of being successful with moving picture enterprises which had seemed impossible to others, is full of enthusiasm for the new project, and promises to make New York sit up and take notice.

"You know," he said to the World man, "that I am a believer in pictures, first, last and all the time. We have done some fine things in the way of presenting pictures, but I believe that the field is by no means exhausted. Now, regarding the Broadway Theater, I want to say, first of all, that no expense will be spared in the organization of a perfect symphony orchestra. I am now negotiating with a conductor of national repute to take charge of the music and I believe that I will get him. A temporary organ is being installed now; the new permanent organ will cost $20,000. There will be two performances daily, one in the afternoon and one at night. There will be an intermission of about seven or eight minutes at every performance. Seats will be sold two weeks in advance. I have the assistance of a publicity man now connected with a great enterprise in Chicago, and I will bill New York as it never was billed before for a motion picture house. Three hundred 24-sheets will be distributed where they will do the most good. I expect 'The Eternal City' to last a few months at the least. For our plays we will have the best productions of the Famous Players and we are in a position to bid for the best that is made whether here or abroad.

"In addition to 'The Eternal City' we may have a short curtain-raiser to give the audience a chance to focus their attention upon the screen. I want to make the Broadway Theater the Grand Opera of motion pictures and I have every hope of succeeding. Such men as Zukor, Porter, Ford and Daniel Frohman will give me the benefit of their advice and their experience. Whatever I have learned in the way of presenting pictures will be put to use and you know I have been in the profession from the early days when the main thing was to get them past the ticket taker. The industry has not only outgrown those days, but has advanced into a state which makes it far the most important factor in the world of entertainments."

"THE LURE OF THE MASK" TO BE PRODUCED BY AMERICAN FILM MFG. CO.

S. S. Hutchinson, president of the American Film Manufacturing Company, has concluded the purchase of the exclusive moving picture rights to "The Lure of the Mask," by Harold MacGrath, and a film version of the book soon will be seen in the Mutual program. It will be produced by a special feature company, now being organized at the American's Santa Barbara studios.

Flood Devastates Universal City

Cloudburst and High Winds Join in Effort to Wreck the Motion Picture Town—Will Not Delay the Official Opening.

WORD has been received in New York that a violent storm accompanied by a cloudburst in the foot hills back of the San Fernando valley, hit Universal City, where the California plant of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company is located and caused damage to the extent of $130,000. According to the information at hand the storm burst on Saturday, January 29, and reached its height early Sunday morning, when the San Fernando valley was flooded to a depth of several feet. The buildings of Universal City, which nestle low among the foothills, were quickly submerged. Every building with the exception of the concrete and steel structures were demolished.

The cloudburst was accompanied by a 60-mile-an-hour gale which blew down the two towers on the administration building, knocked flat telephone poles and trees and swept away lightly constructed frame shacks as if they were drifting newspapers. The entire population of Universal City and 700 laborers from Los Angeles are now at work deflecting the course of the river which flows through Universal City in an effort to save the permanent buildings whose foundations have been undermined by the flood now sweeping around them four feet deep.

Cairo Street Scene, in Universal City, Destroyed in Cloudburst.

To add to the general alarm, every electric light in the city went out and telephone and telegraph service with Los Angeles was broken off. The Cairo street scene, which was undermined and destroyed by the flood, consisted of seventeen buildings. The East Side set showed replicas of Mulberry Bend and the park and included six 5-story tenement facades of solid brick. The walls of the buildings, undermined by the flood, fell into the streets. Eight thatched-roof one-story dwellings erected in imitation of the homes of English officers in India, were blown flat by the tornado, while a three-story frame building with fire escapes and a four-story structure of real brick representing a fireproof storage vault in Jersey City also toppled over during the storm. Not a timber remains of the frame tenement. The Oriental sets were of great beauty and required, in the instance of the Cairo street scene, nearly four months to erect. "Little Bombay" is now a memory. Its loss, alone, is estimated at $68,000. Two hundred workmen are now employed in rebuilding, in the enclosed studio, the splendid replica of the Taj Mahal which stood in the center of "Little Bombay," as the extensive set had come to be known.

The roadbeds of the railroad and street car line leading from Los Angeles to Universal City have been washed out by the flood and all roads leading into the city are under six inches of water. Seven hundred laborers from Los Angeles are now at work building dikes to protect the administration buildings in the center of Universal City. In the outskirts of Los Angeles itself the flood reached four inches in depth.

The storm will not in any way delay the opening of Universal City, which is scheduled for March 15, rain, hail, snow or earthquake. The last chapters of the Universal Special Feature Serial, "The Master Key," will be delayed somewhat because of the destruction of the "Little Bombay" sets used in the fourteenth and fifteenth episodes, but Robert Leonard now has an enormous force working inside the great block-long studios rebuilding the Oriental street scenes.

Will Produce "Darling of the Gods"

Lasky Company Organizing to Make Picture Based Upon Belasco Play in Japan.

SAMUEL GOLDFISH, treasurer and general manager of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, left New York on Monday, February 1, for a trip to the Lasky Studios in Hollywood, Cal., the special object of his journey being to complete the organization and equipment of the special company which is to go to Japan for the production of "The Darling of the Gods."

The moment that the deal between Mr. Lasky and Mr. Belasco for the picturization of the Belasco dramatic hits first became public, experts in motion photography began predicting that "The Darling of the Gods" should make a picture surpassing everything conceived or attempted. From the very beginning, the Lasky Company has looked upon this Japanese tragedy as an incomparable opportunity, and has deferred making the production until the present moment for the reason that it felt such an undertaking should not be approached hastily, and should not even be considered until the organization has reached the highest possible state of efficiency.

The picturization of "The Darling of the Gods" will be produced by Cecil B. De Mille, general director for the Lasky Company, who devotes his personal attention to all the Lasky-Belasco offerings. This fact, alone, means that the organization in Hollywood must be so arranged that Mr. De Mille's regular work can be carried on by others during his absence in the Orient. It also means taking from the regular studio companies one selected company, which will devote all its time to "The Darling of the Gods." The cast of this company, to be announced when Mr. Goldfish returns to New York, will break all records for expense and fame. Moreover, all preparations must be made for producing facilities in Japan.

In addition to this particular matter, Mr. Goldfish naturally wishes to inspect the Lasky studios, in Hollywood, which he has not seen since the completion of the new glass studio —much the largest structure of its kind on the coast and one of the few largest in the world. Mr. Goldfish will also take advantage of his transcontinental trip to observe and analyze conditions in the picture business. He will make brief stops in Chicago and half a dozen other leading cities, in each city calling on the leading exhibitors who are showing Lasky productions and, in several instances, conferring with exhibitor's associations. By studying the needs of exhibitors in this manner, Mr. Goldfish expects to glean much information of value in manufacturing and exploiting Lasky feature plays.

In Chicago Mr. Goldfish will be joined by Mr. Adolph Zukor, of the Famous Players.

Hesser Organizes Producing Company

Has Some Distinct Ideas Which He Proposes to Work Out. —Some Subjects Announced.

EDWIN BOWER HESSER, who has made some name for himself in Filmdom, is to be the president of the new Hesser Motion Picture Corporation, which is capitalized for $50,000, which will have offices at 1600 Broadway. Mr. Hesser, although still a young man, has had many years of experience in filmdom. He first came into prominence as general press representative of the Kinemacolor Company of America, for which he handled the nation-wide publicity campaigns of the successful "Coronation in Kinemacolor" and "The Durbar in Kinemacolor."

Independently he has given several seasons of Grand Opera and produced several successful plays, beside controlling over 30 theaters in Canada as managing director of the Maritime Booking Association. Essentially a newspaper man, he gave up short-story writing three years ago, and attained immediate standing as a photoplay writer. Many of his scenarios have been produced both in this country and abroad. The object of the new corporation is to produce Mr. Hesser's own scenarios under his personal supervision. With his intimate knowledge of marketing conditions, and the essentials of making feature film productions profitable, Mr. Hesser should make his company a good proposition. In a communication to the Moving Picture World he makes the following statement:

"For months I have been studying the market, and have come to the conclusion that only two general types of feature pictures can be successful—modern society dramas and productions of essentially spectacular character. Productions of these types will be the only effort of the new corporation, which will start work on March 1st.

"It is true that great difficulty has been found in getting scenarios for modern society dramas that are strong enough to make a four or five-reel features. This difficulty has led many directors and producers to follow the line of least resistance and make screen adaptations of books and plays, however unfit such subjects were to filming. Our company will be glad to consider scenarios of modern society dramas, but a great majority of the productions will be from my own pen, because I am not satisfied unless the theme in each case be vital enough to make a five-reel picture of absorbing interest.

"I will specially look over the scenic conditions in the region of Atlanta, Ga., where we purpose to make our first production, 'The Royal Pretender,' a five-reeler of exceedingly unusual theme. We have arranged for the use of certain military organizations in Georgia, and the staging of some big scenes in which 2,000 people will appear at one time. There is great interest being taken throughout the region because a portion of our capital comes from business men of that section.

"'Cleo' will be the second production, and we hope to start work on this in Bermuda on April 10th. This is to be a spectacular picture, in which the singular beauties of the Islands will be displayed. There are only six principal players in this cast, but several hundred supernumeraries are necessary.

"All of our productions will be five-reelers, and in addition to those first mentioned we have ready 'Race Suicide,' a society drama of unusual strength, dealing in a plain manner with the great peril of modern civilization. 'Near the Brink,' 'Her One Wrong Step,' 'Wooden Cars,' 'Her Father's Sword,' and 'The Devil Laughed,' and 'The Plaid Coat' are other scenarios which we have ready for production.

"The policy of the Hesser Film Corporation will be to employ no regular stock company, but to engage players specially for each picture. We intend to make the name of the company and the title of the picture stand for a high plane of excellence in the selection of our casts. Starting on a conservative basis, with real cash behind us, we plan to make only one production a month in the beginning.

"We have an affiliation with a prominent European producing company," continued Mr. Hesser, "which will enable us to have any of my scenarios which would be difficult to produce over here made on the other side. This company has already made several pictures from my scenarios, and I am selecting American players and directors for them at the present moment, so that their future productions may be perfectly fitted to the English and American market."

Vitagraph Theater Anniversary

Specially Strong Program for the Week Marking the First Year of Broadway's First Picture Theatre.

A PROGRAM of exceptional pictures, pleasing in their attractive variety, will feature Anniversary Week at the Vitagraph Theatre, beginning Sunday, February 7. A year ago, on Februry 9, 1914, the old Criterion Theatre threw open its doors as the Vitagraph, a theatre devoted exclusively to the showing of high class motion pictures at dollar prices. Heading the features is a three-part drama of life, "From Headquarters," a human interest story with a series of punches, produced by Ralph W. Ince with a cast headed by Anita Stewart and Earle Williams, supported by Anders Randolf, Ruth Edwards, Templer Saxe and others. "From Headquarters" tells a powerful story whose theme brings out forcibly that the call to duty, in some, is stronger than filial love.

Another three-part drama of life, but from a different angle, "A Daughter's Strange Inheritance," will be a feature of the specially arranged program. Norma Talmadge in the dual character of a vaudeville wire performer and later, her sixteen-year-old daughter; Donald Hall and Van Dyke Brooks will be seen in the principal characterizations of a picture that shows in vivid realism the danger of giving way to human vices and weaknesses. Both of the feature pictures are examples of the best in motion picture art from every possible point of view.

Two comedy pictures fill out the remainder of the Vitagraph Theatre's Anniversary Week's bill, "The Wrong Girl," in two parts, featuring Wally Van, Nitra Frazer and Albert Roccardi and "The Hypochondriac," or "When Greek Meets Greek," a one-part comedy with a dozen laughs in every one of numerous scenes, presented by Sidney Drew and Jane Morrow (Mrs. Sidney Drew) and an exceptionally clever supporting cast.

More Copyright Decisions

United States Circuit Court Holds That Motion Picture Rights Do Not Go With Dramatic Rights.

By Epes Winthrop Sargent.

SLOWLY the status of the photoplay in copyright litigation is straightening out. The latest decision is one handed down by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, Second Circuit, by Chief Justice Lacombe in the matter of the Photo Drama Motion Picture Company against the Social Uplift Film Company.

Briefly the facts are these. Kauffman, author of the House of Bondage, a novel, assigned his rights in the work to Moffat, Yard & Company. They copyrighted the work (the original copyright covering all rights), and turned back to Kauffman the dramatic rights. These were disposed of to Totten. Later Kauffman sold the film rights to the Photo Drama Company. Totten, on the other hand, had sold the same rights to the Social Uplift Film Company. This company sought to enjoin the Photo Drama Company from presenting its version. Kauffman claimed that he had sold only the stage rights to Totten. The records of the Copyright Office show no record of any transaction. Decision was given in favor of the Photo Drama on the ground that since August, 1912, the film rights is a separable property from the broad dramatic rights, and that these rights had been given the Photo Drama by the presumed holder, since there appears no record to the contrary.

In commenting on the decision, John L. Lockwood, of Cornell, Lockwood and Jeffery, submits these points:

The opinion of the Circuit Court of Appeals in Photo Drama Motion Picture Company vs. Social Uplift Film Company decides:

1. That at least since the 1912 amendment to the Copyright Act the rights to make a dramatization of a copyrighted novel for the stage and to make such dramatization for motion pictures are severable and may be granted to different persons.
2. That separate copyrights can now be obtained for dramatizations of the same subject for the stage and for moving pictures.
3. That since the amendment of 1912, as these two rights are severable, an assignment of either may be recorded under Copyright Act Section 44, and if the assignee pays value and has no notice, he is protected against prior unrecorded assignments.
4. That an assignment of all dramatic rights without reservation conveys the right to acquire a copyright under which the assignee will have the exclusive right of dramatization both for the stage and for motion pictures.

The opinion implies without deciding that an assignment of dramatic rights prior to the amendment of 1912 carried with it the right to dramatize for motion pictures.

The Court does not decide, however, a number of other questions which have arisen, such as whether the grant of the right to make a particular dramatization prevents the grantor from transferring to another person the right to dramatize the same subject for motion pictures, whether the rights to present dramatizations in first-class theaters, in stock, and in motion pictures prior to 1912 were or are severable, and as to the effect of making "exclusive" the grant of any such different classes of rights, or the right to make a particular dramatization for the stage.

Some of these questions have arisen in the New York State Courts in Frohman vs. Fitch, 149 N. Y. Supp. 633; Liebler vs. Bobbs-Merrill Co., 146 N. Y. Supp 1907; Lipzin vs. Gordon, N. Y. Law Journal, May 29, 1914, and others, are suggested by the opinions in Kalem vs. Harper in the U. S. Supreme Court (222 U. S. 55) and in the Circuit Court of Appeals (169 Fed. 61) and Herne vs. Liebler, 73 N. Y. App. Div. 194.

It will thus be seen that while the Photo Drama case decides a number of important points it does not offer an exhaustive solution of the many difficult legal questions which are constantly arising between authors, publishers, theatrical managers, and producers of motion pictures.

Setting aside for the moment the exact text of the decision, or more properly, reading this in conjunction with the Copyright Law, it appears that prior to 1912 "dramatic rights" was held to include all forms of dramatic presentation, including photoplay production, but since the amendment of August 24, 1912, definitely recognizes "motion picture photoplays" as a separate classification (class "1") the photoplay version of a play has precisely the same entity as a book (class "a"), or a dramatic composition (class "d").

The substance of the Copyright Law is this: To encourage the "dedication" or presentation to the public of works of value, there has been provided a scheme of registration and a code of laws governing the same and infringements thereof. If a book or play is dedicated to the public and not copyrighted, the presumption is that the author does not claim these rights and that any person may make such use of the material as he may please. In other words, he has sold something without reservation. The first copyright, whether as a book, play, photoplay or song, covers all of the rights obtainable under the law, and the single copyright remains completely binding until this copyright is dissolved into its component factors when the transfer of each of these factors must, for the purpose of record, be registered with the Copyright Office in the customary manner, if protection is desired. The decision of Judge Lacombe lays emphasis upon the fact that Totten did not record the transfer to him of the dramatic rights and that therefore the Photo Drama Company could have no knowledge of the passing of any rights to him. On the records, the book rights lay with Moffat, Yard & Company, and the stage rights with Kauffman. Furthermore Judge Lacombe seems to have decided that Totten and the Social Uplift Company could not proceed under Section II of the law, which provides that before publication the protection of the author lies in common law, since the matter had been published and duly copyrighted, removing the case from common law and putting it solely under Copyright Law.

The lesson of all of which seems to be that:

Stage and film rights are distinct and separate properties, capable of being sold jointly or severally.

That the assignment of any right, to be effective, must be registered in the Copyright Office as provided in the Act of 1909.

That no action can lie in common law to repair omissions under Copyright Law.

Davis Returns from Havana

Traveling Representative of United Film Service Says Motion Picture Conditions in Cuba Are Good.

AFTER a stay of two months in Havana, George E. Davis, traveling representative of United Film Service, has returned to New York. Mr. Davis says film conditions in the Cuban capital are good, and ascribes this partly to the large number of visitors wintering on the island. As he remained in Havana for two months he had an excellent opportunity to look over the film and exhibiting field.

Mr. Davis is an old time film man and theatrical man, too. He controlled what was probably the first motion picture circuit ever formed in Europe when in 1902-3 he presented "Le Passion," a 2,000-foot, hand-colored production, in France and other countries. During his circuit activities he showed early Biograph subjects, among them the first of motion picture "travelogues," "From Paris to San Francisco." He also exploited the early thriller, "The Black Diamond Express." Prior to this he was stage manager of the Porte Ste. Martin, where Bernhardt, Coquelin and Cerny appeared. He also toured Europe with the Buffalo Bill show. Mr. Davis came to New York in 1905 and has been in the theatrical and motion picture business since. He has managed the Eighty-Sixth Street Theater and the Hamilton Theater.

"It is only of late that the Cubans have come to realize they could get good pictures in the United States," said Mr. Davis. "Another factor favoring the American subjects is the shorter time required to get pictures into Cuba as compared with Europe and also at prices that compare favorably with those of the European market. There are some good pictures down there. I saw 'The Million Dollar Mystery' and the whole series of 'Zudora.' I also saw some good foreign productions, such as 'Antony and Cleopatra' of the Kleine output.

"The shows are divided into three parts, and for each part an admission of ten cents is charged. There are two programs, No. 1 and No. 2. If you care to remain for the second you have to pay an extra ten cents. There are many attractive open-air places; in Cuba, of course, these are especially valuable to an exhibitor, as they may be kept open the year around. There are five film exchanges in the capital. One of the prominent ones is Santos y Artigas. There are no American exchanges. Such American product as is booked comes from Cuban sources.

"While in Havana I met Maurice Fleckles, of the Chicago Universal Exchange. He had been traveling all over the island; he had also visited Porto Rico and Costa Rica and intended going to Venezuela. What kind of pictures do the Cubans prefer? Why, there seems to be a demand for big subjects and hardly any for single reels. Swelling the population of Cuba at present are many Mexicans as well as Italians and Spaniards."

Mr. Davis' mother tongue is Danish. He also speaks English, French, German, Italian and Spanish. Since his return to New York he has met several Spanish-speaking exhibitors with the object of arranging bookings at their theaters.

KLEINE TO RELEASE "WOMAN WHO DARED."

On March 15, George Kleine will release an unusually dramatic five-part feature entitled "The Woman Who Dared." The story is founded on the European spy system and contains some highly spectacular scenes, among which is an exciting race between a flying passenger train and an automobile, the very acme of dramatic effect. Also there are some splendid emotional acting and some tense situations very capably handled.

Kalem "Pure Food" Pictures

Motion Picture Propaganda to Back Up the Ladies' World Campaign Against Adulteration.

IT IS only a few years since the subject of pure foods was first accorded serious attention. For years the public had unquestioningly consumed coal-tar-dyed fruit jams, adulterated syrups, meats "preserved" with shots of benzoate of soda, bleached rice and other articles of food which Mother Nature would have had difficulty in recognizing as her products.

Prof. Lewis B. Allyn.

Then, one day, the adulterated food manufacturers awoke to find that their methods were being frowned upon. Their utmost efforts failed to prevent the government's investigation as to the possible harmful effects of food loaded with preservatives such as benzoate of soda and formaldehyde. The result of this investigation was the enactment of the Pure Food Law.

It is a peculiar characteristic of some laws that they do not afford the protection the demand for which brought about their enactment. It was because the food fakirs speedily found way to circumvent the Pure Food Law that the country at large came to hear about a town in Massachusetts, named Westfield.

Prior to the pure food agitation, Westfield was merely one of the many progressive communities for which the old Bay State is famous. Then, Professor Lewis B. Allyn, an instructor in Chemistry and a member of the Westfield Board of Health, undertook to analyze some of the manufactured food products which were being sold over the counters of the local grocery stores. The stories which went abroad concerning the result of the investigator's discoveries provided the pure food movement with just the impetus it needed.

Of course, Professor Allyn's work did not pass unchallenged. Every organization interested in the manufacture of adulterated foods did everything in its power to intimidate the white-haired man whose work was making Westfield famous. Attempts to bribe Professor Allyn and threats against his life were a matter of daily occurrance, but the champion in the pure food fight continued unterrified and undismayed and presently found a powerful ally in "The Ladies' World."

Professor Allyn's articles in the pages of that publication have aided tremendously in the spreading of the pure food gospel. The Westfield Standard has become the standard of many enlightened communities. Recently, however, "The Ladies' World" decided to enlist the aid of another powerful medium to help carry Professor Allyn's story into every village and hamlet in the country. As the result, on Monday, March 29, Kalem will release a powerful two-act drama, "Poison!" Simultaneously with its issuance in photoplay form, "Poison!" will appear in story form in "The Ladies' World."

The Kalem production was recently viewed by representatives of "The Ladies' World," for whom a special presentation was given. It was unanimously agreed that the photoplay is one of the most terrific arraignments of the adulterated food manufacturers that has ever occurred. It was enthusiastically declared that this visualization of the facts which have been repeatedly put forth by the champions of the pure food cause, will do more to arouse the public demand than any method as yet tried.

Professor Allyn plays an important part in the photoplay, which tells of how Jack Webb, son of a manufacturer of canned foods, returns from college and takes his place in his father's plant. From the first, the young man is horrified with the conditions obtaining in the factory. Filth and dirt abound. The employes are underpaid and many are in a state of health which makes them a serious menace to the welfare of the consumers of the Webb product.

A case is brought to Jack's attention in which the mother of one of the Webb employees has died of ptomaines following a meal in which his father's canned foods had played an important part. Gardner Wood, a representative of "The Ladies' World," calls upon the young man and urges him to remedy the frightful conditions prevailing in his father's factory. Mr. Wood tells Jack of the great work Professor Allyn is conducting. The consequence is that the young man makes a trip to Westfield, Mass., for the purpose of seeing Professor Allyn and securing from him such information as will enable the boy to confront his father.

Professor Allyn gladly complies with Jack's request, and, with the facts in his possession, the young man returns home. But Mr. Webb's fetish is "increased production, low wages and higher profits." The older man jeers at his son's altruistic plans. A slave of the god Money, the manufacturer proposes to show his son that there is not a man living who does not bow his head before its shrine.

Webb proceeds to Westfield, where he requests Professor Allyn to place the Webb products upon the Westfield Pure Food List. Upon Allyn's refusal, the manufacturer signs a blank check which he declares he will allow the chemist to fill in, upon condition that his foods be placed upon the list. Tearing up the check, Professor Allyn replies that the Webb products will be indorsed free of charge, providing the manufacturer first complies with the Westfield Standard.

Somewhat impressed, Webb returns home. Jack is in love with Molly Trumbull, the daughter of a manufacturer whose foods are on the Westfield list. Acting upon his son's suggestion, the man visits the Trumbull plant. The cleanliness of the factory and the quality of the materials which go into the various products are a revelation to Webb.

In the Webb mansion, the manufacturer's ten-year-old daughter breaks into the jam closet and proceeds to partake of a jar of her father's fruit jelly. Two hours later, Webb sends in haste for a doctor. His daughter's condition is so serious that only emergency methods save the child's life. The crisis is barely past when Webb receives word that his factory is afire.

But the news has no effect upon the manufacturer. He now realizes the danger which lies in products such as he has been putting forth and he announces his intention of erecting a factory which will be the last word in cleanliness and where only foods of the highest quality shall be manufactured.

A notable cast of players portray the various characters in "Poison!" Among the popular Kalem stars who appear are Tom Moore, Marguerite Courtot, Robert Ellis, Marguerite Prussing and Richard Purdon. This production will bear the endorsement of all pure food advocates.

"LONG WAY TO TIPPERARY" FILMED.

Pictures put into song are not a new thing, but songs put into pictures are still a novelty. Pathe will release shortly a three-part film called "It's a Long, Long Way to Tipperary," which is based upon the tremendously popular song of the same name. An unusually strong feature in connection with the picture is the fact that it readily lends itself to singing from beginning to end—in fact, the picture itself can and will be sung by most audiences.

There is a heart-interest of pronounced type to the story. Two Irishmen, one a Nationalist and the other a Unionist, are bitter rivals for the hand of a beautiful Tipperary girl. The rivalry shows itself in numerous bitterly contested fist fights. The girl's father favors Mike, the Nationalist. The girl herself leans toward Paddy, the Unionist. War breaks out and both men drop their differences and enlist in the same regiment, which is ordered to the front. Some beautiful night photography scenes are shown of camp life in France. A battle comes, in which both men distinguish themselves, and Mike is wounded.

Later on an opportunity comes to Mike to play the hero. Paddy and the Colonel have taken refuge from the enemy in the loft of a stable. Mike, hotly chased by the pursuing forces, hides in the same stable, being ignorant of the presence of the others. When he discovers his two comrades he at once insists on leaving, saying that as the enemy saw only one man enter, if they see that man leave they will not make a further search.

On leaving the building he is shot down, with the song "Tipperary" on his lips. Paddy is invalided home to be happy with the girl he loves.

"It's a Long, Long Way to Tipperary" will take with every audience. It's a big picture of unusual merit.

Alco All-Star Litigation

Some Light Thrown on the Troubles of Those Concerns by Richard A. Rowland.

AS THE result of an investigation of the affairs of the Alco Film Corporation conducted under section 21-A of the Bankruptcy Act before Commissioner Gilchrist in the United States District Court involuntary proceedings in bankruptcy were instituted on Jan. 30 against the All-Star Feature Corporation by J. Robert Rubin on behalf of the following creditors: J. P. Muller & Company, a creditor for advertising amounting to $500; the Standard Engraving Company, $22 for services and labor performed, and Frank L. Houghteling, $41. The petitioners allege the corporation is insolvent and has preferred certain creditors contrary to the provisions of the bankruptcy statutes.

Judge Mayer appointed Milton M. Goldsmith and Arthur F. Gotthold, receivers, who were the receivers of the Alco, of the property of the subsidiary under a bond of $500.

The investigation conducted by the receivers disclosed the existence of an agreement between the Alco and the All-Star Feature Corporation under which the former distributed films manufactured by the latter corporation, and it developed the affairs of the two companies are closely interwoven.

Richard A. Rowland, one of the promoters of the Alco Film Service, a co-partnership organized last September, with offices in Pittsburgh and Chicago, to rent the Alco releases to exhibitors in the middle west, was examined at considerable length before Commissioner Gilchrist.

The witness admitted the Alco Film Service contracted with the Alco last September to handle the Alco releases on a percentage basis, agreeing to pay $30,000 for the franchise. He said $5,000 was paid in cash and five equal notes given, of which two have since been paid.

Mr. Rowland admitted the Alco Film Service received about a dozen feature films from the Alco in addition to "fillers," since the contract was executed, and that returns of 70 per cent. of the gross receipts from the rentals of the films had not been made to the Alco as provided in the contract. The witness explained he understood the contract had been modified by a letter to the effect that the Alco Film Service might withhold the percentage of the receipts accruing to the Alco and apply the money on an advance of $10,000 made to the Alco to secure the release of "Tillie's Punctured Romance."

It appeared that the release of this photoplay was due about the time the Alco became involved in financial difficulties last November, and Rowland said the Alco Film Service was very anxious to secure the rights to this feature play and would have procured the release direct from the Keystone Company, but for the arrangement, which he explained, modified the original contract.

Among the other features which the All-Star Feature Corporation received from the Alco were "Manon Lescaut," featuring Lina Cavaliera; "The Nightingale," with Ethel Barrymore in the stellar role; "Rip Van Winkle," Salomy Jane," "Michael Strogoff," "The Tigress" and "Little Lord Fauntleroy."

"What position do you hold in your company, Mr. Rowland," inquired Attorney Rubin, when the witness manifested a striking lack of knowledge relative to details of the business.

"I have never been able to find that out myself," acknowledged the witness, whose frankness was in striking contrast to his previous answers.

"Anything other than an angel?" asked the lawyer.

"Nobody has got me for an angel yet, except this concern, the Alco Film Corporation," replied the witness.

Attorney Rubin elicited the information that the Alco Film Service never cancelled the contract and that the agreement stipulated that the failure of the rental exchange to remit the 70 per cent. weekly to the Alco would be construed as a breach of contract which would justify the Alco in withholding future releases.

Mr. Rowland related the substance of negotiations held with Mr. Guggenheim regarding efforts to reorganize the Alco recently. He said Mr. Guggenheim was willing to purchase the Alco, but terminated the negotiations when he learned there were many contingent claims against the corporation for damages for failure to supply releases promptly according to the terms of contracts with exchanges.

Richard M. Watkins, of Chattanooga, who had a franchise for the Alco service in the south, and Albert Russell, of the Alco Film Corporation of Texas, which had a similar franchise for the southwest, testified the releases by the Alco were temporarily suspended a few weeks ago to their damage. Mr. Russell said he expended $18 in a single day in a vain effort to secure films, but he averred he was unable even to get a response. Mr. Watkins said he never was able to establish a business in his territory for the Alco service, owing to the irregularity in releasing films. Both exchange representatives stated they paid $2,500 in cash and $7,500 in notes for their franchise.

Rowland admitted he is planning with his associates already to exploit a nation-wide film exchange. Attorney Rubin asked him if the plan wasn't simply to replace the Alco, but he wouldn't admit such is the case.

Thanhouser Players Open Theater

Actors, Directors and Other New Rochelle Picture Men Take Over North Avenue Theater.

THE Thanhouser Players Theater was opened in New Rochelle, N. Y., on Monday, January 18. It was only on the Thursday before that subscription books were opened to finance the project. Twenty-six hours later all the capital required had been raised, nearly every Thanhouser player and director having become interested. Under the direction of W. Ray Johnston the Thanhouser Players Photoplays was incorporated.

The company secured the North Avenue Theater, seating 500. Under the supervision of Clarence Dull, Thanhouser stage dierctor, the interior was remodeled and decorated, a stage installed and a beautiful lobby arranged. Then it was discovered a new projecting machine was required, and Harris Gordon was sent to New York. He returned at 7 o'clock on the evening of the opening with a new Power No. 6A. The journey and the installation was accomplished in eight hours through the co-operation of Arthur J. Lang and General Manager John F. Skerrett of the Power company.

All the Thanhouser players were present in evening dress for the initial exhibition. At 7:50, when the doors had been opened but twenty minutes, the S. R. O. sign went up and there remained until 9:15, when the house was cleared for the second show.

The directors and officers of the company are: W. Ray Johnston, president; Carl Louis Gregory, vice-president; Frank Farrington, secretary; H. R. Clarke, treasurer, and Sidney Bracy and Harry Benham, the remaining directors. Frank Grimmer and Ernest Warde comprise the entertainment committee. Each night a Thanhouser player appears. Monday is "Zudora" day, Wednesday is Thanhouser feature day, and on Friday nights there are provided souvenirs for the women. The latter evening has been selected for the personal distribution of autographed photographs by one of the Thanhouser players.

Officers and Directors of the Thanhouser Players Theater.

Carl Louis Gregory, Vice-President; Clarence Dull, Decorator; Frank Farrington, Secretary; John William Kellette, Manager; Harry Benham, Director; Sidney Bracy, Director; W. Ray Johnston, President.

Others than those mentioned interested in the exhibiting company are Carroll Fleming, Carely L. Hastings, Elizabeth Kellette, Mary Elizabeth Forbes, Florence La Badie, Phil Brady, George Brimmer, A. E. Moses, Jr., Jack Harvey and Phil Lonergan. Eight-day Mutual service is being used in the theater.

Frank J. Baum of the Oz Film Company is in town and is making his headquarters at the Alliance offices. Mr. Baum made a flying trip from Los Angeles to New York to complete arrangements with General Manager Cobe of the Alliance to release "The New Wizard of Oz" on the Alliance program.

The Motion Picture Exhibitor

Important Ohio Convention

Many Questions Will Be Solved at the Columbus Meeting on February 9 and 10—But Harmony Will Be Uppermost.

THERE is every evidence that the meeting of the Ohio State League at Columbus, Ohio, on February 9 and 10 will be one of greatest importance to the trade. Ohio is better organized, in so far as the exhibitors are concerned, than any other State in the Union. It was the nucleus of the present National League and considerable importance has been attached in the past to what has been done in that State.

Unfortunately during the past few months interest in the organization has lagged in that State, owing largely to the deflection from the league of many exhibitors in Cleveland following the bolt at the New York convention of 1913. The Moving Picture World is informed that many of the points of difference between the Ohio League and the Cleveland men have been adjusted and that there will be a strong delegation present from that city at the coming convention. In confirmation of this comes a telegram from President Neff to the effect that "harmony and good fellowship will prevail, and the indications are that the Ohio convention will be the largest ever held by that organization."

President M. S. Pearce of the National League has issued an appeal to the membership in Ohio to attend the convention. He intends to be present and announces that a meeting of the National Executive Committee will also be held in Columbus at the same time to pass upon any questions that may be brought before it. President Pearce has supplemented the invitation of the State officers to all exhibitors in Ohio regardless of their affiliations to be present at this convention, and it is believed that there will be a general turnout on that occasion.

In this connection and for the purpose of allaying the fears of any of the partisans of the various factions which have sprung up, attempts to stir up strife will not be welcome at this convention. As reported in these columns, President Pearce of the National League and President Neff of the Ohio League have settled the differences that existed between them and have agreed to work together for the benefit of the organization. They will expect their friends to adopt the same course. There can be no half-hearted service in this matter, for any act that hinders the growth of the league will have the effect of nullifying the efforts of the officers to promote its best interests.

There are many matters in the way of proposed legislation to be considered at this convention. Drastic legislation has been proposed in Ohio that will affect the exhibitor in a most serious manner. The exhibitors of that State must get together to combat those questions. It will be proposed at this convention that the Ohio censor law be condemned by the exhibitors of that State. On this question there are differences of opinion, but it is one upon which, in so far as the organization is concerned, the opinion of the majority should prevail. While the subject of official censorship is obnoxious to all public spirited citizens and should be discouraged, it should not be permitted to disrupt the league, and, as much as the Moving Picture World should like to see that law wiped off the statute books of Ohio, it believes that the integrity of the organization is paramount and should not suffer because of differences of opinion on any question of this character.

One of the most important matters to come before the Ohio League is the election of officers for the coming year. President Neff has declared his intention of withholding his name from renomination for the office of president. It will be the business of the members to find a man who will be as strong and who will give as much attention to the organization as he has. It will require a man who can unite the factions which have sprung up in that State within the past year, but Ohio has much available presidential timber and it will surely be able to agree upon a suitable leader.

Don't forget the dates—February 9 and 10. The headquarters will be at the Southern Hotel. All exhibitors in Ohio are invited to be present.

Michigan Wants Uniform Prices

Exhibitors' League Holds Lively Meeting in Detroit to Discuss the Question.

THE Michigan Branch of Motion Picture Exhibitors' League held a very lively session in its club rooms in the Equity building Jan. 26, and for several hours thrashed out the proposition of how to get all Michigan exhibitors to show a uniform number of reels, or on the basis of three reels for five cents and five reels for ten cents. As far as Detroit is concerned, conditions are quite satisfactory, most of the present trouble being out in the State, including the cities of Saginaw, Bay City and Grand Rapids.

The objection was raised that both the Orpheum and Miles theaters were given a two-hour picture show preceding the regular afternoon performance of vaudeville without extra charge; in other words, a person can go to either theater at 12:30 o'clock, for an admission price of 10 and 20 cents, and stay right through two hours of pictures and nearly three hours of vaudeville. As neither house could be termed picture theaters exclusively, the association could hardly class them in with the theaters who are members.

Then was presented the condition of affairs in Saginaw, where several houses are giving coupons and cutting prices. A number of exchange men, invited to be present, were called upon to express their views as to what co-operation they would render in order to have this evil eliminated.

The exchange men assured the members of the League that they were heartily in favor of doing anything they could consistently that would improve conditions in the motion picture industry. The exchange men were asked as to whether they would go so far as to cut off supplying service to any theater that was violating the mutual understanding of three and five reels, but they stated that such matters would have to be referred to the home office.

President Fowser appointed a committee to immediately canvass the film exchanges and get the manager's ideas, and it is believed that at last a plan has been reached whereby there will be less of this evil than there has been in the past.

To a representative of the Moving Picture World, one of the leading Detroit exhibitors said: "It looks to me as if the exhibitors are attempting to have the exchange men run their business for them. Surely the organization is large enough and important enough to take care of its own internal troubles and should not try to force the exchange men to anything. I have always said that minor troubles can be adjusted by a committee, comprising the leading members of the league, going to the parties at fault, getting them together and showing them where both are wrong. The difficulty is that when there is a scrap on, both sides are obstinate, and each one says, "Well, he started it, and he has got to quit first." No effort is made to go direct to the proprietors and managers doing wrong, but instead they go to one and then the other and ask them to stop giving too many reels, or to stop special offers and premiums, and then if they get no satisfaction they ask the film exchanges to cut off their service. This is not fair, to say the least. Why should the film exchanges be asked to lose a good account? They are not to blame any more than is a retail cigar store, drug store or department store that makes a lower price than some other place. The exhibitors know that the film men and the supply men are always working for the betterment of the industry, but to drop a profitable customer is really unfair.

"If two people are cutting prices, giving coupons, etc., it stands to reason that neither can be making much money, and the only reason they do such things is because they really 'cut off their nose to spite their face.' I never saw a fight yet that was profitable. The public is the only side that reaps the benefit, so that in reality the concerns at war are only 'knocking their own game.' But show these firms where they are wrong and get them together, and they will soon stop fighting. Let them realize that they are in business for profit, not for glory."

HARRISBURG CONVENTION ENDS

State Officers Elected by Acclamation—The New State Organization Decides to Join the National League—Important Resolutions on Censorship and the Building Code—An Informal Banquet Closes the Proceedings.

By W. Stephen Bush.

THE last day of the Harrisburg convention was both the busiest and the most important. Several new members received when the proceedings were opened on the morning of Thursday, January 28. Among them were such well-known Pennsylvania exhibitors as George Krupa, the pioneer of Lancaster; Mr. Robert Robinson, also of Lancaster; and F. M. Shadel of Williamstown. Chairman Zerr declared nominations for state offices in order, and the following exhibitors were elected by acclamation:

President, Benjamin H. Zerr of Reading.
First Vice-President, Gebhard W. Lahner of Pittsburgh.
Second Vice-President, G. C. Miller of Plymouth.
Secretary, James Delves of Pittsburgh.
Treasurer, Charles Segall of Philadelphia.
National Vice-President, Fred J. Herrington of Pittsburgh.
Publicity Agent, Frank A. Gould of Reading.

There were three cities in the field to get the state convention which is to be held early in June of this year. The contending cities were Pittsburgh, Reading and Philadelphia. A keen rivalry developed and the race promised to be very close until the Philadelphia delegates swung over to the support of Reading. Reading won with a substantial majority.

National Vice-President Herrington moved to have the new state body make formal application to the National League for a charter. There was considerable discussion on this subject and all the advantages of affiliation with the National League were thoroughly gone into. When the vote was put it was unanimous in favor of the plan to apply immediately to President Pearce for membership in the National League.

The committee appointed to draft a plan of campaign for complete organization in the state submitted its report and divided the state into nine districts in the following order: Philadelphia 1, Wilkesbarre 2, Reading 3, Harrisburg 4, Williamsport 5, Altoona 6, Pittsburgh 7, Erie 8, Dubois 9. A resolution was adopted empowering President Zerr to appoint a state organizer. With the advice of the convention the President appointed Fred J. Herrington as state organizer. A telegram was then read containing the regret of Senator Boies Penrose who had intended to address the convention, but was prevented from doing so by an attack of illness. The convention instructed the secretary to send the Senator its best wishes for a speedy recovery.

The Committee on Resolutions then reported and submitted the following drafts of resolutions on censorship and on the proposed building code:

The Motion Picture Exhibitors of the State of Pennsylvania in convention assembled do hereby appeal to public opinion to relieve the motion picture industry of the injustice of legalized censorship as it is now embodied in the law of Pennsylvania.

We believe that legalized censorship is a grave menace to that freedom of expression which is guaranteed to the citizens of this state by the Constitution. The screen on which motion pictures are projected is as much a medium of expression as the spoken or printed word, and is therefore entitled to the same immunity from previous legal restraint as the book and the newspaper; an encroachment on the constitutional guarantee of freedom of expression is not only an injury and an injustice to the motion picture but an entering wedge of political interference with the press and freedom of speech.

We therefore appeal to the American press to unite with us in resisting to the utmost every attempt to abridge the liberty of the screen.

We believe that no censorship is necessary, because the motion picture as much as the press, is under the constant influence of public opinion and the laws now on the statute books are amply sufficient to deal with objectionable pictures as they are amply sufficient to deal with newspapers offending against the law.

We urge all citizens of Pennsylvania, of whatever political creed, to protest against the legalized censorship and to write to their representatives in the Legislature asking them to vote for a speedy repeal of the censorship law.

We extend our congratulations to the organized exhibitors of our sister state of Ohio upon their efforts to repeal the Censorship Law in that State.

We record with satisfaction that legalized censorship has only been accepted in three states out of forty-eight in spite of the fanatical crusades against the freedom of the screen.

We record our abiding faith in the good sense and of the love of fair play and justice of the American people and express our hope that legalized censorship will soon be a thing of the past.

We desire to go on record as emphatically opposed to any abuse of the freedom of the screen by irresponsible persons and we pledge ourselves to prosecute or to aid in prosecuting any person or persons who are guilty of showing pictures the exhibition of which constitutes an offense against the law.

We invite the co-operation of the people of this Commonwealth to aid us in maintaining the present high standard of motion pictures by helping us to discover and pronounce all persons who show pictures which violate the law.

The resolution on the Building Code law protested against the proposed drastic regulations of motion picture theaters and characterized such legislation as confiscatory. Both resolutions were adopted unanimously. The day closed with an admirable address on legalized censorship by J. W. Binder of the National Board of Censors. He was listened to with marked attention and his speech was warmly applauded. Just as the convention was about to adjourn Peter Magaro, the well known Harrisburg exhibitor, tendered an invitation to the delegates to be the guests of the Harrisburg local at the Hotel Plaza. The invitation was gratefully accepted and the convention adjourned sine die.

In the evening all the delegates participated in the social gathering at the Hotel Plaza. Mr. Herrington acted as toastmaster. The feature of the informal banquet was the speech of the State Commission on Labor and Industry, John Price Jackson. Mr. Jackson assured the members present that exhibitors in Pennsylvania need not fear his department. He promised that no new building code would be recommended to the legislature unless the motion picture interests were consulted first. He emphatically disclaimed any intention of recommending confiscatory leg-

JAMES DELVES,
Secretary.

BEN H. ZERR,
President.

GILBERT C. MILLER,
Second Vice-President.

CHARLES SEGALL,
Treasurer.

FRANK A. GOULD,
Publicity Agent.

OFFICERS OF PENNSYLVANIA EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE.

islation. He said he realized the value of the motion picture industry as a factor in modern civilization and he would bear this fact in mind in dealing with moving picture men. The Commissioner's remarks were well received.

There was much informal speechmaking between soup and nuts and everyone thoroughly enjoyed himself.

Convention Brevities.

The feature men are truly irrepressible. No sooner had the convention finished its afternoon session than three or four enterprising young men decorated the walls with abundant samples of "threes" and sixes." Senator Thompson told them to keep Head Censor Breitinger away or "they would all be clapped into jail."

* * *

Peter Magaro, Harrisburg pioneer film man, invited the delegates to see "Du Barry" at a private showing in "The Regent," the finest theatre in the capital city. It was a merry little party, which separated only in the "wee small hours."

* * *

National President Pearce left soon after the meeting with the legislators, going directly home to Baltimore. His new theater in the Monumental City has proven a big success.

* * *

Among the legislators who pledged themselves to vote the Censor law out of existence was Representative Dodds, a miner, and quite a picturesque figure.

* * *

When I got off the train and the guard called out "Harrisburg" some wag near me said in a stage whisper: "Some burg." The moving picture men are well pleased with their reception and treatment here. With our multi-colored badges we attract a good deal of attention, though we are competing with a Farmers' Convention and with the Legislature itself.

* * *

V. R. Karrick was on hand looking as boyish as ever, though it's something like eight years that he managed the film department of the good old firm, Brown, Williams & Earle. Karrick is an optimist and says business is good.

* * *

No convention ever had more "old-time picture men" than this. There is not a novice among them, and they do love to talk of the early days when five hundred feet of film constituted a real program.

* * *

The heavy hand upon the heavy gavel was conspicuous by its absence. President Zerr used nothing more formidable than a lead pencil, and very little of that.

* * *

The harmonious relations between the exhibitors and the exchange men were most gratifying. Many of the pioneer exchange men of old Philly and Pittsburgh were there either in person or by proxy. The name of Harry Schwalbe, the president of the Electric Theater Supply Company, was cheered by the exhibitors when it went on the joint committee on legislation.

St. Louis Exhibitors Join League

Organization Recently Formed Now Has Ninety Per Cent. of Managers in City.

THE Theater Managers and Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association, which was organized in St. Louis recently, has ninety per cent. of the managers and proprietors of theaters enrolled as members. John H. Gentner, proprietor of the Retina Theater, 20th and Market streets, is president; Frank Root, of the Eagle, 1719 S. Broadway, is vice-president; Chas. Hawkins, of the 14th Street Theater, secretary; J. W. Price, of the Manchester, treasurer; C. Bermeitinger, sergeant-at-arms; and Mrs. Tillie Schwartz, owner of the Famous Theater, 6th and Franklin avenue, is financial secretary.

The executive board of the organization is composed of the following well-known exhibitors: Jos. Mogler, Edward Pohlman, Frank Root, Geo. P. Meyer, and Geo. Kern.

The organization will work for the betterment and elevation of the amusement business, to maintain friendly relations between exhibitors and patrons, to promote a campaign in education and the better things in all branches of entertainment, and last, and more important, to bring about a more friendly feeling among exhibitors, to encourage the "get-together and exchange ideas" habit.

Headquarters have been established in the Benoist Building at 9th and Pine streets, office room 312, and assembly room 400.

Federal Censorship

The Smith-Hughes Bill Reported Favorably by the House Committee on Education.

THE House Committee on Education at Washington, D. C., on Tuesday, Feb. 2, ordered a favorable report on the Hughes bill, establishing a Federal commission for the censorship of picture films.

While the bill will go on the calendar of the House, it probably will not be reached at this session. The measure was written by the Rev. Dr. William Sheafe Chase, of Brooklyn, and was introduced in the House by the chairman of the committee.

The bill provides for the creation of a commission whose duty it will be to pass on all moving picture reels presented in the United States. Films which do not bear the approval of this commission would not be permitted in interstate commerce. For the inspection of each film a fee of a dollar would be exacted.

New York Exhibitors Fight Ordinance

At a Mass Meeting, a Campaign Against Proposed City Laws Is Successfully Launched Under the Auspices of the Local Organization.

A MASS meeting of the New York Exhibitors called by the local organization to assemble in the Candler Theater was called for Tuesday, February 2nd, considered the proposed city ordinance which imposes upon the exhibitor the burden of ascertaining whether a minor is accompanied by his parents or by a friend of the family. In spite of the adverse weather conditions and the blockade in the subway over a hundred exhibitors appeared in response to the letters that had been sent out by Secretary Adolph Weiss.

The meeting was called to order by Samuel Trigger, who made a brief address and was then elected temporary chairman. In his address Mr. Trigger read the most objectionable provision in the proposed ordinance. The text is as follows:

"No person being owner, in whole or in part, of a motion-picture theater or an open-air motion-picture theater, or the manager or any employee or attache thereof, shall admit to or allow any child under the age of 16 years to remain in any place where moving pictures are shown under a license issued pursuant to 32 of this chapter unless such child is accompanied by his or her parent or relative, or by friends of his or her parent, whether an admission fee is charged or otherwise. No person, not the parent, relative or friend of his or her family, shall invite or take any child under the age of 16 years into any place specified in this section, unless consent has been given by the parents or proper guardians of such child. (C. C. 565, 566.) 43. Violations. Any person who shall violate, or refuse or neglect to comply with, any provision of this article shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by a fine of not more than $100, or by imprisonment not exceeding 30 days, or by both such fine and imprisonment; and any such person shall, also, for each offense, be subject to the payment of a penalty in the sum of $50; to be recovered in a civil action."

Mr. Trigger then announced that ex-Commissioner of Licenses James Wallace had been retained by the organization to fight the ordinance and called upon Mr. Wallace to make a report, relinquishing the chair to the vice-president, M. Needles. Mr. Wallace said that he had secured more time on the consideration of the ordinance, and then gave a brief resume of the origin of the proposed law which he characterized as absolutely superfluous because the present penal code dealt with the subject of the admission of minors in a sufficiently drastic manner. The chairman of the meeting then called upon W. Stephen Bush, of The Moving Picture World, to address the meeting. Mr. Bush declared that speedy action was more important than speechmaking. He called attention to the fact that a law similar in all respects to the one now proposed by the Board of Aldermen exists in the city of Toronto, in Canada, and he gave illustrations of the hardships and the actual injustice it worked upon the exhibitor, who did not know where he stood and who would soon be compelled to either evade the law or go out of business. He instanced the case of a Toronto exhibitor who was fined $50 because it turned out that a boy under age had been taken into his theater by somebody who was neither the parent nor the guardian nor "a member of the household to which the boy belonged." Mr. Bush called attention to the law in New Jersey, which allowed minors to come into theater if accompanied by "an adult friend." This provision absolved the exhibitor from the obligation of acquainting himself under pain of fine and imprisonment with the family history of every minor who was brought into his theater by an adult. Mr. Bush said that no business would or could submit to such legislation without suffering both in money and in self-respect.

L. S. Harris and John J. Wittman, both of the Cinema Club and both occupying positions on the platform, pleaded for concerted action to defeat this iniquitous piece of legislation. After several men had spoken against the proposed measure on the floor of the theater a committee was appointed to collect funds and in a short time over four hundred dollars had been contributed by the exhibitors present. A number of responsible exhibitors pledged themselves to contribute and send their checks. This will swell the fund considerably. With two hundred dollars collected from dues which were in arrears the fund for the fight against this ordinance is well on its way toward the thousand dollar mark.

Harmony and amalgamation were the watchwords of the meeting after the business of the meeting had been attended to. The pleas of the members of the Cinema Club were followed by an earnest address for harmony by Samuel Trigger, who was loudly applauded throughout.

The headquarters of the Manhattan organization will hereafter be located at Room 403, World Tower Building, 110 West 40th street.

California Exhibitors Active

Alameda County Local No. 2, Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of California Holds Annual Meeting.

THE annual meeting of Alameda County Local No. 2 of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of California was held in the rooms of the Chamber of Commerce at Oakland on January 21 and was well attended by members from Oakland, Berkeley, Alameda and other communities on the east side of the bay. A number of very important measures were discussed and a committee was appointed to present to the city councils of Oakland, Berkeley and other cities, a plan for a reduction in the license fee now demanded of moving picture theaters. It is planned to have the fee graduated according to seating capacity, along the lines adopted by the Federal Government in its recent tax measure.

At the election of officers that took place at this gathering W. S. Smith, of the Fremont Theater, Oakland, was chosen president; G. E. Thornton, manager of the Oakland Photoplay Theater of the Turner & Dahnken Circuit, was chosen vice-president, and W. S. Krahn, of the Lorin and Strand Theaters of Berkeley, was re-elected secretary and treasurer. The directors are C. L. Mehrten, of the Varsity Theater, Berkeley; J. Hellman, of Hellman's Theater, Oakland, and H. A. Avardsen, of the Rex Theater, Berkeley.

The Alameda County Local is one of the strongest in the State and is accomplishing a great deal of good for its members. Its meetings are now being held once a month, instead of once a week as formerly, and are well attended. Following the regular meeting in February the members plan to take lunch together at the St. Mark's Hotel, and it is anticipated that this get-together feature will result in bringing out almost the entire membership.

EXHIBITORS OBJECT TO MORE CENSORSHIP.

A well-defined rumor of a plan to establish municipal censorship in Covington, Ky., not long ago resulted in an uprising on the part of the members of the Kenton and Campbell Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, comprising exhibitors in the several Kentucky towns along the Ohio opposite Cincinnati, with a view to taking steps to defeat the proposal. A meeting was to have been held for this purpose, as the exhibitors felt very strongly on the matter, but the persons responsible for the proposed censorship evidently decided to drop the matter, as nothing more has been heard of it. The Kentucky exhibitors were especially wrought up, in view of the rather peculiar situation in which they are placed. By reason of the fact that, as stated, the Kentucky municipalities referred to are virtually a part of Cincinnati, although located across the river in another State, the exhibitors there are served through Cincinnati film exchanges, whose output has been censored by the National Board at New York, and by the Ohio Board at Columbus. The thought of having to submit to a third censorship, more irksome than either of the others, was too much for the exhibitors, and they arose in their wrath to do whatever was necessary to avoid it.

WAKING UP IN KENTUCKY.

Fred Dolle, secretary of the Moving Picture Exhibitors' League of Kentucky, said that the executive committee, which was to have met a short time ago in Covington, Ky., had not been able to get together, but that he expected a meeting would be held shortly at which time date and place of meeting would be decided upon for the annual convention to be held some time in April. The convention will probably be held this year either at Louisville or Lexington.

The Louisville Exhibitors' League has not held a meeting for about six or eight weeks and no meeting is scheduled for the present. Things have been running along rather smoothly with the M. P. men, and no real excuse can be found for holding a meeting just now when everyone is busy.

Strange as it may appear, the various exhibitors of Louisville are really on the friendliest of terms. A large operator recently said: "I have been fighting 'John Jones' in a business way for years and I have attempted to control both the outskirts and down town theaters. He has done the same thing and we have been operating opposition houses continuously. However, we have always been fair with one another, and our prices have generally been standard. We have endeavored to win out by showing the best stuff and managing to give better service for the price of admission than the other fellow. Instead of being enemies, we are good friends, and often discuss puzzling situations freely. The consequence is that we have both learned the business faster, have given the public better service, and are both handling a lot of people."

BOSTON ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual meeting of the Massachusetts Exhibitors' League will be held at Boston, Mass., on Tuesday, February 9. The meeting will be held at the Quincy House, beginning at 6:30 o'clock p. m. A clerk, a treasurer and a board of directors will be elected. A dinner will follow the meeting.

FIRST MOVE FOR HIGHER PRICES.

"The Eternal City" and Other Important Subjects Will be Distributed Through Special Booking Agency.

THE Famous Players Film Company announces its photo-spectacle, "The Eternal City," for immediate release to legitimate theaters and motion picture houses charging twenty-five cents as the minimum admission that can house a long-run attraction such as this unusual film achievement.

A special booking agency has been organized by the Famous Players Film Co. for the exploitation of "The Eternal City" and other special subjects too long for the regular program. This booking organization is to be called the Select Film Booking Agency with offices at 110 West 40th street, with George M. Welty, one of the best-known booking agents in the theatrical profession, having for years been identified with the Liebler Co. in the capacity of representative. The Famous Players future Mary Pickford releases will also be booked through this special agency.

Regarding the purpose and policy of the Select Film Booking Agency, Mr. Zukor, president of the Famous Players, said: "For a long time we have been perplexed by the limitations of a definite four and five-reel program, which often militated against important subjects whose nature required longer and unusual treatment. The solution of this problem we found in the organization of a special booking agency for the distrbution of a few selected subjects that were too long or expensive to be confined to the regular program. After these subjects have been booked in the theaters throughout the country that are equipped to house long-run, special attractions, they will be placed on the regular program, and when they are so released to the regular program exhibitors, they will possess a prestige similar to that which attaches to a theatrical production after a metropolitan run. The enormous cost of the forthcoming Mary Pickford releases make it imperative to distribute these subjects through the Select Film Booking Agency.

"The organization of this special attraction program will do more to enhance the dignity of the feature film, and the integrity of the industry at large than any other single or various steps ever before taken, as for the first time in the history of the motion picture business, it is absolutely and inseparably placed on the plane of legitimate theatrical offerings of the most serious type. The adoption of this policy will greatly dignify the public aspects of the trade, as it will now assume every iota of systematization associated with the business methods of the theater."

CHICAGO LETTER

BY JAS. S. McQUADE

Moving Pictures Achieve Marvelous Results in Teaching "Safety First" System.

H. L. BROWNELL, safety inspector of the Chicago surface lines, made the statement the other day that 464 lives had been saved during the year 1914 by means of moving pictures which had been specially made for educating the public on the "safety first" system.

These pictures illustrate no less than sixty kinds of accidents on surface street car lines and of passing automobiles, etc., and how to avoid them.

This "safety" instruction has been designed for school children, older children and grown-ups. School children are taught in the pictures how to go safely from home to school, then from the school to home, and third, the care that must be exercised in playing on the streets after school. Older children are taught how to get on and off street cars and to look out for the auto or wagon that may be following the car from which they alight. They are taught not to run across the street in front of a car, auto or wagon, as there may be a vehicle on the other side, unseen by them, that is moving faster than the one they are trying to avoid. Numerous other forms of danger are shown in the pictures and how accidents may be avoided.

The owners and operators of street cars and other vehicles of rapid movement are also taught their obligations to pedestrians in moving pictures.

The Chicago coroner's record and the street car records show that in the year 1914 there was an 80 per cent. reduction in accidents to children owing to the instruction imparted by moving pictures on the subject. These pictures have been exhibited in schools and churches throughout the past year, and in summer they have also been screened in the playgrounds of public parks. Safety Inspector Brownell appeals particularly to children in his "safety first" campaign.

Members of the public safety committee of the Illinois Manufacturers' Association attended a dinner Thursday night, Jan. 28, at the City Club. Addresses were delivered by H. L. Brownell, chairman of the committee, who presided, and by Capt. C. C. Healy of the mounted police. Moving pictures used by Capt. Healy in the "safety first" crusade in the schools and playgrounds were exhibited, as were others taken by Mr. Brownell, showing traffic congestion in the loop.

Capt. Healy told of the immense amount of work required by the men under him to make it safe for pedestrian traffic in the downtown section.

Perhaps no city in the country has educated its residents on the "safety first" system as thoroughly as Detroit. There, chalk lines mark the zones of danger and any pedestrian is immediately arrested if he violates the rules of the street. The same ruling applies to street cars and other vehicles.

Exhibitors throughout the country can accomplish a great deal in introducing the "safety first" system in every city and town where dangers lurk on the streets.

Author's Book Finds Lost Relatives.

James Oliver Curwood, famous as an author and well known in the moving picture trade as the writer of stirring scenarios for the Selig Polyscope Company, and other manufacturing film concerns, had a delightful experience recently through the wide reading of his novel, "God's Country and the Woman." This work appeared first in serial form, in the Red Book, published in this city, and its reading by a lady in the city of Plymouth, England, brought together the lost branches of a family, the members of which have been separated for more than sixty years.

Mr. Curwood's father, who was a grand-nephew of the famed Capt. Marryat, author of the best sea novels ever written, imitated his great-uncle by running away to sea. After residing in America for a number of years he wrote back to England many times, but never could locate his relatives. In his latest book, the son of the wanderer used the name of his father's aunt, Josephine Adare, for his heroine.

Mrs. Azalie Trahair, of Plymouth, England, read the romance when it appeared in serial form, and was struck with the combination of names—Curwood and Josephine Adare. She wrote to the author, and now it has turned out that the Trahairs are the main remaining branch of the Curwood family in England.

Mr. Curwood contemplates a visit in the near future to his English relatives, when the lure of the great frozen Northwest, in which he has found so much of inspiration and health, shall have lost some of its compelling attractiveness.

Sad Death of Miss Ethel Hopp.

Film circles in Chicago have been stirred with sympathy for Joseph Hopp and his family, who have been plunged in grief through a deplorable automobile accident which resulted in the death of Miss Ethel Hopp, Thursday, Jan. 28.

Mrs. Hopp and her two daughters, Miss Pearl and Miss Ethel, were driving from their home, on Wrightwood avenue, to meet Mr. Hopp in his downtown office and bring him home. The family chauffeur, a careful and skillful driver, was turning south on Lakeview avenue when his machine was struck in the middle by another car that was going south at high speed. The three occupants were seated on the rear seat, Miss Ethel on one side, Mrs. Hopp on the other, and Miss Pearl between them. The crash was heavy and Miss Ethel was hurled through the glass windows to the pavement, suffering a severe fracture of the skull from which she died a few moments afterward in a hospital near by. Mrs. Hopp and Miss Pearl were thrown with violence against the front of the car and escaped with bruises and slight cuts from broken glass.

Miss Ethel, who was a great favorite in society circles on the North Side and noted for her gentleness and sunny disposition, was only nineteen years of age. She was a graduate of North Division High School and was widely known for her deep interest in charitable works. She was the special pet of her father and her last words—"Say good-bye to papa"—were for him.

Mrs. Hopp places the responsibility for the accident on the driver of the other car.

"We were going at only normal speed and the other car seemed to be going at a very high speed when it struck us," she said after the accident. "We were just turning into Lakeview avenue and our chauffeur had no chance to get out of the way. The other man should have slowed up at the crossing. It looked to me he put on more speed to get in ahead of us after we had partly turned the corner."

Mr. Hopp is widely known as the founder and former owner of the Standard Film Exchange, purchased some time ago by Universal. He worked his way up from small beginnings until he has acquired a comfortable fortune. He is the president of a Chicago bank at the present time, and is also a partner in the Union Film Co.

The members of the Chicago staff of the Moving Picture World extend their profound condolence to Mr. Hopp and his family in their great affliction.

Chicago Film Brevities.

William N. Selig, president of the Selig Polyscope Co., left for New Orleans via the Illinois Central Railroad Thursday evening, Jan. 28, en route to the Panama Canal zone to join his Western company, now producing "The Ne'er Do Well" there.

* * *

F. H. Franke, proprietor and manager of the California Theatre, this city, called at the World office one day last week and renewed his subscription. "Business is just fair at the present time, owing to a great many people in the neighborhood of California being out of employment or only working part of the time," Mr. Franke said. His son, E. A. Franke, recently sold the Clark Theater, on Clark street, near Wilson, and seating 1,200 people, to a Mr. Ferris at a good figure. Mr. Franke, Jr., who is a mining engineer and practical chemist, has gone back to practice his former profession. The Franke theatre enterprises at one time owned six theatres—the California, the Clark, the Mabel, the Bell, the Lawndale and the Sheridan. All these theatres have now been disposed of except the California. Programs of five reels of the Mutual brand and other special features are shown at this house for 5 and 10 cents. The seating capacity is 800.

* * *

Edward Trinz, manager of the Avenue theatre, Milwaukee, Wis., and Martin Sachs, manager of the Vitagraph and Biograph theatres, on Lincoln avenue, this city, paid us a call last week. Mr. Trinz is the son of H. Trinz, owner of the Avenue. He reported very good business and is satisfied with the outlook. The Avenue seats 700 people and offers four reels of General Film service for 5 cents. When six reels of special features of the General Film Co. and of the World Film Corporation are shown, the charge is 10 cents.

* * *

A. M. Kennedy, general manager of production of Kriterion films stopped over in the city last week for a few hours while en route from New York to California with the Harry Mathews Comedy Company and the Lloyd Carlton Company, fourteen people in all.

* * *

A through train on the Illinois Central Raliroad from New Orleans bound for Chicago recently struck a broken rail while going at the speed of seventy miles an hour on the downgrade between Homewood and Kensington. Every coach on the train was derailed and uncoupled and the trucks were twisted like paper. Luckily it was an all-steel train, and though many persons were injured, none of them seriously, no one was killed. We are sorry to report among the injured Miss Adrienne Kroell, formerly leading woman of Selig's Eastern company, and George L. Cox, general manager of the Advance Motion Picture Co. of this city. Miss Kroell had a sprained ankle and the shoulder of Mr. Cox was considerably bruised. We congratulate them on their lucky escape.

* * *

Judge Sullivan of this city denied the Twentieth Century and the Circle theatres, this city, an injunction against the Century Film Co., Friday, Jan. 29, to restrain the film company from leasing "The Escape" to any theatre on West 12th street, before they were shown in the theaters mentioned. The action was based on failure of the applicants to produce a contract with the defendant.

* * *

Among new Chicago corporations licensed by the secretary of state, recently, at Springfield, Ill., is the United States Motion Picture Co., capitalized for $100,000, with F. C. McCarahan, B. W. Veirs and J. S. McClure as incorporators.

* * *

A recent dispatch from Sacramento, Cal., gives the information that moving picture shows in California are more than ten times as popular as the "legitimate" theaters. The figures are based on statistics of public amusements contained in a report presented to the legislature by the state recreational inquiry commission. This report gives the following yearly attendance: moving picture houses, 19,436,584; vaudeville houses, 7,382,804; "legitimate" theaters, 1,790,464, and burlesque theaters, 1,055,904.

* * *

The Harper Theater, at 53d street and Blackstone avenue, this city, was built some time ago against the protest of the Hyde Park Presbyterian Church trustees, who said it was contrary to the law to build a theater within 200 feet of a church. The house, which is one of the most elaborate in outlying districts, was refused a theater license. The theater was built by F. W. McKinney, who since sold his holdings to August E. Martin, president of the Martin Construction Company. The present owner, it is said, has been making arrangements to convert the theater into a negro church. This does not daunt the pastor of the church, however, who says that it is simply a threat to fight him and the church trustees. It appears that Mr. Martin is willing to make the concessions that the trustees can have the privilege of censoring all the reels shown in the theater in case they will permit him to open it.

* * *

The Ziegfeld is presenting a double bill for the week beginning Sunday, Jan. 31, including Mary Pickford in "Mistress Nell," and a new series of moving pictures of the war in Europe, the latter under the auspices of the Chicago Herald. The first series of these pictures were well received at the Ziegfeld the preceding week.

* * *

It is learned that the American Film Mfg. Co. has secured the exclusive moving picture rights to Harold McGrath's book, "The Lure of the Mask."

* * *

Rochelle, Ill., has decided by popular vote that moving picture shows can be run on Sundays. The entire town turned out on voting day and polled 837 votes. Of these 237 were made by women. The fans won by the small majority of 37.

* * *

Sir Douglas Mawson, the Australian explorer and scientist, who spent 1912 and 1913 in the Antarctic wilds, will relate some of his experiences at a luncheon of the Geographical Society of Chicago, at the Hotel La Salle, Feb. 13, when he will be a guest. His address will be illustrated by moving pictures and photographs of antarctic animal life and scenery.

* * *

The fifth weekly report of the "Sue" contest has brought many surprises to the candidates and their supporters. Several of the girls who were far down on the list have come near the top, while the leading candidates have had a hard time to hold their positions. The result of the totals in the fifth report has reached remarkably high figures. The names of the first five highest in the contest and the votes are as follows: Florence Tighe, 262,355; Dorothy Warshauer, 261,550; Gladys Swain, 184,700; Myrtle Johnson, 152,740; and Mae Connery, 139,240. It will be seen from the figures that only 800 votes separate the two leading contestants.

Murray F. Beier, who has been general booking manager in New York City for the Picture Playhouse Film Co. since July last, arrived in the city Friday, Jan. 29, to assume the duties of general booking manager in the Chicago office, located in the Mallers Bldg. Mr. Beier tells me that this company is about to open offices in Kansas City, St. Louis, Minneapolis and Indianapolis, and that, in addition to the management of the Chicago office, he will perform the duties of district manager for the Middle West. Mr. Beier takes the place of S. C. Bestar, who has held the position of local manager since September last. Mr. Beier has had long and varied experience in the moving picture field, covering a period of nearly ten years. During that time he has filled many important positions, as well as promoting and managing several of his own enterprises. For three years he was assistant auditor and cashier with the Pathe Co., in New York, with Herbert Blache, of the Sedeg Feature Film Co., as manager, and manager of the New York and Buffalo offices of the World Film Corporation in 1913.

* * *

C. Lang Cobb, Jr., of Ramo fame, was in the city Friday, Jan. 29, and remained until Sunday, when he left for Toronto.

* * *

H. A. Spanuth, general manager of the Central Film Co., this city, advises this office that his company has secured the state rights for all of Weber and Field's comedies for Illinois, Wisconsin, Indiana, Iowa and Michigan. Mr. Linick, of Jones, Linick & Schaefer, recently made arrangements in New York City. It is understood that Marcus Loew has secured all the eastern rights for these pictures. It is not known just at present who is primarily handling the Weber and Field productions, but it is hinted that Adolph Zukor is prominently connected with the output, apart from his interest in the Famous Players Film Co. The first release will be made about Feb. 15, in his territory, Mr. Spanuth says.

* * *

A special meeting of the Reel Fellows Club was held Friday evening, Feb. 5, at the Hotel Sherman. President Nehls called this special meeting for the purpose of taking up various matters in connection with the Reel Fellows ball, which will be held at the Hotel Sherman Monday evening, Feb. 22, on Washington's birthday, in the Louis XVI ballroom. The chairman of the arrangement committee has completed negotiations with the Hotel Sherman management, and the entire four halls as well as the promenade in connection with the Louis XVI room have been secured. Members of the club will be able to secure ball tickets from the committee appointed for that purpose, and any further information concerning the ball will be gladly furnished the secretary and treasurer, Captain L. A. Boening, 619 West Jackson Blvd.

KERRIGAN CAPTURES GERTRUDE PRICE.

Miss Gertrude Price, a special correspondent of Chicago, recently traveled to Universal City especially to see the Universal's stars and to "write 'em up."

Upon her arrival, Warren Kerrigan took an immediate fancy to the pretty brunette girl with the infectious laugh and induced her to appear in a scene of "Smouldering Fires," which is being filmed at San Juan Capistrano, California, with the old mission church there as a background.

Jack Kerrigan and Gertrude Price in "Smouldering Fire."

Miss Price was dressed as a Mexican lass with a rosette in her hair and "screened" splendidly.

Doings at Los Angeles

THE outlook for 1915 is a Fair one, and moving picture people are preparing for a prosperous season. Exhibitors, producers, fans and every person interested in the film industry are wide awake and on the job. During the first month of the year just at a close, there has been more going on than for any other month in the history of Los Angeles' moving picture district.

Last week we had the big Exhibitors' Ball, and this week brought out a surprise in the Static Club's affair. Next month, February thirteenth, will see the crowning feature of the moving picture people's dances, the annual Photoplayers' Ball, the real picture ball, the big event of the year, the revue and show of the stars of filmdom. At this event every player "dolls up," sure enough. And the gowns that are imported! And the crowds of fans that attend, and the lights, and dances. Well, the entire club and, in fact, every person connected with the industry here is looking forward to the big dance on St. Valentine's eve.

* * *

But to tell about the camera men's affair: It was a surprise. It was grand. Everything was better than before. This was the second annual ball, held on the evening of Wednesday, the twentieth. The officers of the Static Club of America: E. G. Ullman, president; William C. Foster, vice-president; Harry A. Gant, secretary, and S. S. Norton, treasurer, were ably assisted by the 1915 ball committee, composed of L. M. Smith, chairman, W. F. Alder, W. L. Griffin, E. J. Vallejo and K. D. Gray. The program and souvenir book were well gotten up, and the local merchants recognized the 1915 event by generous advertisements. The players and producers also stood by their brothers, the grinders of cameras, and everybody present at the ball enjoyed it immensely. The picture people are standing by each other admirably, and everyone in the industry is a member of a sort of fraternity which has no laws nor known existence, yet they are all in the mutual union of friendship. A feature of the big affair was the grand march, which was led by Margarita Fischer and Robert Leonard.

* * *

If Marshall Neilan does not stop changing companies so suddenly and without notice, he will be called a bee, for now he has buzzed over to the Famous Players, and Al. Kaufman has put him opposite Mary Pickford in "Rags," directed by James Kirkwood. Alan Dwan is finishing "The Love Route" with Donald Crisp and will start "The Commanding Officer," in which the well-known ex-Mutualite will play the title role. For the first picture Dwan used 350 men in one scene on the railroad, going to Santa Ana to get proper locations.

* * *

Whether it is interest in the coming big 1915 ball, or whether it is just an added impetus from new companies coming west, or just a natural livening of things here, the Photoplayers' Club is a busy place. This week Henry Balboa Walthall was the master of ceremonies, and a crowd equal to the one of last week was present to hear him. Every kind of fun and entertainment was offered the screen men; old timers met and new friends were made, the evening being a record-breaker for floating attendance. Many men came up to the club while en route to the Static ball on the same evening.

* * *

Vitagraph players, under the direction of R. S. Sturgeon, are spending a few days on the summit of Mount Wilson, twenty-five miles from the studio. They are getting big hill scenes and some snow stuff to finish up the big feature.

* * *

George Siegmann, directing Cora Drew, Billie West and William Henneberry, has finished a picture of some merit at the Mutual. It shows the life of an ex-convict who tries to tread a straight and narrow path, and is called "The Man with a Record."

* * *

Arguments against capital punishment have long been made verbally, but now comes a four reeler which will be made a feature Biograph release. It is called "The Avenger" and will be directed by Albert Glassmire, scenario editor of that studio. This will be his first picture.

* * *

Another big event planned for the Moving Picture Hub, as this place is called, is the entertainment planned by the 1915 General Committee of Los Angeles city and county. The organization is only formulating plans for the summer, but already the big Stadium at Thirty-fifth street and Hooper avenue has been leased for a year, and a date set for the start. The object of this big committee is to entertain visitors during 1915, to beautify the city and county, and exploit this section. The committee, a very progressive one, recognizes the moving picture industry; in fact, it is the first time that "our little business" has been taken real notice of by local people, and they want to make the picture business a feature of the program of entertainment for this affair. Their idea is to furnish and maintain suitable spaces for any companies desiring to enter the event, so that pictures can actually be made on the ground at this big Stadium. It will boost the several brands, as well as the people, and at the same time give visitors a chance to see pictures in real production. Their idea is that millions throughout the interior states who have never seen a film being made will want to see their favorites work, and this will give them a chance to witness the pictures in the making. This idea will also permit the companies working to have big scenes, for features of the entertainment will be the great Kiddies' Fiesta, Rodeo and Western sports, fire fighting and numerous other spectacular events. The committee wants to get in touch with the film makers and try to open the affair with the moving pictures, all the other events to follow at intervals of a few weeks. From time to time the committee will report progress, which will be interesting to people interested in moving pictures.

* * *

The Crown City Co., in Pasadena, is now comfortably at home in its big studio, the laboratory having been completed and all apparatus moved in. The work of putting the final touches to the grounds is progressing, and the spaces left unused are being laid out in flower beds with gravel walks around them, and this improvement changes and beautifies the entire place.

* * *

G. P. Hamilton, of the Albuquerque, is now directing, having completed his first picture, "The Misplaced Twins," featuring Dot Farley. This company intends putting out another release, another director to be engaged soon.

* * *

Invinceville Inceville! This is about the busiest place around the Hub. A new stage is under construction which is to be 75 by 125 feet. There are several other minor buildings and structures being completed, and a new idea is being used in building the diffusers for the new stage. Several funny Incedents have happened around this plant. A day or so ago a wild seal was roped by Pedro Leon, cowboy chief, and the animal is now docile, but it took several pounds of fresh fish as an Incentive to the seal to tame it. Now its desire for actors to feed it fish is Incessant. The seal will be trained to work in pictures.

* * *

The Masterpiece Co. is now settled down at its new home in Hollywood, only a few straggling carpenters remaining to show that the new studio is practically completed. "The Substitute" has been started and will be followed by "Lord Loveland Discovers America." "Jack Shanty" has been shipped east for release.

* * *

Edwin Carewe is busy directing the Rolfe Photoplays, Inc., players at the old Majestic studio in Boyle Heights in "The Cowboy and the Lady," with F. Miller Kent and Helen Case featured. The company is working with about twenty-five people and is making great progress under the management of Mr. Carewe.

* * *

The Biograph studio is another busy location these balmy days—it has not rained for a week; a big steam roller was buzzing about the walks and roadways the other day, pressing down an oiled surface, which completes the spring overhauling. John Gray, in the script house, wrote a comedy while the roller puffed and wheezed outside the office window. He said it made him so nervous that he could do nothing but think of funny things. He did not say whether the steam roller was to play a part or whether the story was a political one. Del Henderson did a comedy with a fire hose, in which every person in the yard was used. Even the scenario artists had to get soaked; and the worst of it was that they had no change of clothes, and they had to go home to get dry, while the actors went to their dressing rooms and redressed.

* * *

Little Violet MacMillan, the tiny star, is being featured in an Ince special, "The Artist's Model," to be followed by "The Disillusionment of Jane." Miss MacMillan's introduction of the "Woozy" into fashionable society has caused the little animal of fairy tale fame to become quite popular.

A new director has been added to the Lubin forces in the person of Leon D. Kent and he is doing a heart interest story, "A Change of Heart." Harry Revere, one of the best-known experts with a camera, will direct a special picture here, starting next week.

* * *

Charles Clary at the Mutual, directed by George Nichols, is to be seen in a few weeks in a story, "A Day That Is Dead," written by Chet Withey. At last "How Hazel Got Even" is completed. It is the hoodoo picture that was started two months ago by Donald Crisp with Dorothy Gish. Crisp took sick. Dorothy suffered injuries in an automobile accident. When she returned, George Seigmann directed, but he was taken ill, and then followed Teddy Samson's name on the sick list. Still another delay was caused by the loss of a magazine of good scenes. Now the company breathes freely, for the fatal film has been canned and shipped out of town.

* * *

Robert Levy and the Eclair players from the Tucson headquarters are on the road west to work here, the Sterling studio in Hollywood having been chosen for a location. Most of the players are coming and, when they arrive, the western production headquarters will be livened considerably. They will start work immediately.

* * *

Frederick Thomson has gone east. Local people "understood" that the well-known director for Lasky's had connected with Bosworth's, but he has gone. He finished "The Country Boy" with Marshal Neilan. Dorothy Green was seen to good advantage in the part of Amy LeRoy in the same piece.

* * *

In order to save time in sending the film east, ever since the eighth installment of "The Master Key," a special messenger has taken the stories east, as they were turned out from the laboratory. This has never been done before, and the Universal is setting a pace. The players are so rushed to keep up with their dates that the messenger had to be sent east with the canned goods.

* * *

G. M. Anderson, of the Essanay filmers, has brought west a bevy of pretty girls and a cast of stars for his musical comedy company here. Gypsy Dale, the English musical comedy star, was brought out to work in pictures, but is first appearing here in the legitimate.

* * *

The F. P. studio is a busy place. Everyone tries to see Mary Pickford. "Rags," her first piece in the west, is sure to be a winner, so much good playing and so much good work in it. Al. Kaufman and Miss Pickford went to the pound to find out how dogs were sent across the great divide of dogdom. As the big doors were closing on a horde of canines Mary spied a raggy little poodle and begged the poundman to save it. They actually reached in and rescued the pup from the jaws, or doors, of death. Mary took the little beggar home and had him scrubbed, powdered and ribboned and christened "Rags" and "Rags" he is. He will be in the picture, too. J. Farrell MacDonald is playing the girl's father in this piece.

* * *

Charlie Chaplin is back from the east and has gone up to Niles to work in funnies for his company. He said, according to a local paper, that the "east is too damned cold for me."

* * *

William Devereaux, who is assisting in the scenario office at Lasky's, is on his way to the Orient to get material for the coming stories dealing with the Far East, "The Darling of the Gods" to be one of the big features.

* * *

Fritzi Scheff is here and has started work for the Morosco Co., in the title role for "The Pretty Mrs. Smith."

* * *

David Belasco will arrive here some time early in April, says Mr. Lasky, to personally supervise the filming of "The Darling of the Gods." The firm has again leased a parcel of land on which will be constructed a large general store room. The company has now absorbed the whole block, tearing down fences, uprooting trees, razing buildings and spreading progress, and it looks good indeed. Edgar Selwyn will be seen in "The Arab," his own story, in which he played the original star part. May Allison is here and is working before the camera in "The Governor's Lady," directed by George Melford. The players returned from the Mojave desert yesterday.

* * *

The Jungle Film Co. has started operations again. John Roman having returned from the east with contracts for one reel animal specials. More animals have been added to the menagerie and the place improved and enlarged.

* * *

Chance Ward and his Kalemites are doing a laughter comedy with Bud Duncan and Lloyd Hamilton. It is a Turkish story, and a whole street has been built for the main scenes. It is a really funny story, according to the director. Marion Sais is also in the cast of principals. William Wolbert, the other director, is waiting for a story from the east.

* * *

Mr. Mix and his Seligites are doing "Sagebrush Tom" this week. It is a western, but a different one. The studio is quite a busy place and many scenes are being made at the plant.

* * *

Saturday evening members of the Photoplayers' Club enjoyed a Dutch dinner and entertainment at the Los Angeles Athletic Club as the guests of the entertainment committee, of which Leo P. Bergin is chairman. He attended the fellowship dinner Wednesday evening and formally invited the boys to attend the get-acquainted affair. The film fellows reported a jolly good time.

* * *

"The Spanish Jade" is the first production of the Fiction Pictures, Inc., of which firm Louis Joseph Vance is president and Wilfred Lucas, chief director. The jade story is by Maurice Hewlett and features Betty Bellairs; James F. O'Shea is assisting Mr. Lucas. Bess Meredyth is also a member of the company. E. J. Vallejo is camera man, and F. H. Crouse is superintending the laboratories.

* * *

The Kalem railroaders have gone to Las Vegas, Nevada, to get some unshot railroad location for "The Race for the Crossing," and "The Girl on the Trestle," forthcoming Helen's Hazards films. McGowan is directing on crutches now, and says by postal that everything is coming fine and that he hopes to be able to hobble around in a few weeks.

* * *

Harry G. Keenan, who plays lead in "The Toast of Death," an Inceville special, was riding to a location with his camera man, Will H. White, when the driver hit a big chuck hole, causing the machine to lunge up, bouncing the two men off the seat. The actor sustained a severe cut on the top of his head, while his camera man suffered a badly cut nose. Both were rushed to a hospital where their wounds were dressed. Mr. Keenan had to stay in bed for three days.

* * *

Features Ideal, Inc., one of the numerous branches of the Eclair, has arrived here with Manager Robert Levy at its head. The big consignment of players, laboratory men, employees, props, scenery and other equipment arrived this week and already film is being made. There are thirty persons in the company. It required nine cars and a special Pullman to make up the feature train. I met Mr. Levy at the old Sterling studio and he said he was glad to get here after being fourteen months in Tucson. He told me that he was seeking a location for the erection of a permanent $20,000 studio. The new place is to be a big one, with all modern equipment, including a glass stage. Mr. Levy has already engaged George Larkin and Dolly Scott to head one feature company. Among the transplanted players are Carl LeViness, Henry Aldrich, Norbert Miles, Fred Hearne, Will Scherer, Hal Wilson, Lindsay Hall, Webster Cullison, Edna Payne, Clara Horton, Alice Knowland and Lucy K. Villa. The cameramen are Fred Dobson, one of the veterans of photography, and Raymond Agnel. We may expect some good live news from this company, and the west welcomes them heartily.

* * *

Tom Walsh who played Barcus in the "Trey o' Hearts" series was severely burned this week and is in the hospital suffering intense pain as the result of being inside a circle of powder when it went off ahead of time, ignited by a spark from a nearby bonfire. The picture is "The Blood of the Children," and Cleo Madison, working opposite, gave some of her own cuticle, which was grafted on the injured actor, thus helping to have his life.

* * *

Alan Dwan and his company, headed by Donald Crisp, Harold Lockwood, and Winifred Kingston, with 350 extras went to San Fernando to get some big scenes for "The Love Route." The Famous Players are doing some great work here now. Al Kaufman says that Marguerite Clark and John Barrymore will soon be here to do some special pictures.

CLARKE IRVINE.

Catalogue of Educational Releases for 1914*

PART II.

By the Rev. E. Boudinot Stockton, S.T.B.

8 LITERATURE

82 English

82-1 Poetry

Byron, George Gordon, Lord.—CORSAIR, THE. Eclectic 4r Ag 1914. Syn. 21:880; Sp. rev. 21:708.

Longfellow, Henry Wadsworth.—CHILDREN'S Hour, The. Thanhouser 14 N 1914. Syn. 18:782; Com. 18:869.

———— EVANGELINE. Canadian Bioscope 4r. N 1913. Adv. 18:666; Syn. 19:726, Sp. rev. 19:662; mfg. 19:555.

Scott, Sir Walter.—LADY OF THE LAKE, THE. Warner 3r N 1913. Com. 18:613.

82-2 Drama

Aldrich, Thomas Bailey.—JUDITH OF BEthulia. Biograph 4r. Je 1914. Syn. 20:1608; Sp. rev. 19:1242; music for, 20:1528, 21:292.

Goldsmith, Oliver.—SHE STOOPS TO CONQUER. Cosmofotofilm 3r Jy 1914. Syn. 21:484; Sp. rev. 21:283.

Lytton, Edward George Earle Bulwer,—1st Lord Lytton—CARDINAL RICHELIEU'S WARD. Thanhouser 6r. My 1914. Syn. 20:726.

————RICHELIEU. Universal (Bison) 4r. 26 S 1914. Syn. 21:1560; Com. 20:214; Sp. rev. 21:1628.

Shakespeare, William—MERCHANT OF VEnice. Universal 4r. Ap 1914. Syn. 20:272; Sp. rev. 19:813; mfg. 19:300.

———— OTHELLO. Kleine 5r. 6 Jy 1914. Syn. 21:334; Sp. rev. 21:678; mfg. 20:1274, 21:288.

82-3 Fiction

Beach, Rex—SPOILERS, THE. Selig 9r. Ap 1914. Syn. 21:624; Sp. rev. 19:1506, 20:186.

Brady, Rev. Cyrus Townsend—RING AND THE Man, The. Famous Players 4r. 20 My 1914. Syn. 20:1602; Sp. rev. 20:1411.

———— SOUTHERNERS, THE. Edison 3r. 22 My 1914. Syn. 20:1006; Com. 20:1409; Sp. rev. 20:649.

Bronte, Charlotte—JANE EYRE. Imp 2r. 9 F 1914. Syn. 19:716; Com. 19:810.

Burnett, Mrs. Frances (Hodgson)—LADY OF Quality, A. Famous Players. 5r. 1 Ja 1914. Syn. 18:1598; Sp. rev. 19:152.

———— LITTLE LORD FAUNTLEROY. McEnnery 4r. Jy 1914. Sp. rev. 21:69.

Butler, Ellis Parker—PIGS IS PIGS. Vitagraph 17 Jy 1914. Syn. 21:328; Com. 21:704; Sp. rev. 21:1785.

Caine, Hall—CHRISTIAN, THE. Vitagraph 8r. Je 1914. Syn 20:1492; Sp. rev. 19:1656; music for, 22:339.

Collins, Wilkie—DREAM WOMAN, THE. Blache 4r. 4 F 1914. Syn. 19:1744; Sp. rev. 19:1508; mfg. 19:1696.

Cooper, James Fenimore—SPY, THE. Universal 4r. Je 1914. Syn. 20:580.

Davis, Richard Harding—SOLDIERS OF FORtune. All Star 6r. Ja 1914. Sp. rev. 19:154; mfg. 17:969.

Dickens, Charles—"Christmas books"—CHIMES, The. Hepworth-American 29 Ag 1914. Syn. 21:1826; Sp. rev. 21:1076.

————, ————, CHIMES, THE. World Film 5r. 7 S 1914. Sp. rev. 21:1624.

————, ————, CRICKET ON THE Hearth, The. American 2r. 16 F 1914. Syn. 19:874; Com. 19:948; mfg. 19:821, 966.

————, ————, CRICKET ON THE Hearth, The. Biograph 2r. 8 S 1914. Com. 21:1776; Sp. rev. 21:1216.

———— DAVID COPPERFIELD. Hepworth-American 7r. O 1913. Syn. 18:788; Sp. rev. 18:29.

———— OLD CURIOSITY SHOP. Blinkhorn 5r. Mr 1914. Sp. rev. 19:1533.

Doyle, Sir Arthur Conan—"Rodney Stone"—HOUSE OF TEMPERLEY, THE. Cosmofotofilm 4r. My 1914. Syn. 20:1316; Sp. rev. 20:974.

Eliot, George (pseud)—SILAS MARNER. Edison 2r. 24 O 1913. Syn. 18:406.

Goldsmith, Oliver VICAR OF WAKEFIELD, The. Hepworth-American 3r. 29 D 1913. Syn. 18:1180; Sp. rev. 18:1519.

Goss, Charles Frederick REDEMPTION OF David Corson, The. Famous Players 10 Ap 1914. Syn. 20:582; Com. 20:518; mfg. 20:538.

Haggard, Henry Rider JESS. Kennedy 4r. 18 F 1914. Syn. 19:1438.

Halsey, Forrest—STAIN, THE. Eclectic 6r. Je 1914. Syn. 20:1746; Sp. rev. 20:1668.

Henry O. (pseud)—CABALLERO'S WAY, THE. Eclair 3r. 1 Ap 1914. Syn. 19:1734; Com. 19:1682.

———— "A Chaparral Christmas Gift"—MEXICAN'S GRATITUDE, THE. Edison 10 Mr 1914. Syn 19:1284; Com. 19:1680.

———— REFORMATION OF CALLIOPE, The. Eclair 2r. 5 N 1913. Syn. 18:526; Com. 18:266.

Holmes, Oliver Wendell -ELSIE VENNER. Kennedy 3r. 4 Mr 1914. Syn. 19:1308.

Jacobs, William Wymark—BEAUTY AND THE Barge, The. Cosmofotofilm Ag 1914. Sp. rev. 21:937.

———— BOSUN'S MATE, THE. Cosmofotofilm Ag 1914. Sp. rev. 21:937.

———— LAWYER QUINCE. Cosmofotofilm Ag 1914. Sp. rev. 21:937.

———— THIRD STRING, THE. Cosmofotofilm Ag 1914. Sp. rev. 21:937.

London, Jack—BURNING DAYLIGHT. Bosworth 5r. 14 S 1914. Adv. 21:1462; mfg. 21:1655.

———— JOHN BARLEYCORN. Bosworth 6r. Jy 1914. Sp. rev. 21:406.

———— "Night Born"—TO KILL A MAN. Balboa D 1913. Adv. 18:1431.

———— SEA WOLF, THE. Bosworth 7r. O 1913. Syn. 18:1214; Sp. rev. 18:480; music for, 20:952.

———— "When God Laughs"—PIECE OF Steak, A. Balboa D 1913. Adv. 18:1431.

Lover, Samuel—RORY O'MORE. Kalem 26 S 1914 (reissue of 4S 1911). Syn 21:1676; Com. 22:188. Sp. rev. 21:1627.

Lynde, Francis—"In Christmas Canyon"—ACROSS THE BURNING TRESTLE. Edison 18 Jy 1914. Syn. 21:326; Com. 21:704; Sp. rev. 20:1803.

Nicholson, Meredith—PORT OF MISSING MEN, The. Famous Players 5r. 1 My 1914. Sp. rev. 20:976.

Page, Thomas Nelson—"A Captured Santa Claus"—WITHIN THE ENEMIES' LINES. Edison. Syn. 18:1316.

Parker, Sir Gilbert—PIERRE OF THE PLAINS. All Star 5r. My 1914. Sp. rev. 20:647.

Pemberton, Max—KRONSTADT. Gaumont 3r. 13 Je 1914. Syn. 21:122; Sp. rev. 20:1838.

Reade, Charles.—CLOISTER AND THE Hearth, The. Blinkhorn 5r. Mr 1914. Syn. 19:1306; Sp. rev. 19:1222.

———— "Ticket of Leave Man"—DETECtive Craig's Coup. Eclectic, 5r. Jy 1914. Syn. 21:620; Sp. rev. 21:708.

Scott, Sir Walter—BRIDE OF LAMMERmoor, The. Kennedy 3r. 21 Ja 1914. Syn. 19:604.

———— "Ivanhoe" — REBECCA THE Jewess. World's Leader 6r. Ja 1914. Syn. 19:346; Sp. rev. 19:291.

———— HEART OF MIDLOTHIAN, THE. Hepworth-American 5r. My 1914. Syn. 20:1314; Sp. rev. 20:1093.

———— "Heart of Midlothian"—WOMAN'S Triumph, A. Famous Players 4r. 10 My 1914. Syn. 20:1316; Sp. rev. 20:1122.

Sinclair, Upton—JUNGLE, THE. All Star 5r. 25 My 1914. Sp. rev. 20:1675; mfg. 20:680, 1553.

Stevenson, Robert Louis—TREASURE ISland. Warner 3r. N 1913. Adv. 18:947.

Stowe, Mrs. Harriet Elizabeth (Beecher)—UNCLE TOM'S CABIN. Kalem 2r. 17 D 1913. Syn. 18:1316; Com. 19:49.

———— UNCLE TOM'S CABIN. World Film 5r. 10 Ag 1914. Syn. 21:1152; Sp. rev. 21:1077.

Tarkington, Booth—CHERRY. Vitagraph 6 Ap 1914. Syn. 20:102; Com. 20:361.

———— "Beasley's Christmas Party"—SOPHIA'S IMAGINARY VISITORS. Edison 17 F 1914. Syn. 19:858; Com. 19:1236.

———— TWO VANREVELS, THE. Edison 2r. 29 My 1914. Syn. 20:1148; Com. 20:1541.

(Fox, John, Jr) TRAIL OF THE LONESOME Pine, The. (Anon). Broadway Productions 5r. My 1914. Syn. 21:486; mfg. 20:1274.

Vance, Louis Joseph—BRASS BOWL. Edison 2r. 27 Mr 1914. Syn. 19:1568; Com. 20:213.

———— ONE WONDERFUL NIGHT. Essanay 4r. 18 Jy 1914. Syn. 21:485; Sp. rev. 21:810.

———— SHEEP'S CLOTHING. Edison 2r. 18 S 1914. Syn. 21:1546; Com. 22:64; Sp. rev. 21:1219.

Wister, Owen—VIRGINIAN, THE. Lasky 5r. 7 S 1914. Syn. 21:1828; Sp. rev. 21:582, 1106, 1648.

83 German

Gustzkow, Karl. URIEL ACOSTA. Great Players 5r. My 1914. Syn. 21:120.

Hauptman, Gerhardt — ATLANTIS. Great Northern 6r. Je 1914. Syn. 20:1744; Sp. rev. 20:1520; mfg. 17:1074.

84 French

84-2 Drama

Hugo, Victor, comte—RUY BLAS. Majestic 3r. F 1914. Syn. 19:874; mfg. 18:1425.

Maeterlinck, Maurice—MARY MAGDALENE. Kennedy 3r. 4 F 1914. Syn. 19:664.

84-3 Fiction

Balzac, Honore de—"La Fausse maitresse"—MASTER CRIMINAL, THE. World Film 4r. Ap 1914. Syn. 20:422; Sp. rev. 20:372.

Belot, Adolphe—STRANGLERS OF PARIS, The. Motion Drama Co. 6r. D 1913. Syn. 18:1340; Sp. rev. 18:1530. From Belasco's dramatization of Belot's novel.

Daudet, Alphonse—JACK. World Special 2r 1 D 1913. Syn. 18:1060; Com. 18:1413.

———— SAPHO. Eclair 4r. O 1913. Syn. 18:790.

Dumas, Alexandre—CHICOT THE JESTER. Leading Players 3r. 10 My 1914. Syn. 20:584; Sp. rev. 20:530.

———— THREE MUSKETEERS, THE. Anglo-American 8r. F 1914. Syn. 20:428; Sp. rev. 19:1369.

Geoffroy, Gustave — "L'Apprenti" — HORRORS of War, The. Leading Players 30 My 1914. Syn. 20:874.

Prevost d'Exiles, Antoine Francois, l'Abbe—MANON LESCAULT. Playgoers. Syn. 20:1884; Sp. rev. 20:1808; mfg. 20:374.

Verne, Jules—AROUND THE WORLD IN Eighty Days. Lewis Pennant 6r. Je 1914 Com. 20:1542.

———— IN SEARCH OF THE CASTAWAYS World Film 5r. My 1914. Syn. 20:1028; Sp. rev. 20:1091. Also known as "The Children of Captain Grant."

———— MICHAEL STROGOFF. Popular Players 5r. 1 Je 1914. Syn. 20:1882; Sp. rev. 20:1669; mfg. 20:1273.

———— TWENTY THOUSAND LEAGUES Under the Sea. Eclair 6r. N 1913. Mfg. 18:740.

Zola, Emile—GERMINAL. Pathe. 6r. 16 Mr. 1914. Syn. 19:1014; Sp. rev. 19:416.

891.7 Russian

Turgenev, Ivan Sergieevich — "The Bread of Others"—PETROFF THE VASSAL. Features Ideal 3r. 20 My 1914. Syn. 20:870; Sp. rev. 20:944.

9 HISTORY

IRELAND A NATION. McNamara 22 S 1914. Sp. rev. 22:67.

ROME OR DEATH. Inter-continental 5r. F 1914. Syn. 19:1746; mfg. 19:1695. Struggle for Italian independence, 1867-1870.

MEXICO. Al Dia 4r. Ja 1914. Sp. rev. 19:1091.

MEXICAN WAR PICTURES. Mutual 2r. F 1914. Sp. rev. 19:658.

COMING OF THE PADRES, THE. American 2r. 18 Mr 1914. Syn. 19:1436; Com. 20:57; mfg. 18:1559. Founding of the Santa Barbara mission, California, in 1782 by Padre Junipera Serra.

LAST NIGHT OF THE "BARBARY COAST," The. Progressive 2r. N 1913. Sp. rev. 18:474.

902.6 Archaeology. Antiquities.

(32) Egypt

EGYPTIAN TEMPLES. Pathe. 8 N 1913. Syn. 18:520; Com. 18:867.

ANCIENT TEMPLES OF KARNAK. Vitagraph 5 N 1913. Com. 18:867.

MONUMENTS OF UPPER EGYPT. Pathe. 18 F 1914. Syn. 19:866; Com. 19:1236.

ANCIENT RUINS OF THEBES, EGYPT. Pathe. 7 Ap 1914. Syn. 20:110; Com. 20:516.

(37) Rome. Italia

ROMAN RUINS. Lux 5 N 1913. Syn. 18:660 In Aries, South France.

COLISEUM OF ROME, THE. Vitagraph 3 D 1913. Adv. 19:984.

COLISEUM IN FILMS, THE. Vero Educational 3r. F 1914. Syn. 19:1166.

PAGAN ROME. Vero Educational 4r. Ap 1914. Syn. 20:274.

(59.6) Cambodia

RUINS OF ANGKOR-THOM, THE. Melies 25 D 1913. Syn. 18:1578; Com. 19:172; Sp. rev. 18:1558.

(72) Mexico

UXMAL RUINS IN YUCATAN, THE. Joker 9 S 1914. n. s. or c. p.

91 Geography

91 (2) Physical

91 (23) Mountains 91 (234) Europe

IN THE SPANISH PYRENNES. Pathe. 21 N 1913. Syn. 18:772; Com. 18:1151.

AUVERGNE MOUNTAINS, CENTRAL FRANCE, The. Lux 14 N 1913. Syn. 18:916.

VIEW OF THE ALPS. Lux. 12 Je 1914. n. s. or c. p.

MATTERHORN, SWITZERLAND, THE. Selig 14 N 1913. Com. 18:1007.

WINTER HOLIDAY IN THE BERNESE OBERland, Switzerland. Edison 18 Mr 1914. Syn. 19:1418; Com. 20:57.

91 (237) North America

ACROSS SWIFTCURRENT PASS ON HORSEback. Edison 27 O 1913. Syn. 18:406; Com. 18:612.

GLIMPSES OF THE ALPS OF SOUTHERN California. Universal Ike 16 Je 1914. Com. 20:1829.

*The first part of this catalog appeared in the issue of February 6.

TRIP TO MOUNT LOWE, A. Kalem 5 Je 1914. Syn. 20:434; Com. 20:688.

91 (238) South America

ASCENDING SUGAR-LOAF MOUNTAIN. Essanay 31 D 1913. Syn. 18:1580.

91 (26) Oceans. Seas

ISLE IN THE BALTIC SEA, AN. Gaumont 1 N 1913. n. s. or c. p.
STRAIGHTS OF BONIFACIO, SARDINIA, THE. Pathe. 28 Jy 1914. Syn. 21:736; Com. 21:959.
BLACK SEA, THE. Eclair 8 F 1914. Syn. 19:594.
THROUGH THE BOSPHORUS. Pathe. 16 Je 1914. Syn. 10:1726.
COAST OF CALIFORNIA NEAR CARMEL BY the Sea, The. Pathe. 12 N 1913. Syn. 18:774; Com. 18:1007.
SURF AND SUNSET ON THE INDIAN OCEAN. Selig 21 O 1913. Syn. 18:292; Com. 18:496.

91 (28) Fresh Waters

91 (28.03) Waterfalls. Rapids

WATERFALLS OF ARAGON, SPAIN. Pathe. 14 Jy 1914. Com. 21:704.
RAPIDS AND FALLS OF TRONDHJEM. Pathe. 25 Ag 1914. Syn. 21:1276.
WINTER EXCURSION TO THE FALLS OF Tannforsen, Sweden. Pathe 5 My 1914. Syn. 20:710.
NIAGARA FALLS. Vitagraph 12 F 1914. Com. 19:1087.
WATERFALLS OF THE YOSEMITE VALLEY. Joker n. s. or c. p.
RAPIDS AND WATERFALLS OF NEW ZEAland. Pathe 29 Je 1914. n. s. or c. p.

91 (281) Rivers. Streams

VIEWS ALONG THE RHINE. Selig 7 N 1913. Com. 18:867.
GORGES OF THE BOURNE, FRANCE, THE. Joker 3 Ja 1914. n. s. or c. p.
FLOOD OF THE DAL RIVER, SWEDEN. Kalem 14 F 1914. Syn. 19:708.
WONDERFUL HUDSON, THE. Solax 17 O 1913. Com. 18:738.
ALONG THE PADAS RIVER, BORNEO. Pathe. 1 O 1913. Syn. 18:66; Com. 18:264.

91 (285) Lakes. Ponds. Marshes

ON LAKE STARNBURG, BAVARIA. Powers 31 Jy 1914. n. s. or c. p.
LAKES AND FALLS. Lux 27 F 1914. Syn. 19:1166. Pliezervitzer, Austro-Hungary.
SIBERIA'S HOLY LAKE. Pathe. 11 N 1913 Syn. 18:774; Com. 18:868. Lake Baikal.

91 (3-9) Political and Historical

91 (4) Europe

91 (42) England

IN OLD ENGLAND. Kalem 10 Jy 1914. Syn. 21:102; Com. 21:571.
WILD WALES. Edison 3 N 1913. Syn. 18:510; Com. 18:736.

91 (43) Germany

OLD NUREMBURG. Pathe. 27 N 1913. Syn. 18:904.
HISTORIC BREMEN. Joker 31 Ja 1914. n. s. or c. p.

91 (43.6) Austro-Hungary

TRAVELS IN HUNGARY. Lux 19 D 1913. Syn. 18:1478.
SNOW EFFECTS IN AUSTRIA. Pathe. 7 Ja 1914. Syn. 19:78; Com. 19:412.
TRIESTE TO PORTA ROSA, AUSTRIA. Powers 2 Mr 1914. n. s. or c. p.
HARBOR OF TRIESTE, MAIN SEAPORT OF Austria, The. Joker 29 Ap 1914. n. s. or c. p.
THROUGH BOSNIA AND DALMATIA. Pathe. 14 Jy 1914. Syn. 21:108; Com. 21:704.
VIEWS OF BUDA-PESTH. Pathe. 18 Mr 1914. Com. 20:57.

91 (44) France

TOWN THAT LOOKS ON BISCAY BAY, THE. Pathe. 28 Ap 1914. Com. 20:968.
URIAGE AND VICINITY. Pathe. 18 Ag 1914. Com. 21:1241.
PICTURESQUE ZUERCY, FRANCE. Pathe. S 1914. Syn. 22:253.

ST. MILO TO DINAN. Joker 27 D 1914. n. s. or c. p.
GEMS OF BRITTANY. Lux 21 N 1913. Syn. 18:1050.
PICTURESQUE FRANCE, LOWER BRITTANY. Pathe. 25 Ag 1914. Syn. 21:1276.
COURNAILLES, BRITANNY, FRANCE. Pathe 15 Je 1914. Syn. 20:1726.

HONFLEUR, AN OLD COAST TOWN OF North France. Pathe 24 O 1913. Syn. 18:286; Com. 18:612.
VISIT TO MONT ST. MICHEL, NORMANDY. Joker 18 Mr 1914. Com. 19:1526.
PICTURESQUE NORMANDY, FRANCE. Pathe. 24 Ag 1914. n. s. or c. p.
FROM HAVRE TO BUC BY HYDROAEROplane. Pathe 25 Ag 1914. n. s. or c. p.

VISIT TO PARIS, A. Pathe. 29 Je 1914. n. s. or c. p.
EXCURSION IN OLD PARIS, AN. Gaumont 27 Ja 1914. Syn. 19:726.
EXCURSION THROUGH OLD PARIS, No. 2. Gaumont 12 F 1914. Syn. 19:1022.

ST. CLOUD AND ITS ENVIRONS. Pathe. 18 O 1913. Syn. 18:286; Com. 18:496.
HISTORIC ST. CLOUD. Pathe. 22 Je 1914. n. s. or c. p.

ST. CLAUDE AND SURROUNDINGS, JURA, France. Joker 9 Ja 1914. n. s. or c. p.
RAMBLES IN BURGES, FRANCE. Pathe. 17 F 1914. Syn. 19:866; Com. 19:1236.

NICE AND ITS ENVIRONS, FRANCE. Pathe. 17 D 1914. Syn. 18:1326; Com. 19:48.
FROM NICE TO MONTE CARLO. Lux 9 Ja 1914. Syn. 19:470.
MONACO. Pathe. 1 Je 1914. Syn. 20:1297.
FROM GRENOBLE TO AIX LES BAINS. Pathe. 10 Ag 1914. Syn. 21:1000; Com. 21:1100.

91 (45) Italy

CANALS OF VENICE, THE. Vitagraph 11 N 1913. Com. 18:868.
VENICE. Lux 29 My 1914. n. s. or c. p.

GLORIES OF ROME. Vero Educational 1914. Adv. 20:1174. 1. "The Coliseum in Films." 4r. Syn. 19:1166. 2. "Residences of the Popes." Sp. rev. 20:810. 3. "Pagan Rome." Syn. 20:274. 4. "Christian Rome." Adv. 20:1175. 5. "Fountains of Rome." Adv. 20:1175. 6. "Environs of Rome." Adv. 20:-1175.
ROME. Victor 21 S 1914. Syn. 22:100.
TIVOLI AND ITS CASCADE. Pathe. 31 Mr 1914. Syn. 20:108; Com. 20:360.

JOURNEY TO THE ENVIRONS OF NAPLES. Pathe. 12 D 1913. Pathe. Syn. 18:1194; Com. 18:1543.
IN AMALFI, ITALY. Selig 8 Ap 1914. Com. 20:360.

IMPRESSIONS OF CORSICA. Joker 20 D 1913. n. s. or c. p.
BEAUTIFUL CORSICA. Powers 4 S 1914. n. s. or c. p.
PICTURESQUE CORSICA. Lux 30 Ja 1914. Syn. 19:726.

91 (46) Spain

PICTURESQUE COAST OF CATALONIA, THE. Pathe 10 Mr 1914. Syn. 19:296, 20:256; Com. 20:672.

91 (47) Russia

IN LAPLAND. Powers 12 Ja 1914. Syn. 19:214.
JOURNEY THROUGH CRIMEA, A. Pathe. 7 O 1913. Syn. 18:68; Com. 18:379.
PICTURESQUE GAGRY, SOUTH RUSSIAN. Pathe. 3 Ag 1914. Syn. 21:862; Com. 21:960.

91 (48) Scandinavia

SCENES IN NORDLAND. Vitagraph 5 Mr 1914. n. s. or c. p.
PICTURESQUE SCANDINAVIA. Pathe. 8 Je 1914. Com. 20:1689.

91 (49) Other European Countries

WAR-STRICKEN LOUVAIN. Eclectic S 1914. Sp. rev. 21:1790.

WINTER SCENES IN SWITZERLAND. Lux 23 Ja 1914. Syn. 19:600.
FROM INTERLAKEN TO BRIENZE. Powers 25 My 1914. 20:1265.

CORFU, AN ISLE OF THE IONIAN SEA. Pathe. 27 D 1913. Syn. 18:1468; Com. 29:172.

91 (5) Asia

91 (52) Japan

CITIES OF JAPAN. Melies 18 N 1913. Syn. 18:1460; Com. 19:48. Yokohama, Nara, Kyoto.

91 (54) India. Hindustan

FEW MINUTES IN CALCUTTA, INDIA, A. Pathe. 28 Ap 1914. Syn. 20:708; Com. 20:968.
CITY OF AGRA, INDIA, THE. Pathe. 26 My 1914. Syn. 20:1160.
KASHMIR, BRITISH INDIA. Eclectic 31 Ag 1914. Syn. 21:1562; Com. 21:1513.
SCENES ALONG THE CANVERY RIVER, India. Pathe 11 F 1914. Syn. 19:710; Com. 10:1087. Several views of the palace of the Rajah of Mysore.
MADURA AND ITS PAGODAS. Pathe. 18 Mr 1914. Syn. 19:1422.
RAMBLE IN PONDICHERRY, INDIA, A. Pathe. 8 Ja 1914. Syn. 19:80.
SERINGAPATAM, SOUTHERN INDIA. Pathe. 29 Ja 1914. Syn. 19:458; Com. 19:809.
TRICHINOPOLY, INDIA. Pathe. 24 Mr 1914. Syn. 19:1572; Com. 20:212.
FROM KANDY TO COLOMBO. Eclair 24 My 1914. Syn. 20:1010; Com. 20:1118.
COLOMBO. Eclair. 22 F 1914. Syn. 19:1428; Com. 19:1089.

91 (56.9) Suria. Damacus. Palestine

LIFE IN THE HOLY LAND. Holy Land Exhibition Co. 6r. My 1914. Syn. 20:728; Sp. rev. 20:372.
DAMACUS AND THE RUINS OF BAALBEK. Edison 1 O 1913. Syn. 18:176; Com. 18:263.
JAFFA, THE SEAPORT OF JERUSALEM AND Its Orange Industry. Edison 22 O 1913. Syn. 18:406; Com. 18:276.

91 (59) Indo-China

CAPITAL OF THE MALAY STATES, THE Pathe. 28 N 1913. Syn. 18:904; Com. 18:1279 Kwala Lampur.

AT PHNOM PENH, CAMBODIA. Melies 11 D 1913. Syn. 18:1318; Com. 18:1543.
BEAUTIFUL ANGKOR-WAT, CAMBODIA Melies 11 D 1913. Syn. 18:1318.
RUINS OF ANGKOR, INDIA. Pathe. 14 Ap 1914. Syn. 20:256; Com. 20:672.

SCENES OF SAIGON, COCHIN-CHINA. Melies 16 O 1913. Syn. 18:300; Com. 18:495.

91 (6) Africa

91 (611) Tunis

OASIS OF GABES, TUNIS. Pathe. 27 Ja 1914 Syn. 19:456; Com. 19:808.

91 (62) Egypt

OLD STREETS OF CAIRO, EGYPT. Pathe 25 Mr 1914. Com. 20:21.2
CAIRO, THE CAPITAL OF EGYPT. Pathe. 18 Ag 1914. Syn. 21:1130; Com. 21:1241.

91 (64) Morocco

CASABLANCA, IN PICTURESQUE MOROCCO Gaumont 9 O 1913. Syn. 18:196.

91 (65) Algiers

TRIP THROUGH TUNIS AND ALGIERS. Gem 20 O 1913. n. s. or c. p.

91 (663) Senegal. Senegambia

FRENCH VILLAGE IN SENEGAL, WEST Africa. Pathe 30 Je 1914. Com. 21:432.
DAKAR, THE PRINCIPAL PORT OF SENEgal, French West Africa. Pathe 17 Ag 1914 Syn. 21:1130; Com. 21:1241.

91 (68) South Africa

FROM DURBAN TO ZULULAND. Edison 24 N 1913. Syn. 18:898; Com. 18:1151.

91 (7) North America

91 (728.6) Costa Rica

SCENES IN COSTA RICA. Gaumont 10 F 1914 n. s. or c. p.

91 (73-79) United States

HISTORIC BOSTON. Kalem 3 O 1913. Syn 18:68; Com. 18:263.
HISTORIC TARRYTOWN. Kalem 3 Ap 1914 Syn. 19:1730; Com. 20:360.

VIEWS OF THE YELLOWSTONE PARK Joker 6 D 1913. n. s. or c. p.

YOSEMITE, THE. Keystone 13 Ag 1914. Com 21:1242.
GLIMPSE OF LOS ANGELES. Keystone 1 Ja 1914. Com. 19:174.
TO ALASKA VIA THE GREAT RIVERS OF the North. Essanay 17 F 1914. Syn. 19:864; Com. 19:1236.

91 (8) South America

GLIMPSES OF RIO DE JANEIRO. Essanay 24 D 1913. Syn. 18:1464; Com. 19:172.
IN FRENCH GUIANA. Pathe. 20 Jy 1914 Syn. 21:736.

91 (9) Oceania. Polar Regions

MANILA, CAPITAL OF THE PHILIPPINES Pathe. 4 My 1914. Syn. 20:710.

SIDNEY AND ITS HARBOR. Melies 6 N 1913 Syn. 18:762; Com. 18:867.

CAPTAIN KLEINSCHMIDT'S ARCTIC HUNT Arctic Film Co. 6r. F 1914. Sp. rev. 19:956 1387.

92 Biography

Boleyn, Anne. ANNE BOLEYN. Klein-Eclipse 3r. Ag 1914. Syn. 20:1454; Sp. rev. 20:943 mfg. 19:1696.
Bowater, Sir Thomas Vansittart. LORD MAYOR of London, The. Kalem 16 Ja 1914. Syn 19:206; Com. 19:543.
Chance, Frank. BASEBALL'S PEERLESS Leader. Pathe 2r. 4 D 1913. Syn. 18:1044; Com. 18:1412.
Charles II, King of England. KING CHARLES II. I. S. P. 4r. Mr 1914. Syn. 19:1742; Sp rev. 19:1368; mfg. 18:745, 19:1698.
Corday, Charlotte. CHARLOTTE CORDAY Kennedy 4r. 18 Mr 1914. Syn. 19:1744.
Frederick II, King of Prussia, "The Great." FREDERICK THE GREAT—THE STORY OF His Life. Edison 2r. 1 My 1914. Syn. 20:564; Com. 20:969.
George V, King of Great Britain. ENGLAND'S King at Liverpool. Kalem 28 N 1913. Syn 18:896; Com. 18:1279.
George, Lloyd. "Lloyd George, Chancellor of Exchequer." With LORD MAYOR OF LONdon, The. Kalem 16 Ja 1914. See 92 Bowater
Jeanne d'Arc. JOAN OF ARC. Savoia 8r O 1913. Mfg. 18:52.
———— JOAN OF ARC. Eclectic 3r. 20 F 1914. Syn. 19:1308.
———— JOAN OF ARC. World's Special 5r. F 1914. Syn. 19:880; Sp. rev. 19:790. mfg. 19:965.

Lincoln, Abraham. LINCOLN THE LOVER. Vitagraph 5 F 1914. Syn. 19:582; Com. 19:946; Sp. rev. 19:523.

Marion, Francis. FRANCIS MARION, THE Swamp Fox. Kalem 3r. 30 Ap 1914. Syn. 20:718; Sp. rev. 20:646.

Napoleon I, Emperor of the French. MAN OF Destiny, The. Edison 7 F 1914. Com. 19:946.
——— NAPOLEON. Eclectic 5r. 10 Mr 1914. Syn. 19:1744; Sp. rev. 19:1658.

Poincare, Raymond. "President Poincare." With ENGLAND'S KING AT LIVERPOOL. Kalem 28 N 1914. See 92 George V. King of Great Britain.

Shakespeare, William. LIFE OF SHAKESPEARE. Trans-Oceanic 6r. Je 1914. Syn. 20:1602.

Sitting Bull. SITTING BULL. American Rotograph 5r. Ja 1914. Adv. 19:608.

Sullivan, Timothy D., "Big Tim." LIFE OF "BIG TIM" SULLIVAN. Gotham 4r. Mr 1914. Syn. 20:582; Sp. rev. 20:70; mfg. 20:222.

Sulzer, William. SHAME OF THE EMPIRE State, The. Ruby Feature 4r. N 1913. Adv. 18:665; notice 18:804.

Verdi, Giuseppe. LIFE AND WORKS OF Verdi. Arias 6r. My 1914. Syn. 20:1020; Sp. rev. 20:825.

Villa, Francisco. LIFE OF GENERAL VILLA. Mutual 7r Je 1914. Syn. 20:1312.

Wagner, Richard. LIFE AND WORKS OF Richard Wagner. Meester 4r. D 1913. Syn. 18:1346; Sp. rev. 18:995.

Wilhelm II, Emperor of Germany. KAISER Wilhelm II. Kaiser Ag 1914. Adv. 21:1013; Sp. rev. 21:1086.

SUBJECT AND CROSS-REFERENCE INDEX.

Opposite each name in the index will be found the catalog number under which all pictures illustrating that topic will be found. The index includes all subject headings used in the catalog; all the synonyms of these headings that have been found by experience to be in common use; all of the common sub-divisions of language and place used in the catalog; and all duplicate cross-references to pictures that would otherwise have been cataloged two or more times because they illustrated two or more subjects.

Administration 35
Adulteration of food....614.3
Africa ....(6)
scenics 91 (6)
African animals 59.9 (6)
birds 59.82 (6)
mines 622 (6)
ostrich farms 63.611.1 (6)
whaling industry 63.9 (6)
Agricultural products 63.3-9
Agriculture 63
Aid to the injured....614.8
Alaska ....(798)
mines 622 (798)
Alfalfa 63.331
Algiers ....(65)
animals 63.6 (65)
Alps, mountains....(234)
scenics 91 (234)
America See North America and South America
American Indians See Indians
Amusements 79
Ancient Roma ....(37)
Angling 799
Animal breeding 63.6
life 59
products of agriculture....63.3-9 domestic 63.6
Anthropology 572
Anti-Christian religions 29
Antiquities 902.6
Ants 59.57
Apiary 63.8
Apiculture 63.8
Applied science 6
Arboriculture 63.4
Archeology 902.6
Architecture 72
Arctic regions ....(98)
scenics 91 (98)
Arizona ....(791)
fossils 561 (791)
Army and navy 35.5-9
Arts, fine 7 industrial 6.6-9
useful 6.6-9
Articulates 59.5
Asia ....(5)
Astronomy 52
Athletics 796
Australia ....(94)
Australian manners and customs....39 (94)
Austria ....(43.6)
Automobile manufacturing 684
Automobiling 796.7

Babies, care of....649
Bahamas ....(729.6)
agriculture 63 (729.6)
Balkan principalities ....(497)
war 35.548 (497)
Baseball 796.35
Basque marriage customs....392.5 (46.6)
Battles 35.548
Beaux arts 7
Bees, agriculture 63.8
Belgian military dogs....35.5-9 (493)
quarries 622 (493)
scenics 91 (493)
Belgium ....(493)
Belles lettres 8
Beverages, manufacture 663
Bible 22
Biography 92
Biology 57
Birds 59.82
Black sea 91 (262.5)
Boating 797.12
Boer war 35.548
Bosphorus, the....91 (262.5)
Boston, Mass. ....(744) hospitals 362 (744)
Botany 58
Brazil ....(81)
venom institute 616 (81)
Breeding of animals....63.6
Bridges, public highways....656
Buddhism 294.3
Buddhist temples....726.1:294.3
Burmah ....(59.1)
Burmese race 572 (59.1)
Butterflies 59.57
Button manufacturing 679

California ....(794)
roads 713 (794)
history 9 (794)
industries 664 (794)
lumber industry 674 (794)
ranch life 63.6 (794)
sea coast ....91 (265+794)
Cambodia, antiquities....902.6 (59.6)
Campaigns 35.548
Canada ....(71)
police 351.74 (71)
Canal engineering 626
Canned goods 664
Canning industry 664
Capital and labor....331
Cathedrals 726.6
Catholic, Roman 282
Celebrations 394
Ceramics, manufacture....666
art 738.1
Ceylon ....(54.87)
agriculture 63 (54.87)
Charities 362
Chemistry 54
Children, care of....649
Children's stories....087.1
China ....(51)
ware, fine arts 738.1
Chinese manners and customs....39 (51)
Christ, life of 232.9
Church history....27
Cinematography 77.85
Cocoanut industry 63.346.24
Coffee cultivation 63.346.21
Coinage 332
Coliseum, Roman antiquities....902.6 (376)
Collections 08
Colonization 325
Combs, manufacture 687.5
Communication, means of....65
Coppermining 622.3
Costa Rica ....(728.6)
Costumes 391
Crayfish 59.5
Crops, agriculture 63.3
Customs and manners....39
Cut glass, manufacture....666.1

Damascus ....(56.9)
Dams, engineering 627
Dances 793.3
Description, travel 91
Diseases 616
Dogs, domestic animals....63.6
military 35.5-9
Domestic animals 63.6
economy 64
Domesticated animals 63.6
Drama, theater 792
literature 8-2
English 82-2
French 84-2
German 83-2
Dress, costume 391
Drives 713
Drugs, medicine 615
Dykes, engineering 627

Ecclesiastical residences 726.92
Economy, domestic 64 political 33
Education 37
Egypt, ancient ....(32)
modern ....(62)
Egyptian agriculture, ancient....63 (323)
antiquities 902.6 (32)
scenics 91 (62)
Electricity 53
Elephants, domesticated animals....63.6
Engineering 62
England ....(42)
scenics 91 (42)
English army 35.5-9 (42)
literature 82
sociology 33 (42)
sports 798 (42)
Ethics, philosophical 17
theological 241
Europe ....(4)
European mountains 91 (234)
Expositions 6

Fairy tales 398.4
Fans, manufacture 688.5
Farming 63
Fashions 391
Fauna, geographic 59.19
Festivals 394
Fiction, English 82-3
French 84-3
German 83-3
Russian 891.7-3
Field sports 796
Fine arts 7
Fire departments 351.778.4
Fish 59.7
culture 63.93
Fishing, industry 63.9
sport 799
Flora, geographic 58.19
Flowers, botany 58
horticulture 63.5
Foods 664
Football 796.33
Forestry 63.4
Fossils 56
Fountains 714
France ....(44)
boating 797.12 (44)
French army 35.5-9 (44)
fashions 391 (44)
literature 84
wood carving 674.7 (44)
Fresh waters ....(28)
Fruit trees 63.4
Furs, manufacture 675.6

Gardens, flower 63.5
landscape 71 vegetable 63.5
General topics 0
Geography 91
Geology 55
German literature 83
Germany ....(43)
Geysers, physical geology....551
Glass 666
Gold mining 622.3
Government 35
Grains 63.3
Grasses 63.3
Great Britain ....(42)
Greece ....(495)
Gymnastics 796.4

Handicrafts 68
Hat manufacture 687.4
Hawaii ....(969)
Hawaiian volcanoes 551.21 (969)
Hemp growing 63.341.12
manufactures 677.12
Highways 656
Hindustan ....(54)
Historical geography....91 (3-9)
History 9
Holy land ....(56.9)
Horse racing 798.4
shows 63.611 (064)
Horsemanship 798
Horses, domestic animals....63.611
Horticulture 63.5
Housekeeping 64
Hungarian marriage customs....392.5 (43.6)
Hungary ....(43.6)
Hunting, industry 63.9
sport 799
Hydraulic engineering 627
Hygiene, personal 613
public 614

Ice cutting 689
physics 53
sports 796.91
Illinois ....(773)
penitentiaries 343 (773)
Immigration 325.1
India ....(54)
metal manufactures 672 (54.7)
Indian ocean ....(267)
schools 371.95
Indo-China ....(59)
traveling in 656 (59)
Indoor amusements 793
Industrial arts 6
Industries 66
Infants, care of....649
Insects, zoology 59.57
International ethics 172.4

Invertebrates, zoology 59.2
Ireland .....(41.5)
Irish history 9 (41.5)
Iron industry 669
manufactures 672
Irrigation, engineering 626
Italian games 793 (45)
hat manufactures 687.42 (45)
hydraulic works 627 (45)
history 9 (45)
Italy .....(45)

Japan .....(52)
boating 797.12 (52)
Japanese amusements 79 (52) bridges 656 (52)
gardens 712 (52)
manners and customs 30 (52)
marriage customs 392.5 (52)
shoemaking 685.31 (52)
temples 716.1 (52)
tombs 718 (52)
methods of transportation 656 (52)
Jeanne d'Arc 92
Jiu jitsu 796.89
Joan of Arc See Jeanne d'Arc.
Jesus Christ, life of 232.9
Journalism 07
Judaism 296
Jurisprudence 34

Kinematography 77.85
Kitchen gardens 63.5
Korea .....(51.9)
Korean dances 793.3 (51.9)

Labor and capital 331
Laboring classes 331
Lace fans, manufacture 688.54
Lakes .....(285)
Landscape art 71
Law 34
Leather goods, manufacture 675
Legends, folklore 398.2
Lemon cultivation 63.414.2
Life, biology 57
Lighting industries 665
Literature 8
Lizards, zoology 59.81
Local government administration 352
Logging 674
Long Island .....(747.2)
animal breeding 636 (747.2)
Los Angeles .....(794)
police 351.74 (794)
Lourdes, shrine of 351.7 (494)
Lumber industry 674

Magnetism 53.8
Mail order frauds 343.721
Mammals, zoology 59.9
Manners and customs 30
Manufactures 67
Marriage customs 392.5
Marshes .....(285)
Massachusetts .....(744)
quarries 622 (744)
Materia medica 615
Mayors, local government 352.075.31
Means of communication 65
Medicine 61
Medicines 615
Mediterranean sea .....(269)
fish of 59.7 (269)
Metallurgy 669
Mexican antiquities 902.6 (72)
history 9 (72)
Mexico .....(72)
Michigan .....(774)
mines 622 (744)
Military dogs 355.9
engineering 623
Mines and mining 622
Mints 332
Modern Egypt .....(62)
Rome .....(45.63)
Money 332
Montana .....(786)
agriculture 63 (786)
Monuments 718
Moral theology 241
Morocco .....(64)
Mountains .....(23)
Moving pictures, amusements 792.01
photography 77.85
Municipal government 352
Music 78
New York (city) .....(747.1)
elections 352 (747.1)
fire dep't 351.77 (747.1)
police 351.744 (747.1)
zoological gardens, 59 (074.5+ 747.1)
(state) .....(747)
New Zealand .....(931)
agriculture 63 (931)
geysers 551.23 (931)
Newspapers 07
pictures about 07.01
Niagara Falls .....(28.03* 747)
Nile, the .....(281)
North America .....(7)
American mountains .....(237)
Noteworthy pictures 094
Novels, English literature 82.3

Oceania .....(9)
Oceans .....(26)
Oil fields 665
Old Testament 221
biography 221.92
Operas, amusements 792.4
Orchards 63.4
Ostrich farms 63.661.1

Pacific ocean .....(265)
Paleontology 56
Palestine ancient .....(33)
modern .....(56.9)
Panama canal 626.9 (861.3)
Panama-Pacific exposition 6 (794)
Paper manufacture 676
Parks, national 711
Pasadena, California .....(794)
rose tournament 394.25 (794)
Passion play 232.9
Pathology 616
Peace palace at the Hague 725.9
Pearl buttons, manufacture 679
Penitentiaries 343.81
Pennsylvania .....(748)
steel industry 669 (748)
Performing animals 791
Personal hygiene 613
Philanthropy 362
Philippino manners and customs 39 (914)
Philosophy 01
Photography 77
Physical geography 91 (2)
Physics 53
Piano manufacture 681
Picnic grounds 79
Pineapple culture 63.41
Pisa, Italy, cathedrals 726.6 (45.54)
Plays, theater 792.1
Poetry, English 82-1
Polar regions .....(99)
Police 351.74
Political economy 33
geography 91 (3-9)
Polygraphies 08
Ponds .....(285)
Porcelain industry 666
fine arts 738.1
Public amusements 791
customs 394
health and safety 351.77
hygiene 614

Racing 798
Rapids .....(28.03)
Religion 2
Religious architecture 726
Reptiles zoology 59.81
River travel 656
Rivers .....(281)
Robin Hood legend 398.2
Roman antiquities 902.6 (37)
Roman Catholicism 282
Rome, ancient .....(37)
fountains 714 (45.63)
modern .....(45.63)
Rope making 677.71
Russia .....(47)
Russian dances 793.3 (47)
literature 891.7
zoological gardens .....59 (074.5+47)

San Francisco .....(794)
festivals 394 (794)
Scandinavia .....(48)
Scenics 91
Schools 37
Science 5
Sculpture 73
Seas .....(26)
Senegal .....(663)
Senegambia .....(663)
Series 082.1
Serpents, zoology 59.81
Shell comb manufacture 687.5
industries 675.8
Shoemaking 685.31
Siam .....(59.3)
Siamese manners and customs 39 59.3)
Sicily .....(45.81)
wine industry 663 (45.81)
Sites 71
Skating 796.913
Skunk farms 63.69
Snakes, zoology 59.81
Snow, physics 53
South Africa .....(68)
America .....(8)
coffee plantations 63.346.21 (8)
fauna 59.19 (8)
mountains .....(238)
Soap manufacture 668.1
Social customs 394
Sociology 3
Songs, music 784.3
Spiders, zoology 59.5
Sports 79
Stage, the 792
Statues 73
monuments 718
Steel industry 669
manufactures 672
Straw hat manufacture 687.425
Streams .....(281)
Suffrage, woman 342.83
Swedish ice industry 689 (485)
lumber industry 674 (485)
military dogs 355.9 (485)
Swiss costumes 391 (494)
sports 796 (494)
Switzerland .....(494)
Syria .....(56.9)

Tea growing 63.346.23
Telegraph 654
Telephone 654
Temples, architecture 726.1
monuments 718
(764)
Texas ..... oil fields 665 (764)
Textile industries 677
Theater, amusements 792
Therapeutics 615
Tobacco cultivation 63.346.11
Tombs 718
Tortoises, zoology 59.81
Trades 68
Transportation 656
Traveling, modes of 656
Travels, geography 91
Treatment of diseases 616
Trick photography 77.856
Trout breeding 63.93
Tunis .....(611)
Turkey in Europe .....(496)
Turtles, zoology 59.81

United States .....(73)
army 355.9 (73)
gov't, agric. dep't .....63 (73) :351.823.1
food regulation .....614.3 (73) :351.773 national parks 711 (73)

Vegetable gardens 63.5
life 58
products of agriculture 63.3-5
Vegetables 63.5
Vermont .....(743)
quarries 622 (743)
Vineyards 63.4
Vocal music 784
Volcanoes 551.21
Votes for women 342.83
War, philosophical ethics 172.4
Wars 355.548
Waterfalls .....(28.03)
Waterways, engineering 626
West Point military academy 355.9 (73)
Whaling industry 63.9
William Tell legend 398.2
Wine industry 663
Winter sports .....796 "24"
Woman suffrage 342.83
Wood carving 674.7
Woodwork 674
Work and workers 331

Yucatan .....(72.64)
textile industries 677 (72.64)

Zoological gardens 59 (074.5)
Zoology 59
Zootechnic 63.6

EDUCATIONAL CATALOG TO APPEAR IN BOOK FORM.

The catalog for the year 1914 of Moving Pictures Suitable for Educational Purposes, by the Rev. E. Boudinot Stockton, S. T. B., which appeared in the Moving Picture World, issues of February 6 and 13, 1915, will be reprinted in book form with an introduction on classifying and cataloguing pictures. Announcement of publication and price will be made later.

"SOULS ENCHAINED" IS A GLORIA AMERICAN PRODUCTION.

In a review of the feature production, "Souls Enchained," published in a recent issue of the Moving Picture World, the True Features Company was credited as being the producers. This picture should have been credited to the Gloria American Company, which company is disposing of the territorial rights thereof.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Getting Some Help.

EVERYTHING in the way of advertising for Runaway June is to be had of the Mutual Company at a moderate price. The special specimen book they got out is one of the most complete helps ever offered any exhibitor. It is a healthful sign that a company is inclined to offer this aid, but there is a growing tendency to give a complete layout of stuff to help the exhibitor make good with his specials. Most exhibitors can write advertisements and some write mighty good ones, but it stands to reason that the highly trained specialist can do better than the all around man, and at the prices charged it is wasting money not to use the material. If the local printing office has a casting box, the use of mats is to be preferred to the regular cuts, since the matrix travels better, and costs a great deal less. If you do not know what a "mat" or matrix is, it is a paper mould of the face of a cut. Special paper is beaten into the cut and then baked while still on the cut. The result is a light cardboard mould, weighing but a small proportion of the cut, which can be cast from in the local office. A number of cuts can be made from one mat, and this mat can be filed away for possible future use. Not since Stanley Twist left the Selig company have we had such a complete layout.

It might also be mentioned that the Universal now offers for sale each week blocks for its specials.

It is not alone that these helps save time and worry. There is a certain moral effect to the cut advertisement and a vastly better display than your local printer can give you as a rule.

Gave a Pony.

North G. Osborn, of the Royal, Bellevue, Ohio, gave a pony on Christmas day to a delighted youngster who in the preceding thirty days had sold the greatest number of admission tickets. He sends a photograph of the pony and child, but neglected to spend a nickel for a photomailer and the photograph got here in four parts, beyond hope of reproduction. In a contest of this sort it is better to have some definite object. A voting contest generally means the same thing, but it lacks the definiteness of ticket selling and some of the friends of the contestants are apt to cry fraud. Selling tickets is something else again.

For the Farmers.

That Farmer's Matinee stunt is still being run and with the best sort of results. The Empress, Gordon, Neb., issues tickets good only for the Business Men's Matinee. An underline states that the ticket is presented with the compliments of the merchant whose name is stamped on the back. Presumably the merchants can have the cards printed up with their own advertisement if they desire. Now and then they get out a three-day vest pocket program, but the regular issue is a nice looking four-page program. The second page carries the itemized program and the specials are featured on the third page, the back carrying the cards of four local merchants. The days should be dated, and in this case it would look better if day and date were set in italics and pulled over to the left hand margin. It now appears in the middle in capitals, but the page is closely set and an italic line starting where the titles do would be more conspicuous if set in a different type than the titles themselves.

Says He's Better.

George C. Houston goes after the goat of Frank B. Payne, of Adrian, Mich., by sending in his own make-up as Ford Sterling and adding "but this one is one that really looks like the original." This should get Mr. Payne guessing. To help him guess we print Mr. Houston's picture. He is assistant operator at the Davis theater, Norwich, Conn. He works it the same way that Mr. Payne does, parading the street with a "tonight" banner on his back, and he adds that the manager says it helps the box office. Both Sterling and Chaplin are easy make-ups for those at all like either in build, and the perambulating advertisement is always far reaching and effective. It is not so much the people who pass your house you need to reach. You want to get after those who do not come near you, but who can be coaxed. Billboards stay on the job, but the moving advertisement is more noticeable. For the last couple of years a sewing machine agency has run in the window, which is not a display window, a machine turning over on the breeze from an electric fan. It has excited mild comment, but a quarter's worth of ribbon, tied to flutter in the breeze has been halting the crowds for the past month.

Coupon Souvenirs.

The Wonderland theater, Scranton, Pa., issues coupons to its patrons, ten of which may be exchanged for a picture of some player. Presumably the picture is something better than a post card. The idea is well done, and the card shows care in preparation, the margins carrying house points. The best line is

Bell Phone—5975-J
Will tell you what is playing daily at this theater.

This argues a demand for knowledge and creates it by that suggestion. Did you ever try to cultivate the telephone inquiry? The novelty of the idea will help at first and by the time the novelty wears off the use of the phone will have grown to be a habit. But be certain that the phone is always answered by someone who will give the information cheerfully and intelligently. The scheme is hurtful if it is turned over to the usher—unless he's an unusual usher.

Everybody's Doing It.

Louis B. Mayer, general manager of the American Feature Film Co., of Boston, is the latest to swing the fables in slang in his house organ

Haynic Advice.

The Haynic theater, Fairmount, Minn., starts off a recent D. K. with this usable stuff:

GET YOUR TELESCOPE.

It's going to be a great week for "seeing stars" again this week; in fact it is going to be quite the most wonderful week ever. Of all the dazzling, scintillating, sparkling galaxies and constellations of Stars ever assembled for the public gaze, the Haynic has 'em on the screen this week. Pause just a moment and rest your poor tired eyes upon this list.

We have not seen much from Hay and Nicholas lately. Wonder what they are mad about?

Two Reels Now.

The Third Street theater, Easton, which was the first house to produce its own photoplay, is going in for a two-reel production to be made in the surrounding towns. Ten dollars is offered for the best two-reel script, which is the reverse of generous, but no more than what the local product will probably be worth. They state that the story must be so laid that a few people in each town can appear—and there are six towns. That is doing the local appeal stuff with a vengeance. They will be turning out features after a while.

Trickery.

Listen to Steve Farrar in his paper:

After you have read the Casino News don't destroy it, lay it away until your husband comes home from work, he will also enjoy reading it.

Some day we are going to offer prizes for the oldest Casino News, so it will pay you to keep each week's issue.

Steve is having a lot of fun with his paper, but he only writes about a page and a half. Then he gets discouraged, slaps in some page ads and promises himself to work harder next week. It's a nice, easy way, but he gets out some readable stuff.

Gone Some Distance.

John C. Rathbone is some little jumper when he jumps. He has made the leap from the Opera House Exeter, N. H., to Vancouver, Washington. He does not say whether he will have a house in the new town or not. He did good work in the east and not only made money but friends, as well.

Trash.

A. C. McDonald, of the Abbott theater, Plant City, Fla., sends the photograph of an ash receiver which he presented the city. The photograph was too badly crushed to be reproduced. It is a wooden standard supporting two circular wire baskets about thirty inches high. The center of the standard runs well above them and carries the sign

BE SANITARY
The Abbott theater is.

Below this is a recessed frame for a daily announcement. It is neatly designed, sightly on the street, and an effective advertisement.

He also sends his program, an eight page issue, into which is folded a herald. He doesn't get enough out of the program. Beyond the undated days and titles he makes small use of his space. He does use the inside cover pages to tell the facts about the house, but there is no house argument. If he lacks copy he cuts a couple of jokes from the paper and runs them in. The idea of a program is to make patrons and then hold them. The way to do this is to call attention to the house and its program, not in the stilted standing anouncement, but in breezy style and with a weekly change of copy. There is plenty of space there. It should be put to work. If Mr. McDonald has not the time to write much stuff, he can at least clip stuff from this paper instead of from the joke column.

Made Them Talk.

This stunt worked by R. P. Greer, of Uniontown, Ala., is given as a curiosity rather than a help, since it has to do with a local custom and cannot well be adapted. It's a trifle gruesome, but it seems to have filled the bill, and, as Mr. Greer says, his idea is to make them talk, and this did it. He explains:

> The following explanation is necessary to appreciate the value of the stunt. The people in Uniontown have a custom of arranging a piece of crape around a white cardboard, and writing a funeral notice on it when anyone dies. This is passed from house to house by a boy, inviting friends to attend the funeral. We have two prominent citizens pretty sick, and there is some talk of their probable deaths. So I decided to spring a surprise. I fixed up a funeral notice in correct style, and worded it as follows: "Not Dead. The Theatorium is alive and wants your business. Come out today and be happy. Matinee 3, 4, 5 p. m. Shows 6, 7 and 8 p. m. Admission, 5 and 10 cents." I sent it around, and found it read more than anything I ever put out. Everybody wanted to see who was dead. It was amusing to see old men adjust their glasses and look over the card. After the boy had returned with it, I tacked it in front of the theater, and watched it. Not a person passed without reading and commenting on it.

No Wonder.

Steve Farrar writes that while he was in St. Louis, picking out features for Eldorado, he saw a nice looking theater with a sign that read:

Hard Times Theater

Admission 2½ cents except Saturdays, Sundays and Holidays.

He did not find out whether they charged three cents or a whole nickel on those days. Surely it must be a hard time theater if they cannot get more than that for their show. Picture theaters will be cheap and nasty just so long as managers have so little respect for the business they engage in. Times may be hard, but not sufficiently tight to call for such a slaughter, and the trouble is that many will believe that the sort of show such a house can give is typical of theaters in general.

Rounding It Out.

Lots of exhibitors will remember Earle C. Simmons from his Pathe days, and so his letter is given in full here. He writes from the Pontiac theater, Saranac Lake:

> As a subscriber of the World and an interested reader of the "Advertising for Exhibitors Department," I feel that I wouldn't be wasting any time in writing you a few lines in the hope that you may find same interesting and that my views may do some Brother Exhibitor some good. I have been connected with the moving picture business in all its branches. I left the stage some four years ago to take the position of leading man with the Western Pathe Company, and for two years was engaged as leading man with Pathe, Bison, Kay Bee and Broncho. Poor health made me give up the acting part of it and I became director, again poor health interfered and I then took charge of the engagement department of the western Universal in Hollywood, and finally my health drove me up here to Saranac Lake, and last November I became a full-fledged exhibitor. Your department is without doubt an excellent thing for any exhibitor who is alive and desires to make his house a success. To my way of thinking, no exhibitor should be without the World, if for no other reason than to read your portion of it.
>
> I am enclosing some of my programs. The program marked No. 1 is the first I put out and then I thought it a dandy, then I learned from your department that I could improve on it, and the No. 2 is the improvement. The pink is my Christmas edition and the "last" my New Year's. I believe thoroughly in plenty of advertising. I get out four thousand of these programs every week. Two thousand of which I distribute around the town and the other two in my house. This is a town of four thousand and some over. There are two other houses in the town, both down stairs, whereas mine is upstairs. The other houses use no programs, and, furthermore, they do not use the newspapers, of which there are two coming out once a week each. I have a special feature every day in my house with the Mutual Service. There is nothing I have but what is what I consider the very best. I have installed a five hundred dollar Mirror Screen, a Simplex machine, a Mercury arc rectifier, and will soon add another machine to avoid all waits, providing my business keeps up to allow me to do so. So far I have done as much, if not more, business than either of the other two houses, even though mine is an upstairs house, and I attribute this to my extensive advertising and my first-class pictures. There is nothing I have that I do not advertise to the limit. Lately I installed a Wonder Clock, which created lots of talk, and talk makes business, if it's the right kind. You may print this letter or any part of it if you so desire, and if I can be of any service to any exhibitor by giving them information of any kind regarding pictures, etc., I ask them only to drop me a line and I will gladly do so.

The first program would be a good one still, had it not been bettered, but it has been bettered. The statement that the house is in the Town Hall explains the upstairs feature. Most town hall theaters are located on the second floor and the city fathers sidestep climbing—except on show nights. The only real objection to the first program is its size compared with its contents. The other issues are more compact, about 4½ by 6½ inches. The front is kept standing, a huge initial P being the only ornament. It is locally printed, but it looks like "city work" in its effective simplicity. There is full information as to seats, prices and times of performance in each issue and an announcement of the daily feature. The third page is effective house talk and the back is given to advertising. He gets ten cents in the afternoon and ten, fifteen and twenty in the evenings.

The Christmas issue runs eight pages, two colors, and announces a children's matinee and says "Mammas may come with their children, if they wish, but no ladies alone and no men are to be admitted. This is just a Little Christmas Party for the Children."

And Mr. Simmons neatly puts what others have said in more verbose style when he prints:

> PLEASE
>
> My request is, take just a minute and read the following: My efforts are valueless if I can't inform you of them. I am trying my best to show my solicitude for the comfort and pleasure of my patrons. I have at last secured the wonderful Mercury Arc Rectifier, the invention that changes alternating current to direct. This is the last word in moving picture perfection. Now, Ladies and Gentlemen and Children, I am ready to offer you the greatest, or as good as the best, pictures in the world. The wonderful thousand dollar Mirror Screen, that makes pictures look like real, red, alive people, you will see now at its best with the equally wonderful Mercury Arc Rectifier. Big expense has been realized in installing this machine I said I was going to give you the BEST and I am keeping my word; the Simplex Projector, the Mirror Screen and the Mercury Arc Rectifier defines the best projection in the world—and—PROJECTION COMES FIRST—now please read the rest.
>
> BEGINNING MONDAY, DECEMBER 14
>
> the Pontiac theater opens with the greatest run of Special Features ever put before a City Public
>
> LOOK
>
> Just think of all these wonderful Features played by the Greatest Stars, and produced with the greatest of projection, that makes the pictures so natural that you forget you are looking at animated photography, and seemingly you are visiting actual scenes and real people.
>
> You can see it is my ambition to give you the best, and I am going to do so. When you come to the Pontiac, you can depend upon seeing the best of pictures and hearing the best of music.

Where the "look" comes the page is turned to a double page program and the text is continued on the back page.

Mr. Simmons is winning with advertising because he knows the value of good advertising. Even in winter Saranac is a pleasure as well as a health resort and he must appeal to a good class of people—and does.

He uses different colored tickets for the three admissions and double tickets for the loges, reserving the latter in advance for the extra big features.

Done.

Bertram I. Williams was arrested in Dallas, Texas, charged with using the United States mails to defraud. Williams was an undeniably clever advertising man, but he was not willing to work at it. He started in Trinidad, Colorado, a "league" for obtaining supplies at a reduction; quoting prices far below wholesale. Several times he has used the name of this paper and of this writer as a guarantee, and in several instances it has been accepted without question. We are sorry that he is in trouble, but he has only himself to blame. It should serve to warn readers against a too ready acceptance of strangers and their schemes.

Spreading.

The Free Coupon thing is spreading. A clipping from a Joliet (Ill.) paper announces that "Nearly one thousand free tickets clipped from the Herald were received at the door yesterday afternoon and evening." And "The free coupon campaign will continue the balance of this week and next week." And the coupons are good even on Saturday, Sunday being the only day reserved. The house, the Grand, runs six reels for five cents, and doesn't even get the nickel now. Looks as though Joliet might be a good place for a ten cent show, if there is not one there already. All you have to do for six reels is "Neatly cut out this coupon."

The use of the coupon to build up matinee business might be passed, but turning over the house day, night and Saturday is too much. No wonder some exhibitors contend there is no money in pictres. There isn't when it is done that way.

Neat.

The Cameraphone theater, East Liberty, Pittsburgh, has dropped the old form program and uses a vest pocket issue of standard shape and color, a khaki colored card stock printed with a good black ink. They use just three faces of type in the body of the program, and though they carry a lot of words to the page, the job looks better than merely neat. Some of those who are looking for a model would do well to send a return envelope to the Cameraphone and ask for one. Another neat issue is gotten out by the Liberty theater, Detroit, a six-page railroad folder, white stock.

THE PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

INQUIRIES.

Questions concerning photoplay writing addressed to this department will be replied to by mail if a fully addressed and stamped envelope accompanies the letter, which should be addressed to this department. Questions should be stated clearly and should be typewritten or written with pen and ink. Under no circumstances will full manuscripts or synopses be criticized whether or not a fee is sent therefor.

A list of companies will be sent if the request is made to the paper direct and not to this department, and a return stamped envelope is inclosed.

Continuity.

We have been keeping one man on plotting for more than a year, not because he is not capable of writing out his plots into action, but because he needs the plot practice more and has the good sense to stick to the work that he needs most. It looks as though another pupil would have to be kept for the next ten years on continuity, and even then it may be that he'll fluke. Expressed briefly the formula is very simple.

First learn to plot.

Next learn to tell your plot in action.

Make the action match up.

That's all you've got to do, but it is not as simple as it sounds. Probably at some time in your life you have balanced a penny on a card on your finger and have flicked the card away, leaving the penny in the same place. That's a nice little parlor trick, but do you ever realize that sometimes you do the same thing when you write plays, only your penny is a player and you not only flick away a card of scenery, but you flick another card into its place. You don't realize it probably, or you would not do it, but when you write this:

19—John's room—John enters—finds the note on table—reads—claps his hand to his brow—gives way to his grief—

20—Police station—John enters—asks desk sergeant to help him find Mabel—Sergeant calls detective—tells him to go with John.

21—John's room—John and Detective enter—John shows where he found note—detective shakes head—takes out magnifying glass—examines table.

22—Street—Detective comes along looking into the faces of the passers by—Mabel passes—detective follows her.

You are apt to lack continuity. Suppose that, just to teach you a lesson, a company put it on just the way you wrote it. We would see John standing in the middle of the frame sobbing. Bing! Here he comes through the door of the station house. How the deuce did he get there? He gets the detective. Bing! They are back in the room. To the hereafter with flying machines! John has that stuff beaten a mile. The detective examines the table. Bing! He is as good as John. Here it is right in the middle of the street. We did't even see him drop down from the clouds.

Now we could tell you what we think of that sort of technique, but kind as we are to the copy reader in the matter of cigars, he would not pass such language into print because he likes his job.

That isn't technique. It's carelessness. You know, because you've been told, not once, but time and time and time and again, not to do precisely that, but you keep right on doing it because you are too blamed lazy to try and think. If you did think, you might write it like this:

19—John's room—John enters—finds note on table—reads—staggered—looks about him—shakes head sadly—she's gone—and with Jack—he slowly exits.

20—Cafe—Flash of Jack and Mabel—bottle of wine—they clink glasses.

21—Police station—John enters—shows Desk Sergeant the note—Sergeant sharply questions—calls—Detective enters—go with Jack—Detective ready—John in apathy—Detective rouses him—they exit.

22—Cafe—Flash Jack and Mabel drinking.

23—John's room—John and detective enter—Detective makes rapid survey of apartment—looks at desk through glass—no clue—speaks—John nods dully—Detective slaps him on back—cheer up—we'll find her. Exits.

24—Front of cafe—Jack and Mabel exit—up street.

25—Street—Detective coming toward camera—looking at women as he passes—Jack and Mabel from camera—detective sees—turns and follows.

It will be seen that by cutting back we avoid showing the same character left on one scene approach on the next, and at the same time we get some substantial effect by showing the faithless wife and her companion in sin. At a cost of perhaps seventeen feet we have made seventy feet full of thrills instead of having about forty-five feet of only halfway interesting action.

Never get so intent on the development of your plot that you forget the development of your action. The two should go hand in hand. MAKE them do it. Make the action run from one scene to the natural next, unless you find that by breaking in with a contrasting scene you can save bad breaks and at the same time get greater effect.

A diamond worth a thousand dollars is worth a thousand dollars, even if it lies in the center of a ball of tar, but no one will realize the value of that ball of tar unless he takes the trouble to dig, and naturally very few people spend their lives probing into tar balls in the hope of finding thousand dollar diamonds. If you have a diamond in the shape of a plot, give it the proper setting of continuity. Do not sink it in the tar of unmatched action.

Traveling.

A. W. Thomas has left Chicago, it is said, and is traveling westward. Presumably he took his school with him.

Surprise.

Hoy many do two and two make?

Four.

Correct. To the head of the class.

But suppose you could prove that two and two make five. Prove it, mind you, not merely say it. You could knock the edges off arithmetic for five thousand years.

You can't do it, but suppose you try to prove that a man and his wife and the other fellow still make one.

That is the sort of stories that make editors read all the junk that comes in. Some outside darn fool might prove the proposition.

Clips.

There have been a lot of kicks about scripts spoiled by an excess of clips. There is one clip on the script. From one to three extra clips have been used on some scripts.

Now listen.

If one hundred writers will send in each one script showing the marks of more than TWO clips, we will undertake to argue the matter. We do not want to argue the matter alone. We want the evidence.

And if each writer will send his script in an unstamped, but self-addressed, envelope, we will undertake to return all such, fully stamped, within thirty days.

This, we believe, will do away forever with the practice of attaching rejection slips with extra clips, but to do the job we must have the evidence. Scripts may be sent to Box 70, Madison Square Station, New York City.

Practice.

"I've done too much work to need practice."

That's what one of the cocksure cusses wrote us the other day, but he came in one of our bad hours. Some weeks ago we said we got fifty-seven scripts back from one company in one bunch. This was a mistake. There were sixty-one. And since then we have been taking the Florida out of the stuff and fitting it for general consumption, and nothing could have shown us more clearly what an advance we have made in our own work in the past two years than doing over the two-year-old stuff.

If we can do better work between our twenty-first and twenty-third year, what makes this complacent cuss imagine that he is all done with progress at the end of his third?

We pause for reply, but we think he is gagged. We wrote pretty good stuff two years ago. We are writing better stuff now. And any time we can't beat last year's stuff we are going to quit and look around for an old men's home.

Twenty-three years in the writing game is pretty long beside you two and three-year-olds. Can you get the message when we say that story 622 is better than 347 and that the revise of 347 is better than 622. And 622 was written only a week ahead of the revise of 347, which was done originally about two years ago.

It Sometimes Happens.

It is not a common happening, but the other day we saw a story that was too big for its motive. It was a good story, strong with cleanly strength, logical and well connected, but the reason behind the story was far too unimportant. It was true to life that a slight reason had brought forth a big action, but done into a play, the reason was too slight to interest, and so the action failed to gain full credit. It was like using a ten-ton crane to pick up a railroad spike. The crane is a mighty engine and interesting as such, but most interesting when it is lifting its full load. Motivate your story properly. Give it a sufficient reason for having an existence, for no matter how strong the action may be, the appeal must come largely through the appeal to the mind and this is more a mental than a visual process.

Under the Skin.

Dramatic players have an expression for studying character. They call it "getting under the skin of the part." They learn the lines of dialogue assigned them, then they start in to study the character of the personage they are to play. They want to know how he thinks, how he reasons, and their study of his character from the lines enables them to give to the lines a fuller value.

Few authors get under the skin of their stories, and therefore few write really acceptable stuff. Most are contented merely to write down some actions that relate to a situation and let it go at that. They refer to it as a play, but it is not; it is still merely the germ of a play and not a play itself. It has possibilities, but it is no more like a real play than a wax lay figure is like a real man or woman. Stories have souls and hearts and nervous systems the same as human beings, and merely fabricating a skin does not excuse you from getting under that skin and supplying the proper elements. It is a simple matter to throw together some situations, but to bring together just the right situations in just the right way calls for deeper thought. You must not be contented to state that John loves Mary. You must know why John loves Mary and prefers her to Margery and Miriam and Jane and all the rest. He must be the sort of man who would fall in love with Mary because he finds in her his complement. There must be mental as well as physical reasons for the affection unless it is your purpose to show the evils of falling in love with a pretty face. You may not be called upon in the script to tell why he loves her in preference to others, but if you know the reason yourself, you will write a more correct line of action, and therefore a more interesting plot.

Your plot must rest on something more than the mere desire to write a story. It must be based on sound reason. It must have an excuse for existing, or it is no more than food for rejection. You must know and love your characters. You must understand and sympathize with them, before you can make them so real that others will love and understand them. You can get something that on the surface looks like a story and you can possibly sell one of these now and then, but the most successful writers are those who make their fiction people out of the real flesh and blood and not mere paper dolls. This does not mean that you must pick out actual living people and put them on paper and no others. That's not the way. Do not kidnap existing people into your stories, but create people of your own who are as vivid and as real. Get under the skin of the story and see if it really has a soul.

There's a Reason.

One of our observation pupils sent in a story with the explanation that it had been done because she had never seen a suffrage story and she thought it might be interesting. It was explained that she did not see much suffragette stuff because they were apt to be dangerous. At the moment the question is too important to be touched on without offending one or the other side engaged. The pro story will offend the antis and vice versa and intelligent manufacturers do not deliberately seek to offend any sect, creed or political faith.

This leads to the suggestion that political stories are apt to offer the same difficulty. In a political story, if the plot is properly laid, there must be one good and one bad party. There is one way out, and this is generally followed, by making the hero a reform candidate and hitting both of the old parties with equal force so that either cannot object to favoritism. But political stories, like suffragette stories, are not in great demand because they do not appeal to the general world market. Our political system differs from that of other countries and they, used to another mode of thought, cannot understand our point of view, so the story falls flat.

Too few writers realize the fact that the most useful story is one that appeals to the peoples of all countries. The other day, in a comedy, a small boy was given a dollar bill by an exuberant suitor. That was well enough, but in some countries there is no small paper money and the suggestion will be conveyed that a gift of $25 or more had been made; which would be all out of proportion. Reversing the idea there are other countries where you can get a couple of hundred dollars change for a five dollar gold piece, and that would be equally puzzling to us. In photoplay work there are many things to be thought of besides the plot. Think of these things before the editor does and you'll be more apt to get the story past him.

Essentials.

Learn to determine the essential factors of your story and discard the unimportant. One recent story told of an action a girl performed to save her father from disgrace. It created a misunderstanding between her fiance and herself that was explained away in a vision series. Just about the time the story began to grow interesting the girl sat beside her sweetheart. "Fade down." Then followed twelve of fifteen scenes detailing the cause of the old man's troubles, calling for several elaborate settings, not used elsewhere, a new set of characters, and taking up more than half of the one reel story was worth. And the author had failed to realize that so far as the story was concerned, it did not matter whether the old man had killed an entire family or had sold axle grease for corn salve at the County Fairs. The essential was that she had performed a certain action to recover an incriminating evidence. It could have been told in a leader. A leader would have saved about 450 feet of padding. It would also have saved the story.

Until you reach the point where you instinctively discard the useless, work from a trial synopsis. Get clearly fixed in your mind the story you want to tell. Stick as closely as possible to that story, discarding all side issues. If you tell one story properly, you will have done enough. Do not try to do three or four.

Keep On the Keel.

Quite recently a pupil got away with us. After she sent a photo to the bestest professor ever," that son-of-a-gun of a "bestest" sassed her back. Usually when he gets back at a pupil there is a dank silence. There was silence here for a week or so, but good sense got the better of feelings and said pupil came back. It was a very simple kick. She was allowed to belong because she gave promise. She got a provisional scholarship, and right away she swelled up. She was worth saving, so she got rounded up. She took a couple of weeks to recover, but she did recover and came in for more, which she will not get because she has been taught.

Once we asked a lion tamer what the formula was. He knew us well enough to be frank and his answer was "Chic. The first thing is to go into the cage and lick the hide off of the brute." It is not a nice way to train, but it is necessary. If some one applies training methods to you, be glad. It must be because you are worth while. But don't lose your temper. Keep on your even keel. You'll sail better.

Contests.

So many writers have sent in complaints that the scripts will not be returned in the Thanhouser contest, that some explanation may help to clear the situation. In the first place the contest conductors have the absolute and unhampered right to make such terms and conditions as they please. If you do not approve the conditions you do not have to enter the contest. The chief condition is that manuscripts will not be returned. Some writers seem to think this unfair. It is not. The contest really is being conducted by a company which makes a business of selling circulation ideas to newspapers. It has sold this Thanhouser contest to papers even in the small towns. There are perhaps two or three hundred of these papers running the contest To return all these scripts—which will probably aggregate a half million—would mean a greater expense for clerk hire than could be afforded. It is practically impossible to return them all. Those not taken and paid for will not be used, but will be destroyed. There is nothing unfair about the condition and no suggestion of dishonesty. In self-defense the contest managers impose a condition which authors do not like. They naturally have greater regard for their office expenses than the feelings of the authors. That's all.

Cutting In.

A cut-in is a leader, generally spoken, cut into a scene by the simple process of cutting the scene apart with a pair of scissors and cementing the leader between the severed parts. That is the reason it is called a cut-in. And so a man who writes to know if it is proper to follow a cut-in with a bust is told that a cut-in is not cut in unless it is cut into the scene and not put on the end. We do not know just what he had in mind, but take these two facts as unbreakable rules:

There must be at least ten feet of action ahead of the cut-in.

There should be at least five feet of action in the same scene following the cut-in.

You should not flash two feet of scene, run a cut-in and go on to the next scene. It is presumed that the character to whom the cut-in is attributed speaks some vital sentence. We should go back to the scene and see the effect of that spoken sentence before going on to the next action. If you want a leader and only five or six feet of action, then precede the action with the leader.

Plots and Plots.

It is not enough that you have an honest-to-goodness plot. You must have good plots if you want to sell them. You must have to offer better than usual plots. It is not because no one around the studio can think up plots that manufacturers are willing to buy from the outside The trouble is that the studio writers, as a rule, cannot think of enough novel ideas to keep things going, and so the editors turn to the outside writers. If you can merely write stuff as good as the studio average, there is very little chance for you. You must offer something better than that. Most plots can be made better than usual if you are really able to think plots, and they should be kept until they have been made above the average. John crossing the street does not differ from Henry and Charles and all the others who are crossing the street. But if a street car comes along and jolts John's spine out of his consecutive numbering, John immediately gets the center of the stage and an ambulance call. John is the man who is different from all the other street crossers. If, by any chance, John builds up on his first experiment in publicity by refusing to die with a broken back, then John becomes still more unusual and, therefore, more interesting.

Any man or woman can conceive the idea of a man crossing the street. Most of them can hit him in the spine with a street car. Fewer would add the survival of the broken back, perhaps a dozen could build up on the back. The few would be authors; the dozen would be creative authors and the rest would be the unimaginative. It is because there are so few who are creative authors that they get more for their work than the other fellows. If you have the capacity, develop it through training.

Rooms.

"Should a character going from room A to room C, passing through room B, be shown in transit through B where nothing of interest can happen?" That's what a man wants to know, and it raises a rather nice point in continuity. But first let us ask the question as to what these rooms are. In the first place is it necessary that there should exist the intervening room B? Could it not be possible that rooms A and C adjoin? If so, there is no necessity for showing the unnecessary B. Taking another angle, if the two rooms are totally dissimilar, there probably would exist no reason for showing the intervening space If one passed from the dining room to the library, it does not matter much whether the passage is made direct or down the hall. Passing from any of the common rooms on the lower floor to one of the bedrooms would suggest to the mind the ascent of a flight of steps, but it should not be necessary to show the steps unless action happens on the stairs or unless it should be considered necesary to emphasize the fact that there is a flight of stairs. It is one of those conditions in which the rule is amended by the situation of the moment. If John rises from his bed, goes to the kitchen to raid the icebox and falls downstairs, the stairs should be shown, but if John gets to the kitchen without mishap it should scarcely be necessary to build a flight of steps just to prove that his bedroom does not open into the kitchen. There is, of course, some slight break in the continuity, but not so great a one as to shock the mind out of a sense of illusion.

Technique of the Photoplay

(Second Edition)

By EPES W. SARGENT

Not a line reprinted from the first edition, but an entirely new and exhaustive treatise of the Photoplay in its every aspect, together with a dictionary of technical terms and several sample scripts.

One hundred and seventy-six pages of actual text.

Special chapters on Developing the "Punch," Condensing the Script, Writing the Synopsis, Multiple Reel Stories, Talking Pictures, Copyrights, etc.

In cloth, two dollars. Full leather, three dollars.

By mail postpaid. Add ten cents if registration is desired.

Address all Orders to

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

17 Madison Avenue, New York City

Projection Department

Conducted by F. H. RICHARDSON

Manufacturers Notice.

IT IS an established rule of this department that no apparatus or other goods will be endorsed or recommended editorially until the excellence of such articles have been demonstrated to its editor.

Important Notice.

Owing to the mass of matter awaiting publication it is impossible to reply through the department in less than two to three weeks. In order to give prompt service, those sending four cents, stamps (less than actual cost) will receive carbon copy of the department reply by mail without delay. Special replies by mail on matters which cannot be replied to in the department, one dollar.

The first seventy-four questions are now ready, and printed in neat booklet form. They may be obtained by remitting 25 cents, money or stamps, to the editor. Every live, progressive operator should get a copy. You may be surprised at the number of questions you cannot answer without a lot of study. Canadians should send P. O. M. O. or coin only. Second set will be ready soon.

Question No. 71.

Best answer will be published, and the names of others sending in replies of excellence will appear in the Roll of Honor. Theatre managers looking for high-class men will do well to watch the Roll of Honor.

Suppose 110 volt d. c. to cost 8 cents per k. w., and that you are using 40 amperes at the arc through resistance. How much difference would there be in economy per hour by using 70 volt current? How much difference would there be if a d. c. to d. c. economizer, having an efficiency of 70 per cent. were used instead of resistance? Your supply is 110 volt, 60 cycle a. c., your picture 16 feet, and your plaster screen is coated with alabastine. You can get an excellent rheostat large enough to deliver the necessary amperage for $20, an economizer with a secondary capacity of 60 amperes for $60, or a motor generator set, reducing the pressure to arc voltage and having a guaranteed efficiency of 67 per cent. for $225. What would you advise, and why? Current cost 9 cents per k. w.

Roll of Honor on Question No. 65.

The Roll of Honor on this question consists of Montreal, Canada; Joseph H. M. Smith, Fort Worth, Texas; M. W. Larmour, Waco, Texas; T. Glucksman, New Orleans, Louisiana; H. M. Seward, Reading, Pennsylvania; Chicago, Illinois; L. S. Usher, Winnipeg, Canada; G. D. Bullock, Gallup, New Mexico, and J. I. Roberts, Nashville, Tennessee.

I have selected the reply of Brother Usher as best. In fact, he has covered the ground quite thoroughly, I think, and is entitled to much credit for his treatment of the subject, though he did overlook one theoretical point.

Reply to Question No. 65.

By L. S. Usher, Winnipeg, Canada.

The Question:

What is the effect, from the point of view of the person seated on the main floor, of a very steep pitch in projection? Several important points are involved here.

The Answer:

To get a true impression of the picture one must theoretically see it from a point as near the axis of the light ray (as close to the lens) as possible. With the lens level and central with the center of the screen the plane of the film is parallel to the plane of the screen and to the retina of the eye, the ideal condition, but one enjoyed only by the operator. Fortunately, however, slight deviation from the ideal does not materially effect the impression, nor does even a considerable deviation effect it seriously. The condition under discussion is that of a steep projection viewed from a level lower than the screen. We will consider the matter in sections:

With a steep projection and a vertical screen, viewed from the machine, or elsewhere, we have a keystone effect. The top of the picture is narrower than the bottom. After leaving the lens the rays of light diverge, and the greater the distance from the lens the greater the divergence. The screen is placed parallel to the upper and lower edges of the machine aperture, but far below its level. Imagine the beam as emerging from the lens. The top rays strike the screen earlier, or sooner than the bottom ones, because of the fact that the top of the screen is nearer to the lens than its bottom. The lower part of the screen being furtherest away, the lower rays will have further to travel to reach it, and, of course, the extra distance increases the divergence, which makes the bottom of the picture wider than the top, and produces what we call "keystone effect." The screen cuts the beam at an angle to its principal axis, which makes a different focusing point for practically every vertical foot of its surface, and we thus get an out-of-focus effect which cannot be entirely remedied. Under these conditions, general or center focus is usually resorted to.

In the problem we view the projection from a point lower than the screen. The picture is an inverted keystone in shape. Another factor which here enters is that of perspective. From our point of view the top of the screen is farther away from the eye than its bottom, and if the picture was not distorted—there was no keystone effect—its upper half would appear smaller than the lower, though not sufficiently so to be perceptible to our senses. However, since the top of the picture is actually already the narrowest, the element of perspective operates to increase the keystone effect. Again, the lower portion of the picture being the wider, there is a greater area of screen surface to illuminate than there is at the top, therefore, with an equal light intensity over the entire surface of the film at the aperture the top portion of the screen will have a more brilliant illumination per square foot than will its lower portion. And now, suppose the screen, or rather its top to be slightly tilted back. It will cut the light beam at more nearly right angles to its principle axis. The screen is more nearly parallel to the aperture The difference in distance between the top and bottom of the screen and lens is less, therefore, for these reasons there will be less keystone effect. But the screen now is at a greater angle to the plane of the eye. We cannot get a true impression of the perspective shown in the picture. The perspective of objects has increased beyond their true proportion, thus causing further distortion. With two projectors, if set very far apart, another trouble is added. If one machine be set central with the screen, and the other to one side, the projection from the second machine will be badly impaired and there will be a keystone effect due to the "side throw," this condition being brought about by the same reasons responsible for the vertical keystone effect. If both machines be set at equal distance from the center than there will be slight distortion from each, and this distortion will be in opposite directions, but, however, it will not be sufficient to be noticeable, unless the machines be a considerable distance apart. Raising the aperture plate to an angle to compensate for the out-of-focus effect present in keystone I consider bad practice, as it is likely to set up trouble with the gate idlers and tension springs. Carefully arranged screen settings tend to lessen these faults materially. I have only considered this question as applying to the non-reflective type of screen, subsequent questions apparently being designed to cover conditions where semi-reflective screens are used.

[Hum! Yes; but is there no other effect as applied to non-reflective service? Practically, while I admit there is but little, still no screen is entirely non-reflective, and, moreover, leaving reflection out of it, assuming a cloth screen, would not the top front side of every horizontal thread be more intensely illuminated than its lower front side, which latter is what directly meets the eye? Of course, this is very largely technical, since, while the effect would be there all right, it would hardly be enough to be perceptible. But, nevertheless, it should be noted when we are considering the subject.—Ed.]

We Don't Criticise.

J. N. Baker, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, writes:

> I do not know your attitude with reference to criticising the efforts of a contemporary, but it seems to me that when a journal advances as an "Exhibitors' Guide" and employs an expert on projection who gives such obviously amateur answers as contained in enclosed clipping, well it seems that criticism certainly is justified.

Brother Baker then continues and points out some of the things to which he objects. It is not the policy of this department to criticise the efforts of others engaged in the same line of work, however mistaken those efforts may be. The answers given, in the clipping, to some very elementary questions certainly are enough to cause a rather wide smile, but the matter of their correctness is not a subject for discussion in this department. I have all I can do to attend to my own affairs, and keep up with my own work, without acting as censor for the labors of someone else. Many thanks for your good wishes, Brother Baker. You know the old saying: "Supplying enough rope and—," well, as I said, you know the quotation.

How Many Amperes?

Andy Y. Strout, Waterville, Maine, propounds the following:

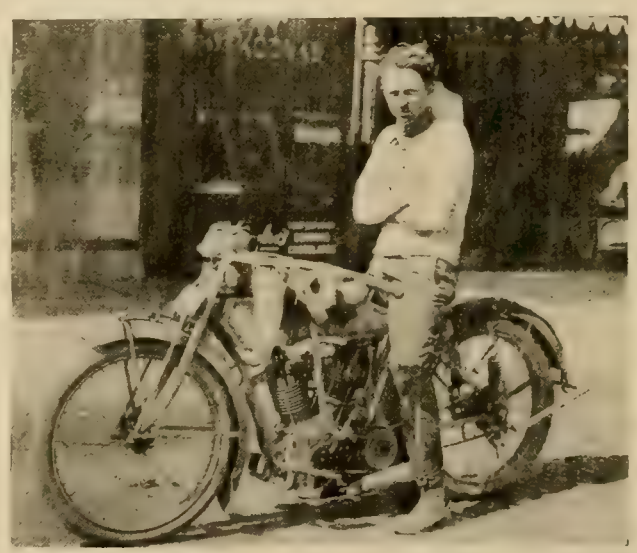
> I would like to have you put me right on this one. I have a second-hand motor, name plate of which reads "1/6 h. p., 110 volts, 60 cycles," and that is all except the number of the motor. Now, I want to know how many amperes I am using. To find the h. p., you divide the watts by 746; to find the watts and amperes you multiply by volts, but——.

Then, Brother Stout, goes on and works things out by a rather complicated process, but for his benefit, I would say that figures are of very questionable value in such a case, since you do not know the efficiency of the motor; also when it is alternating current it would be necessary to know the power factor. Without knowing the efficiency of the motor it would be impossible to calculate your amperes; also the calculation would have no value unless the motor is working to capacity and in addition to all this you don't know the h. p. as given on the name plate is exactly correct. Under the conditions an ammeter is your method, Brother Strout.

A Road Show.

L. F. Wallace, electrician with the Wallace Golden Rule Wagon Shows, Red Oak, Iowa, comes in with the following interesting dope:

Notice some of the boys are inquiring about automobile electric light plants. Enclosed are several photographs which may be of interest. In one of the pictures you will see the power plant mounted on an Oakland "40," 1911 model, which has an open fly wheel. The generator is a 5 k. w. Fairbanks & Morse 60 volt machine. We removed the automobile radiator and hood, and built a platform immediately over the engine, and upon this platform the generator is mounted. It was a hard job getting the platform solid but we finally succeeded by bracing it with heavy supports of angle iron such as used in building small steel bridges. The radiator on the car was doubtless sufficient when joy riding at thirty-five or forty miles an hour, but when placed stationary and hooked up to a 45 ampere projection arc for three hours at a stretch it would not keep the engine cool. In its place we use a 52 gallon barrel, but when on the road substitute a small tank located on the left running board. This outfit has pulled itself and the operating room (you see the latter hooked behind the machine in the photograph) over all kinds of roads, including mud and some pretty steep hills. It has only been pulled out of two mudholes, and they were almost bottomless. The upkeep, outside of gasoline and oil, has been $21.40, and that was not the fault of the car—we stripped the low gear. (Scat! get out! How about tires?—Ed.) Two and a half gallons of gasoline and one quart of oil will move the rig on average jumps of from six to twelve miles and furnish the juice for the show. (Hum! This is—hum—well it strains the joints in our believer.—Ed.) The car was second hand to begin with, but has adways had good care. It has pulled itself and the operating room 4,000 miles, besides furnishing the juice for shows all that time. We are now overhauling it for next season. We are following the advice you gave us a year ago, Brother Richardson, and cutting out the horse and animal part of it as fast as possible. We have our hand organ mounted on a Ford, and we do the advance work with another one. The tent wagon is a 1912 Overland, and our last addition is a two-ton Garford truck (see photograph). We intend to mount the generator on it and thus have two independent electric light plants. But the worst of it is yet to come. There are three motorcycles on the job; one Harley "5" and two Pope twins. The boys are some speed merchants too, but they, the motorcycles, are rather a mean proposition in wet weather. We get 25 and 30 cents admission. The past season was fine, except for September and October, when we usually make our big clean up. It was nothing but rain and mud during those months, and it put several small road shows on the rocks. There is another point you are absolutely right on, Friend Richardson. The average person does not realize what they are going up against when they tackle this road show proposition. It isn't a thing in the world but the hardest kind of hard work, and mighty discouraging at times, too. Also every once in a while you run into a bunch who want to "clean the show up." Then you have to pull the Jack Johnson stunt, and pull it quick, too, if you expect to save your bacon.



I secured a pair of these meniscus-bi-convex condensers, tried them out and discarded them. Then I saw, in the department, how other men were getting such fine results that I took another stab at it, moving them closer together, and the arc nearer lens, and, say! the picture was lots clearer, sharper and stood out better on the screen. We are using a Powers Six A, with a home-made motor-drive attachment. Have a half size 3½ inch Gundlach objective lens stopped down to about one-half. Our distance of projection is 80 feet on a muslin screen. We are obliged to use muslin on account of sound effects. We own our own film and run it one season, and when we discard it it has not as much rain as the average thirty day release. The secret of that is, keep your machine clean, and watch your magazine rollers and tension adjustment. I made twelve patches all last season, and there is not a broken sprocket hole in the bunch. We make very nearly the same route each season and only the smaller places from 100 to 1,500 population. Our aim is to be to the small towns what Lyman Howe is to the cities. Our little show is a family affair. A. P. Wallace (dad) is the sound effect man, L. F. Wallace (son; your humble servant) operator, and E. R. Wallace (another son) tends the engine and generator and sees that everything runs smoothly. We hire four boys. Only wish you could see our outfit and our show. May come to New York to see the sights some time. If we do we are going to look you up. If this is too lengthy chop part of it, or all of it you want to. The department is all to the good. Make them give you more room.

I have used the whole letter because this is remarkably interesting stuff. About six or seven years ago I got the "road show bug" myself. My idea was to get two large trucks, like the one shown in one of the photographs, except that I wanted a top on them like those on a moving van, and then have one or two light cars to run around in and do the advance work with. I came mighty near going into it at that time, too, but I guess the hard, grinding work I saw ahead scared me out, but I still hold this is the only right way to do the thing. The worst drawback to this proposition is, of course, bad weather, but automobile trucks are made so now that, as Brother Wallace says, the mud has got to be almost bottomless when they cannot get through. Looking carefully at the tent picture we see that the Wallace outfit is quite an extensive one. In addition to the automobile truck wagon, band organ wagon and power plant, there are one or two large horse-drawn vans. The Wallace investment certainly runs into a round sum of money, but they are fast developing into the type of road show I believe in, and I believe that they will find two or three power trucks, such as the new one, all they will need except the advance car. Each one of the trucks can, of course, pull a trailer. Certainly, Brother Wallace, if you boys come to New York I will be mighty glad to see you. I like enterprise, good judgment, industry, and horse sense, and I am always glad to meet those possesed of those attributes. But you ought to receive a round of chewing gum from the makers of the Oakland for that statement of efficiency.

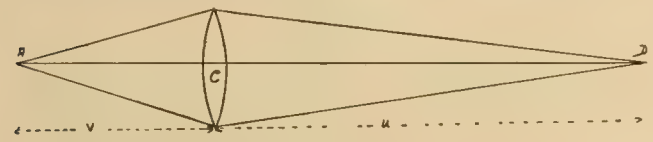
Understandable At Last.

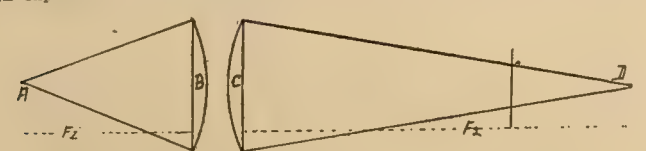
S. Arkin, New York City, one of our valued correspondents, has at last put things into shape so that I am able to grasp the real meaning of this "$\frac{1}{F} + \frac{1}{F_1}$" business and, in turn, I think, can put it in shape so you can understand it. I very much doubt if the average operator has made very much out of the technical end of Brothers James', Griffiths' and Arkin's articles. I know I could not, but finally have pinned Arkin down to brass tacks, and here's the dope. I wrote Friend Arkin, asking certain explanations and here is his reply:

> In reply to yours of the 4th, there is a well known optical law that when you place a lens further away from a light source than the focal length of that lens the rays of light, after passing through the lens, will re-converge and form an image on the other side of the lens.



> Let A be a light source, an electric arc, for instance; C a condenser, or combination of condensers; D the point where the imagine will form, or the light rays come to a point. Now, if v is the distance from A to C, and u the distance from C to D, then $\frac{1}{v} + \frac{1}{u} = \frac{1}{F}$, when F equals the focal length of lens C.
>
> When C is not a single lens, but a combination of two lenses whose individual focal length is represented by F_1 and F_2, then $\frac{1}{F_1} + \frac{1}{F_2} = \frac{1}{F}$, hence, in order to have good projection, the combination of the two condensers should be such that $\frac{1}{F_1} + \frac{1}{F_2} = \frac{1}{v} + \frac{1}{u}$. For practical example let v (distance from A to C) = 4.5" and u the cone of light (which in practical projection is the distance from the condenser to the objective lens) equal 20, then $\frac{1}{4.5} + \frac{1}{20} = \frac{1}{F_1} + \frac{1}{F_2} + \frac{1}{4.5}$ (1) $\div$ 4.5 = .2222; $\frac{1}{20}$ (1 $\div$ 20) = .0500 and .2222 + .0500 = .2722, hence, .2722 = $\frac{1}{F}$, therefore $\frac{1}{F_1} + \frac{1}{F_2} = .2722$.
>
> If we choose as F_1 a 6½ inch condenser, the reciprocal of which is .1538 (the reciprocal of a number is 1 divided by that number, and 1 $\div$ 6½ = .1538.—Ed.) and .2722 — .1538 = .1184, which necessarily would equal $\frac{1}{F_2}$ and the reciprocal of .1184 (1 $\div$ .1184) is 8.5, which is the focal length of the second condenser. I hope I make that perfectly clear. (I like the nerve of Brother Arkin. Don't you? "Perfectly clear." Huh! Oh! such a headache.—Ed.) Should you desire more information on this or any other problem or mathematical optics I will be glad to supply it.

When I dictated the last sentence of friend Arkin's letter my crow-track writer exclaimed: "For the love of heaven tell him you don't need any more!" But he need not take that seriously. And now for an explanation of this matter.



I have made a little diagram of my own which shows the regular plano-convex condenser combination. Now, Brother Arkin has probably made this matter as clear as it is possible for an optician to make it, but, even so, I think very few of you can dope the matter out without help, and I am now going to supply the help, for I believe I have got it squared around in my mind at last. What Friend Arkin means is this: taking my own sketch, A is the arc, B one condenser lens, C the other lens, D the point at which the rays will come to a focus, this point being theoretically located half way between the two factors of the objective, though that particular item, it seems, is still a subject for argument. F_1 represents the focal length of lens B and F_2 the focal length of lens C.

Any two numbers are said to be "reciprocals" when their product equals one. For instance: 6.5 × .1538 = 1, or 1 $\div$ .1538 = 6.5, therefore 6.5 and .1538 are "reciprocals" of each other. I want to get that matter clearly fixed in your mind first, because in figuring these things out reciprocals play the star role. Brother Arkin says: "When C is not a single lens, but a combination of two lenses whose focal length is represented by (see my diagram) F_1 and F_2, then $\frac{1}{F_1} + \frac{1}{F_2} = \frac{1}{F}$."

Now the meaning of this "$\frac{1}{F_1} + \frac{1}{F_2} = \frac{1}{F}$" is that if you divide 1 by the quantity F_1 represents, in this case the focal length of lens B, and add to the result 1 divided by the quantity F_2 represents, which is the focal length of lens C, the result will be 1 divided by F, where F equals the E. F. of the combination.

Now let us take another step forward, and investigate Friend Arkin's "practical example," using, however, our own hieroglyphics instead of his. Supposing the distance from A to B to be equal to 4.5, or, in other words, that the arc is 4½" from center of lens B, the 4½ being written decimally as 4.5, also let F (the cone of light, which in practical projection is the distance from condenser to objective) equal 20, then we have $\frac{1}{4.5} + \frac{1}{20} = \frac{1}{F_1} + \frac{1}{F_2}$, or, in other words, 1 $\div$ 4.5 added to 1 $\div$ 20 will equal the sum of $\frac{1}{F_1}$ and $\frac{1}{F_2}$. And now comes in the reciprocal end of it. 1 $\div$ 4.5 = .2222, and 1 $\div$ 20 = .1500, therefore instead of $\frac{1}{4.5} + \frac{1}{20}$ we substitute their decimal equivalents, .2222 + .1500 and have .2722 as the sum of $\frac{1}{F_1} + \frac{1}{F_2}$, or, in other words, $\frac{1}{F}$.

Now to apply this practically we select the condenser we think will be best suited, everything considered, for use next to the arc, let us say in this instance a 6½ lens. Dividing 1 by 6.5 we get .1538 as its reciprocal. Now the reciprocal of the combination is, as we have found, .2722 and subtracting the reciprocal of the rear condenser .1538 from the reciprocal of the combination .2722 we get .1184 as the reciprocal of the front condenser. If we divide 1 by the reciprocal of the front condenser, .1184, we get 8.5 for an answer, and therefore 8.5 is the focal length of the second condenser. There by golly we have worked that one out to our own satisfaction, whether it is to the satisfaction of anybody else or not.

We will take one of our own and see what we can do with it. That will be the proof as to whether we really understand the matter or not. Let us see what is the condenser combination we ought to use with a 6 inch e. f. lens, working under conditions which locate its point of e. f. 6.5 from the film. Now up-to-date I don't know just what methods Brothers Griffiths, Arkin and James adopt for locating the distance of their condenser from the film. In this case it actually will be 6.5 inches from the point of e. f. of the objective to the film. We will place the center of the condenser combination 14 inches from the film and see how it works out. 14 + 6. 5 = 20.5 inches. Let us locate our arc 4 inches from the rear condenser. We then have F_1 = 4 and F_2 = 20.5, the reciprocal of 4 is 1 $\div$ 4 .2500 and the reciprocal of 20.5 is 1 $\div$ 20.5 .0480. Now, .2500 + .0480 = .2980 which equals $\frac{1}{F}$. Now let us select our rear condenser, taking therefor a 6½ inch lens. The reciprocal of 6½ (6.5) is .1538; subtracting .1538 from .2980 we have a remainder of .1442. Now dividing 1 by .1442 we get just a minute fraction less than 7, therefor our front lens would have to be of 7 inch focal length.

There! I believe by really focusing your mind on this proposition for a few minutes you can understand the methods Brothers James, Arkin and Griffiths are using in the determining of lenses factors to use with different objectives, provided I myself have it right. The point I can't quite understand is how F_1 is first determined, but I suppose a distance is selected which ought, everything considered, to be the correct distance of the arc from the rear lens. Later Brother Arkin writes: The maximum distance the condenser ought to be from the film is 2.5 times the focal length of the objection. For a six inch e. f it should be 15 inches; 14 inches would be good practice.

"Good Old Moving Picture World."

J. Bowman, Clintonville, Wisconsin, writes:

> First of all my best wishes for a happy and prosperous New Year both to yourself and the good, old Moving Picture World. I have made a resolution to get as many subscriptions as possible and here's the first one from Messrs. Finney and Gould of the Grand theater, Clintonville. The Grand is one of the most beautiful and best equipped houses I have ever seen. Is thor-fireproof and built of brick, cement and galvanized iron. It is a pleasure to look at the machine room and its equipment of Powers Six A projectors with loop setters and everything complete. There is a Wagner Rotary Converter and the projection is excellent, using General Film service, consisting of four second run films. Distance of projection is 94 feet. Admission five and ten cents. Everything the operator needs to improve projection or conditions in the machine room is his for the asking, and he don't have to ask twice either. The population of Clintonville is 1,800. There are the Grand and Palace theaters, the Opera House and Roller Rink. Business is fine and picking up right along.

All of which is good. The brother promises a picture of the Grand later. Will be glad to have it. Messrs. Finney & Gould are the right sort. May their tribe increase and the sun of their prosperity never set.

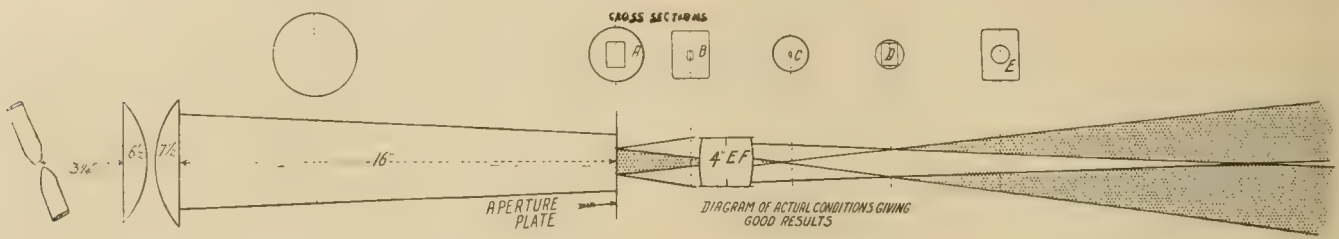
More Headaches.

John Griffiths, Ansonia, Connecticut, says:

At last I feel competent to hand out a little real dope on the optics of the projector. If I upset your apple cart, have also now upset my own, and also that of our friends of the geometrical optics system. I find some conditions existing which I did not suspect, neither have I seen anyone else on record as having suspected them.

There are two conditions to which I refer. First: the direction of the rays forming the beam of light from the condensers is much more complex than I supposed. Second: we are projecting two distinct and separate cones of light from the objective lens.

We will not deal with the first condition, viz.: The complexity of the direction of the rays that form the cone of light from the condensers. I believe the light cone is generally understood to consist of innumerable rays, all more or less accurately directed toward the point of focus, which varies according to the amount of spherical aberration present; but this hypothesis is erroneous, or, in more understandable language, "'taint so." Imagine the smallest possible area of the surface of the condenser. It is receiving rays from the whole surface of the crater and projecting rays to the whole of the spot, which is the image of the crater, so that instead of the ray being properly illustrated by a straight line it should be represented as a diverging beam of light spreading to the size of the spot. (I don't quite get you there when I place the statement against the drawing, but I suppose you mean that from each infinitesimal portion of the condenser surface rays spread to the spot, so that each portion of the condenser surface sends forth a cone of light, the base of which would be the size of the the spot at the gate with the apex at the condenser. If this is your view I must disagree with you on that point, because, if it were true that each portion of the condenser sent out diverging rays, then there is no earthly reason why the divergence should stop with the size of the spot. As a result we would have no spot at all. Perhaps I misunderstand your meaning, but that is all I am able to make out of it.—Ed.) The effect of this spreading of the rays is such that instead of the rectangle of light at the lens being smaller than the aperture it is, in fact, larger, and thus we have a diverging beam of light, instead of a converging one beyond the aperture, the same as the condenser beam. Anyone with a Standard machine can prove this by inserting a card between the aperture and lens. from the foregoing it must not be assumed that the direction of the rays have been changed by passing through the aperture. I merely intended to show that the rays forming the condenser cone are traveling at all angles within the cone itself (which you would have to prove to me, Brother Griffiths. I just simply, with all due respect to you, don't believe it.—Ed.), and this fact has an important bearing on the ultimate results on the screen. I have previously stated that I believed the total effective rays were contained in the rectangular cone having the aperture at its base and the point of equivalent focus as its apex. (With which proposition I agree.—Ed.) And if this is so, then the effective rays must enter the objective through a small rectangle, the size of which is easily determined by its relative distance between the aperture and the point of e. f. Therefore, having taken this position, I felt it was up to me to find out what became of the rays which surrounded this small rectangle, and in so doing I discovered condition No. 2, viz.: That we are projecting two cones of light instead of one. To classify them we will call them the "effective cone" and the "non-effective cone." The effective cone, rectangular in section, is composed of those rays coming through the aperture and entering the objective within the small rectangle, thus passing through the focusing point of the lens, and reaching the screen in their relative inverted position at the aperture. The non-effective cone, circular in cross section when no slide carrier is used in machine, is composed of those rays which enter the objective lens outside the small rectangle and, entering at a less angle than the effective rays, have their converging point beyond or nearer the screen than the converging point of the effective rays, hence, not being focused at the screen, they carry no image, but are more or less brilliant, according to the density of the film. The converging point of the two beams of light are each obliterated by the rays of the other, but the position of the converging point of the effective rays can easily be found by calculation. Using formula for finding length of throw, hold a screen a few inches, say sixteen, away from the lens. Consider the width of rectangle of light in inches; the length of throw will be in inches too. Now measure the distance from where the screen was held to the lens and it will give the exact location of the point of convergence. This procedure is only necessary when the shutter blade is too narrow to permit any error. (I don't know what you are driving at with reference to the shutter blade; also, I do not believe your plan of finding the point of convergence will work, simply because of the fact that if you hold a screen sixteen inches away from the lens the whole thing would be out-of-focus, except that the lens be moved a long distance from the film. I guess I don't "quite get you" on this particular point.—Ed.) The converging point of the non-effective rays is, however, changeable with any movement of the arc. If we shorten the condenser cone by pulling the arc back we shorten the non-effective or circular cone by the same movement. In fact, the angle of the two remain similar, though this has no effect whatever on the shape of the effective or rectangular cone, but it, nevertheless, has a great influence on the amount of light entering the small rectangle through which the effective rays enter the objective. Now these rays from the non-effective cone enter the objective through the aperture on the outside of the small rectangle, and necessarily work on a less angle than that of the effective rays, therefore they can never expand beyond the limits of the picture and their effect on the picture is the same as the light from another source, viz.: loss of definition. For this reason the operator who has the brightest light does not always have the clearest picture. It also has the effect of making the picture a little brighter in the center than at the edges, without having color at the edges. The efficiency of the optical system might be summed up as directly in proportion to the percentage of light traveling through the rectangular cone as against the percentage traveling through the circular cone. The latter is worse than wasted, though we cannot do without wasting some. Just as we use a spot in excess of the aperture, so we must cover the small rectangle receiving all effective rays, but whereas the aperture obstructs a large percentage of the spot the objective lens admits the surplus rays, and projects them as a separate cone. If any of the men doubt the proposition that there are two separate cones I would welcome an explanation as to how the rays emerge from the objective as a circular cone and change into a rectangular cone further out. To test this any rectangular obstruction, such as slide carrier, must be temporarily removed. I am making a diagram from actual measurement of my machine which will help you to understand my meaning so you can chop down the text once you get the idea clearly fixed in your mind.



Well, I don't know what to say to all this. I have an abiding respect for the work Brother Griffiths has accomplished, and I believe he has raised a point concerning which we all have considerable still to learn. Accepting his statement of the two cones of light at the rear end of the objective, my own view, at the present time, is that that condition is due not to the theory as set forth by Friend Griffiths that the condenser rays themselves are traveling in every direction, but solely and entirely to the effect of spherical aberration; but I am inclined to think, nevertheless, that, taking the matter up at the aperture plate and following it from there on to the screen, he has got things pretty straight, and that his contention will eventually be proven essentially correct. Referring to the diagram, I have marked A, B, C, D and E. As I understand Griffiths' ideas A is the aperture, full size, and B is the relative size of the rectangle at the rear end of the lens (the rays forming this rectangle being represented by the portion of the drawing which I have taken the liberty to shade), and the rectangle formed by what Brother Griffiths terms the secondary cone. C represents the size of the "effective" cone, which appears as a rectangle at the point denoted, and the circle represents the "non-effective" rays which cross the effective rays at D, where the circle and the aperture coincide in dimensions and the rectangular equals aperture A in size. On the other hand at E the non-reflective light cone becomes small, and the effective rectangular quite large. I don't believe Griffiths has got the pig by the right ear yet, but I do believe this drawing is of very distinct value, and, although the ear may be the wrong one, still Griffiths has grabbed an ear all right. Well, all this is exceedingly puzzling at present, but, nevertheless, you can take it from me we are advancing, and we are going to win out on this optical proposition in the course of time. Friend Griffiths send a later note which says:

> In my experiments I have found a relative absence of rays from the outer edge of the condenser. My condenser mount only obstructs about ⅛ of an inch all around. Without going deeply into the matter at this time it seems to me that this is caused by the nearness of the arc to the lens, which causes the rays from the back condenser to strike the outer edge of the front condenser at such an extreme angle that they are either reflected back, or else dip sharply into the beam, as you know a ray of light can only penetrate glass within a certain limit of angle, beyond that the surface of the glass becomes a mirror.

Adds His Bit.

C. Wallis, Hamilton, Ontario, Canada, writes:

I am willing to add my bit as I am one of the department fans. Here is a formula for finding the e. f. of two condensers. My reason for sending it is that I believe the best results are had by having the e. f. of the condensers equal to the e. f. of the objective, regardless of the size of the picture or distance of projection. Now, don't say that will only work right with the stereo, because it will, simply by drawing the arc back a trifle. Here's the formula. The e. f. condenser is found by multiplying the focus of the back lens by the focus of the front lens and dividing the result by the sum of the focal length of both lenses, minus the distance they are apart. For instance: To secure two condensers of 4 inch e. f. take a 6.5 inch focus back lens and a 9.5 inch focus front lens, separating them .56 of an inch apart. We then have $\frac{6.5 \times 9.5}{(6.5+9.5)} - .56 = \frac{61.75}{16-.56} = \frac{61.75}{15.44} = 4$ nearly. Or you may use a longer focus back lens and place the lenses closer together. I secured this formula from a book published in London, England, and have set my lenses by it, and get a perfectly white sheet with a. c. I trust you can understand the matter and it will be of some value.

Well, brother, I am publishing this for the reason that this in the first time I have seen anything making any really intelligent comment on the effect of placing the lenses closer together or farther apart. According to this brother, the distance lenses are spaced alters the e. f. of the combination, a claim I don't remember having been made before. Many thanks for the contribution. The formula for finding the e. f. of a condenser combination was given in this department long ago, but the spacing of the lenses was not considered, nor do I yet understand why spacing ought to have that effect

Day Lands on Cheney.

B. Day, Sherman, Texas, comes in with the following:

I am surprised to read the views of J. R. Cheney, El Centro, California, page 72, January 2d issue. Had he passed through the old days with some of the rest of us, he would say "knowledge is power," and bid that motto "welcome to our city." When it gets so I cannot make a living for myself and my young frau, Brother Cheney, if I still want to remain in the picture game, I will build a theater of my own, or hike back to the farm and earn our bread by extracting lacteal fluid from the bovine, for I am not afraid of work. In fact my father gave me my first job when he put me running the fowls out of the garden. Of course, boy like, I didn't fall in love with the job, but finally won out by educating the hen fruit manufacturers to view the garden from a respectful distance and there I first found that knowledge was and is power. I suppose Friend Cheney will say "you are only a village operator," but I would inform him that when I seek a position I am always willing to demonstrate my ability, being perfectly satisfied to abide by the result. When the Creator put this earth together, it was written in the book of life: "Your knowledge shall be increased ten fold." In moving picturedom, however, at its present state of evolution, I think our knowledge will and must be increased at least an hundred fold. I like one of Laemmle's sayings: "Use the brains God gave you." I believe firmly in hands that work, in brains that think, and in hearts that love. Go to your work each day as though it were your first day on a new job, and you had to make good. (That is about as trite a saying as I ever heard.—Ed.) The operator needs all the knowledge he can get, and we should not be afraid he will get too much. No one should even have the desire to stop the sale of books which are educational in their character. I well remember when there was not a thing in existence from which you could learn anything at all about operating, and very little even about electrics. If some of the newer ones had gone through the experience of those days they would thank Brother Richardson for what he has accomplished, and that is no pipe dream either. Operators should be proud to have the projection department to give them representation, and you know, and I know, and we all know that its editor has stuck to us through thick and thin. For myself, so long as there is anything to learn (and I guess that will be always) about projection I am going to try mighty hard to get my share of the knowledge. This is what I possess in the way of books.

The little Handbook put out by F. H. Richardson in 1907, which was presented to me by the Nicholas Power Company. No money can buy it today.

Book on Standard Wiring	$1.50
Operator's Handbook 1910 (Richardson)	1.50
Taylor's Correspondence School	15.00
Operators' Handbook (Richardson)	2.50
Hawkins' Electric Guide	6.00
Hawkins' Electric Dictionary	3.50
M. P. Electric (Hallberg)	2.50

I hope that 1915 will go down in history as the time when brother operators gained a true knowledge and sense of the importance of their profession. But if your father had sent you to school without books you could not have been expected to learn very much. We should, therefore, be more than thankful to the men who have gone forth and blazed the trail. To my way of thinking the light of a better day in way of projection and increase of operators' remuneration is near at hand. I trust Friend Cheney will see the light and will not succeed in his desire and his effort to lock knowledge up in a safe where nobody can get at it. Enclosed find eighteen patches I took out of one Lubin film; some would go through the machine and some would not, so I amputated the whole works. Also I am having trouble with Edison films in which the dividing line is not straight, and that has been the case with all their films I have run for the past two weeks.

With reference to your complaint concerning the machine I have referred the matter to the manufacturer. As to Edison films, I do not care to say anything to them just now, because they are sweating blood over in Orange. Remember, almost their whole factory was destroyed by fire only a short time ago. As to the Cheney matter, why undoubtedly Brother Cheney will in course of time discover his error, and, as you say, see the light. I admire Cheney for one thing, however, he comes right out with it. There are in this Glorious Land of the Free many who smile in your face and grasp your hand as they try to stab you in the back, but at least Cheney is not of that contemptible breed. He is, however, in error, but to err is human. I make a few mistakes myself, though I always try to keep their number down to a dozen or so a day. Eighteen patches out of one reel is a record. However, they are not factory made patches, or at least very few of them are. In fact a good many of them are well made, though the cement is not what it should be, and makes the patch stiff, which of course, is bad.

Joke on the Editor.

R. E. Crocket, Bethel, Maine, slaps us on the wristlet as follows:

As to "A Queer Proposition," January 9th issue: What runs the arc? (Electricity, I suppose!) A. C. or D. C.? It might be of air or water, though it is not likely. How is the arc trimmed, straight or jack-knife set? Upon what are they feeding this animal, 110, 220 or 500 volts; 10, 40, or 60 amperes? Do they let him feed in peace, or poke him up now and then? What is the shape of the carbon tip before and during each sickness? I had a similar trouble awhile back and found it was caused by the way I set and handled the arc. P. S. "Give all data when writing to the department."

Well, I guess the laugh is on the editor, all right, all right. The reason I was not more complete in my data lay in the fact that after careful examination I was thoroughly convinced that it could not possibly be caused by the carbon set. However, as I remember it, it was the regular D. C. set, illustrated on page 211, Fig. 161, of the Handbook. No, they don't "poke him up," but, instead, that particular arc is poking up the operator. They feed him on D. C. There is nothing peculiar about the carbon tips either before or during the sickness. I see your trouble was caused by the "way you set and handled your arc." Huh! What did you use to set it with? Your fingers or a pair of manicure scissors? And how in San Meiguel did you set the thing anyhow? Perhaps you mean "set the carbons" instead of the arc; there is no telling. Again Huh. Likewise haw, haw!

Meniscus-Bi-Convex Combination.

Stevenson of the Rex theater, and Olson of the Royal theater, Red Lodge, Montana, enclose $1.50 for "The Electric Motor," and write:

We have your Handbook and a set of "Hawkins' Electrical Guide," also Hallberg's new book, but we still think the Handbook is the king-pin of them all. What is the best combination of meniscus-bi-convex condensers for a 70 to 90 feet throw? I have a 6½ and a 9½, which gives a slight blue spot at 76 feet, using 30 amperes d. c., with a 1½ inch spot.

Well, brothers, you have not told me the width of your picture, so how in Gehenna am I going to figure the focal length of your objective, and dope out your condenser combination? Don't you see that a 70 to 90 feet throw might mean most anything, depending upon the width of the picture. It is always necessary to know the exact length of the throw and the width of the picture: having this, it is easy to calculate the e. f. of the objective lens and then dope out the condenser part of it, or dope it out as nearly as we are able to at this time. Kindly come across with the picture width, then I will see what I can do for you.

Best New York Projection.

John I. Collins, Boston, Massachusetts, makes the following inquiry:

Friend Richardson, I am going to visit New York next week. Where can I go to see the best projection in that city?

I don't know. It depends on your point of view. If you want to see pictures surrounded by a surpassingly beautiful setting, supported by magnificent music, with the auditorium lights well handled, go to the Strand, but if you wish to see the picture projected at proper speed and in the best possible manner, it is very difficult to tell you where to go. Nine times out of ten, except at the noon hour when the rush is on, you will find perhaps as good projection as there is anywhere in the city at the theater on Park Row directly opposite the main Post Office—not the one down toward Ann street, but the one up nearer Beekman. This is one house I can always send a visitor with the assurance that he will see good projection, though at the noon hour they sometimes run a little fast.

OPERATORS Are you perfectly satisfied with the results you get on the screen?

The new second edition of the

MOTION PICTURE HANDBOOK FOR MANAGERS AND OPERATORS

420 Pages Illustrated

By F. H. Richardson

$2.50 Each Postage Paid

will be the standard textbook on the subject for many years.

Address all orders and remittances to

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

17 Madison Avenue, New York City.

Comments on the Films

Licensed

PATHE'S DAILY NEWS NO. 6 (Pathe), Jan. 20.—Scenes in the neighborhood of the earthquake catastrophe in Italy, U. S. horses bought for French Cavalry, and scenes of interest from the seat of war are attractive items of this issue.

JOEY AND HIS TROMBONE (Edison), Jan. 25.—Written by Richard Ridgely and directed by James W. Castle. The cast is composed of the following artists: Edward Boulden, Gladys Hulette, Dan Mason and Jessie Stevens. While this gains some laughter it falls short of being up to the standard of the usual Edison comedy releases. An ordinary offering.

TWO HEARTS THAT BEAT AS TEN (Essanay), Jan. 25.—A comedy which develops some funny complications, wherein a couple who have become estranged, meet later and marry, each having four children from former marriages and "Two hearts beat as ten." It is quite an enjoyable picture from the fact that it gets down to human nature.

PATSY BOLIVAR, SERIES NO. 5, PATSY IN BUSINESS (Lubin), Jan. 25.—A continuation of last week's troubles which Patsy gets into. He seems to be fortunate in getting jobs, but unfortunate in holding them. No doubt many viewing this picture will remember that, in their boyhood days, they have had similar experiences, before they settled down to the regular routine of life, and will enjoy a quiet little laugh. A fair offering.

DIOGENES' WEEKLY, No. 23 (Biograph), Jan. 25.—This comedy has been reviewed at length by George Blaisdell, in The Moving Picture World, and can be found on page 496, issue of Jan. 23, 1915.

THE BOOB AND THE BAKER (Biograph), Jan. 25.—This comedy has also been favorably reviewed by George Blaisdell and can be found on the same page with the above.

THE SLIGHTLY WORN GOWN (Vitagraph), Jan. 25.—A comedy written by Beatrice Cassell and produced by William Humphrey, with Charles Brown, Louise Beaudet, Leah Baird, Leo Delaney and Ethel Lloyd as the fun makers. A gown which Mr. Clark has bought for an actress whom he very much admires is by mistake sent to his wife. Many funny complications occur, which keeps the audience in continual laughter.

PATHE'S DAILY NEWS NO. 7 (Pathe), Jan. 25.—An interesting view of Sandringham Palace at which the German Zeppelin bombs were supposed to be aimed in the recent raid on the English coast, scenes from the seat of the New Jersey Wage War, and the launching of the U. S. Destroyer "Cushing" are items of interest in No. 7.

OLIVE IN THE MADHOUSE (Edison), Jan. 26.—Tenth of "Olive's Opportunities" series. Written by Mrs. Wilson Woodrow. Just as Olive is thinking her troubles over, she is abducted by her enemy and taken to a madhouse. Her escape is shown in a series of thrilling incidents, including an explosion. It holds the attention of the audience from the fact that one wonders how she is to escape from the madhouse. An entertaining release.

AT THE END OF A PERFECT DAY (Essanay), Jan. 26.— A simple but heart gripping pictureplay. It depicts an old couple at the fireside, bringing back to memory the happenings of long ago; the first meeting, the wedding and their happy wedded life. It is a beautiful release. The acting and photography are adequate. It will please any audience.

A MODEL WIFE (Kalem), Jan. 26.—A comedy which is somewhat out of the ordinary. The wife is anything but what the caption implies. She loses money at bridge and to get more becomes a model for an artist. There is a rough-and-tumble fight at the end. A very good offering. On the same reel with "Fatty's Echo."

FATTY'S ECHO (Kalem), Jan. 26.—On the same reel with the above. Fatty and Hungry Ike are stranded in the Alps and their stunts depicted keeps the audience in continual laughter.

GREENBACKS AND RED SKINS (Lubin), Jan. 26.—Written and produced by Romaine Fielding. A comedy full of complications. Frenchy and Wilhelm, two chums and the heroes, certainly do some remarkable stunts, but come through all right and are happily married. It was greeted with laughter. A fair release.

THE GRIZZLY GULCH CHARIOT RACE (Selig), Jan. 26.—A farce comedy. Two cowboys, Ted and Joe, are rivals for the hand of Pettie Lamm, while Shrimp is another suitor. A home-made chariot race is to decide the winner, but while the race is on Shrimp and the girl slip quietly away and are married. Tom Mix does some of his clever stunts. This is a good laugh producer.

LODGINGS FOR TWO (Edison), Jan. 27.—An exceedingly good comedy with a good situation. The comedy is gotten out of the situation, and does not have to depend on business entirely for its effect.

HEART'S DESIRE (Selig), Jan. 27.—The story of this film has been told in a charming manner. Aid given to a crippled child with the culmination of a love story presents one of the film's appealing points.

MILADY'S BOUDOIR (Biograph), Jan. 28.—This pretty and interesting picture was reviewed on page 496 in the issue of Jan. 23.

THE BARRIER OF FAITH (Vitagraph), Jan. 27.—This finely produced drama is from the pen of Solomon Cossack. Van Dyke Brooke is the director and also has the role of a rabbi whose daughter marries a Christian. Norma Talmadge is the daughter, Mary Maurice the mother. The picture is produced with regard for Hebrew customs. One of the strongest of the situations is where the daughter, her husband dead, returns at the time of the celebration of the Passover to the home where she has been formally mourned as dead.

SHE WANTED TO BE A WIDOW (Selig), Jan. 29.—Farce comedy written by William E. Wing. There are laughable incidents, especially in connection with the antics of the persistent undertaker. It is doubtful if the mirth is increased in the view of the regular picturegoer by the use of the time-worn device of accelerated as opposed to normal action.

THE CHIEF'S GOAT (Vitagraph), Jan. 29—Fair comedy. It is produced by Wally Van, who also plays in the picture. Albert Roccardi has the role of the chief constable who, defeated in an automobile race orders the arrest of the men who gave him their dust. The two men "frame up" the chief on a horse race, and come out ahead by a big margin. Harry T. Morey and Templar Saxe are the other players forming this excellent quartet. There is a collision in the horse race which is unusual in its thrill.

HER SLUMBERING CONSCIENCE (Biograph), Jan. 29.—Charles H Mailes and Mary Malatesta have the leads in this finely played subject. The story is of a woman under temptation brought to a realization of her danger through a dream. The fact that all is not a reality is cleverly concealed until the denouement. It is a good picture.

THE LANGUAGE OF THE DUMB (Lubin), Jan. 29.—While not containing especial strength there are interesting features in this subject which will get it by. There are several "convenient coincidences," which, however, probably will not seriously disturb. The underlying action is the reading on the screen by a dumb child of the lips of a conspirator, who had been conducting his conversation within a short distance of a recording motion picture camera without seeing it. When she writes out in court what the lips were saying the innocent is freed and the guilty is held.

THE CAUSE OF IT ALL (Kalem), Jan. 29.—Although the players have done their best with this subject the fact remains that a somewhat forced situation has been presented. Often the plot is lacking in clearness. There are, however, many points of real merit.

DEEP SEA FISHING (Kalem), Jan. 29.—On the same reel with "The Cause of it All." This presents a series of animated drawings of the comedy order.

IN HIS FATHER'S FOOTSTEPS (Edison), Jan. 30.—This film has a distinct educational value, teaching the necessity of sanitary conditions about the farm, dairy, etc. A case of typhoid is shown to arise from the unsanitary conditions, such as an open manure pile outhouses draining into a well, etc.

THE LITTLE ENGINEER (Kalem), Jan. 30.—The twelfth of the "Hazards of Helen" railroad series proves to be intensely interesting This time Helen rides on a hand car after a freight train that the venturesome "little engineer" undertakes on his own responsibility to drive to its destination. She turns the switch, climbs aboard the train and cleverly avoids a collision with an express train.

BRONCHO BILLY AND THE FALSE NOTE (Essanay), Jan. 30.—An ordinary western drama. The story of this film is not particularly strong, but it has been presented in a not uninteresting manner.

THE HUT IN THE SYCAMORE GAP (Selig), Jan. 30.—An interesting melodrama in which the headquarters of a counterfeiting scheme is unearthed. A love story adds to the attractiveness of the film, which has had the benefit of efficient direction.

ANOTHER SHADE OF GREEN (Lubin), Jan. 30.—Barring one or two discrepancies, such as a too sudden change from daylight to darkness at a point of the story, this comedy is rather pleasing. The ghost performs his mission with efficacy.

CABMAN KATE (Vitagraph), Feb. 1.—An excellent comedy in which the business of the play as well as the situation counts for much. Kate Price plays the feminine leads in her usual comical style. The laundress, in order to get the value of a debt owed by the cabman, confiscates his cab, and takes charge herself.

THE VISION OF THE SHEPHERD (Selig), Feb. 1.—In this two part production occur some delightfully rustic scenes of the pastorale sort. Large herds of sheep on deep perspectives add a charm to an extremely well staged picture. The story is of a young girl who eloped with a stranger, and about to be led into a mock marriage, is warned by the false minister, fleeing before it is too late. She is afterwards rescued by a Salvation Army woman, who finds her in one of the city parks, and is soon brought face to face with her father, who in answer to a message conveyed to him through a vision of Christ, has followed his child to the city.

FOUND—A FLESH REDUCER (Edison), Feb. 1.—A good farce comedy based on the science of flesh reduction. A rubber form which the stout husband dresses in some clothes of his wife's previous to playing the punching game, causes considerable merriment among the spectators.

HEARST-SELIG NEWS PICTORIAL NO. 9 (Feb. 1).—One of the most interesting items of this issue of the Hearst-Selig News Pictorial is that which shows the Kaiser training his troops to meet the new million Britishers. The bringing of gorgeous robes to the Panama International Exposition, and the handling of immense coal deposits in Virginia prior to shipment are also interesting.

THE NEW TEACHER (Essanay), Feb. 1.—One of the principal charms of this comedy is the number of clever children which have been utilized in the making of the picture. The story is just a simple tale with a slender situation.

FATE'S PROTECTING ARM (Biograph), Feb. 1.—Rather an unusual melodrama based on the exploits of a couple of house-breakers, a man and a woman. Very fine photographic effects have been obtained in the making of the production, which is also interesting from the story standpoint.

Licensed Specials

THE SPIRIT OF THE VIOLIN (Selig), Jan. 25. A two-reel picture drama of unusual interest, written by James Oliver Curwood and produced by Edward LeSaint, with an all star cast who do excellent work. It is a story of a man unjustly accused of a crime and imprisoned. His wife, left to work for herself and baby, cherishes his violin. Later, believing her husband to be dead, she is about to be married to an adventurer, when the violin falls from the wall. The husband returns, being found innocent, and all ends happily. There are some beautiful scenes which are well photographed. A fine release.

THE TRAGEDY OF BEAR MOUNTAIN (Kalem), Jan. 25.—This two-part picture drama has been reviewed at length by Hanford C. Judson, in The Moving Picture World, and can be found on page 520, issue of Jan. 23, 1915.

THE GAME OF LIFE (Vitagraph), Jan. 26.—A special feature in two parts, written by Dave Smith and produced by Ulysses Davis. Featuring Myrtle Gonzales, assisted by the following artists: William Burke, Alfred D. Vosburgh, William S. Smith, George Kunkel, Jack Mower and William Duncan. A drama of love and political intrigue. The theme is not a new one, but it is full of intense and gripping moments. The acting and photography deserves mention. A splendid release.

FILE NO. 113 (Biograph), Jan. 26.—This two-part picture has been reviewed at length by Mr. George Blaisdell in The Moving Picture World, and can be found on page 347, issue of Jan. 16, 1915.

THE ATTORNEY FOR THE DEFENSE (Lubin), Jan. 27.—A strong three-part drama which suggests a possible morality in the defense of murder cases. The production has also a spectacular side which appears at its height when the automobile with the sweetheart of the attorney in question, driven by the man whose case on a charge of murder he steered to a satisfactory culmination takes a header over a culvert when the pals of the guilty man shoot him to death at the wheel.

AN INVITATION AND AN ATTACK (Edison), Jan. 29.—Although this two-reel Edison has charming qualities of photography, a good story upon which to base the picture is lacking. It is one of the Young Lord Stranleigh stories, but has not sufficient action or interesting detail to give strength to a production. Marc McDermott, Yale Benner and Duncan McRae are among the cast.

THE AMBITION OF THE BARON (Essanay), Jan. 29.—Good two-reel romantic drama. Francis Bushman and Beverly Bayne are the principals in a well-staged and finely photographed picture. It is a story of a mythical kingdom of today. One of the stirring incidents is a pistol fight in the dark.

UNDER THE PAINT (Vitagraph—Broadway Star Feature), Jan. 30.—An attractive three-reel drama which has been given the benefit of elaborate staging. The story on which the film is based is one of the extreme sort, but not the less interesting withal. The picture has frequent behind-the-scenes sets which are effective. It is not exactly a pleasant happening that the theatrical manager and father of the younger man in the story commits suicide. The moral balance of the story is fair, however.

THE SWINDLER (Kalem), Feb. 1.—An Alice Joyce two-part drama. The story is a good one, and has been delightfully filmed. It shows how a simple country girl listened to the soft words of a stranger whom she marries, and afterwards finds to be a swindler. The story closes with the violent death of her husband which occurs through an onrush of stockholders frenzied at the idea of being swindled out of their money, and the return of the girl to her country home.

Independent.

LOVE, SPEED AND THRILLS (Keystone), Jan. 18.—A typical Keystone number, featuring Ambrose, Chester Conklin and Mack Swain. The action is ridiculous throughout and leads up to a rousing finish. This is one of the best of its kind.

ANIMATED WEEKLY, NO. 151 (Universal), Jan. 27.—Views of the San Diego Exposition, Billy Sunday, American fashions and interesting war side-lights are contained in this number.

MUTUAL WEEKLY NO. 4 (Jan. 28).—A view of the city of Bacarat, France, scenes in and about the Hotel de Gink, the sailing of the "New York" for mobilization in Southern waters, and Alaskan soldiers reviewed by Mayor Mitchel of New York are interesting items of Mutual Weekly No. 4.

CUPID AND THE PEST (Komic), Jan. 31.—In this comedy a good cast consisting of Fay Tincher, Max Davidson, Tod Browning and Billie West have utilized in a rather interesting story. The comedy of the picture is not particularly moral in character, although at the same time there are no glaring points for adverse criticism.

AT THE BOTTOM OF THINGS (Reliance), Feb. 1.—A story in which the girl's father and one of her admirers are crooks, unknown to her. They are both sent to prison. The subsequent action is spirited but does not contain much real feeling and is none too convincing. The construction and photography are good.

WHICH WOULD YOU RATHER BE? (Beauty), Feb. 2.—The moral aimed at in this film is not unworthy. The manner of presentation is, however, rather crude. Married felicity vs. bachelor waywardness, and the tendency of the latter toward carelessness and selfishness in life is evidently the point which is intended to be driven home.

IMITATIONS (American), Feb. 3.—This is a prettily staged picture-play in which Winnifred Greenwood, Ed Coxen and Edith Borelli play the leads. The story treats of a friendship between children that in later years ripened into love.

THEIR HOBO HERO (Eclair), Feb. 7.—A good little western number, picturing the manner in which a friendly tramp cares for two children lost on the desert. The hobo gets a job and the story ends happily.

ZIP AND HIS GANG (L-KO), Feb. 7.—An eccentric comedy number of the familiar type, featuring a gang of toughs and the police force. Some of the latter situations become quite amusing.

THE SHOPLIFTER (Thanhouser), Feb. 7.—In this number a young crook poses as a woman shoplifter, operating through a girl clerk over whom he has influence. The girl's sister rescues her from his clutches by some amateur detective work. The story is not entirely convincing but at the same time creates quite a little wonderment as to how the girl will come out.

THE HEART PUNCH (Imp), Feb. 8.—Jess Willard appears in this story of the prize ring. He goes into a fight while his child is lying near death. The story is not very strong but it gives an interesting view of the big pugilist.

THE PLUMBER WINS THE GIRL (Joker), Feb. 8.—Quite an entertaining number, in which the plumbing springs a leak and threatens to drown out the household. The girl's apprentice-plumber lover repairs the damage and wins her hand. Well-photographed and enjoyable.

THE BALTIC SEA (Feb. 8).—On the same reel with the above is this educational subject.

MRS. COOK'S COOKING (Beauty), Feb. 9.—A comedy that will often find its mark. The main hindrance to domestic felicity in the Cook family being Mr. Cook's unhappy tendency toward faultfinding, especially where his wife's cooking was concerned, gets him into serious trouble while trying restaurant fare. The comedy of the situation arises partly from the fact that he is forced to call on his wife to pay his fine. Virginia Kirtley and Joseph Harris handle the main characters of the play.

DAD (Big U), Feb. 9.—The young man's wealthy father arrives and finds the youth and his wife flirting with others. The father takes steps to bring them together again by getting rid of the interlopers. Murdock MacQuarrie plays the lead. M. K. Wilson, Mrs. Sloman and Agnes Vernon also being in the cast. The scenes are well-photographed and the story proves quite strong.

FATHER WAS A LOAFER (L-KO), Feb. 10.—An exceptionally funny Billy Ritchie number. He plays the part of a married man whose wife presents him with triplets. He leaves home and contemplates marrying an heiress whose life he has saved, when the wife appears. This is well-photographed and full of eccentric humor.

THE PHANTOM WARNING (Rex), Feb. 11.—A well-constructed and appealing story, featuring Ben Wilson and Dorothy Phillips. The girl is employed in a sweatshop and is sent to prison for leading a riot The son of the manufacturer is moved to charity by her plea. This is realistic and has a strong motive for good.

BILLY WAS A RIGHT SMART BOY (Sterling), Feb. 11.—A juvenile number in which Billy and a rival aspire to Olive's hand. Billy borrows money from the rival with which to entertain the girl. The plot is slight but it makes an entertaining offering of the kind.

THE STAKE (Imp), Feb. 12.—In this offering Wm. Garwood appears as the foster father of a young man with gambling tendencies. The plot consists of scenes from his own early days as narrated to the boy. Violet Mersereau plays the part of the girl-wife for whom the husband and lover gamble. This is a well-rounded story, presented with considerable strength.

WON WITH DYNAMITE (Joker), Feb. 13.—A country constable Black Bart, the villain, some country lovers, an auto chase, dynamite and the like furnish the ingredients of this fairly amusing offering. The lovers are blown into the air at the close.

ARTISTIC PAPER CUTTING AND DESIGNING (Feb. 13).—An educational subject on the same reel with the above.

THE ESCORT (Royal), Feb. 13.—Two jealous wives employ the janitor to escort them to a prize fight, thinking their husbands will be there. The latter return home unexpectedly and find the janitor dodging from one closet to another. This is old in subject matter but well handled and gets up considerable amusement. Photography good.

Independent Specials

IT'S A LONG, LONG WAY TO TIPERARY (Pathe), Jan. 27.—With a cast composed entirely of Irish players, and with both England and Ireland lending their scenic charms to the production, "It's a Long, Long Way to Tiperary" presents three reels of interesting matter. As would be expected a love story forms the basis of the plot. Some comedy has been worked into the production by the rival lovers in their quarrels, and for the photographic effects alone this picture is well worth seeing.

THE LOVE PIRATE (Reliance), Jan. 30.—An elaborately staged two-reel production which is lacking in the matter of moral balance. The main characters of the story have been impersonated by such clever artists as Fay Tincher, Raoul Walsh and Elmer Clifton. The production has just missed being a splendid one through the failure in attending to the balance of the moral side of the question against the immoral, the latter having full sway. Fay Tincher plays the role of an adventuress.

A FAREWELL DINNER (Majestic), Jan. 31. With everything in its favor as far as story, settings and cast goes, this production of two reels has missed perfection through careless direction. Various inconsistencies occur for which there is no excuse, such as a young man proposing to the girl of his choice in a crowded reception room, placing the engagement ring on her finger, etc., etc. The situations of the story as presented in the picture are often lacking in sincerity. The production has been well costumed, and as before said, has everything else that goes to make a charming picture, with the exception already named.

THE LAW OF THE WILDS (American), Feb. 1.—A two-reel western drama of medium quality. Vivian Rich, Jack Richardson, Harry Von Meter and Reaves Eason have the leading roles. The story is interesting, and there are photographic effects and panoramic scenes that are splendid; but in the action of the picture there is a tendency to pose without any definite aim, and consequently often a lack of realism.

THE MASTER KEY (Universal Special), Feb. 1.—Eleventh episode. The plot in this instalment centers about the Indian idol taken from the chest by Wilkerson. He, not realizing that the plans are hidden in it, tosses it aside; the captain subsequently pawns it. Following this a Hindu rug seller recognizes the idol as one stolen from a temple. The scenes depicting this theft are carefully put on and hold the interest. The Hindu takes the idol from the pawn shop and Dore and Ruth pursue him. Wilkerson also, having learned the value of the idol, takes up the chase. This contains plenty of action and is entertaining.

SHORTY'S ADVENTURES IN THE CITY (Broncho), Feb. 3.—A two-reel sporting number, featuring Shorty Hamilton as a cowboy in the city on a "bust." He has many adventures, all of which are interesting and well-photographed. He is fleeced by an adventuress, shoots up a restaurant, fights a gang of toughs in defense of a pretty girl, and later takes part in a well-staged boxing contest. This will appeal strongly to lovers of this class of film stories and is put on in an entirely acceptable way.

THE NEW GOVERNESS (Reliance), Feb. 4.—Instalment No. 4 of "The Runaway June" Series. The pursuit of June still continues; likewise the pursuit of the villain Blye by his wife's detectives. The hotel scene is made amusing by the presence of James Montgomery Flagg as clerk, though this is not announced in the titles. It happened while Flagg was posing for the "Mutual Girl" series. The money theme is again brought out in connection with the family with whom June acts for a time as governess. In this instance the wife ruins her husband by extravagance. The plot itself progresses somewhat slowly.

THE FLASH (Rex), Feb. 7.—Otis Turner has directed this two-reel production. The story of the play is what might be termed "old-fashioned." It is a mild form of melodrama which is interesting. In it a blind man whose sight is about to be restored, tears the bandages from his eyes and grapples with a man who attacks his daughter, thereby saving the girl's honor, but destroying forever any chance there might have been of his sight being restored.

EVERYGIRL (Victor), Feb. 8.—An interesting morality number in two reels, introducing Mary Fuller, Charles Ogle and others. The young stenographer meets Pleasure, Vanity, Conceit, Frivolity, Truth, Vice, Poverty, Temptation, Love and other characters. This idea has been used many times but it always brings home a strong lesson and, as in this instance, lends new interest to situations that would be practically without novelty otherwise. The chief action is in an office and a dancing hall. The girl resists all evil influences and gives herself to Love.

THE HEART OF LINCOLN (Gold Seal), Feb. 9.—A three-reel production, written by Grace Cunard, who plays the part of Betty. Francis Ford appears as Lincoln. It is difficult to find new subject matter for fiction or the screen connected with the life of Lincoln. The character itself is appealing and Francis Ford has handled it in quite a pleasing way. The make-ups are rather too apparent in some of the cabinet members, but the general atmosphere of the piece is convincing. The plot itself is not overly strong, but brings out a number of pleasing scenes. Cabinet meetings, battle scenes and the manner in which Betty saves Jason from death are well depicted. This makes a fairly strong production.

A BAG OF DIAMONDS (Thanhouser), Feb. 9.—Episide No. 12 of "The $20,000,000 Mystery," formerly known as the "Zudora" series. This shows the natives at work in the Zudora mines in South Africa, and pictures Superintendent Howard bringing the valuable stones to America in his valise. He visits the conspirators and they endeavor to make away with the diamonds. Jim Baird accomplishes a deft bit of work in relieving the gang of the grip. This instalment still possesses certain artificial effects, but the atmosphere of mysticism is lacking and the yarn goes ahead in a straightforward, connected manner. The number closes with both Howard and Zudora being placed in a sanitarium by the conspirators.

TERROR (Eclair), Feb. 10.—A two-reel western number, with Norbert Myles and Carl Le Viness as two brothers, one weak and the other strong. The latter becomes generally known as a bully. He commits a crime and throws suspicion on the weaker brother; then marries the girl for whose hand they have been rivals. Later he allows the weaker brother to escape. The latter becomes a doctor and saves the entire community during a plague, proving himself a man after all. There are some fine western settings in this and the photography is clear. The story itself is fairly strong.

THE VAUDRY JEWELS (Big U), Feb. 11.—A two-reel story of a woman smuggler, by James Dayton, with Edna Maison and Ray Gallegher in the leads. The woman brings jewels over in a big liner and leaves them hidden in the state room until the return trip. She then has her maid call and take them away concealed in her hair. This feature of the plot is not entirely new, but serves to interest the observer. The characters do not get much feeling into their work until the latter scenes, which are brought out stronger. The detective, after tricking the woman for whom he had protested love, waits for her release from prison and marries her.

THE BRIDE OF GUADALOUPE (Domino), Feb. 11.—A two-reel photoplay of Mission days in California. The plot is somewhat conventional, but the scenic effects and settings generally are very attractive. Ricardo and Felipe are rivals for the hand of Berta. The latter joins with some bandits who capture Ricardo and make the girl think he has gone to Spain. She enters a convent and is about to take the veil when Ricardo escapes. The photography is very good and the story one of about average interest.

IN THE TENNESSEE HILLS (Kaybee), Feb. 12.—A two-reel story with a conventional opening in which the hero is out of work and his bed-ridden mother is ejected by the landlord. The mother dies and the son shoots the landlord. Later he is captured by a posse and left on his horse with a rope about his neck till sundown, when the horse will move away and hang him. A barbed wire keeps the horse from leaving and the heroine arrives in time to save the youth from death. The story has some good scenic features and is well-photographed. It makes an average offering.

ALL ABOARD (Nestor), Feb. 12.—A two-reel comedy number in which Eddie Lyons and Victoria Forde plays the young couple. The chief scenes are on board a parlor car. Eddie falls heir to a family of three children when the father gets left behind. The night scenes in the sleeper develop considerable amusement. This is well-pictured throughout. The plot is not very much, being simply a string of funny incidents. Eddie and the girl get married and discover that their relatives had greatly desired the match. Good light comedy.

THE TERRORS OF THE JUNGLE (Bison), Feb. 13.—A splendid story of the African jungle, well-photographed and containing a pleasing array of wild animals, ranging from leopards and lions to a trained elephant which saves the life of the heroine. The story is based on familiar lines. Paula is cast away with the mate after a shipwreck. He pays her unwelcome attentions and she flees to the jungle, where she has all sorts of adventures. Dick Vedder finally rescues her and they are married. Later the mate, who has degenerated into a wild man, steals their baby and hangs it in a tree, where the beasts leap for it. This is a fine offering of the adventure type.

WOLVES OF SOCIETY (Rex), Feb. 14.—A two-reel number by Frank Lloyd, with the author, Helen Leslie, Frank Bennet, Gretchen Lederer and Harry Millard in the cast. The latter does some very good work as the outcast. The story is melodramatic in type and the society atmosphere is fairly well suggested. The villain and adventuress invade the home of a millionaire. The latter marries Mayhew and the daughter is driven from her home. Later the hero comes to the girl's aid and the interlopers are exposed. Some of the scenes are not strongly convincing, but the offering is entertaining throughout.

THE BREAKUP (Box Office Attraction—Balboa), February.—Two reels of fairly thrilling action are presented in this production. The photographic work is of an exceedingly fine quality, and many of its scenes having been taken on the seashore are especially charming The story is also interesting.

THE MYSTERIOUS AIRSHIP (United-Warners-Features Ideal), February.—An interesting story has been used as the basis of this two-reel production. It is not perhaps as much of a novelty as it would have been a year or so ago, nevertheless it is novel, and presents in a most realistic manner a story of which a goodly portion has been photographed on and from an airship. Splendid birdseye views of the country about Hellebrun are shown, and altogether the production would be classed as an excellent one of its kind.

THE BETRAYING MARK (Pathe), February.—A three-reel production made at the European Pathe studios. The picture is remarkable in its photographic quality. It has been constructed upon melodramatic principles, and is interesting in action, and doubly so as regards exterior locations, many of which are both quaint and beautiful. It is a story of double identity and has quite cleverly developed. The child actress, Marie Fremed, attracts considerable attention by her clever work.

COLONEL HEEZA LIAR, GHOST BREAKER (Pathe), February. On the same reel with "The Great Eared Bat of Madagascar," this picture is tremendously amusing. J. B. Raby is responsible for the clever drawings from which the picture is made. The Colonel's experiences in the haunted room, all for the sake of winning a wager, are memorable events.

THE GREAT EARED BAT OF MADAGASCAR (Pathe), February.—On the same reel with the foregoing, and an especially interesting study for the naturalist.

THE POLICE DOG, EPISODE 2 (Pathe), February.—The second episode of "The Police Dog," from the pen of C. T. Anderson of the Bray studios, is exceedingly funny, and represents a remarkable conception of the imagination.

CROSSED WIRES (United-Warner-Empress), February.—Made at the American Gaumont's studios, this film has not much outside of the charming personality of its clever feminine lead, Marian Swayne, to recommend it. It might have been much more amusing if a more refined choice of language had been used in some of its subtitles.

WHEELED INTO MATRIMONY (United-Warner-Luna), Feb. 11.—A comedy based on the rest cure idea. The picture has frequent good situations, and is one that the average audience would like. Dot Farley plays the feminine lead.

NEW MANAGER FOR BLINKHORN'S DALLAS OFFICE.

H. T. Knapp, long and well known to film men and exhibitors throughout the entire South and Southwest, has been appointed manager of the Dallas office of the Blinkhorn Photoplays Corporation. Mr. Knapp, while young, has had a long and varied experience in the film business.

"After Five"

Five-Part Lasky Comedy Contains Amusing Situations and Is Well Played.

Reviewed by George Blaisdell.

THERE are situations that move to mirth in "After Five," the five-part modern comedy in which Edward Abeles has the leading role. Mr. Abeles is finely supported by Theodore Roberts and Succo Hayakawa. The script is founded on the play by William C. and Cecil B. De Mille, and it is fair to assume that these men made the adaptation. The story deals with the efforts of Ted Ewing, a guardian, to reimburse through a life insurance policy the ward whose money he has been responsible for losing. Ewing previously has laughed at blackmailers who demanded money. Later he comes to the conclusion that these men may be of service in accomplishing the destruction which, by the suicide clause, he is proscribed from personally bringing about. For a long time he is in terror, awating the expected "accident." Later, when he discovers that his investment has doubled, he is in a worse panic, as he endeavors to get word to the blackmailers that he will pay them an increased price to cancel the agreement.

Scene from "After Five" (Lasky).

The story proceeds logically from a beginning that may strain the credulity of some—i. e., that a young man in good health will undertake to sacrifice his life in order that he may by that means raise money to restore to his ward and sweetheart money he had lost. New York City and Maine are supposed to be the localities in which the action lies. As to the latter there are many picturesque snow scenes, finely photographed.

"After Five" will rank as good comedy. The work of the players is commendable. Mr. Abeles has now had considerable screen experience, and his portrayal indicates it. Mr. Roberts gives a fine interpretation of the polished chief of the blackmailers. Young Hayakawa is a finished actor, and is strong either in light or serious moments. Betty Shade has the role of the ward. If, in the beginning, she impresses as being a bit theatrical, the feeling is measurably lessened as the play proceeds. Jane Darwell is Aunt Diddy, in love with Ewing, but quick to transfer her mobile affections to the handsome leader of the S. S. S. Monroe Salisbury is Sam Parker, the broker who induces Ewing to place with him two fortunes, and then proceeds scientifically to double it.

PRIZE BEAUTY IN "THE NEW WIZARD OF OZ."

In "The New Wizard of Oz," which is the latest feature to be announced for release on the Alliance program, Miss Vivian Reed appears as the Princess. This will be of interest to many, for Miss Reed in a recent beauty contest won the much coveted honor of being acclaimed one of the most beautiful young women appearing in motion pictures. But she merely considers her attractive appearance as a fortunate accessory in her life's work.

Like so many other picture performers, Miss Reed served a thorough apprenticeship on the legitimate stage. For several seasons she played opposite roles to Mrs. Leslie Carter and Miss Nance O'Neil.

"The Vampire"

Episode Number Six of "The Exploits of Elaine," the Pathe-Hearst Serial.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

THERE is never much doubt who is the center of this sixth of the Exploits serial; it is Pearl White. Miss White has genius when it comes to playing before the camera. She really acts; she has full command of her expression and seems to the spectator to be filled with the emotion she portrays. What is more she takes a remarkably good picture.

This episode, "The Vampire," has a situation that fairly makes the nerves creep at the uncanny ability of the terrible band and the blood boil at the audacity of the leader of it. This is an unusual situation and we suspect that no one ever used it before—be it remembered that no one sees all pictures. We are sure that it will be fresh to spectators and will be counted as a very thrilling offering.

Kathryn Osterman

KATHRYN OSTERMAN, who is known in the theatrical world as the laughter-loving comedienne, has joined the World Comedy Stars Film Corporation and will be featured in a number of one-reel comedies. Miss Osterman's career on the stage has been a most interesting one. For several reasons she starred at the head of her own company in Mark Swan's clever comedy. "The Girl That Looks Like Me," and also "The Night of the Play," which afterwards became Lillian Russell's starring vehicle under the title of "The First Night." After this she played under A. H. Woods management in "Modest Suzanne" and "The Girl in the Taxi." She was also an important vaudeville feature as the co-star with Louis Simon in "A Persian Garden," which was successfully presented for two years in all the principal vaudeville theaters.

Kathryn Osterman.

Miss Osterman's last appearance in New York was at Hammerstein's in her own one-act play, "True to Nature." She has often been spoken of as the queen of comedy, possesses talent plus vitality, and her ringing laughter is an inspiration to everybody she comes in contact with. Miss Osterman has a splendid sense of farce, a legitimate method of laugh provocation and a radiant and smiling face that will surely get over the screen as it does over the footlights.

FRITZI SCHEFF STARTS WORK BEFORE CAMERA.

Fritzi Scheff, the prominent favorite of the legitimate stage, whose signature was recently secured by the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company to appear before the motion picture camera, has arrived at the Bosworth-Morosco studios to star in a screen version of her winter's hit on Broadway, "Pretty Mrs. Smith." Work has been begun in earnest in the filming of this hilarious and artistic comedy, written by Oliver Morosco and Elmer Harris, and an elaborately spectacular production is assured.

This is the first appearance of Miss Scheff in pictures, and it was with great enthusiasm that the lovely star of the footlights commenced her work at the studio. Each day affords her new surprises in the art of motion picture production, and every morning finds her among the first at the studio, eager to commence the day's work. Supporting Miss Scheff are Owen Moore, Forrest Stanley, Loyie Bennison, Myrtle Stedman and a score of other screen favorites in important roles.

"The Mystery of the Tea Dansant"

Another Episode of the Society-Girl Detective—Picture Is Well Handled and Fresh by Kalem Players.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

PICTURES with the Kalem brand have a quality in a marked degree. They make exceptionally able use of the material that is given to the scenario department. For seeing not only in this picture a peculiarly clever working-up of perhaps a kind of situation that often opens a flat picture, but finding cleverness in many Kalems, one comes to suspect that it is a part of Kalem work. Either they choose their authors with more than usual discrimination on Twenty-third street, or they retouch their scripts with pains. The result is pleasing.

This picture is a two-part detective offering in a series that is being played by Ruth Roland, Cleo Ridgeley and a cast that is above the average. It is fresh and keeps its end up while it is before the spectator. But take away from it the peculiar way in which the spectator's mind is worked upon by its preparing him to appreciate the content of its situations when it is ready to dig out for him, the picture would be just as flat as some others of a few years ago that we can recall. For example, take one of its characters, Darby; how vapid and lacking in natural interest he is. But so skillfully is he kept important that he even bores us into wondering how he came to be so weak-kneed and under the thumb of villainous Marmaduke. On account of this, when Darby begins to tell his story we are all at once interested. This crafty wetting of our interest in Darby before letting us into his secret is the best thing in the picture—it is distinctly good. It is only one interest among many and the mind is not blatently directed to it. One is led to think the picture a story of a girl's adventure and her rescue by the society girl detective. These are in themselves interesting and being well acted and clearly told would serve alone. Here, in the foreground of this man Darby and his story, the effect they make is heightened, and they become more interesting by association with Darby's more important story.

Scene from "The Mystery of the Tea Dansant" (Kalem).

But, if the author, Hamilton Smith, or the Kalem scenario department, has taken trouble with the script, the producer, James W. Horne, has as clearly taken pains to have the action natural and convincing and has succeeded. Ruth Roland plays, as well as usual, the girl detective; Cleo Ridgeley is charming as the heroine; Thomas Lingham does able work as the villain; Knute Rahm succeeds as the scapegoat; Anna Lingham has a small, but well acted role, in the heroine's mother; Edward Clisbie, as the police chief, makes the picture's only laugh, which comes just at the end. The staging and photography are both commendable.

JOHN EMERSON IN "THE BACHELOR'S ROMANCE."

John Emerson, who originally made his first appearance in motion pictures in the Famous Players' film version of his former theatrical success, "The Conspiracy," through which he became immediately acquainted with the motion picture public throughout the country, returns to the screen in a four-part film adaptation of the celebrated sentimental comedy, "The Bachelor's Romance," by Martha Morton, to be released February 11th.

Arthur Housman, Gloom Dispeller

"I CAME to the stage by the star route," explained Arthur Housman in response to the question. It was almost startling, coming from the boyish comedian who is joked by his fellow Edison players because of his modesty and funereal seriousness of face. "Yes, I read, when I was 17 years old, that any one born on October 10—my birthday—was, astrologically, destined to be a great actor. I foolishly believed the stars, and here I am."

Arthur Housman.

Housman was the comedian speaking, but to judge from the success he is having in Edison comedies, especially when "teamed" with William Wadsworth, the care-killer, the stars seemed to have spoken aright. He is one of the quietest of the Edison players, and it is as difficult to get him talking about himself as it is to open the proverbial oyster with a pearl cargo. Nevertheless, he is a hard worker and the fun and irresistible humor he injects into Edison films are studied out carefully and seriously, but with the art that makes them spontaneously infectious.

Much of his ability to make his presence on the screen a fun frolic is due to the excellent training he received as pantomimist while traveling with Signor G. Malasso, the well-known dancer and pantomimist, with whom he was associated in vaudeville for four years. Housman has played comedy most of his theatrical life, having spent some time in musical comedy, one of which was "Queen of the Moulin Rouge," where he played the comedy cop.

Housman appeared practically for the first time with Wadsworth in the Edison Wood B. Wedd series, scoring an immediate success. Housman's funny antics and merrymaking ways are all his own "business," his fun being refreshingly different and unexpected in its variety and resourcefulness. The following he has acquired is amazing to those who, perhaps, have not realized how eternal is the pulling power of a real comedian.

"CABIRIA" BREAKS RECORDS AT NEW ORLEANS.

"Cabiria" is in its fourth week at the Lafayette theater, New Orleans, and has broken all records for motion picture attendance. Don Phillipino's symphony orchestra and a chorus of forty voices are used to elaborate the D'Annunzio spectacle. Herman Fichtenberg, who is personally superintending the New Orleans production, through arrangement with Harry R. Raver of the Itala Company, is enthusiastic over the results.

UNIVERSAL OFFERS $50 FOR PLAY TITLE.

Because neither President Carl Laemmle nor Stuart Paton, the Imp director, can find a suitable title for a two-reel feature which is to be released on February 27, the Universal Film Manufacturing Co. offers a fifty dollar prize to the one who will suggest a fitting name for the photoplay. The contest closes August 1, 1915. All answers must be typewritten and on one side of the paper only. In addition to the title each contribution should be accompanied by a fifty-word explanation of the contestant's choice of title.

Persons who wish to enter the contest will not be limited to one reply, but may send in as many as they wish, the only condition being that each title must be accompanied by a fifty-word explanation. All answers should be sent to the Editor of the Prize Picture Title Contests, care Universal Film Manufacturing Co., 1600 Broadway, New York City.

"In Spite of All"

Three-Reel Edison Adaptation of Steele MacKaye's Play.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

CAST.

Carrell Clandenning	Robert Conness
John Knickerbocker, Sr.	Robert Brower
Mrs. Knickerbocker	Mrs. Wallace Erskine
Alice, their daughter	Gertrude McCoy
Jack, their son	Harry Beaumont
Anson Winthrop	Augustus Phillips
Stella	Sally Crute
De Granville, old and gay	Wiliam Bechtel
Blake, Stella's adorer	Richard Tucker
Stella's wealthy admirer	Harry Eltinge

A NOTABLE cast, including some of the best of the Edison Company, admirably handled by Ashley Miller, constitutes a charm of itself, and the adaptation is well done, a decided improvement on the original, the latter being constructed upon old and conventional lines. It is the well-known story of a worldly man who hovers between a sweet wife and a lively adventuress, visiting the latter after marriage to "save a friend," the friend in this case being the wife's impulsive young brother. Miller has found that there is about three reels of material in the best of stage plays—I know it only too well—and he has not attenuated the story beyond its natural limitations.

Scene from "In Spite of All" (Edison).

Steele MacKaye had high ideals when he wrote during the latter part of last century. He declared the requisites of a dramatist to be "mechanical instinct, poetic fancy, sensitive sympathies, passionate fervor, vivid imagination, thoroughness in preparation, conscience in revision, courage in excision, and dominating all these breadth of mind, which needs humility." Quite a list of virtues and accomplishments! So much for his ideals. His realizations, like most others, fell far short. His works were flimsy, verbose and theatrical. Miller has accomplished a clever performance in vitalizing one of them with new spirit.

Granting the adapter full measure of praise, the play would fall flat without the magnificent cast. Rarely has such a group of Edison stars been in close conjunction. Every man in the cast seemed to feel the inspiration of contact with other strong personalities and to do his best within the limitations of his role, William of the Thousand Faces out-Bechteling himself in one of the quaintest makeups he has ever used. As for the two ladies who shine illustrious, Gertrude McCoy is the sweetest of ingenues and Sally Crute so alluring in her natural loveliness and infinite variety of feminine charm that no husband of fluctuating inclinations could be reasonably blamed by his fellow-polygamists for dividing his time between them.

Mr. Miller has discovered the secret of success in adaptation—it is not to patch the old hulk, but to use its best timbers and build up a new ship.

PROFESSIONAL AND TRADE EXHIBITIONS OF "STOP THIEF."

George Kleine will give exhibitions of "Stop Thief" at the Candler Theater, West 42d street, New York, on Sunday evening, February 7, and on Monday, February 8. Sunday evening's exhibition will be for the theatrical profession and Monday's performance for the trade. Tickets of admission may be obtained at the Kleine offices, 226 West 42d street.

American Theater Orchestra

Prof. J. J. McClellan, Organist and Leader in Big Salt Lake Picture House.

By George E. Carpenter.

AMONG the pioneers of good music in motion picture theaters was the American, Salt Lake City. When the American was first opened, nearly two years ago, it laid claim to being the largest motion picture theater in the world. Even now that the novelty has worn off somewhat it still remains one of the show places of Mormonopolis.

Prof. J. J. McClellan.

In order to fill the 3,000 seats Harry Sims, the manager, did not confine his efforts to getting the best program available, but conceived the idea of high-class music, consisting of pipe organ and an orchestra of 16 pieces. Possibly for the first time in the history of screen drama real artists were included on the program as a permanent feature. This is history now, but in those days it made the tourist from the effete east open his eyes—and ears.

Leading this fine orchestra is Prof. J. J. McClellan, the best known organist in the West. Hundreds of thousands of tourists who have visited Salt Lake City and attended the free organ recitals in the big Mormon Tabernacle which are given at noon daily during the spring and summer months, have heard him and have gone away marveling at the mastery over the world-famed instrument. Whenever there is a new church organ in Utah or contiguous states Mr. McClellan is solicited to give the initial recital. He has also given a series of recitals at the various world's fairs, and for four years he was vice-president of the National Association of Organists of America. He studied piano with Scharwenka and other masters abroad and on his return to his native state, twelve years ago, was appointed chief organist for the Mormon Church. While playing in this capacity he has accompanied some of the world's famous operatic singers and instrumental soloists. As a composer he also has made his mark, among his compositions being the "Irrigation Ode," which is invariably sung at the National Irrigation Congress each year.

This somewhat laudatory review of a well-known western musician is offered to indicate the calibre of the man who has done much to popularize motion pictures.

Just to learn how Prof. McClellan harmonized high-class concerts with motion pictures, the writer caught him the other day and, backing him up into a corner, sought to extract information, and this is what he said:

"I believe in depicting by means of appropriate music the general atmosphere of the photoplay—and that music in its entirety should be played as nearly as is possible, for mutilation of classical music is rightly regarded as sacrilege by all music lovers.

"Orchestral directors should be more particular to 'fit' the general atmosphere of the moving picture rather than to strengthen this and that particular (and often unimportant) scene.

"I have heard the greatest music dismembered, distorted and so grotesquely interpreted as to ruin even the picture and to make enjoyment of the picture or music impossible.

"To play a waltz while the heroine is in her last gasps, or to perform a classic while Reuben is 'cutting up' seems to me to be the height of foolishness, and denotes at once the amateur.

"There is a marvelous field for musical uplift in the grasp of the efficient moving picture director's grasp, and wise is the leader who puts brains, love and attention into his work."

"Old Dutch"

Lew Fields, the Veteran Comedian, Is Featured in a Comedy That Will Be Liked.

Reviewed by George Blaisdell.

THE World Film Corporation will release on February 22 "Old Dutch," the five-part Shubert subject, in which is featured Lew Fields, veteran comedian, in the name role. While Mr. Fields has been many years on the stage, he might also have been many years on the screen so far as we may judge by his work before the camera in this picture. He has been surrounded by a fine cast; but it is nearly always old Streusand in whom we are most concerned. The production was made at the Peerless studios in Fort Lee. The script was written by Frank Crane from the story by Edgar Smith.

The theme is of Streusand, "Old Dutch," who sells to a financier an interest in his teloptophone, an instrument which when attached to a telephone will enable one to see the person at the other end of the wire. When Streusand takes his daughter to Palm Beach for a little celebration on the initial payment of $5,000, "Old Dutch" registers under another name—this on account of the notoriety he has received. It is not explained why he did not cash his check in the beginning rather than to delay, thereby losing it; nor does Streusand do the obvious thing of uncovering the imposter who found the check by immediately calling up the financier and having him exposed. However, we need make no complaint. If he had done this we would have missed the scene in the barber's shop, not to mention others. Dutch's shaving of Bennett will upset any house.

Scene from "Old Dutch" (World Film).

Vivian Martin is Violet, the daughter of Old Dutch. What she has to do is well done. W. J. Ferguson looks and acts the part of John Rockmorgan, and Chester Barnett is good as his son. Charles Judel as the hotel proprietor is a bit too lightning-like in his gestures, too fast for the camera, but otherwise most acceptable.

The characters are introduced in a way that to this writer at least is novel. Advantage is taken of a descending escalator which brings the players close up to the camera. An exception is made in the case of Mr. Fields, who is shown receding.

"Old Dutch" will be liked. It is a story of a simple old fellow whose fun-making qualities are of the serious, natural sort; they are never forced. Mr. Fields on the screen lives up to his stage reputation.

"POLLY OF THE CIRCUS" COPYRIGHTED.

Margaret Mayo Selwyn, the playwright, has applied for an injunction in the Supreme Court, restraining the Feature Film Associates, 220 West 42d street, from using the title "Polly of the Circus" on any of their films, claiming that she owns the copyright of that name which was registered on August 22, 1907, and that a play under that title has been produced throughout the United States; that it was a money-maker and that she had many opportunities to put the play on the screen, but resisted them. She further claims that the defendant concern has a motion picture play under that title and the injunction is asked in order to prevent damage accruing to her in the use of the title.

Viola Dana

FAMOUS the country over before she was yet fifteen years old for her remarkable acting in the role of the "Poor Little Rich Girl" and heralded with acclaim as "Broadway's youngest star," Miss Viola Dana's theatrical career is unique. Her portrayals since that time in leading parts in Edison films have added to her laurels through the charm of girlish winsomeness blended with rare maturity of artistic perception. Her emotional powers are exceptional for a girl still but seventeen years old, while her aesthetic art as a dancer would alone place her high in that profession.

Miss Viola Dana.

Her astonishing performance in "The Poor Little Rich Girl" is partly realized when it is considered that it is about as long in lines as Hamlet, the criterion and test of an actor's memory and characterization. In the play first mentioned, Miss Dana had but five minutes' intermission, being in a speaking part during the whole evening. She played that part for two seasons, until she outgrew the character.

Miss Dana cares most for emotional work. Her large, expressive gray eyes long lashed, bespeak wonderfully the depth of her serious, sensitive nature. Standing less than five feet, with perfect features and figure, she suggests strongly a classic statue, though the wonderfully expressive art of her dancing is pulsed with the lithesomeness of buoyant youth.

On the stage since a child, Miss Dana has played with noted stars. She was with Dorothy Donnelly in Ibsen's "When We Dead Awake," and played Little Heindrick with Thomas Jefferson in "Rip Van Winkle" for three seasons; in "The Squaw Man" with William Faversham for a year and a half; in the well-known Union Hill Stock Company with Jane Cowl; in "The Littlest Rebel" with Dustan Farnum, and with William Courtleigh for some time. It was her work in "The Model" that won her the stellar role in "The Poor Little Rich Girl."

In Edison films, Miss Dana has played many parts, some of which are the title role in "Molly, the Drummer Boy"; as the dainty fairy queen in that beautiful idyl, "The Blind Fiddler," wherein she danced with elf-like grace.

Miss Dana appears in "Stoneheart," a February Edison release, in a part ideally suited to her. Among others, she also is cast for a part in "A Spiritual Elopement," a comedy, and "A Thorn Among Roses," a comedy, all released in February.

Miss Dana loves her work and hopes that she "may earn the opportunity to play Juliette," as she expresses it. But with the country's greatest critics already warmly enthusiastic about her powers, one feels that it is only her charming modes that prompts her to speak of "earning" the opportunity. She is already equal to it.

MAKING THE BEST OF IT.

Fate took a hand in the selection of a location for the making of one of the scenes in George Kleine's latest feature comedy, "Who's Who in Society," last week. One of the scenes calls for a clever crook to smash his auto in a ditch to gain aid for his supposed injuries and in that way access to the house he wishes to rob. George Barber and Director Fitzmaurice, of the Kleine forces, went forth in a touring car in search of a nice soft ditch into which an automobile could be tipped without serious danger to the actor. However, the excursion ended abruptly on a wet and lonely corner in New Rochelle when the touring car skidded suddenly into a street excavation and nearly buried the film men in yellow mud. A passing automobile carried them to the nearest doctor where they were sufficiently patched up to go home. The following afternoon a very realistic picture was obtained of a touring car up-ended and half buried in New Rochelle real estate.

"Thirteen Down"

A Two-Part Subject by Essanay, with a Strong Climax and an Excellent Cast.

Reviewed by James S. McQuade.

CAST.

Arnold Austin, the breadline man, Francis X. Bushman
Jeanne Lamarde.....Beverly Bayne
Dr. Lamarde.....Thomas Commerford
James Gordon, a friend of the Doctor, Harry Dunkinson
Robyns, the butler.....John Cossar
Robert Orson, Jeanne's suitor....Bryant Washburn
Baron Schoman.....Lester Cuneo
His Secretary.....Addison Madeiro, Jr.

THE clever art of combining and controlling the elements of a story so that they converge in a forceful climax at the close is very happily illustrated in "Thirteen Down," an Essanay subject in two parts that will be released Feb. 13. Victor Eubank is the author, and the directness of the story to a fixed goal and the withholding of clues that might indicate the final outcome until the psychological moment arrives are worthy of hearty praise. The spectator is altogether unprepared for the revelations that are made near the close of the second part, and the fact that his interest has been kept at high tension from the start makes his surprise all the greater and his satisfaction the keener.

Scene from "Thirteen Down" (Essanay).

Director Totten is responsible for the production, and he has told the story well in the films. In the matter of staging I think he missed a fine opportunity to add "class" to the production by failing to give us a more imposing interior for the fashionable reception scene, in which Baron Schoman is the guest of honor. As it is, the setting impresses one as being cramped and commonplace.

The acting in these pictures is without a flaw. Francis X. Bushman, in the person of Arnold Austin, excites and sustains chief interest. His make-up as the half-famished down-and-outer in the bread line—which, by the way, is a real scene taken near Dawes Hotel, on the West Side, Chicago—is thoroughly realistic as a type. The contrast between his appearance as a tramp and that of Dr. Lamarde's fashionably dressed secretary affords a surprising transformation, and convinces us that so far as the outward man is concerned, no matter how fine he looks, the clothes make him. That scene in Dr. Lamarde's library, where the foreign spies attempt to steal the plans and model of a new and destructive piece of ordnance invented by the doctor, and Austin prevents them, shows a short but terriffic struggle.

Thomas Commerford will impress every one who views these pictures by his dignified impersonation of Dr. Lamarde. His fine character work is enhanced by scrupulous good taste in dress. Bryant Washburn, who appears as Robert Orson, a suitor for the hand of Jeanne Lamarde, and John Cossar as Lamarde's butler, contribute full measure to the uniform high quality of acting in this photoplay. Lester Cuneo and Harry Dunkinson, in the respective parts of Baron Schoman and James Gordon, are also in harmony with the requirements. Mr. Cuneo is the excellent foil for Mr. Bushman in the struggle for the possession of Lamarde's gun model and plans. Both men are strappers and scrappers, and they do not spare each other in a melee.

Miss Beverly Bayne is the only lady of prominence in the pictures. Her Jeanne Lamarde is a delicate conception of a sweet, warm-hearted girl, who struggles between regard and duty at certain crises in the story, where the heart wins out and where subsequent developments show that the head concurs.

Dr. Lamarde has invented a wonderful modern gun for warfare and gives it to the United States. He still keeps the model and plans in a small wall safe in his library, and one day shows them to a friend, Mr. Dunkinson, who visits him. The friends afterwards engage in controversy on social conditions, during which the Doctor declares that everything depends on the environment of the individual and nothing on luck. To prove it he invites his friend to accompany him to the bread line in the city, where he counts down the line until the thirteenth man is reached. To the surprise of his friend he engages this man, Arnold Austin, as his private secretary.

Austin is entrusted with the secret of the Doctor's war gun, and one day, while the inventor is absent, he is surprised in the act of trying to open the wall safe by Jeanne Lamarde, the only child of his benefactor. At first impulse Jeanne concludes to denounce him to her father, but gives him a day's respite.

The following day Jeanne holds a reception in honor of a distinguished foreigner, Baron Schoman. In the evening she and her father go to the opera on the invitation of friends. The servants also go out, and Arnold Austin is left alone in the house.

He reclines dozing in a large chair in the library, when he is awakened by a noise and sees two men in the room. He springs up and turns on the electric light. The strangers spring upon him and a fearful struggle for mastery takes place. When both men are lying unconscious and he himself is about to faint from a vicious blow received on the temple, Dr. Lamarde and Jeanne enter the room. The Doctor rushes to the fallen men and, taking off their masks, discovers that they are Baron Schoman and his secretary, who had been his guests that very day. The police are called and take the culprits away.

But a greater surprise is to come to Jeanne and her father. Austin calls in the butler, Robyns, and Robert Orson, Jeanne's old-time suitor. Then he reveals that he is a U. S. secret service man and that Robyns and Orson are his assistants; also that he had been on the track of the Baron and his secretary for many months, and had got into the bread line in order to follow a clue found by him at the time.

BILLIE RITCHIE, THE ORIGINAL "DRUNK."

Billie Ritchie, in order to settle, allay and to put the quietus on all controvertionalists who contest his claims to having originated the "drunk" make-up he now uses in those screaming L-KO comedies, wishes to announce that he first used his present make-up in 1887, three years before Charles Chaplin of the Essanay Film Manufacturing Company was born. How's that for a left-hand slam?

In an interview in "Motography," published January 16, Chaplin gave his age as 25, which would make the year of his birth 1890, three years after Ritchie had started to popularize his style of comedy in England.

"I first used my present make-up in my vaudeville act with my three sisters in 1887," says the indomitable Billie. "I also played and used the same make-up with Fred H. Graham in the English pantomime, 'Cinderella,' playing 'Baron Near Broke.' Two years later I again used the same make-up in the character of a street musician in 'Early Birds' while with the Karno Company. I claim that I am the originator of this make-up and of the comedy which is associated with the make-up."

Billie Ritchie was the original "Drunk" in a "Night in an English Music Hall," in which he played the Orpheum time from coast to coast. In addition he originated the part of Bill Smith, the Man from Nowhere, in Gus Hill's musical revue, "Around the Clock." Billie estimates that he has played the drunk part made familiar in L-KO comedies more than five thousand times in America, England and France.

Ritchie's parents were variety artists before him. Billie was trained to stock work in England's oldest theater, the Theater Royal at Plymouth, England, but soon started on his "drunk" career by playing "father" in "Ten Nights in a Bar-room." And the strangest part of Billie's career is that, although he has been playing "drunk" parts since early manhood, he has never taken a drink.

"The Love Pirate"

Two-Reel Reliance Presenting Woman's Character from a Utilitarian Standpoint.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

CAST.

Viola ..... Fay Tincher
The Magnate ..... Raoul A. Walsh
The Young Clubman ..... Elmer Clifton

WITHOUT touching upon woman's enfranchisement, "The Love Pirate" unconsciously raises a question of concession. Without depreciating noble women, and without belittling our ideals of womanhood, the story points out a very common weakness that is liable to remain a serious weakness in the gentle sex until they are given equal opportunity with men from babyhood. The very childishness that strong men often admire in women, possibly because such women are nearer to the children they bring into the world, is coincident with an inability to think logically, and liberty might not mean greater freedom of thought to such creatures but merely an enlargement of her range of caprice.

Scene from "The Love Pirate" (Reliance).

It is not at all strange that women who strongly attract men, whether by "fatal beauty" or by a peculiar fascination that makes her an easy medium for male hypnotism should live lives replete with adventure. The very lack of consciousness of what she is doing, sometimes ascribed to innocence, in her relations with men, is a sort of passivity, with which she receives affection from parents, relatives and friends, without apparent perception that she is merely a recipient, without, in contact with a lover, perception of wrong. This difficult portrayal is attempted in "The Love Pirate" and more delicately than adequately treated.

Viola Marsh discovers while at school that she strongly attracts strong boys. They fight for her, struggle for her preference. Her passive acceptance of the masculine point of view as to her value persists after she leaves school. She becomes the stenographer of a married man, one happy in his family relations, and her susceptibility is so great that she cannot act in opposition to it. She has no desire to destroy the happiness of his wife and child, but her opinions have become incorporated with his, and the very consciousness of her weakness rejoices in triumph over his slavery. He ruins himself for her and passes easily out of memory when she elopes with the next admirer. No real knowledge of what her course should be has appeared in her experience and it must come from the outside to affect one of her limited comprehension.

In a life of luxury she discovers among her servants a newcomer, the first admirer, driven by desperate poverty to become a valet. She becomes hysterical under the menace of his presence in the house. "I intended no harm," is her self-defense. "It is all forced upon me." She is incapable of understanding that she has wronged anyone until a letter from the first man's wife falls into her possession. It tells of desperate poverty and misery. Viola is moved by a compassionate impulse to help the wife, and at last a conscience is awakened in her being. The leading role is admirably impersonated by Miss Fay Tincher, and the story, self-defense. "It is all forced upon me." She is incapable in spite of much constructive commonplace, will prove interesting.

Violet MacMillan

"DEARIE GIRL" and "Fairy Girl" are two of the most used names for petite Miss Violet MacMillan, the latest addition to the leading lady colony of Inceville, where Ince Features are produced. This little bundle of humanity is one of the smallest leading ladies in the moving picture field. Tiny Violet is but fifty-seven and one-half inches short, and she can be weighed without putting on any of the balancing weights, for she tips the scales at an even hundred pounds. Sometimes affectionately known on the screen as Popularity's Pet, she surely lives up to this title given her by an admiring public, for a daintier bit of femininity one seldom sees. She is a typical blonde, golden haired, and with a pair of big blue eyes that fairly talk on the screen.

Violet MacMillan.

Violet was born in Grand Rapids, Michigan, on the fourth day of March; she smilingly refused to give the exact date. She attended high school in her native town and graduated from there. She was always interested in amateur theatricals, and hardly an entertainment went by without her name heading the program. The public first saw her in "The Wizard of Oz" in the role of Dorothy. She was the original girl in "The Time, the Place, and the Girl," playing the Broadway circuit for some time. After that, a year spent with Klaw & Erlanger, playing opposite Max Rogers in "The Young Turk," fitted her for any kind of work. She was the leading ingenue in "Girlies" which played at the New Amsterdam theater. From that, a jump on to the vaudeville stage over the Keith and Orpheum time with a neat little act of singing and rapid costume changes made her quite well known.

Her film career started in Oakland, where L. Frank Baum took her from the Orpheum stage and induced her to enter the pictures. She came south to Los Angeles and was featured by the Oz Film Co., in the fairy tales of Mr. Baum. The pictures were "The Patchwork Girl of Oz," "His Majesty the Scarecrow of Oz," "The Magic Cloak of Oz," and a series of four one reelers written for her and entitled "Violet's Dreams." When the Oz firm closed at the end of the year, Miss MacMillan went immediately to work for Thomas H. Ince at his beach studio, and ever since that time has been busily engaged in playing for his features.

Her first dramatic picture was "A Modern Noble." Thomas Chatterton, now directing, played the lead opposite her, and the production was under the direction of Jay Hunt. The next story was "His Brother's Keeper," with Mr. Hunt playing opposite Violet as the slavey girl. Other pictures now being completed at this studio and in which she plays leading and title roles are "The Phantom on the Hearth," "The Artist's Model" and "The Disillusionment of Jane."

Miss Violet is the little girl who introduced the "Woozy" into fashionable Pasadena hotels and society, giving it the slogan, "Be a Woozy—Be Square."

With the aid of a big Winton "6" this tiny leading lady tours to and from her Hollywood bungalow. She is a staunch defender of pictures, and says, "It does seem most wonderful to enjoy home life and still be able to do the work one loves. I am enjoying my experiences at Inceville more than I can state, and if only the public loves my work as well as I love to do it I am sure my happiness will be complete."

"YOUR GIRL AND MINE" IN NEBRASKA.

The Suffragists of Omaha, Nebraska, headed by Mrs. Drake Smith and others, are working hand in hand with the World Film branch there to make "Your Girl and Mine" the suffrage picture, the talk of the year. That they have succeeded is evident for the attention that they are receiving.

"The Island of Regeneration"

Vitagraph Six-Part Cyrus Townsend Brady Subject Is a Great Drama That Moves and Holds

Reviewed by George Blaisdell.

CAST.

Katherine Brenton, an Idealist.....Edith Storey
John Charnock, Jr., as a Boy.....Bobby Connelly
John Charnock, Jr., as a Man.....Antonio Moreno
Valentine Langford, in love with Katherine..S. Rankin Drew
John Charnock, Sr., owner of the Nansemond..Leo Delaney
Virginia Charnock, his wife.....Naomi Childers
Dr. Clayton, the Charnocks' family doctor.....Jack Brawn
Phyllis Carney, a friend of Katherine's.....Lillian Herbert
Capt. Harding, commander of the Nansemond...Logan Paul

HERE is a picture that by many will be described as a great production. "The Island of Regeneration" abounds in dramatic situations—situations that deeply move. As we follow on the screen this six-part adaptation of the Rev. Cyrus Townsend Brady's novel of the same name we feel that unusual picture judgment has been exercised in the selection of the subject and in the execution of the script. The picture was produced by Harry Davenport. Mr. Davenport has done better than well.

Scene from "The Island of Regeneration" (Vitagraph).

To this reviewer it seemed that of the six thousand feet the first four were in length like two and the last two like four. The explanation is simple enough. The first two-thirds of the picture are so filled with scenes that pull at the heartstrings, the beholder is so stirred, that an ordinarily strong decline from the climax and the denouement seem attenuated.

Edith Storey is at the head of the splendid cast. She has the role of Katherine Brenton, who believes she believes in some kind of new thought; in other words, she has no regard for conventions—theoretically, of course. Practically, her morals are sound. S. Rankin Drew is the man who challenges her to put to the test the ideas she has publicly expressed. Katherine consents to take a trip with him on his yacht. It is when Langford assails the young woman that she escapes in a launch, landing on an island to meet in a castaway the man who brings her back to the same ground on which civilization rests.

There is drama in the opening of the story as the young Virginian with his wife and son and collie board the sailing vessel for a trip around the world. The fire on the boat is thrilling. The child on the island crying over the body of his mother will move a hard heart. There is a closely following tug as we see the little fellow kneel for his "Now I lay me down to sleep."

The second phase of the story travels fast. The scenes on the yacht when to Katherine is revealed the fact that Langford not only is devoid of ideals but also of principle are of dramatic force. The battle between the two as the woman desperately fights for her honor is remarkable for its fierceness. One feels that Katherine is entitled to short odds if any on the score of physical equality. That she stuns and nearly kills her assailant seems the natural thing. Her escape over the boom and into the launch is daring. The scene as the boat bounds over the waves in the rays of the moon is picturesque.

The finding on the beach by the bearded young castaway of the woman who has so strangely entered his life is of deep, tense interest. Lighter shades there are here; but there are quiet moments, too, as when the nearly speechless youngster takes Katherine to the sand dune and shows her the skeletons of his mother and of the collie. The gruesomeness is submerged in the pathos—and in the treatment. There is a smile as the woman pre-empts the man's cave and coolly turns out its owner. There is a gulp as the athletic Charnock kneels on the sand and utters the only words he has not forgotten, "Now I lay me down to sleep."

It is interesting to note the gradual breaking down of the "ideals" of Katherine. Where the young man yields to his gently domineering preceptor a dumb or rather blind devotion the psychology of which seemingly he cannot comprehend, with the woman it is different. She comprehends. There are many happenings on this island that for the picture follower will have interest—among them the revelation of Miss Storey's natatorial proficiency.

The ending of "The Island of Regeneration" is satisfying—and it brings again into the drama little Bobby Connelly, not the least of the players in this splendidly acted story.

Charlotte Walker in Lasky-Belasco Photoplays

MISS CHARLOTTE WALKER, the distinguished American dramatic star, has just signed a contract whereby her photoplay appearances for several years to come will be exclusively in the productions made by the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company. Samuel Goldfish announces that Miss Walker enters into this contract through the kind permission of Messrs. Klaw & Erlanger, and that she will make her photodramatic debut in one of the Lasky-Belasco offerings soon to be produced.

Charlotte Walker.

Miss Walker has recently been starring in the "Better Way," a new drama by her husband, Eugene Walter, which has not yet been seen in New York, but which has attained notable success during its preliminary tour. For the past two years, before the production of the "Better Way," Miss Walker had starred in Mr. Walter's dramatization of the "Trail of the Lonesome Pine," scoring in that piece one of the most notable and long-continued triumphs of her entire career.

Some of the productions with which Miss Walker has been closely associated in the public mind because of the hits she scored in roles prominent in these various plays are "Sag Harbor," "The Crisis," "House of Silence," "Mrs. Dane's Defence," "The Prodigal Son," "The Embassy Ball," "The Prince Chap," "As Ye Sow" and "The Triangle." In connection with this present announcement it will be remembered that Miss Walker was the original Agatha Warren when "The Warrens of Virginia" was first produced at the Belasco Theater, and she looks forward with great pleasure to appearing in photodramatic versions of Belasco dramatic hits. Among her more recent vehicles not yet mentioned have been such plays as "The Wolf," "Boots and Saddles" and "Homeward Bound."

Miss Walker has played several stellar engagements in London with notable success and this makes her addition to the ranks of photodramatic artists doubly important, as her advent on the screen will doubtless be hailed by English and European audiences as enthusiastically as in this country.

FAMOUS ANIMAL IMPERSONATOR IN "THE NEW WIZARD OF OZ."

Fred Woodward, the well known animal impersonator, appears as the Cowardly Lion and several other of the four-legged characters in L. Frank Baum's latest film, "The New Wizard of Oz," which is to be released on the Alliance program.

"Rule G"

Made by the Blazon Film Company—Released by Paramount.

Reviewed by W. Stephen Bush.

THIS feature establishes the right of a new company to class itself with the best producers on either side of the ocean. No other company has ever leaped into fame like this. Few of us had heard of the Blazon Film Company, but it is safe to predict that we will hear the name on many lips in the course of the next few months.

"Rule G" will cause a sensation in the film world. Consisting of five full reels, and dealing with a subject which required skill of the very highest order, there is not a single flaw anywhere—at least none I have been able to detect. We have had good railroad stories before and good railroad pictures, but never before has a railroad story been told on the screen which combined so many excellent features in such perfect proportion. Better acting on the screen I have seen rarely.

Scene from "Rule G" (Blazon).

In the selection of types, this feature reaches perfection. The atmosphere is a triumph of realism. The dramatic construction betokens uncommon familiarity with the advantages of the screen as a medium of dramatic expression; the action in the play moves in the main scenes with a swiftness that will take one's breath away. Indeed, we welcome the little by-plays and the charming love story all the more because they give us a chance to draw our breath between the "punches" so profusely scattered throughout the production. There are scenes showing accidents and near-accidents, which leave us with our hearts in our mouths, and then again there are scenes of such dramatic power and with such a subtle and gripping appeal as to bring tears to many eyes.

The feature is based upon a series of stories printed some little time ago in "The Saturday Evening Post" and entitled "How John Barleycorn Was Driven Off the Tracks." You will at once suspect that there is a lesson and a moral purpose to this play which might injure its prospects as a screen attraction. There is, indeed, a noble purpose back of this feature, but it is very very far from being "preachy." I would never say a good word for a film that was just "preachy." Here a highly gifted mind filled with a true perception of the powers of the screen has assembled a wonderful picture, a true photograph of real life. At the end of it all the noble purpose flashes out like sheeted lightning. I venture to say that most people will stay in their seats for a few minutes after they have seen the picture, for it deeply touches every string in the human heart and it sets your brains in motion in an elevating sort of way. Add to this a succession of spectacular scenes wrought with marvelous attention to detail and you will begin to understand why this picture is bound to make a notable mark. I might say something, too, of the photography in all exteriors and in the shops and factories. It is far above the average. The photography of a few of the interior scenes is somewhat flat.

Early in the picture this conviction must force itself on every spectator: Whatever is projected from this film upon the screen has actually happened and might happen again and probably is happening somewhere at this very moment. The naturalness of it all, the hundred little tests which tell us the difference between the reality and the imitation of it give this production a deep hold on the audience from the very start. The hold grows with every reel; you are getting closer to the screen or the screen is getting closer to you, and presently you feel an undeniably personal interest in every character and in every new turn of the story.

The director does not shrink from painting things in their natural color. The fight between the bullying foreman of "the gang," built like a giant, strength in every muscle and in every movement, and of his rival in love has rarely been equalled in realism. The sombre aspects of human life are faithfully recorded, but never unduly lengthened or dwelt upon with the unsympathetic spirit of a Job's comforter. The dominant notes in this extraordinary film-play are hope and faith in humanity. I know that this picture will win its audiences as few pictures can, and in conclusion I want to emphasize the fact that "Rule G" is distinctly an exhibitor's picture. He is bound to make money with a picture of this type, and he will renew and confirm the loyalty of all his patrons. "Rule G" will make a hit with every kind of an audience.

New Canadian Picture Making Concern

Conness-Till Releases Its First Canadian Made Feature—Will Shortly Increase Output—Plant Represents $50,000.

PROBABLY the first feature film ever made in Canada by a Canadian company was released when the Conness-Till Company placed on the market a three-part picture featuring Edward H. Robins and Clara Whipple, entitled "On the Kings Highway." For several months motion picture men all over Canada have been interestedly watching the work of this company, which has been loudly flaunting the "Made in Canada" slogan. The first picture which was given a private showing before its release is well acted and well photographed.

It is the intention of the Conness-Till Company to release

Plant of Conness-Till Film Co., Limited.

one Canadian made feature a week, which will be increased shortly to two features a week. Mr. Robins, formerly a Belasco leading man, will be starred. An up-to-date plant costing nearly $50,000 has been erected on a two and a half acre property overlooking the Humber river just outside the city limits of Toronto. The equipment throughout has been declared by well known moving picture men who visited it to be one of the most complete in existence. The president of the company is L. E. Conness, a well known American theatrical man; Ed. H. Robins is vice-president; Chas. E. Beury, of Philadelphia, second vice-president; Louis A. Till, Toronto, secretary, and James P. Beury, Philadelphia, treasurer.

A. J. Edwards is director in chief, and Tom McKnight assistant director; Louis W. Physioc, formerly with Pathe's, is technical director.

The output of the company will be handled in Canada by the United and B-C Features, and arrangements have been made for the pictures to be handled in England. At present there is only one regular company working at the studios, but an additional cast will be put before the camera within the next week or so. The first company is made up as follows: Clara Whipple, leading woman; Marie Cummings, Dorothy Millette, Reina Carruthers, May Anderson, Margaret Jackson, Frank Crane, Eugene Frazier, Frank Priestland, H. Webb Chamberlain, Claude Norrie. The publicity work of the company is being handled by Joseph A. Mack, formerly of New York.

Bostock Arena Has Auspicious Opening

City Officials Indorse David Horsley's Los Angeles Enterprise—Large Crowd Attends.

DAVID HORSLEY'S Bostock Arena and Jungle opened its gates in the heart of Los Angeles on Tuesday, January 26th, to a capacity gathering that represented the finest element of the city. Nearly all of the municipal officials, including the Mayor, Chief of Police and members of the City Council, were on hand to signify their approval of the enterprise.

Horsley Park, as the exhibition place is called, is located at the corner of Main and Washington streets, and occupies a plot of ground 650x450 feet in extent. A substantial concrete wall, finished in California Mission style, runs along the entire front, while a high archway toward the lower end carries out the same scheme, and forms at once the main entrance and executive offices. The interior arrangements are highly artistic and novel, the walks being laid out in tropical gardens and palm-draped lanes, through which the elephants trudge about carrying loads of happy children on their backs. Every turning of the walks has its little surprises, such as monkey cages, ostrich runs, baby lions and aviaries. Next comes a semi-circle of dens containing the animals that have gained fame and glory in every section of the globe. The fronts of these sixty odd dens are made of solid iron bars without gates, so that the animals cannot possibly escape. The backgrounds of the dens are painted to represent the native environment of the various species, and the lights are so arranged that a startling illusion is obtained. A concealed passageway at the back connects each den with the arena at the center where the performances are held. This huge iron-bound inclosure fronts in a covered auditorium in which 1,200 people were comfortably seated to watch the most marvelous exhibition of trained wild animals that has ever yet been made. So splendid indeed is the layout and conduct of the show that the Los Angeles people have shown considerable pride in the acquisition, and the City Council has, through its public indorsement and hearty expressions of approval, made Mr. Horsley's enterprise a civic institution.

Main Gate, Bostock Arena and Jungle.

The Mayor and his staff attended the opening exercises, and Harry E. Tudor, general manager of the Bostock Arena, was complimented for his conspicuous ingenuity and skill, and was made an honorary member of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce.

The city is thronged with tourists, and there is every indication of a prosperous year for the show, which offers the only serious counter attraction to the San Francisco and San Diego Expositions, and is virtually free from local competition.

David Horsley now has in his possession some of the most beautiful and highly trained animals in the world, together with some famous European trainers, and it is his intention to utilize them in a series of motion picture productions of new and extraordinary conception. With that end in view a studio and working jungle is being constructed in the rear of the auditorium, an inclosed space of about 250x150 feet having been reserved for that purpose. Work on this producing plant is being rushed and should be ready for operation about the middle of February.

When completed the entire plant will, with the purchase price of the animals, represent an outlay of about $200,000, with a possible earning capacity quite bevond calculation. The arena itself will be operated as a separate enterprise with highly remunerative possibilities, while the studio and jungle, in which advanced pictures of any description may be made, will, with the assistance of the owner's newly invented double-exposure trick camera, assure an extraordinary product. Taken all in all, the Los Angeles institution offers a striking example of the forethought, originality and daring so frequently demonstrated by that successful pioneer of the industry, David Horsley.

Goldburg Finds Encouragement

Visits Many Exchanges On Western Trip—Says Features Are in Demand.

JESSE GOLDBURG, the secretary and general manager of the Life Photo Film Corporation, who left New York the week of January 18th on his way to the Coast, states that there is a decidedly healthy air about conditions in the film industry in general, and that the exchange men in the territory already traversed by him are decidedly optimistic with respect to the future as far as high-class feature films are concerned.

Mr. Goldberg found little or no difficulty in disposing of the output for the next eleven months of the Life Photo Film Corporation's features. The contracts entered into provide for an initial release of one feature a month for six months and two five-part features a month for a further period of five months. The exchanges contracted with are as follows: Electric Theater & Supply Company of Philadelphia for the territory of Eastern Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia and Virginia; the Northern Film Company of Pittsburgh for Western Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio and Kentucky; the Casino Feature Film Company of Detroit for Michigan and Wisconsin; the Celebrated Players' Film Exchange of Chicago for Illinois and Indiana.

Leaving Chicago, Mr. Goldburg will proceed to Minneapolis, Duluth, Wichita, Kansas, Denver, St. Paul, Butte, Montana, Kansas City, San Francisco, Los Angeles and Seattle. On his return visit he will visit at Boston, and last close the territory of New York.

Mr. Goldburg has also taken the time to interview the largest exhibitors in the cities covered by him, and has been spreading the gospel of high-class photoplays and the elimination of inartistic, sensational, cheap productions that neither teach a moral or adorn a tale.

The result of Mr. Goldburg's work substantiates the judgment of the Board of Directors of the Life Photo Film Corporation consistently expressed that, regardless of the various feature programs on the market, there is yet wide scope for features outside of such programs that are of merit and produce along the lines of the products of the Life Photo Film Corporation's studios.

Mr. Goldburg, it is expected, will return to New York, about February 15th.

PRAISE FOR GEORGE GEBHART.

F. P. Lillie, a Colorado Springs capitalist, a stockholder of the Pike's Peak Film Company, who is in New York with the object of contracting for the services of several leading men and women for his organization. Lillie says that he already has secured options on the services of two leading women whose names are potential in the field of photodrama. He would not divulge their identity, preferring to complete his plans before making any announcement.

Lillie spoke flatteringly of the work being done by his company of players in the Colorado mountains. George Gebhart, leading man of the company, and assistant director to Otis B. Thayer, the man who is responsible for the staging of the "Lariat" films, as the output of the Pike's Peak company is known, was the subject of special praise on the part of Lillie.

"I have seen Mr. Gebhart assume in the course of a week such diametrically opposed parts as those of Indian and Chinaman, Mexican greaser and French Canadian. He has played for me such other types as the faro dealer of the sparsely settled further West, miner, cowpuncher, college chap, society man, captain of industry, and rounder, or man of the world, as you may prefer to call him.

"There have been other characterizations which he has given us, each one faithful to the type. It is a wonderful range and a striking illustration of this man's versatility. I feel that the Pike's Peak company is extremely fortunate in having Mr. Gebhart under contract, and his acknowledged standing as a premier impersonator of Indian roles especially makes him an ideal member of our company, inasmuch as we make so-called 'western' reels a specialty."

"Barnaby Rudge"

Hepworth Company Produces a Six-Part Adaptation of Dickens' Well Known Story.

Reviewed by George Blaisdell.

THE Hepworth-American Company is showing a six-part adaptation of Dickens' "Barnaby Rudge." The script was written by Thomas Bentley, Dickensian authority. Mr. Bentley has endeavored faithfully to render the spirit of the book and of the times of which it treats rather than to create a drama with a sole and distinct center of interest. In plainer language, perhaps, he has dealt with mobs, great throngs of rioters moved by religious fanaticism or blindly following a religious fanatic, instead of building his story around one of the many characters. The subject will have added interest in proportion as the observer has read the book recently or remote.

Tom Powers portrays Barnaby Rudge, the half-witted follower of the hordes inspired by Lord George Gordon.

Scene from "Barnaby Rudge" (Hepworth).

leader of the "no popery" riots. William Felton is Rudge Senior, the highwayman. Stewart Rome is Maypole Hugh, the riotous hostler. Harry Buss portrays the famous Simon Tappertit. Miss Chrissie White is Dolly Vardon and Miss Violet Hopson is Emma Haredale. John McAndrews finely plays Geoffrey Haredale, the prominent Catholic who is made to feel the mob's vengeance. Henry Vibart, as Sir John Chester, prominent Protestant, has but little to do, but that little markedly stands out.

The duel between Haredale and Chester, at the conclusion of the picture, furnishes the strongest dramatic incident in the six reels. The cynical, smiling Chester dies as he has lived—half smiling, half sneering, yet engaging nevertheless. The serious, earnest Haredale in his remorse dons the habit of a monk.

Great attention has been paid by the Hepworth company to the staging of "Barnaby Rudge." The village streets, of the period of 1775, had to be built; surely all were well done. Another large background is the lobby of the House of Parliament. The same lavish hand that provided the settings is also apparent in the mob scenes. In some of these latter it would seem to be no exaggeration to say there were somewhere between one and two thousand persons employed. And they are skillfully handled.

As a worthy reproduction of the atmosphere of the book, as an educational subject especially, "Barnaby Rudge" is deserving of praise. The photography is marred at times by overexposure. As to the side of the picture where it touches on the religious passions of the period, that is a matter for individual decision on the part of the exhibitor. It is for him to judge what will be the effect on his audience of the sacking of a church and the carrying of relics through the streets by drunken rioters. By the great majority undoubtedly it will be accepted for what it is—a portrayal on the screen of the story of a great book, of the assault on a religious institution by misguided men and of their punishment by constituted authority.

The picture is well played and expensively staged.

A FAMOUS JURY CAST.

To lend to the trial scene of the forthcoming Edison thriller "On the Stroke of Twelve" the greatest realism, the entire jury cast used in the great stage success "On Trial" was secured.

"The District Attorney"

Lubin Feature Based Upon the Well-Known Successful Stage-Play.

Reviewed by W. Stephen Bush.

BARRY O'NEIL has filmed this well-known play in a thoroughly skillful manner. O'Neil has profited by his previous experience in making Kleine plays ready for the screen, and in this production he has used this advantage to good purpose. There is excellent film material in most of the Kleine plays; there is a lot of it in "The District Attorney." The director had a capable cast to work with, and it is easy to see that Mr. O'Neil succeeded in imbuing his cast with the right sort of ambition.

"The District Attorney" is a modern American story worked out with uncommon skill. It digs deep into the darker side of political life and portrays with great fidelity to life the alliance between the corrupt politician and the seemingly respectable citizen who as a contractor in politics does not shrink from participation in crime. Peter Lang as the "old-time" ward politician, contemptuous alike of ethics and of the criminal law, but not without a certain sort of good nature and broad humor, gave a very clever impersonation of "McGrath."

Scene from "The District Attorney" (Lubin).

George Soule Spencer made an excellent District Attorney, suggesting at all times great powers of reserve. Frank Pierson as the willing tool of the corrupt alliance gave a most creditable performance, showing a fine ability to grasp and act his part at difficult moments. Charles Brandt made a convincing "Matthews Brainerd." The female parts were all in competent hands, and the portrayal of the part of Helen Knight, which is so essential to the success of the play, deserves special mention. Miss Dorothy Bernard never did better work.

Altogether it may be said that "The District Attorney" is a good, strong feature, directed with intelligence and experience, and splendidly acted throughout. All the settings were acceptable, and the photography was fully up to the Lubin standard. Betzwood is advertising itself with every Lubin picture.

NEW BALLAD BY CHARLES K. HARRIS.

Ballads may come and ballads may go, but a new ballad of Charles K. Harris's means to the music world something entirely out of the ordinary. The name of Harris on a ballad has been a standard for the past twenty years or more, and the music-loving world is always on the lookout for a new number by this famous composer.

Each season Charles K. Harris issues a new ballad. The early part of last year he turned out "Suppose I Met You Face to Face," and the latter part "I Wonder Who's Next in Your Heart," and what popularity these two numbers attained is music history.

This year he starts off with one of the most sensational ballads he has ever written or published, entitled "Can You Pay" (for a Broken Heart)? The words and music are both written by Mr. Harris, and will be found on another page of this issue. Mr. Harris says any exhibitor is at liberty to use the piece either as a ballad or as music. Furthermore, he will be glad to supply to theater men without charge a complete orchestration, in any key.

"A Farewell Dinner"

Two-Reel Majestic of a Wordling's Sudden Conversion by Generous Impulses.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

CAST.

Eleanor .....Billie West
Ewing .....W. E. Lawrence
Lessiter .....Howard Gaye
Mrs. Standish .....Cora Drew

THE story of a good fellow, containing an admirable portrayal of character by a bully good actress, "Billie" West, "A Farewell Dinner," lacks only a delicate psychological touch at the moment Lessiter changes his volition. The sudden conversion of sentiment and purpose on the part of a generous worldling is made fairly plausible by a revelation brought unexpectedly to his attention, but the whole story would have benefited by a moment's study of Lessiter in small scope, wavering between natural desire and manifest duty. It would have made his act the more magnanimous that he had to suffer a brief period of self-struggle, heightened interest and would have enforced attention to his change of heart, externalizing it more convincingly.

Scene from "A Farewell Dinner" (Majestic).

Lessiter is a wealthy young man with a past, a so-called "previous attachment," when he comes into social relations with Mrs. Standish and her daughter Eleanor. Mrs. Standish is depicted as an ambitious step-mother, planning to wed Eleanor to Lessiter and opposed to the suit of Eleanor's playmate suitor, Ewing, engaged simultaneously in mining out west and growing a beard. Ewing sends his sweetheart a photograph with the beard on and it falls into the hands of unscrupulous Mrs. Standish.

Mrs. Standish appears so utterly destitute of principle as to be outrageously immoral, but the character is far from an impossible one. As soon as a woman has disposed of her own case in marriage she becomes an active and persistent advocate of desirable marriage until match-making becomes a passion. With only this one end in view, a woman may exhibit fiendish cunning in circumventing dangerous rivals. It is a woman, not man, who demands the commonplace embrace at the end of each play. That is the sole end of existence from her point of view.

Now, it happens, as it only does in pictures, that the "previous attachment" of worldly young Lessiter lies dying in an apartment next to that of Mrs. Standish and the latter finds the unfortunate woman with Lessiter's picture clasped to her heart. She therefore substitutes the picture of Ewing and contrives that Eleanor shall find it there and believe her girlhood sweetheart unfaithful. Eleanor accepts Lessiter and preparations for the marriage are hurried to completion.

At his bachelor dinner, Lessiter meets Ewing, just returned beardless from the West. Lessiter and Ewing remain after the others are gone and the groom-elect comes to a discovery that Eleanor's life-long lover and the girl herself have been victimized by the stepmother's treachery. He confronts the designing woman, extracts a confession of guilt and then, in the acute situation, merely withdraws, leaving Eleanor and Ewing reunited. That high point deserved much finer treatment than it received—on it the whole story hinged. It is always the one deserving most consideration.

Ethel Clayton

AT THE Lubin Studios the many friends of Ethel Clayton call her the "drawing-room actress," and an apt description it is, too, for Miss Clayton gives to every play in which she is filmed a charm of personality that is a reflection of cultured tastes, wide experiences and firm convictions that are exclusively her own.

Ethel Clayton.

Miss Clayton is one of the best-known of the Lubin stars, and has been featured in a great many of the Lubin masterpieces. She joined the Lubin players with a long record of stage successes and in adapting her gifts to the demands of the screen she had the advantage of a facility of technic that only comes through wide experience.

Interviewing Miss Clayton requires a vast amount of strategy for, while she is affable and cordial, as befits a temperament like hers, she is, nevertheless, one of the most consistently reticent players in the studio and not only tries to avoid interviews, but begs not to be quoted. Her theory is that, with her constant appearance before the public, there can be little else to make known. The camera catches unmistakably the charm of Miss Clayton's personality, but there is a combination of tints and tones which it reduces to mere black and white and one does not get the rich shade of her auburn hair, the intense whiteness of her complexion and the charm of her blue eyes.

Miss Clayton has one consistent hobby—books. She may have others, but none come anywhere near her love for books. In her apartments the book-cases completely encircle the library, continue on, into and around the drawing-room, on through a hallway and on into and part way around her dressing-room. It is rare, indeed, to see Miss Clayton without a book. When she motors she has three or four books with her; when she isn't working before the camera she is tucked away either in her dressing-room or a comfortable corner of the dressing-room reading. Ask her what she likes to read and she will tell you "good books," ask her what she considers good books and she will tell you, "almost anything except cheap fiction."

"I read to get the ideas of other people," Miss Clayton once told a friend, "and I get lots of enjoyment turning these ideas over in my mind and seeing what I really think of them myself. Books are wonderful friends. They are so entertaining and even if any of them should be dull, you can," and she smiled with a merry twinkle in her blue eyes, "shut them up, which is quite often more than one can do with human beings that are dull and uninteresting."

OWEN MOORE TO APPEAR WITH FRITZI SCHEFF.

Owen Moore, the popular young screen artist, having completed his work in the Elsie Janis pictures, will remain at the Bosworth-Morosco studios to appear with Fritzi Scheff in "Pretty Mrs. Smith." Some of the finest work of his successful career is displayed in the Janis pictures and his performance opposite the international star in "Betty in Search of a Thrill," and other forthcoming Bosworth releases, will soon effectively illustrate the fact that he is one of the most natural and convincing actors in pictures.

Owen Moore is a comedian, when the play calls for comedy, and a sympathetic lover when the plot ebbs to romance, even a tragedian who can be carried to daring heights of emotion with admirable result. That the public will rank him as foremost of moving picture actors after seeing him in the Janis releases is already assured. This will be paying him a compliment that he has long deserved.

TICHENOR AND HAMILTON OUT.

E. K. Lincoln, president of the Photoplays Production Company, gives official notification to the trade that F. A. Tichenor and A. G. Hamilton are no longer connected with that company.

"The Rods of Wrath"

Some Impressive Situations in Three-Part Picture Produced for Pathe by M. O. Penn.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

THE director of this picture, "The Rods of Wrath," is M. O. Penn. His qualities as an actor have long been known to spectators of Pathe offerings and in this, his first attempt at picture-making he shows himself a capable director. He has got a continuous and smooth flow of the action in his picture, a convincing continuity of background and, best of all, a human naturalness in his characters. In this, of course, his supporting cast of players, including Henry W. Walthall and Eleanor Woodruff, help markedly and share the credit.

The best that the picture has to offer is its situations; for the construction of the plot is only fair and might have dissolved within itself without reaching saturation a good deal more of its author's care and time. Yet in the story there is a note so tragic that the author was perhaps afraid to offer it boldly; we think needlessly so. Tragedy merely for the sake of sensation is insufferable; but any tragic fate with a moral warning quickens deep things in man and he welcomes it—no matter how tragic if truthful.

Scene from "The Rods of Wrath" (Pathe).

The central figure of the story is a brutal sea captain who cruelly bullies his son. M. O. Penn himself plays this man so well that he makes the audience condemn his treatment of the boy. The boy grows up and, between these two the poor wife and mother (Eleanor Woodruff) has a sad time of it. But at an exciting climax the son—the brutal old man is only dreaming all this—kills her with a shot intended for the father. The captain now wakes up and grows tender, which is far from convincing.

The main story is buttressed by interesting things that fill the outline and while they keep suspense alive, broaden the picture's experience with a touch of out of doors, putting as it were a more vigorous breath into the action's nostrils. Of these, is the shanghaiing of the son to the ship of his father—the snappy fight on the hell-ship, during which he knocks his father on the head with an iron bar and escapes, accidently setting the vessel on fire. One is apt to forget that all this is only a dream. There is nothing at all dreamlike in it and in making it so, the author weakened it; but as we have said, weakened it on purpose wrongly.

The staging is one of the picture's good points. M. O. Penn has a keen eye for scenes. There is grace in his handling of the offering and we believe he will soon rank well up with the good picture makers. The camera work is excellent.

BEATRIZ MICHELENA RETURNS TO WORK.

After spending three weeks in a sanitarium, recovering from injuries received while playing the title role of Bret Harte's California heroine, "Salomy Jane," Beatriz Michelena, the beautiful prima donna, starring with the California Motion Picture Corporation, is back with her company again, taking the title role in another Bret Harte film romance, "The Lily of Poverty Flat." Many of the scenes in this engaging screen drama are being photographed in the heart of the far-famed Santa Cruz redwoods, where some of the largest sequoias in the world are to be found.

Remarkable Record of "Hypocrites"

Bosworth Feature, Under the Guidance of Harry L. Reichenbach, Is Unusual Success.

"HYPOCRITES," at the Longacre Theatre, New York, perhaps, within the past two weeks, created more comment and aroused more enthusiastic press notices than almost any other motion picture yet shown in New York. For the first time in the history of the industry, the regular dramatic critics of the New York dailies, covered the opening on January 20 and the following day every paper carried long, favorable reviews of the production.

Harry L. Reichenbach.

The Evening Sun, in a full column of reading matter, credited the Bosworth Company with having created a new vogue in motography and the Evening Telegram asserted that "Hypocrites" was the most remarkable film ever seen. The New York Times designated the picture daring and artistic, while Zittel, in the New York Evening Journal, called it the most startlingly, satisfying and vividly wonderful creation of the screen age.

The Journal of Commerce and the Even-Post, two of New York's most conservative papers, advised everybody to see the picture, calling it the most remarkable of the day, and the New York American, in a two-column review, said "Hypocrites" was the one wonderful novelty of the year.

No motion picture has received the dignified attention and warm support of the press in general, as has been secured for "Hypocrites" by Harry L. Reichenbach. The fact that no capital was made of the nude figure of Truth, in the advance advertising, was favorably commented upon editorially and withal, during the three weeks the picture has been before the public, over one hundred columns of free reading matter has been secured.

Through Mr. Reichenbach's efforts, representatives of the district attorney's office saw and endorsed the picture. Police department inspectors, ministers, authors, playwrights, composers, politicians and many other people, prominent in New York daily life have added their good words to the printed endorsements and the business at the Longacre has been a revelation.

There has not been a legitimate production this or last season which has procured more publicity than "Hypocrites." Special cartoons and artistic drawings by Nell Brinkley, Marjorie Stocking, Rube Goldberg, Lawrence Semon and Cora Morr, featured the daily papers, special articles by Dorothy Dix, Cora Moore, Victor Watson and other prominent writers kept the picture in the public mind all last week and from the way the papers began this week, with large stories on the special "minister's matinee" to be given February 4, it looks as though "Hypocrites" would remain at the Longacre throughout the remainder of the present season.

The receipts exceeded five thousand dollars last week. One of the strange things about the engagement of "Hypocrites" at the Longacre is that the highest price seats are sold out every performance and the low priced seats have to be forced.

NEW YORK EXCHANGE FOR KRITERION.

Mr. Charles F. Theall, who was formerly with the Mecca branch of the Universal Exchange, has joined the ranks of the Kriterion as manager of the Manhattan Kriterion Exchange, located at 730 Seventh Ave., at 48th St., New York.

"His Partner's Sacrifice"

A Red-Blooded Story of Western Mining Life Presented by the Kriterion Film Service.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

IT IS true that the "western" in films has been somewhat hackneyed, resulting in the fact that today a picture produced in a western atmosphere with western characters must be beyond the ordinary to be appreciated.

Thus it is with "His Partner's Sacrifice," which is substantially a good production. It appears under the Navajo brand and has in its main characters its director, Charles K. French and William Parsons. Its story has been developed with more than the ordinary amount of suspense. Its action is logical; there are no inconsistencies apparent, and its various strong situations have been led up to in thoroughly legitimate style. In it can be felt the pulse of true manhood; and perhaps herein lies one of the chief charms of the production.

The story finds its basis in a quarrel between two mining men, one of whom jumps the other's claim, and is shot for his trouble. The partner of the offender steps forward and bears the brunt of the crime, for the sake of his partner's wife and child, and sentenced to years in prison, but is later aided to escape by the man for whose crime he suffers.

Scene from "His Partner's Sacrifice" (Navajo).

The production has a continuous thread of action. It also lacks that crudeness which is frequently a noticeable quality in pictures of the western type. The escape from prison, and the chase by the prison guards is a thrilling bit of work, and the convict has our sympathy every minute of the time. There is a sincere regard for the smallest details in the making of the picture. There are many impressive scenes throughout the picture which serve to demonstrate the strength of the friendship of the two miners. There is also an excellent sample of photography displayed in the making of it; and altogether the production is one that will meet with the approval of almost any audience, inasmuch that the human side of the question has been well driven home.

KAUFFMAN WITH HUMANOLOGY COMPANY.

Reginald Wright Kauffman, whose remarkable novel, "The House of Bondage," published several years ago, has just approximated its tenth edition, a record unique for a work of contemporary fiction, has been placed under a long term contract to write plays for screen depiction.

Credit for this achievement is enlisting the services of one of the world's foremost novelists in picture play building belongs to Jack Rose, president of the Humanology Film Producing Company of Medford, Mass., a corporation which is responsible for two remarkable film plays recently issued through the offices of the United Film Service. These plays were "The Price He Paid," a visualization of Ella Wheeler Wilcox's great poem, and "Are They Born or Made?" a drama of gang methods and politics, written by Rose.

The announcement of the retention of Kauffman as a photoplaywright by the Humanology Company was accompanied by the further information that Mrs. Ruth Kauffman, wife of the well-known novelist, had also been placed under contract to act as scenario writer for the Medford concern. Mrs. Kauffman, who was formerly special writer on metropolitan journals, has contributed at frequent intervals to magazines and is known as a prolific writer of children's stories and verse.

Edgar Selwyn and Margaret Mayo in "The Arab"

EDGAR SELWYN and his equally distinguished wife, Margaret Mayo, have agreed to make their first screen appearances under the management of the Jesse L. Laskey Feature Play Co. This will all take place in connection with the picturization of Mr. Selwyn's own very famous and successful play. "The Arab," in which he was himself the star during its original engagement in New York at the Lyceum Theater. Mr. Selwyn, it is now officially announced, will interpret for the screen the same stellar role which he created for the stage.

Edgar Selwyn.

Mr. Selwyn and Miss Mayo, who is known as the author of such hits as "Baby Mine" and "Twin Beds," will start west for the Lasky studio in Hollywood, California, within the next few days. Though the picture version of "The Arab" is not to be released until late in the spring, because of the many preceding productions already announced and scheduled for release, Mr. Selwyn is anxious to get to California in time to see the finishing touches put on the Lasky picturization of his noted play, "The Country Boy," which is to be released on March 18. The Lasky office has therefore arranged for this to be done, and for him to begin work in the film of "The Arab" within a week after his arrival in California.

Though Miss Mayo is known principally as a dramatist she is also an actress, and she will also appear in the picture version of her husband's play.

NOTED SOCIETY LEADER IN FAMOUS PLAYERS PRODUCTION.

Through a casual item published in a theatrical journal last week, and immediately copied by a few society papers, it is disclosed that the lure of the stage—or rather of the screen—has drawn Mrs. Sybilla Pope, who is considered one of the most beautiful women in Fifth Avenue society circles, from the marble floors of fashionable reception rooms before the motion picture camera. She will appear for the first time on the screen in the Famous Players Film Company's four-part photoplay adaptation of Martha Morton's celebrated play, "The Bachelor's Romance," the screen version of which will present John Emerson in the title role, to be released February 11th.

One of the subtitles in the production that will appear on the screen will read as follows: "Jack meets an attractive society leader;" and the audience will have the added satisfaction of knowing that the scene contains true realism, and that a society leader indeed is posing for their amusement.

Mrs. Pope is the wife of Charles H. Pope, a wealthy cotton broker. Before her marriage she appeared in several Broadway successes, and while on the stage she was known for her beauty and grace.

It is not financial conditions that have persuaded Mrs. Pope to become a motion picture actress. She has a beautiful home at 247 Fifth avenue, where many elaborate society functions and receptions have been given in the last two years.

KLEINE FILMS "THE COMMUTERS" WITH IRENE FENWICK.

"The Commuters," that popular Cohan & Harris comedy drama, is being filmed by George Klein in his New York studio. Irene Fenwick, who is now playing the lead in the latest Broadway sensation, "The Song of Songs," at the Eltinge Theatre, has been engaged to play the lead. Her principal support has not yet been determined on, but it is known that several well known Broadway thespians are under consideration.

"The Explosion of Fort B-2"

Picture Playhouse Film Company Presents Thrilling Five Reel Production Introducing International Conspiracy.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE first impression gained from this excellent five-reeler, the story of which is enacted by clever European artists, is that rather a daring license has been taken in these days when picture suggestions of a pro-military nature are somewhat tabooed. This impression gradually wears off, however, as the story progresses, when the tendency to develop merely an interesting story, rather than an attempt to solve a national problem presents itself. Evidently care has been taken not to dwell too heavily on the national import of the question.

The story deals with the discovery of a new high explosive by an Italian inventor, which, being experimented with to the satisfaction of the Italian government, is accepted as a valuable aid in a contemplated breach with Austria from which war is expected to ensue.

Scene from "The Explosion of Fort B-2" (Picture Playhouse).

An Austrian spy set on the track of the inventor starts things moving in a melodramatic fashion. The kidnapping of the inventor on his way to keep an appointment with his sweetheart and his imprisonment in the magazine Fort B 2, where an attempt to extract from him the secret of the formula brings with it considerable suspense, which increases its tension as the picture progresses, reaching a thrilling climax when the death intended for the inventor is met by his enemy, and the inventor in place of being blown to death in the fort escapes without a scratch.

The picture has been played by an excellent cast who have done their best under careful direction. Some fine photographic effects have been obtained, and the production, which was presented in the rough to the press, should, with proper attention to subtitles and other important details, prove an especially attractive feature. One of its best scenes occurs with the escape of Sylvia, the sweetheart, who in her attempt to save her lover gets into the clutches of the spy. The escape is effectively made by means of a rope slung over a parapet of the castle in which she and her friend are imprisoned. The explosion is also an effective bit of work.

HOBBIES OF THE MOTION PICTURE STARS.

Motion picture stars all have their hobbies, just like other folks. After the day's work is done they feel the need of relaxation and enter enthusiastically upon pleasures.

Kathlyn Williams likes to read the classics, take a spin in an automobile, play tennis, and see motion picture plays.

Thomas Santschi is an accomplished piano player and gives piano concerts for the pleasure of his friends.

Tom Mix likes to ride a horse above everything else, but he has a sufficiency of horsemanship during the day's work and, after working hours, plays golf and billiards.

Stella Razeto cultivates flowers and spends a great deal of her spare time in her rose garden.

Bessie Eyton holds medals for winning expert swimming contests and she is also a skillful chauffeur.

Tyrone Power owns a summer home in New England, and his hobby is yachting.

Emotional Mr. Ince

Coaxes Tears from Ad. Kessel and Charlie Baumann While Rehearsing a Scene.

ONE of the secrets of Thomas H. Ince's success as a producer of emotion for the screen—a secret that is known only to those who are in daily association with the noted director-general—was revealed last week to Adam Kessel, Jr., and Charles O. Baumann, managers of the New York Motion Picture Corporation, during a visit they paid to the Inceville studios.

It chanced that the officials, who are now in California on their annual tour of inspection, went to Inceville on a day that Mr. Ince was devoting to the staging of a big scene for "The Sign of the Rose," the virile story of an Italian immigrant in which George Beban will be starred. They were escorted to the stage and stationed themselves on the sidelines of the "set" being used by the producer. This is what they saw:

Tom Ince.

Assembled in the squalid room of a tenement, depicting the home of Pietro, were nearly twenty slums. They had swarmed into the room out of sympathy and curiosity. Pietro's little daughter, Rosina, has been struck by an automobile. The scene was designed to show the grief of the motley throng when a policeman announces that the child is dead.

Mr. Ince began his instructions to his people in a moderate tone of voice. Gradually as he pictured the inevitable grief of the father it grew louder. His face twisted in illustration of the anguish to be suffered by Pietro. His arms went out in a passionate frenzy. His lips quivered. His eyes opened wide. His breast heaved petulantly. Then, rising to the pitch of his performance, he trembled in a paroxysm of grief, while a musician, concealed from view of the actors, coaxed sweet strains from a violin. The effect was powerful. Before his tremendous influence had weakened, Mr. Ince gave orders to "take" the scene and Messrs. Kessel and Baumann stood awe-stricken at the genuine tears that welled up in the eyes of the actors, and were seen to wipe away a few themselves.

CAN'T SUCCEED WITHOUT THE WORLD."

Moving Picture World, New York.

Gentlemen: Enclosed Find CK. for $3.00 for the World for 1915. I made plenty of money in 1914 and I give you part of the credit for furnishing me with up-to-date news at all times and I take all the journals pertaining to moving pictures, but I will have to give it to you as you are in the lead.

Any exhibitors that doesn't take the Moving Picture World can't expect to succeed. I will fine you $50.00 any time that you fail to get me copy on time. Yours very truly,

SIDNEY M. NUTT.

"POP" HOADLEY WITH SMALLWOOD.

C. B. Hoadley, familiarly known as "Pop" has assumed charge of the scenario department of the Smallwood Film Corporation, which is featuring Ethel Grandin. Mr. Hoadley was written many of the film successes in which Miss Grandin has appeared and will write a series of multiple reel stories in collaboration with the company's star in which she will soon appear. He is the author of "The Adopted Daughter," in which Miss Grandin assumed a dual role in characters exactly opposite, one of the unique sensations of the year. "Wildfire," in which Lillian Russell, Lionel Barrymore and a notable supporting cast posed, was adapted from the famous play by Mr. Hoadley and produced by the World Film Corporation in five reels.

R. H. Fox

J. Walter Lamb

Jerome Sobel

WORLD FILM PROFIT PLAN IN OPERATION

First of the Prizes to be Awarded to the Corporation's Successful Salesman

In November last the World Film Corporation announced the formation of a profit-sharing plan in which all the company's employees, to the number of several hundred, might participate, according to the value of their services. General Manager Lewis J. Selznick embodied his ideas in a thirty-two page booklet, which he is willing to send to anyone in the film business who is interested.

Now, about sixty days after the inauguration of the plan, the first prizes have been awarded to some of the salesmen who have earned the bonuses. Richard Fox of the Chicago branch, takes $100; J. Walter Lamb, $50, and Jerome Sobel, $25, both the latter of the New York branch. These three active young workers secured the greatest amount of business based on gross cash collections at the lowest expense during the first month of the profit-sharing plan's existence, starting the work on November 29 to December 26.

The quick response of the employees to the inducements held out to them shows that they appreciate the efforts made by Lewis J. Selznick to directly interest them in the success of the World Film Corporation. Besides the prize-winners, many other salesmen at World Film branches made rapid advances in business during the month for which figures are available. We are showing the portraits of these young salesmen who have been the first to profit by the co-operative principle which Selznick has pioneered. They are a trio of hustlers and worthy of commendation.

A MUSICAL BONANZA.

The Advertising Problem Solved for the "Feature Rights" Exhibitor.

ADVERTISING that is cheap, yet efficient, has ever been a vexing problem for the "feature rights" man. W. R. Hart, of "Vera Cruz Feature Film" fame, however, recently hit upon a scheme that has brought some wonderful results—a method that is as thoroughly cheap, simple and effective that it was immediately adopted by several others.

The great advantage of Mr. Hart's method is that it does away entirely with the necessity for advance advertising of any kind whatsoever, either newspaper space or handbill distribution. Briefly it is as follows:

Upon arriving in the community where he is to exhibit during the afternoon and evening, he engages an automobile and places in it a Deagan Electric Unaphone or Calliope—a new instrument which is manufactured by the J. C. Deagan firm of Chicago. With banners announcing feature attractions, he then drives about the community while a pianist holds keyboard in lap and plays as car progresses.

In this manner his message is brought to every man, woman and child, rich and poor alike, throughout every foot of the route. The appeal is direct, spectacular and pleasure-giving. It never fails and is never forgotten.

Nor is there any reason why this method is not just as efficacious for the exhibitor who is permanently located and who isn't playing to capacity. Especially is this true in view of the three-fold purpose of the instrument—viz: for street work, lobby concerts and as a pit attraction.

Duncan McRae, who is often cast for the heavy roles in Edison films, is a brother of Bruce McRae, now playing with the Ethel Barrymore stage success, "In the Shadow."

COVARRUBIAS TO RIDE IN PHOTOPLAY.

Nicholas Covarrubias, known to the entire Pacific Coast as the expert horseman and picturesque Spanish-California figure, who took the part of Don Gaspar de Portola in the historic first and second Portola fetes in San Francisco, has been engaged to take a special part in the production of "The Lily of Poverty Flat," in which Beatriz Michelena is starred. This feature will be released early in the spring through the World Film Corporation.

Covarrubias was a sensation at the first Portola celebration. Riding a spirited, curveting charger, wearing a saddle glittering with silver ornaments, he rode up Market street, between two dense throngs of enthusiastic people. Dressed in the costume of the gallant explorer, he doffed his ostrich-plumed hat to an ovation which not even Presidents have received on that famous San Francisco thoroughfare.

"MISHAPS OF MARCELINE" COMING.

He's made 'em laugh by thousands—that's why Marceline, the Hippodrome's famous clown was signed by Thanhouser for a side splitting rip-roaring comedy. It is. "Mishaps of Marceline" is the title and the release date March 7.

Naturally Marceline is the story, or rather what happens to him and that is plenty. As the headliner at the Hippodrome leading that laughing, limping line of fun-makers. Marceline established a world wide reputation as a sure cure for blues.

When a new production was being prepared at the "Hip" one thing was certain. Marceline's name was written down first. His wonderful exposition of the pantomimic art made him a natural convert to the screen. The Thanhouser Company engaged him and their wisdom in so doing was proven by the picture which Director Carroll Fleming has just completed.

Irene Wallace

AFTER having spent two years in motion picture work in New York City Miss Irene Wallace is preparing for her departure for Chicago, where she will join the forces of the Selig Polyscope Company. Miss Wallace expects to leave here early this month. She said that after remaining in Chicago a few weeks it is probable she will be transferred to the Pacific Coast studios of the company. Miss Wallace will thus have the opportunity of gratifying her ambition to appear in pictures produced on the Pacific Coast and extending her experience.

Irene Wallace.

Miss Wallace was for several years on the dramatic and vaudeville stage before joining the Victor company. Although born in New York City, of Scotch-Irish parentage, one of her first hits on the screen was in a Jewish story, "Jewish Freedom Under King Casimir of Poland," in which Miss Wallace had the lead. She has played in other Jewish characterizations in which her work has been praised. While with the Victor company Miss Wallace has played leads in many single, double and triple reel subjects, both drama and comedy. Personally she prefers working in comedy-dramas or in refined comedies.

Miss Wallace is a lover of outdoor life. She enjoys swimming and horseback riding. She drives her own car. She is also an artistic dancer.

NAVY MEN AT THE CUMBERLAND.

The patriotism of Francis A. Mangan, manager of the Cumberland Theatre, corner of Greene avenue and Cumberland street, Brooklyn, N. Y., fairly bubbled over when he booked the Universal two-part picture entitled "The Submarine Spy." Knowing that such a subject would appeal strongly to United States sailors, marines and officers of the battleships, Mr. Mangan wrote to the commander-in-chief of the Atlantic Fleet, several battleships of which were stationed in the Navy Yard, Brooklyn, enclosing complimentary tickets for the commanding officers, and asking permission to tack up upon the bulletin boards of the vessels letters to the effect that any sailor or marine in uniform who appeared at the Cumberland on the day the picture in question was shown that they would be admitted for 10 cents. The complimentary passes were gratefully received and distributed, and all of the officers except those on board the Florida, which sailed on the day the picture was booked, took advantage of the kindness extended to them by Mr. Mangan. A letter of regret was received from the captain of the Florida.

The announcement of "The Submarine Spy" appealed to Uncle Sam's jackies, and during the matinee there were, at a conservative estimate, 450 sailors who willingly paid 10 cents to see the picture. In the evening there were hundreds of others who had been given shore leave to see the show. There were 112 officers present during the evening.

The other pictures on the program were enjoyed as much as "The Submarine Spy," and many of the Jackies and officers on their way out who encountered Mr. Mangan expressed their appreciation for showing such interest in their behalf. To the general public the regular admission prices prevailed—10 and 15 cents.

WHADDAYA 'SPOSE SHE'S THINKIN' ABOUT.

Miss Gertrude McCoy, the Edison artist, whose animated personations and sprightly interpretations, have lent much charm to Edison pictures, is naturally very quiet. She seems to like to spend much time in thinking for her most characteristic attitude is one in deep thought, quite apart from the lively groups at the Edison studio.

Hugh Hoffman Branches Out

TO READERS of the Moving Picture World who have taken the publication for the past five years, the name of Hugh Hoffman will call forth a chain of memories. From the early days of the paper until last September he was a member of its staff, and his knowledge of motion pictures stood him well in his work.

Hugh Hoffman.

In his younger days he took a four-year art course in New York. While in his early twenties he joined the Gentry Brothers' shows as a trap drummer, but was promoted to the position of press agent, and for five years he traveled under canvas in America and Europe. Besides the Gentrys he was press agent for John Robinson's circus, Walter L. Main circus, the Buffalo Bill show and various theatrical companies.

Mr. Hoffman is an exceptional publicity man by virtue of the fact that he combines three prime qualifications for his work. He is a finished artist, an able writer and a typographical expert. It is seldom that an advertising man of such versatility is found. These attainments, added to his long association with the motion picture field, fit him particularly for motion picture publicity.

Before joining the staff of the Moving Picture World, Mr. Hoffman was an exhibitor of moving pictures in Jersey City, N. J., during the years 1907-8-9. He is once more in business for himself, having recently opened a fine set of offices in the Gaiety Theater Building, New York City. There he intends to devote his whole time to motion picture publicity, both for individuals and firms. He will also continue to make a specialty of those artistic advertising plates that have gained him the reputation of being one of the highest class publicity men in the business.

PEGGY BOURKE, GIRL-REPORTER-DETECTIVE.

Miss Peggy Bourke, of the Thanhouser Company, has just finished playing a girl-reporter-detective in "A Newspaper Nemesis," a forthcoming release. She plays opposite Harris Gordon, who is also a reporter. Of course, Peggy aids her hero-reporter in his work; discovers the headquarters of the band of thieves, rescues the jewels, and also gains the love of the reporter-detective with whom she is in love. Peggy says she likes to play these "detec-ative" parts. "They're so exciting—chasing thieves, rescuing diamonds and people, 'disguising oneself as a tough guy,' so that the crooks won't discover that you're a detective person, etc."

Miss Bourke is now being directed by Mr. Carroll Fleming in a one-reel comedy melodrama, "A Cure for Jealousy," in which she plays opposite Arthur Ashley, the well-known leading man. Before entering the motion picture field, Miss Peggy posed for those foremost artists in America: Harrison Fisher, Henry Hutt, Hamilton King, Cole Phillips, and many others. Miss Bourke is of the "artist's inspiration" type, with lustrous black hair, and large bonny blue eyes.

Peggy is keeping the scenario department busy these days all right. Now, they're writing a two-reeler for her, and she'll surely make them feel glad and proud they wrote it, when they see her portrayal on the screen.

UNIVERSAL FILMS MARTIN BROWN AND ROSZIKA DOLLY.

Roszika Dolly and Martin Brown, who are now being featured in George M. Cohan's big review, "Hello Broadway," at the Astor Theater, have been filmed in a special exhibition dance reel which will be released on February 23, by the Universal Film Manufacturing Company. In this, their first engagement before the camera, Mr. Brown and Miss Dolly arranged a wide variety of dances, consisting of the "Crinoline Polka," "The Waltz Classique," "The Clown Trot," "The Habanera Hesitation" and "Chopsticks."

Manufacturers' Advance Notes

"STOP THIEF" (Kleine).

George Kleine's five-part comedy, "Stop Thief," is founded on the Cohan & Harris stage success of that name, written by Carlyle Moore. The film features all the principals of the famous stage cast, with Mary Ryan and Harry Mestayer playing the leads of the light-fingered maid and her sweetheart.

Scene from "Stop Thief" (Kleine).

The story deals with kleptomania. A kleptomaniac is defined by Webster as a wealthy person of extraordinary absent-minded tendencies and morbid impulses. The mania usually demonstrates itself by the victim of it being discovered in the act of making a collection of valuable articles that do not belong to him.

There are two kleptomaniacs and two real crooks in "Stop Thief." Also there is a double wedding pending. Into this household a new maid introduces her sweetheart, a real crook. One of the kleptomaniacs is the millionaire father, and while the bride-to-be is aware of her father's predilection for stealing, she is ignorant of the fact that her future husband is so afflicted. One valuable article after another disappears in the most mysterious manner, and in the search for the culprit many funny situations are evolved.

RAMO HAS NEW STUDIO.

For the first time in its history the famous Ramo Film Company, Inc., will depart from its policy of exclusively manufacturing feature films and will begin producing single and double-reel photoplays. This departure in the firm's policy is due to its affiliation with the United Motion Picture Producers, Inc., a step which was taken only a few days ago and today for the first time officially announced.

The Ramo Company has just completed at Flushing, Long Island, a large studio building which has been made ready for occupancy in time to stage there the first of their output for the United Film Service. The new studio is notable for several innovations which will greatly facilitate the staging, photographing and chemical activities involved in the making of pictures.

LIFE PHOTO SUBJECTS STRONG IN NEW YORK.

The Noted Plays Film Exchange, of 110 West 40th street, have taken over from the Life Photo Film Corporation, "Captain Swift" and "Northern Lights," this makes their third release of the Life Photo Film Company's productions, as they also control the "Greyhound." Their territory consists of Greater New York and New York State. George Jacobs, manager of the booking department, reports that these subjects are booked solid for the month of February and partly into the month of March.

MONTGOMERY TO DIRECT FOR LIBERTY.

Frank E. Montgomery has been appointed director-general of the Liberty Feature Film Company of San Mateo, California. Mr. Montgomery was, for a long time, with the Universal, and later with the Kalem company, and was regarded as one of the foremost directors of western and Indian pictures in the business. He will produce the features for the Liberty company and will divide his time between the two studios owned by the company, one at Glendale and one at San Mateo.

Mona Darkfeather, who has been for so long associated with him, accompanies him to the new company, and Comanche, her world-known pinto pony, goes too, together with Frank's several automobiles and collection of Indian relics.

The Liberty company has a splendid cast of artists, including Marguerite Clayton, who is under contract to the company, Emery Johnson, the handsome young leading man; True Boardman, James Davis, Virginia Ames, Carl Stockdale, Vera Hewitt and other well-known and capable people. The release will be under the Kriterion program.

"PATSY IN A SEMINARY" (Lubin).

In this number Patsy certainly drops into big luck only to be ruthlessly thrown out at the zenith of his happiness, not only once, but twice and more of it. Mary, who has accepted a position as teacher at the Squills Seminary, interests herself and secures Patsy a job as gardener of the Institution. Nothing could be more joyful, for the young ladies think he is just too sweet for words. Patsy, of course, responds to their flirtations and for which he is fired out by Prof. Squills. This is awfully sad, but Mrs. Squills discovers that Patsy had been at college and excelled in athletics. She, favoring calisthenics, insists that she may retain him to drill the girls in physical culture. The young ladies are joyful, and Patsy proves an able tutor. The editor of a yellow newspaper draws attention to the fact that manual calis-thenics are hardly proper for the daughters of refined families. The families make a vigorous protest and Patsy must be removed. The girls are heartbroken and resolve to give him a midnight supper to express their regret. The function is held in the refectory, but the noise attracts the notice of Mary, the new teacher, who breaks up the party. The doors are barricaded and Patsy is lowered out of the window by a rope, but he falls through a skylight into Mrs. Squills' room. She tries to conceal him, but the professor came in on the scene and Patsy is again kicked out into a cold and heartless world. As the stories progress, Clay M. Greene evidently excels himself.

Scene from "Patsy in a Seminary" (Lubin).

"BAGS OF GOLD" (Lubin).

A powerful, three-reel drama written by Shannon Fife, who evolves many of the Lubin sensational stories. Greed for gold is the keynote of the story, in which a false friend conceives the idea of stealing a quantity of gold which has been intrusted to him for safe keeping. He is, however,

Scene from "Bags of Gold" (Lubin).

checkmated by three professional crooks, who succeed in securing jobs in his household. A system of stealing the bags of gold is arranged with admirable cunning, but frustrated in the end. The three professional crooks all meet violent deaths and the original would-be thief is taught a lesson which induces him to follow a life of integrity. A pretty love story runs through the picture which makes the drama end happily. The cast includes Justina Huff, Clarence Elmer, John Smiley, Edward J. Peil and several other Lubin favorite players.

"WITH A GIRL AT STAKE" (Premier).

Those who remember the Premier melodrama, "The Hello Girl of Angel Camp," will find an even more exciting offering in "With a Girl at Stake," which will shortly be released. Lillian Hamilton, the girl, is strapped on top of a stage coach by the heavy, Jos. J. Franz. Then, with the four horses racing madly and headed for a broken bridge, follows a thrilling chase until the girl manages to free herself and makes a spectacular jump from the stage into the arms of one of the pursuing cowboys. Frederick Church plays the girl's lover, and others in the cast are Malcolm Blevins, Jay Morley, and Otto Meyer. The producer is Jos. J. Franz, and the author, Karl R. Coolidge.

Scene from "With a Girl at Stake" (Premier).

COMPLETE CAST FOR "THE HIGH HAND."

"The High Hand," a five-part photoplay from the novel by Jacques Frutelle, produced by the Favorite Players, is now nearing completion at the studio in Los Angeles. Carlyle Blackwell enacts the leading part of Jim Warren of Warborten, a mill hand, who successfully works his way up to the governorship of the State. Edna Tillinghast, the heroine of the story, who furnishes the heart interest, is the character enacted by Neva Gerber. William Brunton, as Big Tom Simmonds, a saloon keeper, and Douglas Gerrard, as Francis Everard Lewis, the political State boss, fight Jim Warren tooth and nail for the possession of the political machine of the State. John Sheehan, as Franques, secretary to Lewis, enacts the part of the go-between, who double-crosses Lewis, and unsuccessfully tries to do the same thing to Jim Warren. The story abounds in excellent action, and the machinations of the political intriguers form an excellent background for the clear-cut delineation of sterling manhood portrayed by Carlyle Blackwell, as Jim Warren.

"IN THE TWILIGHT" (American).

Another of the famous "Flying A" Light Series, put out under the direction of Thos. Ricketts, is replete with gorgeous settings, natural and artificial, embellished with appropriate Scene from "In the Twilight" (American).

tints which enhance the artist merit very perceptibly. The photography and technique are superb and the subject is deserving of the highest success. The scenario was prepared by Marc Edmund Jones. The release has been sent for Monday, Feb. 15, 1915.

NASH PICTURES ON THE STATE RIGHTS.

The Nash Motion Picture Company, Inc., has decided to release their output on the state right plan, believing that this is the best and most profitable way to distribute their releases. This company specializes in wild animal photoplays, which are produced in their large studio and zoo in Los Angeles, California. Wild animals are used throughout the films and there are many thrilling situations in the picture.

The Nash Company has had an extra fine line of paper made for their first release, which is entitled "Unto the Darkness" and produced in four parts, and is claimed to be one of the best animal pictures ever produced. This company will release about one, three or four reel feature every thirty days and wild animals will be featured in all their productions.

SPECIAL FEATURE CO. GETS MORE PICTURES.

Messrs. Irving and Woody, representing the Special Features Company of Seattle, Wash., announce that they have closed contracts with Mittenthal Brothers for "The Human Bloodhound" and "The Red Flame," both four-part features, for the States of Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana and Utah.

"A MODERN MAGDALEN" SCENE (Life Photo.).

It was noon hour; the men were just leaving their benches, when a thick curling smoke was seen coming out of the factory windows of the Otis Sugar Refineries.

Panic soon reigned; the cool heads at the mill made every effort to reassure the panicky ones, but their efforts were in vain. The fire alarm rang its warning through the mill, and soon the fire escapes, stairs and elevators were filled with employees who preferred to be on the outside, looking in.

Scene from "A Modern Magdalen" (Life Photo.)

The Jersey fire department soon arrived, while the hose on the engine was being attached and above the clanging of bells and the shrill whistles of the New York and New Jersey fire boats, could be heard the loud, cool, commanding voice of Will S. Davis, the Life Photo director. He was urging on Miss Catharine Countiss, Lionel Barrymore and the rest of "A Modern Magdalen" cast, through the sensational mill scenes that will be a feature in this production.

Howard Tobias, the director's hustling assistant and the champion flame maker and smoke pot lighter, was carried out by the firemen, burning up—with excitement. The only flames discovered by the firemen were a few young ones, who they had recently met at a German Schutzenfest.

"A VOICE IN THE NIGHT" (Eclair).

There is always something mysterious and unexplained connected with the darkness of night and its strange noises, and it is through the peculiar circumstance of a cry in the dark and its stirring results that the story of "A Voice in the Night," the two-part Eclair drama, grips and holds us. From the brain of Anthony P. Kelly, the versatile creator of original photoplay plots, the story is most strange and interest-compelling. A young reporter passing a lonesome spot hears the sounds of a death struggle and then a voice. The murderer escapes, but the voice remains in the memory of the reporter, and he wages he will capture the guilty one through it. Time passes, and, sent one day to cover a murder trial, the reporter is dumfounded to hear issuing from the lips of the stern judge on the bench the voice. After the session he goes to the judicial chambers and there hears unfolded a strange tale of a sister in the power of an unscrupulous government agent who has entrapped her husband, a government official. The scoundrel demands his price; the wife, to save her husband, is about to pay it, when she thinks of her brother, the judge. She tells him the story. He sees but one way out of it; the rest the reporter knows. Leaving the judge's chambers he passes slowly down the steps with the memory of the voice silent forever in his bosom. H. Stanley, as the young newspaper man, and Lottye Fowler, as the wife, give finished and artistic performances of the two difficult roles. This Eclair production will be released Wednesday, February 17th.

Scene from "Voice in the Night" (Eclair).

"THE VAN THORNTON DIAMONDS" (Selig).

"The Van Thornton Diamonds," paying the wages of sin, is a Selig drama in two reels, to be released Monday, February 15. It was produced by F. J. Grandon from the story written by J. Jenette. Such star players as Edith Johnson,

Scene from "The Van Thornton Diamonds" (Selig).

Lamar Johnstone, Franklyn Hall and Catherine Henry are featured.

Alan Thurston is a clever thief who preys on society, selecting the wealthy classes as his victims. He carries out the role of a man of ample means.

Katherine Selwyn, an orphan, is an art devotee, and earns a modest living by painting landscapes. Thurston creeps into her good graces and finally marries her. He wishes for a partner in his crimes, but Katherine is entirely ignorant of Thurston's profession. After they are wedded, Thurston tells his bride what he expects of her and, horror-stricken, she flees from the roof of her newly-made husband.

Mrs. Van Thornton issues invitations to a house party and Thurston resolves to be a guest for the opportunity it may give him to steal the Van Thornton diamonds. He accidentally meets Katherine once more, pays her rent in the tenement and, in desperation, she agrees to come back to him.

Thurston attends the party and directs Katherine to come in the guise of a newspaper reporter to interview the hostess in reference to the approaching festivities. He directs that she shall pretend to sprain her ankle in order to permit her to remain in the house and locate the diamonds.

The trick succeeds and Katherine locates the jewel casket, but in a fit of remorse, she refuses to state the whereabouts of the jewels to Thurston, and she places them in another locality so that he cannot find them.

Mrs. Van Thornton's brother becomes suspicious of Thurston, and succeeds in rescuing Katherine from the thief's anger, when she refuses to tell him where the jewels are concealed. Thurston draws a revolver and attempts to shoot the intruder. In the struggle the revolver is accidentally discharged by Thurston, the bullet enters Thurston's body with fatal results. The inference is then drawn by all the guests that Thurston has committed suicide.

Katherine is forgiven and the interest shown by Mrs. Van Thornton's brother in the beautiful artist, indicates that future happiness is in store for them.

"AN AMATEUR PRODIGAL" (Essanay).

A touching drama with a strong human interest element is developed from the two act photoplay, "An Amateur Prodigal," dramatized from the story in the Short Stories Magazine, by Albert Payson Terhune. The plot revolves about the confusing of two men of the same name, one a Scene from "An Amateur Prodigal" (Essanay).

wayward son and the other a rich bachelor. The bachelor gets the letters intended for the prodigal, telling of a dying woman's love for her boy and her wish to see him once more before she dies. He carries out the part of the son. Almost blind with old age and her infirmities, the mother is deceived into believing that her son has reformed and returned to her, and she dies happy. After the woman's death the son, a thief, returns home, hoping to profit from the estate. The pretender compels him to leave on threat of exposure. The prodigal's sister, however, learns that the rich bachelor is not her real brother and asks an explanation. He tells her how he had received the letters through having the same name and was touched by their pathos. He also confesses his love for the girl and she finds a husband instead of a brother. Ruth Stonehouse and Joseph Byron Totten play the leading parts.

SMALLWOOD MAKING TWO-REEL DRAMAS.

The Smallwood Film Corporation is specializing in making two-reel dramas and comedy dramas under the Grandin Brand with Ethel Grandin playing the principal female roles.

Among the subjects to be shortly released are "The Verdict," a two-reel, heart-interest story with an extraordinary plot. This subject will prove doubly interesting because many of the scenes are laid in the City Club, in actual offices and in residences, through the aid of a portable lighting system.

Another two-reeler worthy of mention is "The Affinities," a comedy drama portraying the complications that may arise from too much jealousy on the part of a young couple. The wife suspects her husband of infidelity because she has seen him enter a restaurant with his employer's daughter. She hires a detective who finds him greeting a pretty cousin with a kiss. Hubby finds the detective under the bed and his wife's long-lost brother in the house. The divorce court is the result and it is not until after the decree is granted that the errors are discovered.

MASTERPIECE COMPANY CEASES PRODUCTION.

The Masterpiece Co. has ceased production and the players have disbanded. Many will remain in Los Angeles, while some will probably hunt positions elsewhere. "Jack Chanty," the last picture, is finished and was run last week at a local theater. Al. W. Filson has already joined the Griffith forces.

BUILDING ACTIVITY AND INCREASE OF DIRECTORS IN MUTUAL STUDIOS.

The Majestic-Reliance Mutual studios in Hollywood, Cal., are the scenes of great building activities these days. A force of carpenters is busily engaged in erecting an enclosed studio, where four companies can work either day or night. The structure will be electrically lighted throughout. The stage itself will measure 60 by 80 feet. A huge open-air stage, measuring 50 by 100 feet, also is being built. This includes a property room and scene dock. A building for housing the dynamos to furnish the studios with electrical power also is in the course of construction.

So great has been the public demand for Majestic and Reliance releases that Director General D. W. Griffith has added several directors to his corps. The new members include George Nicols, Paul Powell, R. A. Walsh, George Siegmann and G. A. Berabger. Including Director General Griffith, there now are twelve directors engaged in directing Majestic, Reliance and Komic productions for the Mutual program.

KRAUS DISPLAY AT PANAMA EXPOSITION.

The accompanying illustration is of the exhibit at the Panama exposition of the various publications for the motion picture industry which the Kraus Manufacturing Company is showing in connection with its other commercial work and represents the highest art in hand colored reproductions for advertising purposes. This exhibit is located in the Palace of Varied Industries Building, and is in charge of George Breck, of the San Francisco office, which is located at 70 Turk street. This shows great enterprise on the part of this concern, as there is no doubt that many of the exhibitors from all over the world will visit the Panama exposition and no better method of exploitation for absolute contact with their publications than this display could be conceived. As the sale of goods on the ground is prohibitive, the company has arranged so that orders for all goods can be taken at the booth and delivered from its local office. It is making many special art reproductions with the view of at least landing the gold medal for artistic and original lobby displays and souvenirs. Besides this, the Kraus Manufacturing

Kraus Exhibit at Panama Exposition.

Company is preparing to sell for distribution to the public in general an entire set of post cards of all the popular players in the films comprising about 500 names. The pictures represented in this exhibit are in size from a post card to a life size painting.

Notes of the Trade.

ONCE MORE Francis Ford and Grace Cunard have produced a veritable masterpiece in "The Heart of Lincoln," a Gold Seal Civil War drama. One scene in particular will excite favorable comment wherever the film will be shown. It is a double exposure showing Lincoln sitting by the fireside and picturing in his mind's eye a battle raging in the fields. This bit of imaginative production is done in a wonderful manner and must be seen to be appreciated.

* * *

Over a thousand dollars in two days in a house seating three hundred persons, at a fifty-cent admission, is the record of "Cabiria" in Jacksonville, Fla. The Itala Film Company's report from H. R. Mason, who is exploiting the famous production in the South, brings this information.

* * *

Irving Cummings, the famous photo star, is to make his first appearance for American in "Beauty" productions, under title of "The Happier Man"—release date Tuesday, Feb. 16. It is not determined whether Mr. Cummings will continue in "Beauty" productions, but for the time being he will participate in some of these popular pictures.

* * *

Miss Lottie Briscoe, the Lubin star, is achieving quite a reputation as an author. In this month's Picture Magazine there is a very interesting article from her pen on the relation which moving pictures have to the war spirit, and in the "Green Book," issued next week, she writes entertainingly of Messrs. Bushman, Baggot and Arthur Johnson under the title of "Leading Men I Have Met."

* * *

From the Selig company of players who recently arrived at the Canal Zone comes word that motion pictures are immensely popular on the Isthmus. One Selig actor writes: "Everytime a Selig wild animal picture is advertised, it is the signal for a crowded theater." It is further stated that the South American countries are expressing desires for motion pictures of American manufacture, above all others.

* * *

"Which Would You Rather Be?" Beauty's new release in the Mutual program shows Joseph Harris and Webster Campbell playing opposite each other as a couple of drummers who meet two girls across a lunch counter in a country town.

* * *

Albert C. Froome, for many seasons the headliner at the New York Hippodrome, has been drafted for "The Twenty Million Dollar Mystery," Thanhouser's big serial. Mr. Froome will play the role of a wealthy Montana mine owner, who was a friend of Zudora's father in the days when both were prospecting. Mr. Froome has earned for himself the sobriquet of "the actor unafraid." There has not yet been presented a stunt which causes him to hesitate.

* * *

Frank Fisher Bennett, the well-known juvenile leading man, has returned to Mutual-Reliance plays after an absence of several months, and appears in the two-reel feature, "Heart Beats," with Francelia Billington, Sam de Grasse and F. A. Turner. "Heart Beats" was directed by Jack Adolfi.

* * *

Ruth Blair, a comely young actress who is sure to make a name for herself in pictures, made her first screen appearance in a Smallwood film production entitled "The Affinities." More will be heard of her later.

* * *

George A. Lessey of the Imp (Universal) company is directing King Baggot in a one-reel fantasy, "The Streets of Make-Believe," in which "King" has a role peculiarly adapted to his personality.

* * *

Fan Bourke, the famous comedienne of the Thanhouser forces, has leaped a great gap in screen vocations. Miss Bourke has made a country wide reputation as a scrub-woman, carrying a subtle comedy touch. Recently she was cast to play a Madonna. Miss Bourke when advised nearly collapsed. "Me?" she exclaimed to Cast Director Frank Grimmer. "Play a Madonna? Sure, I'll do it. For years I've done nothing but comedy scrub women until I've almost got house maid's knee. But watch me as a Madonna." And watch everyone did. Miss Bourke's portrayal of the role in a picture called "The Master's Model" proved the great versatility of the girl whose face and figure has so long been framed in rags, and she scored a hit.

* * *

The American Studios at Santa Barbara have taken on an unusually busy atmosphere these days. Pres. Hutchinson has been very active in the acquisition of new talent and stellar attractions from far and near are vying with each other in their display of histronic efficiency, all of which bids fair for further conquests by the American forces.

* * *

Upon numerous occasions entire villages have been erected by the Selig Polyscope Company to add realism to pictureplays. A small fortune was invested in special scenic effects, etc., when "The Adventures of Kathlyn" were filmed. An entire vilage, even to the name, was created at Jungle-Zoo studios recently for the production of a series of two-reel rural comedies.

* * *

Peggy Burke has come into her own. This charming little member of Thanhouser's forces has just completed a picture called "A Newspaper Nemesis," in which she has the lead. It is a story of newspaper work, with plenty of thrills interwoven with delightful situations giving Miss Burke an opportunity to display her talents. John Harvey directed the picture.

The All Star Film Rental Co. of 110 West 40th street, New York City, is booking the Itala four-reel "Cabiria-Stars" production, "The Treasure of the Louzats," with Lydia Quaranta in the leading role, for New York state and northern New Jersey. Walter Isaac, general manager of the All Star Film Rental Co., reports great activity among exhibitors who are eager to show this new film following the tremendous success of "Cabiria."

* * *

Pauline Bush masquerades as a jockey and actually wins a race on the track at Exposition Park, Los Angeles, in "All for Peggy," a new Universal film. Generally, a double is used for this purpose, but Miss Bush insisted on riding the race, never dreaming it would be so thrilling and realistic, and when she actually won, it was really too much!

* * *

Will Stevens, Thanhouser's comedy director, has just completed a picture called "Little Bobby," featuring Helen Badgley.

* * *

The filming of the Essanay photoplay, "Graustark," from the novel by George Barr McCutcheon, now is completed. The scenic effect is of a beauty and gorgeousness that cannot be surpassed. Part of the scenes were taken in New York and Washington. Francis X. Bushman takes the leading part, that of the young American who wins a princess.

* * *

Miss Agnes Vernon, leading lady with Charles Giblyn's company of Nestor players at the Universal Hollywood studios, announced her engagement this week to A. Deuce, special staff writer for the Newspaper Enterprise Association.

* * *

Edison Director James W. Castle, who has been director and owner of some of the most successful stage plays, was a member of the famous old Daly Stock company and ranks as one of his treasures the last "call" sheet posted in that historic old theater.

* * *

Director Fred A. Kelsey, of the Griffith-Mutual forces, has been making a careful study of the duties of a police reporter in order to direct his newspaper plays more intelligently. While he was at the receiving hospital recently a woman who had taken poison with suicidal intent was brought in. After she had been attended by the surgeons she told a story which the director will use as the basis for a scenario.

* * *

As a committee to approve of the pictures taken of Girard College, Philadelphia, which are to be shown at the Panama Exposition, Dr. C. Herrick, president, Mr. Alfred Moore and Mr. F. O. Zesinger visited the Edison studio Monday, and expressed themselves as thoroughly pleased with the results. One of the pictures shows fifteen hundred boys dining at once, the college devoting itself solely to boys' educational welfare.

* * *

Howell Hansel, Thanhouser's famous chief of productions, has completed the final episode of "The Million Dollar Mystery." In it the mystery is solved. How? Wait little children and you shall see it when it appears on the screen on Feb. 22. You will learn then what becomes of Countess Olga, Stanley Hargreaves and Florence, and too, what is very important, the place where the $1,000,000 was hidden all the time.

* * *

Director Charles Brabin, Edison, is now finishing the last picture in the "Lord Stranleigh" series and is making every effort to make it a fitting and beautiful climax to this unusual series. Director Brabin has traveled in nearly every civilized country and is also a collector of antiques. His travel-lore and artistic perception of detail value have enabled him to turn out some remarkably beautiful picture effects.

* * *

"Sheriff" Arthur Mackley once more is seen in the picturesque role of the Western sheriff in "The Deputy's Chance that Won," a new Griffith-Mutual release in the Mutual program. W. E. Lawrence and Florence Crawford also are in the cast. A thrilling fight between two outlaws and the deputy is one of the features of this production.

* * *

Willis L. Robards' latest production at the Premier studio, Santa Paula, Cal., is "The Girl and the Butterfly," with Frederick Church, Edythe Sterling, W. L. Robards and Walter Rodgers. A horde of real butterflies were used in the filming of the picture, which is one of the novel offerings of the year. Karl R. Coolidge is the author.

* * *

A legend of Indian life is told in "Un-da-wa-Nek." The title of the picture translated means "The Boundary Line," a Reliance play produced by Sheriff Mackley at the Mutual studios. The plot deals with the feud of two powerful Indian tribes over a boundary line. The cast includes Dark Cloud, the well-known Indian actor, Teddy Sampson, Dove Eye, Tom Wilson and Roy Myers. The scenario was written by Dark Cloud. "Un-da-wa-Nek" is released in the Mutual program.

* * *

The Bio Film Company of 135 West 44th street purchased the rights to "The Avalanche," a five-part feature release of the Life Photo Film Corporation, and all of the productions of that company for the coming year, for the state of New Jersey. Mr. Mundt, who is the president of the Bio Film Company, also contemplates purchasing the New Jersey rights to "The Ordeal," another five-part feature release of the Life Photo Company.

* * *

S. E. Sherman, proprietor of the Sherman Famous Feature Film Co., Boston, Mass., who is a pioneer of the feature film business of New England, visited New York City during last week looking over large features for his territory. Mr. Sherman is a hustler and is pushing "After the Ball" and Beulah Poynter in "Lena Rivers" with great success.

S. S. Hutchinson, president of the American Film Manufacturing Company, has purchased the moving picture rights of Lloyd Osborne's popular novel, "Infatuation," and Phyllis Lane and Cyril Adair shortly will be seen on the screen in a multiple reel feature production thereof. Margherita Fisher and Harry Pollard are to play the leading parts. The production will be released in the Mutual program.

* * *

"The Fangs of the Underdog" is the title of a two-reel story written by Joseph Gollomb which will be produced shortly by Harry Myers of the Victor (Universal) company. In this story Gollomb has succeeded in keeping the climax a mystery to the end. There are three principals in the story, a woman and two men. Both men want the woman. One of them gets her. And the one who does not get her takes a peculiar revenge.

* * *

Miss Iva Sheppard, who will be remembered as a leading woman with the Universal on the coast and with the Essanay company, appears in the Smallwood Film Corporation production of "The Escape" which wil be released in the United Film Service under the Grandin brand.

* * *

Most folks think that comedians never risk their lives in the pictures, However, Lee Moran, the famous Nestor comedian, has upset this belief by enacting a dare-devil stunt in "Nellie, The Pride of the Fire House." In a thrilling chase scene over some roof tops, Lee jumped on the cornice of one building which extended two feet above the roof and goes through some funny antics which, while they are very humorous, put the life of our friend in danger. But—he should worry.

* * *

Having seen Ben Wilson in so many dramatic roles, it was quite a treat to see him portraying the role of an intoxicated hack driver in "The Adventures of a Sea-Going Hack," Rex comedy. He is very droll and the humorous plight in which he finds himself forms a delightful climax to an amusing story.

* * *

Harry Bryan, managing director of the Metropolitan Booking Offices, 1316 Vine street, Philadelphia, is handling the Itala line of features in eastern Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware, Virginia and District of Columbia. While "Cabiria" holds the record for rentals and receipts, "The Treasure of the Louzats," in four reels, is proving a close second in point of demand for early bookings. Lydia Quaranta, the star of "Cabiria," is the magnet in this new film.

* * *

Miriam Nesbitt, the Edison favorite leading woman, attributes her choosing a stage career to an odd source. She had invented a hook and eye and took it to have it patented to an old family friend. The friend got interested in theatricals, forgot the "patent," which is now on the market and has made a small fortune—for another who took out the patent. However, the friend, who is now a theatrical magnate, started Miss Nesbitt on the career she longed for.

* * *

Boyd Marshall, leading man for the Princess Company, created a riot last week in New Rochelle by strolling along Main street garbed as a debutante calmly smoking a pipe.

* * *

Charlotte Mineau has been adjudged the champion woman skater of the Essanay company. In a contest at the Hockey rink on the Essanay grounds she gaves a marvelous exhibition of fancy skating and speeding. She was awarded the first prize, a pair of the finest skates to be obtained.

* * *

C. N. Mortenson hopes to get many laughs by his work in "College Days," a new Kay Bee production released in the Mutual program. He plays the part of Jimmy Cripps, a very studious "grind," who constantly is maltreated by other students.

* * *

Thomas Commerford gives an excellent presentation of the character of Dr. Lamarde, inventor and philosopher in the Essanay photoplay, "Thirteen Down." His interpretation is accurate and virile.

* * *

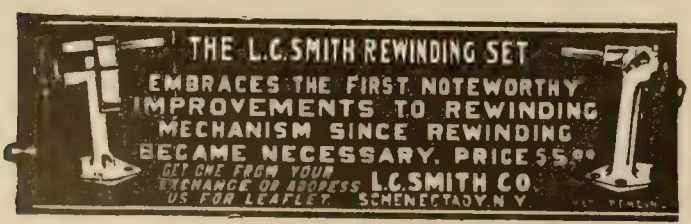
Albert W. Hale, formerly with Vitagraph and other concerns, has joined the Premier Company at Santa Paula, California, and is busily producing Western dramas.

* * *

The scenario for "What Might Have Been," the two-reel Majestic feature drama, produced by Jack O'Brien, was written by Mrs. F. E. Woods, wife of the scenario manager of the Majestic-Reliance-Mutual companies. In this production, Mary Allen, who scored such a noteworthy success as the mother in D. W. Griffith's feature production, "The Battle of the Sexes," appears in the role of an old woman who compels her nephew to lead the life of a criminal, despite his attempts to be straight.

* * *

More than 700 letters from exhibitors and photo fans have been received at Universal City inquiring regarding accommodations in Los Angeles and in Universal City during the ceremonies attending the opening of Universal City on March 15. President Carl Laemmle, Robert Cochrane and Joseph Brandt will arrive at the coast on the tenth of March.



THE L.C.SMITH REWINDING SET
EMBRACES THE FIRST NOTEWORTHY IMPROVEMENTS TO REWINDING MECHANISM SINCE REWINDING BECAME NECESSARY. PRICE $5.00
GET ONE FROM YOUR EXCHANGE OR ADDRESS US FOR LEAFLET
L.C.SMITH CO.
SCHENECTADY, N.Y.

Eastman Stock
PRINTING and DEVELOPING 4c
Per Foot

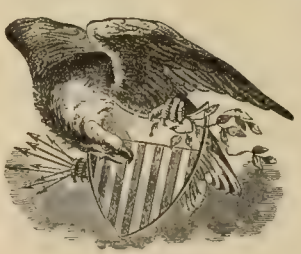
KEEN-O-SCOPE CO.
MANUFACTURERS
PHILADELPHIA, PA.

TITLES
5c
Per Foot
247 North 11th Street

FILM TITLES
PERFECT IN EVERY RESPECT
10c PER FOOT AND WORTH IT.
INDUSTRIAL MOVING PICTURE CO.
223-233 W. Erie Street, Chicago

We Can Equip Your Theatre Complete
We are Distributors for the Power's, Edison, Motiograph and Simplex Machines, and Genuine parts, also Poster Frames, Indirect and Semi-Indirect Lighting Fixtures, Tickets, Screens, etc.
We sell for cash or on the easy payment plan.
Write today for our new catalog just off the press.
AMUSEMENT SUPPLY COMPANY,
160 No. Fifth Avenue, Chicago, Illinois.

Moving Picture Theatre Mailing Lists for Sale
20,192, covering United States and Canada, price $40.00, or $3.50 per thousand for such states as you want.
1025 Film Exchanges, U. S..... $4.00
109 Manufacturers and Studios, U. S..... 1.00
210 Moving Picture Machine and Supply Dealers stating line of goods handled..... 1.50
231 Film Exchanges, Foreign Countries..... 3.00
520 Moving Picture Theatres, Foreign Countries.... 3.00
Ask us for full particulars.
TRADE CIRCULAR ADDRESSING CO.
166 West Adams St., Chicago. Established 1880.



THEATRE MANAGERS:
See
Louise M. Marion's
Great War Pictures
and Patriotic Novelties
Which crowd the theatres.
Louise M. Marion
419 West 21st St., New York

Home School for Children from four to twelve years of age. Home life with individual attention. Ideal location in beautiful New England village. Limited number. Board and Tuition at reasonable terms, payable monthly in advance.
Rev. F. M. and Mrs. E. S. Hollister
MYSTIC, CONN.

"THOSE PLAYER SLIDES"
Just think of it! Sample 15c. $1.75 a dozen.
You need them. Get busy.
NIAGARA SLIDE COMPANY, Lockport, N. Y.

FICHTENBERG GOES TO NEW YORK.

Herman Fichtenberg left for New York Wednesday to attend to meeting of the directors of the Consolidated Film and Supply Company, in which he is a large stockholder. As far as could be learned this will be a routine meeting, but one thing is of interest, and of particular interest to the New Orleans office; that is that the company will house its New Orleans office in a special suite at least as expensive and artistic as the Dallas office, which brings enthusiastic comment from every visitor.

BALMY WEATHER.

A. G. Shear, manager here for the Consolidated, recently returned from a trip to the Dallas office, where, he says, he saw his first snow in fourteen years, he having been sticking close to Louisiana for some time. Mr. Shear, on being interviewed, said that it was a beautiful day—which urban remark could not be successfully contradicted. In this connection, the wonderful weather which this territory has been enjoying for some time, Mr. Shear said that the balmy atmosphere had had a distinctly stimulating effect on the business from the exhibitors' standpoint.

PEARCES GROWING.

Southern Amusement Promoters to Build in Detroit—Fred M. Pearce Talks About Business.

Josiah Pearce & Sons, "movie" magnates with headquarters here and interests in a dozen cities, will, it is authoritatively stated, enter Detroit, Mich. Fred W. Pearce, northern manager for the Pearce interests, said that his company was considering such a move, but that nothing definite could be given out at this time. Pearces' Detroit house, it is understood, will be in the general vicinity of 1490 Jefferson avenue, East, and its establishment will mark Pearces' picture invasion of the North.

Fred W. Pearce expressed himself as being highly optimistic over the business outlook throughout the country. He said that he was particularly impressed with the fine new houses he had seen recently in the North and East and the constantly heightening plane of the business.

In Detroit, he says, some of the best houses are far from the business center and thrive largely on auto trade. He says that automobiles have made the suburban houses a go.

Josiah Pearce, who also recently returned from a tour of inspection, will remain in New Orleans for the rest of the winter, looking after the local interests.

A. H. KAUFMAN LOCATED AT MEMPHIS.

A. H. Kaufman, widely known here as a supply man, has gone to Memphis to take charge of the office at that point of the United Program Film Service of Louisiana, Inc., which recently absorbed Warner's Features. The Nashville office of the Warner regime is being maintained for the present to take care of rush business, though the territory now served from Nashville will later be served from Memphis. R. M. Savini, manager of the merged companies, is spending most of his time in Pullmans now, jumping from one office to another getting things into shape.

OTHER NEW ORLEANS NOTES.

K. A. Bugbee, New Orleans manager for the World Film Corporation, has just returned from Dallas, Tex. He is highly optimistic over the general outlook. As to Dallas, he is enthusiastic. Among the number of other complimentary things he says about Dallas he says that it is one of the very best exhibitors' towns in the country, because, he says, they do not cut rates on each other, but maintain a fair scale which enables them to present first-class pictures right along and still make a good profit.

The Coquille Studio

New Producing Company's Studio Is Ready—Ideally Situated, with Many Fresh Backgrounds to Draw From—Plenty of Water, Woods, the Bayou Country Old Mansions and Romantic Places Ready at Hand—Some of the Players Already at Work—Company Needs a Funny Man.

Moving Picture World Special Southern Newspaper Bureau.

WORK on the Coquille Film Company's new glass-inclosed studio at New Orleans, noted in the World of Jan. 30, is being rushed to completion under the personal supervision of Director Rene Plaissetty. Mr. Plaissetty recently returned from New York, bringing with him the news of the sale of his company's output, on contract, to Pathe Freres. The consummation of this deal, which had been pending almost since the organization of the company with Mr. Plaissetty as director, giving the New Orleans company a certain market for three and five-reel pictures, has made the New Orleans company a working organization and it will make its first release within a few weeks, releasing six reels per month. The studio, says Mr. Plaissetty, was complete and ready for work by Feb. 1.

The company is working daily. The location of the studio is ideal for this purpose. Not only has it the famous "Vieux Carre" to draw on but every kind of scene, except mountain, is available within a short radius of the site. In front flows beautiful, historic Bayou St. John, in rear is a bit of woods. Around the corner is City Park, noted for its natural beauties, and a little further away Lake Pontchartrain, the Mississippi, the Gulf of Mexico, and the beautiful bayou country of Evangeline, the country of the Acadians.

The building that houses the company is quite a picture in itself, an old Spanish mansion with a ruined formal garden in front and a number of fine trees. The garden is being restored.

Mr. Plaissetty in the sixty days since his connection with the Coquille company has built up a company which he believes will enable his studio to turn out pictures of the greatest excellence. The company includes a number of actors of experience and reputation, Klas Van Heel among them, together with at least two whom Mr. Plaissetty regards as finds. These are Miss Leatrice Zeidler, ingenue lead, and Miss Lucy Leveque, heavy. Both Miss Zeidler and Miss Leveque will be featured, the latter in comedy. Miss Zeidler is slated for stardom.

Both of these young ladies are natives of New Orleans, where they have received many social attentions. They are both new to the films, but in the short time Mr. Plaissetty has had them in hand he has seen enough to convince him of their value.

The company is incomplete in only one essential detail. That is a funny man. Every effort is being made to engage a first rater for this comedy work and the director is trying incidentally to see whether he can discover one. There was an amusing party at the studio the other day on this account. The company had advertised for "the most ridiculous-looking man in New Orleans" to call at two o'clock as applicant for the job.

Officials of the company, newspapermen, actors and other connoisseurs of the ridiculous gathered on the high porch of the studio house to inspect the candidates. Followed heated discussion as to the relative homeliness of those gathered in the yard below, forty odd, and one by one the more promising-looking were "cut out of the herd"—so to speak—and led before Plaissetty, who, safe in his office to rearward, looked each applicant over critically, all unconscious of the unseemly jests out front, one to the effect that the collection would do very nicely for a Roman mob. This remark was true, all too true. The individuals as a rule were not even ugly.

Further efforts, by various means, are being made to secure the comedy man. Some one suggested during the levee of alleged ridiculousness that a man be posted in Canal street to pick out promising-looking men from the crowds and offer them the job, but as this would be attempted only by a diplomat of ability and bravery nothing has come of the bright idea as yet.

The company is releasing under the name of "Nola," an abbreviation of New Orleans, La.

NEW FIELD FOR THEATERS.

New Orleans Company Promoting Big Amusement City on Deer Island Near Thriving Cities.

Through the development of Deer Island, in Mississippi Sound, eighty miles from New Orleans, as a resort similar to Atlantic City, an amusement city of the first class, with a large population, will be put on the "movie" map by a New Orleans syndicate promoted by Meyer Eiseman. Purchase of the land, a strip running across the island from side to side, has been made and the company, rated financially strong, will, according to announcement, push the development with all speed, purposing to have the enterprise well under way by Spring. The initial move will be the building of a palatial hotel, scenic railway and other park amusements and bathing pavilions, and the establishment of a regular boat service to Biloxi on the mainland.

The island, a little more than a quarter of a mile directly seaward of Biloxi, is in the middle of the great gulf pleasure coast, which is coming to be known as the "Riviera of America." Biloxi itself has an all-year population of more than 15,000. Merging one into the other and with Biloxi are Mississippi City, Gulfport and Pass Christian, the "Southern Newport," with a combined all-year population of more than 30,000, all connected with Biloxi by fast interurban trains. Doubling these figures for the summer, since the floating population of each of these towns is at least as large as the resident population, one comes very close to the 100,000 mark.

OPEN ALL NIGHT POLICY A GO.

The "open all night" policy, recently put on at Fichtenberg's "Plaza," has taken. Four hundred per night is the average for the past week W. H. Gueringer, general manager for the Fichtenberg Enterprises, told the World's correspondent to-day. Local exhibitors are now convinced, but they weren't before it was tried. Mr. Fichtenberg, it develops, had canvassed the situation very thoroughly before making the break. Among other interesting items brought out while he was looking into the proposition was the information that New Orleans' street railways haul, between midnight and six o'clock in the morning, five thousand people.

The tone of the theater, through the efforts of the management, is as high at 2 a. m. as at mid-day. The clientele is made up largely of night workers, such as newspapermen, printers and newsboys, many of whom would prefer staying up late to see a picture to getting up early. The "morning" sessions, as they are called, run from 11 p. m. to 6 a. m., the house being closed from six to nine cleaning up.

Free Coupons Blamed

Labor Organization Holds Meeting in Salt Lake City—Protests Against Use of Free Theater Coupons in Newspapers as Cause of Loss to Community and as Job Ruiners—Large Representative Audience at Meeting—How Trouble Can Be Adjusted Not Yet Known.

By Frank H. Madison, Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

THE free coupon, or deadhead system, has been under fire in Salt Lake City, Utah. Labor organizations have interested themselves in the alleged evil and a meeting recently was held at the Labor Temple. Managers of all the theaters, newspaper representatives and committees of operators, musicians and stage hands were present. The labor men attributed the apparent depression in amusement circles to the coupons published in the papers by agreement between publishers and theater managers. Orchestras had been either reduced or entirely eliminated, they charged. One vaudeville house was operating only three days a week, another threatening to follow suit.

Manager J. Howard Garrett of the Utah Theater cited one phase of the free coupon evil. He said that the theater which had the coupon agreement with the newspaper received large display ads. which dwarfed the smaller notices of the regular admission houses, who are forced to pay for space at theatrical rates. Although nothing definite was done, there were indications that the matter would somehow be adjusted.

ODGEN NEWSPAPER PUBLISHER FINED FOR LOTTERY NOTICE

Exhibitors Interested in Trial of Publisher of "The Standard" for Advertising a Drawing.

The publisher of The Standard at Ogden, Utah, has been fined for publishing notices of drawings or lotteries. The case was started by the United States authorities, but the State of Utah has still more stringent laws on this matter. District Federal authorities quote the Federal laws to show that not only the paper publishing the notice, but the advertiser can be punished, so moving picture men throughout the United States are in danger every time they announce in the paper that they conduct a drawing for prizes. In Utah it is a punishable offense to conduct any sort of a drawing or guessing contest, no matter if it is not advertised. The stringency of the Federal laws are seen in the counts drawn against the Ogden publisher. One charged the paper published a notice of contest in which people guessed the number of checks in a piece of goods in a tailor's window. Another was an advertisement by a real estate firm of a state land drawing. Still another was an advertisement of land for sale which did not mention a lottery or drawing, but the land designated was some included by the Idaho State Land Board in its drawing. The fine for the first conviction is not to exceed $1,000, but the second offense provides for both a fine and imprisonment. Exhibitors probably will keep a closer supervision over the advertising stunts.

MARCUS LOEW IN SPOKANE.

Marcus Loew's visit to Spokane, Wash., was made interesting by two things. One was the announcement of a new theater. The other was a discussion as to whether the Loew Circuit was "a picture circuit." A local newspaper quoted Alexander Pantages of the Pantages Circuit as referring to the Loew Circuit in this manner. While not yielding any on the subject of vaudeville, Mr. Loew and his agents turned the statement into a proclamation of the popularity of the moving picture. Although the photoplay business is growing, he says, it has not injured vaudeville. He advocated short releases, declaring that people did not like the longer subjects. This was consistent, of course, with his announcement that his coast houses would soon be running the monthly two-reel releases of Weber & Fields and the soon-to-come two-reel film versions of stage plays.

The theater plans will call for a house seating 2,500 to be erected next summer.

GRAND JUNCTION MAY CLOSE SUNDAYS.

Advocates of closed moving picture shows on Sundays won the preliminary battle in Grand Junction, Col. The city commissioners passed an ordinance, effective after thirty days, shutting all the photoplay houses.

The exhibitors planned to file a petition asking that the matter be submitted to a referendum by the legal voters of the city.

RATHS MAY BE POSTMASTER.

Otto N. Raths, the moving picture and supply man at St. Paul, Minn., has strong support for the nomination for the postmastership in that city. There is a warm fight over the appointment.

SCHOOL PICTURE COMING.

A plan whereby the students of the high school at The Dalles, Ore., will produce a photoplay, has been outlined by Superintendent Warner. He will offer a prize to the pupil submitting the best plot. This plot will be utilized in a scenario and a cast selected from the school will enact it before the camera. It is planned to make it a two-reel production.

EXHIBITORS WILL CO-OPERATE.

St. Paul, Minn., exhibitors showed a willingness to co-operate with educators in that city when the subject "Vaudeville and the Movie Show" was discussed before a meeting of the Central High School Association. W. A. Mustard, manager of the Blue Mouse Theater, sent a letter to the meeting stating that the managers attempted to meet the public demand. He was backed up in this by Manager J. B. Reisman of the Dale Theater, who spoke at the meeting and related the exhibitors' difficulties in finding just what the people want. Mrs. J. C. Holman, who read the keynote paper of the evening, favored films for school work, if properly regulated. Superintendent Dietrich Lange viewed moving pictures as only supplemental to other school work and not as a substitute for any phase of education. In a later interview he was quoted as saying that picture theaters are conducted with the idea of selling tickets, that the "movies" appeal to people in their hours of relaxation when they are looking for entertainment only and not for instruction.

PRAISE FOR CLEMMER USHERS.

A well-wishing newspaper friend of the Clemmer Theater at Seattle, Wash., says: "If you are a patron of motion picture houses you doubtless have noticed that there is a great difference in ushers. It might not be a bad idea for the managers of some of the houses to send their ushers to the Clemmer once in a while just to see how ushering really should be done. The young men in that house are polite and attentive. If a patron asks a question a civil answer is always returned—and a good many of the questions are not entitled to that kind of answer, either. Again, they are always on hand to do little servies, like helping a patron on with his coat. In a great many of the houses such service is conspicuous for its absence, and politeness is evidently at a premium."

TRAINMEN RODE FREE.

A novel program was arranged by the Brotherhood of Trainmen in Sheridan, Wyo., for their twelfth annual ball. In addition to the dance at a local hall the railroad men leased the Gem theater and the "Gem Special" for that day carried a manifest of railroad pictures over the amusement route. There were "free observation accommodations" for the trainmen and their families. In addition to the railroad films there were some local pictures, which made the bill attractive to regular patrons. The receipts from the regulars helped pay the expenses of the Brotherhood's celebration.

PICTURES TEACH SYMPATHY WITH WILD ANIMALS

Films of Birds, Fish and Animals Teach Conservation of Wild Life in Oregon.

The Oregon State League of Sportsmen's Clubs has suggested an unusual use of the eight reels of the moving pictures, "Wild Life in Oregon," made by State Game Warden W. L. Finley. A. C. Hubbard, a warden of Ashland, was killed while in the performance of his duty and it is planned to give benefit shows throughout the state for his widow and children. Aside from the worthiness of the cause, the sportsmen believe that the conservation of the wild life of the state will be taught. The range covered by the camera is wide and will appeal to sportsmen throughout Oregon.

Some of the pictures are taken off the coast showing the bird life, others also of birds are taken in the interior of the state and the operation of the fish hatchery at Bonneville is fully demonstrated. Warden Finley waited for days some times to get just what he wanted, making the films a valuable addition to the records of Northwestern natural history.

Among the cities for which early showings in connection with the benefit plan have been tentatively planned are Ashland, Gold Hill and Medford. The pictures were exhibited at the Heilig Theater in Portland for three days, with an educational matinee for school children on Saturday. They are shown for ten cents at matinees and twenty-five cents in the evening.

BRIEF NOTES FROM NORTHWEST.

The Miles Theater at Miles City, Mont., pictures and vaudeville, has been supplementing its attractions with the efforts of amateurs.

The moving picture show has been reopened in Sadler's Hall at Harlem, Mont., by J. A. Sadler, its proprietor. Associated with him are Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Robbins. Robbins will act as operator, while Mrs. Robbins will have charge of the music. Programs of General Film Company service will be given every week night.

A prosperity note, cleverly phrased, from Seattle, Wash.: "The Liberty theater was constructed to last for some time, but it is already showing evidence of decay. The marble slab in the ticket office window, the one on which those decidedly agile young ladies make change, is all worn out."

Peterson & Lemire have sold the Bijou theater at Ray, N. D., to Ivan Butler and Clifford Lemire.

The Mission theater at Seattle, Wash., which has been undergoing remodeling, redecorating and refurnishing since early in December, has been reopened. It is now under the management of Jensen &

Von Herberg, who also operate the Liberty and Alhambra theaters.

Nels Seabot has sold his moving picture show at Cavalier, N. D., and has acquired an interest in another at Neche, N. D.

The Weinhard theater at Dayton, Wash., has been thoroughly overhauled by Miss Weinhard, its manager. A remodeled heating plant is one of the improvements.

The erection of a new opera house is projected at Kulm, N. D.

Editorial commendation was given Heaney & Bradley of the Capitol avenue theater in Cheyenne, Wyo., for bringing the Scott Polar Expedition pictures to that city. A local editor predicts that still better patronage would be given this feature if a return engagement was made.

Patrons of the Princess theater at Pueblo, Cal., were given the innovation of hearing the Princess orchestra play "To-day," the composition of Lawrence H. Daingerfield, a local composer.

George T. Werner, who purchased the Scenic theater at Lakefield, Minn., from F. G. Stoyke, made arrangements to take possession the first of February.

Charles B. Hanford, lecturer with the Scott Polar Expedition pictures, gave an address before the faculty and students of the Monroe theater at Salt Lake City, Utah, in which he urged the establishment of a national theater to counteract the frivolous tendency in the American drama.

A benefit show for the local symphony orchestra was given by the Colonial theater at Sioux Falls, S. D.

W. C. Brewer has sold the Lyle theater, located in the Tyra building at LeSeuer Center, Minn., to L. A. Obrecht of Northfield, Minn.

W. W. Woods, owner of the moving picture theater in the woods block at Brewster, Wash., died of cancer at Spokane, Wash. He had many interests, besides his photoplay house, in Brewster, where he lived for many ears. Burial was at Brewster.

The booking of "Ireland, a Nation" at the Metropolitan in St. Paul, Minn., for the week of Jan. 31 was timely. The St. Paul Institute has been making a study of Ireland and its people and just a few days before the photoplay run John McCormack, the Irish tenor, awakened interest in things Celtic.

The Clayton Investment Company, which owns the Utah theater at Salt Lake City, has notified Manager J. Howard Garrett that the lease which expires March 31 will not be renewed. The Alexander Pantages interests deny that the house will become a part of that circuit, superseding the Colonial on Third street.

The claims of Butte, Mont., residents upon Miss Kathlyn Williams were again presented when a Butte Day was held at the Ansonia theater with the Selig star in "The Story of the Blood Red Rose" as the principal feature. Members of the Entre Nous Club and the Butte Girls' Club gave a vaudeville sketch. It was the first time Butte residents ever appeared in photoplay and vaudeville simultaneously.

F. J. Drey's moving picture machine alone was saved when the opera house at Hankinson, N. D., was destroyed by fire, but the rest of his equipment, including a $700 electric piano, was destroyed. His total loss will be about $1,250 with $700 insurance. Drey immediately set about seeking another location in Hankinson. He had been operating a picture show on the first floor of the opera house for about two years.

The Orpheum theater at Rochester, Minn., has been leased by Col. C. F. Fischer, a resident of that city, but who has been operating a theater at Denver, Col., for the last year. He planned to make some changes in the physical condition of the house and have it opened with a photoplay program early in February.

The Montana Products and Manufacturers' Association made arrangements to have moving pictures made of the Retail Merchants and Manufacturers' Banquet and Montana Industries Exposition at the Auditorium in Helena.

Labor Bills in California

Picture Exhibitors Concerned Over Two New Measures Before State Legislature —One Day's Rest in Seven Demanded by Ferguson Bill—Spengler Bill Limits Day's Work to Eight Hours—Passage of These Bills Would Markedly Affect Theatrical Business.

By T. A. Church, Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

AMONG the measures of more than ordinary interest to exhibitors that have been introduced in the California Legislature so far this session is the one fostered by Assemblyman Ferguson, of Oakland, providing for one day rest in seven, and another drawn up by Assemblyman Spengler, of Los Angeles, designed to establish an eight-hour day for men, as well as for women. The one day rest in seven measure does not specify which day shall be set aside as a day of rest, but provided that it shall be unlawful for any person to require or permit any employee to work for more than six days in any calendar week. The only exceptions are in favor of domestic servants, persons caring for livestock or for sick persons, and for any work of the Railroad Commission. No exceptions are made for those engaged in the theatrical or moving picture business. The eight-hour law, if adopted, would affect all persons except those engaged in transportation and in the fruit and vegetable industries. Moving picture exhibitors are watching both of these measures closely and will take active action in case there is any need for it.

KLEINE HAS BIG BILLBOARD.

The San Francisco office of George Kleine Attractions has just put into use an advertising idea that has made the entire picture trade take notice and one that has served to attract general public attention to the high grade of recent releases. The use of a mammoth double-deck illuminated billboard, located at Fourth and Market streets, has been secured by this concern and on this has been mounted posters of the leading releases upon which bookings are being made. The big boards are directly opposite the new offices of George Kleine Attractions in the Pacific Building and instead of attempting to display the large posters in the showrooms there, they are now selected by exhibitors from the display across he street, the boards being divided into numbered sections, making the work of selection an easy matter.

SOL. LESSER DELIGHTED WITH NEW RELEASE.

Sol Lesser, president of the Golden Gate Film Exchange, Inc., the All Star Feature Distributors, Inc. and the Alco Film Corporation, of California, is overjoyed at the arrival of a wee addition to the Lesser family in the shape of a lively boy. Plans are already being made for his entry into the motion picture field and it is expected that it will not be long before two "boy impresarios" will be picking the cream of feature productions for Coast exhibitors.

MACOGRAPH TEACHING CAMERA WORK.

The Macograph Moving Picture Company, located in the Spreckles Building at Third and Market streets, has added another department to its school and is now teaching camera work. The new course is in charge of Harold Mohr, formerly with the California Motion Picture Corporation, and recognized as being a leader in moving picture photography.

MARCUS LOEW IN SAN FRANCISCO.

Marcus Loew, the New York theatrical magnate, accompanied by Morris Kohn, P. J. Schaefer and E. J. Ludwigh, arrived in San Francisco recently and announced that a new theater building would be erected here at a cost of more than $1,000,000. A deal for a site has been under way for some time and as soon as this is consummated work will be commenced on a six-story building. The theater will have a seating capacity of about 3,500. The location will be on Market street within two blocks of the present house, the Empress.

ARGENTINA'S THEATER AT EXPOSITION.

The Argentine Republic, which has appropriated $1,750,000 for participation at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, is fitting up a fine theater in the dome of its building and has purchased a Baird projector and a motor generator set from G. A. Metcalf, who is also supplying a Powers No. 6A Cameragraph for a theater being fitted up in the West Virginia pavilion.

HUGHSON SCHOOL TO HAVE PICTURE APPARATUS.

The school board of Hughson, Cal., is erecting a school building at that place, the assembly room of which will be fitted with motion picture equipment. F. C. Nickle is clerk of the board.

GRAUMAN COMPANY BUYS ZONE M. P. COMPANY.

The Grauman Motion Picture Company of San Francisco has taken over the Zone Motion Picture Company, which controls the exclusive rights for the manufacture of moving pictures at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition. A building is now being erected on the grounds at a cost of $25,000 and here will be shown the methods employed in the making of motion pictures. The transfer of rights was made by George A. Collins, of the Zone Company, and C. J. Ward, representing the Grauman Motion Picture Company.

OTHER SAN FRANCISCO ITEMS.

J. E. Robin, sales manager of the Precision Machine Company, is in San Francisco, making his headquarters with G. A. Metcalf, and is busily engaged in arranging for the exhibit of this concern at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition. A model theater with a seating capacity of about 300 will be installed and the public will be given the opportunity of seeing projection machines in operation.

The Empire & Plaza Theater Corporation has secured a lease on the Theater Fresno, Fresno, Cal., which has been closed for some time, and the house will be devoted to vaudeville and moving pictures under the management of Frank L. Hesse, manager of the Empire theater. The latter house will feature a program of four reels of pictures and two acts of vaudeville.

Charles C. Frye, 20 Montgomery street, San Francisco, has prepared plans for a new theater and store building to be erected at Tenth and J streets, Modesto, Cal., at a cost of $18,000 by owners represented by G. H. Umbsen & Co.

The Lubin around-the-world company, with Romaine Fielding at the head, is expected to arrive in San Francisco shortly and a stay of some time will be made here and pictures will be made with the great Exposition as a setting.

Omaha's Censor Wrinkle

Supervision of Commercial Amusements Is Provided for by Bill That Will Be Presented to Nebraska Legislature—Carries Legalized Censorship a Step Further Than Measure Is Elsewhere—Not Radical—Even Press Has to Fight for Its Liberty.

By Midwest Special Moving Picture World News Service.

A BOARD to supervise commercial amusements is one of the angles to a public welfare commission planned in Omaha. A bill is now being prepared which will be presented to the Nebraska Legislature. It will amend the city charter to provide for this commission and for the funds for its operation. Representatives of fifty societies were present at the meeting at which the plans were formulated.

Apropos of this movement is the striking statement that modern commercial amusements are more of a menace to a community than its saloons. This statement is attributed to Theodore Hansen, a welfare worker at a meeting at the Westminister Presbyterian Church in Omaha. "We have attained an era where there is generally a higher regard for social development than for intellectual development," he said. "Movie and vaudeville houses play to greater numbers of people every day in the week than the churches reach on Sunday. I believe in the future of the moving picture, but it must be properly supervised to secure the desired results. * * Commercialized amusement is the greatest institution for the making or unmaking of character, but it is impossible to attend moving picture shows three or four times a week and retain the spiritual life."

The statement is printed merely for what it is worth. The movement is wholly logical. If the state can censor a picture, it can censor the press or anything else that excited public voices demand.

PICTURES OF NEBRASKA'S RESOURCES.

Twenty-five societies representing organized agriculture in Nebraska held their convention at Lincoln, Jan. 18-23. The moving pictures of Nebraska's resources, shown by Prof. G. E. Condra, secretary of the Conservation and Public Welfare Commission, constituted one of the principal features of the meeting.

PICTURE COMPANY WANTS TO COME TO LINCOLN.

Mayor Zehring of Lincoln has received an inquiry from a film producing company at Atlantic City, N. J., offering to locate at Lincoln a company capitalized at $50,000 and employing from seventy-five to three hundred persons, if the proper inducements can be secured. A site near a stream is desired and that is not easily found at Lincoln.

OTHER NEBRASKA ITEMS.

The Electric Theatre at Falls City has changed its admission for feature film shows to ten and five cents. Jean Mullin, formerly of Omaha, is now manager of the Electric.

The Lyda Theatre at Grand Island has made Tuesday and Thursday its regular paramount feature days.

C. H. Shilts of Algona, Iowa, has assumed charge of the Star Moving Picture Theatre at Tecumseh, which he purchased from Howard & Redfield.

A specialty of feature films will be made by the Lyric Theatre at Beatrice. A partial change in the ownership of the Lyric has taken place. A. W. Cox of Bladen has sold his one-third interest to Harry N. Schroeder of Beatrice, who will be associated with Hogate & McLaughlin in the management.

Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Ely, formerly of Council Bluffs, Iowa, are now located at Seward, where Mr. Ely has purchased the Cozy Moving Picture Theatre from Tome Bourke and E. A. Polley.

Lefler Brothers of Meadow Grove have purchased the Palace Theatre at Neligh from Freeman Brothers.

E. M. Michael has assumed charge of the moving picture theatre at Surprise, which he purchased from Alexander Rae.

Business men of Hoskins are reported to be contemplating the formation of a stock company to operate a moving picture show at that place. M. H. Kebler and Fred Ziemer are reported to be interested.

Cloud Smith, who has leased the Michelson Theatre on North Pine Street, at Grand Island, from F. H. Michelson, recently gave two vaudeville acts in addition to his three reels of pictures. The admission has been fixed at five and ten cents. Smith has been acting as vocalist to the satisfaction f his patrons.

ARKANSAS REFERENDUM ON SUNDAY OPENING

Pine Bluff Picture Men Use Papers to Get at Public Sentiment on Sunday Shows.

By F. H. Madison, Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

A NEWSPAPER referendum has been started in Pine Bluff, Ark., by moving picture exhibitors to ascertain the sentiment of the people in regard to Sunday shows.

Agitation for rigid enforcement of the Sunday laws resulted in shutting the photoplay houses as well as groceries and other places dealing in household necessities. The exhibitors are publishing coupons in local papers asking all who have any interest in the issue to cast a ballot for or against the seventh day show. The moving picture men are optimistic as to the outcome.

FILMS SHOW ADVANTAGES OF COLLEGE LIFE.

Theaters in Arkansas are being furnished free films which show student activities at the State University at Fayetteville. The University believes the enrollment will be increased after high school pupils throughout the state see this picture. The films are made by the Department of Electrical Engineering. Among the towns which already have been listed for shows are Batesville, Jonesboro, Walnut Ridge, Paragould, Stuttgart, Forest City, Warren, Monticello, Hamburg, El Dorado, Magnolia, Stamps, Prescott, Arkadelphia, Malvern, Benton, Lonoke, Des Arc, Heber Springs, Harrison, Barryville, Eureka Springs, Siloam Springs, Springdale and Rogers.

TOUCH OF NATURE BETTER THAN PRESS AGENT.

The uncanny advertising of "The Clutching Hand," in connection with "The Exploits of Elaine," caused trouble in Brownsville, Tex. It was "trouble in huge and unwieldy quantities; trouble for the sheriff's department, trouble for the police department, not to mention a goodly portion of it that filtered into the sanctum sanctorum of The Herald itself," says the paper which published the sensational warning. According to the column-long story, explaining the affair next day, some woman who said she had lived in a town where there was a "Jack the Ripper," called the chief of police at his home and asked for more protection in her section of the city against "The Clutched Hand." The police head was astounded, as he had not seen the advertisement. The woman was indignant that such a criminal could be at large without the authorities being aware of it. The chief hurriedly hunted up his copy of The Herald, and not spotting it as an ad., called up headquarters and ordered the arrest of a member of the staff of the paper on a charge of disturbing the peace. Two policemen found one of the newspapermen later in the evening and informed him of the order for his arrest (which the chief maintained was no joke). He went with them to a newsstand, and after the trio looked over the paper the officers were convinced there was nothing wrong with the ad. and he was released with apologies. Inasmuch as the ad. was not labeled as such there were quite a few frightened women in the city.

PRIEST TO USE PICTURES.

Rev. Father Paul Gilbertson, pastor of the Church of Our Lady, Roman Catholic church at Las Vegas, N. M., has started a moving picture theatre. St. John's Hall has been remodeled so that it can be used for photoplays and in the future will be called St. John's Theatre. If the plan is successful Father Gilbertson will give shows twice a week, featuring moral, religious and instructive subjects. At a recent performance a comedy and a drama were shown for five and ten cents. There were refreshments and other social features. He is the first priest in New Mexico to use moving pictures in connection with his church work.

MOVIE DEPARTMENT IN ENID NEWS.

The News at Enid, Okla., has started a daily department "with the Movies," which treats photoplay affairs from the point of view of the Enid resident instead of merely reprinting press sheets. This intimate discussion of local houses, their policies, their managers and their service is the best kind of publicity for the exhibitors.

OTHER SOUTHWEST NOTES.

W. G. Bowman and John Jund, who have been erecting a new theatre on Morley Avenue in Nogales, Ariz., expected to have it open early in February. The house, which has been christened the Optic Theater, is 39x93 and will seat 800 persons.

A. R. Bender has assumed the management of the Imp Theater at Cleveland, Okla.

The Kyle Theater at Beaumont, Tex., recently inaugurated a baby show voting contest.

Suzanne Lehman, lyric soprano, has been an attraction, supplementing the photoplay program at the Isis Theater in Houston, Tex.

Six capacity shows marked the opening of the serial "Runaway June" at the Gaiety Theater in Muskogee, Okla. The Muskogee Phoenix is running the story.

The Carson City brass band at Carson City has been contemplating starting a moving picture show in that city. Two buildings were under consideration. The plans call for a general admission of ten cents.

NEWS LETTER FROM SOUTH.

By the Midwest Special Moving Picture World News Service.

THE Fowler Amusement Company filed application at Atlanta, Ga., for a charter to do business with a capital stock of $5,000 as operators of motion picture theaters. The applicants were A. A. Fowler and John G. Burkhardt.

The Cozy Theatre at Albany, Ga., is now supplementing its Mutual program with two reels daily from the General Film Company.

John H. Cain, Jr., of Quitman, Ga., has purchased the Star Theater at Cordele, Ga., and will operate it himself.

The new Olympic Theater at West Palm Beach, Fla., has been opened by Chambers, Oak & Duff.

IN JACKSONVILLE STUDIOS.

By Lion Louiso, Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

GOOD weather prevailed most of the week, but there were one or two bad days, and a little rain. Director "Bob" Vignola, at the Kalem has been having to use the trolley to get downtown, when he did not use Director Kenean Buel's "White Angel," Norwalk. Bob's "Red Devil" has been laid up for overhauling and he has been inconvenienced by the absence of his car. Both directors have been busy making pictures but the bad days delayed them slightly. One big scene has been held up five days on the finish of a three-reel picture.

L. E. Taylor, cameraman, and Mrs. Taylor entertained some of the Kalem company January 24 at a "pig" supper. The table was a bountifully spread one and those present were royally entertained. Those attending were Directors Kenean Buel and Robert J. Vignola, Alice Joyce, Alice Hollister, Geo. K. Hollister, Arthur Albertson, James B. Ross, Mary Taylor Ross, S. V. Boyd, T. J. Dow, Miss Helen Lindroth and Miss Irene Van Ostoff.

Chas. Kent Owen, scenic artist, had some fingers torn up when he picked up an electric fan, preparatory to moving it from where it was running at full speed.

Jere Austin, who was laid up with a badly burned hand is getting along all right and he will soon be able to get back to work.

The Lubin players were visited recently by Earl Metcalf, who is with the Geo. Terwilliger Lubin dramatic company at St. Augustine.

Plans are being formulated for a party to be held at the Lubin studio in the near future. No announcements have been made yet, any more than that there will be eats and dancing, and possibly a program of "stunts." Mae Hotely has the affair in charge.

ST. AUGUSTINE NOTES.

Fred Mace, with his company of Peerless players, has returned to New York after taking some scenes for "What Happened to Jones," which Mace is making.

The other Peerless company, which was making "M'liss" and "The Butterfly," have left for Orlando, from where they will go to either Mayport or Jacksonville. Some scenes are to be taken at Mayport.

The Lubin dramatic company, under the direction of Geo. Terwilliger, will likely be here until the spring. Ormi Hawley has been in the hospital, but she is able to be up and to play in the six or seven pictures which are being taken here.

OTHER JACKSONVILLE JOTTINGS

Local exhibitors will be among the active promoters of the State Fair proposition which is being taken up by the people of Florida with avidity. Blank notes, payable in instalments, are being circulated throughout the state, for prospective shareholders and nearly everyone is boosting the project. George Mason, manager of the Mason Hotel, on his own initiative, began advertising in the local papers, taking page ads, and presented his State Fair idea to the public. He then invited the public to a dinner at his big hotel and from that time the live wires have been working with Mason for the big boost proposition. It is thought by many that racing will be permitted and that Jacksonville will open up and from the present prospects it will present a very wide awake city for the northerner to winter. This influx will help the exhibitors immensely.

At the Imperial, Billy Beard, a popular singer with Jacksonvillians, proved an excellent added number to the regular moving pictures bill. Lina Cavalieri in Manon Lescaut drew big houses, and the picture was excellent.

The Republic management usually has some good advertising stunt to present its patrons every week or so. Recently it distributed a "lead-up" pamphlet which created much comment. The book was arranged so that the wording immediately interested the reader and as one progressed through the booklet interest increased until the ad of the theater was reached.

The Grand played "Cabiria" to overflow houses for two days. The production was one of the best film subjects that was ever viewed by local theatergoers. "Your Girl and Mine," the seven-reel World film suffrage picture made at the Selig studio at Chicago this summer will be shown at this theater in February. The story is by Mrs. Medill McCormick and local woman suffrage workers are anticipating the coming of the picture.

The Savoy is being remodeled and the entire interior is undergoing repairs and redecorating. A steel ceiling is beng put in at the present and other improvements will come later. The work does not interfere with the performances. "The Battle of the Sexes," playing a return booking, drew big houses.

The Pastime has Wall's Comedy Company, and is playing to good business. A bill of variety is given and patrons are given about one hour and a half of good entertainment, including the pictures.

The Phoenix presented Joe Davis in an Indian singing and dancing act, together with the regular pictures program. Dan Futch, blackface comedian, followed him on the bill the week following.

KANSAS EXHIBITOR ARRESTED; TOOK UP CHARITY COLLECTION

Had Free Biblical Pictures at Sunday Show—Took Up a Collection for Charity.

By Kansas City Moving Picture World News Service.

LEW NATHANSON, owner of a picture theater at Topeka, Kan., recently opened his theater on Sunday, which is in violation of a city ordinance. But Nathanson advertised that he would show Biblical pictures on Sunday free of charge. He then started to take a collection for charity for the Jewish National Hospital. Nathanson was arrested and on appeal from the police court was released. The city for some time has violated its own ordinance by making profits on various attractions at its parks. Nathanson and picture show men tried to make a test case of it, but Judge Whitcomb did not think the evidence sufficient to warrant a test in the courts of the legality of the ordinance.

PEORIA PUPILS INTERESTED IN "JULIUS CAESAR" PICTURES.

Nearly every school in Peoria was represented in the essay contest conducted by the Peoria Star for a review of the feature "Julius Caesar" at the Apollo theater. It is significant that one of the prize-winning essays by a Manual Training High School pupil emphazied the fact that the story of Caesar took on a new meaning for him when graphically told by the moving pictures.

MUNICIPAL PICTURE HOUSE.

Humboldt, Kan., will soon own its own moving picture theater. The theater erected there several years ago by a stock company will contain all the city offices and will also show moving pictures every night. The city will run the theater as a municipal enterprise.

OTHER KANSAS NOTES.

Manager Rowell of the Gem theater will give his patrons at El Dorado, Kan., a string of pictures from the Mutual movies. He has listed several American feature dramas.

The Crawford theater at Wichita, Kan., is now showing movies of the war. The pictures are direct from Carnegie Hall, New York City. Zeppelins, warship engagements, cavalry and infantry charges are shown in five reels.

The Princess theater at Wichita, Kan., is showing the eighth chapter of the Zudora film.

The Orpheum theater at Topeka, Kan., recently opened under new management, featuring "At The Crossroads" on its program. The Orpheum is a five-cent theater, and runs also a few vaudeville acts.

The Orpheum at Leavenworth, Kan., recently unreeled the "Ghost Breakers," featuring H. B. Warner.

The Echo theater at Great Bend, Kan., recently focused the film "Sir Galahad of Twilight" in two parts and the other American drama, "Checkmate."

M. W. Bailey, a photographer at Hutchinson, Kan., made moving pictures of the State Fair there last September, the films just returned from the factory and will soon be shown at the De Luxe theater. The film will later be taken to Topeka, Kan., and displayed before the Legislature, in the hope of assisting the city in getting an appropriation for the State Fair next year.

The Elite theater at Great Bend, Kan., are giving large bills with the Lubin, Biograph and Kalem films.

The De Luxe theater at Hutchinson recently booked some fine Shubert-Brady offerings: The "Dollar Mark," "Mother," and "Threads of Destiny," featuring such actors as Robert Warwick and Evelyn Nesbit Thaw.

The Gem theater at El Dorado, Kan., is now using many five and six-reel features. Dustin Farnum and Dick La Reno in the "Squaw Man" pleased the Gems' patrons.

Fire destroyed all the equipment of the Pastime theater at Coal City except the projecting machine. A defective chimney in the building is responsible. The theater was operated by Frank Hejna.

Lee Woodyatt has sold the Lyric theater on Sixth avenue in Moline to H. H. Hoffman, an insurance man of that city. Hoffman's two sons, Harry and Richard, will operate the house. Woodyatt will move to Spokane, Wash.

The Monmouth Amusement Company has sold the Royal theater at Monmouth to O. H. Fowler, who has assumed possession. There are three other moving picture houses in Monmouth and the Royal has been closed.

W. M. Marple has sold the Palace moving picture theater at Aurora to W. D. Burford, proprietor of the Aurora theater, and S. A. Lies, and the house is now under the management of the firm of Burford & Lies. Marple will continue to operate the Palm theater in Aurora.

A new moving picture show has been opened at Williamsville. Exhibitions will be given every Saturday night.

Roy Kohler, who for two months played the pictures at the Apollo theater in Princeton, has returned to Chicago where he has a position at the Kensington.

The Bond theater at Pontiac is perhaps one of the first houses to use the statistics about Mary Pickford in advertising, featuring her as the star who gets 88 cents per working minute.

It was good business for the Savoy theater at Delavan to show two hundred pictures, taken when Delavan residents were off their guard.

Kief Brothers, who have opened a moving picture show in the Kief hall at Hartsburg, will operate two nights a week.

An enterprising Albion newspaper, the Register, co-operated with the management of the Majestic theater at that place in bringing "The Christian" to Albion. It was not a coupon scheme, but the paper wanted the people of that small city to have a high-grade attraction and pushed the plan. It was shown for 25 cents.

W. G. Collins, who has been manager of the Lyric theater at Beloit, Wis., for the last four years, has opened a moving picture show in the Derthick opera house at Belvidere and will give photoplays when there are no conflicting attractions. G. A. Stockwell and C. Bailey, who were associated with him at Beloit, will help in the operation of the Belvidere house.

J. F. Anger, of Weldon, has been contemplating starting a moving picture show at De Land.

Leo Colligon has sold the Gem theater at Beckemeyer to James Van Dyck.

Breaking to the Front

Chattanooga Finds That Photoplays Are Taking a Position in Modern Public Estimation Held by the Drama in the Days of Elizabeth—Attitude of the Greater Newspapers Toward the Art of Much Importance—Exhibitors Find That Advertising Pays Them.

By G. D. Crain, Jr., Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

MOVING picture exhibitors of Chattanooga, Tenn., are finding the big announcements in the Sunday Times beneficial. The entire list of pictures to be run at all of the leading houses of the city are listed every Sunday morning under the heading of "Amusements of the Week." Each theater is taken separately and a list of all the films is given. Short descriptions of the pictures are also printed. A few years ago the moving picture houses got very little publicity and the "movie" patron generally discovered what was being shown at the theater from the sheets exhibited at the entrance to the amusement house. Now people turn to the Sunday announcements and go through them in much the same way in which a few years ago they turned to the announcements of the various legitimate or vaudeville houses.

The Commercial-Appeal, a leading paper of Memphis, Tenn., is another paper which is helping the exhibitors along to a marked extent. Under the heading of "At the Movies," descriptive matter concerning big films to be shown is given. Notices are made of productions just completed or about to be completed and dates of releases are also listed with changes of moving picture stars from one producing company to another, personals about them, pictures and descriptive matter of what they are doing, etc. A recent edition of the paper carried announcements of the change of A. H. Van Buren, who recently joined the Lubin players, and of the contract between Edith Wynne Mathison and the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company. Remarkable interest is now taken in the movements of well-known moving picture actors, and many persons in no way connected or interested directly in the moving picture business may be seen at the news stands or on the streets reading the latest copies of the Moving Picture World and other papers given over to doings in the film world.

MAJESTIC AMUSEMENT ANNUAL MEETING AND ELECTION.

The annual meeting of the Majestic Amusement Company, of Chattanooga, Tenn., was held in Chattanooga, on January 18. This company owns and controls several houses in Chattanooga, among which is the Majestic theater. H. L. Sperry, of Nashville, was elected president of the company, and D. S. Henderson, vice-president. The Board of Directors was elected as follows: H. L. Sperry, E. D. Price, Lee Brock, of Nashville, and R. M. Watkins, D. S. Henderson and Howell Graham, of Chattanooga. The company has been exhibiting the very best productions t be had at its various houses, and has been very successful during the past year in spite of the war and other unusual conditions.

PICTURES CHATTANOOGA LIKED

A number of great productions have been shown lately in Chattanooga, Tenn., among which stand out most prominently: "A Fool There Was," at the Alhambra, and also "The Spoilers." This picture, reproduced from a story written by Rex Beach, has been so thoroughly read and liked that houses are packed without much advertising or work on the part of the exhibitors. Clara Kimball Young in "The Deep Purple" was also seen at the Alhambra. "The Girl of the Golden West," shown at the Alcazar recently, packed the house during the first night's run. The crowd was very demonstrative in its opinion of the photoplay and the word "fine" was generally used in describing it. It is rare that applause is given to motion picture plays in Chattanooga. For some reason this is one of the cities where the people do not become demonstrative, although handclapping is indulged in in many parts of the country. However, when "The Girl," in the "Girl of the Golden West," in playing poker, with herself as a stake against the life of the man she loved, drew a "full house" from her stocking after the Sheriff had drawn three aces, the people in the Alcazar forgot their dignity for once and hearty hand-clapping was indulged in. The play was shown at the house for three days.

WASHBURN'S VISIT HELPED.

Bryant Washburn during his recent and already-noticed visit to Nashville, Tenn., made several addresses, distributed souvenir pictures and met a great many people. During the past week Mr. Washburn was again seen at the Alhambra theater in the Essanay production of "Misjudged Mr. Hartley." Through his well known prowess as an actor, and also the impression he created while in Nashville recently, it was with great difficulty that the theater was able to handle the large crowds which turned out to see the play. It would appear from this case that it would not be a bad idea for star actors to appear oftener throughout the country and become known to the public in person.

OTHER TENNESSEE NOTES.

The Belmont, a popular little suburban motion picture house of Nashville, Tenn., located on Sixteenth avenue, has been showing a few vaudeville acts from time to time as added attractions. Mack and Bain in "The Funny Little Dutchman and the Girl," a comedy singing and talking vaudeville act, was recently shown during the afternoon and night along with three reels of regular program. The vaudeville act went unusually well in this case and the proprietors of the house are arranging for a number of other vaudeville stunts to show later on.

"The Evil Men Do," a Broadway star feature film, with Maurice Costello, Mary Charleston and Helen and Dolores Costello in the cast, was recently presented at the Elite theater in Nashville. The three-part film tells a virile and fascinating story and the house was well filled at the various performances.

Ethel Barrymore in "The Nightingale" of the All Star Feature Corporation, was recently shown at the new Crystal Theater, of Knoxville, Tenn. The five big acts, which cover 210 dramatic scenes, are rather expensive to produce, but the house held its prices at ten cents for adults and five cents for children.

IN ST. LOUIS.

The Princess theater, at Grand avenue and Olive street, has been playing to big houses since the former program of extravaganza road shows has been given up for an all moving picture bill. "The Robbers" was the first week's offering and it filled the house every night of the performance. This was followed by "The Idler," a Wm. Fox five-part feature, with Chas. Richman and Catharine Countiss.

Lewis J. Selznick, vice-president and general manager; W. R. Scates, division manager, and C. R. Seeley, manager of sales department of the World Features Corporation, paid a visit of inspection to the sumptuous new offices that have been opened up at 3626 Olive street, under the management of R. L. White, head of the St. Louis end of the corporation.

NEW ST. LOUIS PICTURE HOUSE MARKS SUCCESS OF WILLIAMSES

New Ashland Theater Now Nearly Finished—D. D. Williams and Wife Real Exhibitors.

By A. H. Giebler, Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

WHEN the Ashland, a new theater be-in built at Newstead and Ashland avenues, St. Louis, by the firm of D. T. Williams and wife, is complete, it will stand as a monument to the power of moving pictures to entertain, and to the judgment of D. T. Williams, who says that if he had not taken vaudeville out of his program, he would still be exhibiting in the small canvas-topped theater that he started in business with.

Mr. Williams says that for a long time he maintained a mixed bill of pictures and vaudeville, and that the performers on the stage would walk around to the box office and draw down the money that the silent players brought in the house. This went on until one night he put on his thinking cap and came to the conclusion that moving pictures were the real attraction in his show, and that night saw the last of vaudeville on his stage.

It was a radical step that Williams took. His patrons were accustomed to vaudeville; his competitors were using it, but he took the step because he was tired of acting as go-between for his own box office and vaudeville performers, and his judgment was justified immediately.

The money came in at the box office just the same, and a greater per cent. of it went to the bank account of Williams and Wife. And the Ashland theater, an amusement house as complete and up-to-date as modern theater building can make it, is the result.

The Ashland, when finished, will accommodate fourteen hundred patrons, and the canvas-topped theater that is now being used will be changed into an air-dome for the summer.

OTHER ST. LOUIS JOTTINGS.

The Duchess theater, at Grand and Washington avenues, has been reopened under the name of the Grand Duchess, and is playing a seven reel Mutual program of first run pictures for five cents admission. The box office of the theater has been moved from the inside of the lobby to a handsome booth that has been built at the head of the steps leading to the entrance, which improves the looks of the place, and facilitates the handling of the patrons. The Western Photoplay Syndicate Company, headed by Bromley and Goll, who have had much experience in handling theaters in the east, are managing the Grand Duchess, and are negotiating for two more theaters that will be the nucleus of a string of picture playhouses that they intend to operate in St. Louis.

Sam Werner has been appointed general manager of the United Program Film Service Exchange at 3628 Olive street. Mr. Werner is one of the best known film men in the country, and has been for several years president of the Swanson-Crawford exchange in St. Louis.

The St. Louis Pythian Association will direct the showing of the six-reel Universal picture, Damon and Pythias.

Moving pictures depicting scenes from the battlefields of Europe are very much in vogue in St. Louis just at present. The Garrick theater, at 6th and Chestnut streets, which has just closed a successful engagement of the Belgian War films, opened Monday with pictures that are said to be shown by permission of the German government, and which comes here direct from the German theater in New York. At the Victoria theater, 3637 Delmar avenue, the war pictures sponsored by the New York Evening Sun, which were shown for four weeks at Carnegie Hall, are being exhibited. The St. Louis Times, the evening newspaper that is directing the exhibiton of these films here, invited school teachers and others engaged in educational work to a private showing of the pictures.

WISCONSIN NEWS BRIEFS.

By the Midwest Special Moving Picture World News Service.

The Grand opera house at Oshkosh sent up balloons from the theater, each containing four tickets good for admission to the picture show.

A building permit was issued at Milwaukee to J. S. Grauman & Brothers to erect a moving picture theater, costing $15,000 on North avenue between Fortieth and Forty-first streets.

The Orpheum theater at Eau Claire was closed for a few days for redecorating.

John Thomas of Spurgeon Bay, who has leased the opera house at Sawyer, will give picture shows there Thursday, Saturday and Sunday nights. About the same program will be used as at the Gem theater in Spurgeon Bay. A dance will be given after the last show each Thursday night.

H. Lutsey has sold his moving picture theater at Manawa.

The Monroe theater at Monroe does not often feature the multiple-reel comedies, but wisely decided that Vitagraph's "Love, Luck and Gasoline" was just about the picture for the mood of the New Year's Eve patrons.

Emil Niemeyer, a La Crosse vocalist, enhanced the production of Gliffith's "Home, Sweet Home" at the La Crosse theater in that city.

Erection of a new motion picture house, seating 750 persons, work to be started next spring, is rumored in Chippewa Falls. Outside capital is said to be interested in the project.

The Gem theater at Manawa has been sold to A. H. Knoke, C. W. Ross and William Kitzinger.

William Neff has sold his moving picture show at Merrillan to George Olson and Wilson Lyon.

The Lyric theater at Tower avenue and Twelfth street in Superior, Wis., has been taken over by the Northland Theater Company of that place, which also operates the Princess theater and which has secured a site for another house at Tower avenue and Fourteenth street. Frank C. Buckley will be manager of the newly acquired house, having resigned his position as ticket agent at the Union depot, which he held for a decade, in order to devote all his time to the amusement enterprises of the company. The house has been remodeled and will be operated on the same policy as that ruling at the Princess, featuring high class pictures. The object of erecting a large house at Tower avenue and Fourteenth street survives despite the acquisition of a theater in that vicinity.

J. P. Smart has sold the Crystal theater at Hartford and returned to the employ of the Western Union Telegraph Company. E. J. Wagner, who formerly conducted the Empire theater and later was connected with Milwaukee houses, is the new owner. He will pay especial attention to feature pictures.

IN ILLINOIS.

Manager Chris Taylor of Dreamland theater at Kewanee gave the proceeds of his house on McKinley's Birthday (January 29) to the parochial school of that city.

James L. Figenbaum, of Altamont, has purchased the Lyric theater at 1815 Broadway in Mattoon from Dr. B. D. Parrish and has moved to Mattoon to operate the house.

Eiler Jones has sold the Star theater at Lincoln to Isidore Burnstine, one of the owners of the Capitol theater at Springfield. Joseph W. Shepherd, who is associated with Burnstine in the Capitol, will be manager of the new Lincoln acquisition.

A band concert featured the Saturday matinee of "Cinderella" at the Gem theater in Easton. The Gem did a big business with this attraction at two shows.

Getting the Films Home

Fun of Film Carriers Getting Out of Chicago on Railroad—Station Officials Remember Fire and Look Askance When Film Cases Come—Certain Men Can't Get by with Any Kind of Grip—Ruses of Show Bearers to Get Home with the Show.

By Frank H. Madison, Special Correspond ent of Moving Picture World.

"ON the Trail of the Film Smugglers" is the title of a comedy—it might be a tragedy sometimes—staged once a week by exhibitors not far from Chicago. Since the fire on the Chicago & Northwestern Railway, in which a film played a part and in which one man was burned to death, films have been sent out to these towns by express. On Sundays no express deliveries are made and somebody goes in after the films. The guards at the station gates will not pass the regulation cases. Some of the messengers have passed through carrying the films in leather suitcases. Others have been recognized and turned back. When this happens the messengers take a street car to an outlying junction and board the train there.

There is a great deal of carelessness in the city of Chicago regarding the delivery of films. A representative of The Moving Picture World watched a mere boy on an elevated platform one Saturday afternoon. The fibre carrying case was in bad shape. The bottom was nearly out, it sagged and in places the film was exposed through a half-inch gap. A rush made it impossible to reach the boy and find out if that was his daily practice before his train came along and he made for the smoker.

UNION MUSICIANS ONLY IN QUINCY.

All the moving picture houses in Quincy, as well as the vaudeville and legitimate theaters, have signed an agreement with the Musicians' Union and are employing only players satisfactory to that organization.

ILLINOIS TACKLES CENSORING AND SUNDAY PROBLEM

Attitude of Authorities in Several Illinois Cities—Sunday Shows and Clean Films.

THE moving picture show is drawn into civic affairs in more Illinois cities. A long restrained desire to have Sunday shows in Galesburg has been crystallized into action and petitions have been circulated asking that the matter be left to a vote of the citizens at the election in April. The plans do not include permitting of vaudeville and dramatic shows on Sunday. In this Galesburg campaign an answer has been made to the stock argument that the working man can go to the picture shows at night. It is pointed out that this cannot be done where there are children—and there generally are—for it means carrying the youngsters home asleep. On this ground the laboring man claims a right to Sunday afternoon recreation if his conscience permits, especially if he has attended religious service in the morning.

At Farmington, where seven-day operation of shows was started because the officials started to collect a neglected license, D. E. Sheesley, one of the proprietors of Dreamland theater, has balked at the Sunday shows. He believes the day should be devoted to religious worship, and that the picture show people are entitled to one day of rest. Therefore he will not run in opposition to the churches.

"Clinton needs a censorship on moving pictures, judging from advertisements," declared Rev. E. K. Towle at the Methodist church, in that city. "I am not against a clean picture show, but I have been told by people that when they go to see something good that has been advertised sometimes there is something cheap shown on the screen that makes them wish they hadn't gone. This is a crime against society."

A correspondent to the Bloomington Pantagraph urges that the censorship of moving pictures be made an issue when the commission form of municipal government is inaugurated there.

OTHER ILLINOIS ITEMS.

Secretary of State Stevenson has issued a charter at Springfield to The Academy, of Waukegan, which is the company in which Walter Spoor, brother of George K. Spoor of the Essanay company, is interested. The company is authorized to have capital stock of $25,000 and to do a theater and amusement business.

The site of the old Academy at Clayton and North Genesee streets in Waukegan has been purchased as the site for a new moving picture house which will seat about 1,000 persons. The site is 69x131 feet and on this a one-story auditorium with a two-story front probably will be erected. A pipe organ will be a feature of the new house. George Spoor will be resident manager. The other incorporators of the company are Benjamin Parmalee and Alva L. Rogers.

The fact that Springfield children go to moving picture shows instead of playing blind man's bluff or leap frog was discovered by the Russel Sage Foundation Survey and was given publicity throughout the United States. This discovery is about as startling as would be the announcement that the majority of people in Springfield eat three meals a day," says a writer in The News. Children in every American city go to picture shows and about the only thing to do is to see that the shows are good, he concludes. "To talk of educating children to play blind man's buff or leap frog instead of going to the picture shows is to waste breath."

Woolley Brothers have installed a $2,500 Wurlitzer pipe organ in the Princess theater at Gibson City.

The anti-fly and general sanitation moving picture show and lecture of the Illinois State Food Commission was given under the auspices of the Watseka Woman's club at the Princess theater in that city.

The Empire theater at Rock Island showed the three reels of Modern Woodmen of America pictures for four days. These were of local interest as one reel pictured the head offices in Rock Island.

The Ashland Photo Play Company of Chicago has been incorporated with capital stock of $2,400, to do an amusement business. The incorporators are Michael B. Roderick, Barney Balaban and Richard R. Poulton.

Past attendance records went glimmering when the Capitol theater at Pekin sprung a surprise on the public by announcing that a man with a camera had been taking pictures promiscuously and the screen at the Capitol would show the results of his marksmanship.

The M. B. C. Federation has started a series of weekly moving picture shows at Cooksville.

Although the play, "The Three of Us," was written by Miss Rachel Crothers of Bloomington, it had not appeared in that city until it was shown in photoplay form at the Castle theater.

A report comes from Lewistown, Mo., that Peter Jacobs, who formerly operated moving picture shows at Quincy, Ill., will return to his earlier home at Springfield, Ill., and may engage in the moving picture business there.

The Empire-Hippodrome theater at Quincy had the German-Austrian army pictures, shown for the benefit of German soldiers' orphans.

CINCINNATI WELCOMES FILMS SHOWING GERMANY'S SIDE

Cincinnati, St. Louis and Milwaukee, the Kaiser's Only Colonies, Receive New War Pictures.

By Kenneth C. Crain, Special Correspondent Moving Picture World.

ONE of the standing jokes which have arisen out of the grimness of the European war is that one pointing out the alleged fact that Germany has lost all of her colonies except Cincinnati, St. Louis and Milwaukee, which bid fair to hold out indefinitely. It is a fact, however, in all seriousness, that Cincinnati contains probably as many German sympathizers, of German blood, as any city in the United States; and this fact is probably responsible for the distinction conferred upon the city, in being one of the first to see some war pictures taken from the German side of the conflict, and bearing the impress of official authority. The pictures, of which there are five reels, came to Cincinnati last week for a two weeks' engagement at Music Hall, where the Belgian war pictures taken by the Chicago Tribune were shown some time ago; and after a private exhibition at which they were viewed by a number of leading German citizens, including Mayor Frederick Spiegel, Dr. Oscar Metzger, the German consul, representatives of the numerous local German Societies, and others, they were opened to the public, and drew splendidly. Many of the leading figures of the war are shown, from the Kaiser himself to Gens. Von Moltke, Von Hindenberg and Von Kluck, and Admirals Von Tirpitz and Von Spee, as well as some actual battle scenes of unusual interest. The pictures are very much worth seeing.

CONCENTRATES TO GAIN EFFICIENCY.

The Motion Picture Theater Co., of Cincinnati, which has heretofore directly operated several local houses, besides owning the properties themselves, has leased three of its suburban houses, for the purpose of concentrating its exhibition interests in the downtown section. Thomas Corby, one of the active officers of the company, stated recently that inability to give personal attention to the houses operated by the company has nearly always resulted in lessened business, which is the principal reason for the action indicated.

MULLER IN NEW FILM COMPANY.

A. M. Muller, formerly Cincinnati manager of Warner's Features, who left some time ago for New York, announces his appointment as general manager in the Middle West for a newly-organized feature firm company, which will shortly make its formal entrance into the field. Mr. Muller was in Columbus and Cincinnati recently on business connected with the new enterprise, and was sanguine for its prospects. He was not at liberty to give out any details concerning the personnel of the company's officers, but stated that it is backed by ample capital, and that it is assured of success. Incidentally, he reports that while in Columbus he obtained what may be considered as "inside stuff" on the censorship question, as he saw Gov. Willis, and is authority for the statement that the Governor is opposed to any alteration in the present Ohio censorship law. Mr. Muller also indicated that, from what the Governor said, it is possible that legislation designed to place responsibility for complying with the censorship laws upon the manufacturer, rather than the exhibitor, will be enacted.

PICTURES THAT ADVERTISE.

The extent to which industrial concerns are coming to appreciate the value of moving pictures of their plants and operations for advertising purposes is indicated by the success being met with by the Famous Factories Motion Picture Co., which is taking pictures for exhibition at San Francisco, and for general use. At Piqua, O., alone, several well-known concerns were recently photographed, including the Superior Knitting Co., the Favorite Stove & Range Co., and others.

There are many who think that this form of advertising will soon rank in point of importance and in money involved ahead of all other forms of advertising. This may be shooting with the long bow; but it is quite evident that this part of the film business is growing by leaps and bounds. It will surely be of vast importance.

WALLS OF NEW HIPPODROME TESTED.

The city authorities at Youngstown, O., as well as others interested in the reconstruction of the Hippodrome, which collapsed some time ago when the concrete gave way, are determined that there shall be no repetition of the failure. They supervised a test recently which demonstrated conclusively that the structure as it now stands is immensely stronger than the load it will be called upon to bear makes necessary. The maximum live load in use is about 75 pounds to the square foot, while a load of 1,200 pounds to the square foot, in the shape of cement in sacks, was piled on the floor without any damage being done. The test was made under the supervision of the local building authorities.

FINE "SAFETY FIRST" FILM.

A public "safety-first" meeting, held in Dayton last week, was featured by the first exhibition outside of Columbus of a number of highly valuable and interesting industrial films bearing on that subject, which were recently shown in connection with the Ohio Safety Exposition, held during the week of January 13 at Columbus under the auspices of the State Industrial Commission. These films, which were contributed by various leading industrial enterprises, including the National Asociation of Manufacturers, the United States Steel Corporation, and others, show the true inwardness of the "safety-first" propaganda, much better than any number of unillustrated lectures could do, and that is the reason they were broughtt tot Dayton, a prominent industrial center, by Victor Noonan. Mr. Noonan is a safety director of the Ohio Industrial Commission, and intends to show the pictures all over the State, in line with his work in that capacity, as the expressions he has heard from workmen and others have convinced him that moving pictures are the most effective medium possible for driving home the importance of safety precautions.

MORE CINCINNATI ITEMS.

Monday of last week witnessed an unusually enthusiastic audience at the Orpheum, when several hundred children were the joint guests of the house and a local newspaper at a performance of "Cinderella," with Mary Pickford in the title role of the Famous Players' production of the old fairy tale. The feature was peculiarly appropriate for the entertainment of children, and the crowd of youngsters enjoyed it to the fullest.

The Llewellyn theater, a Youngstown house, suffered some little damage recently when an automobile ran amuck, crashing through one of the windows in the theater's front and wrecking the ticket booth. Fortunately no one was injured.

The Lyric, of Youngstown, was recently acquired by I. M. Hartzell, who formerly owned it, and is now the owner as well of two other houses in that city, the Princess and the Luxor. He intends to have the house remodeled in order to make it as pretty and as up-to-date as either of his other two, and announces that he will use the Universal program, with occasional first-class features.

TRENTON OPERATORS ELECT.

Operators Choose New Officers for Year —Local Is Growing.

By Philadelphia Special Moving Picture World News Service.

THAT moving picture operators of Trenton, N. J., still esteem Clark D. Vaughn has again been proved by his unanimous election for his third term as president of the Moving Picture Operator's Union of Trenton. Mr. Vaughn was later installed at a business meeting of the organization which was recently held. Since the inception of the organization in the month of July, 1913, rapid strides have been made. It has extended its membership throughout many of the adjacent towns. Outlooks for a most prosperous year are very good and the enthusiasm of the members is running high.

Other officers installed were: Vice-president, Donald Parker; recording secretary, J. N. Dakin; sergeant-at-arms, Harry Cheeseman; trustees, Elmer Atkinson, Benjamin Seigle and M. J. Devinney. The delegates to the Central Labor Union are Clark D. Vaughn, Elmer Atkinson and Donald Parker.

PICTURE SHOWS HOW SHIRTS ARE LAUNDERED.

The Bureau of Commercial Economics, of Philadelphia, has established a movement to give lectures at the leading universities and which are to be illustrated by moving pictures. The title of one lecture is "Returning as New," and portrays and describes modern laundering, the films having been furnished by the American Machinery Company. The campaign is educational and is being given the co-operation of the professors of the leading colleges.

PHILADELPHIA JOTTINGS.

In Clearfield, Pa., the A. W. Leonardson Company, dry goods merchants, engaged the Opera House theater and exhibited a wonderful picture showing the fitting of Gossard's corsets for the benefit of the women only. A beautiful story was portrayed, entitled "How Marjorie Won a Career."

N. Damico, 1826 West 3d street, Chester, Pa., announces that he wishes to sell half of the interest in his moving picture theater which has a seating capacity of 650 persons. Mr. Damicos' reason for wishing to sell is that he wishes more time to follow other business interests.

For a consideration of $27,500, a large irregularly shaped tract of land on the east side of Germantown avenue north of Venango street was conveyed by George Steumpfig, owner of a moving picture theater on Germantown avenue near Chelton avenue, to Jennie Effinger. The property has a frontage on Germantown avenue of 129 feet, 67 feet on Venango street and 153 feet on Elder street. It is assessed at $35,000 and is to be the site of a moving picture theater which, it is said, will cost nearly twice that amount. Plans for the theater are under way.

Thieves entered the moving picture theater of Eugene McHugh, No. 2424 Kensington avenue, and stole the picture machine and lenses, which are valued at $150. According to the police the intruders gained entrance by means of a false key.

Arrangements are being made for the installation of a moving picture machine in the Cumberland County Hospital for the Insane, for the entertainment of the inmates. The result of this novel experience is awaited with interest.

The First National Bank, of Trenton, N. J., has bought the Auditorium, at Burlington, under foreclosure proceedings. The property was built by the late Charles D. Danning of this city. The purchase price was $30,000. In addition to the theater proper, the purchase of the property includes the moving picture annex, a hotel of thirty rooms and the pool room.

ENTER PITTOGRAPH WEEKLY.

Colonial Film Changes Name to Pittograph—Issues Pittsburgh Local News Film.

THE Colonial Film Company, with studios in the Hartley Building, Fourth avenue, Pittsburg, Pa., conducting a school for motion picture acting and scenario writing, announces that it shall be known in the future as the Pittograph Company of America. The company has already released a very noteworthy one-reel picture under the title of "The Smoky City Girl," and it was shown at the Miles theater, Penn avenue and Seventh street, this city, with gratifying results.

The future policy of the new concern will be to release a weekly in collaboration with one of Pittsburg's leading newspapers, to be known as the Pittograph Weekly. Local exhibitors are very enthusiastic over a local weekly, and already several of Pittsburg's leading picture theaters have contracted for it, mention of which will be announced later.

The Pittograph Company will in the near future release one and two-reel dramas and comedies, and their Eastern representative is at present negotiating with a very well known concern for the distribution of Pittograph productions.

HARRISBURG EXHIBITOR FINED ON "CIVIL RIGHTS" CHARGE

Had to Pay Fine and Costs for Drawing Color-Line in Picture House.

Failure to accord colored patrons the same seating privileges as white persons in his moving picture theater cost Athens George, proprietor of several moving picture houses in Harrisburg, Pa., just $140.50. George, who was convicted in June, 1913, for violating the "civil rights" act of 1887, and whose appeal for a new trial and suspension of judgment was refused by the Dauphin County Court last week, was arraigned for sentence.

A fine of $50 and the cost, amounting to $90.50, was imposed. George had not refused to admit negroes, but required them to sit in the gallery.

OTHER PITTSBURGH NOTES.

The Pastime theater on Market street, Pittsburg, Pa., has been remodeled, repaired and beautified to the extent of $2,000. Messrs. Shrimp & Tucker, two well known business men of Pittsburg, recently assumed charge and have succeeded in increasing the business considerably. An entirely new front has been added, the floor has been lowered and the entire house has been redecorated and repainted.

The Pittsburg offices of the Famous Players Film Service, located in the Wabash building for the past two months, again find they have hardly enough room to breathe, and Messrs. Steele and Bachmeyer are again on the hunt for larger quarters. The office force consists of ten persons, and the film room at the old location in Ferry street, employs as many more.

J. Frank Hatch, of the J. Frank Hatch Film Company of Pittsburg, Pa., has blossomed forth as a theater owner, having purchased during the past two weeks a theater in Newark, N. J., from Apfelbaum & Apfelbaum, the purchase price being $30,000. It is said Mr. Hatch will make extensive alterations in the theater.

Friends of William Sitler of Butler, near Pittsburg, Pa., will be pleased and surprised to learn that he has joined the Beauty Film Company of San Diego, Cal., and is now with them on their southern trip, where they are engaged in the manufacture of several feature films. His many friends in this city are anticipating seeing him in the "movies" in the near future.

Mr. Sitler, who posseses an athletic figure and handsome face, will no doubt make good at his new profession, and he carries the best wishes of his friends from here.

Harry Oliver, formerly with the Eastern Booking Offices and the Noted Plays Feature Company, Pittburg, Pa., is now connected with the Picture Playhouse Film Company as their representative for Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

The Renfax musical motion pictures are now shown at the Olympic theater, Fifth avenue, Pittsburg, Pa., every Tuesday and Wednesday.

William J. Berger and C. W. Arnold entered suit against William Hodder, Francis J. Sullivan and Eva Sullivan, demanding damages of $5,969 and $5,517, respectively, charging the defendants made misrepresentations as to the earnings of a moving picture theater in Braddock, near Pittsburg, in which they purchased stock.

The Photoplay theater in Pitcairn, Pa., formerly owned by James Chatteton, has been purchased by R. P. Jenkins.

Joel A. Levy, road man for the World Film Corporation, Pittsburg, spent last week in West Virginia. He reports business very good there.

Mayer Silverman, of the Liberty Film Renting Company, Pittsburg, Pa., has recently secured the Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia rights on all releases of the Great Northern Film Company, and his exchange will hereafter be the releasing station for all of this company's productions. He has already received several pictures of this make featuring Betty Nansen, the great star of the Royal theater at Copenhagen, Denmark, and who is now in America.

Al. W. Cross paid Cleveland a visit during the past two weeks with the object, it is reported, of establishing a branch office of the Hudson Feature Film Company, providing no hindrances develop.

Sol Ginsberg, formerly engaged in the picture business in Erie, Pa., but who sold out some time ago, is erecting another house in Eighteenth street, Erie, which will be completed about the first of March. The new house will cost $12,000 and will have a seating capacity of 400. An order for a Powers 6-A machine and other equipment for this house has been placed with the Feature Film & Calcium Light Company.

The Pittsburg office of the Alco Film service has secured the rights for "Cabiria," the elaborate motion picture masterpiece, for Western Pennsylvania, Ohio, West Virginia and Kentucky.

Manager Leo F. Levinson of the World Film Corporation states that the demand for the big production, "America," is daily increasing.

E. O. Prince, local manager of the Picture Playhouse Film Company, has a big winner on his list, "The Explosion of Fort B2."

W. S. Hodge, the new manager of the Nixon theater at Tarentum, Pa., recently opened that theater after it had undergone a complete cleaning process and redecorating and repainting. He has been experiencing a very good business since opening and has been warmly complimented on his plan to run clean and high-class pictures.

W. Grave is now in charge of the Comet theater, Ohio street, Northside, Pittsburgh, Pa., having assumed the lease held by Melrose Mendel.

The Hudson Feature Film Company have recently increased their floor space due to the rapid increase in business. Heretofore they occupied room 617 and 618 in the Lyceum Building, Pittsburgh, Pa., but now have rented the adjoining room, 616, which will be used as the manager's office.

The Claffy Brothers of the Alpha theater at Sharon, near Pittsburgh, Pa., are contemplating on the erection of a 1,000-capacity moving picture theater in Sharon during the coming summer months.

Rufus L. French and E. E. Carter, owners of the Lyric and Amuseu theaters in Bluefield, W. Va., are now running the houses themselves. They had them rented to other parties, who, it is said, fell down on the proposition.

W. A. Muir, who for the past six weeks managed the Picture Playhouse Film Company at 422 Penn avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa., has been transferred to the Boston office of the same company and E. O. Prince, formerly of New York and Philadelphia, is now in charge of the Pittsburgh office.

A handsome new motion picture house was opened Jan. 16 at 1650 Poland avenue, Johnstown, Pa. The building and equipment cost $15,000, and the picture house is said to be one of the most complete and up to date in the city.

OKLAHOMA PICTURE CO. TAKES NEW AL JENNINGS FILM

Eagle Picture Company Will Use Real Man Hunters in New Jennings Film.

By Oklahoma Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

Supposedly for the purpose of "showing up" Al Jennings' version of the "Spike S" Ranch fight, in which Al Jennings was captured, the Eagle Film Company, of Oklahoma City, will take another series of pictures, which the promoters claim will portray a true picture of the fight between officers and the Jennings band, and give to the public the real facts in connection with the capture of Jennings.

Bill Tighlman, a noted man-hunter, who resides at Oklahoma City, is one of the incorporators of the Eagle Company, and has written to "Bud" Ledbetter, former sheriff of Muskogee County, Oklahoma, asking him to take part in the picture. Ledbetter took part in the fight at the ranch house, and it was he who captured Jennings and placed him in jail at Muskogee. Ledbetter expressed himself as being not at all pleased with the portrayal of the fight as shown in "Beating Back," declaring that the picture is replete with inaccuracies, and that the ranch house fight scene is a fake.

"The Passing of the Outlaw" is the title of the new film, and it is intended that the story will be a reproduction of the things that really happened, and as much as is possible will be taken on the same grounds. The Eagle Company at first proposed to take the picture of the fight scene at the old Spike S ranch house in Tulsa County, but one of the buildings which was standing at that time, and from which the officers fought, has since been razed. Another building will probably be erected conforming as near as possible to the size and appearance of the one torn down, but in the event this is not done the fight will be filmed in some other spot in Oklahoma.

OTHER OKLAHOMA NOTES.

THE Palace theater at Tulsa, Okla., gave a flower matinee for the ladies on the afternoon of Jan. 20, featuring the first installment of "Runaway June."

Effective Jan. 19, the price of admission to the Orpheum, Tulsa, Okla., was cut to 5 cents and 10 cents. Three acts of vaudeville and feature films is the offering.

The Lyric, Tulsa, has inaugurated musical comedy, in connection with usual run of pictures, and reports the change to be entirely successful.

The Wonderland, Tulsa, announces that it has secured exclusive rights to all Universal releases in Tulsa.

"How Henry Ford builds 1,000 Automobiles Daily" was featured by the Dreamland at Oklahoma City on Jan. 19.

The Wigwam, Muskogee, has discontinued its vaudeville, effective Sunday, Jan. 24.

STATE OF PICTURE TRADE IN AND ABOUT LOUISVILLE

Business in Kentucky City Shows Gratifying Growth in Short Time.

By G. D. Crain, Jr., Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World

IN Louisville, Ky., the motion picture business is rapidly becoming one of the leading industries. A number of handsome theaters have been completed during the past few months and several more are nearing completion. The most important of these latter is the East Broadway theater, which will open in about three or four weeks. The original East Broadway theater was a small frame building and was the third moving picture show house in the city and the first in the outskirts. It was built by the Broadway Amusement Company, then a $2,500 incorporation. The new house will cost about $80,000 and is one of the links in a chain of about eight moving picture houses. The old house has been rebuilt and enlarged from time to time and always enjoyed a big patronage. The new Hilltop theater, at Frankfort and Pope streets, is nearing completion. The Shelby street theater, of the South Louisville Amusement Company, and the Palace theater will also be completed shortly. Outskirt houses are proving very popular and at the same time the downtown houses are not suffering to any extent.

A REAL KENTUCKY FILM.

The Grand theater, of Lagrange, Ky., recently showed a film which was full of local color and of a great deal of interest to the residents of the city which is on the edge of the famous Bluegrass section of the state. The pictures were those taken last fall at the annual "Fox Chase," of the Fox Hunters' Association, which was started from Lagrange. The pictures showed some of the finest scenery in the country and the hounds, riders and fox were in plain view on several occasions. Everything was shown except the music of the fox horn, which was given in reality by a local horn blower. The four reels were expensive to produce and prices were raised to fifteen and twenty-five cents for the special pictures.

PICTURES AND GOOD ROADS.

Instruction by motion pictures in road building was recently undertaken by the State University, at Lexington, Ky., while a special course in road building and engineering was being given for the benefit of Kentucky road engineers. The films were prepared last summer by the State Department of Public Roads to be used in arousing popular interest throughout the state in better roads. The number of students present at the showing of the pictures was about 160. Every one was much pleased with the clearness of the pictures which brought out the detail work nicely.

LOCAL FILMS.

Local color pictures were recently well attended at the Gem theater of Maysville, Ky. These pictures were taken by a Chicago film concern and showed activity on the tobacco breaks, a run of the fire department, a fire drill at the public school, public buildings and public officials and last but not least C. W. McClanahan, the veteran fireman of the town.

WORKING FOR CHILDREN'S PICTURES SATURDAY.

The Board of Censors for Children's motion pictures, which are shown every Saturday morning at the Mary Anderson theater, is working hard with the various parent-teacher associations and through the mothers of school children in an effort to stir up more interest in the special children's pictures. The attendences have dropped off somewhat during the past few weeks, which is explained by the condition of the weather to a large extent. The board has received numerous letters of inquiry from cities all over the country asking how the plan is working out and for other information, and it is probable that similar houses will show children's pictures all over the country before long.

COLORED FOLK DISSATISFIED.

The Louisville News, a colored newspaper of this city, has been conducting a strong campaign for some time past against the Mary Anderson and other motion picture houses in which it is necessary to go into the alley to reach the gallery. A recent edition of the paper had the following notice printed in inch-high type across the top of the front sheet: "Let every colored man and woman stay out of alley-gallery theaters one month, then see what will happen." The News, however, does not take into consideration that the colored trade is a very small portion of the business done by the houses or the fact that only one colored theater is now operating.

WANT PICTURES IN SCHOOLS.

There is a movement on in Louisville to supply public schools with motion picture machines for educational purposes, through the Parent-Teacher Associations of the city. A machine was on exhibit on Saturday afternoon, Jan. 23, in the assembly room of the Y. M. C. A., and all members of the parent-teacher associations were invited to be present. In spite of the bad weather conditions a number of representatives of the various schools were present.

PUT IN OWN LIGHTING PLANT.

Roy Hurley, manager of the Dreamland theater, of Providence, Ky., recently returned from a trip to St. Louis, Mo., where he purchased a new dynamo, gas engine and other equipment for a lighting plant with which to furnish current to the theater. Heretofore, the company has been severely inconvenienced because of poor service on the part of the Providence Electric Light Company, which was unable to supply lights because of lack of water, disabled machinery and other causes. The outlay for the new plant is considerable, but no more black nights should be experienced at the theater. Mr. Hurley contemplates special matinees every afternoon now that the company does not have to depend on the lighting company for power.

PICTURES SELL REAL ESTATE.

Selling real estate by film is a new departure in Lexington, Ky., which promises to be a brilliant success. The Lexington Real Estate Board recently offered twenty-one pieces of property for sale in the Star theater. Pictures of the properties were shown on the screen at the theater. The exact condition of the property, location, etc., were brought out in fine shape. The unique sale was widely advertised and a fairly good crowd of prospective buyers were present. George A. Bain auctioned the properties. Music and entertainment was also provided through the morning and admission was free. The plan has been tried out in other cities before, but this was the first showing made in Kentucky, and was very successful, as about half a dozen sales, amounting to about $15,000, were made.

MORE LOUISVILLE JOTTINGS.

The new chain of ten theaters to be erected in Louisville by local capitalists and the Keith interests combined is still hanging fire and nothing definite can be learned on the subject at this time. According to Fred Levy and other local men interested in the project, some new houses will be built whether the big deal goes through or not.

The Broadway Amusement Enterprises is the name of a newly incorporated concern which is closely allied to the Broadway Amusement Company. The new concern has a capital stock of $700, divided into twenty-eight shares. The incorporators are Fred J. Dolle, Henry Reiss, Louis Steuerle and Joseph Steuerle. The debt limit of the concern is placed at $10,000. Joseph Steuerle is president. According to Louis Steuerle the company is licensed to deal in moving picture houses, supplies and films as well as to manufacture of films. The detailed plans of the concern are not ready for publication at this time, but it is understood that the main business of the new incorporation will be booking and managing the film end of the larger company's business.

The Gayety theater, which recently started running moving pictures, found business so bad on Sunday afternoon, Jan. 24, that only one show was given in the afternoon and the theater closed until Monday. A heavy storm of snow and sleet on Sunday evening drove every one to the warmth of their own firesides, according to downtown picture men.

"Du Barry," George Kleine's big production, made a hit at the Alamo theater. Mrs. Leslie Carter is very popular with local people, and even with a seating capacity of 1,200 the theater was somewhat strained to handle the big crowds.

"The Thief," the big Box Office attraction, was shown for three days with marked success at the Novelty theater. "A Fool There Was" and a number of other high-class photoplays are booked for the Novelty. The new system recently adopted by the company in which it shows big attractions for a longer space of time is proving more satisfactory than the old system of smaller productions and daily changes.

"Runaway June," the big production of the Reliance Motion Picture Corporation, which was written by George Randolph Chester, has proven a very interesting subject to local motion picture exhibitors in the three Falls Cities. Bookings have been made with the Dream theater of Jeffersonville, Ind.; the Grand, New Albany; the Crystal, the West Broadway, the Ideal, Walnut street theater, Crown, East Broadway, Baxter, Cherokee, Norman, Olympic and Clifton, of Louisville; the Victoria, New Albany, and the Lyric theater, of Versailles. Printer's ink has been liberally spread in announcing the big fifteen-week serial and a number of other bookings will be heard of later in local circles. The story is being run by the Louisville Herald.

The Frazier theater, of Whitesburg, Ky., was recently opened to the public. The theater is owned by S. T. Frazier, of Whitesburg, but is managed by Mr. Kenner, formerly of Hazard, Ky. Whitesburg is in the center of a large timber and mineral district which is rapidly filling up.

J. H. Powell, of Lewisburg, Ky., who some time ago started a moving picture house in that town, has been so successful with the latter line that he has disposed of a grocery store and a drug store in the city so that he could give the moving picture business his entire attention. Mr. Powell thinks the moving picture business is the coming industry of the country and is making arrangements to branch out and open other theaters in neighboring towns.

Charles Long, Everett Earp and James Lisle, of Winchester, Ky., have returned from Harriman, Tenn., Somerset, Ky., and other points where for several weeks they have been conducting special picture shows for children. The trip was very successful and as soon as the weather moderates a new route for the show will be laid out.

The new "Queen" theater of Winchester, Ky., opened on the night of Jan. 25. So many patrons wanted to see the entertainment that some were disappointed at both shows. The "Queen" looks inside like a Pullman car with panels on each of which is a hand-painted picture of some noted place in the world. On each side of the mirror screen stands a life-size statue. The front is Gothic. The lobby is arched with plate glass mirrors. Statues on pedestals stand at every convenient place in it.

GOT IN UNCENSORED.

Kansas City Got Benefit of Dilatory Censoring—Court Order Was Postponed.

By Kansas City Special Moving Picture World News Service.

THERE has been considerable excitement in film circles in Kansas City recently on account of the Box Office Attraction Company's release, "A Fool There Was." This picture was shown for the first time at the Willis Wood theater Jan. 16. At that time the censors had not seen the picture and the order for eliminations from the National Board of Censorship had not arrived at Kansas City. The picture was run at the theater for several days and during that time the censors received several complaints, one of which came from the Anthenaum, a very influential ladies' organization. The film censors then went to see the picture and asked that five cuts be made. The Lappe-Tighe Amusement Co. then had a restraining order granted in which they were given until two o'clock Friday afternoon to show the film. In the meantime it is reported that the Kansas City manager of the Box Office Attraction Co., N. H. Spitzer, was ordered to make the cuts by the New York office of the concern. However, this according to the best information procurable he did not do. He said, however, that "the censors were absolutely right in their contention." When the matter of the restraining order came up again on Friday afternoon, Judge Burney postponed the hearing until Monday. The engagement of the film closed Sunday. The theater received a considerable newspaper publicity over the controversy and it did an immense business on the film.

MORE MISSOURI ITEMS.

That business conditions in general are improving in Kansas City is the feeling of most of the film men as well as the exhibitors. The weather has been unusually mild and only the last week has it been decidedly cold. Most of the exhibitors are very well satisfied with trade and many of them are contemplating improvements in their houses at the first approach of spring.

Some unexpected and interesting changes have transpired recently in some of the downtown theaters. The Palace theater, which formerly used General service entirely, are now using Mutual. The Tenth street, which formerly used regular service entirely, are now running features exclusively, as is its sister theater, the Twelfth street. The Richards & Flynn Amusement Co., operating the Subway, Wonderland and Richlyn theaters, are now taking the entire first run output of the Kansas City office of the General Film Co.

The Broadway theater recently donated its services to a "bunch of rubes." The "rubes" were Kansas City Greeters, an organization of hotel men. The organization was giving a dance in the Casino hall, which is next to the Broadway theater, and they wished to show some pictures made of the greeters during their convention in California. Accordingly the arrangements were made and all of the guests at the dance, which was an old style country affair, flocked into the theater to see the pictures of themselves and their friends. The films were produced by Griffith and by him wer presented to the National Organization of Greeters.

E. A. Lyle was notified recently that he should take charge of the Kansas City office of the Ramo Feature Film Co. For some time Mr. Lyle has had charge of the office, but he has not known until recently that he was manager.

The new organization plans for the Pathe Freres, Inc., call for six traveling representatives for the territory tributary to Kansas City. Mr. C. S. Edwards, Jr., manager of the Kansas City office, has secured the following men to represent his firm in this territory; L. A. Sheridan, formerly with the Ecclectic Film Co., will make his headquarters in Kansas City; A. O. Bandy, formerly with the Universal Film Co., will make his headquarters in Joplin, Mo.; R. A. Schoup, formerly an exhibitor in Nevada, Mo., will make his headquarters in Salina, Mo.; McCabe Howe, formerly an exhibitor and insurance man in Topeka, Kan., will make his headquarters in Topeka, Kan.; D. M. Majors, formerly with Warner's Features, Inc., will make his headquarters in St. Joseph, Mo., and Howard E. Jameyson, formerly with the Kansas City News Service, will make his headquarters in Wichita, Kan.

The Royal theater in Kansas City entertained its patrons last week with the Kansas City favorite, Marie Doro, in the triumph, "The Morals of Marcus."

Among several of the interesting features lately shown at the Star theater in Hannibal, Mo., is "Zudora" and "The Case of the McWinter Family." "Zudora" is one of the most popular pictures ever released for the Missouri towns.

The Majestic theater at Chillicothe, Mo., giving many good Paramount programs. "The Man From Mexico" was shown several weeks ago and so many requests come for a return engagement that the film had to be shown again last week.

The New Electric theater has nearly finished the "Million Dollar Mystery." It has been running there for several weeks on the installment plan. This type of picture is very popular in the college towns of Missouri.

The Star theater at Chillicothe, Mo., has formed the habit of showing pictures that feature some of the best movie actors and actresses. Mary Pickford, Marc McDermott and Marian Nesbit have performed for Chillicothe with marked regularity.

The Majestic theater at Hannibal, Mo., is conducting a voting contest. The five cent tickets entitles the holder to five votes and ten tickets entitle the holder to ten votes. The person receiving the largest number of votes will reecive a round trip ticket to San Francisco and $100 in gold for expenses. The other prices value from eighty-five dollars to twenty dollars, aggregating $500. The awards will be made some time February.

The Keye's new auditorium opened last week at Marshall, Mo., under the auspices of the Marshall Commercial Club. A $2,500 house greeted the players of "Everywoman." Moving pictures will be shown every night.

Thieves entered the shop of Arthur Ferguson at Springfield, Mo., and greatly damaged his stock of goods and especially toy motion picture machines which he manufactures.

"East Lynne" was seen for the first time in Kansas City at the Apollo theater on Troost avenue. The film is a magnificent visualization of the great drama. The audience was well pleased with Lady Isabel, the title role essayed by Blanche Forsythe, the English emotional actress.

"Everywoman" has proved as popular in moving pictures as it did on the stage. It was recently shown at the Landers theater at Springfield, Mo.

IN IOWA.

David Mahaffey, who has taken over the Electric theater at Eddyville, plans to redecorate and remodel the interior and to remodel the exterior of the theater when the weather is more favorable.

D. B. Harrington has purchased a moving picture show at 1955 S. St. Aubin St., in Morningside (Sioux City), from John A. Cavanaugh.

The opera house at Ainsworth has been leased by Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Lamp, of Mapleton, who will operate a moving picture show.

The German War pictures for the benefit of the orphans of the German soldiers were shown at the Clinton theater in Clinton.

The Princess theater at Wapello is now under the management of John Richardson and his son Frank.

GOSSIPY JOTTINGS FROM IOWA.

By Midwest Special Moving Picture World Service.

THE scene in "The Call of the North," which shows one of the hunters caught in a bear trap, was a hit when the film was exhibited at the Alhambra theater in Cherokee. Harry Nogle, publicity man, hit upon the idea of securing the trap from the Lasky studios at Hollywood, Cal., and displaying it with a big still picture of the scene in the lobby. The picture was shown recently at the Happy Hour in Cherokee and the management profited by this stunt.

Two worthy causes were helped when the Weigle Belgian war pictures were shown at the Empress theater in Shenandoah. The local hospital fund received a generous share of the receipts.

J. A. Nelson, who formerly operated moving picture houses at Galena, Ill., and Waverly, Iowa, has reentered the field—this time at Waterloo. He has leased the new theater at 606 Commercial street, owned by J. L. McMurray, of Ligonier, Pa.

The Family theater, operated by H. A. Soudini at Clinton, was gutted by fire. The loss to C. H. Miller, owner of the building, was $2,500, with no insurance.

Miss Edna Knappenberger is again pianist at the Princess theater at Storm Lake, having given up her position in a theater at Cherokee.

The opera house at Greeley, owned by B. E. Farwell, was destroyed by fire.

The opera house at Stacyville has been rented by Arthur and Alex Weber and Leo Hermann.

The Hippodrome at Keokuk, which has been under the management of its owner, M. R. Angell, has passed to the control of H. H. Friedman and Alex Cohan, who will add it to the string of houses they already operate. Friedman will be local manager. The new management will enlarge the house and make other changes, including the installation of an expensive pipe organ. More attention will be paid to feature pictures.

The break in "The Master Key" was something for Wood & Gottlieb, managers of the Lincoln theater at Jefferson, to explain to their patrons. However before they had finished their say about motion pictures, they had used a whole page in a local paper to tell about some of their other attractions—a whole page of to-the-point, dignified, convincing and attractively printed photoplay theater advertising.

After an inspection of the moving picture houses at Davenport, Building Inspector R. C. Graham and Fire Chief Denger announced that some of the houses had been instructed to install better ventilating systems, but declined to give out the name of the theaters that had been remiss.

H. Bert Ley has disposed of the moving picture theater at Nevada, which he recently purchased.

The Burlington Tri-State Fair Association, wishing to arouse interest in its first exposition to be held next fall, arranged for the Jewel theater at Burlington to show the films of the Iowa State Fair at Des Moines for two days.

A coupon published in a local paper admitted ladies free to the Regent theater at Mason City when "Rip Van Winkle" was shown.

The Palace theater at Cedar Rapids made the naive announcement that its Mirror screen would "feature this beautifully formed artist (Miss Annette Kellerman) to perfection, far better than the ordinary screen could."

Benjamin Teig has sold his moving picture theater at Roland to Miss Mabel Ingledue.

The Palm theater at Missouri Valley is now running a four-reel show.

"It's a Movie" seems to be the slogan of the Grand Opera house at Dubuque, which recently went over to photoplays.

Firemen in Anamosa draw no pay for their services, and the moving picture houses there gave them benefit performances for two nights.

Washburn & Rihen have opened the Bijou theater at Rockwell City.

MICHIGAN FIRE INSPECTIONS.

President Fowser Assured That Question of Fire Inspections Will Be Taken Up.

By Jacob Smith, Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

PRESIDENT FOWSER of the Michigan Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors and ex-President Peter J. Jeup, who met Hon. John T. Winship, State Fire Marshal, at his office on Saturday afternoon, Jan. 23, were assured that the matter of eliminating at least one of the state inspections would be taken up at once, and that undoubtedly there would be favorable action as the result.

BEGINS FIRE INSPECTIONS.

Deputies of the state fire marshal's office are in Detroit making their semi-annual inspection, which will take several weeks.

BOOSTING BUSINESS FOR THE WASHINGTON.

M. Harlann Starr is giving all his efforts to the management of the Washington theater, which is showing consistent gains. The house is now on paying basis and is increasing in patronage every day. Manager Starr announces that a new policy has been put into effect, that of opening the theater at 12 o'clock noon, instead of 2:30 p. m., thus getting a large noonday patronage. Mr. Starr is being given every leeway by the management in the way of advertising and applying new ideas and has so far produced excellent results. The New Hotel Statler, located in the same block as the Washington, opens Feb. 6 and is bound to be a big help to the Washington. The Statler is one of the most beautiful hotels in the middle west, has 800 rooms and will get the bulk of Detroit's hotel patronage, all of which will operate advantageously to the Washington.

Manager Starr feels elated over his program for the four weeks in February, which he believes are the greatest four successive attractions ever booked into one theater in one month. For the week of Feb. 7, the Washington will show Mary Pickford in "Mistress Nell;" for the week of Feb. 14 Gaby Deslys in "Her Triumph;" Feb. 21 Blanch Sweet and House Peters in "The Warrens of Virginia," and Feb. 28, William H. Crane in "David Harum." He is getting out 10,000 postal-card size circulars calling attention to these four great attractions, which are being mailed out to regular and prospective patrons.

FAMILY THEATER NOW PICTURE HOUSE.

On Feb. 1 the policy of the Family theater was changed from vaudeville to motion pictures exclusively. The opening attraction was Marie Dressler in the Keystone farce, "Tillie's Punctured Romance." The Family was opened as a vaudeville theater in 1908 and was a success from the start. It was the first house of its kind in Detroit and was really the first in the United States to open at ten o'clock in the morning, giving eight shows each day. Before long other houses were erected on Monroe avenue pursuing the same policy. The Family is owned by the Harris Amusement Co., in which John P. Harris, of Pittsburgh, is the guiding star. "The change is made to pictures because our directors believe it is ideally located for that class of attractions," said Mr. Harris to the Moving Picture World representative. "We feel that we will be able to do as much, if not more, business than we have been doing, while our overhead expense with pictures will be considerably less." The present picture will run indefinitely, but whether the permanent policy will be to change weekly, semi-weekly or daily is not fully decided. The entire house has been redecorated and made more suitable for the new policy. Frank J. O'Donnell is manager, having come to Detroit recently from Grand Rapids, where he was in charge of the Columbia.

THE BROADWAY THEATER BEING RENOVATED.

The Broadway theater has been leased for five years to Frank I. Garson, of New York City, who will reopen it with high-class motion pictures as the policy. David Stott, the owner, will comence work soon on the building of a new front to the first story, a new entrance into the balcony and many other necessary improvements, and when completed he believes he will have a theater that will be equal to any in this country. The Broadway reopened for a short run on Jan. 30 with "Cabiria." Mr. Garson has offices in the Peter Smith building and will make his permanent home in Detroit. It is expected that it will take at least six weeks to make the needed alterations and improvements, so that it will probably be the first of April before the Broadway will be reopened as a new playhouse. Mr. Garson contemplates changing the name.

J. M. WOODS HAS INTERESTING PROGRAM SCHEME.

J. M. Woods, manager of the Empress theater on Woodward avenue, near Congress street, is trying out a new idea. For many months the Empress has been showing features at ten cents, opening at 9 a. m. Hereafter, he will show single reels up to 1 o'clock, and will only charge five cents for them. In this way, he believes he will get a great many people during the noon and lunch hours, who only have a limited amount of leisure time, and who will gladly spend five cents for a half hour or so of pictures, but who would not have time to sit through a complete five or six-reel feature. The regular big feature starts at one or one-thirty. The new plan will be continued if it works out satisfactorily.

THE WARNER BILL.

The writer is in receipt of a letter from Hon. Fred Warner, of Belding, saying that while he is at work on a bill pertaining to state censorship which he will introduce into the present session of the legislature, it is not completed as yet and hence not ready for publication, but that he will gladly forward a copy as soon as it is ready.

OTHER ITEMS FROM DETROIT.

Assistant Manager R. J. Branch, of the Detroit Universal Film Company, has just returned from an extended trip in the Thumb district of Michigan. He stated that he found conditions very satisfactory, and that while some exhibitors were complaining, on the whole, everybody seemed to be enjoying a satisfactory business.

The Detroit Universal Film Co. is planning on an immense campaign to get exhibitors in Michigan interested in the Panama-Pacific Exposition and incidentally while in the west to visit the home of the Universal Film Manufacturing Co. Its new stockholders took hold Feb. 1. Practically all of the stock is now held by the Universal Film Mfg. Co. The name will remain the same as it has for the present at least. George Weeks continues as manager and Mr. Branch as assistant manager. It is believed that under the new ownership many improvements in the way of service can be given exhibitors, and there is sure to be greater co-operation between the branch and the home office. Detroit is considered one of the very best cities in which the Universal is represented, and its local branch compares favorably with any in the United States, so far as actual business is concerned.

The Woodward Theater Co., of which Henry S. Koppin is president, has bought from the Theater Comique Amusement Co. the lease on the theater at 231-233 Randolph street. The purchasers are planning extensive improvements. The same policy of five cents will be followed as is in effect at the Rosebud, 117 Gratiot avenue, and the Woodward, 148 Woodward avenue.

William F. Klatt with William B. Stratton, architect, has returned from New York, where he went for the purpose of getting details and equipment for the new Regent theater, to be erected on the southeast corner of Woodward and Horton avenues, plans for which are rapidly being completed.

The New Maxime theater, owned by A. Arthur Caile, on Kercheval avenue, will open the first week in February. It is one of the largest playhouses on the east side of the city, and one of the most beautiful.

M. W. McGee, manager of the new Majestic theater, now in course of erection, says it will likely be March 1st before this play house is completed. He is now busy arranging his staff and various departments.

Gordon Damon has resigned as assistant manager of the Miles theater, Detroit, but will continue as publicity agent. For the past 18 months Mr. Damon has acted as assistant manager, program manager and press agent. He has returned to the Detroit Times to do editorial work. No one will be appointed as his successor at the Miles and temporarily Dr. Paul C. Dulitz, house manager, will continue in full charge.

The shipping department of the Casino Feature Film Co. now occupies the entire upper portion of the Royal theater building. The shipping department is on the third floor, where there are special racks for photos, slides, heralds, advertising matter, etc., as well as a fireproof asbestos film vault, specially constructed, with a capacity of 3,500 films. The fourth floor is for stock, advertising matter and projection room. Everything is conveniently arranged, and so systematized that no time is lost in doing any part of the work.

The Casino Feature Film Co. is now booking about 135 theaters in Michigan, among the latest to ask for service being the Happy Hour, Coldwater; Catherine, Detroit; Opera House, Ypsilanti; Fun, Detroit, and Pallister, Detroit.

A. J. Gillingham, manager of the General Film Company in Detroit, and proprietor of the New Empire theater, has purchased the interests of his partner, E. M. Smith, secretary and treasurer in the United Theaters Co., and the Valley City Amusement Company, controlling a chain of picture houses in Grand Rapids, consisting of the Idlehour, Original, Idea, Monroe and Columbia theaters; also the Orpheum theater in Grand Rapids, which plays small time vaudeville and pictures.

Charles Seaman, who has been associated with Mr. Gillingham in Detroit, will go to Grand Rapids to take charge of Mr. Gillingham's interests in that city. Mr. Smith will sell his Grand Rapids home and will leave for Los Angeles about March 1, where he will locate permanently. For the first few months he will "take life easy," but later plans to enter the amusement field in California.

Manager McGee of the Majestic Theater Company, which will open about March 1, returned Jan. 23 from New York City, where he spent a week in the interests of this new enterprise, looking around, getting ideas, buying equipment, etc. Mr. McGee is still unprepared to announce the definite policy of the Majestic. Contracts have already been made for Pathe service and General Film, indicating that the Majestic will probably change its program daily.

Carl W. Aller has been appointed manager of the Liberty theater. He was for several months assistant manager of the Columbia theater under M. W. Schoenherr. Mr. Aller was drummer at the Columbia previous to his appointment as assistant manager, so that his rise to the Liberty managership has been a very rapid one.

OTHER TORONTO NOTES.

One of the most novel pieces of lobby advertising ever seen in Toronto was displayed in front of the Strand theater during the last three days of this week when Manager Leon Schlesinger erected a miniature grain exchange in the spacious lobby while the World Film picture, "The Pit," was playing at his house. The entire floor of the rotunda was strewn with chaff, while bags of grain were piled here and there. Stock exchange and market reports covered the walls and a "ticker" in action was placed in front of the box office. The whole exhibit created immense interest.

On Tuesday morning, Feb. 2, a private exhibition of the Cines-Kleine picture, Julius Caesar, was held in the Garden theater. Douglas Cooper, who is Canadian representative for Kleine, has been holding the film awaiting a favorable time for release. Members of the press, exhibitors and university professors as well as several city aldermen viewed the picture which was shown to the accompaniment of a ten-piece orchestra.

Last Friday evening a private showing of the first "Made in Canada" feature film was given at the Strand theater. The film "On the King's Highway" is in three reels and received much favorable comment. The viewing was attended by several civic officials and a large number of newspaper men and exhibitors.

Ed Van Buren, formerly a camera man at the Edison studios, has been secured by the Conness Till Company and started his duties last week.

Manager Henry Fisher, of the United Film Service, was visited last week by E. S. Walker, of the Orpheum theater, Sault Saint Marie, and Arthur C. Lyons, of the Gem theater, Brantford. This latter theater is being remodelled into a thoroughly up-to-date moving picture house with a seating capacity of over 500. Both theaters signed up for United Film Service.

Maurice Kauffmann, formerly manager of the Toronto office of All Features, has been engaged as a special salesman by Manager Ed Glendon of the World Film Corporation.

Manager Brownridge is moving the offices of the United Features and the B. and C. film service from the old stand at 39 Victoria street to 1 Adelaide street, East, the downtown office of the Conness Till Film Company.

SOME MICHIGAN BRIEFS.

By Midwest Special Moving Picture World News Service.

The Powers Theater Building Association at Grand Rapids will increase its capital stock from $80,000 to $200,000.

Wirt S. McLaren will be manager for Ulrickson & McLaren, who have opened the new Colonial theater at 1420 East Main street in Jackson.

Harry Goseline, the moving picture man at Saginaw, has taken over the stock of J. P. Bowen in the new theater enterprise at North Saginaw. The architects have been at work on plans and specifications for a three-story fireproof business and theater building.

William J. Donnelly has resigned his position as advance agent for "Way Down East" to resume his old place as manager of the Fuller theater at Kalamazoo, succeeding Cedric Lawrence, resigned.

The Empress Theater Company of Grand Rapids has been incorporated with capital stock of $6,250. The principal stockholders are Arthur L. Pratt and Goddie Rosenbaum.

The Grand theater at Calumet hereafter will be a ten-cent house, having taken over the World Film Corporation service.

The Coliseum, skating rink and opera house, at White Hall, was destroyed by fire. It was owned by Herbert J. Smitt.

The partnership of Brown & Budde at Grand Rapids has been dissolved, George H. Budde purchasing the interest of his partner in the moving picture theater on Bridge street, N. W.

Organize at Toronto

Moving Picture Exhibitors Protective Association Formed at Toronto in Effort to Stop Unfair Taxation and to Educate Authorities and People as to Requirements of the Business—Some of the Reasons Why Movement Was Necessary—What It Can Do.

By David K. Billings, Special Correspond ent of Moving Picture World.

TORONTO moving picture exhibitors are to organize in an effort to stall the tide of "unnecessary taxation and persecution" that has been heaped upon their shoulders and which they claim has reached such a serious stage that it threatens to put all but a very few theaters out of business.

The first steps toward forming the Toronto Moving Picture Exhibitors Protective Association were taken last Friday morning when a score of exhibitors and several exchange men answered a call sent out by a self-formed committee and met at the Empress theater, Yonge street, to discuss a permanent organization.

The immediate cause of the organization is the action taken by the City Architect in holding back all the theater licenses in the city and sending inspectors around to draw up a series of plans which the houses must conform to before they will be allowed their 1915 licenses. One manager asserted at the meeting that he had been visited by six different inspectors from the architect's department who had spent a total of ten hours in his theater trying to detect flaws in the construction and ways in which it does not conform to the new building by-law.

This is after the departments have expressed their intentions of cutting expenses on account of war times. It was decided to form a permanent organization and with that end in view each man present made himself responsible for the presence of each exhibitor in his district at a mass meeting to be held in the Occident Hall, Queen and Bathurst street, next Sunday afternoon.

Attorneys will be retained to investigate the legal standing of exhibitors and a delegation will be appointed to wait on the City Architect and place before him the case of the exhibitors who are already hard pressed. It has even been suggested that the exhibitors, if they cannot obtain satisfaction and a fair deal from the authorities, close down their theaters voluntarily and so force the public to realize the straitened circumstances in which they have been placed. The general opinion seems to be that the moving picture business has for too long been the "goat" of superfluous energy on the part of both civic and provincial as well as Dominion authority, and that it is principally because lack of organization of any kind has prevented the case of the theater operator from being placed before the lawmakers and law-enforcers. It is not a desire on the part of the authorities to persecute, but there are three separate councils all taxing and making laws without any concerted consideration. If the local exhibitors do not allow petty differences to hinder their work and are willing to spend a little time and money to perfect their organization it is hoped that it will do for the moving picture exhibitor what the Motor League has done for the motorists.

CUTS OUT WAR FILMS.

Militia Department of Dominion Fears War Films Will Affect Recruiting.

Not satisfied with the manner in which the various Provincial picture censors have been handling various war pictures, the Dominion Militia department has sent an order to the Censor Boards in every province of the Dominion that war pictures be condemned en masse. The result is that the Ontario Board of Censors have sent the following letter to all exchanges and manufacturers:

"You are hereby notified that after Feb. 15 the following standard of censoring war pictures will be adopted:

"All war pictures wil be condemned entirely. No eliminations will be made.

"Any topical films, such as scenes of devastation, ruins, military camps, equipment, naval vessels and etcetera of the Allied Nations as are shown in the weeklies will not be passed. This standard will be enforced until the war is over and you are hereby requested to govern yourself accordingly."

This is the first order which has been sent out by the Dominion authorities and covers the whole of Canada. While the Ontario censors put into force early in the war a ruling that no pictures of actual fighting should be shown the new regulation is much more drastic and sweeping. According to G. A. Armstrong, chairman of the Ontario Board, it covers not only war dramas showing acted battles, but real fighting scenes, in fact anything that shows the horrors of war and would tend to turn public opinion against the war and so hinder recruiting, will be condemned.

EASEMENT OF RESTRICTIONS ON ADMITTING CHILDREN

Provincial Treasurer Promises Exhibitors of Toronto to Lighten Unjust Burden.

A delegation of picture men on Jan. 27 waited on Provincial Treasurer McGarry and was promised an easing of the present restrictions on the admission of children under fifteen years to theaters. This delegation was headed by W. A. Campbell of the Famous Players' Film Service, Manager Robinson of the Yorke theater and George Welsman of the Plaza theater.

The clause of the present regulation which the delegation asked to have modified practically forces every proprietor of a theater to assure himself of the identity of every child under fifteen who enters his theater with an adult. This has not proven such a problem in the smaller country towns, but in the cities where a ticket-seller is not likely to know one person out of a thousand, it gives him an impossible task and even should he ask questions they are resented very frequently in a very decided manner, which means a loss of patronage. The result has been that except where there is something suspicious looking the proprietor seldom asks questions and takes a chance of being caught breaking the law. In one or two cases the "chance" has meant the paying of a heavy fine.

The object of the law was to prevent children, particularly young girls, from entering theaters with chance adult acquaintances, and this danger is still realized by the authorities, but it has been suggested and the suggestion has been well received that an adult who takes a child into a theater under circumstances contrary to law be subject to a heavy penalty instead of allowing the onus to rest upon the picture exhibitor who is entirely at the mercy of fate unless he prohibits children from entering his house altogether.

All features limited have secured the Canadian rights to three British films. They are "Two Little Britons," "The King's Minister" and "On His Majesty's Service."

BANGOR THEATER IMPROVED.

Strand Becomes One of the Finest Picture Houses—Its New Organ.

By John P. Flannagan, Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

THE new $25,000 orchestral organ which has just been installed at the Strand theater, Portland, Me., formerly known as the Nickel, was demonstrated during the week before a select few who had been invited to be present by the management. The organ is of fine workmanship and its tones are not only clear, but are also very sweet. To demonstrate its great possibilities one of the fine Paramount pictures which are shown at the theater was used, and it gave a delightful musical setting.

In addition to the new organ there will be an orchestra composed of three pieces, under the direction of Mr. Edward D. Godreau. The organist is Miss Bessie A. Root, whose work shows that she is well fitted for that position. New scenic effects have been installed and greatly improve the theater.

With these new effects the Strand has been brought up to a standing with some of the finest moving picture theaters in the country.

Manager Reeves states that the organ would be used daily with the orchestra, thus giving everybody who visits the theater a chance to hear the magnificent instrument.

GRANGE HALLS PAY TAX.

That grange halls which permit moving picture shows by traveling operators, one or more times a week, will have to pay a tax according to the new revenue bill, was stated in Augusta last week by C. S. Stetson, of Greene, master of the Maine State Grange, who has just been at Portsmouth, N. H., to look into the matter. He learned that where moving pictures were used by the granges themselves for entertainments or at dances that no tax would be required, but when a traveling show held forth then the tax on the hall would have to be paid.

GUY FARMER LEASES THE PALACE.

The Palace theater, on Exchange street, Bangor, which is owned by Pope D. McKinnon, and has been conducted by him for the past three years, has been leased to Mr. Guy M. Farmer, of Brewer, an experienced moving picture man. The Palace was closed from Monday, Jan. 25, to Friday, Jan. 29, during which time it was completely gone over by painters and decorators, and opened on Jan. 29 in better shape than ever to meet the demands of its constantly increasing patronage, with "The Master Key" as feature. Mr. Farmer, who holds Massachusetts and New York licenses as operator, announces that he will continue the Universal service, and will make the Palace an up-to-date theater in every way. He will be assisted in the box office by Mrs. Farmer.

MODIFIES LICENSE LAW.

Senator Butler of Knox county, Me., has introduced a bill in the present Maine legislature amending Chapter 21 of the public laws of 1909, so that its provisions shall not apply to any cinematograph or similar apparatus operated with only cellulose acetate films not more than one inch and one-fourth in width and using only an inclosed incandescent lamp.

Chapter 21 requires that cinematograph or moving picture machines shall be licensed, shall be enclosed in an asbestos wood booth, that application shall be made to municipal officers for permit to exhibit, that enclosure and machines shall be inspected by municipal officers, that no person shall operate without a license, that the operator shall be 18 years of age and thoroughly skilled, that license shall be for one year, and providing specifications for booths, fire escapes, etc.

DEATH OF R. M. CAMPBELL.

Eastern Maine moving picture men learn with regret of the death of Robert Middleton Campbell, proprietor of the Bijou theater, of Ellsworth, Me., on Jan. 25. Although Mr. Campbell had been in ill health since last September, when he suffered a stroke of paralysis, his constitution was so strong that his many friends looked forward to his recovery, and his death came as a great shock. Death resulted from a second stroke.

Mr. Campbell conducted the Bijou for seven years prior to his death. He was also a well-known newspaper man, knowing all parts of the business, from the ad alley to the editor's desk. He published the Ellsworth Enterprise from 1886 to 1911. A remarkable feature of his illness was that he had his entire faculties until his last moments and was able to direct his busines at all times.

UNIVERSITY MAY BUY PICTURE APPARATUS.

It is understood that the University of Maine, at Orono, is contemplating the purchase and installation of a moving picture machine for use in its various departments. During the past term at the University the professors who wished to show educational films have been taking the students to the Orono theater. Professor John M. Briscoe, of the Department of Forestry, recently had a film on logging in the Southern states, which he wished his students to see, so invited them to attend the Orono theater as a part of their regular class-room work. The students thought the announcement of the professor a joke at first, but soon realized that he was in earnest. The need of a moving picture machine has been felt at the University for some time, as it is an up-to-date institution and wishes to keep in touch with the latest moves in educational circles.

OTHER MAINE ITEMS.

A. L. Ehrgott, manager for the General Film Co., at Bangor, has returned from a brief business trip to Rumford, Farmington and other towns in western Maine. Mr. Ehrgott reports business quiet at present, but anticipates a boom in the near future.

C. S. Coffin, the well-known Bangor baritone, has been singing at the Palace theater, where his fine voice has won great favor with the audiences.

Employees of the Keith playhouse at Portland, who have been with the theater for many years, claim that never before at this season of the year has the average attendance been so large. Their claims are borne out by the box office receipts, which, as compared with other years on corresponding dates, are larger on almost every day.

Fred B. Chase, proprietor of the Orono theater, at Orono, was a recent caller to Bangor, and arranged with Manager Ehrgott, of the General Film Company, for serials. He is to show the Girl Detective series.

The Graphic theater, of Bangor, Grant & Burns, proprietors, which recently lowered its price to five cents, is not using any special film service at present, but is in the open market, the General Film service being largely patronized however.

The City Opera House at Waterville was the scene of a play given by the French-speaking people of Waterville in aid of the Belgium fund. The moving picture program was suspended for the day. "The Perils of Pauline" is now running at this house.

The Gem theater of Lewiston is being remodeled into a store.

A portion of the Masonic Building at Old Town, which was mentioned in a recent number of the Moving Picture World, is to be occupied by a moving picture theater.

INDIANA JURY ACQUITS SPURRS OF SUNDAY OPENING CHARGE

Exhibitors of Marion Fined by Mayor, Acquitted by Jury—Mayor Recalcitrant.

By Indiana Special Moving Picture World Trade News Service.

THE jury in the case of Howard Spurr and Goldie Spurr, Marion, Ind., moving picture theater owners, charged with desecrating the Sabbath by running their house on Sunday, found for the defendants. The case had been appealed from police court where Mayor Batchelor had fined them $10 each. The Mayor asserts he will make arrests as often as the theaters are found open on Sunday. Injunction proceedings against the Mayor are hinted at.

The beautiful Victoria theater in Lafayette, Ind., has reopened under new management. Manager Block says that it will be the policy of the house to show nothing but the best pictures.

Charles Lyons, who recently purchased the Lyric theater, in Kokomo, decided to change the name of the house. He put it to a vote of his patrons, offering twenty dollars to be divided among those voting for the most popular name. As a result of the contest the theater will be called the "Colonial."

INDIANA'S SONS AND DAUGHTERS GROW FAMOUS IN PICTURE ART

Some of the Best Players in the Business Are Indianans and Many Are from Indianapolis.

